Woman strangled, boyfriend charged

Two a.m. phone caller: Authorities alerted to location of dead woman's body after suspect contacted police.

By Sean J. Walker and Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The body of Terry L. Spillers, 25, of Carbondale, was found near the city's spillway on Pleasant Hill road early Tuesday morning and her boyfriend, James E. Vinson, 30, also of Carbondale, has been charged with Spillers' murder.

At a Tuesday afternoon press conference, Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said Spillers was found at approximately 2 a.m. Tuesday and transported to the Carbondale Memorial Hospital, where she was pronounced dead at 2:49 a.m.

James E. Vinson

A subsequent autopsy conducted at the direction of Jackson County Coroner Jerry Thurman indicated Spillers died from asphyxiation due to strangulation.

Strom said Vinson told police where to locate the woman's body in a 2 a.m. telephone call.

Strom said Vinson indicated during that initial conversation that he had last seen Spillers about 9:30 p.m. Monday at the couple's residence, Town and Country Trailer Court on south Rt. 51.

Vinson told police he had begun to worry about Spillers after she had been gone for several hours, then began to search for her on foot. Vinson said he located her body near the spill

Suspect sought in bank robbery

By Sean J. Walker

The Carbondale Police Department and the Carbondale office of the FBI are searching for a suspect in yesterday's 10:45 a.m. armed robbery of the Magna Bank, located at 601 East Main St. in Carbondale.

Don Strom

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said a black female estimated to be in her late 20s, five feet-two inches in height and thin in build, displayed a handgun and gave a Magna Bank teller a note demanding money.

Strom said the teller gave the robber an undetermined amount of cash. The woman then fled out the front door of the bank and is believed to have run to the east.

"The teller, who was the victim in this particular case, was nervous and shaken at the time, but she has been able to work with us on this case," said Strom.

On her way out of the bank, the robber dropped an undisclosed amount of the money on the bank's front lawn, and a short distance east of the bank, said Strom.

"This was not a situation where she ran in the bank and displayed the weapon," Strom said. "There was a certain time where she stood in line, but the actual robbery itself was done in a short period of time."

The suspect was believed to be wearing a baseball cap, dark wind-breaker jacket, light colored shirt, dark pants and white tennis shoes, said Strom.

"We (the Carbondale Police Department) have obtained some photographs and are working to have them enhanced," Strom said.

Quake shakes Japan; 1,800 killed

The Washington Post

KOBE, Japan—The last fires were finally going out over this major port city Wednesday as rescue workers began to regain control after a ferocious earthquake Tuesday killed at least 1,800 people and left thousands of buildings destroyed. Scattered plumes of smoke were still visible in the bright morning sun.

The death toll from the first tremor and a long series of aftershocks could go much higher. Kobe officials said, as rescue teams continued to find bodies buried under the rubble of fallen homes.

As of 8 a.m. Wednesday local time (6 p.m. Tuesday EST), Japan's National Police Agency reported that 1,805 people had died in the quake and 1,036 others were listed as missing. Some 6,300 people were injured, and nearly 100,000 spent the long night Tuesday in temporary housing in schools and public buildings. More than 9,000 homes were burned in fires caused by the quake.

Those figures mean that the quake was the most lethal in this tremor-plagued land since 1948, when a quake of magnitude 7.1 killed about 3,700 people in Fukui Prefecture.

Tuesday's earthquake, with a magnitude of 7.2 on the Richter Scale and a 6 on Japan's 1-to-7 scale, hit at 5:46 a.m. The epicenter was on the island of Awajishima, just outside Kobe Harbor in the Inland Sea. But that open, rural island reported relatively little damage.

The major destruction and loss of life occurred in the urban center of Kobe, the chief port of Japan's

Students wait up to 3 hours for checks

By Kellie Hutton

Patricia Camis leaned against a wall as she tried to balance her purse and fussy 13-month-old daughter, Arielle, Tuesday afternoon. She stood in what seemed a mile-long line, waiting to pick up her student loan check from SIUC's Bursar's Office.

Her husband Brad frantically searched through a diaper bag for Arielle's cereal, to keep her quiet while they waited for hours to pay their tuition.

"This is the longest line I think I've waited in except for the one at Disneyworld," Brad, a graduate student in special education from Chicago, said. "But at least there was a ride at the end of that one."

Donna Williams, an accountant in SIUC's Financial Aid Office, said the Bursar's Office had 8,897 loan checks ready for dispersal Tuesday morning but is expecting more to arrive everyday.

Students who attended in the fall and are now returning probably have checks waiting for them, she said. New students or those who filed for aid less than a month ago will have to wait.

Kent Dailey, a student worker in the Bursar's Office, directed students to which line they should stand in to make payments or pick up loan checks.

He said the expected wait was about three hours Tuesday afternoon, though some students had been in line since 9 a.m.

Dailey, a senior in electrical engineering from Marion and an employee of the Bursar's office for three years, said long lines for loans happen every year and usually last about a week. He estimated seeing

FOREIGN WORKERS MAY LEAVE SAUDI ARABIA — JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia—As Saudi Arabia's fiscal crunch begins to be felt — from the ranks of unemployed university graduates all the way up through the royal family — the first battle lines are forming around the 4.5 million foreign workers who drive the kingdom's cars, make its beds, serve its meals, diaper its children, maintain its equipment, program its computers, balance its bank books, repair its planes and sell its cosmetics. There's an easy answer to the nation's lagging revenues, dwindling government employment opportunities, private-sector layoffs and burgeoning crime. Saudis have concluded: Export unemployment. Send the foreign workers home. Train Saudis to take on their jobs. In Saudi Arabia, it will be an especially formidable undertaking, because foreign workers, most of them covered by valid work visas, make up more than a quarter of the kingdom's population of 16 million.

PIRATED COMPACT DISCS SPARK TRADE DISPUTE — SHANGHAI, China—More than two dozen CD plants have been at the heart of a trade dispute in which the United States accuses China of pirating copyrighted songs, books, videos and other pieces of intellectual property. On Wednesday, U.S. and Chinese trade negotiators are to begin three days of talks in an effort to avert punitive actions. The Clinton administration has threatened to impose 100-percent tariffs on $2.8 billion worth of Chinese goods. China has vowed it would then cut off contract talks with numerous American firms, including the big three automakers, who are seeking to make cars in China. Key American music and movie industry representatives are flying to Beijing so they can give negotiators prompt reactions to any last-minute proposals.

LLOYD WEBBER, DUNAWAY SETTLE DIFFERENCES — Faye Dunaway and Andrew Lloyd Webber are making beautiful music together again. The composer and the one-time singing star of the Los Angeles production of "Sunset Boulevard," who was dumped before the show opened on Broadway, announced a private settlement Monday of their dispute over the firing. How much cash Dunaway may have won in the settlement of her $6 million suit is confidential, the two said in a statement issued in London. But each praised the others talents. Befitting a knight of the realm, Lloyd Webber said, "Faye Dunaway is an extraordinary talent. I hope our paths cross one day in happier circumstances where my regard for her abilities can be shown more fruitfully."

CLINTON PITCHES TAX PLAN TO LOS ANGELES — LOS ANGELES—President Clinton returned to South Central Los Angeles on Martin Luther King's birthday Monday to dust off an old campaign call for a "new covenant" between a caring government and a responsible citizenry. Clinton, in California for two days to inspect disaster relief efforts, told an audience at a youth retraining center that government "should not pretend that we can solve problems that people have to solve for themselves." Yet, citing King's views, he said government should be a partner that enables people to obtain what they need to make the most of their own lives. Adding a pitch for his own plan of tax cuts and education incentives, Clinton said, "Let's don't make it more expensive for people to go to college. Let's make it cheaper for people to go to college...."

TIME BETWEEN BIRTHS AFFECTS BABIES' HEALTH — Black women are two to three times more likely than white women to give birth to premature or low-birthweight babies. But the cause of this disparity has defied explanation, since it holds true for many black women who are economically secure and have equal access to prenatal care. A medical team at the Madigan Army Medical Center in Tacoma, Wash., tracked the outcome of nearly 2,000 births over a 10-year period at that military base, where white and black women have equal access to medical care. They found that the odds of delivering a pre-term or low-birthweight baby jumped nearly fourfold for black women if they didn't wait nine months between pregnancies. For white women, waiting only three months between pregnancies reduced the odds to normal levels.

City Council opts to revise roles of LAB

Changes suggested:
Restructure of group expected to eliminate overlapping duties

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Carbondale liquor advisory board may have a new lease on life after the city council voted last night to have city staff members re-examine the roles and responsibilities of the board, rather than eliminate it, as originally proposed.

The proposed elimination, originally brought before the council by councilman John Mills in December, met with opposition from board chairman Mark Robinson, and was also questioned by Undergraduate Student Government President Edwin Sawyer.

Councilman Mills originally said the services provided by the board were redundant, and the money and time consumed justified cutting the board from the city government. But after discussion by board members and public comments, the board agreed the best course of action was to restructure and redefine their responsibilities.

Board chairman Robinson said the board was not redundant, and

" We are citizens who don't get paid.
Folks who want to advance
the community. "

Mark Robinson

provided an important service to the community, through representation of citizen groups not on the liquor commission.

"We are citizens who don't get paid. Folks who want to advance the community," said Robinson. "Silencing the messenger because you don't like the message makes no sense."

USG president Edwin Sawyer said the liquor advisory board also provides the student population with an outlet for concerns that might not be expressed before the city council or the liquor commission.

"In front of the cameras, the city and the council it is hard to bring up more radical suggestions," Sawyer said. "The liquor advisory board is one way to avoid that, and that is important."

The liquor advisory board was created sometime in the early 1970s, according to a short history compiled by the City Clerk's office. The board was to advise the mayor on his duties as liquor commissioner. In 1975 the city liquor control commission, made up of all members of the city council, was formed.

With five members, the commission was expected to reduced the

Apartments at Lewis Park damaged by foul weather

Different quarters:
Some residents return to find personal items moved to new rooms.

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some SIUC students living in the Lewis Park Apartments came back from break to find their belongings moved to another apartment due to water damage caused by leaking roofs.

Construction blamed

Chris Rank, property manager of the apartment complex, said the leaks in the roofs of the two buildings damaged were caused by the ice storm that hit Carbondale on Jan. 6.

"It was caused by weather conditions and not structural damage or because of negligence," she said. "It's just the way the roofs are built. The melting and re-freezing of the ice caused expansion and contraction of the material. We have rubber roofs now and it won't happen again."

Response was quick

Residents began notifying Rank's office of the leaks as soon as they noticed water stains developing on their ceilings and walls. She said her office responded to the problem by moving the affected tenants to vacant apartments. Management first tried to contact tenants of the leaky apartments who were out of town before moving their belongings.

"Just because they're out of town, I'm not going to say 'too bad,'" Rank explained. "We bent over backwards to help these kids."

According to Rank, everyone was moved out of the damaged apartments by the day after the storm.

"I thank the residents for being so calm and understanding. I'd freak out."

Rank said most of the damage that occurred was to the drywall and furniture in the apartment, with little damage to tenant's personal property. An exact estimate of the damage was not available, but Bruce Sabaini, senior claim representative for the Aetna Insurance Company, the insurance carrier for Lewis Park, said he expects the damage to the buildings alone to exceed $100,000.

"There won't be any claims by the tenants," Sabaini said. "They're supposed to carry their own insurance and there was no negligence on the part of the property owners."

Recurring problem

This was not the first time this school year Lewis Park has had a problem with the roofs of their apartments. According to Rank, a windstorm damaged the roof of another building about two months ago.

"Those are the only three buildings we've had problems like this with in the past ten years," she said. "I'm just like 'Why is this happening now?'"

New roofs were installed on the damaged buildings by Jan. 9, and workers are currently making repairs to the interior of the apartments.

Residents of the damaged apartments could not be reached for comment.

Vinson fills empty executive post Former teacher brings 'experience' to position

By Amanda Estabrook
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The position of acting executive assistant to the president for International and Economic Development, formerly held by the late Charles Klasek, has been filled by Rhonda J. Vinson.

Vinson, executive director of the Office of Economic and Regional Development for the last nine years, will continue in both positions until later decisions on who will fill the position permanently are made by President Guyon.

She taught special education in the elementary system of her hometown of Danville, Ill., for six years.

Since moving to Carbondale in 1976, she has been active in improving the economic conditions of the region by helping to get certain legislation through congress.

She is the vice president for the Lower Mississippi Delta Development Center, a seven-state non-profit organization that is involved in bringing this legislation before congress and is also involved in the funding and implementation of the programs.

She is also on the board and execu-utive committee of the World Development Council.

President Guyon expressed confidence in Vinson.

"She is a senior member of the organization and has the right experience and qualifications for the job," he said.

Vinson said continuing all the different projects that were previously under Klasek has been hectic, but now that the traumatic part of his death is subsiding the department is starting to get on with business. Vinson said that Klasek would

New COBA dean focuses on 'world view' stance

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As students face the challenge of a new semester, the new Dean of the College of Business and Administration faces the challenges of a new job, new co-workers, a new university and a new town.

Thomas L. Keon started as the new dean for COBA on January 1, and has spent the last two weeks getting settled into the new position and meeting the people he is charged with leading.

"It's going to take me a while to get a feel for the department," Keon said. "There is so much I don't know right now. I need to find out just what everyone is doing. That's what I'm going to be doing for the next two or three months."

Keon supports international emphasis of school

Keon came to SIUC after a two-year search. Acting Marketing Department Chair Gordon Brunner said it was a very frustrating search.

"When you find the person with the right academic credentials and leadership qualities, they usually find it more appealing to work in industry rather than at an academic institution," Brunner said.

Thomas Keon

The final choice of Keon was a relief and will help the school move faster into the future, Brunner said.

"Of course it will be better when we all sit down to discuss what the dean wants to do, but based on everything I know up to now, I'm very happy," he said.

Keon said he wants to make sure COBA is a world-minded college, focusing on the world economy rather than the US economy.

"International programs are one of this school's strengths," Keon said. "We'll continue those programs, of course. It's the way of the future."

Keon said the United States used to be the major economic empire in the world, but those days are gone.

"SIUC has a good start focusing on the world because we already have established new MBA programs overseas," he said.

Brunner agreed saying overseas programs are a great opportunity for the business school to reach out into the world.

Brunner declined to comment on the performance of the new dean until they sit down and discuss COBA related items.

"I can only say that he has great potential right now," Brunner said. "He can potentially provide the direction COBA needs."

Chair of the Management Department Arlyn Melcher said,

"It's going to take him time to get acquainted with the people, businesses, community, and issues."

"If he does it right away, great. If he doesn't, we're not going to short him for it," Melcher said.

Other ideas Keon said he wants include are strengthening the alumni/COBA relationship, as well as business relationships in major mid-western cities, such as Chicago and St. Louis.

Keon declined to comment on other ideas he has for COBA until he sits down with the chairs of the departments to discuss what they are doing.

Also, Keon said staff changes are not on his agenda at the present time.

Students should be priority for Kochan

STUDENT TRUSTEE MARK KOCHAN, WHO IS a University official elected by the student body to represent students' concerns on the SIU Board of Trustees, has fallen into criticism recently from some of his student-government peers.

THE CRITICISM OF KOCHAN STEMS FROM HIS "tentative" decision to accept an internship with Mayor Richard Daley's office in Chicago, nearly six hours away from the people and concerns that he is supposed to represent. This may seem surprising to most individuals, since during Kochan's campaign for re-election in April 1994, he ran on a platform of availability to students. It is not so surprising, however, if Kochan's record for actually supporting students' concerns is evaluated.

The SIU Board of Trustees is comprised of nine members, and student trustees from Carbondale and Edwardsville are the only two members who are elected. The other seven members are appointed by the governor.

In October, the trustees voted to approve several tuition hikes, scheduled to begin in fall 1995. Among these hikes were a 3.5-percent increase for undergraduate and main campus graduate students and a 14.9-percent increase for students at the SIU School of Law. Before the board meeting, members of the Graduate and Professional Student Council and the president of the SIU Student Bar Association urged Kochan to vote against the law-school hike. GPSIC also urged Kochan to oppose a hike for the SIU medical school and dental school. Kochan disregarded their plea and took it upon himself to decide what was right for his constituents.

KOCHAN AND OTHER TRUSTEES SAY THAT his Chicago internship will not interfere with his ability to effectively represent the student body. The fact is that no leader can lead from behind — or from six hours away, in Kochan's case — not even if the leader has voice mail.

Even if it were possible for a student trustee to serve effectively when separated from his constituents by such great time and distance, certainly Kochan cannot make us believe it is possible in his case. His past record tells us that his abilities to effectively stand behind his constituents' concerns are questionable even when he is in town.

If Kochan decides to accept the internship while still retaining his trustee position, he will show a definite lack of priorities. Before he was elected by his fellow students to carry out the duties of the highest student-government office, he campaigned on the premise of being accessible to the student body. Students and their leaders should expect nothing less.

Although it conflicts with his current job, this internship is obviously a great academic opportunity for Kochan, and it is entirely up to him to decide which position is more important to him. But if he decides to accept the Chicago job, he owes it to his constituents to step down and give them a chance to have someone a little closer to the University represent their interests.

Tuition use called into question

Dear Board of Trustees,

I believe it was a board member who made the statement, "We must ask ourselves why we are denying ourselves the funds we need." This appeared in the Daily Egyptian shortly before a tuition increase was made last semester. I think it is fair to ask what the student gets, regardless of the need for money. Since I have yet to find an itemized breakdown of tuition, I cannot judge any part of the service I receive as worth the money or not. I would like the opportunity to do so. Since you are faced with the costs that made a tuition increase necessary, it seems that you can give me an idea of where the money goes. Perhaps expenses that I am not aware of will show me that tuition is not grossly excessive.

I feel that I am being ripped off. I have had one teacher that contributed to learning in my year of attending this university. While it is possible that other teachers will be beneficial, this is not a bet I would make. I could have done better if the funds which go towards instruction (assuming it's 20 percent or more) allowed me to work less. I realize that it will cost something to make and grade tests, along with computer access, library usage, etc.

I just don't want to pay for a service that I end up doing myself.

I am basically self-taught. Going to class is an inefficient practice if it is only to hear the textbook recited and learn of material which can be given in the form of a thorough syllabus.

While it may be no remedy for a tuition reduction without the support of many students, I hope you will remember this letter. With your knowledge and work, perhaps the opportunity may arise, and I can one day pay only for what I use.

Turning political activism into trend trivializes role of gays in '90s society

By Frank DeCaro
Newsday

There was a time in my life when if someone asked me what I did best, I'd say one thing: in/out lists. When a new year rolled around, I not only knew what was "in," I knew what was going to be "in" six months down the road. That was my skill, that and being able to program a VCR. Anyway, it was a very '80s talent, having this trend antenna, and I did well with it, pulling stuff out of the cosmos and predicting things like Batmania and disco revivalism long before everyone else caught on to the Caped Crusader and platform shoes.

I was so hip in those days — or at least so concerned with being hip — that I tried to make a reservation at a Wolfgang Puck restaurant for which they had not yet broken ground. It is true. But somewhere along the way, my hipness fell out like a prenatal tooth. It was just gone. Well, not totally. I mean, I'm not a complete nimrod. I'm over diner food and I wouldn't be caught dead in a scarf print right now. For heaven's sake, I still get it. It's just that in my heart of hearts I don't really care enough about what's in or what's out to do anything about it any more. I just like what I like now.

"To be trendy is to be trivial. And gay and lesbian life is as non-trivial as any other way of being."

Frank DeCaro,
Newsday columnist

Recently I was talking about gay life with a rather well-respected, openly gay, very trend-savvy mover and shaker in publishing. We talked about what a banner year 1994 had been with Gay Games and Stonewall 25 and all, and what '95 would bring. "Well, you know, queers are out now," he said, after a while. He didn't mean out as in "... of the closet," but out as in "... of fashion." Put so cavalierly, his pronouncement stopped me dead in my tracks.

But I knew exactly what he meant. Gays and lesbians aren't the flavor of the month anymore — Republican Ripple is. Our media moment has been eclipsed by a "Brave Newt World," as one headline called it. But not being the scoop du jour isn't such a bad thing for us when you come right down to it. To be trendy is to be trivial. And gay and lesbian life is as non-trivial as any other way of being.

The best side-effect of gays and lesbians not being chic anymore is that we're forced to see ourselves and make sure others see us as more than just gay.

We're having to realize that gay is just part of who we are as a people after all. Some of us are gay and funny, some gay and serious. Some are gay and smart, some gay and dumb as homemade soap. We're moving into a time, I think, when being gay can no longer be one's "raison d'etre."

People — even the most open-minded ones — are beginning to say, "OK, you're gay, big deal. Now what else do you have to bring to the party?" If the answer is nothing, we're done for.

Being "out" also means we have to keep on keeping on, fighting for what's right, until we're "in" again. It'll mean working harder to be heard, standing our ground more firmly, making sure we're portrayed fairly and accurately in the media. Even if we're not as sexy a topic as we were last year.

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Arnesha Jones, a freshman in international business from East St. Louis, said she had been waiting in line to make a payment for three hours and was exhausted.

"I've never waited in a line this long before, and hopefully I will never again. I started in the third floor stairwell," she said.

"I'm very bored; tired and hungry."

Ruby Bacon, assistant bursar of the cash payment area, said extra employees have been called in to help with disbursements and paper-

An additional supervisor, two full-time and two part-time employees were hired to assist the regular staff. Bacon said.

"We knew that this would be a busy time," she said. "We are usually able to keep the line only halfway down the hall."

Bacon said although the office opened at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, bursar hours are 8:15 a.m.-3 p.m.

industrial heartland at the center of Honshu, the country's largest island. Kobe has a substantial foreign community, but there were no reports of Americans killed or injured.

The considerably bigger city of Osaka, a major financial center that borders Kobe to the east, escaped with relatively minor damage. Two ancient capitals of Japan, Kyoto and Nara, both nearby and both replete with antique structures and artistic treasures, were shaken but not seriously damaged.

The famous Kyoto temple Sanjusang-gendo, a 700-year-old place of worship that houses 1,001 statues of the Kannon, the Buddhist goddess of mercy, benefited from merciful fate: Only six of the ancient statues were damaged.

In Kobe, however, fires evidently caused by broken gas lines raged in the brisk night winds nearly 24 hours after the quake hit. With water lines broken as well in many areas of the city, firefighters were handicapped in their efforts to douse the flames.

By the light of the wind-driven fires, rescue workers could be seen digging through piles of rubble that had once been individual homes. At one home, a rescue team reported hearing a child's voice shouting "Oi! Tasukete!" ("Over here! Help!"), but the voice gave out before workers could dig down through the collapsed roof.

Electricity, gas and water remained off this morning, and phone service was uncertain.

Japanese officials were organizing relief flights with medical and food supplies.

In Northridge, Calif., where he was commemorating the one-year anniversary of California's killer earthquake, President Clinton said Wednesday that the United States "sends our profound condolences" to Japan. He ordered a high-level delegation to go there to help Tokyo cope with the quake.

Those to be sent include officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Transportation Department, Clinton said, adding that Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is already in Japan and has promised U.S. military support.

Carbondale police then began a search for Spillers' car, locating it near an apartment complex on south Rt. 51 at approximately 3:45 a.m. During the search, investigators were questioning Vinson and others who were believed to have last seen her alive, said Strom.

Further questioning by police elicited a statement from Vinson which implicated him in Spillers' death. Strom said Carbondale police then arrested Vinson and charged him with murder, after consulting with Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec.

Strom said Vinson told investigators he had argued with Spillers late Tuesday night over drugs. Vincent also said he fought with Spillers, admitting to striking and choking her, Strom indicated.

Strom said Vincent probably acted alone, but authorities are still

"It's possible that it either occurred at the site, or another site nearby, and she was taken to the spillway and dumped there," he said.

Vinson was processed at the Carbondale Police Department and then taken to the Jackson County jail in Murphysboro to await an appearance before a judge today.

Strom said the murdered woman moved to Carbondale from South Carolina, and that she was unemployed at the time of her death.

Funeral arrangements for Spillers are being handled by a funeral home in South Carolina, where Spillers' mother lives.

stoppers hotline at 549-COPS.

"It is typical of one of those cases (fleeing robbery) that it is very important that we have information from the public on something like this," Strom said. "There is someone out there who in all likelihood knows the suspect in this case, has had a conversation with them, saw them fleeing from the area, or knows some behavior the person exhibited this afternoon after the robbery.

"It's that kind of information that whether they know for a fact or not, just tipping us off to possible persons to take a look at is very important," Strom said.

Strom said persons giving information leading to an arrest may be eligible for a reward of up to $1,000 in cash.

Senator Byrd trips up GOP with parliamentary 'antics'

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Coolly demonstrating that Democrats are just as skilled as Republicans at gumming up the legislative process, a former Senate kingpin stalled two high-priority GOP proposals Tuesday and cast a shadow over a third.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., a parliamentarian extraordinaire, forced two Senate panels to shut down abruptly, enraging some Republicans and strengthening GOP resolve to overcome his tactics. The maneuvering set the stage for a possible showdown later this week on the balanced budget amendment, the line-item veto and a bill on so-called unfunded mandates.

Democrats, of course, had a different view. Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., new head of the Democratic National Committee, hailed Byrd's maneuvers as a way to slow down the process. Efforts "to get some really solid thinking about this is an appropriate step and I appreciate immensely what Sen. Byrd is doing," Dodd said.

Byrd, a crusty six-term senator who chaired the Appropriations Committee until the Republicans took control of Congress this year, was able to slow down the GOP juggernaut by invoking an obscure parliamentary rule: committees technically cannot meet after the Senate itself has been in session for two hours on any day unless all 100 members grant consent.

Thus any senator may successfully object to a committee meeting after the Senate has met for two hours. Senators rarely exercise that prerogative—only two or three times a year, according to Senate parliamentarian Robert Dove. Byrd's objections Tuesday were the first in the new, Republican-controlled Congress.

His actions forced the Senate Judiciary Committee to abort a debate over the balanced budget amendment in the morning and prevented a Judiciary subcommittee from meeting in the afternoon to take testimony on the presidential line-item veto.

"I would hope he'll restrain the use of this rule," Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said after adjourning his committee. "I'm hoping this is an isolated, one-day approach."

Some Republicans, however, reacted to Byrd's shenanigans with bemused tolerance. "We have what we know as 'Byrd-lock,'" quipped Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who just four months ago was trotting out his own parliamentary moves to block legislation proposed by the then-majority Democrats.

If Byrd, 77, persists with his objections, the GOP-controlled panels will have no choice but to meet in early mornings and possibly late evenings—after the Senate has finished business for the day.

Hatch called a committee meeting for 8:30 a.m. Wednesday. Progress could be slow, with debate expected on at least a half dozen Democratic amendments. Similarly, Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., tentatively scheduled a meeting for his Judiciary subcommittee early Thursday morning.

But Byrd vowed to keep up the fight, saying: "I may be run over by the steamroller but I don't propose to get out of its way or just jump upon it and ride along with it."

Farrakhan says charges are plot

The Washington Post

CHICAGO—In his first public comments on the alleged plot to murder him, Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan said Tuesday night that the criminal charges against the daughter of Malcolm X are part of a larger conspiracy to destroy him because of what he described as his growing influence among black Americans.

Speaking to more than 2,000 supporters, Farrakhan said Malcolm X's daughter, Qubilah Shabazz, is innocent of the charges against her and had been manipulated by government agents into becoming "a tool in a diabolical scheme."

"If we can prove there was in fact government entrapment of this young lady, I believe we as a community should rise to demand her release," he said at a news conference after a 40-minute speech to supporters.

Shabazz, 34, is to be arraigned in federal court in Minneapolis on Wednesday on charges that she conspired to hire a Minnesota man and former government informant in another case to murder Farrakhan. In a TV interview last year, Malcolm X's widow, Betty Shabazz, said she believed Farrakhan was involved in the 1965 assassination of her husband, the fiery black nationalist leader who was once a close ally of Farrakhan.

The charges against Qubilah Shabazz have reopened old wounds in the Nation of Islam and renewed questions about events of 30 years ago, when Malcolm X had a bitter break with the organization.

pressure the commissioners duties put on a single administrator, and decentralized the power of the office.

This created what some council members saw as a duplication of services, and the elimination of the liquor advisory board has been suggested by the council members and the city staff several times in the last decade.

A proposed ordinance to prohibit the sale, distribution and unsupervised inhalation of nitrous oxide was postponed after USG representative Mark Nolan and several private citizens raised objections to the fines proposed.

The proposal suggested fines for sale, distribution or use of the drug range from $25-$500.

The council delayed final action on a request to initiate an "anti-lockout ordinance" which would prohibit landlords from preventing tenants behind in rent payments from entering units, rather than pursuing legal means of resolving the situation.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said he wanted more time to review details of the request, after the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce expressed concern that the request protects landlords and tenants.

The council did hear public comments on the request, and GPSC President Susan Hall, Landlord-Tenant Union representative Drew Hendricks and other private citizens expressed concern that the request pass as written.

He said he spoke with business college deans from other universities and they suggested he ask for letters of resignation from his department chairs. That way he could review their performance and make any changes he deems necessary.

However, Keon said he elected not to do that.

"Two of the department chairs are only acting chairs, so I will be looking for new people anyway," Keon said. "Other than that, I have no plans to change staff at the present time."

Keon joins COBA after four-and-a-half-years as an assistant dean at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Fla.

Before that, he spent nine years as a faculty member at the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo.

"Florida Atlantic University was in a very populated area," Keon said. "I was very ready to get back to a traditional campus in a rural area."

Keon's wife will also be joining COBA, teaching Auditing in the School of Accountancy.

Vinson

Vinson said continuing all the different projects that were previous under Klasek has been hectic, but now that the traumatic part of his death is subsiding the department is starting to get on with business. Vinson said that Klasek would be hard to replace, but with new people come new ideas.

"Everyone has different expertise and someone new is sure to bring new ideas to the department," she said. "This will help us to grow and continue in the things we do."

The International and Economic Development Department conducts many programs and services for the 2,500 international students at SIUC.

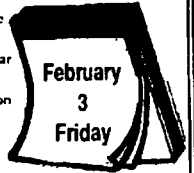

International students come through this department for orientation to the university. The department also helps with job placement once the students graduate.

Another project underway is the SIUC campus in Thailand. Phillip A. Lindberg, director of Touch of Nature and head of the project, said representatives in Thailand have submitted a proposal for the license from University Affairs. Lindberg will be meeting with the deans and officials from Thailand to establish legal policies and an educational program.

In addition, a new exchange program in the works this year sends a small group of schoolchildren to Japan in June for two weeks, Kathy Swindell, the associate director for the Office of Overseas Programs, said.

FDA OKs new drug for alcoholism

Los Angeles Times

The first new drug in 47 years to treat alcoholism has been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism announced Monday.

Unlike Antabuse, the currently used drug which makes the user severely nauseated when he or she uses alcohol, naltrexone works by blocking both the craving for alcohol and the pleasure of getting high.

"This is the beginning of a new era ... in alcoholism treatment," said Dr. Enoch Gordis, director of the institute, which funded testing of the drug. "This is not a 'magic bullet,' but naltrexone promises to help many patients in their struggle against a chronic relapsing disease."

Results from an ongoing clinical trial to be released Tuesday at a New York news conference show that, when combined with conventional behavioral modification, naltrexone allows as many as three-quarters of alcoholics to avoid a relapse, compared with fewer than half of those who received counseling alone.

Alcoholism is by far the most common drug abuse problem in the United States.

Future of National Foods in question: Outcome of Schnucks buyout unknown

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The fate of National Super Market, 915 W. Main is uncertain after Monday's announcement of an agreement between the two largest supermarket chains in the St. Louis area, according to National officials.

Schnuck Markets, Inc. has agreed to purchase most of the assets of National Super Markets from the Toronto-based Loblaw Companies Ltd. within the St. Louis and New Orleans divisions, according to Judy Paine of Schnuck's executive office.

The planned transaction is subject to approval by the U.S. Federal Trade Commission. Loblaw and National are not active participants in the negotiations, according to a press release from National.

Paine said the privately-held Schnucks will acquire 60 stores including National's 53 metro St. Louis stores, two in Springfield and one each in Litchfield and Carbondale, and Rolla, Cape Girardeau and Hannibal, Mo.

"The question we can't answer yet is what to expect of the future of individual stores," Paine said.

Under the agreement, the assets of National's 29 stores in the New Orleans division will be acquired by Schwegmann's Giant Super Markets, Inc., a New Orleans-based family-owned chain of 18 supermarkets, Paine said.

Schnuck Markets, which already owns 50 stores in St. Louis, will be able to operate more competitively with the addition of National stores, according to a company press release.

Terms of the agreement have not yet been disclosed.

Paine said, Schnucks expects the FTC to "require a limited number of stores" to be sold to other supermarket operators.

National will continue to conduct business as usual until FTC consent is granted or Loblaw instructs National Super Markets to transfer its assets. The company also will continue constructing new stores, introducing new products, launching new marketing programs and hiring and training new employees, according to the release.

National stated, it expects to serve customers throughout January, February, March and into April.

Students return with resolutions for new year

By Dustin Coffman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some SIUC students said they brought back more than Christmas presents from the holidays, including New Year's resolutions for the upcoming semester.

Jason Meleth, a junior in biological science from Marion, said he wants to become more involved with the university.

"I would like to become more active in campus activities, including student government and volunteer work," Meleth said. "I felt that I wasn't experiencing the full college experience last semester."

For transfer students, the benefit of learning from prior semesters is absent. Adam Coffman, a junior in anthropology, said though this may be his first semester, he still has made resolutions for the upcoming year.

"I want to meet as many people as I can by being as friendly as possible," Coffman, a transfer from John A. Logan College, said resolutions, if carried through, can be beneficial.

"If you can set a goal for yourself, and work at it a little at a time, you will more than likely be successful," Coffman said.

Nicole Bellecomo said 1995 is the year to get into the health kick.

Bellecomo, a sophomore in physical education from Lombard plans "to go to the recreation center at least three or four times a week and do mostly jogging."

Joseph Gomoll, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Chicago, said he usually doesn't make many resolutions, but when he does they are not very important ones.

"Most people don't follow through with their resolutions anyway," Gomoll said.

Coffee houses entice variety of customers with wide bill of fare

Beverage alternative:
Businessmen decide to serve community with new nightlife options.

By Kristi Dehority
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A coffee house breaking new ground in the music scene is Melange, located at 607 S. Illinois Ave. Bill Lancaster, shift manager, says "My first goal is to establish traditional jazz night on Wednesday's — professional-oriented jazz that people usually do not see here [in Carbondale]."

Melange's jazz night starts Jan. 25 with the local trio, Demitasse.

If they receive audience approval, Lancaster would like to continue by bringing in local and out-of-town jazz bands.

Also considered in the future are possible folk nights, short plays and skits.

Lancaster said, "Melange brings people to the Strip that normally do not come to the strip." Even with it being on the strip its patrons are mostly people throughout the community, not just students.

Vern Crawford, coordinator of Cousin Andy's Coffee Shop, located at 402 W. Mill St., in the basement of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, said they have had a packed house over the last month.

Crawford says, "Its [clientele] tends to be families and adults, approximately 80%, with students making up 20%."

Open only on Friday nights, Cousin Andy's music is predominantly folk.

Melange prides itself on being "alcohol and smoke free," while LongBranch offers smoking and non-smoking rooms. Cousin Andy's offers a smoke free listening room.

Carbondale coffee houses offer a selection of entertainment in a relaxing environment that hasn't been seen for quite some time.

With city and school officials attempting to rid SIUC of its party image, it sometimes seems there is nothing original left to do in Carbondale. This semester, local coffee houses are changing that mentality by offering an array of new entertainment throughout the area.

In 1992 Tom Egert felt a new alternative to the bar scene was needed. To remedy the situation, he opened the LongBranch Coffee House, located at 100 E. Jackson.

Egert said if people had a choice they would rather frequent a comfortable place with reasonable coffee prices where they could hold a conversation instead of spending large sums of money on beer.

Carbondale is growing and maturing to expand into culturally diverse businesses," Egert said.

LongBranch will kick off a movie night on Jan. 26, with "Repulsion" by Roman Polanski at 8 p.m.

All movies presented will be classic, not offered in the more commercial theaters. Showings will be free of charge with limited seating.

In the past, LongBranch offered open-mike night; this will be continued this semester on Friday nights 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. and Sunday nights from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m.

Israelis, Palestinians face off over West Bank settlements

Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM—Israel and the Palestinian Authority moved into full confrontation Tuesday over the expansion of Jewish settlements on the West Bank, further jeopardizing Israel's promised troop pullback in the region.

Led by four ministers from the Palestinian Authority, more than 500 Palestinians broke through Israeli army roadblocks to march on the Jewish settlement of Psagot, outside the town of Al-Bireh north of Jerusalem, before troops dispersed them with stun grenades.

tear gas and gunfire.

Israeli soldiers briefly detained Azmi Shuabi, the authority's youth and sports minister. Dr. Ahmed Tibi, one of Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat's chief advisers, and Marwan Barghouti, secretary-general of Fatah, the principal PLO faction. Two Palestinians were wounded by gunfire in the confrontation.

Chanting "God is great" in Arabic and carrying placards declaring "No peace with settlements," the demonstrators had marched from an Al-Bireh mosque to Psagot, a hilltop settlement of about 800 Israelis, until soldiers finally halted the protest by firing over the Palestinians' heads.

The demonstration, one of three on the West Bank Tuesday, marked the start of a week of escalating protests planned by the Palestinians against what they charged is continued Israeli seizure of their farm lands for expansion of the settlements.

Fatah plans Wednesday to block roads leading to a number of West Bank settlements and on Thursday and Friday to "confront" settlers and soldiers in the region.

Russians hindering relief supplies

The Washington Post

BESLAN, Russia—Larry Hollingworth, a U.N. refugee official, drove to the airport here Tuesday expecting to meet a large plane load of relief supplies for people who have fled the fighting in Chechnya. Instead he ran into a blizzard of Russian red tape.

On the phone just an hour earlier, the air traffic control tower had assured Hollingworth that the plane carrying blankets, kitchen equipment and other supplies was on the way. But once Hollingworth arrived, the airport deputy director said he knew nothing about the flight.

Besides, the airport official said, there was a new rule: Since the U.N. flight had originated in Turkey, it had to clear customs in one of three Russian cities—Moscow, Samara or Novgorod. It could not land here.

It was just the latest in a series of hassles, hurdles and headaches that have obstructed international relief officials trying to rush emergency aid to 300,000 to 400,000 refugees who have been forced from their homes by the war in Chechnya, now in its sixth week.

Refugee officials say the problems they have encountered at the hands of Russian bureaucrats seem designed to ensure that none of the relief aid is used for the benefit of Chechen separatist fighters who continue to resist the Russians.

"We were invited in by the Russian authorities on Dec. 27. Therefore we anticipated that it would go just like clockwork," said Hollingworth. "But here we've been blocked practically since before we started."

Currencies waver, border bargains abound

The Washington Post

U.S. travelers looking for bargains should head for the border—either one, north or south.

The Canadian dollar and the Mexican peso have seriously weakened recently, and the bad news for Canadians and Mexicans is good news for those of us who live in the land between them.

Already stories of big bargains are wafting back from over the border, and they are being passed along by tour operators and travel agents who are seeing their business surge, especially to Mexico.

"We've seen Mexico become very affordable," says Charles

Nelson, general manager of Sanborn's, a McAllen, Texas, firm that operates 30 outlets selling Mexican auto insurance to drivers headed south of the border.

As someone whose business requires him to keep abreast of currency developments in Mexico, Nelson cites other savings from personal experience and reports from his staff.

For motorists, the price of gas has dropped from $1.60 a gallon (as calculated from the liter equivalent) to 90 to 95 cents a gallon. The toll road south from McAllen to Monterrey, which previously cost $58 for a round trip, is now down to about $25 to $27. A meal that came to $18 a month ago now goes for about $10.

Since Dec. 19, the Mexican peso has dropped by about 40 percent against the dollar.

Whereas last year, a traveler exchanging U.S. dollars for pesos got just three pesos and some change, today a dollar is buying five pesos in some exchange offices on the border, Nelson said.

Since October, the Canadian dollar has dropped 5 percent against the U.S. dollar, bringing it to a nine-year low of about 71 U.S. cents.

While the currency devaluation in both countries is a boon to U.S. travelers, the most dramatic savings are to be found in Mexico.

'NFL Game Day' dean of television pre-game shows

The Baltimore Sun

BRISTOL, Conn.—Which of the NFL pre-game show casts has been together the longest?

Go to the head of the class if you picked the gang at ESPN's "NFL GameDay," the program that coordinating producer Bob Rauscher describes as "the pre-game show without a game."

Starting with the nucleus of host Chris Berman and analyst Tom Jackson—finishing up their eighth season together—and adding Joe Theismann, Chris Mortensen and newcomer Phil Simms, to go along with a solid core of field reporters and production crew, you get a solid show each week.

"This was our best year. We had a new producer (Craig Lazerus), we brought in Phil, who worked his butt off. Tommy had his best year and Joe was solid as always. We had a blast," said Berman.

The show's ratings dipped slightly this year for the first time in eight seasons, due as much to the fact that "GameDay"—an hour-long show which for four years had operated without a competitor for the first 30 minutes—had to go up against Fox this season.

Indeed, "GameDay," which won a third consecutive CableAce Award this week, has taken its rightful place among—and many times atop—the network pre-game shows, because it is fan-friendly.

That starts with Berman, who also received a CableAce.

Orioles won't use replacements

By Ken Rosenthal
The Baltimore Sun

Good thing Peter Angelos saved himself the expense of buying the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Now he can use the money to fight major-league baseball in court.

For some crazy reason, Angelos doesn't want to join Commissioner Bud Selig and the rest of the dinosaur capitalists plotting to desecrate the national pastime.

Selig insists that each of the 28 clubs would be required to field replacement teams, but let's see him prove it.

Let's see him force Angelos to play Buddy Ball.

What can Selig do, order the Baltimore Orioles to forfeit their replacement games? Ooh, that would hurt. Levy a major fine? No problem, Angelos suddenly has $200 million to burn.

Take away the franchise? That would be too funny, kicking out a major-league owner for refusing to offer a minor-league product. Angelos would sue in about six seconds.

Then again, the owners are going to get hammered by the union in court, so they might want to take on one of their own, to divert attention from the truly messy stuff.

They'd better be ready, now that Angelos is through with Bucs. He could never prove in court that the National Football League advised the trustees to reject his bid. But he's been itching for a fight with Selig and Co. ever since the labor mess started.

'Jays face Canadian labor law prohibiting replacement hires

Los Angeles Times

TORONTO—After the Toronto Blue Jays postponed their Southern California trout camps for possible replacement players last weekend due to the heavy rains and flooding, one had to ask: Who could have expected a week in January in which the weather in Los Angeles would be worse than in Toronto?

But that's the way things have been going for the Blue Jays.

As major league baseball gropes its way into an uncertain future, the Blue Jays face more questions and obstacles than any other team.

They center on a 1993 law in the province of Ontario that prohibits an employer affected by a strike or lockout from hiring replacement workers, among other stipulations.

The SkyDome is the only Major League park covered by such a law, and it places the two-time defending world champions in the apparent position of accepting one of the following alternatives, none of which the team welcomes: —Employ replacement players, but play all games on the road, substituting an alternative site, such as Vancouver, British Columbia; Buffalo, N.Y., or Washington, for home games. —Challenge the validity of the Ontario law, in court or before the provincial Labor Relations Board. The Blue Jays could argue, for example, that they are an international business, not subject to the jurisdiction of a law applicable only in Ontario.

McMaster's dream job nightmare so far

By Allan Malamud
Los Angeles Times

"It's been a very difficult time," said Sam McMaster, hired by the Los Angeles Kings last May 24. ...

"I don't know which carries more stress, wins and losses or lockouts. I had no control over anything. You want to say something, you want to scream, but you just have to let the process work itself out." ...

Having done that, McMaster will be in the press box Friday night at the Forum, watching the Kings play their long-anticipated opener against the Toronto Maple Leafs. ...

"It should be exciting," he said. "Because of the short season, every game will be like a four-pointer. We've got seven of our first eight games at home, so those will be particularly important." ...

Asked what he has been doing the last three months, McMaster said, "Bothering my wife." ...

Actually, he has been going to the office regularly and making a few trips to scout King prospects perform for Phoenix in the International Hockey League. ...

Wednesday night, McMaster will watch Roadrunner winger Rob

Brown, center Yanic Perreault and defenseman Chris Snell participate in the IHL all-star game in Las Vegas. ...

After the game, Brown, among the league's scoring leaders, will report to the Kings. ...

"You'll see a much more physical team this season," McMaster, 50, says.

Notes on a scorecard:
You work for nearly 30 years as a high school business teacher, college instructor, computer salesman, major league hockey scout, assistant director of player recruitment and junior league executive. ...

Finally, you land the job of your dreams, general manager of an NHL team. ...

So what happens? ...

The league shuts down. ...

Jones

offense until tragedy struck the junior signal caller just five games into the campaign.

Frazier was diagnosed with a blood clot in his left leg that sidelined him for the remainder of the regular season and sent widespread panic through the hearts of Husker fans everywhere.

Nebraska lacked an experienced backup QB to Frazier and began turning to everything from walk-ons, to converting defensive backs for the position until Brook Berringer emerged as the most consistent replacement.

When Jones walked away from NU he was ahead of Berringer on the Husker depth chart (Frazier was still in high school) and had posted the highest spring football completion rate in school history.

Jones said he was slated as the

No. 2 QB after out playing first-stringer Tony Veland in the spring drills, which led to controversy between him and Husker head coach Tom Osborne.

"I felt really positive coming out of (spring) and (Osborne) still had me at No. 2," he said. "I said 'I've done all I can do and my numbers speak for themselves.' But he didn't see it that way."

Surprisingly, though, Jones said he wouldn't have enjoyed the circumstances that surrounded Berringer getting the starting job.

"I was ahead of Berringer when I left so I got a lot of calls when Tommy went out," he said. "But I would have wanted to be known as a guy that earned the spot. I would have wanted the position because of my merit- not because Tommy got hurt."

Jones elected to leave tradition rich Nebraska and considered transferring to Illinois, Wisconsin and Arizona before landing at SIUC.

In eight appearances for the Dawgs during the '93 season (four as a starter), Jones passed for 989 yards as SIUC finished 2-9.

At the conclusion of the campaign, Saluki head coach Bob Smith was released and Shawn Watson was hired to take over the struggling program.

Jones battled fellow senior QB Dave Piercon for the starting job, but lost out and never started a game during SIUC's 1-10 season.

"This was a disappointing year for me, but I don't want to sound like sour grapes," Jones said. "With Watson coming in, he seemed to make his decision a little early about who the No. 1 guy would be. "I just stuck it out and tried to be as positive as I could."

Jones is scheduled to graduate with a degree in advertising this May, but refuses to let his roller coaster college football career ruin his love for the game.

"My friend's say I watch football like a coach," he said. "I'd like to still be playing."

with the two franchises.

The proposed St. Louis Stallions were one of the front-runners for an expansion team, but could not agree on the stadium lease and lost the bid.

The move was put together by FANS INC., a St. Louis based organization, with St. Louis businessman Stan Kroenke buying minority ownership of the team.

The only detail left for the Rams move to become reality is league approval, which will be decided on March 12. To get approval 23 of 30 owners must approve the move.

Before the move St. Louis was the largest television market without an NFL team.

Bears

Graham said. "They're the local team now."

Graham said she may decide to survey KBSI viewers, who cover Southern Illinois, Northeast Arkansas, Western Kentucky and Southeast Missouri, to determine which team they prefer to see.

A similar survey was conducted prior to the start of the 1994 season, the station's first season of NFL telecasts, to determine which team viewers wanted to see.

Surprisingly, the favorite was the Dallas Cowboys with the Bears finishing second.

KBSI elected to show Dallas games instead of Chicago games twice last year, which set off an array of angry Bear fans calling in complaints to the station, some even issuing death threats to station personnel.

Graham said she was happy about the Rams move because she thinks broadcasting a more local team will increase viewership.

Under the current television contract between the NFL and the networks, Fox possesses sole rights to most regular season games involving NFC teams.

The only exceptions are games in which an AFC team visits an NFC squad, which NBC has the rights to ABC's Monday Night Football, along with special Thursday and Sunday broadcasts on TNT and ESPN are not affected.

Bears and Rams fans will both get their way when the two meet in St. Louis next season.

The NFL office has yet to release the dates and times of next season's games, though.

St. Louis has been without an NFL team since the 1987 season when the Cardinals, an NFC team now in Arizona, occupied Busch Stadium.

KFVS-12, the local CBS affiliate covering Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, and Western Kentucky, always made the Cardinals a priority over the Bears when it had the rights to NFC games before KBSI.

"Back then we broadcast the Cardinals exclusively," Randy Ray, KFVS's sports director, said. "Only when the Cardinals were on Monday Night Football would be put on Bear games."

"We were only 120 miles out of St. Louis and the Cardinals were the closest team too us."

But since the Cardinals moved in 1988, KFVS' audience became a Bears audience, which may complicate things for Fox.

"When the Cardinals left, our philosophy changed completely. We became a Bears network," Ray said. "If we were put in the same situation as Fox, it would be a real hard decision."

From a family with little diving background, Wright has surfaced as a promising athlete. His goals are to make it to the NCAA Championships and to compete in the Senior Nationals, which is another prestigious competition.

"All divers can be good on their good days. I want to be great on my bad days," Wright said. "I need to stay focused on the task and concentrate, but at the same time relax."

Wright and Rob Siracusano, a Saluki standout and Olympic hopeful, are diving partners for all the practices. Siracusano, a senior, can see a lot of similarities between himself and Wright.

"Alex has the advantage because he can draw from my experiences," Siracusano said.

Rams: Goodbye LA, hello St. Louis

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Area football fans have something to cheer about as officials for the former Los Angeles Rams and St. Louis representatives have announced that the team will move to St. Louis beginning with the 1995 season.

The Rams organization announced its plans to move the team to St. Louis at a 2 p.m. news conference Tuesday and will start playing at the new 70,000-seat America Center stadium, which will be completed this fall, located downtown in 1995.

The Rams might have to play a couple of home games at Busch Stadium until the dome is completed. The team was looking to move from Los Angeles after attendance dropped and Rams owner Georgia Frontiere had problems with the old Anaheim Stadium in L.A.

The city of St. Louis has been without a professional football team since the Cardinals moved to Arizona at the end of the 1987 season.

Squabbles between owner Bill Bidwell and city officials over a new stadium, the Cardinals poor record and declining attendance were all factors in the Cards move to Phoenix.

Brad Striegel, an unclassified graduate student from Mount Olive, said he is looking forward to the Rams coming to St. Louis.

"I'm glad that St. Louis finally got a team because St. Louis is really a football town," he said.

However, Striegel said that the Rams better come in and start winning before the interest is gone.

"The Rams don't have the best record and we don't want a big loser, so they need to get off to a good start," he said. "That is a big reason the Cardinals left and we don't want that to happen again."

A Cardinal fan when the team was in St. Louis, Striegel said he thinks that SIUC students will flock to the games.

"As long as they put a good team on the field students will want to go and see the football team," he said.

Tom Bishop, a freshman at SIUC from East Alton, an Illinois suburb of St. Louis, said the Rams are going to have a good local fan base.

"I know a lot of people who will support the Rams and it's just great to have a team back in St. Louis," he said.

Bishop said this situation is different from when the Cardinals moved because there were other factors involved besides just a losing record.

Rams move means Bears butted from TV coverage

By David Vingren

There is bad news for Bears fans residing in the KBSI viewing area. Beginning next season, the Bears will be rammed off the air on Sundays for good.

Local Fox affiliate KBSI-23, which has the right to broadcast most Bears and Rams games, will most likely go with the Rams if there is a conflict in schedule between the two teams, station program director Jean Graham said.

KBSI broadcasts most Sunday Bears games last season, but the Rams move from Los Angeles to St. Louis makes them the new hometown choice.

Freshman diver scores high in and out of water

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A freshman diver is making a splash for the SIUC men's team this season after just six meets at the collegiate level.

Alex Wright, a native of Commerce City, Colo., has already met the NCAA qualifying standards for the 1-meter, 3-meter, and platform diving events including back-to-back qualifying performances.

In his first year at SIUC, Wright has come up with life-time bests twice in the 3-meter and once in the 1-meter. At the first meet of the new year, Wright added 40-50 points to his 3-meter scores, and more than 60 points to his 1-meter scores.

Wright is set to compete in the NCAA Zone Championships, where he will battle the Midwestern portion of the country. The Big 8 Conference is included in the competition, as well as Southwest Conference, part of the Southeast, Missouri Valley Conference and the independent universities in the region.

SIUC diving coach Dave Ardrey said he set goals for Wright during the first half of the season to improve consistently.

"It will be a great challenge for Alex because of his recent vast improvement," Ardrey said. "The most difficult thing to do in diving is to dive consistently."

Wright has been practicing 20 hours a week in the pool with weight training on

Even with the heavy extra curricular load, Wright manages to maintain a 3.0 GPA and is thinking about a career in computer science.

"Alex is a very training-focused athlete," Ardrey said. "He was taught by one of the few women coaches in diving today, who did a great job teaching him the basics."

Saluki QB left to wonder what might have been with Huskers

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

When the Nebraska Cornhuskers wrapped up college football's National Championship with a New Year's Day win over Miami in the Orange Bowl, former Saluki quarterback Matt Jones was disappointed.

However, Jones' reason for dismay did not center around the fact that he left the Cornhusker program as a sophomore in 1993 and transferred to SIUC, but rather that he happens to be a "big" Penn State fan.

"I was rooting for Nebraska," Jones said. "But I'm a big Penn State fan."

If the Huskers had slipped up against Miami, the title would have undoubtedly went to the Nittany Lions upon its win over Oregon in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 2.

But an even larger question looms over the head of Jones when he thinks about Nebraska's accomplishments this season—like what could have been if he had stayed with the "Big Red."

NU quarterback Tommy Strazier began the season on a Heisman-Trophy-like pace at the helm of the nation's No. 1
