Simon proposes supervision for pages

By Bob Delaney
Southwestern Illinois College

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., District, said Tuesday he expected Congress to act next week on a bill that would end sex scandal allegations involving congressional pages.

"You'll see action very rapidly," said Simon, who twice before -- in 1971 and again in 1979 -- proposed a bill making changes in the page system. He said Congress knew about 20% of rumors concerning illicit activities among pages and members of Congress.

Simon said a congresswoman from Colorado was told by a page about sexual activities among some pages and members of Congress. The charges were referred to the Justice Department who started an investigation.

Simon said the FBI also are investigating the allegations.

Congress did not respond earlier to rumors, Simon said, because many members felt "if something isn't broke, don't fix it." He added that "sometimes it takes a scandal to make us move in the right direction."

Simon proposed creating a "school board" that would be responsible for the pages, some of whom are as young as 14. Pages are now under no supervision, which Simon said is "obviously not a healthy thing."

His proposals include a 16-year-old age limit for pages, which would be appointed by members of Congress who have seniority, and supervised housing for pages. He said the school board could appoint supervisors to make sure discipline is enforced.

"Where I have responsibility and where the Congress has responsibility is to see that the pages receive some supervision," Simon said. "We must see that problems that apparently exist do not exist in the future."

"The big thing is getting somebody in charge. That shouldn't be that controversial."

If Congress is unwilling to enact other reform, Simon said it could raise the age limit for pages to college age. However, he said he doesn't support such a plan at this time.

Simon said he's concerned now that Congress didn't listen to earlier proposals because the headlines appearing now concerning a congressional scandal reduces people's confidence in Congress.

There is also concern for the education pages are receiving. Simon said he made an unsuccessful effort several years ago and found reports of inadequate supervision to have some merit. He said the situation may have changed since then.

PLO evacuation plan is rejected by Israel

Britain to keep 600 POWs until Argentina meets demand

LONDON (AP) — More than three weeks after Argentine forces surrendered the Falkland Islands, Britain is holding 600 prisoners and says it intends to keep them until Argentina gives "positive indications." It won't resume hostilities.

One of the prisoners, held aboard ships in the South Atlantic, is Brig. Gen. Mario Benigno Menendez, the Argentine commander who surrendered his forces on the Falklands April 8.

The prisoner issue is holding up Britain's plans for the future of the Falklands after the costly war to wrest them back from Argentina, which invaded the colony April 2.

It has been a source of suspense about interpretation of the Geneva Convention that says prisoners of war should be promptly sent home.

The prisoners numbered as many as 11,800 troops captured by British forces in the campaign that was terminated by the Argentine surrender of Stanley, the Falklands capital. The 11,800 others have been sent home.

Britain at first said it would keep officers and military specialists until it received an "authoritative" Argentine assurance that millions are over in the Falklands, their dependencies, and the air and sea corridors between the islands and the Argentine mainland.

But Britain has watered down that demand and now says it will accept "positive indications" that Argentina considers the fighting over.

One official close to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said: "We need something stronger than a cease-fire."

Postal Service study shows cost cuts, better productivity

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service cut costs and improved productivity in its first decade as an independent agency, according to a study issued Wednesday as the postmaster issued a 20-cent stamp would likely hold until the end of 2000.

Overall, the one-year, $500,000 look at the Postal Service yielded a good deal of praise for its accomplishments since independence, when the agency was created out of the 200-year-old Post Office Department.

But Alan Dean, chairman of the National Academy of Public Administration, advised Postmaster General William F. Bolger and other members of the Board of Governors to overhaul mail rate-making rules to reflect the aggressive force that captured the Postal Service's new technology to move the mail more quickly, retraining questions to work on its public image.

"The USPS, in its successful efforts to reduce costs and increase productivity, seems to have pursued these objectives at some sacrifice in employee courtesy and customer services and needs to redress this imbalance," the study said in a summary.

The study was funded by the Postal Service, which was a Cabinet-level government department until the reorganization.

Before Dean presented the report at the Board of Governors' monthly meeting, Bolger said the agency's accountants had been anticipating an $84 million deficit at the end of a one-month period ending June 11, but found a $24 million surplus instead.

Sun-Times sued over Cody article

CHICAGO (AP) — A 74-year-old woman will sue the Chicago Sun-Times for more than $10 million for implying she was the mistress of the late Cardinal John P. Cody and alleging that he improperly gave her up to $1 million in church funds, her attorney said Wednesday.

In a libel suit, Helen Dolan Wilson will accuse the newspaper of acting with "reckless disregard for the truth in using my relationship with Cody, said attorney Leonard M. Ring.

Ring said Mrs. Wilson "feels that the Sun-Times went on a campaign to destroy the cardinal, for reasons that she doesn't understand, and also dragged her into it and spiced it up the story."

Ring said that "she's been hurt by it and she wants to get back at them."

Ralph Othwell, editor of the Sun-Times, said it was the paper's "policy not to comment on any litigation threatened or pending."

Mrs. Wilson, Cody's step-cousin and his friend since childhood, could not be reached for comment.

Vatican bank head may get transfer

ROME (AP) — Italian newspapers speculated Wednesday that American Archbishop Paul Marcinkus may be removed as head of the Vatican bank and named head of the U.S. archdiocese to insulate the Holy See from a growing financial scandal.

Marcinkus denied he would resign and asserted his bank had not been involved in any wrongdoing, according to a Chicago Tribune report from Vatican City.

"I do not resign under these circumstances," Marcinkus was quoted as saying. "I have not been involved with anything that could affect the normal life of the bank." He added, "I am completely unaware of any move by the Holy Father to get rid of me."

Soviets will keep pipeline schedule

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet leadership said Wednesday that unspecified measures have been approved to ensure that the gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe will be built on schedule, despite a U.S. embargo on components.

The official news agency Tass said the Communist Party's Central Committee and the Council of Ministers passed "measures to ensure the construction of the Urengoi-Pomary-Uzhgorod trunk gas pipeline as planned earlier."

Contracts call for gas deliveries to begin in 1984.

It did not specify what the measures were, but presumably they would involve a revival of spot purchases in Europe to replace equipment last or delayed by the U.S. embargo on parts.

CIA will screen Casey stock deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has established a "screening arrangement" to keep tabs on Director William J. Casey's stock transactions and prevent him from taking official steps that would enhance his holdings.

The new system will bar Casey to buy or sell stocks at his discretion.

Officials said the new arrangement took effect May 28, after Casey reported selling more than $600,000 in oil stocks in 1981, a year oil stock prices plummeted in response to a worldwide oil glut.

The CIA director is among a handful of officials with broad access to U.S. intelligence information, including secret estimates of world oil supplies. Casey is the only senior Reagan official with such access who neither set up a blind trust nor divested some of his holdings before taking office.

The new screening arrangement, which was approved by the Office of Government Ethics, requires that the deputy director and other senior CIA officials be furnished regularly with a list of Casey's stock transactions.

Hospital re-evaluating expansion plan

By Andrew Zimmer
Staff Writer

Administrators of Carbondale's Memorial Hospital are currently reviewing an expansion plan for the hospital that was killed by the state agency earlier this year, according to the hospitals chief financial officer.

According to Jerry Hickam, president of Southern Illinois Hospital Services, the corporation that owns expansion plan for the hospital, an expansion request was denied because the hospital failed to meet the state's optimum average occupancy rate of 85 percent for the last three years.

He said the expansion plan, which called for an additional 19 medical-surgical beds to the current 106 beds, "was in response to future needs." The Illinois Hospital Facilities Planning Board denied the expansion request, Hickam said, but there already were enough beds in Memorial's region.

"We're looking at the future rather than the past," he said. "My feeling is the board isn't really doing any long-range planning.

He said hospital administrators must start from scratch and receive local permission before attempting to appeal the board's decision.

Reagan administration's offer to send 1,000 combat troops to help escort the PLO from Lebanon. "The U.S.A. armed the aggressors and is encouraging their expansionist policy," it said.

The plan rejected Reagan's offer Tuesday, but did not rule out American involvement in a plan to disengage guerrillas and Israeli forces in the Beirut area.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes in Los Angeles that statements of rejection should not be taken at face value. "I would look very carefully at statements made by the PLO before I would make a conclusion," he said.

Other Reagan administration sources in Washington said about 1,000 U.S. Marines were aboard five ships off Lebanon, in position to land if ordered to.

Israeli. Economics Minister Yaacov Meridor told Israeli radio the Marines would be in place "in a day or two," but he did not elaborate and declined to speculate on when the guerrillas would leave from west Beirut.

In Tel Aviv, senior Israeli officials said Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government once said the PLO leave a symbolic presence in Lebanon after the guerrillas depart Beirut.

They said the guerrillas' demand to maintain a political office in Beirut and attach two units to the Lebanese army was in the two points which Israel rejected out of a nine-point plan put together by Habib.

But they said the Israeli government was giving Habib's efforts additional time. And a top diplomat, Foreign Ministry Director-General David Kimche, traveled to Beirut to brief the American emissary on Israel's position, said the officials, who declined to be identified.

At the same time, there was an optimistic mood among ministers at an Israeli Cabinet meeting which, according to a communique, dealt with "the political arrangements which will bring about the total evacuation of all the terrorists from Beirut and Lebanon.

Wednesday's casualties brought the toll of Palestinian and Lebanese casualties in Beirut to 2,633 killed and 3,612 wounded since Israel invaded June 6, Lebanese police say.

Another poor Soviet harvest

MOSCOW (AP) — Alternating extremes of cold rains and hot dry winds are pushing the Soviet Union toward its fourth consecutive poor grain harvest, according to Western and Eastern European sources.

"It's pretty clear they won't have a good year," said one Western agronomist. An Eastern European source said Soviet experts were warning that "if the weather doesn't improve in the next 10 days or so, the crops will be badly hit."

The U.S. Agriculture Department forecasts a Soviet grain crop of 185 million tons, well short of the 238 million tons in the Soviet plans.

Westerners and Soviets alike are still trying to guess the results of the 1981 grain harvest. Kremlin officials have admitted a poor showing, but have not released figures. Some Soviets have placed the figure below 160 million tons — the lowest yield in a decade.

U.S. officials in Washington predicted the Soviet Union would help make up for last year's bad harvest by importing a record 46 million tons of wheat and corn for the year June 15th, half of it from the United States.

Soviet newspapers, radio and television carry the usual optimism reports on the harvest — interspersed with hints of trouble.
Alleged sex scandals point out the need for further investigations

When President Reagan said that he had agreed "in principle" to a dispatch American troops to Lebanon, he soundly explained why we shouldn't get our hands close to the fire in that ancient, tempestuous land.

Those idioms of diplomatic language—"principles," "cease-fires," "peace agreements," and other such fictions—monuments of cooperation and stability have no meaning in a country where two real and one imaginary foreign nations tend to garbage collection and taxation, not to mention battling for all the heavy issues of sovereignty, religion, zones of influence, and other nationalistic "values" of war and peace.

Syria and Israel are the powers in control of Lebanon, and the PLO's shadow government hadn't been doing badly in running its borrowed piece of Lebanon either, until the Israeli invasion.

What ever may have happened to the government of Lebanon as the negotiations supposedly run the country, it is apparent that it will take years for the owners of the land to take over from their unwanted militant tenants.

So far, the Lebanese have begun to take over such civil duties as traffic control from the fleeing PLO, but that is a long way from signing, executing and guaranteeing treaties or verifying the safety of anyone, anywhere and for anything.

The United States has not recognized the PLO umbrella political and military organization, and has sour relations with the Syrian government. Our "best friend," in the Middle East, has been above denying the United States when it wants to— and sunk a U.S. Navy intelligence ship "accidently" during the Kippur War in 1973 to stop our interference with their retaliatory attacks against Israeli and Egyptian targets.

Now some people want a mere 1,000 or so U.S. Marines and an unspecified commitment by allied nations to protect the PLO invaders from the Israeli invaders as that some or all of the PLO invaders can leave without the Israeli invaders slaughtering them—not to mention killing a few more thousand or so innocent Lebanese citizens who just happens to be in the way. And, don't forget the Syrians—sponsored by the Soviets, well, maybe they will leave next week.

We bear talk that the PLO publicly says don't try to get the U.S. Marines to come pull their chestnuts out of the Israeli fire, but they don't deny that, if the Americans come in to establish a buffer zone, the PLO factions may then want to stay until hell freezes over, anyway.

The United States would be stuck in the middle between dicing Lebanon, Israeli and Syrian forces, destroying each other and anyone who dares get in their way. For, we hold up stop signs to the shooting! Would we not sane state the situation that Israel would choose to fight against an entrenched PLO, regardless of the U.S. presence?

What a sight that would be. Space Invaders, take heart, you would have no Davos in the real world of geopolitics. U.S. Marines, ousting the Israelis, the Syrians, the PLO, and God knows who else, have been known to run out of a strange, war-torn city and leave without the Israelis executing and guaranteeing the safety of anyone, anywhere for anything.

The United States does not recognize the PLO umbrella political and military organization, and has sour relations with the Syrian government. Our "best friend," in the Middle East, has been above denying the United States

Cyclist finds no humor in anti-bike sentiment

Can someone please explain to me why it is considered cute or funny to suggest violence toward bicycle riders? This time it's the letter from beemc 290, who evidently as a pedestrian was "buzzed" on the sidewalk. (I say "buzzed," instead of "hit," as this is what I may pathezie with the pedestrian in that situation: I have been hit.

But I also have lost my bike "unlawfully," twice in one week. I have and I know how it is to be the cyclist "out in the street where he would go to pass the traffic lights," and I know how it is to the cyclist "out in the street where he would go to pass people.

I have found neither one an amusing place to be. One of the blanket anti-bike letters that appeared in this column last spring joked in an attempt to win the anti-bike trip-wires for bicycle riders. If we were an ethnic group or a dog owner or an age bracket, then this kind of abuse would be considered definitely not funny.

Until I see the humor, I will protest this kind of verbal attack, and I expect other Carbondale's thousands who bike will join me.

Simon warns Social Security will go broke if not revised

The Social Security system has three trust funds: retirement, disability and medicare. By the end of 2033, said Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District, the retirement trust fund will be borrowing from the other two.

Speaking to approximately 90 people at a town meeting Tuesday night, Simon said that unless something is done soon, no one will be left to borrow by the end of 2033.

"Nobody anticipated the problems," Simon said, citing a reason for the current problems in Social Security. He also said that because of the high rate of unemployment, the system is not getting enough income.

To ease the burden of the Social Security system, the U.S. must either raise taxes or reduce benefits, he said. And although he favors these solutions, he is in the minority because this is an election year, he said.

Simon gave three specific "unpopular" ways the government could raise or save money for the troubled economy.

First, by not compounding rate-of-living increases for retirement and disability recipients, the U.S. could save $3 billion annually, Simon said. If someone receiving $100 a month gets a 7 percent increase, their new check will be $107 per month, he said, and if they get another 7 percent increase the next year, they will receive $114.49 under the present system.

If the increase is not compounded, it will still be based on the $100 and they will receive another $7. Although the recipient would only miss 49 cents, the savings for the country would be substantial, Simon said.

Simon said he was "very leery" about a flat-rate income tax that would set a percentage about a flat-rate income tax that would be a percentage about a flat-rate income tax that would set a percentage of the country, which would be substantial, Simon said.

The county could renovate courthouse facilities as a criminal justice center, keeping jail facilities on the third floor and acquiring another building for county offices.

Committee members raised fears that whatever plan was adopted could not be implemented before a new county board, which might stop any recommendations made now, is elected in November.

If you forgot to buy popcorn before stepping into the fair to see "Blade Runner," you can count on going without the buttery kernels. This movie is so good, you'll never want to leave your seat.

"Blade Runner," directed by Ridley Scott, is a futuristic detective story. The setting is a major metropolitan city forty years from now.

Whereas the streets of most futuristic films are depressingly desolate, if there are streets at all, the backdrop for our action is clad in a wall of The nature of that life is the cor-

A highy successful genetic-engineering industry actually replicates many animals that have become extinct, as well as inventing new creatures. Hence, there is a scene featuring a marketplace swarm with duplicate chickens, goats, snakes, etc.

Some of the wealthier characters own duplicate pets, and a "replicant" snake becomes a key lead for policeman Blade Runner, Rick Deckard, played by Harrison Ford.

Deckard's position as a Blade Runner gives its existence to the notion that genetic-engineering Replicants, synthetically made humans, are Deckard's prey, and he is the best weapon the police department has.

While Deckard, retired, is seeking a more peaceful way to make a living, his crusty head officer, played by M. Emmet Walsh, forces him to rejoin the department. His mission? Kill four defective replicants who have come back to earth from space and have already killed several humans.

The fleshy fabrications are too smart for their assigned purpose in life — to be slaves of humans in conquering territory in space.

To insure that rebellion didn't take place, the replicants were designed to live only four years. To give them a sense of reality, the models were programmed with other people's memories. Although of above average intelligence, somehow the scientists expect the models not to figure out that they aren't real. Wrong.

When a few super replicants do figure out that they aren't real, that they don't possess the same life span as their human creators, they become quite indignant. Their lust for more life becomes their new purpose, and naturally, they return to find their creator. When super replicant Roy, played by Holland's film star, Rutger Hauer, reaches his genius point, he will opposing Deckard's final conflict with Roy, the most hailsul replicant warrior. The fight proves both emotional and draining.

Hauer gives, perhaps, the most charismatic performance of the film, charming in scenes with his replicant girlfriend, Pris, played by Darryl Hannah. Although Deckard goes through a character metamorphosis, especially as he sympathizes with his violent destiny, the audience may feel burdened with questions concerning some of the moral issues inherent in the film's plot. While it doesn't hit you over the head, the film will call for thought.

The special effects in this film are effective, but they don't overshadow the plot. The film's environment is awesome, yet it enhances the action.

One fault of this movie might be that the audience sympathizes with the replicants as much as they sympathize with protagonist Deckard. Or is it a fault? Deckard shows ambivalence toward his violent duty throughout the film. Why shouldn't the audience? He is constantly clarifying his purpose, especially when he finds himself becoming romantically involved with one of his victims, alluring Rachel, played by Sean Young.

Another scene which may create audience indecision as to the protagonist role is that of Deckard's final conflict with Roy, the most hailsul replicant warrior. The fight proves both emotional and draining.

Searching for love with spunk

Annie shines as lovable, brave orphan

By David Murphy
Entertainment Editor

I was prepared to hate "Annie." After seeing all the hype, the endless commercials, the television specials, the coloring books and the animated movie that had a lot of cute gushy sympathy by little girls and nothing else. I was prepared to hate "Annie." As it turned out, "Annie" is a delightful, enjoyable film, one that is lovable and entertaining for the whole family, and that entertains old and young alike without involving the usual made-for-tv intelligences.

Aileen Quinn is a lovable and convincing Annie. Eight trials were auditioned for the role, and apparently all that work paid off. Quinn is perfect for the part. She has the red, curly hair, the blue eyes and, most important, the moxie and pluck we expect Annie to have.

Annie is indomitable. After escaping from her orphanage in a laundry basket, she takes on, and beats, a gang of male bullies she finds harassing a dog (Sandy, the Yorkie). When caught and sent back to the orphanage, she finds a way to be chosen as the orphan who gets to spend a week at the countryside home of Oliver Warbucks mansion. In short, you can't keep Annie down.

The other members of the cast are, generally, very good. Carol Burnett is fine as the drunken, corrupt, long-suffering Miss Hannigan.

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

The Club — Thursday, to be announced; Friday, the raw New Wave sound of Langreth; Saturday, the incendiary hot funk of James and the Flames. No cover any night.

Friday, March 2 — Thursday, hear the rugged rock and roll of Hicochet; Friday, WIBB night; Saturday, WIBB night; Sunday, C.R. and Gitter, playing rough-and-ready country rock. No cover any night.

The Great Escape — Friday, Carla and the Gistochilas, formerly PFF, playing their special brand of sinuous, rhythmic funk; Saturday, the straight-ahead rock and roll of Bolsa. No cover any night.

Hambo — Thursday, The Windows, playing the best rock, from the Beatles and the Stones to the Police, for fifty cents admission; Friday and Saturday, the innovative country rock of Arrow Memphis, $2 admission.

Punic Penny Pack — Sunday, the mellow jazz sounds of Mercy, no cover.

T.J. McFly's — Thursday, the rumbling Old Wave rock of Action; Friday and Saturday, more traditional rock, played by Ferrari. No cover any night.

FILMS AND VIDEO

Thursday and Friday — See Dan Akroyd and the late John Belushi, who eventually formed Blues, imitate real blues singers and musicians in "The Blues Brothers," showing Fourth Floor Video Lounge at 7 pm, both nights for $1.

Warbucks' bodyguards, Punjab and Aap, Geoffrey Holder and Roger Minami are mystifying and deadly. Holder, intractable and silent, is a graceful enigma, possessing strange powers which he uses in the service of Warbucks.

The story deals, of course, with Annie, a 10-year-old orphan living in a run-down home for girls in New York City during the Great Depression. The home is filled with ragged, lovable orphans who live in fear of Miss Hannegan.

When the secretary to billionaire Oliver Warbucks comes to the home looking for an orphan to stay at Warbucks' plush mansion for a week, as part of a charitable publicity stunt, Annie grasps her way into being chosen.

When Annie convinces Warbucks to help her find her real parents, he offers a $50,000 reward to the one who can come claim Annie. That interests Rooster, and he, Lily and Miss Hannegan set out to get the money.' In the shenanigans which result, Annie's life is put in danger, and Warbucks, Punjab and Grace must do everything they can to save her.

The lyrics and music of the movie are catchy and well-performed, by the children and adults alike. You could easily leave the theater humming the tunes a number of the songs, particularly "It's a Hard Knock Life," and, of course, "Tomorrow.

either had to cross Illinois Avenue down by the Dairy Queen or all the way up at the stoplight by the Rec Center,” Rosenberg said. “There just weren’t any other ramps,” she said.

“No one would yield when they should have so that we could cross the streets,” Childers said. “One time we almost got run over because the ramp was too steep and I couldn’t get up it. Luckily someone came to help me.”

Going to Gatsby’s was impossible, Childers said because there is no ramp. The hill near Fane Hall and the Student Center was too problem, she said. It was too steep and their chairs almost tipped over so they had to go up. They even tried going up backwards, but they couldn’t make it, Rosenberg said.

“Two guys saw us and got off their bikes to push us up the hill,” Rosenberg said.

Mary MacCloud and Carol Cornell, both wheelchair students, said that problems in getting around campus and Carbondale are a part of their everyday lives. They knew several local places that they could not get to. Blum’s, Marshall Shopping Center, the basement of Zwick’s Shoe Store, the basement of 700 Book Store, and the upstairs movie at Varsity Theatre are all impossible to get to in a wheelchair, Cornell said. Turley Park is also a problem, they said, because there are no curb cuts.

MacCloud said that both the street and the curb cut by the Dairy Queen are too steep, and the McDonald’s ramp is “really hard to go up.”

“I don’t even try to go to McDonald’s,” Cornell said.

Both girls said they could not get in Gatsby’s.

“We wanted to go one night,” MacCloud said, “so we sent a friend in to ask if we could use the back door. But they would not let us. We had to go around the block from the Student Center.”

In summing up her feelings about a day in a wheelchair, Childers said, “I felt helpless. People treated us different. They acted scared like we were going to contaminate them.”

MacCloud agreed. “People do treat you different. They either ignore you or they kiss the ground to help you.”

“A lot of people stared in curiosity and came to pity,” Rosenberg said. “At the Student Center, two guys looked at us and said we looked too ‘normal’ to be in wheelchairs. Then they told us they meant we looked too ‘built’ and healthy.”

“One girl in a wheelchair kept staring at us, while we were laughing,” Childers said. “She looked like she could not understand how we could be having fun.”

Cornell said it was funny that the two girls were so slow. She said she had gone to the Rec Center, swam, changed clothes and was going back home in the time that Childers and Rosenberg had gone to the Dairy Queen and the Rec Center.

When Childers and Rosenberg got back home, they said they felt sad.

“We could get out of the chairs and walk, but others couldn’t,” Childers said. “For me, this was just an experience. They were just the other people it’s a way of life.”

Some of the people who saw Childers and Rosenberg that night in the wheelchairs have since seen them walking around campus and have asked them about it. Rosenberg said. Two men thought it was a really different thing to do and could not understand, she said. One man was angry because they had called handicapped, she said, but she calmed him down and explained it to him.

The night they spent in wheelchairs was “a really good experience,” Rosenberg said.

“Now I can empathize. Not sympathize, but understand,” Childers said.

No matter how you travel, it's a long way to go from Chicago, St. Louis, or even Sacramento to the duckling and turtle watching at the Robert C. Large Swamp in deep Southern Illinois.

Nestled between the black-earth bottoms of the Morganlands and the towering limestone bluffs of the Ozark Highlands, the Illinois River Area, the ancient swamp is a living history of Illinois waterways. Experiencing it among specialists, it is not a widely known area. Even people who live nearby seldom visit it. Michael Cohen made the trip to Larte all the way from New Hope, Minn. for him and 12 fellow teen-agers it marked a singular adventure. All of their schoolmates are handicapped. They came to Southern Illinois to attend the Environmental Science Institute, a summer program conducted solely for disabled high school students. The program, which ended Friday, was funded by the National Science Foundation. When the students weren't trekking to semi-wildness campus, they were either in a swamp, they hunkered and booted on the NIU-Touched Nature Environmental Center, a 6,900-acre outdoor laboratory with both daily and overnight programs. Limited to a few of classmate in the two-week institute session attended he, Michael Cohen. "I didn't go back to classwork out of hand, "he said. "I thought the institute did wonders with my by-product."

Both Sullivan and Petersen credited SIU-C student involvement in the making of the institute's success. "Most of them were out here because of the desire, and most of the ones that told us they were working with the kids," said Sullivan. "They're extra trouble in the laboratories, so they just don't get science courses," he said.

The institute enrolls people with varying disabilities, blind or deaf students, epileptics and some students confined to wheelchairs. Nine of the students in Michael's session were confined to wheelchairs. Where they once thought of themselves as a closed group, the institute coordinator in the Division of Special Services, Jon. E. Edelson, said the students worked together to study and have fun.

"It wasn't all that unusual to see blind students and orthopedically handicapped students in wheelchairs," she said. "They turned into a close-knit group."

The institute agenda ranged from lectures and films to a half-dozen field trips, like the one into a swamp. Students hiked through nearby Big Bluffs, netted fish and algae from Little Grassy Lake for laboratory analysis, and toured pollution control laboratories at the SIU-C campus.

Students had the use of one microscope magnifiers and other special equipment to help them cope with their disabilities. Recreation periods included fishing, swimming, and even rappelling for some of the students who are good swimmers.

The students all showed a real interest in the whole environment people," said Sullivan. "That wasn't really one of our objects, it was a pleasant by-product."

"It wasn't all that unusual to see blind students and orthopedically handicapped students in wheelchairs," she said. "They turned into a close-knit group."

The institute agenda ranged from lectures and films to a half-dozen field trips, like the one into a swamp. Students hiked through nearby Big Bluffs, netted fish and algae from Little Grassy Lake for laboratory analysis, and toured pollution control laboratories at the SIU-C campus.

Students had the use of one microscope magnifiers and other special equipment to help them cope with their disabilities. Recreation periods included fishing, swimming, and even rappelling for some of the students who are good swimmers.

The students all showed a real interest in the whole environment people," said Sullivan. "That wasn't really one of our objects, it was a pleasant by-product."

Both Sullivan and Petersen credited SIU-C student involvement in the making of the institute's success. "Most of them were out here because of the desire, and most of the ones that told us they were working with the kids," said Sullivan. "They're extra trouble in the laboratories, so they just don't get science courses," he said.
Arab prince and family find Florida life one long nightmare

By Randall Hackley

MIAMI (AP) — Once upon a time in this land of sun and palm trees, Prince Abdul Aziz and his family rolled in on a carpet of wealth. They didn't receive a royal welcome.

Instead, these members of the Saudi royal family became involved in lawsuits, counter-suits, police raids, money giveaways and even an allegation of enslavement that have kept them in the media spotlight.

The most prominent of the controversial visitors has been Prince Tushki bin Abdul Aziz, a nephew of the late King Khaled, who has sued 12 members of the Metro Dade (Miami) Police Department for $10 million.

Abdul Aziz, 44, said the police acted "outrageously" when they burst into his bayfront condominium on Feb. 26 to serve an Egyptian nanny allegedly being held against her will.

Police, who had a warrant, failed to find the woman but encountered fierce resistance from the prince's bodyguards. One officer was felled by a kick in the groin. Another injured his head in a fall and said her wrist was slammed in a door by the police's mother-in-law who also allegedly bit a detective's hand.

Abdul Aziz's 25-year-old wife, Princess Herd, angered when the policewoman searched her mother's room, reportedly spit at police and shouted: "Out! Out of my house! I will break your nose!"

Police and prosecutors now say the prince, who returned home last month for Khaled's funeral, is a "stranger in a strange land," and is snubbing the law and his American welcome. The police officers have countersued.

Before his departure, the prince and his family sought to end the suit, but the police officers refused.

Police pressed prosecutors to file assault charges. Dade State Attorney Janet Reno wrote federal officials in Washington saying the prince's claim to diplomatic immunity was "a sham."

However, on April 2, the State Department granted diplomatic immunity to Abdul Aziz, who was a Saudi deputy defense minister in the mid-1970s.

In May, the prince offered $50,000 to police if they would drop his countersuit. It was rejected.

Abdul Aziz and two brothers-in-law then began a two-month series of contributions to local hospitals, universities and cultural boards. Some $500,000 was donated. On June 7, the prince dropped his suit.

Abdul Aziz isn't the only member in his family to attract attention.

One of his brothers-in-law, Sheikh Mohammed al Fassi, was arrested Tuesday in his suite at the luxury Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla. The hotel says al Fassi ran up a $3.5 million tab for the months of May and June and hasn't paid.

He was charged with defrauding an innkeeper, a third-degree felony. He posted bond of $1,000 and was released, pending an appearance date.

Al Fassi had rented two floors of the posh, beachfront hotel for himself, one of his wives, four children and an extensive entourage.

A spokesman for the sheik blamed the unpaid bill problem on the Moslem practice of remaining inactive during the holy period of Ramadan.

The 28-year-old al Fassi, with a fortune estimated at $6 billion, has other problems. He has been sued for divorce by first wife, Dena, who hired celebrity divorce specialist Marvin Mitchelson to seek half her husband's net worth.

Eurma Hayes Center film series spotlights black community issues

"Resurgence," a documentary film which gives a historical account of the recent reemergence of Ku Klux Klan activities and the continued progress of the movement for social and economic justice, was shown Wednesday night as the first of several films planned this summer by the Black American Studies Department.

The film, which was also sponsored by Southern Illinois Equal Rights Council, was followed by a question and answer session by Ted Quan, vice president and regional organizer for the National Equal Rights Congress. Other films to be shown this summer will be part of a Youth Film Festival sponsored by the department and the Coordinated Youth Program at the Eurma Hayes Center. The department will also sponsor an adult film festival, with discussions led by black community leaders following each film.

The Youth Film Festival begins this Wednesday and ends Wednesday, Aug. 11, according to W. Main Carpenter, assistant professor in Black American Studies.

The film series is entitled "Growing up Black" and deals with subjects of interest to black youth. Mooby said the films will be shown every Wednesday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

"Losing Just the Same," the story of a black teenager growing up in California, was the first film of the series, shown Wednesday night. Mooby said other films to be shown include: "Bread and Soul," narrated by Ray Charles; "Black History Leen," "Stolen Or Strayed," narrated by Bill Cosby; "Cry of Jazz;" and "Martin Luther King, Man and The March" and "In Search of a Past." Specific dates for each film will be announced each week, Mooby said.

She said the adult film festival will begin this Thursday and end Thursday, Aug. 12. The series is entitled "Black Economic Survival" and films will be shown every Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m.

"Welfare Revolt" is the first film of the series to be shown Thursday. Other films scheduled for the festival include "Poor Pay More" on July 12, "Diary of a Harlem Family" on July 19, "American Crisis: Part 1" on August's and "American Crisis: Part 2" on August 12.

Sponsored speakers at the discussion sessions include Sandra Green, from the Department of Public Aid in Murphysboro; Ina Valenti, community organizer in Carbondale and Evelyn Kneze, an expert on home economic affairs.

Newcomers selected all-state

Three SIU-C baseball recruits and another athlete who has signed to play basketball but intends to play baseball as well, were named to the Illinois High School Activities Association all-state baseball team.

Outfielder Mark Schulte is one of only two players to repeat from last year's all-state squad. Schulte has signed to play basketball by head Coach Allen Van Winkle, has a 2.91 ERA, and is one of the players Jones that he also intends to play baseball.

Finally, highly-recruited Provise East first baseman Robert Jones was named to the all-state squad. Jones, who also signed by the Redbirds to the join the professional ranks, has reached an average of .410, a fact left by the Schulte and Hot Stuff, who signed to play baseball at SIU-C. Brian head Coach Allen Van Winkle, has a 2.91 ERA, and is one of the players Jones that he also intends to play baseball.

Intramurals begin to heat up

Intramurals have started to heat up, with the second session of the year underway. The second session, which began last week, has seen an increase in participation from the first session.

Dave Moorcroft sets world mark

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Dave Moorcroft of Great Britain set a world record Tuesday at the 3,000-meter race in an 8:27.12 time, which bettered the previous mark by El Hadi Limperis. Schulte also plays first base.

Two future Saluki hurliers were named to the all-state squad, Steeleville's Gary Lockhart and Carbondale's Bruce Decker, both of whom have signed to play baseball at Saluki.

Now that former Saluki basketball player Charles Moore has left the court again, it's a shame he can't do what any normal 6-7, long­armed forward can do—make a basket when the basket is under the basket.

Nevertheless, Moore, minus the basketball, is having a bit of fun while leading his intramural team to the top of the men's A division standings. As of Wednesday, he had already burned opponents by tipped scores.

Along with helpful Dan Walker, Etige Bryant, Steve Moore and Ed Calaie, Moore and Hot Stuff have established a mighty 2-0 record. They ran past the all division leader and took the Redbirds 15-4. Going into Wednesday night, Hot Stuff was up against another team that is just as good. The Clay Birds, also 2-0, are equally as talented if not better. Rob Roth, Ken Hall, Kurni and Tom Wad and Pat Swanson have had no trouble with their two opponents in the eight-team league.

Despite rainouts, both the 12- and 16-inch softball tournaments have fared well. In 12-inch, the Spankiers are on top of the standings with an impressive 3-0 record. The team that has the second best record is the Swallows, with a 2-1 record.

In 16-inch, Incowr, The Players and Spankiers are all undefeated, the spankiers in 12-inch name, Get Down On It, is do well, as well as Cheri Jubilee and Kinkaidettes. All are 3-0.

In 16-inch where there are only eight teams, Swallows, Yin Yang and Hogans Heroes are atop of the standings.

The tennis and racquetball tournaments are winding down, Mark Zurline is the current leader and favorite in the men's tennis singles in tennis. Azabli and Goudy are in the intermediate division while George Shalske is the current leader in the advanced division.
