All eyes are on Skylab

WASHINGTON (AP) - Skylab's six-year career as an orbiting laboratory and then as a space station came tragically to a closing chapter Wednesday, its 100,000-pound home pulled apart by the wind, nearly unobserved in the distance.

"We'd like to see those predictions start," said Richard L. Smith, head of the Skylab Task Force as he talked about a final act that would take Skylab and its debris only over water.

The North American Air Defense Command, which track the three buoys on its 36 daily trips around Earth, said Tuesday evening that Skylab candidates "highly qualified"

Groups pleased with finalists

At the SIU community awaits a permanent chancellor to head its newly centralized governance system. The search for the campus constituent groups was surprised with the qualifications of four finalists for the post.

John Yopp, associate botany professor who represented graduate council at interviews that candidates held with constituency leaders, said, "We were surprised to find that SIU could find four such qualified candidates. The situation left us with a good university aspiring to be a very good university. We have the kind of candidates that would come to a very good university."

He said he felt many people on campus were not pleased with the Board of Trustees decision to centralize the SIU governance structure, adding that he was "pleasantly surprised to see the chancellor search council and the board work so well together" to find the newly created chancellor position.

"The board listened to the search council, and that was a good conduit for getting opinions to the board," he said.

Joan Marks, representative from the council of civil service employees, said that the search council did "a marvelous job in acquiring candidates with outstanding qualifications."

My major interest was the candidates' ideas about constituencies groups support," she said. "We've had several diverse constituency groups working with the campus administration in the past, and I am concerned with keeping that going. Not many universities have that type of involvement going for them."

Colleges get fair share, IBHE says

By Robert Lee Zimmer

The Illinois legislature was fair in its treatment of the state's higher education system, and distributed money to the colleges and universities in a manner that distributed money to the colleges and universities in a manner that distinguished the state Board of Higher Education said Tuesday. However, James Furman, the state Board of Higher Education rejected the statement of Illinois University board of trustees, who said the board recommended, inflation will hit them hard, with the employment枯竭也不例外.

Furman also expressed disappointment and concern that the legislature ignored the board's recommendation of a grant of $27 million to Illinois University.

The board had asked for $225 million in general revenue funds for higher education, and the legislature trimmed the request to $164 million. It is now up to Gov. James Thompson, who favored $260 million, to decide whether to approve a greater appropriation.

When other sources of funds, such as tuition income, are added, the higher education system will have an operating budget of $1.2 billion this fiscal year.

The money appropriated by the legislature this spring would allow for average faculty salary increases of 7.5 percent, which is one-half percent more than the board thought could be provided.

Even at that, Furman said, it would be difficult for everyone. We all are victims of terrible, terrible inflation in this country.

Northern Illinois University asked the board earlier this year to approve the transfer of the director of the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Leno our hall, said the alternative was closing the financially troubled school, which has an enrollment of 520 including 317 part-time students.

Press talks legislators' acts out of context: Buzbee

By Bruce Rodman
Associate Editor

With the politics of special interest and single-interest groups putting even more pressure on the people of Illinois to try to get their way, by taking actions out of context is criticizing legislators, state Sen. Kenneth Buzbee said Tuesday.

This is abuse is making citizens increasingly cynical of public officials and the two-party system, Buzbee said. His remarks were made to an audience of about 30 elementary school teachers and second-graders attending a Robert A. Taft Institute for Government at SIU.

"The public is a lot more aware now, and people are much more cynical now. I don't think there are any school boards that are public officials who are very pleased or are very happy," Buzbee said.

The General Assembly is not entirely blameless when it comes to criticism, he added. "We make a lot of mistakes. We are a lot of good things, but they certainly aren't intended to be good. Much of this is because of the people who take the task we're in, particularly the last few months to six weeks of the session."

Legislators in Springfield, Gov. James Thompson said Monday, could play up one statement or action which results in a negative image for a legislator, he said. As an example, Buzbee said a paper ran a story which accurately quoted him as criticizing Gov. James Thompson for signing a contract that contained pay raises for state employees.

But what the story failed to emphasize, Buzbee said, was that he was criticizing Thompson because the legislature had not yet appropriated money called for under the contract, not because he disagreed with the pay raises.

Buzbee told the teachers, "The Legislature is a melting pot of ideas. And when we reach compromises, we're accused of compromising our principles. At the risk of sounding overly cynical of the press, you have to teach your kids not to believe everything they read."

The general public no longer looks to the press for guidance on issues, Buzbee said, because "a capsule of the world is presented to them in 30" (Continued on back page)
Kamarasy in compliance with state law. The EPA filed charges against him.

The Pollution Control Board then issued a cease and desist order against Kamarasy and demanded he pay the fine but failed to comply with the order. The EPA then said it could take no further action and told Womick the matter would be referred to the state's attorney. Womick did not know whether the EPA ever made such a request. He then filed suit against Kamarasy and his wife and the Union Hills Lagoon Owners' Association on December 13, 1978.

"Kamarasy tried to delay and confuse the matter repeatedly," Womick said.

A woman said she had received another court hearing to take action against Kamarasy for "his blatant contempt of the court's order."

Meanwhile, Kamarasy maintains that he is taking action to resolve the problem. He has formed a corporation called the Makans. Sewerage Corporation and has applied for a certificate of operation with the Illinois Commerce Commission.

Kamarasy wants to form a for-profit company and then transfer the lagoons situated at Union Hills into that public utility. He said it would then operate the lagoons and many people who use the sewer services.

Womick said the city administration "violently opposed this action by Kamarasy and Womick plans to testify against it at the ICC hearing."

"Mr. Kamarasy is not a fit person to operate a public utility."

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) - Four armed men took a National Park worker hostage on Monday night, said officials, themselves 750 feet underground in the Carlsbad Caverns lunchroom, authorities said.

Bob Crisman, Caverns management assistant, said four men apparently have "two shotguns and two high powered rifles," and were demanding $1 million, an airplane to fly to Brazil.

"They have barricaded themselves underground lunchroom area. They've taken one National Park seasonal employee as a hostage. She just happened to be there at the time," said Crisman.

Woman to head Washington office

WASHINGTON - Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, shuffling his administration, Tuesday named a woman to head the state's Washington office and summoned its former director to Springfield for a top job on the governor's staff.

Gavie Cozens, 42, an expert in federal aid to states, became the new chief of the state's Washington office, which lobbies more federal funds for Illinois and measures favored by the governor.

IBHE OKs program funds for colleges

By Jacques Koszczak Staff Writer

The Illinois Board of Higher Education approved Tuesday allocations for 19 programs which have been operated jointly by universities and colleges in the state. The funds, totaling $8.6 million, were allocated to support new and continuing programs, eight of which SIU participated in.

The SIU programs include the Southern Illinois Collegiate Common Market, the Small Business Development Center network, a statewide educational program for the aged, a program for college-based instruction in the classroom, the Illinois Theatre Company, the Rockford Regional Academic Center, and the 1860 Federal Census for Illinois Conversion Project.

In other action, the IBHE reviewed responses from groups responding to a survey on the availability of a college education in the state. The board also received suggestions from 30 organizations, ranging from university governing boards to student groups.

The survey, which was prepared by the IBHE staff, asked whether higher education should be made accessible to traditional "non-students," or those qualified individuals who do not go to college for financial hardship, or other reasons. Secondly, the report questioned whether qualified students should be able to choose from any public or private institutions in Illinois through increased state aid.

The IBHE staff also asked for a reevaluation of how the cost of higher education is shared by students and the state. Principally, the survey seeks to learn if students pay one-third of the total cost of their education.

SIU Acting Chancellor James Reagan said the board "one-third rule" should be reconsidered. He said, "A new board policy needs to be developed. There is no institution in Illinois that charges students one-third the cost of their education." Apparent tuition in Illinois averages about 28 percent.

Brown said he does not think tuition should be raised to the one-third level. "I'm a low-tuition, or no-tuition person," he said. "Education is a right, not a privilege, and having any sort of tuition at all is an unnecessary corruption." He said a new board policy is necessary to clearly define the responsibilities of students and the state.

Brown told the board that increased state support for private schools helped to boost enrollments at those schools, but it did so at the expense of public institutions which are experiencing declining enrollments.

Board to meet in closed session

By Ray Robinson Staff Writer

Board of Trustees will be briefed Wednesday night on the one-year review of the University community to the four finalists for the SIU chancellorship, according to Chancellor Search Assistance Council member Ray Robinson.

Chairperson Keith Sanders will meet with the board for the first time this month. "We will be going over its report to the board," Sanders said last week that the board had "made a commitment" not to make any judgments about the candidates until they had been advised of the reactions to the candidates who have each visited the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses.

Caballero, acting as spokesman for the candidates in Sanders' absence, said Tuesday that a total of 300 people from Carbondale and Edwardsville had filled out evaluation forms on the candidates and returned them to the council. Since Thursday, the council has been evaluating the forms and preparing its report to the board.

Caballero said about 200 people had expressed opinions about the candidates informally to the council, through phone calls or letters.

Of SIU's seven constituency leaders, the five who were available for comment Tuesday declined to say which of the candidates they favored.

Faculty Senate President Lawrence Dennis told the senate Tuesday that the constituencies leaders had met Monday and ranked the candidates from one to four.

But Caballero said the search council would present its rankings to the board, only after several discussions.

Jobless forecast raised

By Owen Ullman AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration is releasing its official forecast for unemployment by the end of next year from 6.2 percent to 6.9 percent, an increase of more than 700,000 jobless people, administration sources said Tuesday.

The new unemployment figure, which some economists are expected to brand as still optimistically low, is contained in a mid-year reviewed economic forecast scheduled to be released later in the week.

The forecast is expected to be gloomy, saying higher inflation and possibly a recession as well as higher unemployment.

Officials at the White House, the Council of Economic Advisers and the Office of Management and Budget refused to confirm or deny the new figures, provided by several administration sources.

The revised Phillips curve, in line with President Carter's predictions last month by oil 6.6 average in 1980 and 1981, add 2 to 3 percentage points to the inflation rate and make a recession more likely.

Administration officials have revised downward their outlook for economic growth this year, predicting zero growth instead of the 2.2 percent growth forecast earlier. If this happens, it means the economy will dip into a mild recession at least.

Last month, the unemployment rate dipped to 5.4 percent.

The administration's latest official unemployment forecast, issued last January, predicted the jobless rate would climb to 6.2 percent by the end of this year.

In space no one can hear you scream.

Don't let government officials reinstate the draft

Not enough is being said regarding the possible re-introduction of the draft and registration for all males between the ages of 18 and 30. There are currently seven bills in Congress that could revive draft registration, encourage a draft inducement system, or create compulsory "National Service" programs.

Whether or not any of these legislative proposals should become law would have a profound impact on the civil liberties of those affected by the legislation. Under Senate Bill 109, males between 18 and 30 on January 1, 1981, and under the House version (H.R. 4400) males turning 18 after December 31, 1980, would be registered by the Selective Service System. Registration would be required by law to notify Selective Service when they change their address, temporarily leave the country, and in some cases, change jobs. Registrants would be liable for classification and examination, both physical and mental, in order to determine availability for induction for training and service in the Armed Forces beginning January 1, 1981.

Under the House version, the President would be required to report to Congress by January 15, 1981, his recommendations on such issues as the possible induction of women and whether to conduct registration face-to-face or through an automatic system of ruling names from school records and other sources after a waiver of the Privacy Act. The Senate bill would require a report to Congress by July 15, 1980, of recommendations for reform of the Military Selective Service Act.

The need for any draft legislation is questionable since the President already has full authority under Section 3 of the Military Selective Service Act to begin registration through a Presidential proclamation when military conditions require him to do so. Past Congresses have always committed this critical decision to the Commander-in-Chief (Congress still maintains some control over the procedures through the appropriation process.)

What is the chance that draft registration prior to mobilization will materialize? I doubt that it will happen. Under the most recent Defense Department emergency mobilization timetable—the most stringent in history—Selective Service must provide the first inductees 30 days after mobilization.

With upgraded computer capability, the Selective Service System has stated it will be able to meet this mobilization timetable without peacetime registration. The Congressional budget office reported in November, 1978, that inductees would begin only 13 days sooner with peacetime registration.

The 13 days saved by peacetime registration would not produce trained people sooner because of the time it would take to expand Department of Defense training facilities. The Secretary of Defense and the Acting Director of the Selective Service System both oppose registration at this time, and favor alternative means of upgrading mobilization capabilities.

Historically, amendments and extensions to the draft law have been brought to the floor in separate legislation and never as an addition to the defense authorization bill. This year, after very limited hearings, the unprecedented decision was made to attach amendments to the Selective Service Act to the authorization bill only to find a filibuster prevented this legislation from even coming to the floor. An issue of such importance with serious personal and fiscal implications, should be handled as separate legislation and be fully debated on its merits.

This brief summary of legislative proposals for the Selective Service Act does not call attention to all the issues or legislative proposals. However, they are representatives of a congressional movement that would deprive us of our civil liberties. We must act to protect ourselves.

The Space-age technology: Quest for the best

by Jim McCarthy
Editorial Page Editor

First there were only rumors cost side with a chuckle and a "No, wouldn't THAT be some hight?"

But now, reports of a planned speculation have been verified. Yes, "it" will happen. The 78-ton conglomerate of space-age technology known as Skylab could actually come screaming down on people in Illinois weighing as much as two and one-half tons. Parts of it will come down in an unanswered question now where they will strike.

The NASA people know that by firing the rockets on Skylab, they can delay its fall by a few hours. They will do this if it starts to fall over, say Chicago where since 1973 it has passed on an average of one to three times every day unnoticed by most even though it has been visible at night.

And while people know the danger, signs of panic aren't abundant. For the most part, it's been business as usual.

And why shouldn't it be? After all, if a 2-ton chunk of steel happens to select a course that ends on top of your home, there isn't much you could do about it, except of course, get out of the house. And the NASA people say there is no way of telling where it will land until about two hours before it lands. That doesn't leave much time to pack.

But despite the possibility of death, injury, or damage, few have notified the experts of blame at which the possibility of death is the only concern.

Accusations of conspiracies haven't been offered.

Perhaps this is a sign that as a nation we still maintain some control over our fate. Oddly, the American passengers association grades headquaters after the DC-10 went down over Chicago. There were no reports of non-experts telling the experts what to do or the experts occassionaly making mistakes.

But it seems more likely that the generally calm attitude most people have about Skylab is because Americans, for the most part, seem ready to accept the consequences of their actions. If those fingers of blame are pointed at the NASA scientists, they will quickly construct when their owners were asked, "Where were your objections when we put the using up there six years ago?"

For there were very few objections to the Skylab operation. And there is no way we can put this one on the Soviets, the politicians, the press or the "power structure" whatever that is. If we could, you can be sure we would. But Skylab in our baby. It has, along with the rest of the space program, been generally regarded as a noble venture.

Presidents promise "no more squabbling"

On the first day of summer semester, Pete Alexander and Gary Brown met over the offices of Undergraduate Student Government (UGS) to discuss the fall term with the Student Council President, respectively.

In the following interview, the new student representatives discuss some of the problems that have plagued student representation in the past and their plans for avoiding them in the future.

D.E.: Both of you have promised to work together on issues of student interest. Since you represent different constituencies, why is it so important to work together?

Brown: Last year, the Board of Trustees requested input from the constituency leaders on a proposal for a $24.60 semester Bond Retirement Fee. Ricardo Caballero-Aquino (then GSC president) talked to Kevin Wright (then student trustee) and some other members of the board. It turned out that the board probably would have compromised on the fee and lowered it to about $29. So Horrorn went to the board prepared to ask for that. But Martin Smith (then vice president of USG) asked the board to do something similar on their own, so to the board members, it looked like the student representatives were trying to outvote each other.

D.E.: Was that a result of a lack of cohesion between the two student bodies, or was it just a matter of getting away from the Board of Trustees?

Brown: I mean it's a matter of getting together every once in a while to talk. Why isn't it done before?

A: Well, Brown, if you have done something, there must be some changes that haven't happened yet. One thing is that we're trying to do something good for each other. I believe that Student Government and in the GSC didn't know. So when we've gotten together with anything in the past, we've always found that something good could be done. So even though Pete and I represent different constituencies, we can get together well.

D.E.: How do your constituencies' needs differ? Do you think you have more good for one of you and bad for the other?

Brown: The Student Activity Fee is a good example. The GSC has no need for any increase in that fee.

A: Alexander: But because of the make up of our constituency, we do see a need for it. More than 300 student groups asked us to fund last year. I think many of these groups have been neglected in the past. This is not a hypothetical case, but I think that when the student senate meets this fall, it will want an increase in the activity fee to help out more of these groups.

Brown: But we even though we disagree on the issue, we got together and talked it over. When it comes time to tell the Board of Trustees what we want, we won't surprise each other. There may be the occasional difference of opinion, but we want to make sure that when this happens, it won't appear that we're fighting. We have to try to represent our constituents as effectively as possible, but we also remember that the common good of the students is bigger and more important than either of us as individuals.

D.E.: How does the student trustee fit in to the effort to work for the good of the students?

Brown: The thing you have to remember about the student trustee is that once he gets on that board, he's there representing the Interests of the State of Illinois. And there may be some conflict between what's good for the student body and what's good for the State of Illinois.

Alexander: Exactly.

Brown: The advantage of having a student on the board is that he's here all the time. We have easy access to him. He has a student viewpoint on the board. But I mean he's going to be representing our position. If he has access to information on the faculty and student views, we'll respect his position.

Alexander: If there is going to be a student on the board, we think it's important for him to maintain Bob's credibility with the other board members. (Bob Saul is the new student trustee.)

D.E.: You've made the point that you two and Saul will try to work together. Let's talk about some changes underway in the separate operations of the two governing bodies.

Brown: Alexander: We're working on some changes. We're incorporating a new Undergraduate Student Organization, the name of which still needs to be decided. We're trying to find the name of student government when the senate meets in fall. Right now all we know is that there are some plans. If I hope to finish it in time to mail it to all senators by the end of the next semester. The major changes are that presidential candidates must have 100 signatures to get their names on the ballot. In the past they didn't need any. But we also hope to change the petition requirements for senatorial candidates to encourage more candidates to run.

D.E.: Is that a result of a lack of cohesion between the two student bodies, or was it just a matter of getting away from the Board of Trustees?

Brown: I mean it's a result of a lack of cohesion between the two student bodies, but we've always found that something good could be done. So even though Pete and I represent different constituencies, we can get together well.

D.E.: What will happen if this change is passed and a senator misses three consecutive meetings?

Alexander: Automatic impeachment.

D.E.: Any other changes?

Alexander: We've redrafted the duties of many people in the executive branch. Peter Blacker, current president, used to do the sole responsibility of chairing senate meetings. Now Chris has been adding the duties of the GSC president to the role of a senator. We have to try to represent our constituents as effectively as possible, but we also remember that the common good of the students is bigger and more important than either of us as individuals.

D.E.: How can this benefit students?

Alexander: The other night the council discussed moving the transportation system for the city. This might mean that we can't get to campus because we may be going by the time it's done. But for students five years from now, it will be very important. We've got to have a good system of representation.

D.E.: You've adopted a new motto for student government. "Be part of it. What kind of response have you gotten?

Anderson: It's been pretty good so far. A lot of students have come in this week and asked where to go and what they can do. We've been busy. There's plenty of work.

D.E.: Such as?

Anderson: We've got so many committee positions to fill that I couldn't even tell them all. We need many responsible students as committee members. As committee members, we can get to committee positions. If we fill all the committee positions, we can fill all the student positions in the GSC. The student positions are filled, there are people to do this and that.

D.E.: You said "a lot" of students have responded. How many?

Anderson: It's too soon to tell. But there were three people a day since we put out the flyers a couple of weeks ago. We expect to get more responses when we start setting up information tables in the cafeterias. We've been doing it informally so far, but by fall we should have tables set up regularly so people can find out what they can do and where they can start. And in the meantime, people have just walked up here. (Third floor offices in the Student Center.)

D.E.: Do you think the students agreed?

Brown: I'm quite sure, I think we're bigger voice once we set around. I think Dr. Swilson (Bruce Swilson, director of student affairs) summed it up well when he said students are represented much more effectively if we don't waste all our time squabbling among ourselves. That has happened and I don't believe it will happen again.

You know, I really don't rather talk about this here. I understand that I can't tell you what to write or what not to write and that you can always write something, but I'd rather not talk about this anyway. The reason I'd rather not talk about our squabbles is that I don't want the law students to get the impression that I'm taking advantage of them and sending them off the press. That would only serve to aggravate the situation. The truth is that we have our differences and they're honest differences. The law students haven't been included in our meetings and the money available for travel to conferences. Graduate students have been meeting separately and I don't know how to get them all into one conference and that sort of thing. All we have to do is find a way to accommodate everyone. And I can do that by working together. Those are the conclusion.

Brown: Alexander: I'd pick up the phone and call Woody Hall and see if someone wants to get the job, what you tell him?

Brown: I'd pick up the phone and call Woody Hall and see if someone wants to get the job, what you tell him?

Brown: The medical students come to Carbondale for their first year of med school. Then they go to Springfield for the second year and get to see their classmates. It's hard for them to get organized right away. So it's only last year that any serious action can be taken by anyone who might affect them. I mean the law students and the graduate students would benefit from the GSC and the law students would benefit from the GSC and the graduate students would benefit from the GSC and the law students would benefit from the GSC and the graduate students would benefit from the GSC.

D.E.: Do you think that you'll be able to do it this year?

Brown: Well, there were so many things that happened in the past year that a lot of work has to be done. It's too soon to tell. But we'll wait until the medical school gets going.

Brown: I don't think that would be practical. I see problems in many issues. We both have the same view on things like Student Activity Fee increases or Athletic Conference membership. We can keep those fees down more effectively if we work as a team. I'm sure the students agree.

Brown: I'm not sure that's the case. We've been working together well since I started working with you. I'd like to see that it doesn't happen again.

D.E.: Do you think the law school has students no longer be in the GSC that they would rather split off into their own body?

Brown: I don't think that would be practical. We see this in many issues. We both have the same view on things like Student Activity Fee increases or Athletic Conference membership. We can keep those fees down more effectively if we work as a team. I'm sure the students agree.

Brown: I'm not sure that's the case. We've been working together well since I started working with you. I'd like to see that it doesn't happen again.

D.E.: Do you think the law school has students no longer be in the GSC that they would rather split off into their own body?

Brown: I don't think that would be practical. We see this in many issues. We both have the same view on things like Student Activity Fee increases or Athletic Conference membership. We can keep those fees down more effectively if we work as a team. I'm sure the students agree.
Chancellor search group members will finish job with mixed emotions

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

Like the pot of gold at the end of a rainbow, the Chancellor Search Assistance Council sees the end nearing and with mixed emotions is waving goodbye to its extracurricular duty.

The twelve-member council is headed by Keith Sanders, professor in speech communications. The diverse backgrounds of the teachers, students, managers, and a bank president from both SIU-E and SIU-C which make up the council, came together to search out the best person for chancellor.

Sanders, relieved of his summer teaching duties and assigned full-time to the Council, said the last four months have been made up of "full day weeks".

"It has been unquestionably a major commitment by everyone on the Council," Sanders said. "Since most of the people work an eight-hour day, we decided to have the meetings at night or on the weekends. Council meetings usually last three or four hours but what takes up a lot of time is getting to and from the meeting, besides having the meeting itself."

The council also spent two weekends in St. Louis which caused strains on the members' social and family lives, he said. "I've become unpredictable."

Ricardo Caballero Aquino, graduate student in history and one of two students on the council, said.

Caballero says he only has two or three hours a day 'o work on his doctoral degree because of the time he spends on Council work. He said that being on the council has cramped his style. "but if he had to do it over again he would."

"When the Council first met in April, I was still Graduate Student Council President. It was hard to handle both positions," Caballero said.

Although serving on the Council meant giving up some recreational activities, Caballero said he learned a lot. "When we were in St. Louis, I had to bypass the beautiful swimming pool just to interview chancellor candidates," Caballero said.

The other student on the Council, Kathy Chappell, said she took off from school for the summer and is glad she did. "I enjoyed being a graduate student in the MBA program at SIU-E and said she could not have handled both school and her work on the Council. She also works an eight-hour-a-day job as a research analyst in the Office of Research Projects at SIU-E.

"I'd definitely be on the Council again if I had to."

Sanders said the group has been "conscientious, impartial and very enduring in their duties." He said he is pleased with the council and that they deserve special praise.

For Sanders himself, he said he is looking forward to taking a two-week vacation after the Council disassembles about mid-July.

"I want to catch up on my academic duties, and on a neglected doctoral candidate," Sanders said.

Sanders said he will be glad to see his family again and hopes that "maybe the family don't won't back when I come home anymore."

Squid team members compete in National Wheelchair meet

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

Three members of the Squid, SIU's handicapped athletics team, competed in the 25th National Wheelchair Games held June 13-17 at St. John University in New York. The games were sponsored by the National Wheelchair Athletic Association.

"Everybody there is striving for excellence," said Mike Shipton, a SIU athlete who took fifth place in the swimming event and seventh place in the track event.

"The people there have learned more than just how to handle their wheelchairs. They have taken their ability in the wheelchair past the maximum. The experience really taught me what the rest of the people on wheelchairs around the country are doing," he said.

Shipton, a senior in journalism, of justice, competed in track events before he was confined to a wheelchair. He said he feels its very important for the handicapped to be active.

"I've ran a 440 yard race and I've pushed a 440 yard race in a wheelchair," he said. "There's no difference. It's hard work either way."

Cheryl Toomey, a senior in speech pathology, and sophomore placed eighth in the track event and sixth in the archery event.

"I love wheelchair sports," Vollbach said, "I have been competing in the games since 1974. The competition really helps to build self esteem and a sense of respect."

According to Richard DeAngelis, the Squid's coach, the athletes were placed in categories according to their abilities performed in a wheelchair. The categories range from one to four. Category one designates the most handicapped athlete and the fourth category designates the least handicapped.
Synergy offers drug, crisis prevention programs

By Jordana Gold
Staff Writer

People that work there call it "the dome." Those that walk by are not aware of it. The New World Dictionary defines it: "to work. Widen. developed or cooperative action or force"

It is Synergy, an alternative organization for peer counseling and drug counseling and a member denomination in a red, dome-shaped building.

Synergy was started in 1973 by some "street people," who were worried about the way people were being led to drugs.

Bill Vollmer, one of those "street people" and now research and development specialist says that people in trouble are not as experienced with drugs as the people who use them now.

"The potential for a negative experience was high," he says. "People would be put in the hospital if they had a bad experience."

Synergy was initially created as a part of SIU. The executive committee consisted of directors of the Inter-Church Counseling Center and other community organizations.

The members had an equal amount of people they served in 1973. Synergy became an independent private agency in 1977.

Vollmer emphasizes the fact that Synergy offers are many. They have Emergency Services, Counseling Services, and Community Programs as the three main groups in the agency. Services within those groups are 24-hour Crisis Intervention, the main emergency service that Synergy provides. There is a 24-hour walk-in and phone service, in addition to a "go out" team which will provide aid at the scene of the crisis at any time. The team is composed of staff, graduate students of the Psychology Department and Counseling Center personnel.

They also provide emergency services for individuals who need it, emergency food and a community meal service which will provide information about resources available in the area. Counseling services are a "pivot point."

Margaret Flanagan, community programs coordinator, said:

"Synergy's counseling programs range in degree. Its peer counseling program emphasizes the similarities between the patient and counselor. It recognizes that the patient and counselor are people and it is held in an informal setting. The outpatient counseling program helps people to reduce or eliminate their consumption of drugs.

Flanagan says that the community programs do not use scare tactics. They teach drug education all over the area. They have seminars for teachers and show the long term effects of different drugs. Synergy also offers job counseling to the "street people" to deal with drug reactions.

"The heaviest trauma times for people are finals weeks, the first month of fall semester, and after New Years," according to Vollmer.

Synergy has 13 paid staff members and 44 trained volunteers. They are all trained in CPR and first aid resuscitation. It only takes a little arithmetic to see that with a $15,000 budget and 33 paid staff members that the people who work there don't make very much money.

"There is an opportunity to be idealistic here. You don't find that in many places," Vollmer said.

1979 Summer Semester Final Examination Schedule Information

Because of the limited number of examination periods available, no final examinations of 3 or more hours are scheduled for the Summer. The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by assigning examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes only. Any questions can be provided for which answers can be provided at this time.

1. Classes that meet longer than one hour on Tuesday and Thursday, such as four credit hour classes, should use the examination period designated for the earliest class in each sequence. For example, a class meeting only from 7:30 to 9:00 on Tuesday and Thursday would hold its examination at 9:00 a.m. on Tuesday, August 2.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examination in their regularly scheduled room. In the case of space that does not have sufficient space in advance of the final examination date to provide sufficient notice for all.

The following points are also pertinent to the final examination schedule:

1. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for an adjustment to the make-up examination period for which their students are to be held. Students cannot be held on examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examination in their regularly scheduled room. In the case of space that does not have sufficient space in advance of the final examination date to provide sufficient notice for all.

2. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an exam before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information about the proper grade and credits given to students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be provided in the Annals and forwarded to members of the administrative staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the course.

1. One credit hour courses and classes scheduled for no more than four credit hours have their examinations during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the two formal final examination days.

Woman hears different drum

By Debbie Drues

Student Writer

If you have had an opportunity to see either a Carbondale band that plays rock and folk music in the '60s and '70s, then you probably notice there is something going on about the music. Its uniqueness is not due entirely to the music they play, even though it's hard to find a band that is not connected to many of the things that are made of great music of that era. The band is different also because its leader is a woman, Maritza Ziglar.

The rest of the band is male. Women in bands usually sing or play piano or guitar, but women drummers are certainly rare. Ziglar, a 21-year-old SIU junior, has started playing the drums when she was 14. This was shortly before she left her St. Louis, Ill., home and moved in with her sister, following a trying period of life on the streets.

At 15 she bought her first drum set. "Before that I was practicing by beating on an old chair with some drumsticks," she said.

At home she moved out of her sister's house to live on her own. She was becoming serious about playing professionally.

Before becoming a Vegetables, Ziglar spent a lot of time calling Rock Bottom which played the drums as a professional.

She stayed with Rock Bottom for a year and then joined the Vegetables after its drummer left last March.

With the Vegetables Ziglar is playing the kind of music she likes best. "I don't care for music that's made up for the dance floor. I only want to play something like this," she said. "I like what the Climax Blues Band does. I heard them surgery was doing a few years back. That music has more feeling to it."

She said since musicians tend to record individually in studio, the music has lost its spontaneity and that many of the good bands have "copped out" on their music because of pressures and money.

Ziglar said that although most of the people who have approached her in bars are complimentary, occasionally some ask why she is not doing something more feminine.

She said that a woman in Chicago, Ms. Milligan, has remarked that she "just can't understand why any woman is in a rock band."

Ziglar also commented on a recent story that said "Vegetables for getting stewed," in which the reviewer Ziglar had actually been. "I could use a little more muscle. More music," Ziglar laughed. "I couldn't believe he said that."

She wasn't upset by the comment, but, she said, "there were a few women who told me they thought it was sexist."

Versatile Broadway artist dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Corinna (Otis) Skinner, versatile Broadway actress, humorous and immensely popular cross- dresser, died of cancer and an author with a satiric bent, died Monday at her home in New York.

Her best known written work in collaboration with Emily Kinney was "Nothing Sacred: Women Were Young And Gay," which set new standards for what was going on in 1942. Young and gay. She was a formidable thespian, her acting skills surpassed every other around.

Her grace to the theatre of her career that made her a widely travelled solo performer. She did not like the word "many" because she felt it made "it. It makes people think of boxes that talk too much."

Born in Chicago, Miss Skinner was the daughter of the renowned Miss Skinner, regarded in his day as one of America's finest actors. Her mother was Madeleine Durkin, herself a gifted actress.

After education at Bryn Mawr college and the Sorbonne in Paris, the fledgling Miss Skinner made her professional appearance in her father's production of "Blood and Sand."

"It came to me after our first night," she recalled "and made only one remark, 'My child, you are a genius.'"

Other plays in which she appeared on Broadway included "Landlord," "Major Barbara," "The Pleasure of His Company," and "Lady Windermere's Fan."

However, she found her stage career difficult because producers were lost to give her starring roles, lest they be deemed beneath the talent of a daughter of Otis Skinner. However, she did find some opportunities in band engagements. Miss Skinner began polishing solo impressions that had amused her father in vaudeville, using her as a professional in the music business, earning one of the top incomes of any theater.

She wrote her own monologues, spicing them with her magnificent sense of humor:

WSIU to broadcast comedy series

Eccles, Bluebottle and Nolde Seagoon are not very well-known, but comedy series is the Forsage Theatre and Monty Python's Flying Circus comes to the television screens in them. Eccles, Nolde e, and co-producer of the volleyball series, created a radio series that was, in the words of "The Goon Show," a radio-comedy series created by the British Broadcasting Corporation. The series was being revived this summer at 8 p.m. on Saturdays by M. Peter Sellers. Spike Milligan and Harry Secombe were the nucleus of the show. There is no need to dwell on what Peter Sellers and Spike Milligan were as a Goon, his portrayal of Inspector Clouseau in the "Pink Panther" films is a bright spot of cinema comedy.

"The Goon Show" most recent American appearance was as the "devour weeper in the latest film version of "The Music Man." All three have, at one time or another, found a display case for their talents, such as "The Show." Fast-paced and chaotically funny, the improbable is taken for granted in the series. In one episode a gigantic Chrysalis tree pushes terrorizing Africa. In another a mad doctor is accused of stealing false teeth because he promised to give his beloved fifty pairs of castanets. Whatever the crisis, the won't-be-beaten "Goon" tries to save the day. He usually produces his own possessions by the smoothth-smooth "Goon" manner, is destroyed by his well-meaning friends.

Though the series lampoons British topics, the series is known and situations are addictive to American ears also.

The "Goon Show" was made available to American public radio stations through National Public Radio.

Mom, dad cope with life as rock and roll parents

By John Carter

Entertainment Editor

As we might imagine, problems arise for parents with children in a ‘roll band. The parents of Jennifer Freant, Jun., a music and lead singer for "Shivering Thunam," are no exception.

"I like to sing a lot around the house during the day," Arlene Freant, Jennifer’s stepmother, said. "But when Jennifer comes home there's a professional in her, so I can't compete with that."

The rock 'n' roll parents are from Belleville, Ill., near St. Louis, and they came to Carbondale on the eve of July 6th to hear their daughter perform with the rest of the band at Hangar 'B.' They had "witnessed in their daughter's talents before they heard her, but still they were impressed."

Jennifer's father, Robert, a retired military man, said that he does a lot of traveling these days and gets to see quite a few night club performers. Apparently they don't match up. "I've never seen any better."

"Dad said with studied objectivity. "She still needs experience, but even the ones with experience aren't as good."

There is a musical history to the family. Dad said. The grandparents played the piano and guitar, the grandfather having a band, and the great-grandfather played the accordion. However, Dad, who still plays cornet, said that "I can't say I influenced her."

"What about rock 'n' roll's nasty reputation?"

"I never worry about that," Mom said. "We're stuck in the mud and we love to dance on the moon. And we're very few places play our kind of music, we're familiar with their kind of music."

"I've learned that not everyone in rock 'n' roll bands smokes pot and does drugs.

Serbian priest believes in life, killing with terrorist bombings

By CATHY HORYN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) -- Stevan Kajevich is a priest and a terrorist.

He believes in God, in a killing hereafter, in the sacredness of human life. He also believes in killing other human beings.

He is charged with being able to serve both God and bomb the home of a Yugoslavian consul, an act that last month sent him to prison for 12 years.

"To me it's very natural," Kajevich said. "You cannot be a human being in half: this part is political, this part is religious. We are the same people. The Western world doesn't understand us."

The 43-year-old Serbian Orthodox priest says he wonders if people living in the free world really understand freedom.

We are free, according to his ideology, even if it means violence.

Kajevich's ideologies and influence are so strong that on June 21, a Serbian commander, Nikola Kavaja, hijacked a jetliner and demanded the priest's release from jail.

"When I talked to him on the telephone they connected to the plane, he told me he did it because of me," Kajevich said. "I'll..." before he courage him because I know he has a lot of pride. You have to trust him, because if he has been under a lot of strain."

Kajevich was not freed, and Kavaja, after releasing the passengers, forced the airliner on to the ground. There he changed to a second plane and continued to Ireland's Shannon Airport, where he surrendered.

Two days later, on June 22, Kavaja and Kajevich were sentenced for the 1975 bombing of the diplomat's Chicago home.

Kajevich is jailed at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in downtown Chicago, awaiting an appeal.

An intense man with piercing, dark-brown eyes, Kajevich expresses little regret for past deeds. He also realizes that a man steeped in Christian teachings does not become a terrorist overnight.

"But I was pushed into such a corner," he said in an interview last week. "And I questioned, frankly, what happened to this person. Dr. Stevan Kajevich, who never believed in these things."

But then, Kajevich says, he learned that agents of Yugoslavian President Josip Broz Tito had tracked down his Serbian friends in Western countries, sometimes killing them because they spoke out against Tito.

Kajevich says he, too, was threatened while studying theology in France and after delivering anti-Tito speeches in the United States.

"You ask yourself, what happened to me? If I was educated in Christian thinking," Kajevich said. "If I recall Christ's sermon, if someone staps, turn the other cheek. And I did. I was slapped over and over."

"And then you say, well, 77 times I can forgive. But I could go no further! I'm not Christ! I just lost another mortal human being."

Kajevich says murder repels him. But he quotes Biblical passages and Oliver Cromwell to support his philosophy that "evil is a constant threat to good... and only can be annihilated by good."

To the Western world, he says, it is "the evidence of foreign agents persecuting Serbian and their disabled but equally committed Croatian counterparts is scant. But Kajevich says it is obvious when enigre terrorists bomb, kill and hijack in the name of patriotism."

"If you don't lose freedom, you really can't understand the meaning of freedom," Kajevich explained. "We grow differently than you: We develop our ego and personalities under circumstances of suffering, while you in the West develop under logical and harmonious foundations."

In short, he says it is almost impossible for people living in Western countries to understand and accept the fact that Serbian nacionalists feel they must resort to violence.

Ireland stays under the rule of Parliament

LONDON (AP) -- Parliament extended its direct rule over the six counties of Northern Ireland for at least 12 months Monday.

The House of Lords agreed without a vote, to order extending the administration of Commons, extending Parliament's direct rule over Ulster and continuing the British government's special emergency powers to combat terrorism.

Lord Elton, the conservative government's undersecretary of state for Northern Ireland, said: "Until we have an acceptable and workable answer, direct rule has to continue."

The government first assumed direct rule of the province in 1976 after the collapse of an attempt to set up an elected Northern Ireland Assembly in which the Roman Catholic minority shared power with the Protestant majority.

CHICAGO (AP) — The cost in lives was 273. Translated into dollars, the price tag for the American Airlines DC-10 crash on July 19, 1989, was &574 million — more than twice as much as any previous air disaster.

" Mention any figure you like, and you can't call this a nonsense figure," said spokesman David Z. Lloyd of London, which underwrote much of American's insurance.

"I have seen figures ranging from $200 million up, but at this stage no one has any real idea, and will not until the formal report comes before the House. But it is going to be an expensive accident.

Previous and still pending settlements, say industry sources, include:

More than $80 million for the worst single plane accident in aviation history, the 1974 crash in Paris of a Turkish Airlines DC-10 which killed 346 persons.

Another major cost in the crash is the financial loss — as much as $50 million — to right domestic airlines who have not been affected by the shut down.

A last resort in the crash — and the product liability suit — has not been affected by the shut down.

McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Another major cost in the crash is the financial loss — as much as $50 million — to right domestic airlines who have not been affected by the shut down.

Don't mention any figure you like, and you can't call this a nonsense figure.

In some parts of the country, many of the Eastern Airlines cool summer so far has helped keep demand down and is a sign that people are trying to conserve. The biggest potential for trouble seems to be in the Middle Atlantic states and in California where the shutdown of nuclear power plants has left them with less power than they expected.

The July 13, 1977, blackout left more than 40 million people in the Mid-Atlantic states and New York City.

Mechanical devices of all kinds have failed and, by the time the Coast Guard controller on duty, the area system was out.

Second child dies in rabies outbreak

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (AP) - The deaths of a second child and three others near this border town was confirmed Monday as a result of a rabies outbreak. The deaths are expected to bring the number of cases in hopes of curbing an outbreak of the disease.

Federal officials have said that as a last resort they may order that stray animals be shot on sight.

Gymnast Muenz wins silver

By Tim Brod
Staff Writer

Saluki Dan Muenz won a silver medal in the men's gymnastics competition at the VIII Pan-American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico, last week. Muenz, the only American male to win a medal, took second place honors in the parallel bars with an 18.75 score.

Muenz, who will be a senior this fall, qualified for final competition in five events. In addition to the parallel bars, he placed fourth in the high bars, rings and pommel horse and finished sixth in the floor exercise. He failed to qualify in the vault.

The toughest opponents for the U.S. gymnasts were the Cubans. In every event except the team title, the Canadian team did nearly as well as it scored second in team competition and placed at least one gymnast in the top three of every event.

Muenz was not unfamiliar with such tough opposition. The all-around competitor had previously placed second in the All-America Regional and was a strong 11th at the national championships. However, the games were his first international outing ever.

"I didn't know what the competition would be like," Muenz said. "I expected to do what I've done all the time and I did it." Muenz said that he did the same routines he has done all year. The only variation was in the parallel bars where he eventually won his medal.

He used a new double-somersault dismount that he had practiced for several months.

The new dismount may have been the key in scoring SU's Coach Bill Meade, who was also assistant coach for the U.S. squad, that he thought Muenz would have his best chances in the pommel horse and parallel bars. Although Muenz touched the floor after the dismount in the preliminaries, he had not had trouble with it during the finals, Meade said.

"Dan was really good. He had to work under pressure, and he responded very well," Meade said. "I was very pleased. In every event, he had one of his better performances. He's a good, firm competitor."

Muenz said that the crowd went wild after seeing Muenz on the parallel bars. They weren't so satisfied with the routine, he said, and continued to stomp and scream even after the judges raised the score. The outburst held up the event for about 10 minutes before it resumed again.

"The Latin Americans just liked Dan, and they wanted him to know it," Meade smiled.

Muenz said the games were well organized. There were about 200 police officers on duty each day. Each athlete had to have a tag, and everything was searched before going into the apartment complex where everyone stayed. The rooms weren't furnished except for beds.

However, Muenz said everyone got along well with no major conflicts.

His experience may help as Muenz trains for the World Cup trials on September 25. He plans to concentrate on weaker points during his daily workouts and add some new tricks.

"Dan got psyched up by his win that's getting ready," Meade said.

Bjorn Borg, a winner on and off court

Bjorn Borg is the perfect sportsman. He's young, humble, self-assured, and the undisputed king of the tennis court. The 23-year-old Swede has shown confidence and maturity ever since breaking into the professional tennis picture at the tender age of 16.

Borg is hailed as perhaps the greatest tennis player ever to walk on the court, and rightfully so. Borg captured his fourth consecutive Wimbledon singles title last week, a feat not accomplished since 1913, when defending champions only had to play the final round.

Entire to this year's title at Wimbledon, Borg faced some of his toughest challenges and met them head-on with all the grace and competitiveness of a true champion.

Ex-Saluki Steib wins first game

By Mark Pabich
Sports Editor

Former Saluki All-America outfielder Dave Steib, who is now pitching for the Toronto Blue Jays, returned in the first Major League victory Monday night against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Steib scattered four hits, two of them doubles, in an extremely close and thrilling 2-1 complete-game victory in his second major league pitching performance. In his first start last week, Steib gave up six runs and six hits to the first place Baltimore Orioles. In that loss, Steib struck out five and walked three. Against the Brewers he struck out four.

Home runs by John Mayberry, Roy Howell and Al Woods paces the Blue Jays and Steib. For Mayberry it was the 16th home run of the season. Steib, a 6-3, 185-pounder, was fifth round draft choice in last year's free-agent draft. Steib was called up to Toronto two weeks ago from their AAA Syracuse farm - uh where he posted a 5-2 record. Steib began pitching his senior year at SIU with the help of Saluki pitching coach Mark Newman.

Steib felt that Steib's powerful arm could be developed for pitching. This first big league win marks only the 30th time Steib has pitched in a professional ballgame. The win even his mark at 1-1.

When first entered professional baseball, Steib, who had been a terrific hitter in college and high school, was having trouble making contact with the ball. While his hitting suffered, the Blue Jays organization felt that the strength in his arm could not be wasted.

In the semi-finals, Borg met his arch-rival Jimmy Connors. Borg finished off Connors in the semi-finals as easily as he defeated the year earlier in the 1977 Wimbledon final. After the match, Connors stormed away from the court, something Borg has never done. Nor has he fought with fans or argued consistently with line judges. Borg has a good relationship with the media also. He takes time on for sportscasters and news people, something other tennis players like Illie Nastase don't bother with.

In the finals of this year's Wimbledon against Roscoe Tanner, Borg kept up a persistent pace and edged out the American 6-7, 6-1, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4 in an extremely close and thrilling match. The match will go on record books as one of the classic tennis clashes in the tournament history.

Tanner entered the 16th set in one of the left-hander's best performances on the court. Venice fought off all the coolness and confidence of a winner, Borg, even when better points during his daily workouts and add some new tricks.

a large turnout at the candidate interview sessions with students and faculty, and was surprised to see 80 to 80 people attend each of the sessions, which were held recently at the Student Center. Riccaro Caballero, former president of the Graduate Student Council and member of the Chancellor Search Council, said he felt an important qualification of the chancellor is a "willingness to listen to constituency groups, and to ask for their input."

"It is a very powerful office," he said. "The chancellor should support a participatory type of governance, and must also be strong enough to make decisions when necessary. It should not take three or four years for the constituency groups to gain the respect of the chancellor's office."

Caballero said he thought the search council did an "outstanding job" in acquiring qualified candidates, even though the council has had to "rush the process along." Sam McVay, administrative and professional staff council representative at the candidate meetings, said he was pleased the chancellor search turned out to be "an open process that involved many campus groups."

"I was a little skeptical at first because I felt time was running short," said McVay, administrative director of student health programs. "But the council came up with a widely divergent group of candidates who I feel are some of the most qualified people in the nation."

Gilbert Kooning, representative for the council of representatives, said he was also pleased to find that the candidate review was an open process which allowed the whole campus community to see all the candidates under consideration."

He said the chancellor should have "outstanding academic credentials, experience, and the ability to relate well to the public and to external agencies."

The search council will submit a candidate evaluation report to the board before its July 12 meeting. A final decision by the board is not expected until the fall.

minutes on television. Newspapers were once more prominent, he added, but the newspapers of the 1960s "didn't claim to be defenders of the public's right to know."

Buzbee also assessed relations between the General Assembly and Thompson. Thompson came into office with a Democratic-controlled Legislature. Buzbee said, which led his initial "don't rock the boat" approach in dealings with regulators.

Since being re-elected in 1978, Thompson has become actively involved in a couple of issues which usually brought the wrath of the world down on his head," Buzbee said. The compromise Thompson worked out with Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne on a state transportation package has drawn the ire, surprisingly, of members of Thompson's own Republican Party, particularly in suburban areas, he added.

Other speakers on the agenda of the seminar are Secretary of State Alan Dixon, Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal, Senate President Phillip Rock and Illinois Republican Chairman Don Adams.
