Fewer scholarships if ISSC funds are cut

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

At least 280 SIU-C students will lose a chance at awards from the Illinois State Scholarship Commission if supplemental funding for the ISSC is denied by Gov. James R. Thompson as expected.

The assistant executive director of the ISSC, Ralph Godzicki, said Thursday that Thompson has indicated at least twice that he will veto a bill for $5.3 million of additional ISSC funding. If he does that, about March 15, 22,000 students throughout the state will not receive scholarships this year.

"We would have to send letters to students and say there is just nothing we can do," Godzicki said.

The ISSC was forced to ask the General Assembly for more money after quickly awarding the $85.8 million appropriation it was given for 1980-81. Godzicki said the ISSC anticipated that rising enrollments and a sagging economy would cause a shortage of funds, but "at the commission was not sure how far its initial appropriation would go.

After making 88,000 awards—4,297 of those at SIU-C—the ISSC put a hold on processing applications received after Aug. 28. In November, when frozen applications were last counted, 280 were from SIU-C.

Joe Camille, director of student work and financial assistance, said he thinks there are now "a lot more" students at SIU-C waiting for word from the ISSC because his office has continued to give out applications in the hope that additional money would come through.

If Thompson says no to the supplemental funding, it will mark the first time in more than 20 years of existence that the ISSC will be substantially less than totally funded, according to Godzicki. And though he said he is disappointed at the prospect of the governor's veto, Godzicki said that the state of the economy is so bad that Thompson must make such decisions.

"There's not much to go around," Godzicki said. "There are some hard decisions to be made, and our constitution says the governor is the one who has to make them.

The supplemental funding bill, which contains a provision for $805,000 owed some state universities for 1979-80 awards, passed the Illinois House on Jan. 14, the first day of this year's session.

Officials blast hostage abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tales by the former American hostages of brutal treatment at the hands of their Iranian captors angered President Reagan and Jimmy Carter on Thursday, and prompted plans for Senate hearings to lay the story before the American public.

In a hand-written report on his emotional visit with the freed hostages Wednesday in Wiesbaden, West Germany, Carter urged Reagan to abide by the U.S. agreement with Iran, "but never do any favors for the hoodlums who persecuted innocent American heroes."

Vice President Walter F. Mondale delivered Carter's report to Reagan at the White House Thursday morning. Reagan was said to be "outraged" and "deeply upset" after reading it and hearing Mondale's account of mistreatment of the American captives.

The reports of Iranian brutality brought a quick, indignant response from members of Congress. Public hearings by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee were announced, and resolutions were introduced in the House and Senate to support any decision Reagan might make to refuse to carry out the entire agreement with Iran.

The House resolution was sponsored by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., and the Senate measure by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who urged Reagan to declare that the United States is not legally bound by the agreement because it was negotiated under duress of blackmail.

In his report to his successor, Carter said the hostages had been "abused more than I had previously known." He said the Iranians had "acted like savages" to the end, and he termed the hostage ordeal an "official criminal act of terrorism."

In conversations with their families and with U.S. officials, several of the hostages have reported being subjected to beatings, mock executions, death threats, games of Russian roulette and solitary confinement.

One member of the medical team examining the Americans at the U.S. Air Force hospital at Wiesbaden said some of the physical abuse they underwent "as not unlike that which some of our boys got from the North Vietnamese."

Mondale, during a 10-minute visit with Reagan at the White House, said he recounted the Americans' stories of "barbaric treatment" during their 444 days in captivity. Mondale accompanied Carter to Wiesbaden.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker announced the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would hold full public hearings, as soon as "passions have cooled" into the "brutal treatment, even atrocities," suffered by the American prisoners.

Citizen's committee questions police access to federal files

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

The Citizens Advisory Committee, concerned over the possible abuse of the Carbondale Police Department's computer access to information collected by federal agencies, has directed their liaison to the City Council to determine what type of information is available and how that information is controlled.

However, spokesmen for the police, FBI and Department of Defense said the committee's concern may be unnecessary because the Carbondale Police do not have a great deal of access to federal information.

At the CAC meeting Tuesday night, committee chairman Gerald Compton said he had been given "very reliable" information that the police had access to files compiled by the FBI or Department of Defense in the course of criminal or security clearance investigations.

Compton said he believed that such information might include an individual's Internal Revenue Service records, credit history or other documentation presented as part of a federal investigation.

A motion to have Councilwoman Sue Mitchell, City Council liaison to the CAC, look into the availability of federal records and police use of them passed on an unanimous vote.

Mitchell said she intended to communicate the CAC's concern over information control to the city by sending letters to Mayor Hans Fischer and Acting City Manager Scott Ratter. She said she expected they would either reply directly to the CAC, or bring the matter up on an informal City Council agenda sometime in the future if they believed it was warranted.

Compton said, "We want to insure that the information system is not abused in any way. We are not suggesting that it has happened in the past, but the potential for this information to be misused is certainly there."

Compton said it was his understanding that computer operators were capable of having control over the system, and because of that "could call up and receive information he has no right to."

Police Captain Tom MacNamara said that the department has been tied into the state's Law Enforcement Agency Data Service since 1972.

but there was "no way" the type of information that Compton described could be called into their computer.

MacNamara said that, in most cases, when the police request computer-filed information, they request a trace of an automobile license number. Those requests are usually made when a patrol officer stops a vehicle for a traffic violation, and a check through the LEADS system will tell the officer whether the car has been stolen or used in connection with a crime, he said.

The request for identification automatically interfaces with the registration of the number at the Illinois Secretary of State's Office, and the name of the registered owner is transmitted to the police dispatcher, he said.

The LEADS system of the Illinois Bureau of Identification is also tied in with the system of the National Crime Information Center, which MacNamara said is a central storage area for leads and identification of stolen property nationwide.

"The information transmitted by LEADS and the

Buffom replaces Gentry

Warren Buffom, associate vice president for financial affairs, has been named acting vice president for financial affairs replacing Robert E. Gentry, who resigned last month to accept an administrative position at Seton Hall University in New Jersey.

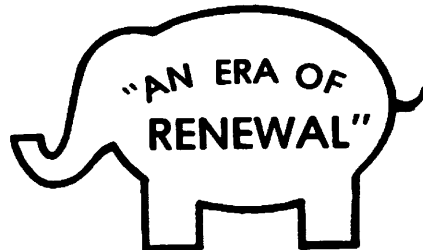

A search committee, limited to candidates from SIU-C, will be formed to recommend a permanent replacement.

President Albert Somit said Buffom said Wednesday that he will apply for the position.

Buffom was head of the University's budget office for four years when he was named to the position of associate vice president for financial affairs.

Gentry, whose resignation was signed Tuesday by Somit, will take over as vice president of financial affairs at Seton Hall Feb. 1.

Carter meets with hostages, urges honoring of agreement

PLAINS (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter, though visibly angered by Iranian mistreatment of the American hostages, said Thursday it would be a serious mistake for President Reagan to cancel all or part of the U.S. agreement with Iran.

Returning from an emotional, 80-minute meeting with the freed captives at Wiesbaden, Carter said the settlement is "very favorable" to the U.S., not only for release of the hostages but for its financial terms.

"Also, our nation's word of honor is at stake," he told reporters. "This treaty is in the best interests of the United States and I signed it on behalf of our country, and I think it would be a serious thing for us to violate it."

He said the only grounds for canceling the agreement would be if Iran fails to act in good faith. "But I don't think that will happen," the former president said.

Carter said it was "perfectly legitimate and necessary" for Reagan and his senior advisors to examine the agreement closely and to act "if they should find any defect in it."

He added: "But in my opinion—and perhaps I'm a biased observer—the negotiated agreement is a good one for our country."

Carter said the former hostages applauded when he told them that of the $11 billion to $12 billion in Iranian assets he froze after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and its personnel were seized Nov. 4, 1979. Iran initially will recover about $2.88 billion.

He said the rest will be used to pay off outstanding loans by American and other banks to the Iranian government, or will be held in escrow accounts to cover competing claims by Iran and the banks over interest payments on the frozen assets.

The former president called his private meeting with the former hostages one of "the most moving and gratifying" events of his life. A Carter aide called the visit "emotional to the point of awkwardness," with both Carter and the freed hostages close to tears.

Hostages returning to normal lives

WIESBADEN (AP) — The freed American hostages, emerging from the long nightmare of brutality and abuse in Iranian captivity, started adjusting to normal life Thursday with visits to the dentist, new clothes, manicures for the two women and plenty of hamburgers.

And the 52 Americans savored talking openly after months of hearing barked commands of "no talk!" when they tried to speak to each other.

But there were new reports of beatings, mock executions, frightening games of Russian roulette and death threats, testimony that caused former President Carter to accuse Iran of "savagery against absolutely innocent hostages."

Reagan was said to be "outraged" at the reports and there were plans for Senate hearings on mistreatment of the hostages. A spokesman said the administration was "very irate, very angry" and that it "certainly will not make it any easier" to carry out the agreement with Iran that freed the captives.

Iran, however, claimed holding the hostages was a great achievement for the Iranian revolution. Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai was quoted by Tehran radio Thursday as saying Iran "launched a great struggle against imperialism and for 14 months forced it to kneel before it."

Jury to decide Rantoul man's fate

URBANA (AP) — A Champaign County jury began deliberating Thursday on whether a Rantoul man found guilty of murdering a 3-year-old girl should be sentenced to death.

Andre Davis, 19, was found guilty Wednesday night of the murder of Brianna Stichel. The Rantoul girl was found dead last August in an apartment which belonged to Davis' friend, authorities said.

Police testified during the trial that the child apparently suffocated while being sexually abused.

State official: $400 million needed for Illinois road system

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Illinois' transportation system needs $400 million more from higher taxes and fees next year to keep its roads from crumbling and to bail out the Chicago-area mass transit network, the state transportation secretary said Thursday.

John Kramer also said the Chicago-area Regional Transportation Authority, facing a $150 million deficit this year, has to have its money woes solved by April 15. If not, Kramer said, its six-county bus and commuter rail system "will literally come to a stop."

"Unfortunately, we have done everything short of a tax increase to keep the transit system in Illinois alive," Kramer said. He added that the system was severely hurt by unforeseen financial setbacks.

"We have no choice but to raise revenue or cut back drastically on programs," he said.

But Kramer said the Thompson administration has not decided what specific increases it will propose to the General Assembly this spring to raise the needed $400 million.

Kramer made the comments Thursday while taping "Illinois Press," a weekly program sponsored by public television station WILL of Champaign. The show is scheduled for broadcast Friday and Sunday.

Kramer, who has headed the state Transportation Department since June 1977, also said a Democratic proposal was "unacceptable" for solving highway and RTA troubles. He said after the taping of the program that the Democratic plan "falls short of what's needed."

The proposal, sponsored by former House Speaker William A. Redmond, D-Bensenville, would change the state gasoline tax from a flat 7.5-cents-a-gallon to 10 percent of the sale price.

It also would raise "sin" taxes on cigarettes, liquor, beer and wine, and divert $200 million from the state's all-purpose General Revenue Fund for use by the RTA.

Redmond has been criticized by downstate Democrats, who contend he is sponsoring Republican Gov. James R. Thompson's plan. But Kramer hinted that Thompson opposes Redmond's plan on at least two fronts.

Fry's condition is stable

City Manager Carroll Fry is in stable condition but still in the Respiratory Intensive Care Unit of a Minnesota hospital awaiting a private room on another floor of the hospital, according to the latest City Hall update on his condition. Fry underwent surgery at Methodist Hospital in Rochester, Minn. last week and afterwards developed a gas toxic infection. More surgery was performed to combat the infection, and statements issued on his condition earlier indicated a "quite serious" illness as of a week ago. Over the weekend his condition improved and by Monday he was reported to be off the respirator and his doctors believed they had stopped the infection. Fry is still reported to be using oxygen, but not requiring any monitoring devices. The city manager's medical treatment is now being handled by a team of plastic surgeons for skin-grafting and other procedures to repair his leg where infected tissue was removed.

CASE receives award

Jackson County Action to Save Energy will be presented with an award Friday from U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, for the work it has done to conserve energy in the county.

Jackson CASE, a federally funded program, is headed by Hugh Muldoon and has been presenting workshops and providing conservation supplies to residents of the county since last summer. Simon's press aide, Steve Hull, said.

He said the work by Muldoon and Jackson CASE has helped make residences in the county more energy efficient. The workshops teach Jackson County residents low-cost and no-cost methods of home energy conservation.

The award will be presented in Simon's Carbondale office at 9 a.m.

SIU student hit, injured by train

An SIU-C student is listed in guarded condition in a St. Louis hospital after he was struck by an Illinois Central-Gulf Railroad freight train early Thursday morning a few feet north of the Grand Avenue railroad crossing.

Patrick McDonald, 18, freshman in biology, apparently passed out between the rails of the tracks at about 3:30 a.m., police said. The engineer of the train told police that he applied the train's emergency brakes when he saw McDonald lying between the rails. The engineer said McDonald appeared to raise his head as the brakes were applied. Two engines and part of a third engine passed over McDonald before the train was able to stop, police said. McDonald's injuries included a broken jaw, missing teeth and some bruises, according to his roommate, Robert Glaser, 20, freshman in forestry. Glaser said "it will be at least a week" before McDonald returns to school. McDonald is presently in Firmin Desloge Hospital, in St. Louis. He was transferred there by helicopter from Memorial Hospital in Carbondale.

2 city candidates withdraw

Four candidates remain in competition for the two Carbondale city Council seats with the withdrawal of David Colombo and Lamar Zabielski. Zabielski, a 29-year-old SIU-C student, said he withdrew from the race because he thought there were too many student candidates and the student vote would be spread too thinly. Colombo, 38, said a new job would take up too much of his time to participate in the election. Candidates remaining on the ballot for the Feb. 24 primary are incumbents Archie Jones and Charles Watkins and SIU-C students Paul Matalonis and Matt Coulter.

Bright and dark sides of the Reagan victory

Unlike most of my cohorts, I was not thrown into the depths of despair by the election of Ronald Reagan. On the contrary, on the major issues which I consider to be vital to the United States' future, Reagan's positions consistently made more sense than Jimmy Carter's hazy prescriptions notwithstanding Reagan's tendency for ridiculous overstatements on the campaign trail.

But that is not to say that the Reagan victory does not have a darker side. Many of his stands on the issues, particularly on social issues, go against the mainstream of American thinking. And Reagan can expect strong opposition if he attempts to jam the views of the self-righteous Moral Majority crowd down the American public's throat.

I believe many voters faced this dilemma: support for Reagan on the important issues of defense-foreign policy and the economy—without buying the Reagan package whole hog. For want of a better phrase, I'll refer to this cleavage as the bright and the dark sides of the Reagan revolution.

On the bright side, first and foremost comes Reagan's commitment to strengthen our defenses and resist Soviet expansionism.

Carter came into office in 1977 and quickly pledged to deemphasize our so-called preoccupation with communism. North-South dialogue was labeled the challenge of the 1980s and human rights became the centerpiece of his foreign policy.

It was a big mistake. Judging from events, the Soviet Union read that message as a blank check to sponsor revolutions throughout the third world. It is quite clear that when presented with the opportunity to expand their empire at little or no risk, the Soviets do so—with no hesitation. The Soviets, with the help of their proxies, the Cubans, have swallowed South Yemen, Afghanistan, Nicaragua, Ethiopia, Angola and Grenada.

In at least two of those countries, Angola and Afghanistan, much of the population is resisting the Cuban and Soviet armies through guerrilla movements. Neither country receives military supplies from the United States. We might anger the Soviets.

Reagan possesses a clearer vision of where American foreign policy interests lie. They do not lie in chastising and punishing right-wing regimes for human rights violations until they fall to Cuban-sponsored guerrillas. Nor do they lie in sending U.S. troops to every hot spot in the world.

However, Reagan does recognize that there are vital interests in the world that the United States must be willing to defend. If clearly defined, and clearly backed by American resolve, the Soviet Union does not usually challenge these interests. Reagan sees this, Carter didn't.

A second bright spot of the Reagan revolution is his economic policies.

Reagan won the economic debate last fall largely by default—it was difficult to comprehend anyone doing more damage to the economy than Carter has. Double-digit inflation and interest rates, lagging productivity and high unemployment are all Carter legacies.

Reagan is a subscriber to supply-side economics, an untested and interesting economic theory. In simple terms, supply-siders argue that deep tax cuts would raise incentive, productivity and output and would prove counter-inflationary by generating increased tax revenues.

Whether that is the case remains to be seen. But there is little doubt that Reagan's commitment to fight inflation and bureaucratic overregulation runs deeper and stronger than Carter's.

The dark side of the Reagan landslide, one only true Reagan believers can ignore, is Reagan's shaky record on social and environmental issues.

Reagan showed a startling degree of insensitivity when, during the debate with Carter, he said that years ago America didn't know it had a race problem. Benign neglect of racial problems could be dangerous when the Klu Klux Klan is undergoing a revival and the American economic pie is shrinking.

Particularly when a man with a proven record of racism has taken over as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., has taken the reins of the Judiciary Committee away from Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., and Thurmond has a long agenda of social issues he wants to deal with.

Some proposals the 77-year-old former Dixiecrat wants to see enacted include a ban on abortion except in cases of danger to a woman's life, incest or rape; a constitutional amendment to allow prayer in public schools; a ban on busing for racial integration; a constitutional amendment that would mandate a balanced budget for the federal government and a repeal of the Voting Rights Act.

Reagan has supported in any of those proposals for years but it is unclear how much effort he will throw behind enacting them into law. All are ill-advised and would create a good deal of social strife.

Reagan's commitment to preserving the environment is also weak. He wholeheartedly supports the development of nuclear power and supports relaxing federal air pollution standards to increase the use of coal. Both may be tradeoffs we have to make to lessen our dependence on foreign oil but they are painful nonetheless.

Yet, during the transition, Reagan has shown a good deal of moderation. He has said repairing the economy will be his number one priority. Perhaps the bright side of the Reagan revolution will win out.

Don't be surprised with Reagan if he can't solve our problems

And so we embark upon a new beginning. The inaugural crowds are drifting out of Washington; the hostages are headed home; with an air of heightened expectancy, Capitol Hill awaits messages from the White House. Perhaps it stems from the letdown that comes after the ball is over, but I am minded to invoke the French proverb: The more things change, the more they stay the same.

James J. Kilpatrick

Yes, of course much has changed. We have a new Republican president blessed with some old Republican ideas. We have a vastly changed Senate, with new senators, new chairmen and new staffs. We have a new Cabinet with supposedly new responsibilities. This new beginning does indeed present new opportunities.

But so much remains the same! Four years ago Jimmy Carter moved into the White House, bringing his campaign baggage with him. Let us recall.

Mr. Carter promised a reduction in taxes. He promised to work toward a balanced federal budget within four years. He promised to reduce fraud and waste in government. He would get rid of foolish regulations, transfer greater authority to the states, abolish useless agencies and cut civilian employment. Does all of this sound eerily familiar?

Mr. Carter brings almost identical luggage. He faces almost identical problems—problems that are not different in kind, but only in degree, from the problems that Mr. Carter had to grapple with. Inflation is worse. Federal spending is vastly greater. But to get to the point of these reflections, human nature has not changed by one iota. Mountains of hypocrisy still tower over seas of self-protection.

In one of his final acts, Mr. Carter produced a budget for fiscal '82 calling for outlays of $739.3 billion and revenues of $711.8 billion, for a deficit of $27.5 billion. The figures bear little relation to reality; they might have been devised by throwing darts or rolling dice. Nevertheless, they are the best figures we have and they will suffice for the purpose at hand.

Under the heading of "nutrition programs and food," the Carter budget calls for outlays in fiscal '82 of $4.3 billion. The sum is $1.2 billion larger than a like outlay in the current year. Could it be reduced? Could it be cut back to the $2.6 billion level of just a year ago? In theory, yes, of course this outlay could be reduced. But these programs are dearly beloved by some of the most powerful lobbies in the land—the school lobby, the farm lobby, the food processing lobby. Don't hold your breath.

The budget has a category called "aids to agriculture, commerce and transportation." Outlays for these various subsidies and expenses amounted to $12.5 billion in fiscal '80. For fiscal '82, they would amount to $18.4 billion. Could congressional surgery be performed in this area? Of course, but not without anesthesia for pressure groups.

So it goes. Three-fourths of this unimaginable budget are taken up with "spending programs that are beyond the immediate discretionary control of the president and the Congress." These items are the "uncontrollables," and they are killing us. We never will end deficit spending, which is to say, we never will make much of a dent in inflation, until Congress summons the courage to attack them. And at the moment of attack, all those redoubtable conservatives who have been crying "get the government off our backs" will be whispering a different tune: "Off everybody's back but mine."

This is why it is so fearfully difficult to cut the budget. Projections indicate an $800 billion budget in '83, a trillion-dollar budget by '85. The national debt, incidentally, will pass the trillion-dollar mark next year, by this coming autumn, the hemorrhage from the Treasury will flow at $22,000 a second. We are talking of debased dollars, but they are all we have.

Perhaps I am overly pessimistic. Maybe the new beginning will see a new statesmanship, but no one in our town underestimates the hard task ahead. Mr. Reagan has a very tough row to hoe. Copyright, 1981, Universal Press Syndicated

Reagan's success up to public

By Karen Gullo
Focus Editor

RONALD REAGAN called his inauguration to the presidency a "common occurrence." And he was right.

Presidents are inaugurated every four years and, except for the glitter and glamour of the Inaugural Ball, the event itself means little.

What matters is not only the state of the nation, but also the public's perception of the man who is the president. Who is Ronald Reagan to the American public? What can we expect from this man who is a veteran movie actor and former California governor?

"We must act today in order to preserve tomorrow," Reagan told the nation in his inaugural address. "And let there be no misunderstanding, we are going to act beginning today."

REAGAN WAS TRUE to his word. Just one hour after he was sworn into office, Reagan signed a paper which imposed a freeze on federal hiring. The Republican ball is rolling; by freezing federal hiring Reagan hopes to start reducing the size of the federal government.

Political scientists say that we can expect major moves away from big government, but they warn that everything hinges on the amount of public support Reagan can muster up.

"My only hesitation with Reagan's policies is, can he get the support?" said David Derge, political science professor and former SIU-C president. "Psychology plays a large role in whether Reagan's programs will work. If people have confidence in them and believe they will, then the programs will have a much better chance of succeeding."

Jesse Brown, doctoral student in political science and former political science instructor, said the recipe for successful policy changes in the Reagan administration consists of a mixture of swift executive action and public support.

"The real issue is, will Reagan be able to use the office as a 'bully pulpit,'" said Brown.

BULLY PULPIT WAS a Theodore Roosevelt term which referred to the president's office as the ultimate authority and power.

"Carter couldn't do it, neither could Ford, Nixon or Johnson," Brown said.

"The Reagan people will attempt to move fast on such policies as reduced individual income tax, national defense, reduced federal spending and unemployment compensation," he said. "The bottom line is Reagan will attempt early on to slow down the growth of the federal government."

A federal freeze on hiring—the first of a number of Reagan steps to reduce the size of the federal government—will certainly affect SIU-C students, Brown predicted. Graduates who have been trained for government work may find it hard to get a job, he said.

Brown predicts federal grant money will be tighter in the next four years. Federal, state and private contracts make up $22 million of SIU-C's $170 million budget for fiscal year 1980. The University currently holds million dollar contracts with the federal government for energy research and international education projects. Student work and financial assistance alone were allocated $7.9 million in federal money last year.

SOME OF THESE GRANTS and contracts could be abolished or their funds severely curtailed under the Reagan administration, Brown said.

How will Reagan win public support for his programs?

"Reagan is by far the most effective president on TV. He's really good at reaching the public through the media," Brown said. "If anyone has the power to persuade the people, Reagan has. That could be because of his experience as an actor. He has a really smooth tone, he can say the harshest things and make them sound so pleasant."

Apparently, Reagan's acting experience has a lot to do with his public image. Thomas Mitchell, psychology professor, said that Reagan's years on the stage are psychologically significant to his public.

"IT'S VERY IMPORTANT that Reagan was an actor," he said. "There are some personality theories which state that some people have a certain talent for social adaptability. They have the capacity to always fit, always say the right thing. They take their cues from others and actors are usually very high in that dimension."

Much of Reagan's popularity depends on how the public feels about him as a person, Mitchell said.

"Reagan has the ability to be sensitive to social issues so that people will like him. People don't dislike him now, which is a problem that we've had before with many presidents," said Mitchell. "Many people just couldn't stand Carter as a person, a lot of people didn't like Nixon or Johnson. But Reagan adapts himself enough to the standards of the public at large and the way he comes across, people won't dislike him."

Another important aspect of Reagan's personality is his looks, said Mitchell. Research has shown that more attractive people are more persuasive. And in the television age,

Reagan's conservative ideas are making some people edgy

To many people, the election of Ronald Reagan is the start of a new, more conservative era in American politics. Although 51 percent of Americans who voted chose Reagan's brand of conservatism, the leaders of many local environmental, feminist and minority groups are apprehensive about the next four years.

"From an environmental standpoint, the next four years will be defensive," said Joe Proffitt, chairman of the Student Environmental Center. "We will have to fight tooth and nail to keep what we have."

Reagan's record on environmental issues during his eight years as governor of California doesn't give environmentalists cause for optimism, Proffitt said.

"His track record in California shows that a lot of environmental protection bills were passed over his head. He vetoed many bills which the legislature then passed by overriding the veto," he said.

Proffitt is also disturbed by Reagan-appointee James Watt for secretary of interior. Proffitt said Watt is more sensitive to the needs of industry than the environment. "Watt has always been prob. big business," Proffitt said. "He opposed strip mine reclamation, and he opposed the formation of a refuge for eagles in Idaho. He's industry's man."

Proffitt said environmental issues will take a back seat to other issues in the Reagan administration and environmental protection will probably stagnate.

"I don't think we'll see any dramatic losses, but we sure won't see any gains," Proffitt said. "This is definitely a profit-motivated administration."

The women's movement should also prepare for hard times, according to Sal Stacey, president of the Shawnee chapter of the National Organization of Women.

"I don't think he'll do anything directly for the women's movement," she said. "Indirectly, I think he will arouse more women to work for their rights."

Stacey is not impressed with Reagan's promise to appoint a woman to the Supreme Court.

"Just because he puts a woman on the Supreme Court doesn't mean that she'll be sensitive to the needs of women, especially working women," she said. "It seems like he chooses people of privilege for his cabinet and administration."

Legalized forms of birth control may become restricted or forbidden under legislation favored by Reagan, according to Stacey.

"He favors a human life amendment that would outlaw the use of IUD's, birth control pills and abortion," she said.

"I'll fight a bill like that all the way."

Stacey said she thinks that women will have defend their rights during the coming years.

"I'm worried about these four years," she said. "How much damage will his programs do before people will wake up and start fighting?"

A mood of conservatism in the Congress, coupled with the election of Reagan, could pose some dangers to civil liberties, according to Jan Susler, chairperson of the Southern Illinois chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"It's difficult to speculate, but there isn't a whole lot of room for optimism," she said. "The fact that Reagan may make several appointments to the Supreme Court is very important."

Susler also fears that Congressional actions may take a more repressive turn.

"Some of the moves afoot in the Congress are frightening from a civil liberties perspective," she said. "The unleashing of the CIA and the House Un-American Activities Committee, the fact that Strom Thurmond has said he will seek a federal death penalty, these are all causes for concern."

Many black leaders accused Reagan of insensitivity to black needs during the campaign. But Roy Dave, president of the SIU chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Reagan's administration will be good for minorities.

"I believe Reagan will help minorities, even though a lot of minority members are afraid of the Republican party," Dave said. "He has said he's going to improve the economy of the country, and create jobs. And that's what blacks and other minorities need, economic improvement."

The harshest comments on the Reagan administration came from Brian Bridgeford, the organizing secretary of the Carbondale chapter of the Progressive Utilization Theory, PROUT is an international political organization described by Bridgeford as an group of "spiritual socialists."

"Judging from the stands he's taken, his Cabinet choices, and his downplaying of human rights, he seems very dangerous," Bridgeford said.

Although Reagan has taken a stand against the draft, Bridgeford fears that he could involve America in a war in Latin America.

"Internationally, there's a very high likelihood of us becoming involved in war in El Salvador," he said. "We are already sending weapons and advisers to that country."

Bridgeford also fears that the need for energy will lead Reagan to disregard environmental problems.

"We'll see the entire Southwest and Great Plains turned into massive strip mines for energy," he said. "And on the military front, we'll see money drained from social programs to support unneeded military programs."

Bridgeford's outlook of the next four years sums up the mood of many liberal groups in Carbondale.

"We are definitely apprehensive about this administration," Bridgeford said.

Thomas Mitchell, professor of psychology, says that Ronald Reagan's career as an actor will help his social adaptability as president.

physical attractiveness is important, he said.

"TAFT PROBABLY COULDN'T have been president in the television age because he was too overweight and people won't buy that," Mitchell said. "Other presidents have had a problem with the public's general preference for attractive people. Nixon had a real problem with his nose, some people thought it was too big. Carter had his toothy grin. Johnson had big ears. On the other hand, Kennedy was considered attractive and he was a very popular president."

The public is also more aware of how the president carries himself, Mitchell said.

"Take Gerry Ford. Many people thought he was a clod because he stumbled sometimes, but there is no proof that people who fall a lot are necessarily stupid. But we hold it against a person if he is not graceful," Mitchell said.

Does the public really want a president with the Mr. Perfect good looks of a Robert Redford and the agility of Errol Flynn? Mitchell doesn't think so.

"WE DON'T WANT the president to be too good looking or too much better than we are. We don't want a king in the White House, but we want someone who is a little more successful than we are. People want to look up to the president," Mitchell said.

Whether the public will look up to Ronald Reagan during the next four years depends on his ability to act, and act quickly. But instead of a backdrop on a Hollywood set, Reagan's stage is now the Oval Office, his theater is the United States and his audience is the American public.

THE HAIR LAB would like a moment of your time.

The Hair Lab's founders, Robert and Marsha Straube, are dedicated to the free spirit and individuality we all possess.

What makes the Hair Lab so different?

Education

All Hair Lab employees have been through extensive training in all aspects of the cosmetology field. Not just the How-to's but as to the why's of chemical and physical construction of hair and skin.

Specialization

The Hair Lab method of hair shaping, permanent waving, coloring, make-up, nail care, hair reconstruction, analysis, relaxers, and conditioning elevates the personal services of the salon to a new level. The age of the specialist is offered at the Hair Lab.

Hair Design

We at the Hair Lab do not believe in mass producing hair styles. It seems that when a "look" becomes fashionable it suddenly appears as a parade of different people with the same hair style. Bone structure, features, coloring, life style and of course your own personal taste in hair design must first be considered before commencing.

We at the Hair Lab are dedicated to the individual... YOU!

Shampoos and Conditioners

The foundation of healthy hair is part from diet and good health. As found in the type of shampoos and conditioners used. The Hair Lab uses Jaxa products which are acid balanced between 4.5-5.5 pH and made from vital hair nutrients such as keratin protein and essential fatty acids. They are designed to leave the hair healthier, naturally shiny and easy to manage.

The Hair Lab offers an appropriate shampoo for every type of hair whether it be dry, oily, fine in texture or otherwise.

Permanent Waving

The Hair Lab is proud to bring to you a remarkable development in permanent waving. By utilizing a combination of research technology, advanced chemistry, and professional expertise, we can give you the perfect permanent. Be it soft, to set, tight or curly, you'll be pleased at the Hair Lab.

From the subtlest accentuation of your hair's natural hues to the most dramatic change in colour.

Our specialists can find just the right tones to fit you.

Analysis

All of the Hair Lab's chemical services include an analysis to insure the success of your service. With the Tress Testor we can determine and treat problems you may be encountering. With this analysis we keep a personal progress account for you on the condition of your hair. It's not necessary to have a chemical service to receive an analysis performed on your hair.

We also offer a nutritional analysis in which we employ the use of two doctors, a researcher and a nutritionist. With this you can determine your overall health status in terms of nutrition.

Skin Care

The Hair Lab offers expertise in coordinating your skin tones for a structure, complexion, hair design and color with cosmetics that most personally suit you. Our facials will not only soothe and relax you but will also deep cleanse your skin and stimulate blood flow, nerve endings and muscle tone.

Students express optimism, caution about new president

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

RONALD REAGAN now hangs his cowboy hat and spurs in the hall of the White House, and some SIUC students say that's the best thing that could happen to this country. Others are pessimistic. And then there are those students who don't really give a damn.

In a man-on-the-street interview, students were asked how they felt about the new administration, what they thought Reagan would do as president and how he would affect their lives. The economy, U.S. defense, education, the environment and minimum wage laws are some of the issues on the minds of students who do give a damn.

Christ Cordogan, former coordinator of the John Anderson campaign in Carbondale, is keeping a "wait and see" attitude towards Reagan and his policies.

Cordogan, 22, said Reagan has already indicated he would not be able to keep his promise to balance the budget.

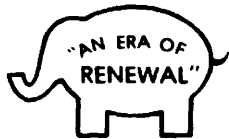

"He has backed down on a number of his campaign promises," he said. "Much of what he said during his campaign was rhetoric. We can't be sure what he will really do."

CORDOGAN SAID he is thankful the hostages are home. He said the hostage situation had potential to cause a war because of Reagan's hardline attitude towards the military. Cordogan, a junior in geography, is also concerned about Reagan's promise to dissolve the Department of Education.

"I can see a need for cutbacks of useless projects, but not of the whole program," he said.

Robert Schneider, a junior in marketing, lived in California for two years while Reagan was governor. Schneider said he was happy with the job Reagan did as governor.

"Reagan got the state functioning well economically," Schneider, 30, said. "The fact that Reagan's policies are not popular is nothing new. The solutions to major problems are never easy or popular."

Schneider said he felt the stereotype of Reagan as a "war monger" was unfounded and just a term usually associated with conservatives. He said he is not concerned because only Congress can declare war.

SCHNEIDER SAID HE thinks Reagan will make cuts in the educational budget, but he said they won't be as big as people expect.

Removal of useless environmental regulations will also be on the president's agenda, according to Schneider.

"Some of the old laws on the books shouldn't apply to industry today because new technology makes them obsolete," he said.

Schneider predicts Reagan will continue other pollution regulation to create more jobs.

GREGORY PICUR, like Schneider, is a staunch Reagan supporter. He said Reagan's economic policies will not have any short term effects, but he said they may have beneficial long range effects on the country.

Picur, a senior in accounting, is in favor of removing the minimum wage.

"Cutting back the minimum wage is good because it will increase the number of jobs available," he said.

Picur said he doesn't have a student work job. He said everyone should learn to support themselves through school by working and taking out loans like he did.

"THE PROBLEM IS THAT everyone in this country expects something for nothing," he said.

Picur also said the threat of war is present in any administration, but Reagan's stance on a strong defense may be a deterrent to war.

Debbie Brown, graduate student in English and president of the Graduate Student Council, said she would "like to feel hopeful, but is apprehensive about the Reagan administration."

Brown said the economy is already in trouble, but she's not sure if it would worsen under the Reagan administration. She also said she would not be surprised if the United States was involved in a war in the next four years.

SANDY SHERMAN, 23, a junior in civil engineering technology, said she hopes Reagan will help the troubled economy.

But wishing doesn't make it so," she said.

Sherman is another student concerned about Reagan's administrative cuts, especially his thoughts of abolishing the Department of Energy. Sherman is a student worker at Carbondale Mining Operations in Carpentersville.

"I'm working there to put myself through school," she said. "I voted for him and now I could lose my job."

REGARDLESS OF her concern, Sherman still thinks Reagan will do a good job.

Sue Golding, a senior in physiology, fears that abolishing the minimum wage will allow employers to take advantage of their employees. But in the long run it would be good for the economy because it would create more jobs, she said.

Students are apparently both optimistic and pessimistic about the next four years with Ronald Reagan. But even the students who are critical of Reagan and his policies feel that something must be done to stop the mudslide of problems presently affecting the country.

Like Cordogan, we all must wait and see.

Coal plant may face cut by Reagan, says simon

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

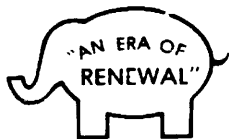

With Ronald Reagan taking office, many federal projects face possible funding cuts and even complete phase-outs.

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, fears construction of a coal gasification plant in Perry County may be threatened by funding cutbacks. In a telephone interview Wednesday, Simon said that the Reagan transition team suggested funding for the plant be cut from the federal budget.

"They are looking around for places to cut and that may be one of them," Simon said.

Allocations for the demonstration-sized high-energy gas plant and another plant in Ohio were won last November. About $42 million was authorized for the Perry plant, which would eventually cost about $800 million.

Half the total cost of the Perry County plant would come from the Illinois Coal Gasification Group, a private utility group, and half from the federal government. A two-thirds vote in both Houses would be needed to deny the $600 million to $1.1 billion in expected construction costs. Simon said.

"I'm reasonably optimistic that my colleagues will stick to their position on this," he said.

Simon said he will urge Secretary of Energy-designate James Edwards to support the program, but that the Reagan administration may ask ICGG to drop the plans for the Perry County plant.

Simon also said he fears that administration officials may put pressure on the utility firms to withhold their part of the funding.

"Reagan feels that government shouldn't be supporting programs like this," Simon said. "I disagree. We simply have to move ahead in the utilization of synthetic fuels."

New press secretary is former SIU student

By Karen Gullo
Focus Editor

A native Southern Illinoisian and former SIU-C student is one of President Reagan's closest associates.

James Brady, Reagan's press secretary, was born and raised in Centralia. The only child of a yardmaster for the old Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, Brady graduated from Centralia High School in 1958. He attended the University of Illinois in Champaign where he received a degree in communications and political science in 1962.

Brady, 40, attended SIU-C for three semesters in 1965. He took graduate classes in government, but didn't receive a degree from the University, according to the office of admissions and records. A St. Louis newspaper incorrectly reported this week that Brady received a doctorate degree in public administration from SIU-C.

Brady worked in a Chicago advertising and public relations firm and headed legislative and public affairs for the Illinois State Medical Society before moving to Washington in 1968 to work as a communications consultant to the House of Representatives.

After that, Brady handled press chores for the office of management and budget in the Ford Administration for Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld.

During his time with the Reagan campaign, Brady served as deputy press secretary.

Bonanza of gifts and freebies waits for returning hostages

By The Associated Press

The showcase of gifts awaiting the 52 former hostages when they get home would rival that of the richest television giveaway show.

Already, live lobsters from Maine and pizzas from London have been sent to the hospital in Wiesbaden. West Germany where the hostages are staying. And they are being offered a further bonanza ranging from free vacations to free psychiatric counseling.

The list of gift offers also includes tickets to the Super Bowl, lifetime passes to major league baseball games, free airline travel, $1,000 Persian or oriental rugs and souvenir tray tables designed for President Reagan's inaugural balls.

They can take advantage of expense-paid stays at resorts in Florida, California, Tahiti or Hawaii.

Several airlines have offered to fly the families of the hostages to meet them when they arrive in this country and then provide free trips elsewhere for up to a month.

In addition, the Hostage Relief Act approved by Congress last fall exempts the hostages from paying income taxes on earnings in their period of captivity and provides free hospitalization.

Boston television station WNAC-TV shipped the lobsters to Wiesbaden on a commercial jet Wednesday night.

"They're on a special diet right now," said station spokeswoman Robin Reibel, "but they'll be told there are 52 live and kicking Maine lobsters waiting for them."

Norman Mark, a radio personality for Chicago station WIND, telephoned Bob Payton, a Chicagoan who operates the Chicago Pizza Factory of London, and arranged to have pizzas and a case of champagne flown to Wiesbaden by private plane for a party on Wednesday.

In New York, the baseball commissioner's office said it will give lifetime passes for all regular-season games starting with the 1981 season.

The tickets to the Super Bowl game Sunday in New Orleans were offered by NBC-TV, provided the former hostages are home by then.

Tourism officials in Florida have offered free lodging at some of the best hotels in Miami and Miami Beach — including the Fontainebleu Hilton and the Castaways Motel — as well as in Tampa, St. Petersburg and Clearwater.

The Tahiti vacation was promised last February by Ted Cook, a tour operator of Newport Beach, Calif., owner of the Captain Cook Hotel on the Tahitian island of Moorea. Each hostage and a guest was invited for a week's stay — including meals — a vacation that normally would cost $1,200 a couple.

Jerry Krick, manager of the Tahitian Hotel in Palm Springs, Calif., is offering a two-week stay to hostages and their families, good anytime this year.

Freed hostages rest and relax

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — A U.S. Marine sergeant from Illinois says he and many of his fellow captives spent their first day of freedom "taking showers and telling stories."

Paul E. Lewis, 23, of Homer, a central Illinois community of 1,400, sounded happy and well in a brief telephone interview Wednesday, a few hours after the freed hostages touched down in West Germany.

"I feel very good," Lewis said. "I feel better than I've felt in a long, long time, and I'm ready to go home."

He refused substantive comment about his 14½-month ordeal and said he had no information about when the 52 Americans would fly to the United States.

Lewis, a four-year Marine veteran, arrived at his new post at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 3, 1979, a day before Islamic militants stormed the embassy and took the hostages.

It was his second embassy guard post — he earlier served at Budapest since being graduated first in his class at the marines' embassy guard school.

Lewis said he is healthy and in good condition and seemed relatively rested despite the overnight flight from Tehran via Athens and Algiers. He laughed a lot.

Asked what the hostages — sequestered at the U.S. Air Force hospital in this central German spa for a few days rest — were doing on their first full day of freedom, Lewis said: "mostly we're taking showers and telling stories."

Cowboy 'Super Bowl' tastes of Old West

By Terry Ryan
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — It's ranchers and cattle, the Old West and designer jeans, weekend cowboys, 4-H and Future Farmers, and big money. For 10 days each January - 11 days this year to mark its 75th anniversary - the National Western Stock Show comes to Denver.

For cattlemen it is the Super Bowl, World's Fair and a national convention rolled into one. They come from 45 states and six foreign countries, and what they do here will affect the quality and price of beef on your table a year or two from now.

It may be possible to live in Denver and be unaware of the National Western, but a person would have to ignore 100,000 visitors in boots, trucks and horse trailers packing the city streets, supermarket clerks in cowboy hats, TV newsmen in full cowboy drag, and an occasional distinctive aroma.

The show began Jan. 14, with the last shows and sales scheduled for Saturday and the last rodeo performance for Sunday. Before the show ends, more than 330,000 people are expected to ante up the $2 to enter the 40-acre National Western grounds 3½ miles north of downtown Denver.

More than 80,000 of those visitors will come from out of state, pumping $32 million into the local economy. Another 20,000 will be residents of Colorado from outside the Denver area.

The first National Western was held in a circus tent in 1906. There had been cattlemen meetings earlier in Denver, but when the National Livestock Association convened in 1897, the bash became a brawl. It was nine years before anyone tried again.

The National Western added a rodeo 50 years ago, and it is now one of the three biggest and richest on the pro rodeo circuit. The Stock Show (it's capitalized in Denver) includes horse shows and sales, sheep shows and sales, hogs, chickens and even rabbits. In its heart of hearts, however, the National Western is cattle.

George Schlichau, a breeder from Haven, Kan., stood at the back of the auction arena this week as the bids ticked past $18,000 on a Hereford bull.

"Denver is recognized by most all the cattle business as the best of the shows," said Schlichau. "This is the World Series."

An hour earlier, half interest in a Hereford breeding bull sold for $301,000. Lean animals with more red meat and less fat are the major concern of cattlemen these days, said Schlichau, and they will pay to get them.

"That is what the consumer wants - less fat," Schlichau explained. "To get that you are looking for animals with long muscles and less back fat. The other thing you are looking for is something that will consume roughage and put it into weight."

Many steers are going to slaughter now at 950 to 1,100 pounds, down from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds a couple of years ago. Much of that additional weight was expensive, corn-produced fat put on in feed lots. Cattlemen now want animals to put on more weight on range grass or roughage from grain fields. Their success will affect how much steaks and hamburger cost at the meat counter.

More than 14,000 animals and $11 million changed hands last year during the National Western. More than 25,000 animals were shipped in this year, and no one is even guessing at the total sales figure.

For many stockmen, the National Western is a combined family vacation, business trip, shopping outing and fraternal gathering. Hotels in Denver are full, taxis scarce, and the newspapers run special advertising sections. January is the best time of year for ranchers to get off the ranch.

Steve Simmons and his wife brought a pair of heifers and two bulls from their Angus operation near Williamston, Mich. The animals were for sale, if the right offer was made, Simmons said, but the main reason for the trip was to display the results of his breeding.

"We show all over the country but there is nothing like Denver," Simmons said as he stood at his stall space in the National Western's Beef Palace. "It is social in a way. We see our friends from all over the country here, and see what they are doing."

As Simmons talked, children from a suburban Denver school district were being ushered around the grooming racks two aisles away. Snow cattle are washed, sprayed, fluffed, oiled and polished in a way that simply astounds city folks, young and old.

Thomas Watts, a Denver physician, was walking with his wife and three children from the stockyard pens to the exhibition buildings. A friend had shown some animals that day and his children just liked being there. "It's a good way for city folks to see how country people live," Watts said.

Fahner files paint waste complaint

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner has filed a complaint against a landfill operator near Andalusia in Rock Island County for allegedly accepting paint waste without a permit.

Fahner said Thursday that he has asked the Illinois Pollution Control Board to set a hearing involving the landfill, which is operated by the Watts Trucking Service Inc., an Iowa corporation.

Fahner's complaint, filed on behalf of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, also names J. I. Case

Co., which operates a business in Bettendorf, Iowa, and International Harvester Co. in East Moline.

Each is charged with delivering to the Andalusia landfill 29 barrels of paint waste without the proper documents.

Did the United States pay ransom to Iran?

By R. Gregory Nokes
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Did the United States pay ransom to Iran for release of the 52 Americans? Apparently not, but U.S. taxpayers will probably end up with some out-of-pocket expense.

Ransom is money of one party demanded in return for a kidnapp victim or hostage held by another party, and many Americans feel the Carter administration paid dearly — in pride as well as money — to free the former hostages.

New York Mayor Edward Koch, for one, responded with an explosive "Baloney!" when a reporter asked whether he agreed with other officials that the agreement was not ransom.

"In effect, we have paid a penalty to terrorists, a penalty to kidnappers," Koch said.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale has defended the hostage agreement, saying the U.S. was not paying "a dime of American money," and Republican Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said "not one cent of ransom" was involved.

To date, that is correct. The money paid to Iran, $2.9 billion, was from Iranian funds on deposit in the U.S. and in U.S. banks abroad at the time former President Jimmy Carter froze Iranian assets in November 1979. It did include $800 million in interest, but interest would have ac-accumulated anyway.

Another $5.1 billion in frozen funds was used to pay off bank loans made to Iran and to settle future claims. And $3 billion or so may be delivered to Iran later, but that is also to be Iranian money.

The potential liability for the taxpayer falls in three areas:

—Compensation to the hostages for the harm done them.

—Compensation for loss and damage to U.S. property in Iran.

—Compensation for claims from unfulfilled contracts and other debts owed American business.

Here in question-and-answer form is an attempt to answer these and other questions about the agreement.

Q. What about compensation for the 52 hostages? How will that be handled?

A. The agreement lets Iran off the hook, even though Iran is to blame for their anguish and abuse, the loss of freedom and the 14½ months lost from their normal lives.

Instead, the agreement provides for establishing a presidential commission to decide any compensation. It could easily amount to several million dollars — and taxpayers would pay it.

Q. How about damage to the U.S. Embassy and other U.S.

property in Iran?

A. Iran is absolved of responsibility, despite there being ample precedent for compensation by host countries when damage is done to property of other nations.

Q. Doesn't the agreement cover lawsuits against Iran?

A. It does. It will take such suits out of U.S. courts and have them decided by an international arbitration commission. But the Justice Department expects court challenges to the agreement and isn't sure it will be upheld.

At least 300 lawsuits have been filed in U.S. courts against Iranian assets and an additional 3,000 claims are on file with the Treasury Department. Officials say the lawsuits amount to more than $3 billion but won't be more precise because they say many may be exaggerated.

Q. Isn't money set aside in the agreement to deal with these claims?

A. Yes. The Iranians have agreed to set up a fund of at least $500 million to settle claims in the U.S. Another $1.4 billion has been set aside to handle claims against assets on deposit in U.S. banks abroad.

Q. If the claims are valid and there is insufficient Iranian money to pay them off, who pays?

A. This isn't clear, but presumably it would be Iran. However, it would be easy to imagine a scenario under which Iran refuses to pay and the U.S. becomes responsible.

Lobbyist has helping hand slapped

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Cohen, an Illinois schools lobbyist, was lending a helping hand last week at the Department of Education to Secretary-designate Terrell H. Bell.

Now it appears he may be persona non grata there.

Bell has assured a Republican senator in writing that Cohen "will hold no position in the Department of Education, either as a paid employee or as a volunteer worker."

President Reagan has promised to seek to dismantle Education, the newest Cabinet agency. Some Reagan transition team members reportedly became alarmed at seeing Cohen in Bell's office last week because they remembered Cohen as chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee for Creation of a Cabinet Department of Education.

That was a coalition of education and labor groups who lobbied and ran newspaper ads in favor of the department during the House battle over its creation in 1979. One of the former U.S. commissioners of education who joined in that effort was Bell himself.

Bell assured Republican senators at his confirmation hearing Jan. 15 he was prepared to carry out Reagan's pledge. Bell said he still believes education programs should not be buried in a mammoth agency like the old Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He said he will look for alternatives, such as an independent agency without Cabinet rank.

He responded later in writing to a question from Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., about Cohen's role.

Cohen, an executive assistant to the Illinois superintendent of education who works out of the state's office here, said in an interview, "I was just helping out as a pure volunteer."

Cohen said he was "literally helping two friends" — Bell, whom he knew from the Ad Hoc Committee, and Elam Hertzler, a top aide to Bell. Cohen knew Hertzler as the federal agency's liaison to the Council of Chief State School Officers.

Cohen said, "I'm still in touch with them and will continue to be."

He said the Ad Hoc Committee still exists and will seek to offer help to Bell as he reviews the status of the fledgling department and proposes alternatives.

"I've got complete faith in him," said Cohen.

Reagan chief of staff Edward Meese has made derisive statements about the department and said Reagan will carry out his pledge to dismantle it.

Cohen said, "I would hope he would allow Dr. Bell to speak for the department. (Meese) has been on the bandwagon, over and over, hammering for the abolishment of the department."

Cohen said that as a state official, he was a strong believer in states' rights in education, but he also feels the federal government has a role to play.

He said the Ad Hoc Committee's leaders last month wrote Meese to ask for a meeting to discuss the department, but got no response.

Company forgives loan to president for $973.438

CHICAGO (AP) — A $973,438 loan made in June 1979 to company president Warren J. Hayford has been forgiven by International Harvester Co., which reported a $397.3 million loss last year after a crippling six-month United Auto Workers strike.

Several months ago, the manufacturer of truck, construction and agricultural equipment, forgave a $1.8 million loan to chairman Archie R. McCordell.

Hayford's loan, like McCordell's, was used to buy shares of Harvester common stock at market price on the date of the loan.

A proxy statement for the company's 1981 annual meeting disclosed Wednesday that its committee on organization "interpreted Mr. Hayford's loan agreement to require that $243,360 be applied to reduce his note balance" in each of the next four fiscal years, starting with the current year.

A spokesman said Hayford's forgiveness is tied to McCordell's, which was granted for the company's performance in the year ended Oct. 31, 1979, when Harvester earned a record $369.6 million.

Iranians here fear retaliation for actions

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

Some Iranian students at SIUC fear that the attention being given to the alleged mistreatment of the former hostages may bring public retaliation upon Iranians residing in the U.S. and overshadow what they view as the real issue—the reason that the hostages were taken in the first place.

Deborah Norman, a friend of several Iranian students on campus, said she thinks the media is overplaying the stories of mistreatment.

"The media is going to bias peoples' minds," said the junior. "I don't think that the Iranian students here should have to suffer for what went on over there."

Several Iranian students voiced the same opinion.

"Of course I'm glad that they released the hostages," Parviz Pirjahandideh, a junior in engineering, said. "But I hope that others see that what happened was not my fault. I came here during the Shah's regime. I had nothing to do with the hostages."

Another Iranian student, who wished to remain anonymous, agreed.

"Everyone is here for an education. We are not here to kill or torture anyone," he said. "And although I have a lot of American friends who are very understanding, other people blame us."

"We go out to the bars, and people tell us to get out of the country. Well, I can't continue my education back home; there is no university."

Many of the Iranian students blamed the media for aggravating hostilities against Iranians.

"The concern we feel now is based on past experience," another Iranian student, also wishing to remain anonymous, said. "The media all along has been reporting of our terrorism, yet since the revolution, up until now, no American has been killed in Iran by an Iranian, yet I have heard that 10 to 15 Iranians have been killed in America."

Though the Iranian students fear they may be blamed for what happened to the hostages, most seemed to think they would not be deported.

Pirjahandideh said, "One consideration is the money. We spend a lot of money. We all pay out-of-state tuition."

Another student agreed.

"The American government doesn't want to lose the billions of dollars they would lose if all the Iranian students in the country were sent back," he said. "And besides, they know we are not dangerous to the government."

The Iranian students also accused the media of ignoring the reasons for Iran's contempt of the U.S.

"The media never say why the 35 million Iranians were angry at the hostages and America," said one of the anonymous students. "They don't talk about the role of David Rockefeller and Henry Kissinger in our country. I don't think the American people will ever know all that went on."

Crisis outreach group plans week to gain funds, support

By Pete Knecht
Staff Writer

Synergy, a free 24-hour-a-day crisis center in Carbondale, has encountered operating fund problems and has proclaimed a "Synergy Week" to help drum up support for the facility. Terri Kirby, Synergy community outreach worker, says,

To help build community awareness of Synergy's services and financial situation, several local radio stations and a local TV station will be running blurbs about the center throughout next week, Kirby said. An information table also will be set up in the Student Center during the week.

For the past two years, Synergy has been operating on $90,000 per year, said Tom Paprocki, Synergy administrator. In total, the center may stand to lose 60 to 70 percent of its funds by the end of November 1981.

The major loss, Paprocki said, will come from the termination of a three-year grant this November.

"Things are getting real tight," Kirby said, "and we want some community awareness. Funding is getting cut in every direction."

Synergy, a non-profit emergency center which has been in operation since 1970, is being funded by several sources, including SIUC, the Carbondale United Way, the Jackson County Community Mental Health Board and private donations.

Kirby said, "We need help. We need support. I think Synergy has provided valuable support in Carbondale, and we want some of that support back."

Synergy's services include a 24-hour phone and walk-in "crisis intervention." A crisis is what an individual defines it as, Kirby said. It can range from problems of feeling lonely to problems of drug addiction.

"You don't have to be falling apart to call," Kirby said. "It can be just a mild problem."

Other Synergy services include emergency housing, with temporary housing offered for up to three nights, and transient aid for people passing through the area who have transportation or food problems.

Drug identification and information is offered by the center, along with counseling on drug abuse.

Synergy is located in the geodesic dome at 905 S. Illinois Ave. The 24-hour phone number is 549-3333.

Food stamp allowances rise for needy students

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

About 225 college students on food stamps in Jackson County may receive additional allotments as a result of this year's increase from the Department of Agriculture.

Depending on need, a one-person household may now receive up to $70 per month in food stamp allotments instead of the previous $63 per month, according to Dan Tittman, public information officer for the Illinois Department of Public Aid.

On Jan. 1, the Department of Agriculture increased the allotments by 11.5 percent, 0.5 percent more than last year's increase, as a result of the department's annual food market survey, Tittman said.

Gilbert Zimbelman, administrator of the Jackson County Office of the Illinois Department of Public Aid, said that the average food stamp allotment for each student is about $10 per month. Aside from being enrolled in at least six credit hours, Zimbelman said students must work a minimum of 20 hours per week to be eligible for food stamps.

"That would put their income pretty close to the maximum," Zimbelman said. Proof of income and expenses, such as loans, grants, bank accounts, rent receipts and medical bills must be shown in order for allotments to be calculated.

Tittman said handicapped students who are unable to work and who have low incomes may still be eligible for food stamps.

John Spinelle, manager of the Saluki Currency Exchange, said that not many students cash food stamp checks for food stamps there. The currency exchange is the only location in Carbondale where cards may be exchanged for food stamps.

Lyn Kramer, owner and manager of Arnold's Market, said there has been a significant increase in the use of food stamps there.

"The head cashier would say about 60 to 70 percent of all food stamp customers also are students," Kramer said. "Most are married students who also are on the Women, Infants and Children Program."

George Trammel, the co-manager of Kroger Co., said it's not uncommon for students to buy groceries at the store with food stamps, although there are not too many students doing so.

Consumer group spots open

Nomination forms for consumer positions on the Greater Egypt Health Council are available for any interested persons, including students, in the Southern Illinois area, according to Sharon Yeargin, health planner and staff member to the council.

The council serves as advisory group on all aspects of the health system in the Southern Illinois counties of Jackson, Williamson, Franklin, Perry, Randolph, Washington and Jefferson. Yeargin said.

She said the council is always looking for people to fill the consumer slots because federal law requires the council to have a majority of consumer members.

Applications will be accepted until all three current consumer vacancies are filled, she said.

Anyone interested in applying for the positions can get more information from the commission office at 608 E. College in Carbondale.

NCIC pertains only to active searches for stolen property and arrest warrants. No criminal history is transmitted by either service on a license check," MacNamara said.

Requests for information transmitted by computer are logged at the Carbondale Police station and at the Bureau of Identification. MacNamara said a report of all requests the policeman makes and the subject of the request is sent by the Bureau to Police chief Ed Hogan each month, he said.

There is no direct tie-in with any federal government computers, MacNamara said, because any information a federal agency releases to local government is sent through the state agency only. MacNamara said that the police system is carried through telegraph lines that can't be broken into by anyone with access to a computer terminal.

"Someone would have to physically tap into the telegraph line we are on, providing they could find it, and then be able to fake our entry code to get any information at all from the system. Unlike many computer operations, no one can supercede our controls by using a telephone computer terminal," MacNamara said.

Even if the police request a person's criminal history, MacNamara said, the amount of information that is transmitted is minimal.

"At best, we could get a record of an individual's arrest record in other states or by a federal agency but that is a separately-coded entry that is not at all routine, MacNamara said. "Even if we got it, it would be a simple record of arrests, because there are no files of information in computer banks at any level of government that I am aware of."

MacNamara said the Carbondale Police usually will request information from the federal level through a local office of a specific agency. The police computer can be used to request information from other agencies, he said, but that amounts to nothing more than sending a telegram.

"Because of the legal restraints on sending information from a federal agency, we get no instant response through the computer to our requests, and often find it easier to just send a letter," MacNamara said.

Garwood: POWs still in Vietnam

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood reported seeing "a couple hundred other Americans" still in captivity in Vietnam and was upset that authorities didn't question him about it, a Navy psychiatrist testified Thursday. But Col. R.E. Switzer, who is presiding over Garwood's court-martial on charges of desertion and collaboration with the enemy, ruled that the statements by Capt. Benjamin

R. Ogburn were irrelevant and should be stricken from the record.

"Garwood, 34, said he didn't know exactly who the Americans were, but that he was upset and concerned that he was not debriefed like other people," the psychiatrist had said. "He knew that there were other Americans still in Vietnam and he felt that should be brought out."

Garwood, who was in Viet-

Spokesmen for the FBI and Department of Defense said both agencies used "closed" computer systems, and for the most part, kept any information they collected to themselves.

An FBI spokesman in Springfield said the only information his agency makes available to local police is transmitted through NCIC, and confirmed MacNamara's description of what type of records are available. The FBI spokesman said he "had never heard of a method to get information other than that through a computer."

Lt. Col. James Gaston, of the Defense Intelligence Agency in Washington, D.C., said that all record of Department of Defense security clearance investigations are maintained by the Defense Index of Investigation in Baltimore.

"The only person I know of that could get information for a DOD security investigation would be the subject of that investigation, applying under a Freedom of Information Act provision. Privacy laws absolutely prohibit the release of that information to anyone else," Gaston said.

namese hands for 14 years, declined comment after the court session. His chief defense lawyer, John Lowe, told reporters, "During this trial Bobby Garwood won't be talking to anyone other than his lawyers."

As of July 1980, one American was still classified by the Defense Department as a prisoner of war in Southeast Asia, and 19 were listed as missing in action.

David Fleischer with one of the University's modified vans for the handicapped.

Supervisor enjoys helping handicapped

"It's really good for you mentally to always be helping someone."

This is the way that David Fleischer feels about life. And throughout his life Fleischer says he has always tried to help people, whether it was helping with a newsletter for the parents and teachers of perceptually handicapped children, playing with physically handicapped children in the park or his current job as supervisor of the University's Handicapped Van Service. Fleischer had worked there for three years before being recently promoted to supervisor.

Although Fleischer, who is a music major, dreams of conducting a large church or synagogue choir he never loses sight of one basic goal—trying to help someone everyday.

Graduate fellowships to be increased $40

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

Graduate students with fellowship awards at SIUC will be able to put more meat and potatoes on their tables next year as a result of a $40 increase in awards granted by the Graduate School.

Fellowships will be increased from $370 to $410 for masters students and from $400 to $440 for doctoral students. Dennis Leitner, associate dean of the Graduate School said Thursday. The increase is 10.8 and 10 percent respectively for masters and doctoral students.

Leitner estimated that only 72 fellowships will be awarded next year. Eighty fellowship awards had been granted in each of the past two school years.

When a student is granted a fellowship, he is given an award so he can concentrate on studying without having to get an outside job to support himself through school.

Leitner said the number of awards had to be cut down because the budget allocation from the state would probably not be increased next year. Funding for the awards comes directly from Graduate School budget allocations.

Leitner said he and John Jackson, acting dean of the Graduate School, would "continue to pursue available fellowship monies and scholarships from outside sources."

One of Leitner's efforts in this direction involves publicizing the ability of students to receive fellowships from such organizations as the National Science Foundation which obtains its money from the federal government.

Leitner said the possibility of receiving more state money for fellowships is being worked on at "a higher level than the Graduate School." He declined to say exactly what was being done to obtain such increases.

Fellowship awards are being increased because of a request by graduate students and so that the award rates can be kept competitive with the awards given to teaching and research assistants.

In December, members of the Graduate Student Council voted 27-0-1 to increase fellowship awards, but voiced their concern over the reduction in the number of awards to be given out.

GSC president Debbie Brown said she was not troubled about the reduction in awards because she knew there was "no other alternative for graduate students with fellowships to get an increase."

Brown did say, however, that if there is no attempt to increase fellowship funding within five years council members would take action.

Hayes ready for Super Bowl duel with Carmichael

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Oakland cornerback Lester Hayes says he just might catch more passes than Harold Carmichael in Sunday's Super Bowl game.

Talk, that's just talk, replies Philadelphia's towering wide receiver.

"If he wants to catch any passes, he better not go on my side of the field," cause if he's on my side, he's gonna have a hard time," Hayes said Wednesday. "It's a fact, he'd better stay on the other side of the field or I just might catch more passes than he will."

"If Hayes said that, it must be right," Carmichael responded later with a grin.

Hayes takes some pretty good credentials into the game. He intercepted 13 passes during the regular season, one short of the National Football League record, and picked off five more in the Raiders' three playoff victories which have brought them here.

And he recalls that, in the Eagles' 10-7 regular-season win over Oakland in Philadelphia, quarterback Ron Jaworski threw six times to Carmichael when Hayes was covering him and that Carmichael came up empty.

Part of the reason, Hayes believes, is that early in the game Carmichael got a clean but hard hit from Oakland safety Burgess Owens "and it's mighty feasible that Harold was hearing footsteps after that," Hayes suggested that he just might drop a calling card of his own on Carmichael early on.

"If you stop Harold, their whole passing game's almost null because there's no one else to go to."

Neither Carmichael nor his coach, Dick Vermeil, was buying that theory. "There were games that we won where Harold caught one football," Vermeil said. "If you have a sound defensive team, like we do, then the game's always close enough to win. No one player has the responsibility for winning in our organization, nor does any player take the responsibility for losing."

"We have great respect for them," he said. "Joe has had a lot of bad luck, with Camp getting hurt. All he needs is some time to overcome these very unfortunate things. He went out and got a big center. People here are always on my tail because I can't get one."

Blair hopes Little will boost netters' tournament chances

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's badminton team, which didn't practice during Christmas break, is gearing up for the Saluki Invitational, to be held Saturday from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sunday from 7 to 11 a.m. at the Arena.

Coach Paul Blair isn't sure how the layoff will affect his team's play in the tournament, which includes Eastern, Western, and Northern Illinois, Illinois State, Blackburn College, Ball State and Indiana State.

"We've had players joining the team each week, so it's really hard to tell what's going to happen, but we've been practicing pretty hard since break, and we've got the best team we've ever had here," he said.

So far this season, the team has finished sixth in a six-team tournament at Northern Illinois, tied for third in a four-team tournament at Ball State, and lost a dual meet, 43-13, at Eastern Illinois.

But that was before Christmas break, when freshman Nancy Little wasn't playing because of a foot injury. Blair, who recruited Little from Calgary, Alberta, Canada, describes her as "the best badminton player we've ever had at SIU," and he thinks her presence will improve the chances of the Salukis in the invitational.

"By putting Nancy in our top A flight, our B, C, and D flights are strengthened, too," he said.

The four flights each consist of three singles players from each school, the best players usually being in the A flight, the next best in the B flight. When a player is inserted into the first A flight position, the movement of the other players causes the third player in each flight to become the first player in the next lower flight, strengthening the latter flight.

The invitational is the Salukis' only home meet this season.

Gym squad hoping for 'Super Sunday'

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

By this time, everyone knows that Sunday is Superbowl day in the world of football, but the Saluki men's gymnastics team is hoping to have a 'super Sunday' of its own when it takes on Northern Illinois at the Arena at 2 p.m.

Coach Bill Meade is hoping to do more than just beat Northern, he's hoping to score at least 270 points. According to Meade, SIU-C is tops in its region with 268 points scored. Illinois and Northern are both in the region with SIU-C so it is important for the Salukis to better the team's within their region which might be considered for national competition.

"This is a crucial meet for us," Meade said. "Northern is one of the strongest teams in the region which will be considered for the NCAA meet. Illinois goes against Indiana tomorrow night so I'm sure they'll come out with a good score."

Junior all-arounder Brian Babcock is also hoping for a super performance. He is seeking to score 57 points in the all-around competition which would be his personal best. Babcock has come close achieving that plateau as he scored 56.35 and 56.75 respectively in the last two meets. Babcock knows what he has to do in order to complete the task.

"I have to be consistent in each event," Babcock said. "I'll try not to think about the 57. If it ends in 57 I'll be very happy but there will be a lot of other things going on."

"I have to score a 9.5 in all six events with basically no major breaks," he added. "I'm not real weak in floor (exercise) or parallel bars but those are the areas I have to improve in the most."

There is added incentive for the team to beat Northern. NIU's coach is Chuck Erlich, a former Saluki coached by Meade.

"He's working hard to beat me," Meade said. "I don't like that and the boys know that I don't like that. They know they better perform in order to make the coach happy after the meet."

Meade is holding tryouts between sophomore Jim Muenz and freshman Joe Tate this week to determine who will work high bar. Another tryout between Muenz and sophomore Dave Hoffman will be held to see who will work rings.

Along with a win and a 57 for Babcock, Meade and his squad are hoping for an arena full of people to cheer them on.

"A good crowd would help us out a lot," Babcock said. "Any athlete will tell you how much support from school and the community can help his performance. I'd like to see a basketball crowd in here for a gymnastics meet."

"We like to get a lot of students in here Sunday as a warmup for the Super Bowl," Meade said.

Super Bowl action not just on field

NEW YORK (AP)—The high drama of the Super Bowl is right up there with other box-office television biggies.

Only the famous "Who Shot J.R." show on "Dallas" and the final episode of "Roots" reached more households than last year's Super Bowl between Pittsburgh and Los Angeles. According to A.C. Nielsen Co. figures, "Dallas" was seen in 41.5 million homes, "Roots" in 36.4 million homes and Super Bowl XIV in 35.3 million homes.

Super Bowl XII Pittsburgh-Dallas ranked fourth and Super Bowl XII Dallas-Denver was fifth before "Gone With the Wind" One and Two. In all, eight Super Bowls rank in the top 25 of all-time rated shows.

The game's hold on the public has been captivating right from the start. Super Bowl I in 1967 was so big a prize that both CBS and NBC demanded it—and got it—in the merger settlement between the National Football League and its rival, the American Football League.

But because of CBS' inside position with the NFL, CBS handled all the production aspects of the game.

"The cloak-and-dagger stuff was straight out of a spy film," said Chet Simmons, former president of NBC Sports and now head of ESPN, the all-sports cable operation. "It was like talks with the Soviets. All that was missing were the CBS and NBC flags on the table."

Curt Gowdy and Paul Christman did the game for NBC. Ray Scott and Jack Whitaker split the play-by-play chores for CBS, with Frank Gifford handling the full 60 minutes of commentary.

"All week long, Paul and I would appear on the "Today" show and the "Tonight" show, anything to promote us," said Gowdy, now a CBS broadcaster.

Green Bay, the NFL's team beat Kansas City, 35-10, and CBS won the ratings war, 22.6-18.5. NBC, with the less-prestigious league and the smaller season ratings, claimed victory by not losing by the five-point spread set by TV oddsmakers.

Three swimmers ranked in top 10

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's swimming team is receiving some national recognition currently as three of the swimmers are ranked in the top 10 in several events while five of the relay squads are ranked in the top 10. The national rankings are the result of a lot of hard work and Coach Tim Hill's long range plans to make SIU-C a consistent national contender.

The early success of the team is due to the performances of several freshmen swimmers. Barb Larsen has the best time in the 500-yard freestyle of 4:45.68 and also has the fastest time in the 50-yard butterfly (25.92), and the 100-yard butterfly (56.19). In addition, she is ranked third in the 50-yard freestyle and is included in the top 10 in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle and the 200-yard butterfly.

Pam Ratcliffe, a freshman from Carbondale, is ranked second in the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:06.29. She has bettered that time however as she swam that event in 1:04.75 at a meet in Indiana last week. She is also ranked in the top 10 in the 1650-yard freestyle, the 50- and 200-yard breaststroke and the 200- and 400-yard individual medley.

Paula Janzen, another freshman from Montreal, Canada, is ranked in the top 10 in the 50- and 100-yard backstroke.

Those three and freshman

Laura Brown from Joliet make up the 200-yard medley relay squad which is ranked second nationally. The other ranked squads swim the 400-yard medley relay and the 100-400- and 800-yard freestyle events.

Although Hill is gratified by the national attention his team is receiving, he is quick to point out that the rankings are early ones.

"These are good times, there's no doubt about that," Hill said. "But we won't be the favorite going into the nationals or anything like that. There are a lot of people like Jill Sterkel and Kym Lynehan who are world class swimmers who will move up there as the season progresses."

The coach added that he is not surprised by his team's success, but pointed out that what really counts is the how the team does in February leading up to the national meet Mar. 18-20.

"We've attracted a lot of attention in the swimming world right now," Hill said. "What we have done can be compared to another sport like a basketball team beating a noted powerhouse. This will help us a lot with our recruiting for next year."

That doesn't mean the team's performances are flukes.

"This is a good indicator of the type of team we will be if we continue to develop," Hill said.

Part of that development process requires some hard work. The team backed off its pace a little recently because of exams and suffered some setbacks in its Christmas trip.

"I think we are bettered prepared emotionally to work harder now," Hill said. "They all had their ups and downs last month during the Christmas trip. You can't expect to put five people in a room together for a couple of days and not expect some confrontations and conflicts or the coach to get on their nerves. They have a willingness to work together more."

"There are no real stars on this team or no better individuals. They realize they have to pull closer together and earn their goal."

Hill's part in all of this hard work is as a guiding force and enforcer. The goal of a recent practice session was a 4,000-yard workout without a break.

"They didn't want to do it because they didn't think they could do it," Hill said. "I didn't give them a choice. They didn't like it but they realize they need it if we are to meet our long run goal."

Hill's swimming Salukis may not have liked the strenuous task presented to them but they did succeed just as the coach had told them. If this is truly an indicator of the team's potential, it will probably meet Hill's goal of being a national swimming power.

doubtful for the game against SIU-C next Friday night.

Purdue, meanwhile, is trying to bounce back from last year's 4-18 record. The Lady Boilermakers have already equaled last year's win total and have a 4-7 record following their 63-56 upset win over Michigan State last weekend. Purdue has only two seniors, 5-9 forward Laura Newcomb and 5-9 guard Deb Funkhouser.

The Boilermakers do have a big plus in the size department with 6-3 junior college transfer DeLys Brooks, who just became eligible this semester. When the situation dictates, Purdue will throw Brooks and 6-foot forward Sue Bartz at a defense.

Four are named to Hall of Fame

Four former SIU-C athletes, including an Olympic trackman and one of SIU-C's all-time great football running backs, will be inducted into the SIU Hall of Fame next fall.

Members of the fourth-year group of inductees are two-time Olympian Phil Coleman, former Dallas Cowboys back Amos Bullocks, All-American trackman Terry Erickson and longtime faculty member William Freeburg.

They'll join 58 others already in the SIU Hall of Fame when induction ceremonies take place Sept. 12 in conjunction with the football Salukis' home opener against Wichita State at McAndrew Stadium.

Bullocks was a standout running back for the Salukis from 1958 through 1961, gaining 2,441 yards and scoring 32 touchdowns. He played for the Cowboys for three years.

Coleman, a record-setting long-distance runner from 1948 to 1952, held school records in the mile and two-mile runs, and was a steeplechaser on the 1956 and 1960 U.S. Olympic teams.

Erickson was a two-time All-American during his SIU-C career, (1971 through 1974), and he still holds the school and state records in the 440-yard dash, as well as several other school records.

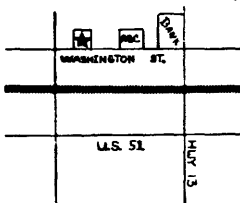

Fledgling, also a former Saluki football player, directed SIU-C's fledgling intramural athletics program.

Cage team preparing for battle with Braves

By Scott Stahmer
Associate Sports Editor

You'd think the Saluki men's basketball team would deserve a break after being walloped by Wichita State and tattooed by Terry Adolph of West Texas State.

But rooooo. The Missouri Valley Conference schedule makers weren't kind to the Salukis, 0-6 in the Valley and 7-8 overall. SIU-C must face Bradley, the defending MVC champion, Saturday at 7:35 p.m. at the Arena.

The Braves, 5-1 in conference play and 13-3 overall, moved into first place in the Valley with a come-from-behind, 76-70 victory over Tulsa Monday in Peoria. But Dick Versace, Bradley's colorful third-year coach, admits his team hasn't always played well.

"We haven't really played with our six or seven top kids really clicking," Versace, easily identifiable on the sidelines by his frizzy white hair, said. "Sometime we've had two bad halves or a mediocre half and a good half, but never two good halves."

Nonetheless, the Braves' only defeat was at Creighton, 54-51. According to Versace, defense has been the key factor in Bradley's success on the road and in close games.

"A team that is basically a defensive club will fare better on the road," he said. "Even in the Creighton game, we held them to 54 points, but we had a horrible offensive game. We made a lot of dumb, mental mistakes."

"We are totally committed to defense. If you don't play it, I won't play you as much as I would someone who does play defense."

In keeping with that philosophy, tight man-to-man defense is a Bradley trademark.

"We are capable of playing all defenses," Versace said, "but our basic defense is the man-to-man. When it's clicking, we're capable of putting on a real clinic."

Said SIU-C Coach Joe Gottfried about the Braves: "They won't let the game get out of hand. They're very disciplined and they do things well within the framework of their personnel."

Bradley's starting lineup will be identical to last year's, with Mitchell Anderson, 6-8, and Bobby Ford, 6-4, at the forwards; Donald Reese, 6-9, at center; and David Thirdkill, 6-7, and Eric Duhart, 6-2, at the guards. Duhart and Ford are seniors, the others are juniors.

Anderson, an all-MVC choice for two consecutive years and a definite NBA prospect, is the scoring and rebounding leader with 18.5 points and 10 rebounds per game. Thirdkill and Reese contribute 15 points per game, and Reese adds seven rebounds.

Bradley's top reserves are guards Hasan Houston, 11 points per game, Rick Malnati, Barney Mines and Eddie Mathews.

"Mitchell Anderson presents many problems because he's an outstanding player in terms of scoring, passing and rebounding," Gottfried said. "Thirdkill is having a great year, too. And a difference in them from a year ago is the play of Donald Reese."

Gottfried will start Charles Nance at power forward and Darnall Jones at small forward, Rod Camp at center, and Rob Kirsner and Johnny Fayne at guards. Jones had 26 points against West Texas and Camp, enjoying his best game since injuring his ankle, scored 25. However, Nance, who had 25 a week ago against Indiana State, had just two.

"We've got to get Nance the ball more, especially if he's playing in the middle against a zone," Gottfried said. "He's not used to playing in there because we've been playing him outside."

Despite his team's six-game losing skein, Gottfried said his players haven't lost confidence in themselves.

"All our players need is a win over a team like Bradley," he said. "That would pick us up more than anything."

Versace certainly isn't taking SIU-C lightly.

Women cagers hoping for turnaround

By Dave Kane
Sports Editor

According to Saluki women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott, her team needs confidence. When a team is as young and inexperienced as SIU-C is this season, the frustration of losing 13 games against six wins can shake even the most confident of players.

"I guess it's a combination of inexperience and lack of confidence," Scott said. "If you lose 13 games by this point in the season, the players start saying to themselves, 'Here we go again, we're going to lose another,' if they fall behind in a game."

It evidently happened again Wednesday night in Normal when the Salukis lost to Illinois State, 96-80. The Redbirds are rated 20th in the nation, and after spotting SIU-C an early lead, went on top for good five minutes into the game on Denise Morton's jump shot. It was ISU's highest point total of the year.

"They have a really good team. They executed perfectly," Scott said of ISU. "They were aggressive, really fast."

SIU reserve center Debbie Benak's came off the bench for ISU in the first half and scored 23 points, while a tough full-court press forced 26 Saluki turnovers.

"Our running offense worked pretty well in the first half, but once we got behind, we got tentative and scared," Scott said. "They pressed us the whole game and played switching defenses on us, too. It's difficult for a young team to adjust its offense in those situations."

Leola Greer led the Salukis with 16 points despite a sore mouth from an injury she received last Saturday against Wichita State. Mary Boyes chipped in with 14. Roslyn Bartley had 13 and D.D. Plab had 12.

Freshman Char Warring made her second straight start for the Salukis and had eight points and seven rebounds. Scott is happy with Warring's progress, but wasn't happy with the Salukis' efforts on the boards Wednesday night.

"Char will be starting at center again for us this weekend," Scott said. "I think she deserves it."

"But we really got hurt on the boards. We've worked so much and stressed so much about boxing out to get rebounds, but the lack of rebounds sure didn't help us any."

The Salukis go into this weekend hoping to play full games at their true potential, according to Scott. They'll host Tennessee-Martin at 7:30 Friday night at the Arena, and Saturday night they'll take on Purdue at 5 p.m. prior to the Saluki men's game against Bradley.

Tennessee-Martin is 6-9 following its 74-65 loss to Memphis State Wednesday night. During that game, the Lady Pacers lost their starting center, 6-1 junior Terry Burton, when she twisted her ankle severely. Burton, averaging 9.3 points per game, is listed as

2 SIU-C cagers suspended

By Scott Stahmer
Associate Sports Editor

Charles Moore and Lawrence Stubblefield, two substitutes on the Saluki men's basketball team, were suspended Wednesday by Head Coach Joe Gottfried, sources close to the team confirmed late Thursday.

According to the sources, the suspensions will last one week, meaning Moore and Stubblefield will miss Saturday night's game against Bradley at the Arena and Tuesday's contest at Loyola of Chicago. No reasons for the suspensions were disclosed.

Gottfried and Moore declined to comment on the matter, while Stubblefield was unavailable for comment.

Moore, a 6-7 senior forward from Corpus Christi, Texas, has played in all 15 Saluki games this year, starting 11 of them. He is averaging 4.8 points and 4.1 rebounds per game.

The only senior on SIU-C's 14 man roster, Moore started 23 of the Salukis' 26 games last year, averaging eight points and 6.2 rebounds per game.

Stubblefield, a 6-2 guard from Lima, Ohio, is averaging 2.8 points per game. He has played in 11 games, starting two of them. He hit the game-winning shot in SIU-C's last victory, a 60-59 decision at Valparaiso.

Gymnasts to face unbeaten Gators

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The SIU-C women's gymnastics team will go south for a dual meet at the University of Florida Friday, and will return home for a dual meet against Oklahoma State at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Arena.

According to Saluki Coach Herb Vogel, "we should be beating these teams."

Florida is currently ranked 11th in the nation, and has a 3-0 season record. The Gators won a meet against Missouri with a score of 140.05. Missouri beat the Salukis in SIU-C's season opener Jan. 11, 139.25-136.15.

Vogel said one of the key factors in the dual meet against Florida "is whether or not we get full mileage out of Pam Turner."

"Turner needs to be very aggressive in the meet," Vogel said. "It could be a close meet."

Vogel said a basic problem the Salukis face is the fact that All-American Pam Harrington "may not be competing at all" in the meet. Harrington hasn't competed in all-around competition since the Salukis' season opener, when she injured her wrist and thumb in the floor exercise competition.

"If Harrington doesn't compete, it will be a very hard meet because we're giving up nine-plus scores in four events," Vogel said.

Against Oklahoma State, Cowgirl all-arounders Kevn Mabrey, a senior, and Lisa Hartmann, a freshman, will give SIU-C some good competition, according to Vogel.

In all-around competition,

Hartmann has a season high of 36.45 and Mabrey has a season high of 35.70.

On Dec. 4, Oklahoma won against Oral Roberts and the University of Denver with a score of 139.95. Hartmann scored a 9.45 on the balance beam and Mabrey scored a 9.3 in the vaulting competition.

"Mabrey is a very good vaulter," Vogel said.

The Cowgirls placed third in the Arizona State Quadrangular last weekend with a score of 134.00. Arizona won the meet with a score of 140.95 and Oregon State finished second with a 139.95 score.

Vogel said that in order to win against Oklahoma, Saluki co-captain Val Panton must have a good meet
