Former SIUC president dies

MEMORIAL: Professor Derge to be remembered in Shryock service.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

David Richard Derge Jr., a political science professor and former president of SIUC, died of a heart attack Dec. 26 at the age of 68.

Derge, who served SIUC as president from 1972 to 1974 and then as a political science professor, was pronounced dead at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, 405 W. Jackson St.

Derge, who was born in Kansas

City, Mo., had degrees from the University of Missouri and Northwestern University.

He taught at the University of Washington, the University of Missouri and Northwestern University before pursuing graduate degrees from Northwestern and post-doctoral work at the University of Michigan.

He served from 1946 to 1948 in the U.S. Army during the occupation of Japan. He then served with the U.S. Navy until 1968.

Upon his discharge from the U.S. forces, he had attained the rank of commander.

Derge also spent time in the Civil Air Patrol as a lieutenant colonel.

In 1951 Derge married Elizabeth Anne Greene, who died in 1971. He married Patricia Jean Williams in 1972.

Derge had two sons, David Derge III of Los Angeles and William Derge of Carbondale; and two daughters, Dorothy Elb of Santa Cruz, Calif., and Jennie Derge of Carbondale.

Former colleague John Cody, a professor emeritus of political science, said Derge never said anything negative about a student.

"He never had a complaint about anything students had done or about the way things were going," Cody said. "He thought that people who taught political science should be involved in the community in positive ways."

John Pullman, a junior in political science from Carbondale, spoke at the Dec. 30 memorial service at Shryock Auditorium, which about 150 people attended.

Pullman said he believes all political science students will miss Derge.

"We all looked forward to his class," he said. "It wasn't necessary for him to take attendance, because we all would have been there anyway."

"He was a great professor in class and a great friend out of class."

The family is planning another memorial service on campus for students and friends of Derge.

The date for the memorial service has not yet been set.

POWER TRIP: Republican leader disagreements stall funds for new University electrical feeders.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An 11th-hour proposal to fund repairs of SIUC's failing power grid was defeated in the last hours of the 89th Illinois General Assembly last week, State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said.

Disagreements within Republican leadership in the Illinois General Assembly Tuesday defeated a compromise between House and Senate versions of the bill, Bost said.

"We didn't vote on the same bill in both the House and the Senate," he said. "Because we didn't vote in both the House and the Senate, the bill doesn't go anywhere."

The failing power grid issue had been considered dead, but the SIUC Board of Trustees fast-tracked a repair plan in early December. This allowed the introduction of the last-minute bill in the Assembly.

The supplemental appropriations bill, which would have given SIUC $3.3 million for a complete overhaul of its power grid, met with criticism from other legislators as being extraneous, Bost said.

"My question to several people was, 'If we don't get this passed, we're going to light our rooms with candles? Are we going to build little squirrel cages for the squirrels to run in, to generate enough energy to feed our computers?'" Bost said.

"If we were still back in the days where everything was done on paper and handwritten out, great."

"But we're not. In our day and age, you've got to have electricity."

Bost said a new appropriations bill funding power grid repairs would be introduced early in the new General Assembly session, which began last Wednesday.

SIUC has sought funding for the repairs from the state for more than two years.

Five electrical feeders provide electricity to the power grid, but they desperately need to be repaired, said Harry Wirth, SIUC Physical Plant director.

"We have had continuous problems with those feeders and numerous power outages caused by those feeders in the last three or four years," Wirth said.

Wirth and Scott Pike, Physical Plant superintendent of building maintenance, both said main feeder 1 already has lost 25 percent of its capacity.

In September, failure of another of the five feeders, feeder 11, left the Recreation Center, the Brush Towers, the Blue Barracks and part of University Park without

Appeals pending for 10 riot cases

UNIVERSITY WAITS: One SIUC student has already filed an appeal with the University, nine others could follow suit.

RIOT CASES

Out of 53 riot cases, 47 have already been settled.

- 15 suspended
- 17 on probation
- 11 had charges dropped
- 2 received disciplinary censures
- withdrew from SIUC
- 10 in appeal process
- 6 cases not heard

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POUTRES EDITOR

Because of his involvement in the downtown riots the weekend before Halloween, Paul Dintelmann has been suspended from the University for one year.

Nevertheless, Dintelmann is appealing his punishment because he said he wants to stay at SIUC.

"I'm not a quitter," said Dintelmann, a undecided freshman from Belleville. "I don't think what I did was worth being kicked out for. I'm not going to back down."

Fifty-three SIUC students have been summoned before the Student Judicial Affairs Board to discuss their involvement in the riots on South Illinois Avenue on Oct. 26 and Oct. 27, said Sue Davis, University News Service director.

Of those 53 cases, Davis said 47 have been decided. Fifteen students have been suspended, and 17 have been placed on probation. Charges against 11 students were dropped, and two students withdrew from the University. Two received disciplinary censures, which are written warnings.

The six remaining students' cases will be heard this semester, Davis said.

Of the 47 cases decided, Davis said 10 appeals are pending. That means the student either has decided to appeal or the student still has the option to appeal, she said. According to the Student Conduct Code, students have five days after they learn the outcomes of their cases to appeal.

Dintelmann said he learned he had been suspended during finals week. He said he appealed to Judicial Affairs immediately. Last week, he learned his appeal was denied.

Dintelmann said he is meeting with his lawyer today to discuss his next step, appealing to Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs.

According to the Conduct Code, a case can be appealed all the way to the SIUC Board of Trustees. Disciplinary sanctions, including suspensions, are not imposed during the appeal process, the Code states.

Dintelmann said he appeared in court last month and pled guilty to the charge of destruction of property, for which he paid $385 in fines and court costs.

Taylor Novak, a freshman from Park Forest, said he decided to withdraw from SIUC after he was arrested for reckless conduct during the Halloween riots because he was faced with a Judicial Affairs hearing.

"They would have found me guilty and suspended me," he said. "Now the only thing I have to deal with is the law."

Novak said because he was a pre-med student, he did not want a suspension on his record. He said the decision to drop out was difficult because it meant wasting his fall 1996 tuition money and his semester's work.

Davis said the higher number of suspensions that have resulted from Halloween 1996 reflects the findings of the board.

"University officials are going to try to make sure the kind of situation that occurred this past Halloween doesn't occur again," she said.

A higher percentage of students were suspended for their involvement in the 1996 riot as opposed to a similar riot in 1994.

In 1994, 23 SIUC students appeared before the Judicial Affairs Board for their involvement in that year's Halloween riots. Four were suspended.

"The level of violence the board apparently found justifies the more serious penalties," Davis said of the 1996 riot, in which more than $10,000 in property damage was

SIUC administrator dies from cancer at age 58

An administrator who served SIUC for 31 years died of cancer Dec. 8.

Dale O. Dillard, a 58-year-old Carbondale resident, died at 7:45 p.m. at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, 405 W. Jackson St.

He was the director of SIUC labor relations from 1985 to his retirement in September 1995.

His funeral was Dec. 11 at Meredith Funeral Home in Marion.

His wife of 36 years, Ann Elizabeth Dillard of Carbondale, said he was a trusted administrator at SIUC and was unique in his dealings with people, the University, and the union.

He was the brother of Carbondale's Mayor Neil Dillard.

Dale Dillard was involved in Carbondale Junior Sports from 1971 to 1983 and served as president in 1976. Dillard also was a weather watcher for the past 11 years for television station WP5D.

Memorials can be made to Carbondale Junior Sports or the American Cancer Society.

City ordinance requires clear sidewalks

A Carbondale city ordinance requires city sidewalks to be kept free of ice and snow. Within 48 hours after snow stops falling, the ordinance states, residents should clear a 30-inch-wide path on their sidewalks. Residents can scatter sand or cinders on sidewalks if the ice is too thick to remove, immediately. The city will remind those who do not comply with the ordinance, however, a violation can carry a fine of $10 to $500.

Also, cars parked on streets that are designated snow routes can be towed whenever two inches of snow or ice accumulates, so snow removal crews can clear the streets.

Abortion pill delayed in U.S. market

The French abortion pill's introduction into the United States has been delayed because its American sponsor, the Population Council, is seeking to oust an associate who controls the distribution and marketing of the product.

The nonprofit Population Council holds the U.S. patent to the drug called mifepristone, also known as RU-486. The council's business associate, Joseph D. Pike, is a disbarred lawyer who pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor forgery charge in an unrelated North Carolina case last May.

Council officials say they did not know about Pike's disbarment are concerned that the political fallout from Pike's background could compromise the marketing of the drug.

Jackson selected as new University provost

BIG PLANS: As new provost, Jackson says his main concerns will be retention and enrollment.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The former dean of the College of Liberal Arts says he will coordinate the University's enrollment and retention activities as the new vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost.

John S. Jackson, who had been dean of the College of Liberal Arts since 1985, said enrollment and retention are two of his chief concerns.

"Hopefully I can play a leadership role," Jackson said. "Enrollment and retention are one of the most important priorities we have in the University, and now I need to coordinate what all the colleges and Admissions and Records are doing."

The vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost oversees the mission of the University, tenure and promotion, and the academic budget. The provost also plans strategies for enrollment and retention.

As provost, Jackson's salary will be about $122,000.

Jackson said prospective undergraduates need to understand that SIUC is an excellent academic institution, and that it is more worthwhile to attend than a community college.

"Many of our undergraduates don't really know the quality of the research that backs up the faculty member that's standing in front of them, or even why that

Jensen becomes new COLA dean

CHRISTOPHER MILLER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Tackling declining enrollment will be among the challenges of the new acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts, he says.

Robert A. Jensen, associate professor of psychology and associate dean of COLA, assumed the post on Jan. 2 after the college's dean, John S. Jackson, became vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost.

Jensen said, while some departments within the college have healthy enrollments, others are less strong. He said solving enrollment problems is key to avoiding financial trouble caused by declining tuition revenue.

"This is the biggest challenge I have taken on in my life," Jensen said. "I am looking forward to making a difference in the College of Liberal Arts."

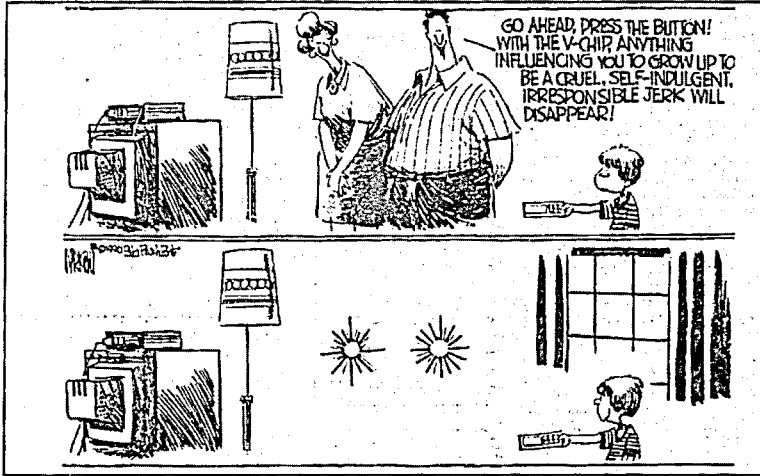

Besides declining enrollment, Jensen said the college faces other immediate challenges, such as recruiting the best possible faculty, between now and August when a permanent dean takes charge of the college.

Another challenge Jensen said he will face is responding to the review of the college's graduate programs by the Illinois Board of Higher Education and SIU President Ted Sanders.

He will remain acting dean until Aug. 15, when

Reality a bittersweet flavor

There are certain rituals with which people should not tamper. Weddings, for example. Funerals. Super Bowl parties. A woman's right to enjoy a daydream or two about her favorite actor while parking down overpriced raspberry cordials. In my favorite music video, a devastatingly attractive British theatre star strolls into an empty house, takes off his hat and coat, and begins singing a popular showtune.

I am firmly convinced that if I watch this video and repeat the mantra "Come to Butt-head" over and over enough times while consuming expensive chocolates, I will reach nirvana, at which point said actor will remove several other articles of clothing, step out of my television set and offer to grant me three wishes (two of which my editor says no one wants to hear about this early on a Monday morning).

Granted, for this to happen, the chocolates I am eating would have to be filled with psychedelic mushrooms rather than raspberry syrup, but I can dream, can't I?

Unfortunately, a friend of mine unwittingly tainted my cordials with bitterness the other day.

I was telling this friend about my high-calorie plans for the evening when, in a move I can only attribute to male-pattern stupidity, he decided this would be an ideal moment to share a bit of celebrity trivia.

"You know [this actor] is gay, don't you?" he asked.

In a move I can only attribute to female-pattern defensiveness, I brandished a pair of pinkish shears I found nearby and snarled fiercely, "Take it back!" before bursting into tears and running from the room.

From a realistic standpoint, I know it doesn't matter. As my friend so reassuringly pointed out, I'll never meet this guy anyway, let alone marry him and bear his children.

But the chocolate just tastes better when you don't know the man you're drooling over already has a boyfriend.

Before I heard this information, I believed I had precisely one medium Sturpee's chance in purgatory of realizing my dream.

It was possible — unlikely, but possible — that I might go to London some day, and that I might happen to run into this actor in a fallout shelter, and that there might happen to be a nuclear holocaust while we were down there, and that we might happen to be the last humans left alive on earth, and that the responsibility of repopulating the planet might happen to fall to us.

But if my friend's information is accurate, my chances have gone from "about as likely as Dan Quayle winning a spelling bee" to "even less likely than Bob Dole being carded at J.B.'s."

It just ruins all my hopes. Besides, men have certain assets that only a self-indulgent, materialistic woman such as I am can appreciate.

Whoever said, "It's not the size that counts" obviously never experienced the ecstasy of a huge credit limit at a Ghirardelli counter.

If my favorite actor would rather date a man than me, I'm okay with that. Hey, it's the '90s. I'm a liberal. Whatever makes him happy.

It's just the thought of another man handling his gold card that makes me sick.

Professor, former SIUC President Derge leaves legacy of inspiration

TO MANY STUDENTS, DAVID DERGE, FORMER SIUC president and political science professor, will be remembered as the quiet instructor with a cramped office in Fauer Hall who had a passion for presidential politics and a drive to help students.

The small office, decorated with stacks of books and papers, was home to a man who was known for his intelligence as a professor and for his controversial views as president during an unstable time in SIUC's history.

As president during the Vietnam War and Watergate era, Derge tried to manage a campus which was coping with scarce state funds and abundant anti-war demonstrations. It was a time of confusion and growth for SIUC, and Derge stepped in to stabilize a campus out of control. Known for firing 104 faculty and staff, which set off three lawsuits, Derge was seen first as a savior in 1972 and then as a sinner by the time he resigned in 1974.

Derge was criticized for his operating procedures when he and his administration tried to streamline higher education during state funding cuts in the early 1970s. Because of these criticisms, Derge helped create a system of search committees to fill higher administration positions with faculty, staff and student input — something still alive today.

HIS CONTRIBUTIONS TO SIUC AND THE WORLD are extensive. He was part of the U.S.-China exchange agreements in 1973 and was a member of the U.S. Advisory Commission on International Educational and Cultural Affairs.

After his departure as SIUC president, Derge and his family made Carbondale their permanent home. Derge taught political science at the University for almost 23 years. A box of unopened letters of job offers was discovered after his death. This box, which contained numerous job offers after his resignation as president and during his instructing career at SIUC, symbolizes Derge's commitment to the University and its students — an unusual loyalty for someone who went from a presidential palace to a hidden cubicle inside the Fauer labyrinth.

Derge came to SIUC from a long professional career as an administrator, educator and bureaucrat in the Nixon administration. He showed us a world of experience and history through his eyes — a gift he left behind to take on our journey through life. Not only did Derge have an open office door, but he had an open heart for students. His death is indeed a great loss for SIUC, but a greater loss for those students who never had him for a professor.

We thank his family for giving students and other community members another chance to say goodbye in a memorial service later on.

"Our Word" represents the consensus opinion of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Welcome

As many of you who are familiar with this newspaper may already know, we occasionally provide another issues-based forum called "Guest Column" for our readers in addition to the Mailbox section. "Guest Column" gives a reader more space to express his or her opinion on an issue than a Letter to the Editor. This semester we hope to run columns written by our general audience every Tuesday and Thursday. Here are a few guidelines:

- "Guest Column" should be no longer than 750 words.
- "Guest Column" should not be a rebuttal to an opinion expressed in a Letter to the Editor. It should be an original idea that has not been explored in the Op/Ed section of the DE.
- Personal attacks will not be published.

Genetics research questioned

Dear Editor:

Here's a disproof of evolution from function/information processing theory and genetics. Evolution says anatomy is inherited from the ordered operation of two functions: the first on genes; the second on organisms. Mutation of the sex cell genes introduces the potential for new traits, and natural selection of organisms eliminate others.

The first clue this can't work is the input is incongruous: it shifts mid-function from genes to organisms. Leaving this aside, evolution cannot work because 1) anatomy is not inherited. All DNA is equipped with instructions for all 20 amino acids used in building organisms. Every organism inherits the same anatomy capacity. Inherited traits can't add or eliminate anatomy; they graft superficial traits onto it and maintain its existing function. DNA is just the local processor in a multiply linked network of enzymes carrying out the anatomy function, not the function itself. 2) Mutation is a translate function. It doesn't add components; it just moves existing ones around. Besides, again, DNA doesn't need anything to increase its anatomy potential. Anatomic diversity, both within comes from diverse instructions to the structurally same DNA. 3) There is no mechanism for eliminating traits. Mutation won't work since this is supposed to add traits (although it can't). If it eliminates traits, it makes natural selection superfluous, while at the same time become its own inverse and does nothing. Extinction won't work because extinguishing a trait with the "accidentally better" new trait. Nor will atrophy or natural variation, since Mendel's law of genetics of the organs that didn't mutate into something else, consistent with medical science conclusively finding that there are no vestigial human organs and that the Biogenetic Law of recapitulation does not exist.

Let's replace the imaginary geologic column with a species table, like the periodic one in chemistry, with number of chromosomes being the method of classification, and let's apply integral area calculus and information processing to figure out how anatomy is being built. It's time to get the modern day alchemists, evolutionists, out of comparative anatomy so the real scientists can do their job.

Housing suit reaches supreme court

STEVENSON ARMS:
Three-year-old case will influence students' right to privacy.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Illinois Supreme Court is scheduled to hear a case Wednesday and rule whether the names and addresses of potential SIUC students can be released if requested under the Freedom of Information Act.

Stan Lieber, an SIUC geography professor and owner of Stevenson Arms, 600 W. Mill St., filed an FOIA request in court May 18, 1993, asking SIUC for the names and addresses of potential SIUC students who inquired about University housing.

Lieber said he asked for the information because in 1992, SIUC officials announced to the three University-accepted housing owners that the practice of mailing out brochures of University-approved housing would stop.

Lieber said SIUC had sent out brochures of Stevenson Arms to potential students in its housing packet since 1966 for a fee.

Lieber is part owner in S & M Enterprises, which owns Stevenson Arms, a University-accepted housing facility for freshmen.

Lieber lost the FOIA case in Jackson County Court in 1995. He won at the appellate level in Mt. Vernon in 1996, which then went to the Illinois Supreme Court. The court agreed last month to hear the case.

Shari Rhode, SIUC chief trial attorney, said enrolled students are protected by federal law to privacy of not having their names released. "Our position is that anyone

Our position is that anyone who contacts the University to get enrollment or housing information has the right to privacy.

SHARI RHODE

who contacts the University to get enrollment or housing information has the right to privacy," she said.

Lieber said he is not asking for the names of any enrolled students, just the potential SIUC students who inquired about living in University housing.

Lieber said SIUC is not giving students under 21 a choice of where they want to live. He said the University is telling the students "you have to live on campus." "Stevenson Arms is $500 cheaper than University housing," he said. "That difference could mean a lot for a student on whether they will be able to attend SIUC."

Rhode said she does not know if SIUC still mails the brochures about University-approved housing options.

The Illinois Supreme Court could take anywhere from one month to one year to rule on the case, Lieber said.

He also has two more lawsuits against SIUC pending in court.

There is a Feb. 4 court date in the 20th judicial court for a lawsuit filed against SIUC in November 1995 alleging that SIUC violated due process by changing freshmen housing policy. SIUC was going to change the policy from allowing under-21 students to live in University-accepted housing limiting them to on-campus housing.

On Dec. 14, 1995, the court ordered a preliminary injunction against SIUC and ordered the University not to change its policy until the lawsuit is dismissed or until the judge changes the order.

Rhode said SIUC has no comment on the due process lawsuit.

Lieber said another lawsuit was filed during July 1996 after the FOIA lawsuit was won in the appellate court. Lieber said after the case was won, he requested the names from SIUC officials and they replied, saying they do not keep those records.

Lieber filed another FOIA lawsuit after the University's reply.

Student in Critical Condition

An SIUC student who SIUC Police say jumped from a highway overpass was released Dec. 26 from St. Louis University Medical Center.

Hospital officials said Mark Watson, 27, a sophomore in psychology from Roselle, was transferred to another facility. Police said Watson allegedly attempted suicide Nov. 20 by leaping from the north overpass that crosses over Highway 51 from Grinnell Hall to the main campus.

Hospital officials were unable to release which facility Watson was transferred to.

Former SIUC Student Charged in Bank Robbery

A former SIUC administration of justice student has been charged in connection with the Jan. 17, 1995, armed robbery of Magna Bank, 601 E. Main St.

Pamela Ramsey, 26, of Bellwood, was allegedly armed with a revolver during the robbery. Ramsey attended SIUC from August 1992 to December 1995. She was charged after a 23-month investigation by the Carbondale Police Department and the FBI.

Police traveled to Lexington, Ky., where Ramsey was incarcerated in a federal facility on a conviction for a Chicago-area bank robbery in April 1995. Carbondale Police Lt. Bob Goro said because Ramsey had been apprehended for the bank robbery in the Chicago area, she was considered a suspect in the Carbondale case.

"She (Ramsey) matched the physical description of the suspect," Goro said. "She then confessed to the bank robbery in Carbondale."

Former Subway Employee Charged with Burglary

Two people were charged Dec. 20 in connection with the Dec. 19 burglary of the Subway Sandwich Shop, 899 E. Grand Ave.

David Gossage, 17, of Crainville, and Danny Smith, 20, of Murphysboro, were charged with one count of burglary and incarcerated in Jackson County Jail. Police said the glass in the front door of the shop was broken, and a cash box was stolen.

Police said they were led to Gossage's arrest by physical evidence collected at the scene and because he was a former employee at the store.

Gossage was unable to post bond. Smith posted bond and was released.

Brown's Recount

Chester Democrat Barbara Brown, the SIUC political science lecturer who lost her Nov. 5 bid for the Illinois Senate to incumbent Sen. Dave Luechtefeld, R-Okaville, by 127 votes, has asked for a full recount of the votes.

Brown asked for the recount after discovering that 600 invalid ballots were counted in Monroe County. The recount request has been assigned to the Illinois Senate's Special Committee on Election Contests.

The outcome of the recount may not be known for months.

New acting director of Admissions and Records

Stephen L. Foster, associate director of Admissions and Records, has been named as acting director. Foster, who is replacing retiring director Roland Keim, will remain acting director until a national search yields a permanent replacement.

Foster also is the chair of the search committee to find a permanent replacement by July 1.

Kustra to head IBHE

Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra was named chairman of the Illinois Board of Higher Education by Gov. Jim Edgar on Dec. 23.

Kustra replaces the late Arthur F. Quern, who died in an airplane crash last year.

Kustra and Quern served as co-chairs of the governor's 1992 task force on higher education.

The following Illinois laws are in effect as of Jan. 1, 1997:

- A law to allow a victim or any other concerned citizen to request in writing a recent photograph of any convicted felon upon his or her release from prison;
- A law to increase the penalties for a second or third violation of the Obscene Phone Call Act to fines of up to $1,000 and one year in jail;
- A law to force municipalities to post signs correctly stating the fine for parking in designated handicapped areas;
- A law to eliminate the possibility for someone twice charged with driving under the influence from being sentenced to supervision a second time. It also prevents someone convicted of DUI from having his or her record sealed or expunged;
- A law to make fugitives ineligible for federal food stamps and federal food stamp benefits;
- A law to require people found guilty of sexual offenses to submit blood specimens to state police for genetic marker groupings.

Freshmen more conservative

SURVEY SAYS:

Volunteer work up, sexual activity down.

THE WASHINGTON POST

The nation's largest annual survey of college freshmen portrays a class that is more civic-minded, more self-confident and more supportive of a range of conservative social values than students have been in decades.

The survey, an important gauge of attitudes and aspirations among college freshmen since it began in the 1960s, reveals many striking trends this year: Record numbers of them are doing volunteer work, interest in careers in law or business have hit new lows, and students seem to think more highly of themselves than ever. A record percentage of students also reported being frequently "bored in class."

On social issues, the survey shows that student support for keeping abortion legal has declined for the fourth consecutive year. And the percentage of students endorsing casual sexual relationships has dwindled to a new low.

More than 250,000 freshmen at nearly 500 universities nationwide took part in the survey, which is being released Monday by UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute. The results are based on responses that freshmen gave to hundreds of questions on their interests, issues in American society, and their plans for the future.

In recent years, college analysts have expressed dismay with the growing apathy that students have shown in the survey about government and politics. That remained low again this year; only about 30 percent said they considered keeping up with current events "very important." But it did not decline, as it has for most of this decade.

In this year's survey, researchers said they were heartened most by the rise of community service. About 72 percent of freshmen said they had performed volunteer work in the past year, which is 10 points higher than it was in 1989. About 38 percent said they volunteer once a week. Both figures are the highest the survey has ever recorded.

College officials said they believed the trend is the result of growing campaigns in the nation's high schools to encourage, even require, students to do community work. "There is clearly more genuine interest in that among students," said Robert Canevari, the dean of students at the University of Virginia. "We're seeing much more of it on campus, and I don't think it's just for most students to pad their resumes."

SIUC freshmen set goals for future

NEW LEAF: Freshmen say they plan to pay more attention to studies, campus life this semester.

EDITOR'S NOTE

This is an ongoing look at the class of 2000 through the eyes of four freshmen, including Kristy Schmidt and Melaniee Bardeley. This story introduces two new freshmen from the class of 2000, Jason Nicks and Chris Novak.

BY TRAVIS AIGN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After his first semester at SIUC last fall, Jason Nicks' expectations of being lost in large classrooms and tough courses were far different than his experiences.

"I expected large lecture halls and almost impossible classes, but all of my classes only had about 20 people," Nicks said.

Nicks, a undecided freshman from Crete, said his first semester in college made him more serious about his future.

"I now see that I have to be serious about what is ahead in life," he said. "I need to get on the ball, study more, pick a major and start working on it."

Nicks said he wants to study architecture, but is unsure what he specifically wants to do in that field, although he will make a decision this semester.

One reason he is anxious to choose a major is because he changed his mind about how long he will be at SIUC.

"I plan on getting into the architect-has helped him realize the importance of getting better grades. After struggling with grades last semester, he said he hopes to make a change this spring.

"I now see that I have to be serious about what is ahead in life."

JASON NICKS
FRESHMAN FROM CRETE

ture school, and I plan on staying all four years," Nicks said. "I joined the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, and I think those guys will probably keep me around."

Nicks said he knew he wanted to join a fraternity in high school and has enjoyed the chance to meet so many people through the fraternity.

Meeting people is also why Chris Novak, a freshman in English education from Chicago, joined the Sigma Nu fraternity.

"I never thought about joining a fraternity in high school," Novak said. "I went to a barbecue (here) one day and was talked into it."

Novak said being in a fraternity junior in high school, had a way of making people understand," Novak said. "He would show movies, and the story was transformed. I want to be that type of teacher."

Teaching English is only part of his goals. Novak said he is interested in coaching and would like to have a career that would take him all the way to the NFL.

"I played football in high school, but I knew that coaching would be the only way that I could be around the sport my entire life," he said.

Novak plans on doing some coaching after he takes a certification test. He hopes to find a job as a coach in a warm place after he graduates.

"I would like to end up in Florida or California," Novak said. "I prefer to brush palm tree leaves off my driveway than to brush snow."

Both Novak and Nicks said they plan to get more involved in the University. Nicks said he is impressed with the number of opportunities there are on campus.

"When I looked through the brochure, I saw all of the clubs and the things the Recreation Center offered," he said. "I plan to get involved in more extracurricular activities this semester."

SNOW

Taiwan, was playing in the snow Sunday with his pet ferret.

Hsu-Ming said because of the snow and the trees losing their leaves, he can see more of the environment.

"I like it because it is white and makes me feel very peaceful," Hsu-Ming said. "And my view is broadened."

But not everyone is fascinated with the snow that has covered Carbondale in the past week.

Rizal Anas, a senior in engineering from Malaysia, said he is used to tropical climate in which the sun shines all the time and rain is the only thing falling from the sky.

However, Anas said he believes the snow has made for fun activities, such as building snowmen, sleigh riding, skiing and snow boarding. While he can appreciate snow, Anas said he does not enjoy a lot of snow for too long.

"In short periods of snow, I like it," he said. "But I'm glad it's not as bad as some places because then I would want to pack up and go someplace sunny."

Yet there still are those who have mixed emotions about the winter season and the changes of weather it brings.

Raymond Sekiya, a sophomore in cine-

The cold weather and snow help me to recognize I need a companion to keep warm.

RAYMOND SEKIYA,

ma from Japan, said it snows once or twice a year in his country. The cold and snow are welcomed by Sekiya because he said most people stay indoors, and the streets are not as crowded as in the summer months.

However, when it snows, Sekiya said he is overcome with feelings of loneliness.

"The cold weather and snow help me to recognize I need a companion to keep warm," Sekiya said.

Still, the snow fulfills a yearning for some students who have only seen snow on television and have waited all their lives to experience it.

"I wish I could send some of this snow home to my family because I think they would really enjoy touching it," Huang said. "But I can only send pictures of the snow home and they say it is beautiful, and I, too, believe it is very ... beautiful."

POWER

power for half a day.

"There is no reason to believe those power outages won't continue or get worse," Wirth said.

University officials have estimated SIUC's power grid, which provides power to most of campus and on-campus housing, could be shut down for several days if another outage occurs.

A power failure in cold weather would be more problematic because electricity is used to power the fans that circulate warm air in most buildings, Wirth said.

Wirth said until SIUC receives money for a power grid overhaul, only emergency repairs to the feeders are possible. However, these repairs actually can weaken the overall structure of the power grid, he said.

"It's similar to patching a tire," Wirth said. "You can patch it once, twice or three times, but every time you patch it, it can weaken the tire further."

A power failure for more than a few minutes would compromise computer systems across campus, particularly hindering students and faculty using an electronic research connection such as the Internet, the SIUC Information Technology director said.

"The central facility computers systems have a limited amount of power supply (during an outage)," Albert Allen, acting director of Information Technology, said. "The computers couldn't run longer than one hour."

"We would lose some equipment immediately, and people would have trouble connecting across campus."

Systems comprising the central facility, which interfaces with many of the individual campus networks, could take some time to start after an outage as well.

"Some of the machines would start automatically in 45 to 60 seconds," Allen said. "Other systems would take up to 45 minutes to start."

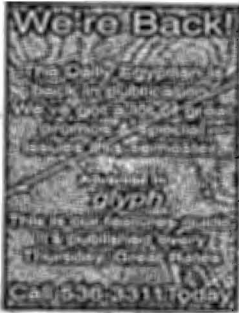

Some students have said they either would be forced to move in with friends living off campus or back home if SIUC was without power for a prolonged period.

"I know this campus is old, but I thought they'd have it (the power grid) solved by the time we got back to school," Terrence Lee, a senior in biology, said.

"If there was a power failure, I'd have to leave. I could stay at my friend's place, but it's a single, so I would probably have to travel back to Chicago."

Rob Levine, a sophomore in psychology from Niles, said the complications of a power failure could be tremendous for students.

"It could disrupt scheduling, and it could mess people up who have plans and want to get home for summer break," he said.

permanent replacement, to be selected from a national search, will take the position. Though he cannot seek the permanent position, Jensen said he is excited about his next eight months as dean.

"I think I probably have my hands full," Jensen said. "Everyone has been very helpful with the transition."

Jensen said heading the college is a challenge because COLA is the biggest academic unit at SIUC, with the most faculty, largest budget and most diverse academic programs of any college on campus.

Jensen began as an assistant professor of psychology at SIUC in 1981, specializing in learning and memory and the effects of drugs on the brain. He has been associate dean of COLA for nine years. As associate dean, Jensen was responsible for budgeting and personnel.

reported. Eight people were treated at hospitals for injuries sustained during the riots.

Assistant Ombudsman Richard Hansen said 13 students have sought help preparing for their hearings from the ombudsman's office.

Hansen said the office's role is to answer students' questions about the hearings, not to tell them what to say to the judicial board.

"We saw several parents as well," Hansen said. "They basically wanted the same type of information: what to expect and whether an adverse decision is final."

Jim Cardosi, stepfather of Andrew Meyer, a freshman from St. Anne who was suspended on charges of involvement in the riots, said he was glad Meyer got credit for his fall 1996 semester at SIUC before he transferred to another school.

"The hardest part of all this for me is being the one paying for it," Cardosi said.

might be important," Jackson said.

Jackson, who began his career as a political science instructor at SIUC in 1969, was chosen as provost by Chancellor Don Beggs on Dec. 12 after an in-house search and several candidate interviews that were open to the public. Beggs' decision was approved by the SIU Board of Trustees.

Jackson replaced Benjamin Shepherd, who announced his resignation last summer following the resignation of Chancellor John C. Guyon. Shepherd has said he will return to teaching zoology at SIUC.

Jackson received a master's degree in political science from Baylor University and then a Ph.D. in political science from Vanderbilt University. Following school, Jackson served as a captain and a lieutenant in the U.S. Army Intelligence Corps from 1964 to 1966.

He and his wife, Nancy, have two children, Jeff Jackson of Fayetteville, Ark., and Jill Jackson of Iowa City, Iowa.

Beggs said he chose Jackson because of the strong support for Jackson by students, faculty and staff who attended the interview process.

"Based on the experience as dean of the largest college on campus, Jackson immediately brings a familiarization of working with large institutions," Beggs said. "Also, in the interview process he projected a positive image in using groups for decision making."

Jackson said because the faculty voted to unionize last November, collective bargaining is another issue he will have to deal with as vice chancellor.

"It's here, and we are going to have to work with it and see to it that we get on through this first contract period as well as we can," Jackson said.

He said he also hopes to move SIUC further into the international arena.

"We need faculty and student

"I may not be in touch as well now, because being a dean for almost 12 years gives you a certain aura as an administrator. But I exchanges with a number of places," Jackson said. "That enriches them and enriches us. There are a number of ways to do that, including grants and personal contacts."

One of Jackson's personal contacts, Nikolai Liventsev, a professor from the Moscow State Institute of International Relations, said Jackson was instrumental in bringing him to SIUC to teach an economics course.

"Through Dean Jackson's correspondence, he organized this trip," Liventsev said. "Jackson has been active in broadening the scope of international contacts at Southern Illinois University."

Jackson said another goal as provost is to keep SIUC on the cutting edge of technology.

"We need to have the opportunity for faculty to upgrade their skills, and I hope to provide some incentives for them to do so," Jackson said. "Many of the departments don't have good equipment, and we've got to work on getting as much equipment upgraded as we can."

Jackson said serving as faculty senate president in 1976 and teaching political science courses up until this semester have given him insight into the opinions of students and faculty.

"My time on the faculty senate gave me a good feel for faculty opinion," Jackson said.

value the fact that I am a full professor."

Jackson said although he probably will be unable to teach this semester, he will try to continue his ongoing research project. For 20 years, he has collected thousands of surveys from Democratic and Republican convention delegates to better analyze the outcome of political events.

"I have a snapshot of the political opinions, political backgrounds, offices held and career paths of every group of delegates between 1976 and 1996," Jackson said.

Jackson is often called upon by local, state and national media as a commentator for election coverage, and he chaired a 1990 committee to evaluate the 1970 Illinois Constitution.

He said the committee examined what the framers of the Constitution intended and how it actually worked out.

Jackson said the state is of critical importance to the University, and as provost he would often have to deal with the state in matters like funding.

"We are, after all, a big state institution dependent upon the state," Jackson said. "I think the University needs someone to relate to Southern Illinois and the state as a whole, and I believe I have some background in doing that."

Army man accused of rape commits suicide

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Pvt. Alan M. May was already fighting charges that he had raped another private at the Army Ordnance Center at the Aberdeen Proving Ground last year when news of a sex scandal broke in November, rocking the Maryland base where he was training.

His case was not connected to the very public investigation that led to accusations of rape and other sexual misconduct against two drill sergeants and a company commander, but the 22-year-old private told his father that he was worried he might not be able to get a fair trial in the midst of the sensation.

May, who had denied any wrongdoing, hanged himself a week ago with the laces from his combat boots. Three days later, on the same day he had been scheduled to face a court-martial, the Army gave May a memorial service.

"It's incredibly sad," said Capt. Margaret Kemmerly Eckrote, the soldier's attorney. He "never got to trial, and his death denies him the possibility of his name cleared."

May was accused in August of raping someone he knew, a fellow private and trainee who has since been transferred and could not be reached for comment. She told investigators that May raped her. He insisted that the sex was consensual. Had he been convicted, he would have faced the possibility of life in prison.

SIUC mourns professor

SHARING GRIEF:
Campus, community remember Derge.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A former Nixon pollster, an SIUC president and a prominent political scientist died Dec. 26, ending his 22 years of teaching at SIUC.

Members of the campus community have been sharing memories of David Derge, a political science professor, since his recent death.

Given his wealth of knowledge and experience in politics and administration, colleagues said Derge had the opportunity to do many things, besides teaching at SIUC. A stack of unopened job offers in Derge's office attest to Derge's devotion to SIUC.

Chancellor Don Beggs, a 1972 President's Advisory Group member under Derge's administration, said SIUC offered the professor an opportunity to do something he truly loved.

"I think he was in an ideal teaching position," he said. "He was able to teach about a topic that he loved and respected."

"I had the opportunity to talk with him about his experiences and about how much he loved teaching."

"He was a person who truly enjoyed being a faculty member," Uday Desai, chairman and political science professor, said most of Derge's classes were filled to capacity as soon as he offered them.

Despite receiving numerous awards for his work from his peers, Desai said those accomplishments were not what Derge considered most important.

"I think he probably thought most highly of the commendations that his students gave him," he said.

"I don't think he worried too much about getting prizes from people who really didn't actually learn from him."

Desai, whose office is in Famer Hall across from Derge's office, said Derge's office was open to everyone who wanted to talk to him.

"It was just an open door, with kids and colleagues flowing in and out," he said. "You'd see students popping in. He'd be talking with them, and there'd be laughter."

One student who frequently visited Derge was Jim Meadows, a sophomore in political science from Murphysboro.

Meadows said he visited Derge between classes, and they would talk about anything from class to world events.

"All everybody talked about was how dynamic he was in his classes," he said. "They said, 'You should take his class, you'll learn a lot in his class.'"

Meadows said he also was intrigued by Derge's experiences in Richard Nixon's administration.

Both Meadows and Desai said they recalled a number of stories Derge told about that period of his career.

"He had stories to tell about those times — stories about Nixon's White House, Spiro Agnew and the Washington establishment," Desai said.

"He had a 1,001 jokes and anecdotes at his fingertips. They were stories, generally, that made a point of humor, follies and faux pas."

Desai said Derge never used his varied experiences and stories to make himself look important.

"It wasn't a sense of name dropping or 'I know all these important people,'" he said.

Desai said although Derge had a number of various experiences, including becoming a president of a university in his early forties, Derge truly loved his roles as a teacher and scholar more than anything else.

"He loved teaching very much, particularly undergraduate teaching," Desai said.

"That was his light."

During Derge's controversial years as president of SIUC from 1972 to 1974, students rioted on campus because of the United States' involvement in Vietnam and burned President Nixon in effigy after Watergate.

Adding to campus problems $2 million dollars was cut from the University's budget base, and SIUC was told to reduce its faculty.

As a result, 104 teachers were fired under Derge's administration, and three of those teachers took up lengthy court battles that were later dismissed.

John Cody, professor emeritus in educational psychology, taught at Indiana University at Bloomington with Derge and came to SIUC in 1965. He said Derge handled the presidency to the best of his ability.

"Basically, there was faculty resistance to any kind of cutbacks, of course," he said.

"But at that point, there wasn't anything else he could do."

David Kenney, a political science professor emeritus, said the social unrest of the early 1970s coupled with Derge mourning the loss of his first wife, proved to be a difficult time for Derge's presidency.

"It was a difficult time all over the U.S. because of student protests and civil rights protests," he said. "It was a tough, difficult time to be a president or a faculty member."

SIUC President Ted Sanders wrote in a statement following Derge's death that Derge was loyal to SIUC and was happy teaching what he loved.

"In an interview in 1973, David Derge said, 'SIUC is where I'm going to make my professional home for the rest of my life,'" Sanders stated.

"He did just that."
