King's 'dream' fails to change attitudes

As Affective Action Officer Pat Mayberry-Boyns stands in line at a store, she watches a woman standing several feet in front of her write out a check for the clerk. The clerk takes the check, gives the woman her receipt, and smiles.

"Have a nice day," the clerk calls after the woman.

As Mayberry-Boyns writes out a check moments later, she feels the clerk watching her. As she hands the woman her check, she says a polite smile.

"Thank you, and could I see an ID please?" the clerk asks.

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. spent much of his life working to end discrimination, but African Americans still face obstacles such as this everywhere in the United States.

Mayberry-Boyns, affirmative action officer for the Illinois Department of Corrections, said,

"It still exists, but it's been refined."

IBHE plan may raise student fee

By Emily Priddy

SIUC students may face a $40 increase in annual activity fees if a recommendation by the Illinois Board of Higher Education is implemented.

Debra Smitley, IBHE associate director for public affairs, said the recommendation is part of the board's research for priorities, quality and productivity plan for Illinois universities.

"We need to identify activities that can be reduced or consolidated or eliminated in order to free up funds to be redirected to higher priority needs," she said.

The first priority, of higher education institutions should be to educate students, Smitley said, so limited-scale funds should be focused on academic rather than athletic programs.

Mike Sywalk, SIUC University Student Government President, said the first priority should be to educate students, Smitley said, so limited-scale funds should be focused on academic rather than athletic programs.

"I think the recommendation to eliminate state funding from athletics is not fair," he said. "I think this has such a negative aspect on the institution that the board is just not looking at the whole picture. Anything that improves the University.

Freezing weather, sleet, snow create hazardous roads

Home is where the heart is, and that will be the best place to be as daytime high temperatures are forecasted to remain well below freezing throughout this week, local meteorologist say.

Today is expected to be cloudy and windy with flurries possible while high temperatures will struggle to reach the teens, according to the Southern Illinois Airport Weather Service.

Tonight's forecast calls for lows between zero and 10 below.

Lorinda Miller, a student worker at the weather service, said the coldest weather is yet to arrive.

"For Tuesday the National Weather Service forecasts highs for Southern Illinois to hover in the single digits, " Miller said.

Glen McLemore, duty officer for the State Department of Transportation, said the season's milder weather and precipitation made for very dangerous driving conditions.

"Once it's colder, the roads are covered with ice from the freezing rain and sleet, making it hard to drive," McLemore said.

"Once it's colder, we can simply plow and salt the roads and they become relatively safe to drive on.

"But, with the sub-freezing temperatures and ice we have to continually salt the roads because s. w. can only melt the ice temporarily, eventually the roads keep re-freezing," he said.

McLemore said all the department's trucks are out servicing their routes but he recommends people simply stay home.

"With the temperatures as low as they are, even a small accident can become quite hazardous if you get stuck a long way from home," McLemore said.

Meteorologist Reed Howell of KSLTV in Marion suggests many precautions for people who must get out in the cold.

It is important to cover up your hands, nose and other exposed skin because with the wind chill and extreme low temperatures you can get frost bite very quickly.

"It's important to use hand lotion, vaseline and lip balm to protect the skin," he said.

"With the air coming out of Canada, there is very little moisture in the air so skin tends to get very dry, very quickly."

Howell also said it is a good idea for commuters to carry extra clothes, a blanket, a small shovel and a candle in their car.

"You would be surprised how much heat a candle can put out when you really need it and you can't get away."

"But, if you can help it, just stay home."

"Even if it's just me saying, 'Why are you asking for my identification and not the person in front of me?' It's something that's done on an individual basis."

One of King's talents was his ability to unify resistance, she said.

"That resistance has always been there," she said.

"Dr. King was able to draw it into national attention."

The SIUC branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is working to organize support against discrimination on a local level. Mark Shilton, president of the chapter, said.

"We're not going to stand for any more discrimination in Carbondale," he said.

"Wherever we find it, we'll attack it."

Shilton said discrimination still exists in areas such as education, housing and employment.

King's work played an important role in PEACE CALLED 'STRATEGIC CHOICE' BY ASSAD — Syrian President Hafez Assad Sunday called peace with Israel a "strategic choice" for both nations. A statement that President Clinton characterized as a "clear, forthright and very important" commitment by Syria to eventually establish normal relations with Israel. The exchange took place after the two leaders met for the fourth time in five hours in a session the United States granted after Syria agreed to return to the Middle East peace talks with Israel.

SECRETARY SURROUNDS JAPAN'S EXECUTIONS — Hidden within the thick walls of Japanese prisons, the gallows have been swinging again, ending the longing hiatus that has lasted 300 years. After more than three years without capital punishment, seven men have been believed to have been hanged last year. Imperial officials won't talk about it. Evidence comes from facts laboriously collected by anti-death penalty activists, commonly referred to in Tokyo as "abolitionists," and from news organizations.

BRAZIL STILL FIGHTING POLITICAL DISCORD — Brazil is entering a crucial year in its political and economic life, but, over Latin America's odd man out, it is running in the opposite direction from its neighbors. This was to be the year that Brazil — marked by quadruple inflation and back-to-back political scandals that have shaken the government — was to put its affairs in order. By the middle of March, Congress is to wrap up a review of the 1988 constitution, an unwieldy document that precludes any move to improve public life.

NATO POPULAR WITH EASTERN EUROPE — NATO's offer of military cooperation with the nations of Eastern Europe has created a rush to join among the region's lower-profile states and led to renewed support for the U.S. campaign to maintain stiff sanctions against Yugoslavia, according to a senior Clinton administration official. At the same time, it has forced the administration to come up with a clearer policy of support for the emerging democracies of this region, which Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, conceded had been neglected due to Washington's preoccupation with developments in Russia.

CLINTON'S TRIP SPOTLIGHTS U.S. PROBLEMS — President Clinton's first official trip through Europe cast a spotlight upon the shaky state of several U.S. foreign policy projects, as well as the pitfalls of taking homey American political styles on the international road. The result of the nine-day visit was ambiguous in part because of the one-on-one nature of Clinton's Putin-Fischer trip to connect NATO and former East Bloc nations.

HILLARY'S ROLE BRINGS UP QUESTIONS — As the White House struggles to contain the controversy surrounding the Clintons' involvement in the tangled Whitewater real estate and banking affair, first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton's role has begun to raise as many questions as her husband's. Indeed, the Whitewater matter now seems to be a controversy befuddling the Clintons' modern, two-career political marriage: Just as the first lady has played a political role in major policy decisions on health care and other issues, she now finds herself a central figure with her husband in this politically threatening affair.

Children grasp new culture

The mass media also has contributed to some differences in international exposure between U.S. and international citizens, Saville said.

For example, a typical newspaper in an international community will have more international news than a newspaper in a U.S. community, he said.

"Many international students have some prior exposure to American culture because so many of our movies and TV shows are broadcast abroad," he said.

"American entertainment is not an entirely accurate description of American values," Saville said. Saville said that is becoming more important for students to learn about other cultures to be competitive in the job market.

"The world is becoming a smaller place, and many more businesses are now operating on a global scale," he said.

For example, Saville said today's students are familiar with AT&T and the Baby Bells are increasing their footholds in other telecommunications technologies. And increasing investments in phone systems in other countries. And in Germany, for example, the government and expects no official reports on whether to increase the student assistance needs before 1995.

Students grasp new culture
By Jeff McIntire

Opportunities for students to study and work abroad are offered by SIIUC, but few U.S. students take advantage of them. International Programs and Services officials say.

Travel coordinator for International Programs and Services, said many more international students come to the United States to study than American students who go abroad for schooling.

For example, Saville said the ratio of Japanese students studying in the United States compared to U.S. students studying in Japan is about 30 to 1.

One possible reason for the lack of U.S. students going abroad is that the United States is relatively isolated, and U.S. citizens are not as exposed to international cultures as much as residents in other countries, Saville said.

The difference in exposure is partly because of the relative differences in country sizes, he said.

Saville said one can travel through several European countries in the time it takes to travel through Illinois.

"In the distance it takes to travel from Carbondale to Chicago, one can travel from France, through part of Germany and into Eastern Europe," he said.

Money merger
City National is now Magna Bank
By Bill Schaffer
City National Bank in Carbondale has changed its name to Magna Bank to offer more services, but managers of smaller banks said a community bank will give more attention to area users.

By changing the bank's name, Magna officials said the new bank will offer a change in bank-to-bank opportunities.

Gary Hemmer, Magna Bank executive vice president in charge of retail administration, said increased products and services available to Magna customers gives his bank a competitive advantage.

"We offer an expanded automated teller machine network, and statewide banking for our customers in Illinois," Heed said.

"The economy in southern Illinois is improving," Peter Burns, president of First National Bank of Carbondale, said. "Our bank is more responsive to community needs than corporate banks.

A banker wants to sell our community problems, and we are fulfilling a role as a community force," Kesler said.

Luther Burns, president of First National Bank in Carbondale, said the merger could be more responsive to the region's needs, Kesler said.

"We can compete by finding the community niches that they are comfortable with," Burns said.

Steve Burnough, president of Banterra Bank in Carbondale, said smaller corporate banks cannot be as responsive as a locally owned bank.

The trend of mergers and acquisitions is expected to continue because of new regulations and increased competition, Burnough said.

"Government regulation has made it attractive for small banks to join larger ones," Burnough said.
Letters to the Editor

King's dream lives, along with violence

THIRTY YEARS AGO, SPEAKING IN FRONT OF an audience of 200,000 civil rights demonstrators in Washington D.C., Martin Luther King, Jr. reminded America of the importance of having dreams. He said:

"I say to you today, my friends - even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.""

Twenty-five years ago, Americans were reminded of the dangers of unfulfilled dreams. King was killed by an assassin's bullet, and the city erupted in violence. Frustrated, angry people lashed out at society. Carefully organized demonstrations were replaced by riots. King's peaceful, constructive dream temporarily degenerated into a destructive nightmare.

RECENTLY, THE REV. JESSE L. JACKSON honored King's memory by confronting an unpleasant and self-destructive reality: black-on-black crime. By sponsoring the three-day National Black Leadership Conference on Youth Violence, Jackson acknowledged both the importance of his dream and the destructive power of frustrated ambitions.

Although the diverse group of black leaders assembled for the conference was unable to agree on a solution to the problem, the civil rights marches of the '60s, the conference focused national attention on an important issue.

Jackson compared the importance of stopping black-on-black violence to the civil rights struggle for access to public accommodations and voting rights. He linked the escalating violence in the cities to a declining quality of life. Like King, Jackson emphasized the need for a society that provides dreams for everyone, not just a chosen few.

The conference reminded Americans that King's dream has not been realized. It reminded all of us that drugs, crime, and violence plague the inner cities. It reminded us of the fear and despair that exists in poverty-stricken neighborhoods.

BUT, THE CONFERENCE ALSO OFFERED HOPE that black leaders can unite and work together to confront those problems. The issue of black-on-black violence may provide a focus for future civil rights efforts and a forum for promoting constructive change in the black community.

Black-on-black violence, like equal access to public facilities and voting rights, is the cause. Stopping the violence is the dream.

Armed with a cause and a dream, leaders of the black community overcame their differences and released a broad plan to combat the violence.

The plan calls for educational anti-violence conferences in inner-city magnet schools, minority-oriented television programs, community-thrust programs sponsored by city churches and predominantly black universities, an April civil rights march on the White House and an urban policy that includes jobs and job training for youths.

SOME CRITICS SAY JACKSON'S EMPHASIS ON black-on-black crime is little more than a failed politicians' attempt to regain status and mainstream support. Jackson should be applauded, not criticized, for confronting the issue.

Jackson should also be applauded for organizing the conference and making possible a plan that may help unify a fragmented black leadership. He should be respected for confronting an unpleasant reality and addressing the problem.

King's dream did not include an epidemic of black-on-black violence.

New bar-entry age pointless

I feel that raising the bar age entry to eighteen and a half is pointless. How is someone going to change between the age of eighteen and a half and a half? The government obviously thinks that one: you turn eighteen you become more mature. Look at the responsibilities they put on us young adults: one can be drafted into the army, tried as an adult in court, and vote. If an eighteen year old is intelligent enough to help elect government officials and fight, maybe even die, for their country, shouldn't they be at the very least mature enough to enter a drinking establishment once they turn eighteen? Not only do I feel they should be able to enter bars, but I also feel they should be able to drink alcohol legally. Why is it that STU students are able to enter the bars at the age of eighteen, unable to consume if they're not of age? But seemingly half of the minors leave the bar intoxicated or at the least with some kind of alcohol in their system.

Someone could think that eighteen-year-olds might not be responsible or mature enough when it comes to drinking. My question is: how did twenty-one become the age of responsibility?

Mistakes can be made at either one of these ages. Alcohol does not care if you are twenty-one or eighteen. Drinking affects both the mind and the body at any age.

If minors are going to drink, then they are going to drink regardless of what the law says.

I feel that, if the drinking age was lowered to eighteen then there would be less of a drinking problem among teenagers because some of the thrill would be gone.

Ceramics exhibit highlights diversity

By Stephanie Moketi

Artistic pieces crafted by an array of ceramic artists will be exhibited in Carbondale, displaying the diversity of forms and styles found in the world of ceramics.

"The event: Current Works by Ceramists Graduates and Faculty at SIUC," is the title of the ceramic exhibit opening today Tuesday and run through Feb. 12.

The graduate students' work shows the variations of ceramics, from functional ceramics such as dinnerware, sculpture and vessel forms of pottery.

Mark Voegle, a ceramics graduate student from Big Rapids, Mich., said he focuses on the vessel division of ceramics.

"I tend to work within the notion of containing — it is a one kind object. Very contained," Voegle said.

Eilane Henry is a returning student who has studied art in New York and Wyoming, and said she got hooked on ceramics when she was first introduced to the art.

Henry's clay sculpture is adorned with archways and passages.

"I am interested in what it is that makes some people forsake formalism and others to hold back, that's why I get the theme of passages," Henry said.

Ceramic artist and professor Nancy Deller said the ceramic program at SIUC is one of the best programs in Illinois.

Deller's work has been exhibited around the world in Japan, Korea, France, Germany and French time.

"I don't think the work is necessarily functional," Deller said. "It's more about pottery than use of pottery. I'm doing what I am

Kerrigan, Harding saga continues

The Washington Post

U.S. Olympic officials hope that national figure skating champions Tonya Harding, whose bodyguard has been arrested in the attack on rival skater Nancy Kerrigan, withdraw from the upcoming European championships.

If she does not, officials will attempt to persuade her to back off for the good of the team,according to sources today said.

Although Harding has not been charged in the case, NBC News has reported that her bodyguard, Shawn Eric Eckhardt, has implicated her in the planning of the attack on Kerrigan, and Harding met with ammunitions at his home.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association said in a release that it was unable to reach her to remove Harding from the Olympic team if she is found to have been involved in the attack.

Sources said U.S. Olympic officials are concerned that her presence in Lillehammer, Norway, next month could create a "disastrous nightmare" for U.S. athletes.

They are worried that the occupied crush of media, both national and international, would hamper security efforts and be a constant nuisance for athletes and officials.

"It would be impossible," said one source. "There could be camera crews on every floor of every hotel. You can't hide someone in a small town like Lillehammer or Hanway (site of Olympic figure skating)."

It's believed the U.S. Olympic Committee and the USOF are looking into placing one or both of them in separate, private housing for the Olympic athletes.

But they still would have to spend some time together - at practices, while traveling, or at interviews, at team meals.

"I put a new concern for how she felt about sharing the Olympic stage with Harding, Kerrigan, who continues to rehabilitate her injured right knee, said solemnly, "I have nothing to say to her." Sources familiar with the Kerrigan situation said, 'he has not asked that Tiandje be removed from the team, but Vic Scovold, Kerrigan's

Fog, speed mix in fatal crash

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA — Motorists speeding through California's San Joaquin Valley's dense winter fog triggered a series of chain-reaction crashes Saturday that left two dead, at least five seriously injured — in more than 70 vehicles piled up in Livingston and Sula, authorities said.

All of the collisions occurred on Highway 198, 10 miles west of where several accidents were reported Wednesday as fog came into the area.

Along some streched streets of freeway, visibility was reduced to less than 50 feet, and California Highway Patrol officers blamed drivers for traveling too fast and following too close.

"When it's foggy, you have to slow down," said CHP Officer Ron Minor, "I drive in this stuff everyday. I do it for 10 years. Some mornings, people past me I'm thinking still," he said.

The worst crash was near Selma, a small farming community dubbed "The Raisin Capital," about 12 miles west of Fresno.

Highway patrol brought traffic to a halt on the southbound lane of Highway 99, where 15 vehicles quickly piled up, including a small passenger car sandwiched between a 45-foot lumber truck and another 45-foot truck carrying spaghetti sauce.

By afternoon, emergency crews were still working to unhook the trucks and tow away in an effort to get to the crashed car, which was completely immobile.

Also caught in the wreckage was a truck filled with more than 50 Korean residents heading to Disneyland.

TOKYO — Hidden within the thick walls of Japan's prison, the gallows have been evading, again, ending the longest hiatus in modern Japanese history in 80 years.

All executions stopped this year, a total of seven, are to be completed by next year.

The authorities won't talk about it. Evidence shows the capital punishment, seven or more believed to have been hanged last year, will be the last.

The reluctance is evident in this U.N. report on executions and a primary justification for publicizing the truth and pain, is not.

It is the case to the Japanese nation for capital punishment.

Classic proves inconsistent

By Bruce Landgraf
Sports Reporter

The Southern Illinois University men's and women's track teams opened the 1994 season with career performances in the 1994 Saluki Boosters' Southern Classic.

But in spite of those inconsistencies, the Saluki men finished in fourth place out of the seven participating teams, while the women ended the day in a tie for second place.

Georgia Tech won the overall men's competition with Arkansas State University finishing second. The University of Alabama won the women's side of the event.

SIUC women's track coach Don DeNoon said his athletes should hold their heads high.

"We had a good meet," DeNoon said. "We can't be ashamed."

The high point of the weekend for the women was SIUC senior Kathy Kershaw's triumph in a tight 5,000 meter race. Kershaw, along with second place Southeast Missouri's Amy Cole and third place Missouri's Karen Morrow, formed a three woman pack that pulled away from the field.

With two-and-a-half laps to go Kershaw made her move, passing Cole and Morrow to take the lead and eventually the inconsistent half.

DeNoon said he rarely sees better finishes in a 5,000 meter race.

"It was one of the most exciting 5,000 meter races I've ever seen," DeNoon said.

The other two female winners in the meet for the Salukis were April Cokely, who repeated as the shot put champion of the event with a throw of 44.7 meters and Katrina Daniels, who won the 400 meter dash thanks to maintaining her speed after a collision between two other competitors. Several other Saluki women turned in solid performances. Sheila Hollins placed second in the long jump, Rhonda Brown and Stephanie Smith combined to take second and third in the high jump and Safary Saraco notch second in the shot put.

The SIUC women tailored in the middle distance races. The Dawgs only managed two fourth place finishes in the meet which placed them in a total of five races. DeNoon said there was no doubt about the middle distance races being a key factor.

"The middle distance races killed us," DeNoon said.

SIUC men's track coach Bill Conner had his team's initial effort of 1994.

"I am satisfied for the first meet of the year. We have some things happen and some poor things happen." DeNoon said.

The men's 800 meter run was the most heated race of the day, as SIUC's Mark Russell caught Georgia Tech's Olivier Martinez on the final lap and nipped him by one hundredth of a second.

Junior Warren Wright and Jarrin Williams also won their events for the Saluki men. Wright cleared 7 feet 2.5 inches in the high jump, while Williams completed the 55 meter hurdles in a time of 7.84 seconds.

Five other SIUC men took second or third in their respective events. Garth Akal placed second in the 1000 meter run, Teryr King took third in the triple jump and the shot put, Jennie Tia (long jump) and Michael Claycomb (pole vault) each made their teams' first place finishes third in the 55 meter hurdles.

"The middle distance races were the spot of the Saluki men was the short distance races. In the four track events, the Salukis could only muster one sixth place," Conner said. He was generally happy with his team's performance.

Today we competed against some of the better track teams in the nation," Conner said. "We have a good team, and we'll get it together in time for conference."

mning in December."

Sophomore Mark Welker said the training has brought a new level of support.

"After getting off training every day was positive and supporting each other," Welker said. "The training has played a part.

Walker said aggressiveness is something the team needs to continue to strive for, and is something the players need to reach a new level.

"We are working on being aggressive," Walker said. "We want to get a lead or control of the results in the 100 freestyle yesterday," Walker said.

The Salukis captured first place in seven of 13 events for the night.

Winners included Tyler Cadham, who won the 200 IM and 200 breaststroke, and Michael Drinkard, who claimed the 200 butterfly, and Randy Roberts in the 200 backstroke.

Walker said the team received a boost from sophomore Doug Filling and freshman Benjain Janrioti. Janrioti won the 500 freestyle and finished second in the 1000 freestyle, while Filling finished third in the 500 freestyle and helped the team claim first place in the 400 free relay.

"The Salukis, who were edged in the 400 medley relay, got the last laugh by winning the 400 free relay," Walker said. "It was a great race."

With only 35 seconds on the clock, the Salukis caught the free relay at the meet," Walker said. "It was a great race."

"We already had the meet won, but we didn't want them to walk out and say something," Welker said.

Walker said a strong sense of spirit and unity make his team unique.

"It was the first time in my 15 years I've been here the team really realized we could take care of our own," Walker said.

They realized that others have to do their part or everything the team does is nullified," Cadham said.

"We are all like little arms and legs," Walker said. "All we have to do is make one big team," Cadham said.

Senior Randy Roberts said there is a lot of room for improvement.

"We want to move up," Roberts said. "We have to pull together because we know that we have a good team. If we don't we don't hurt the team."

The Salukis face the Kansas Jayhawks this Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Recreation Center.

topped that number with 27 turnovers of their own. This proved to be the difference in the game as Creighton, buried the Salukis 76-63.

"Our turnovers really hurt us tonight," Scott said. "Maybe, it was our inexperience and youth showing up."

SIUC wasn't without some strong individual performances, as forward Rocky Rosson paced the Salukis with 21 points. Sophomore point guard Nikki Gilmour added 17 and 3-point ace Karen Powell had nine.

The Salukis (8-4, 3-1) new depart on a brutal four game road trip that kicks off this Wednesday at Murray State.

Indiana State, Southwest Missouri and Wichita State will follow before SIUC returns home on Feb. 2 to host nationally ranked Vanderbilt.

Salukis stand alone at top of conference after Bradley defeat

By Dan Leathy
Sports Editor

The SIUC men’s basketball team broke open a tight game with an electrifying 12-0 run early in the second half Saturday night, and then held on to grab first-place in the conference with a 72-66 win over Bradley.

Forward Chris Carr said the run was a result of Saluki pressure.

“We just kept trying to push it at ‘em and push it at ‘em,” Carr said. “It finally paid off.”

It paid off big, as the Dawgs have the Missouri Valley’s best overall record at 9-2 and stand alone as the conference’s only undefeated team (4-0).

Forward Marcus Timmons and Carr keyed the big run, stealing the ball at one end and then converting at the other. By the time it was over, the Dawgs had taken a narrow 34-33 lead and turned it into a 46-33 cushion.

SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said it was important to convert Bradley’s turnovers to points.

“I won’t say we stepped up our intensity, but we were able to make some steals, get some long rebounds, had some run-out baskets, and had two or three tremendous dunk by Carr and Timmons,” Herrin said.

“The big thing is, when we got a steal or caused them to have a turnover, we were able to get run-out baskets many times.”

The first half was a struggle for both teams, but Bradley failed to take advantage of an early 8-2 lift. The Braves shot just 38 percent from the floor in the first half.

The biggest nightmare for Bradley was at the free-throw line. An 18-17 edge in the first half.

A seven for 16 performance in the first-half would come back to haunt the Braves who finished the game nine for 22 from the charity-stripe.

Herrin said the win does not mean much if the Dawgs can’t back it up with a road victory on Monday.

“The victory doesn’t mean a great deal if we can’t go out and beat Creighton,” Herrin said.

“You have to win at home or you don’t have a chance.”

The Braves clawed their way back into the game to cut the deficit to six points, with most of the damage coming from Billy Wright and Deon Jackson.

Wright had eight of his 10 points in the second half, while Jackson bucked into 11 of his 17 in the second stanza.

Carr said he thought Bradley’s mini-rollback was a result of a Saluki letdown.

“We kind of slacked off a bit,” he said. “You know that run we put on; it took a little energy from us.”

After Wright’s three-pointer cut the SIUC lead to six with 4:20 left, Center Marko Pavlovic scored two straight hoops to steady the Dawgs. The Salukis eventually surged ahead by 10 with a minute left before Bradley’s fast game fell short.

Bradley head coach Jim Molinari said Pavlovic was definitely a thorn in his team’s side.

“They did a great job defending,” Molinari said.

“But we rushed some shots. And Pavlovic continues to hurt us real bad, I thought, throughout the game.”

Molinari also emphasized the importance of free-throw shooting.

“You’re not going to beat Southern Illinois by shooting 9 of 22 from the free-throw line,” Molinari said.

Pavlovic lied with Carr for SIUC scoring honors by notching 17, while the backcourt duo of Chris Lowery and Paul Lusk hit for 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Timmons had eight points, 12 rebounds, five assists, three steals and only one turnover in a complete game.

Carr said he felt the Salukis rose to the occasion in the first-half showdown.

“We love to play the big-time games,” Carr said. “That’s why we’re here.”

The Dawgs have little opportunity to enjoy the victory, as they take on the Creighton Bluejays in a road game tonight.

Creighton (4-10, 0-3) is coming off a 75-59 loss to Tulsa on Saturday.

Turnovers spell defeat against Bluejays

Saluki women’s basketball fans were treated to a break from the frigid weather on Saturday when two of the Missouri Valley’s hottest teams met head-to-head at the Arena.

The Creighton Lady Bluejays made the pilgrimage from Omaha, Neb. and brought with them an impressive 10-2 overall record, including an unblemished 3-0 mark in MVC play.

On the line for the Salukis was a five-game winning streak and the rights to remain among the conference’s elite, as head coach Cindy Scott’s troops also boasted a 3-0 record in the Valley.

First half accout had the basketball looking more like a greased pig with both teams turning the ball over repeatedly. SIUC somehow escaped with a 31-27 lead at intermission, though, before the Lady Jays exploded in the second half.

“We had a tremendous defensive effort in the first half,” Scott said. “But when they went on a 5-0 run to start the second half, I knew we were in trouble.”

Creighton guard Holly Sevigny fueled the second half Bluejay barrage despite the constant pressure applied by the Salukis full-court press. The freshman phenom poured in 11 of her team-high 20 points in the final 17 minutes including two crucial three-pointers.

“Holly, on given nights, has done a great job for us,” Creighton Head Coach Connie Yori said.

Sievesing’s ability to rise to the occasion has Yori excited about the days to come.

“She’s a big game player, and it was nice to see her play well tonight,” Yori said. “In the future, it’s going to be hard for us to take her off the floor.”

The Saluki game plan was to run on Creighton in order to compensate for their size disadvantage. But several missed layups and misguided passes foiled their plans.

“I don’t think we did a real good job of handling their pressure in the second half,” Yori said. “But we have a very strong inside game and the luxury of three scorers in the post.”

The pressure that Yori spoke of caused the Lady Jays to turn the ball over 20 times beforeec night was over. Unfortunately, SIUC

Training linked to valuable key in winning style

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The SIUC men’s swimming and diving team stormed out of the recreation center Saturday with two victories, edging Southwest Missouri State 56-51 and clobbering Missouri 66-47.

Head coach Rick Walker said the huge win over Missouri was a shocker.

“I’m very pleased with the results,” Walker said. “I didn’t expect to beat Missouri by that much, so we did better than I expected.”

Walker cites a rigorous training program and an increase in aggressive style of play as two key reasons the Salukis own a 4-2 dual record.

The team came off a very difficult training in Oklahoma. Walker said, “I told them if we wanted to step up we would have to start swim-...
