Local activists march to protect “Sanctity of Life”

By Fernando Fellu-Moggi

More than 120 area pro-life activists participated Sunday in the “Sanctity of Human Life Sunday,” a march and rally organized by the Christian Action Committee “to take a stand against abortion,” the Rev. Earl Frischkorn, secretary for CAC, said.

In its sixth year, the event commemorates the 17th anniversary of the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court decision of Roe vs. Wade, that made abortion legal.

According to Frischkorn, members of about 25 area churches gathered for the event that began at 2 p.m., in front of the old train station on North Illinois Avenue.

Demonstrators marched through East Main and South Wall street, for 45 minutes, carrying banners with slogans such as “Children are a gift from God,” and “Abortion is murder.”

After the march, the group moved to the University Student Center, for a pro-life rally. There, after praying for divine forgiveness for those who have had abortions, and comparing abortion to the Nazi holocaust, Frischkorn introduced the keynote speaker, Rev. Donny Grammer, of the Fair View Christian Church, R.R. 1, Murphysboro.

Grammer said abortion is one of the symptoms of the “sin-sickness of the American people.”

“We are a nation that is sin-sick, lost and heading for hell,” Grammer said. He said the country has lost its religious freedom, one of the principles the nation was founded upon.

“We have become an unholy nation,” he said. “God, help us. This is a secular nation.”

Hartigan: Statewide grand jury needed

By Lisa Miller

The war against drugs could move faster in Illinois if Gov. James R. Thompson signs legislation authorizing statewide grand juries to concentrate on drug traffickers.

The major thrust of the legislation, a statewide grand jury to act against multi-county drug rings, will become law July 1 signed. The legislation, which has been awaiting Thompson’s signature since Dec. 4 and must be signed by Feb. 4, will enable law enforcement to take the profit out of drug sales and distribution.

It is impressive that this legislation be signed as quickly as possible so that law enforcement officials have the lead time to develop strategies and recruit personnel to combat drug dealers,” Neil Hartigan, Illinois attorney general, said. “The moment it becomes law, police can immediately clamp down effectively against the sale of paraphernalia also.

Illinois law currently permits the state to seize the property and profits of drug dealers, but Hartigan said a statewide grand jury is needed to make it effective.

If the grand jury provision is added to Illinois’ arsenal of weapons in the war against drugs, more than $20 million could be raised annually through seized drug profits, a report from the Illinois General Assembly stated.

“We are seeking to fight drug abuse by attacking the profit motive of the drug dealers,” Hartigan said. “Jail sentences are not enough. Everything we do to make drug dealing unprofitable is a step toward eliminating it altogether.

County grand juries and state attorneys have the responsibility for investigating, indicting and prosecuting those in violation of criminal laws.

In recent years, however, criminal enterprises have emerged which have huge funds, property and businesses. In these cases investigation, indictment and prosecution must take place on a statewide or multi-county basis, Hartigan said.

Since many drug rings cover a multi-county area, the prosecuting process must take place in each county. Hartigan said this process is extremely time consuming and a single statewide grand jury would save a considerable amount of time.

“A multi-county statewide grand jury with a single mandate would allow law enforcement to concentrate on drug traffickers with the objective of seizing their illegal profits,” Hartigan said.

The new legislation would also speed up the trials, Hartigan said. “Instead of waiting for years while legal wrangling goes on, immediately after a drug dealer is indicted we can start processing cases against the illegal profits of the narcotics violators,” Hartigan said.

If the state wins a case against a drug dealer, the illegal drug money would go into the law enforcement fund.

Roe v. Wade decision remembered

Debate heats up with anniversary of court decision

By Brian Gross

Activities around the nation Sunday commemorated the 17th anniversary of the landmark Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion by attending church ceremonies, staging marches and parading in other activities marking a “black day” for pro-life and a “victory” for supporters.

“The Supreme Court isn’t doing anything to save the 25 million babies slaughtered over the last 17 years,” said Nellie Gray, president of the anti-abortion March for Life in Washington, D.C.

“This is a black day for us,” she said. “We’re not going to go away until all innocent lives in America is saved.”

Sheri O’Dell, vice president of the National Organization for Women in Washington, D.C., said a march planned in the nation’s capital Monday was particularly important in anti-abortion rights because of the Supreme Court’s decision last summer giving states great leeway to restrict abortion.

“It’s always important to commemorate Roe v. Wade but it’s real critical this year because of the West’s decision,” she said.

“Last year we had down last year and more abortion cases currently before the court,” O’Dell said Sunday.

“It was a victory for women,” she said of the 1973 ruling. “(but) we’ve lost ground, there’s no turning back. We have died since Roe v. Wade from unsafe, illegal abortions and women will continue to die.”

O’Dell said supporters Sunday erected in the nation’s capital a memorial, designed after the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in memory of “innocent women who died from unsafe abortions.”

Survey reveals freshmen’s views

Daily Egyptian wire services

Increasing numbers of college freshmen support legal abortion and stricter environmental laws but their views on crime and drug use are becoming more conservative, a national survey showed Sunday.

The poll of more than 200,000 freshmen in 1989 by the American Council on Education also found a growing tendency toward political activism and a decline in the number of freshmen interested in a business career.

The number of students saying they had earned a varsity letter in sports reached an all-time high, while fewer freshmen reported doing outside reading or visiting an art gallery or a museum.

One dramatic finding of the survey was an increase in support for legal abortion. Support had remained stable between 53 percent and 59 percent since 1977, but

Crowd gets behind road-wearied Dawgs

By Greg Scott

It didn't rain on the Saluki's first indoor track meet, but Georgia Tech poured it on at the end to drown the hopes of men and women's teams christening the newly renovated Recreation Center.

The men's team lost the first-ever SIU indoor invitational by one point, 91-90. Georgia Tech's women won with a score of 110-76 with the Salukis finishing third behind Murray State with 98.2 points.

Last spring in an outdoor meet the men's team edged out the Yellowjackets in the final event, the 4x400 meter relay, for a victory.

"We beat them last year by a point or two in the last event. Our teams compliment each other very well," Bill Cornel men's head track coach, said.

History tried to repeat itself as the 4×400-meter relay team of John Sinson, Bernhard Henry, Donnell Williams and Erick Pegues pushed the Saluki's into the lead 90-73.

This was an exciting point in the meet. Anchorman Pegues kicked into overdrive to pass Georgia Tech's All-American Derrick Akins for the win.

However, unlike last year this was not the final event. Georgia Tech surged ahead of SIU with 9 points in the triple jump for the victory.

"When you lose by one point it's easy to look around and point fingers and look at spots where we should have had some points. Some of our guys didn't stay in shape over break," Cornell said.

"I think my team members are very aware of who needs the work."

One of the members who obviously was not slacking was Garrett Hines. Hines took first in the 55-meter and the 200-meter sprints. He also finished second in the long jump.

"He accumulated 16 of our points. Hines stood out," Cornell said.

Eric Bombahl and Matt Mathias finished one and two in the 35-pound weight throw and noched personal bests.

The fans and the curious thrilled at the novelty of the meet. The upper concourse was packed along with the4 seating throughout the day.

Many of the spectators had come to work their own muscles, but were drawn to the events happening on the field and forgot about pumping themselves up and shouted encouragement to the Salukins in hopes of pumping them up.

"At one point I looked up to survey the crowd and it looked like there might be a 1,000 people," Don Denom women's track coach said.

The SIU-C women's team led for much of the meet, but couldn't stage off the Yellowjackets.

"We were right in the thick of the battle, guns blazing, but in the end, they were too much for us," Cornell said.

Women swimmers triumph in mixed-up trip to Nashville

By Eric Bugger

Saluki women's swimming and diving coach Doug Ingram said his team arrived Friday at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tenn. to find that his schedule was not in sync with Vanderbilt's and Georgia's.

The Saluki women, who expected to compete against Vanderbilt and Georgia on Friday, showed up a day before Georgia was to travel to Vanderbilt. SIU did swim Friday, but only against Vanderbilt.

"We were a little disappointed that we didn't get a chance to swim against Georgia," assistant coach Rick Walker said. "It would have been a good experience for us to swim against a team like that."

SIU, after going winless through nine meets, finally claimed its first victory with a score of 38-30 over the Commodores.

"This win is exactly what we needed. So far this season we have done everything but win," Ingram said. "The win will help us in the next several weeks of training and the meets leading up to the conference meet."

Practicing all work on the final event, the 4x100-meter sprints, sprints and smoked paid off for the Saluki women as they took first in six of the 10 events, improving their record to 1-8-1.

Sophomore Tonina Mahara, placed first in the 100-meter freestyle (53.03) and the 200 freestyle (1:54.73). She also teamed up with freshmen Dennis Brooks and sophomores Nancy Schmidtkef and Melissa Semenik in the 400 freestyle relay (4:00.61).

Azerbaijan's Popular Front digging in for resistance

MOSCOW (UPI) - Azerbaijan's Popular Front weighed plans Sunday to call a general strike across the Transcaucasia region against Soviet soldiers leave, and snipers fired at Soviet soldiers in Baku, reports said.

"We are going to strike until the Soviet army leaves," Elmira Aliyeva, a journalist working with Azerbaijan's ministry of culture, said by telephone from Baku. "The Russians will find here a dead city. If they say we, we will say no until they leave. That is what a dead city means.

Killings continue in Colombia; motive unknown

MEDELIN, Colombia (UPI) - Unknown gunmen shot 12 people to death on a farm in an area of central Colombia where both leftist guerrillas and drug traffickers are active, police said Sunday. The shooting came as the government, which has rejected a conditional "peace offer" made by a drug cartel, escalated its siege to hands. 7,000 people in the United States, seized several properties near Bogota belonging to a suspected Cali cartel member and raised a major narcotics laboratory. Police say they do not know any motive for the killings.

Professor's photos combine mysticism, nature

Roddy gets $5,000 photography grant, plans for darkroom

By Tracy Sargeant

It was just another entry form. That's what Jan Roddy thought as she mailed her slides and applications for a grant request to the Illinois Arts Council.

She was not expecting much in return. So, when the reply came back, she opened it inside, thinking it was just another rejection letter.

Roddy let the envelope sit on her desk for close to a week. When she finally opened her mail, Roddy found she was in for a pleasant surprise.

Roddy, professor in cinema and photography, received a grant of $5,000 for her photographic work. "You send out slides here and there. But you can't expect too much in return," Roddy said. "You really can't take the replies personally, because you receive so many rejections."

Roddy said when the reply came back she let it sit because she didn't feel like reading another rejection letter. "When I took a look at it, about a week later, I noticed they had sent it first class," Roddy said. "So I decided if they were going to reject me first class, I might as well open it."

The letter, however, was one of congratulations, not rejection. Roddy said she is thrilled to have received the award. She also said this "put on the back" came just in time.

"I have never had much in the way of equipment. Mostly, I borrow what I need from other people," Roddy said. "Now I can put together a darkroom."

With the money left over after completing her darkroom, Roddy said she wanted to get back into a series of color photography. She has been working exclusively in black and white for some time now, she said.

Her latest work. "There is no Salvation without Surrender," is the fourth and final piece in a series that took Roddy two years to complete. The piece is being exhibited in the photography show "No Salvation Without Sacrifice," the final Faculty Art Show at the University Museum.

In some of her displays, a slide projector is used to produce a visual combination of her photos surrounded by words. This style of work often looks mystical and illustratory.

Roddy explained her work has a deep traditional influence from her childhood. "I grew up in the Ozarks, the Bible Belt," Roddy said. "The words that I use in the piece are important to me."

"I use symbols in a sensual way," Roddy said. "Most of the times they are hard to see directly. They are very subtle."

Roddy said if she can't find the image in nature, she must create it in the darkroom. "I believe in the photograph. I believe the images can hold a certain power," Roddy said.

Even though she liked photography as a hobby, Roddy said she didn't start off studying it right away.

"I studied psychology and sociology, but I enjoyed women's studies and photography," Roddy said. "I guess I took the right teacher to show me what I could do (with photography)."

The most frustrating thing about photography is the chemicals used to process the photos, Roddy said. For her, the chemicals represent a personal dilemma because her work involves imagery in the environment.

"The chemicals we use are not very safe for the environment," Roddy said. Roddy said she believes an artistic and photographic censorship is a big issue and a hot topic right now. "I believe that we have a responsibility for the content of our work," Roddy said. "Not all of my art would be considered appropriate material by (government) standards."

"(My work) usually has a sexual innuendo, mostly portraying things in a non-traditional, non-explosive way," Roddy said.

"The right wing is trying to place a moral attitude on a large portion of the public," Roddy said. "I don't want some person moralizing for the rest of us."
Civic center plans to benefit everyone

THE CARBONDALE City Council took an important first step toward improving the city development last week when it allocated funds for studies to determine if Carbondale would benefit from a civic center downtown. By establishing a Civic Center Authority Board, the city has recognized the need for additional facilities and a cultural center for various civic and University groups that hadn’t been considered t-fore. The board has met three times to discuss this important project and must now take the next step in deciding on feasibility—how it can be supported and the best location for the center.

CITY MANAGER Steve Hoffer said the center would serve as "an anchor" for downtown development. He said the city drafted the plan in response to requests for a meeting space with kitchen facilities as well as the University’s need for concert halls and performance and practice space.

"The center would be a combination of public facilities and University resources," Hoffer said.

WE AGREE with Hoffer and the city’s assessment of the problem. The city and the University need to work as partners, not separate entities. By building a civic “center,” the city can more closely integrate the assets of city and the University, allowing for a collective effort at a citywide economic and cultural enhancement and development. The center also would boost the downtown area’s sagging economy and revitalize this historic area.

But the BOARD’s directors must decide, and quickly, on a consulting firm to do these studies. Time is a factor in the matter. Hoffer said all reports must be completed by mid-June in order for the city to make the July 1 deadline for applying for state funding, but experts have assured the city that the work can be done if begun immediately.

Depending on state legislative appropriations, Carbondale could be eligible to receive up to 75 percent of the construction costs to build the center, to a maximum of about $3 million. The remaining 25 percent must be raised locally, according to a council report.

ALL OF THIS translates into a lot of work in a short time for the board and the council, but the fruits of their labor would be well worth the effort.

Desegregation still exception to rule

MEMPIS, Tenn. The first black students in former all-white public schools in Memphis and Arlington, Tenn., were not smart alecs who sold crack and carried boom boxes on their shoulders. No, the first black students in city schools wore white shirts and scared expressions as they often braved the gauntlet of angry whites yelling "Nigger, nigger." With the appearance of those frightened students began the exodus of whites from cities like Memphis to suburbs like Germantown and Collierville in Memphis, Tenn. It didn’t happen later.

It happened at once, not if at all, when the system of segregation leading the way.

It wasn’t the crime-stained, tawed, city schools that were filling. Such schools did not exist, not at first. It was the idea, the mentality of treating blacks that drove whites into the suburbs.

The white flight that created the segregation academies and bedroom towns also created the dire problems in the city schools, the schools suburbanites now point to with the perverse satisfaction to justify their past flight and abstain from voting.

Oh, the irony. Every time there is an "insulting" drug smuggling on the streets when our shoulders. What is the word, there’s another out of our hands and Jagger, the Mayor, to the death.

The going to fight this thing to the death!" demagoged Charles Savage, the Gonzales mayor, in the speech of Memphis, and the death of any hope of blacks and whites living and working together in what might have been a great city is an epochal tragedy for the people, the whole world.

We want to be friends and neighbors, but we can’t have integration and the idea that they want to take something from "us" that we have created.

"...We’re not going to let the City of Memphis dump their misery on us," Savage said.

No. We’re not going to let the white politicians in Memphis pawn their black school superintendents and teachers and students on us.

As Memphis blacks, tired of tricks and suspicions of gain that backfire, oppose school consolidation, too. They see it as a step to dilute black voting strength.

The voting booth has one thing white canters can ever understand. The only surprising thing about the recession broughtha is that anyone is surprised.

If whites leave the county the way they left the city and the schools, perhaps the silver-plated panther upon it is offered them.

They might start with an occupation tax on those who work in Memphis and live, learn, swim and sleep elsewhere.

Trendy oat bran not the way to low cholesterol

Scipps Howard News Service

Oat bran has had a substantial run as a dietary substance, but the fad may soon be fading.

Harvard University researchers have just made a study which they say shows oat bran has no "special" power to reduce cholesterol. That’s apt to put a sour, lim in the growth of oat bran products. Just last year, 218 products containing oat bran were introduced, ranging from oat bran-enriched beer to potato chips.

In the 12-week Harvard Study, 20 healthy adults were fed five oat bran muffins a day for six weeks, and then fed five low-fiber wheat muffins a day for another six weeks. During each period, they also ate their usual diets. There was no appreciable difference between the cholesterol levels of the two periods.

What this indicates, according to researchers, is not that oat bran has no health "value, but that it is no more different from other foods containing fiber.

The study indicated that the reason oat bran lowers cholesterol is not some special ingredient, but that people tend to substitute it for high fat foods, which raise cholesterol levels.

Prejudice the result of our own inadequacies

A week has passed. Have we already forgotten? Is the white man once again superior? Didn’t he regain his rule? His invention must be proud: such fine ingredients and that complicated formula! Well the white man ever die away...

The truth is the last thing any one of us want to believe; we are regimented by its simplicity. The white man has no inventor or formulators or ingredients because there is no white man. In truth, colors are now in popular rival with their contemporaries. We cannot be prejudiced to shades and phenomena. In truth, we are only prejudiced to our own inadequacies. We think others inferior because we sense our own inferiorities. Hating others becomes easy when subconscious-ly we hate ourselves. Yet knowing the truth is nowhere as impor tant as discovering the fault.

The white man will not die halfway. The envy that is our slaves, all of us, to our own short comings. We have worked together in the fields and scars our skin. We are cursed with wisdom, but what children will be saved? And what good are these words when so many brothers and sisters fill so many graves—Steven Ray, Junior in physiognomy.
Ph.D. grads in short supply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of research universities issued a statement Sunday calling for prompt federal action to prevent an impending shortage of Ph.D.s in the arts and sciences, business and higher education.

"In the beginning, the government had reduced its commitments to the support of doctoral candidates," said a statement issued by the Association of American Universities President Robert Rosenzweig. "We find ourselves with actual shortages of Ph.D.s in fields where competition for their services is already great, and impending shortages of greater magnitude as we move into the next century." The report said colleges and universities face shortages of doctoral graduates in the computer sciences, engineering, mathematics and business — in large part because they can get lucrative jobs in private industry.

Because of the expected increase both in the number of students and of faculty retirements, a shortage of Ph.D.s in the arts and sciences will develop in the academic world by 1990, the report said.

Business will suffer next, the report said, and there will be a shortage of 7,500 doctoral graduates in the natural sciences and engineering each year by the early part of the next century.

"It takes an average of seven years to earn a doctorate degree."

He said, Grammer said, under no circumstances should abortion be legal, for it is only God's decision to say who will live and who will die.

"We should stand against abortion because it is practiced by what we believe is a moral condition," said a Ph.D. grad that legal abortion was the biggest threat to women's rights, because it represented the killing of the unborn. She called abortion legalized child killing, and said that women who kill their unborn children should be imprisoned.

Beedle said abortion was the ultimate form of child abuse, and that the expense of abortion to protect the poor was being used by greedy women who only want to improve their standard of living.

"We need to make the free choice of following the way of God," said a Ph.D. grad who claimed it will rectify the problem of abortion. He also attacked the salutary conditions of abortion clinics, saying there is no sanitary control at the abortion clinics, and comparing abortions occurring in legalized clinics with "back-alley" abortion.

Beedle said picking is the only way to stop abortion and encouraged those attending the rally to legally picket in front of abortion mills.

"Now it is time to take the streets," Beedle said. "Satan and his abortions demons cannot prevail against us," she said.

Wayne Helmer, a professor in the mechanical engineering and energy processes at SIU, and co-founder of CAC, said personal and personal sacrifice are the two things needed to win the abortion battle.

"We need to make a public spectacle of abortion," he said. Helmer said actions to be taken should be similar to those followed by the activists of the 1960s.

With University funds and outside funds, SIU-C will have one of the largest fisheries research centers in the nation, Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs, said.

Shepherd said he allocated $200,000 of fiscal year 1990 University funds to the expansion of the Cooperative Fisheries Research Laboratory. More money will be needed and will probably have to come from government and outside sources due to limited resources within the University budget, he said.

"I will not have dollars to give to the nautical initiative next year," Shepherd said.

Shepherd said he is looking for $500,000 in grants and contracts with outside sources to fund the project to completion. He estimated the total cost to be near $700,000.

How long it will take to complete the project depends on funding, he said.

Roy C. Heidinger, director of the Cooperative Fisheries Research Laboratory, said plans call for a 30- to 40-acre complex on Touch of Nature property near Little Grassy Lake. Construction plans call for an 18-acre water-supply lake, as many as 100 one-tenth acre ponds, deep wells and an access road, he said.

The present laboratory has 18 ponds, Heidinger said.

"Though surveying of the site, which began in April, is completed, Heidinger said the actual plans have been in the works for about five years and in his mind for longer. "It seems like I've been working on this all my life," he said.

The expanded facilities will provide the room for research of various types, Heidinger said, including fish farming.

Fish farming is a growing agricultural field, especially in the southern states, he said. Because of increased health consciousness, he said more people are eating fish than in the past with an average of about 20 pounds per person annually.

He said researching a strain that will grow well and quickly in this area and northern areas is a priority.

Once the complex is complete, it could be used as a showplace where prospective fish farmers could learn how to raise the fish for profit.

Other than fish farming, the complex could be used for research in growing water plant and other animals, such as carp, sunfish, crawfish and bass, for human consumption.

Shepherd said some design and development must be completed, but the survey work is finished and the project has gotten permission to continue from SIU-C's Center for Archaeological Investigations. The plan must also gain approval from the SIU Board of Trustees, Shepherd said.

SIU-C department head to assist East St. Louis community college

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

SIU-C faculty member John Washburn will put his experience in vocational education to work at St. Louis Community College in East St. Louis as he helps strengthen the college's occupational program.

Washburn, 42, was appointed to SCC's Board of Trustees by Illinois Gov. James Thompson on Jan. 12. The board, which originally was divided to include St. Louis residents, was reorganized by Senate Bill 629, signed into law by Thompson last May.

The chairman of SIU-C's vocational education department since 1986, Washburn said he was appointed because of his vocational education background.

The majority of students at SCC are enrolled in vocational and remedial studies, he said.

The education SCC offers will better train East St. Louis residents to find better jobs in the city, Washburn said.

"They want adults to stay in East St. Louis to work," he said. "If you look at the labor market, data clearly indicates that we're creating more jobs than there are going to be entrants into the work force." Washburn said most new entrants into the work force would be minorities. He said he hopes to improve minority students' education so they will be qualified for the new jobs.

"I think that State Community College should be a centerpiece and showcase for the East St. Louis area," he said. "They've got a good facility." SCC is the only community college in Illinois funded without a local property tax.

The Board has until 1996 to show enough improvement at SCC to keep the college from being annexed by Belleville Area College, Washburn said.

Valdez captain claims others responsible

NEW YORK (UPI) — The captain of the Exxon supertanker that spilled 11 million gallons of oil into Alaska’s Prince William Sound said in an interview released Sunday that he has been made a scapegoat and blamed for aspects of the disaster that were the responsibility of others.

Joe Hazelwood, who goes on trial Monday in Anchorage, Alaska, on criminal mischief charges for his role in the oil spill, told Life magazine that “it gets kind of lonely” being the only person charged with a crime as a result of the spill.

In the interview, Hazelwood, who faces more than seven years in prison and $65,000 in fines if convicted, declined to discuss the criminal charges or the specifics of the incident.

Hazelwood was the captain of the Valdez when it ran aground on March 24, 1989, resulting in the worst oil spill ever in U.S. waters. The crude oil devastated miles of pristine Alaskan coastline, killing tens of thousands of birds, seals and other animals.

Exxon Corp. fired Hazelwood for violating company regulations prohibiting alcohol aboard ship.

Informational meeting slated for WIDB radio
By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

If you're interested in working at a radio station and working hard, WIDB wants you. WIDB Promotions Director Mag Ackermann will hold an informational meeting for all interested people at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Auditorium.

"We need people to work in promotions, production, programming (disc jockeys) and engineering," Ackermann said.

All majors are welcome to join WIDB's staff, she said, but only radio and television majors may receive course credit for their work. The positions at WIDB offer experience, not paychecks.

WIDB staff members have the additional benefit of deciding how many hours they want to work. "They can work a little or a lot," Ackermann said. "It's all up to the individual." Staff members must attend all staff meetings, she said.

This lackey policy toward work load does not mean work at WIDB is not taken seriously. Ackermann added.

"This is a business, and we run it as such," she said. "We do expect people to work." Albums played on WIDB range from new wave to classic rock and roll. WIDB's record collection and varied playlist keeps the music mixed, Ackermann said.

WIDB can be heard on 104.3 FM and 600 AM in the residence halls.

'Strange Lady' actress Stanwyck dies of heart failure at age 82

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) Actress Barbara Stanwyck, a four-time Oscar nominee from the Depression to the post-war years more familiar to younger audiences for her role in the 1960s television western "The Big Valley," died of a heart failure at 82.

The veteran of 88 movies and more than 200 hours of television died Saturday evening at St. John's Hospital. She had been hospitalized for several weeks because of reactions to medication taken for back problems.

Nominated four times, Stanwyck won an Academy Award for a specific screen performance, but in 1982 she took home a special Oscar honoring her distinguished career. The American Film Institute later honored her with a similar award.

She won two Emmy Awards for television roles, as the matron of an influential family in the Old West in "The Big Valley," and in the 1983 mini-series "The Thorn Birds" with Richard Chamberlain. In 1985, she starred in the weekly television show, "The Colbys."

"She was a human being with a great sense of humor and a fantastic actress. I think the industry has lost something very great when they lost her," Dorothy Lamour said. "She was Hollywod, She was a great, great actress and she would appreciate this.

New Gere movie adds action, odd twist to familiar film theme

By Stephanie Steier
Staff Writer

"Internal Affairs," starring Richard Gere and Andy Garcia, is an action-packed film with a different twist on the basic "good versus bad" theme.

Set within a big-city police department, Affairs focuses on a "good cop" vs. "bad cop" relationship that is intertwined with murder, mind games and sex.

Internal Affairs Department agent Raymond Avilla, played by Garcia, is called in to investigate police brutality charges made against officer Van Streech, played by William "Billie" Allen.

Streech, accused of roughing up cocaine addicts on a drug bust, is also a suspected drug user.

Streech's partner is officer Dennis Peck, played by Gere, and from the start of film, it is obvious Peck is up to no good.

FAD agent Avilla is teamed up with Sgt. Amy Wallace, played by Laurie Metcalf, who is a tough cop with a sarcastic sense of humor, and together they uncover the evil lurking within their own police department.

Through long hours of investigation, Avilla and Wallace discover that Peck is the leader behind a ring of money laundering and hired killings that involves other officers within the department.

Peck soon learns of the Avilla's suspicions and does all he can to get Avilla off his case.

Peck's expertise in averting suspicion away from himself seems to be in the mind games he plays with his family, his partner, Avilla and Avilla's wife Kathleen, played by Nancy Travis.

The clever Avilla gets to Peck, the "more Peck gets to Avilla and Kathleen, who's marital relationship suffers because of Avilla's involvement in the case against Peck.

And just when you think Peck has committed the worst crime possible, he tops himself.

Gere is terrific as "bad guy" Dennis Peck, which is a challenging role for the typical "good guy." "Internal Affairs" is a great suspense drama that starts out strong and finishes strong, despite a few points of confusion in the beginning of the film.

Lemieux’s hat trick ignites
Wales in All-Star Game rout

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Mario Lemieux scored a hat trick on three shots in the first period Sunday on route to a four-goal performance that sent the Wales Conference to a 12-7 triumph over the Campbell Conference in the highest-scoring All-Star Game in NHL history.

Lemieux responded to the pressures of being the Wales captain, host team and recipient of the most votes in an attempt by registering his second All-Star Game hat trick in two years. He earned the game’s MVP award for the third time.

An All-Star every since his rookie appearance in 1985, Lemieux ran his career All-Star totals to 9 goals, 5 assists and 14 points.

Lemieux, struggling with back problems and the pressures of keeping alive his regular-season point-scoring streak (35 games), was the NHL’s first rookie All-Star MVP in 1985. Last season in St. Louis he set the All-Star record with three goals and three assists.

Lemieux needed all of 21 seconds to reward NHL fans for giving him the most votes the past two years. One rush after he took the first shot of the game, Lemieux scored a wraparound goal on a backhander through Calgary starter Mike Vernon’s legs.

Arkansas’ Ken Hatfield named Clemson coach

CLEMONS, S.C. (UP) — Clemson University Sunday named Ken Hatfield of Arkansas to succeed head football coach Danny Ford, who resigned under pressure Thursday amid the second NCAA investigation of the Tiger football program in eight years.

“We understand it’s a very difficult situation, the times right now, but we promise you it will work out...we promise you we will be part of the solution to any problem that may come up,” Hatfield said.

Hatfield said the potential for an NCAA probation was not a factor in his decision. Instead, he said Clemson’s tradition of excellence and commitment to the future led him to take the job.

“I think really what I’m trying to deal with is the future, and the people I’ll be dealing with is the main thing,” he said.

Hatfield, 46, one of just four active coaches to take a Division I team to a post-season bowl for eight consecutive years. He spent the past six seasons at Arkansas, leading the Razorbacks to two consecutive 10-2 seasons.

point total for an opponent since the opening game of the 1988-89 season when Toledo was held to check in a 53-51 Saluki victory. The Golden Hurricane entered the game averaging 18 points per game.

The Dawgs grabbed 24 offensive rebounds — 47 total — while limiting Tulsa to 36 rebounds. Senior center Jerry Jones spearheaded the Salukis board play and collected a game-high 16 rebounds in his return along with 18 points. Jones also blocked two shots and made two steals on the evening.

Sophomore guard Kelvan Lawrence contributed a solid defensive effort and dished out a career-high four assists. Lawrence said Jones’ play was the cornerstone for the Salukis’ rebounding dominance. “I think Jerry played a really good game,” Lawrence said. “He stayed on the boards, offensive and defensive, and made some good blocks.”

Jones said Tulsa’s defense was limiting his shots in the first half so he concentrated on hitting the boards. He said the team came through in a “must win” situation. “It was the biggest game of the year for us,” Jones said.

The scoring margin could have been larger if not for the Salukis missing out on their opportunities from the charity stripe. The Dawgs shot a meager 48 percent (11-23) for the game from the line. Tulsa played close for most of the first half and brought themselves within a point, 23-22, with 7:13 remaining. The Salukis took the Golden Hurricane 13-5 to close out the first half with a 3-27 lead.

In the second half, the Salukis offense warmed up while their zone defense continued to put a chill on Tulsa’s shooting touch. Tulsa couldn’t find its range and managed to hit only 29 percent of its shots in the second half. Tulsa was forced into committing 19 turnovers in the game.

Tulsa was led by junior guard Marcell Gordon who finished with 13 points.
