Rev. Falwell a 'polarizing figure,' says Simon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Paul Simon, a possible 1988 Democratic presidential nominee, branded the Rev. Jerry Falwell a "polarizing figure" Tuesday and suggested the right wing preacher deceived his followers in an article about Simon.

"I'm sure that Dr. Falwell has many talents, as do those who work for him," the Makanda democrat said. "Sticking to the truth does not appear to be one of them."

In his weekly newsletter, released Tuesday, Simon defended his objections to a grant given a dean at Falwell's bible college, Liberty University, and rejected a recent charge by Falwell that he has a "complete lack of tolerance."

Simon's newsletter was prompted by Falwell's Liberty Report, which had a picture of Simon on the cover with the words, "Sen. Paul Simon: A Religious Bigot?" and included an article by Falwell that charged Simon with intolerance.

"One of the things I have tried to promote throughout my years in journalism and public life is tolerance, whether it is racial or national or religious or political," Simon said.

A group of congressmen, representing all factions of the party and all parts of the country, wrote a letter last week urging Simon to seek the presidential nomination.

Simon said the Falwell criticism was based on his objection to a $186,710 grant given by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention to a dean at Liberty University and another consultant for preparing material for high school students studying the Constitution.

He said the project did not fit the role of the juvenile justice office and that the material could have been provided by private publishers.

"Dr. Falwell is a polarizing figure," he said, "whether you agree with him or not, and if material is to be prepared for high schools, it should come from sources as broadly respected as possible."

Simon said that no one from Liberty Report tried to call him for comment though the article claimed Simon would not return telephone calls.

"I have made clear my distaste for those who wrap their political views in a thin veneer of religion and pass it off to the public as religion," Simon said. "Perhaps that has offended him. Maybe he doesn't like Lutherans, Democrats or bow ties. I'm not sure."

Officials get week to study Crystal's 'Center' proposal

By Tony Eckert
Staff Writer

The City Council Monday directed the city staff to study a new development proposal for the downtown hotel-convention center, but stopped short of awarding an "exclusive" on the project.

The action gives city officials one week to study the proposal made recently by the Crystal Development Corp. of Boulder, Colo. It would also give city officials time to analyze any proposals that might be submitted by other developers.

Although the City Council declined to give Crystal an exclusive right to develop the project, council members expressed a strong interest in Crystal's proposal. A special council meeting will be held Monday to consider the matter further.

"In my opinion we are now at the crossroads in our decision making with regards to development," councilman John Yow said Monday night. "I feel that should we string this thing out too far — which, in my opinion, it has been strung out way too far already — we're going to end up maybe choosing someone to construct a conference-hotel center that will not meet the expectations over the last five, six, seven years."

Yow expressed strong support for the Crystal proposal, saying it "stands out far ahead of any proposal we have received thus far. It is giving us what we want downtown."

Crystal's proposal, presented to city officials last week, includes a $14 million, 230-room hotel and a $1.5 million retail area. A previous development proposal made by Crystal was passed over by the City Council in January when questions were raised about the firm's financing and franchise commitment. The council instead chose Joblin & Associates of Little Rock, Ark., to develop the project.

However, a preliminary development agreement between the city and developer Robert Joblin expired June 30, clearing the way for the city to accept new bids for the project. Questions have been raised about Joblin's ability to finance the project, and Crystal's ability to finance the project was a major concern raised by council members Monday.

Mayor Kelen Westberg called firm financing "the key" to any proposal. "There's a big difference between something that sounds good and something that's ready," she said.

Robert Morgan, of Morgan Commercial Structures of Murphysboro, assured the council that Crystal was ready to provide the equity needed for the project.

"That's all been considered. (Crystal President Wallace) Palmer realizes you can't open the door in the black," said Morgan, who represented Crystal at the council meeting. Morgan Commercial Structures would serve as general contractor for the project, a fact that appeared to please many council members.

Morgan, saying that Crystal is "very conscious of time considerations," urged the City Council to act quickly on the firm's proposal.

City Manager Bill Dixon recommended that a special meeting be called next week to consider the matter further, noting that only four business days would pass before consideration of Crystal's proposal could be taken up again. "I don't think four days is unreasonable," he said.

One particularly positive feature of Crystal's proposal, Dixon said, is that it would not require the city to acquire any more land for the project, but merely requests the city to assist the company in its negotiations to purchase land.

Furthermore, Crystal's new proposal does not include a separate health club and office complex called for in the firm's original proposal, he said, thus avoiding the need for the city to purchase the Nutrition Headquarters Building on the south side of

Dunn says insurance bill should be vetoed

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

A reform bill recently sent to Gov. James Thompson has a fly in its ointment to soothe the so-called insurance crisis, Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said Tuesday.

However, Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, said the bill might be the best compromise the General Assembly could piece together given all the interest groups trying to influence it.

Dunn said he is urging the governor to veto the bill because, among other things, it gives local government units the right to issue general obligation bonds to raise funds to meet insurance costs. It also allows the units to levy taxes to cover those bonds without a referendum, he added.

The text of the bill does not clarify just what is to be considered a local government unit, Dunn said, meaning that all bodies with the power to tax, such as park and school districts, might be included.

If Thompson signs the bill, Dunn said property owners might be in for some unanticipated tax increases.

The bill was passed June 30

Pornography panel links 'smut' to sexual violence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese's pornography panel wants sweeping changes in federal and state laws to try to rid society of the smut it has concluded causes sexual violence, its final report showed Tuesday. The report charged that violence related pornography is directly linked to rape and that non-violent material — though not legally obscene — also contribute to sexual violence. It made 92 recommendations to combat "the cruel plague" of sexual violence.

Rampage suspect's mental health questioned

NEW YORK (UPI) — Columbia Presbyterian Hospital agreed Tuesday to cooperate with an investigation on why a paranoid psychotic was released from the hospital two days before he went on a rampage with a sword on the Staten Island Ferry. Mayor Edward Koch ordered the mental health commissioner to investigate the release of a homeless Cuban refugee who police said killed two people and injured nine others with a two-foot saber Monday because "God told him to do it."

Jordan orders country's PLO offices closed

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Jordanian security police shut down several offices of Yasser Arafat's mainstream wing of the Palestine Liberation Organization Tuesday and gave one of his senior deputies 48 hours to leave the country. The closings, ordered by the government Monday, deprive Arafat's wing of the PLO — known as Fatah, the largest faction in the PLO — of any headquarters in a nation bordering Israel except Lebanon.

Time bomb explodes in Tehran tea shop

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — A powerful time bomb blew up in a busy Tehran tea shop Tuesday injuring 37 people, the state-owned Iranian news agency IRNA said. It said the 33-pound bomb, which also caused extensive material damage, was planted by "terrorists". The bomb was equipped with an electric timing device and was planted inside a tea shop located in front of a bus station, the report said.

Soviet Embassy in Peru attacked by rebels

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Suspected Maoist rebels attacked the Soviet Embassy with submachine guns and explosives Tuesday, and one guerrilla was killed by a bomb that exploded in his hands inside the walled compound, the government said. An undetermined number of rebels were captured after a fight with two police officers in a nearby neighborhood after the guerrillas fled the ornate embassy complex. One of the officers was injured in the gunbattle, officials said.

More union leaders detained in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police used their emergency powers Tuesday to detain more union leaders as representatives of a 50,000-member miners' union launched a court challenge to the 27-day-old nationwide state of emergency. Unions, in the second week of illegal strikes against gold, diamond and coal mines, threatened a one-day nationwide walkout to protest detentions of their leaders under the emergency, imposed June 12 by President Pieter Botha in a bid to stop racial unrest.

Scientists to embark on Titanic film expedition

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (UPI) — Scientists said Tuesday they hope to bring back photographic documentation of the Titanic so thorough that a curious world will see the sunken luxury liner remain at peace in her North Atlantic grave. "It's our feeling the Titanic is best left where it is," said Robert D. Ballard, who heads the Titanic film expedition. The mission to the site of the shipwreck, which killed 1,513 people on April 14, 1912, begins Wednesday.

FDA bans preservative used in salad bars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government Tuesday banned the use of sulfites on raw fruits and vegetables such as those in salad bars because of severe reactions, including deaths, in some people allergic to the preservative. The Food and Drug Administration also broadened its requirement for sulfite labeling on packaged foods. The ban is effective thirty days after its publication in Wednesday's Federal Register.

Dependents get 'open' time to pick coverage

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate was told Tuesday that the state of Illinois has declared an open enrollment for dependents of SIUC employees who are currently covered by Continental Assurance Company and wish to change their insurance coverage.

William Capie, executive director of personnel and labor relations, told the senate that dependents currently covered under Continental Assurance Company have until Friday to switch to either the State Basic Plan or Health Maintenance Organization.

State employees are required to be covered under the State plan or HMO, but dependents may be covered under Continental.

According to a memo dated July 8, from Capie to employees with dependents covered by Continental, "We have just been advised by the State of Illinois, Department of Central Management Services that dependents covered under CNA will not be required to have a health certificate when switching to the State Basic Plan or HMO plan if the conversion is made before July 14, 1986."

Capie said employees would be able to switch plans early Monday morning.

According to the memo, employees wishing to convert health plans for their dependents should go to Personnel Services Benefits Section, 805 S. Elizabeth.

Previously an open enrollment period was not going to be extended, Capie said. The open enrollment began Monday.

Capie said each insurance plan has its own benefits. He said Continental offers good dental benefits, which would benefit people with children. The HMO plan is completely free, he said, but members must go to HMO physicians to receive benefits. The State plan offers 80 percent coverage until the amount exceeds $5,000, when full coverage begins.

Capie also said Carbondale Memorial Hospital is a preferred provider organization. He said the $100 payment for entering the hospital is not necessary and the amount paid by employees under the State plan is decreased to 10 percent.

Toxic phosphorous leaks from derailed freight train

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (UPI) — Five tank cars of a freight train derailed Tuesday, and one began leaking toxic phosphorous, which exploded spontaneously in the hot, muggy weather, sending a poisonous cloud over the Dayton area, officials said.

More than 10,000 people were evacuated from Miamisburg, and City Manager Dennis Kissinger declared a state of emergency at 7 p.m. EDT, about 2 1/2 hours after the accident. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Authorities believe five 20,000-gallon Baltimore & Ohio tank cars jumped the track and one had ruptured and was burning, Ohio Environmental Protection Agency spokeswoman Patricia Madigan said.

White phosphorus spontaneously ignites when water is present and the air temperature is at least 86 degrees Fahrenheit. With the hot, steamy weather in late afternoon, the chemical exploded into flames when the tanker ruptured.

Since phosphorus burns in water, firefighters could not immediately extinguish the blaze and clouds of white phosphoric acid billowed over the Ohio community of about 15,000 about 10 miles south of Dayton.

"It's highly toxic by inhalation, ingestion or skin contact," Madigan said.

About 10,000 people were evacuated from Miamisburg, she said.

The cloud drifted toward Dayton, prompting the Montgomery County Disaster Services Agency to recommend people turn off their air conditioners and close their windows.

Budget committee doubts Congress can cut spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Budget Committee members predicted Tuesday Congress will have a tough time cutting spending this fall to comply with the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law now that its automatic cut provision is gone.

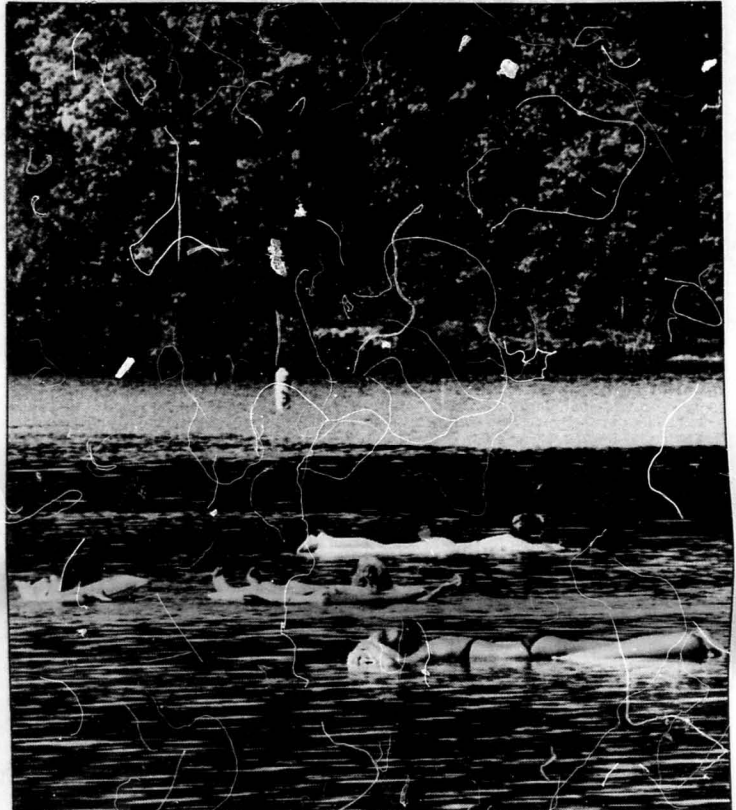

The Supreme Court Monday invalidated the law's key feature — automatic budget cuts that were to have been implemented by the comptroller general — and said instead that Congress must make its own reductions.

House and Senate leaders were confident Congress would live up to its responsibilities, but individual members were less sanguine.

The extra cuts will be necessary if a "snapshot" of the economy, taken Aug. 15, shows the deficit next fiscal year will exceed the Gramm-Rudman target of $144 billion by more than $10 billion. Congress' budget, approved last month, was written to comply with the $144 billion target but changing economics could make it unlikely the magic number will be reached — meaning more budget cuts this fall, just a month before Election Day.

"I think it's going to be awfully difficult to find additional cuts," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y..

People should vote on civic projects

THE PROPOSED CAMPUS-CITY bus system is "in limbo" according to Phil Lyons, the Undergraduate Student Organization president.

And why is it in limbo? Because of the proposed downtown hotel-conference center, Lyons says.

In order to implement the system, the University must work with the city, since the revenues generated from student fees will not cover project expenses.

Use of student fees for the proposed campus-citywide bus system was approved on April 2 by popular vote in the USO elections, showing there is a marked interest among students in such an undertaking.

IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE that no such recent vote has been taken among Carbondale citizens regarding the hotel-conference center. Would they show the same support for that troubled project that the students showed for a bus system?

It is doubtful the troubled hotel-conference center would generate much civic approval. At the moment, there is again doubt as to who will be that project's developer. The city is taking a week to consider an offer from the Crystal Corp. of Boulder, Colo., leaving current developer Robert Joblin hanging.

The council has expressed doubts about Joblin's ability to finance the project. They expressed the same doubt with the Crystal proposal back in January when Joblin was given the go-ahead for the project.

SO IN THE MIST OF ALL THE hotel-conference center uncertainty, the city has pulled back from the USO-proposed bus system in which the city once showed interest.

Many people feel the hotel-conference center may flop. Among those are local motel owners, who conducted a private feasibility study that showed no need for such a facility in Carbondale. The study concluded that the center would probably cause local motel owners loss of revenue resulting in many local motels having to shut down.

And the hotel-conference center was supposed to bring more business into the city, not close down existing businesses. The proposed bus system won't cause any local businesses to suffer.

AND HOW COULD IT? AFTER ALL, there is no local market competition for such an endeavor. And this is just a minor consideration. The major consideration is that the city needs a bus system in the worst way, while there is no real need for the hotel-conference center.

The city is spinning its wheels with the hotel-conference center, and is operating without any real civic mandate. What the city ought to do is ask local citizens to vote on whether or not to proceed with development of the hotel-conference center. And conduct this vote before making any further moves on the project.

And while they're at it, they could ask the Carbondale citizens what they think about a new bus service. Who knows, maybe the city will find it's working on the wrong project.

Big Ditch should be buried

By Ellen Cook
Student Writer

Viewpoint

WAITING ON A train can be an irritating experience, especially if it means being late for class or other engagements. It can also be detrimental to businesses that are located near the tracks and have entrances that get blocked by the backed-up traffic. The City Council tried to alleviate some of these problems by becoming involved in the Carbondale Railroad Relocation Project in 1973. Unfortunately, the council didn't have the foresight to see whether the benefits of the plan could outweigh its costs.

When Congress initiated the CRRP, its main objective was to reduce traffic problems caused by railroad crossings in the city's downtown business district. The plan involved the building of several overpasses and underpasses that would redirect the railroad, reducing train and vehicle conflicts. Two major developments in the plan were the Pleasant Hill Road Overpass, which has already been completed, and the "Big Ditch" project, which has not yet begun.

ACCORDING TO Eldon L. Gosnell, director of the Railroad Relocation Unit, the Pleasant Hill Road Overpass has lured approximately 6,500 vehicles per day from the city's six mainline crossings, primarily the Grand Avenue crossing. The Big Ditch project, which involves the construction of a 30-foot ditch that would run through downtown, is expected to alleviate traffic problems with the estimated 61,600 vehicles that pass through the crossings each day. This figure, for 1985, is expected to rise to 91,500 by 2005.

If the CRRP is completed as planned, the federal government, state government and Illinois Central Gulf Railroad will have spent more than $74 million, with almost $49 million going to the Rail Depression construction. Carbondale's share of the project would be $1.6 million, quite an amount for a city that will have $600,000 cut from its federal revenue sharing in October and had to cut 25 percent in city funding to four of its community programs. In February of this year, some council members expressed doubts about the feasibility of the project, and the plan was reviewed.

ON FEBRUARY 26, the City Council reaffirmed its support for the project, with Councilman Keith Tuxhorn having the only opposing vote. Tuxhorn was concerned that federal funding for the project might be cut before the project was completed. This would leave many businesses in worse shape than before the project, since temporary tracks would have to be constructed during the implementation of the Big Ditch project, leaving many of the downtown businesses with reduced parking. If federal funding was cut, the CRRP would be left with no place to go, regardless of what stage the project was in.

Congressman Ken Gray has placed an amendment to the Surface Transportation Act of 1986 to assure funding for the project, but this doesn't guarantee that funding will be approved. That would leave Carbondale with inadequate funds for the continuation of the CRRP.

ALTHOUGH THE council has maintained that it is legally bound to finance its part of the project, City Attorney Patricia McMeen said that the city has two legal routes that it could take if necessary, but she did not explain the statement further. The City Council needs to become aware of these legal routes and should then take a deeper look at this potentially disastrous situation.

The council should abandon the project now, before it becomes financially and legally involved with no chance of getting out. The Big Ditch project needs to be buried — permanently.

Sex police could impose protection

Hallelujah! A fellow Christian has stepped forward and expressed the ideals that some of us moral and ethical Christians believe in. Brother Hartley has spoken out against those millions of heinous heretics and hell-bound criminals who seek to do and believe in what they want. We need shrewd businessmen like Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson. These men, in the name of God, gross millions of dollars a year from their Christian networks. They could establish an organization known as the "sex police," which could bomb abortion clinics, burn pornographic magazines and otherwise deny citizens their constitutional rights.

Soviet, French leaders hopeful for 2nd summit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and French President Francois Mitterrand met Tuesday and concluded prospects for a second superpower summit were favorable despite continued U.S.-Soviet differences over nuclear weapons, a Soviet official said.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov said the two leaders met for more than five hours Tuesday for talks focusing on East-West relations and nuclear arms control.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said, "The two leaders thoroughly analyzed the international situation, which is worrying, primarily because of the lack of progress toward ending the arms race."

Gerasimov said, however, the outlook was "favorable" that the United States and Soviet Union would be able to agree on a date for a second summit, anticipated before the end of the year in the United States.

"As far as the Soviet position on the summit meeting is concerned, it is favorable. As we know the American position is favorable," he said. "But we believe the summit meeting should not serve as a smokescreen for the continuation of the arms race."

At their first summit meeting in Geneva last November, Gorbachev and President Reagan agreed to pursue cuts in nuclear arsenals and hold additional summits in Washington and Moscow this year and next year.

Relations between the United States and Soviet Union have chilled in the months following the summit and the two sides have not been able to agree on a date for the second Reagan-Gorbachev meeting.

Gorbachev told Mitterrand the Soviet leadership was willing to accept "well-grounded compromises" and expected the United States to take a similar approach, Tass said.

He repeated the charge that the United States has not responded to recent Soviet initiatives at the Geneva arms talks and said the atmosphere between the superpowers would have to improve before a summit could be held.

Mitterrand, who considers himself the Western leader who knows Gorbachev best, arrived in Moscow Monday for a four-day visit that will include three meetings with the Communist Party general secretary.

Mitterrand met with Reagan last week while in New York for the Statue of Liberty celebrations. He was said to have briefed Gorbachev on his talks with Reagan.

Navy Admiral dies after 63-year duty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hyman Rickover, the immigrant admiral who parlayed a nuts-and-bolts knowledge of the Navy into a 63-year career that propelled the U.S. fleet into the nuclear age, died Tuesday. He was 86.

Rickover, a Russian-born 1922 Naval Academy graduate, was forced to retire in 1982 — at the time he was the nation's oldest active military man — and was buffeted by controversy in his last years for accepting more than $67,000 in gifts from military contractors.

But the dispute, described as a "fall from grace" by Navy Secretary John Lehman, like the long history of wrangling with Navy colleagues that preceded it, only slightly tarnished Rickover's image as a golden boy who was "the father of the nuclear navy."

Rickover, who suffered a stroke a year ago, died Tuesday morning at his home in Arlington, Va., across the Potomac River from Washington, the Navy said in a brief statement. The cause of death was not immediately disclosed.

For Weinberger said Rickover's "dedication to excellence... inspiration to us all."

"The entire nation remains indebted to Admiral Rickover for the very existence of our modern nuclear navy and its central role in the maintenance of peace and security."

Lehman, who was instrumental in forcing Rickover into total retirement, issued a statement saying the Navy and the nation "have lost a dedicated officer or historic accomplishment. In his 63 years of service, Adm. Rickover took the concept of nuclear power from an idea to the present reality of more than 150 U.S. naval ships under nuclear power. He has set the standard for the world in the peaceful and safe use of nuclear power."

6.0 earthquake rocks California

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — An earthquake registering 6.0 on the Richter scale shook Southern California early Tuesday, cracking building foundations, sparking fires, knocking out power to 100,000 homes and causing minor injuries.

The quake, centered about 12 miles northwest of Palm Springs along the Mission Creek Fault, struck at 2:21 a.m. and was felt for about 30 seconds, said Dennis Meredith, spokesman for the seismology lab at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

Numerous landslides involving car-sized boulders forced the closure of a highway leading into Palm Springs and two brush fires were sparked by downed power lines in Riverside County, officials said.

Windows were shattered, radio stations went off the air in San Diego and Palm Springs, and power transformers caught fire in Morongo Valley, about 15 miles north of Palm Springs.

Waldheim oath vows to fight anti-Semitism

MOSCOW (UPI) — Former U.N. chief Kurt Waldheim, who spent his election campaign defending himself against accusations he was involved in Nazi war crimes, took the oath of office as Austria's president Tuesday and pledged to fight anti-Semitism.

The former U.N. secretary-general was inaugurated as the sixth president of the Austrian republic, a largely ceremonial post, in the gilded halls of Parliament during a silent protest inside and demonstrations outside.

"I swear I will observe the laws of the republic and do my duty after my best knowledge and conscience," he said, voluntarily adding, "So help me God."

The building was heavily guarded by police in anticipation of possible trouble with anti-Waldheim protesters but there were no reports of incidents.

Inside Parliament, many members of the Socialist Party wore black ties in silent protest against Waldheim.

Waldheim is accused, mainly by the New York-based World Jewish Congress, of participating in atrocities against Jews and partisans while a lieutenant in the German army in World War II.

Coup soldiers pardoned leader's fate not decided

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Rebellious soldiers involved in an attempted coup that ended peacefully at dawn Tuesday were quickly pardoned while President Corazon Aquino considered whether to punish the leader of the 36-hour revolt by Marcos loyalists.

Arturo Tolentino, the 75-year-old Marcos backer and self-proclaimed president of a breakaway government who precipitated the crisis Sunday, remained free Tuesday but the Justice Ministry was gathering evidence to charge him with rebellion.

"The general belief is that the crime of rebellion has been committed," Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said. "You cannot just arrest him. Charges must be filed." Gonzales met with Tolentino, vice presidential running mate of ousted ruler Ferdinand Marcos in the fraudulent Feb. 7 election, at Navy headquarters Tuesday. He told reporters President Corazon Aquino may decide to grant executive clemency to Tolentino, who declined comment after the meeting.

It was unclear how Aquino would handle Tolentino.

'Chapter Two' gives real life perspective of people, situations

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

"Sure there's a lot of schmalz in this play," says Wynn Alexander, director of the McLeod Summer Playhouse production of "Chapter Two."

"But there's a lot schmalz in real life too, and this play can be very real."

The Neil Simon comedy, first produced in New York in 1977, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday through Sunday at the McLeod Theater.

Alexander, who is competing his Master's of Fine Arts in theater, said "Chapter Two" is somewhat an autobiographical play for Simon. Like the character George in "Chapter Two," Simon suffered the death of his first wife only to discover, to his amazement, that he had fallen in love again.

Alexander said he considers "Chapter Two" to be a turning point for Simon, who is known for his light comedy. "Sure, it's a funny play, but there's a real undercurrent of pain. Here's a man learning to love again and that hurts," Alexander said.

He said that most Neil Simon plays, such as "The Odd

Wynn Alexander

Couple" or "Barefoot in the Park," contain a lot of witty banter and wisecracks.

"You can almost hear the 'Puh-doom-pah!' after every line," Alexander said, miming a drum roll. "That becomes a problem, because human beings don't always act like that," he said.

"But one thing I realized on re-reading the play is that to a large extent, people are the way Simon describes them. We do banter and try to be cute and get embarrassed when we give engagement rings," Alexander says.

Recently married, Alexander says he speaks from experience.

Some theatergoers may remember Alexander's directing credentials from the Spring McLeod production of Sam Shepherd's "True West." Gary Graves and Eric Scholtz, who played brothers Lee and Austin in the Shepherd play, are teamed as brothers again in "Chapter Two."

Graves, a graduate student in playwriting, plays George Schneider, a successful but lonely writer. Senior in theater Eric Scholtz plays Leo Schneider, George's younger and more practical brother.

Also in the cast is Mary Runtz Alexander as Pave Medwick, a New York actress. Playing Jennie Malone, the character patterned after Simon's wife Marsha Mason, is Sandra Cohlmeier.

Tickets are $7 for Friday and Saturday performances and $6 for Thursday and Sunday performances. SIU-C students with a valid I.D. may purchase rush tickets for $3 at the door one-half hour before curtain.

USO ball, retreat eyed at meeting

By Brett Yates
Staff Writer

Plans for an Undergraduate Student Organization ball in October and a USO Senate retreat in August were discussed at the USO Executive Cabinet meeting.

Travis Davidson, USO communications director who is in charge of the USO "Fal' Ball," said Monday that he will seek permission to allow persons to consume alcohol at the ball which will be held Oct. 11 in the Student Center. Davidson said he should know in a couple of weeks whether alcohol consumption will be allowed at the event.

The USO Senate retreat to acquaint new senators with parliamentary procedure will be held Aug. 27 in the Student Center. Students who are not members of USO are welcome.

USO President Phil Lyons announced the appointment of Mike Greer as USO city affairs commissioner and of David Madlener to be in charge of the USO voter registration drive in the fall.

Greer, who succeeds Madlener as city commissioner, said he hopes to establish "stronger ties" with the city and to continue pursuing plans for a joint city and University busing system.

The possible can ban on the Strip during the Halloween celebration was also discussed at the meeting. Greer said that since the city's action on the can ban "is still on ice — until September," the City Affairs Commission should delay in taking action.

Greer said he will try to have students appointed on the city Halloween Administrative Committee. The Halloween Administrative Committee, made up of city officials and employees, decides the preparation for the annual event.

Senior day to provide glimpse of campus

High school seniors will have the opportunity to visit SIU-C and look into academic programs and student services on Senior Day, July 25.

Over 300 students and their families are expected to attend the program, which will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Center ballrooms.

Students may apply for on-the-spot admission if they have complete high school transcripts with class rank and ACT scores.

The agenda includes campus tours, admissions counseling and information sessions on housing, financial aid and career counseling.

Some departments will offer tours of laboratory and research facilities.

Prof to lecture in Chicago

Henry Dan Piper, English professor and former dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, has been invited to participate in a series of lectures on the history and ethnic culture of Illinois.

The series begins Sept. 16. Piper will present his lecture Oct. 7 in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago.

The lectures, under the general title of "The Many Faces of Illinois," will focus on the cultural contributions of various groups that have migrated into Illinois, beginning with the earliest Asian immigrants.

Piper's lecture, the fourth of the six-part series, will focus on the post-Civil War settlements in Illinois, emphasizing the colonizing roles of the railroad and coal industries.

Piper is the co-author of "Land Between the Rivers: The Southern Illinois Country" and is currently writing the text for a sequel, "Southern Illinois Coal."

He has also written seven other books that have been published in Illinois and abroad and have been translated into seven other languages.

1-Up program to help children

One-Up, a summer education program for area elementary-age youth, will be held July 14 through Aug. 8 at the Eurma U. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow.

The purpose of the program is to help students maintain previously learned skills and provide activities to promote the development of new skills.

The program will run from 9:30 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday.

To register, call 453-4554.

Parkinson's Educational Program to show video featuring experts

The Parkinson's Educational Program of Southern Illinois will show a video which was produced by Marjorie Dale of the Hospital Satellite Network on Parkinson's Disease.

The video will be shown at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Carbondale Clinic and at 7 p.m. July 17 at Marion Memorial Hospital.

The video consists of an introduction by a neurologist, exercise discussed by a director of rehabilitation, medication and diet explained by a pharmacologist and ends with a psychologist dealing with family acceptance.

Workshop affords student plays exposure

By Mary Wieniewski
Staff Writer

A "wright" is a craftsman or constructive workman and a workshop is a place where awright can work on his craft.

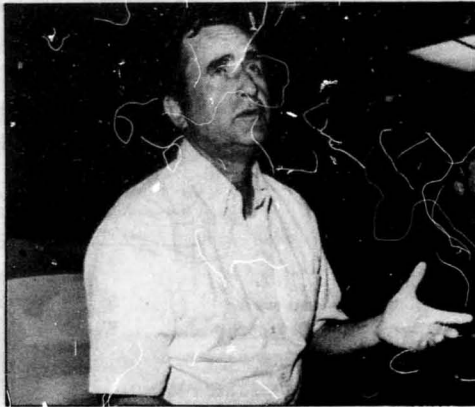

The student Playwright's Workshop is to help dramatists shape and hone their creations as a carpenter shapes a chair, a chair.

The Playwright's Workshop features summer and spring productions of student-written plays. It is sponsored by the Theater Department's playwriting-dramatic literature program.

CHRISTIAN MOE, theater professor, teaches playwriting and is chairman of the Playwright's Workshop. Moe said the department offers beginning playwrights "a rare opportunity to see their own work performed."

Moe said students have two opportunities to have their plays produced — in the summer Playwright's Workshop and in the spring event, "Evening of New Short Plays."

He said the department also sponsors about six dramatized readings of new plays a year.

Christian Moe

Student work has also been used as projects for directing classes.

THERE ARE several benefits in producing student plays, Moe said. Playwrights not only see their own plays but go through the rehearsal process and work with actors and directors on play revisions.

Brian Carney, graduate student in the playwriting program, agrees.

"I'm getting to know my own strengths and weaknesses. I don't think you really are a playwright until you've seen your own work done," Carney said.

Moe said another advantage of the workshop is that actors can create new roles and directors can "explore some unknown territory."

"IN THE COLD, cruel world of professional directing, most new directors have to do new plays," Moe said. He will be directing "Haymarket," a play by Joanne Koch, this spring. "It's like learning to swim," he said.

Moe said the program is mainly for second-year graduate students and most produced plays come out of playwriting classes.

When teaching playwriting Moe said he tries to create "a good environment for writing" in the classroom.

"THERE ARE exercises, required reading and a built-in captive audience since all plays are read in class," he said. "There are also deadlines and most writers seem to like them because real life won't give them," he added.

Moe said although he doesn't require a particular form of play, he uses the "well-made" or classically designed play for required readings and as a model.

MOE USES Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll's House" as an example of a well-made play. Classical form includes an expository, a clear conflict, a rising and falling action and a high point or climax, he said.

"This is an era of experimentation," Moe said. "Picasso learned realism before he went into abstract and playwrights should learn the classical form before they start experimenting."

Many products of the workshop have won awards. Martin Jones, a recent SIU-C graduate, is a finalist for the CBS award for his play, "West Memphis Mo-Jo Hand."

KENTON KERSTING, graduate student in playwriting, won an award at the American College Theater Festival for his play "Pon-talba!", which will be presented as part of this summer's workshop.

"The process forces you to revise your work — you revise everything. As Dr. Moe says, plays aren't written, they're rewritten," Kersting said.

Four student plays will be presented as part of the Playwright's Workshop at the Laboratory Theater this summer.

Sox owners will pursue offers if move to Addison falls through CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox will entertain offers from other cities to move the team while they pursue locating the club in suburban Addison, club owners said Tuesday.

White Sox board chairman Jerry Reinsdorf and team president Eddie Einhorn confirmed they have had preliminary talks with unspecified cities for moving the club should a move to Addison fall through.

The two owners held a lengthy news conference one day after announcing they had given up plans to stay within the city and would move out of Comiskey Park in three to four years.

"Addison is definitely our first choice right now," Reinsdorf said. "We have had preliminary talks with a couple of markets and will pursue that if the option in Addison fails."

Reinsdorf, a member of the major league expansion committee, refused to name the cities. However, cities rumored to be on the list include Denver, Washington, D.C., Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., and Phoenix. Both Denver and Washington have existing stadiums.

The owners said after talks broke down with the city about a municipal facility, the next priority was a move to Du Page County where the Sox have a 140-acre parcel of land suitable for a stadium.

"Addison is not Iowa or Timbuktu," Reinsdorf said. "It is still within the boundaries of the area. That is our priority right now."

The two owners did not rule out a sale of the club to a local group to keep the White Sox in Chicago.

Boosters Club, Saluki athletics merge together

By Steve Merritt
Assistant Sports Editor

The Saluki Boosters Club has "officially joined hands" with the Athletics Department as part of the reorganization of athletics.

The club's role — drumming up support for and bringing together people who support SIU-C athletics — will remain much the same as before, say club President Cliff Phillips and Athletics Director Jim Livengood.

But they hope and expect the new arrangement will get a lot more people involved.

Anybody who contributes money to the athletics program will now be listed as a Boosters Club member. Previously the club had a $15 membership fee.

"We're still the same organization," said Phillips, former vice president of the club, who is general manager of Carbondale's K-Mart store. "We're still the host of all the special activities surrounding Saluki athletic events — the tailgate parties, the Thursday afternoon lunches, the post-game basketball parties and all the other special events."

Livengood agreed, saying that "operations will be exactly the same as before." "It goes along with the athletics restructure," Livengood said. "It's part of making the athletics department one entity that operates under the same umbrella."

The Booster's Club was formerly an independent agency initiated by the Alumni Association. It hosted special activities and solicited contributions for the SIU-C athletics departments. Now that the club has joined with the athletics department, the only difference is that contributions now go to the athletics department under the name of the Saluki Athletic Fund, a fund that was started when athletics was taken from the jurisdiction of the Office of Student Affairs.

The "joining of hands" between the athletics department and the club, simply put, means the Club will now be allocated a budget and audited by the athletics departments, Livengood explained. The club formerly took a part of the $15 membership fees (which are no longer required) for its operational budget.

NFL union opposes drug plan

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The NFL players union filed a grievance against the league's Management Council Tuesday, saying it would not allow Commissioner Pete Rozelle's new drug plan to be "shoved down our throats."

NFL Players Association president Gene Upshaw said players were willing to talk with the commissioner about a new drug plan, but the program Rozelle announced Monday was not acceptable because negotiations had not been held between both parties.

"The NFL players have some ideas (on what can be done)," Upshaw said. "They have always been willing to sit down and talk about them. But what we are not willing to do is to accept it (the drug program) shoved down our throats."

NFLPA general counsel Richard Berthelsen said the union had filed a grievance with the NFL's Management Council in New York City. He said the council was asked to answer within 24 hours if it would accept arbitration on the issue.

"We filed a grievance to protest the drug program unveiled yesterday by the league," Berthelsen said. "It was filed against not only the Management Council, but each of the 28 clubs in the league. It's filed against the league itself and Commissioner Rozelle."

The commissioner said in New York that the challenge to his policy was rejected, but it still disappointed him.

Paul Bubb, SIU-C's athletics fundraiser, said the key reason for joining the club and the athletics departments was that the NCAA is trying to get away from having independent organizations outside athletic departments responsible for the solicitation of contributions. Bubb said that although no legislation controlling or prohibiting the practice was introduced at this year's NCAA convention, it would probably be addressed within the next two years.

"Within the next two years," Bubb said, "I expect to see specific legislation passed by the NCAA that will completely eliminate independent organizations from collecting contributions."

Livengood said he felt the NCAA might take action even sooner.

Both Livengood and Bubb said that a major reason for the NCAA wanting to keep separate groups out of contributions is that it makes it much easier to find out where money was spent. This way, all athletic contributions and expenditures will be in the same place — university athletics budgets.

Under the new setup, anyone who gives money to SIU-C athletics — be it a contribution to the Saluki Athletic Fund, the Boosters Club, the Alumni Association, the Letterman's Club, the SIU Foundation or any other contribution slated for the athletics department — will automatically be enrolled as a member of the Boosters Club.

"All we've tried to do is bring everyone under the same umbrella," Bubb said. "Saluki Athletic Fund is simply a generic term for our fundraising arm. Other than that, there is very little difference at all, if any."

Last calendar year, the athletics departments benefitted from 666 contributors who gave $100 or less for a total of $2,967. There were 154 contributions between $100 and $349 amounting to $20,854, while 78 people gave between $350 and $699 for a total of $33,995. Eleven contributions of between $700 and $999 added up to a total of $8,643. Fifty fund-givers were responsible for $66,773 for gifts between $1,000 and $3,493, while five people gave gifts of more than $3,500 for a total of $29,014.

All told, contributions added up to $182,246, or $17,754 short of the $200,000 goal set by Vice President Bruce Swinburne when the athletic departments were under his jurisdiction as head of the Office of Student Affairs.

This year, Livengood has set a figure of $300,000, a figure both he and Bubb feel is optimistic yet obtainable and realistic.

"The people who contribute to the athletics department, no matter what the amount, are the people who really help us out," Livengood said. "We really need support, both financially and in terms of fan support to make this athletics department as good as it can be."

The two main fundraisers think the goal is obtainable because of the newly devised "Saluki Clubs," clubs in the Southern Illinois area that consist of supporters of SIU-C athletics.

"By forming the Saluki Clubs, or satellite booster clubs," Livengood said, "we hope to spread the good feeling we all share about our athletics programs to other people in the area. Not all our fans live right here in Carbondale and we'd like to show these people our appreciation by giving them the same opportunities as Booster Club members right here on our back porch."

Anyone who contributes to any aspect of the athletics departments and becomes a member of the Boosters Club is entitled to the Saluki Boosters Club Newsletter and invitation to all the various special events.

The Boosters Club is run by a 16-member board of directors. The president, Phillips, also serves on a special fundraising policy group, along with Livengood, Bubb and Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West.

Before the changes were made, a Saluki supporter might contribute to the Saluki Athletic Fund but still not be a member of the Boosters Club. Bubb and Phillips both hope the changes will increase the number of people who will participate, contribute and support SIU-C athletics.

Soviet pole vaulter sets world record

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet pole vaulter Sergei Bubka set a world record with a 19 feet, 8.75 inches leap Tuesday to highlight the fourth day of the Goodwill Games.

Bubka eclipsed his previous world best of 19-8.25, which he set in Paris last year. Fellow Soviet Radion Gataulin took second place (19-0.5) and Earl Bell of the United States finished third (18-10.5).

"I think that the limit is still far away as vaulting technique is being constantly improved," Bubka said after his record-breaking leap. "I'm glad that this happened at the world's first Goodwill Games, which serve the noble ideals of sport, promoting friendship between nations," he said.

Heat wave makes life sticky in East; pollution levels rise

A stagnant mass of muggy air hung heavy over the East Coast Tuesday in the third day of a heat wave, driving up air pollution levels and putting a peak demand on power companies and air conditioner repairmen.

The heat wave, caused by a stagnant high pressure system over the Southeast, pushed temperatures "from Virginia to the southern New England states" toward record levels for the third straight day, National Weather Service meteorologist Pete Reynolds said.

Temperatures soared into the 90s by noon in New York, Washington, D.C., and Baltimore, Reynolds said.

"The temperature has been going up several degrees an hour and the hottest hours are usually between 2 and 5 p.m.," he said.

In Philadelphia, many of the city's 85 public swimming pools were closed as temperatures climbed toward the 100-degree mark. Mounds of trash were left steaming on sidewalk corners because of an eight-day strike by city workers, but officials said the trash did not pose an immediate health hazard.

Officials were concerned about the city's water reserves as overheated youths unable to cool off in public swimming pools opened fire hydrants. Joan Fredette, a spokeswoman for the Philadelphia Water Department, said she expected the city to lose between 20 and 25 percent of the 400 million gallons used daily in the city to illegally open hydrants.

The Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection said its southeast coastline was in danger of reaching unhealthy pollution levels because pollutants were being trapped in the stagnant air. In New Jersey, officials issued a smog alert for the southwest portion of the state, advising people with respiratory problems to remain inside.

Air conditioner repair shops in the Washington, D.C., area reported a three-day backlog on service calls. One shop said it received 200 calls in a 4-hour period. Temperatures in Washington soared as high as 102 degrees Monday, triggering record demands for power.

Ice cream sales and swimming pool attendance remained low in the Washington area, as many people opted to remain in air conditioned buildings.

Alaska also was in the grip of a heat wave. Bettles, about 30 miles north of the Arctic Circle, hit 88 degrees Monday.

Twenty faculty, staff receive over $1.7 million in grants

Twenty SIU-C faculty and staff members have recently received grants for projects and research totalling over $1.7 million.

Theodore A. Burton, professor of mathematics, received $30,192 from the National Science Foundation for the project "Mathematical Sciences: Functional Differential Equations."

The project will investigate several topics related to the theory and application of functional differential equations.

SCOTT J. SPECTOR, associate professor of mathematics, received two $14,500 grants from the National Science Foundation and the United States Air Force Office of Scientific Research for the project "Material Instabilities in Solids."

The purpose of these grants is to consider a number of math problems related to material instabilities and material failures in solids.

THE PEABODY COAL Co., awarded George G. Gumerman, director of the Center for Archaeological Investigations, $154,261 to continue the project "Black Mesa."

The grant supports the writing, editing and publishing of archaeological materials from Peabody's Black Mesa leasehold in Navajo County, Ariz.

RAMESH GUPTA, assistant professor in medical biochemistry, received $82,101 from the National Institutes of Health General Medical Sciences for the project "Transfer RNAs and Their Genes in the Archaeobacteria."

The goals of this study are to understand the structure and function of the genes on TRNA genes in archeobacteria.

JOHN CRAIG CARRELL, program coordinator for the Coal Research Center, received grants of $185,000 and $125,000 from the Department of Energy for the project "High Sulfur Coal Research."

These grants will be used for broad-based research on high sulfur coal and to expand the technology base that will allow for the increased use of high sulfur coals in economically and environmentally acceptable ways.

JAMES H. SWISHER, director of the Coal Research Center, was awarded $142,000 from the U.S. Department of the Interior Bureau of Mines for the project "Illinois Mining and Minerals Resources Research Institute FY 87."

The grant is to promote, support and facilitate basic and applied research that contributes to a comprehensive state and national program on mining engineering and mineral science research.

ISAAC SHECHMEISTER, professor emeritus in microbiology, and Walter J. Sundberg, associate professor of microbiology, received $193,140 from the National Science Foundation for the project "Institute in Microbiology and Human Genetics for Biology Teachers in Southern Illinois and Adjacent State Areas."

The purpose of the grant is to identify and recognize 25 high school biology teachers in need of inservice training. The project will also provide training in science teaching strategies to support the Institute content in microbiology and human genetics.

SPECTRUM 2000, Inc., awarded Chai-Lun John Hu, professor of electrical engineering, $74,500 for the project "Construct and Test a Novel System."

The grant will be used to test a novel three probe automatic microwave impedance measuring and tracking system.

Steven E. Kraft, associate professor, and William M. Herr, chair of agribusiness economics, received $11,836 from the Illinois Department of Revenue for the project "An Evaluation of Marginal Agricultural Land Moving In and Out of Crop Production."

THE GRANT is for the evaluation of land use changes at lower SPIs where the net income from grain shifts from positive to negative.

George Kapusta, professor of soil science, received $90,000 from the Illinois Soybean Program Operating Board to continue the project "Soybean Weed Control Research"

The purpose of the grant is to continue current research and to rapidly get the information to Illinois soybean producers to ensure they are current with the most effective and economical weed control practices.

JOHN H. YOPP, professor of botany, and Oval Myers Jr., professor of plant and soil science, received $36,000 from the Illinois Soybean Program Operating Board to continue the project "A Multi-probe Approach to the Identification of the Casual Agent, Host Responses and Environmental Conditions Resulting in Sudden Death Syndrome of Soybeans."

The grant will be used to identify agents responsible for SDS of soybeans, characterize host responses and to determine which conditions enhance the disease.

JOHN C. CRELLING, associate professor of geology, and Russell R. Dutcher, dean of the College of Science, received $10,000 from Texas Tech University for the project "Laser Microscopy Study."

The grant is for the preparation and handling source rock samples for laser microscopy, interpretation of laser fluorescence data from organic material and technical support for the Pulsed-Laser Microscopy System.

BILL GLEN GOOCH, associate professor in vocational education studies, received $99,775 from the Illinois State Board of Education for the project "University Plan for Education for Employment."

The objective of the grant is to provide an approved teacher certification program for students who want to be vocational teachers, administrators or counselors.

BARBARA E. GRACE, director of Head Start, was awarded $452,764 from the Department of Health and Human Services Office of Human Development Services for the project "Head Start: Full Year Part Day Handicapped Training and Technical Assistance."

Through the grant, Head Start will service children and their families with a comprehensive preschool program, parent training and advocacy efforts for families served.

DOROTHY R. BLEYER, associate dean in the School of Technical Careers, received $10,000 from the Illinois State Board of Education DAVTE for the project "Industry-Education Workshops for Technical Skills Upgrade."

The objective of the grant is to upgrade the technical skills of secondary and post-secondary vocational technical teachers.

IRENE CARLTON, director of the Small Business Development Center, received $70,000 from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs for the project "Small Business Development Center II."

The grant will provide financial assistance to establish programs for the operation and management of a Small Business Development Center.

Grant provides five scholarships

The following students have received scholarships through the $142,000 grant from the U.S. Bureau of Mines for the Coal Research Center's Illinois Mining and Minerals Resources Research Institute.

Del Reeves of Hillsboro, a senior in engineering, has won an IMMRRRI scholarship for the second consecutive year. The scholarship consists of $1,000 cash award and a tuition waiver.

Charles Cole, a two-time IMMRRRI award winner and graduate student in zoology from Worthington, Ohio, will receive an IMMRRRI fellowship, which carries an $8,400 cash award and a tuition waiver.

Additional graduate students receiving IMMRRRI fellowships are Vitrod Lal of India, mining engineering; Gary William Theiera of West Malaysia, plant and soil science; and Guoliang Yang of China, physics.

president agrees to distribute the money, Baily said.

Last year, the budget for the Affirmative Action Office was $7,756. The president later — during a budget reappraisal — approved about $2,000 more, which allowed for the total fiscal 1986 budget $9,500.

A redefinition of the objectives of affirmative action at SIU-C warranted the increase, Baily said.

Previously, the Affirmative Action Office was only a monitoring device for University compliance with affirmative action hiring and employment guidelines, he said. The office is presently responsible for recruitment of minority students.

Somit said that Baily, who came to the University last fall, was to help build an aggressive affirmative action program.

Baily said his "discomfort" came when he saw "most of the money was for salaries and there was very little for recruitment of minorities and education about minority issues."

The budget requested for fiscal 1987 would have initiated programs or increased existing ones that would help build an aggressive program, he said.

However, Baily said, the Affirmative Action Office will now have to decrease recruitment advertising for faculty and staff and reschedule or eliminate two or three seminars which were to be led by minority speakers.

And there will be no new development of brochures, he said.

Baily said that he didn't think he could make any further reductions without cutting heavily into funds allocated for operating expenses, which have already been reduced.

Marian Davis, equal opportunity officer, said brochures explaining the affirmative action program that list the rules monitored by the office will soon run out. Brochures regarding sexual harassment have run out, she said.

"It is not be kind of thing that is promoting affirmative action," Baily said, "when you don't have those things to show to people."

Printing of the brochures is funded through the commodities budget, which was $750 last year. The cost of printing the brochures the office needs this year, Davis said, would be between $1,600 and $1,700.

About $1,650 was spent last year on travel to such things as national meetings on affirmative action, Davis said. Only $450 — about one trip — is being allocated for travel expenses this year, she said.

The Office of New Student Development reimburses the Affirmative Action Office for expenses incurred in the effort to recruit new minority students, Baily said, which may be why the president's proposed budget is slightly more than half of the requested budget.

"I think what happened is they identified that as a resource," he said, "but it is only for the undergraduate student recruitment. If we could just get some support for graduate student recruitment that would help, too."

Baily said the state is not helping much.

The Senate re-enacted a bill in the fall that made it mandatory for universities to recruit minority students and to maintain data bases on them. Since that time, Baily said, there has been no policy development, no policy guidelines and no funding.

Baily said he has been told by John Baker, executive director of planning and budgeting, that he will have a meeting with Somit to discuss the budget. The meeting has not been scheduled.

Somit's enthusiasm to build an aggressive affirmative action program is encouraging, Baily said, but he is waiting for the movement of the mechanisms that would accomplish that.

The decrease in the affirmative action budget, Baker said, is not necessarily a sign that the president's desire to strengthen the program has also decreased.

Baker said that although several areas within the president's budget are receiving increases, most areas are not.

"One can't always measure aggressiveness in financial terms," he said.

by a vote of 30-23 in the Senate and 76-41 in the House.

A spokeswoman in the governor's office said although the bill has yet to reach Thompson's desk, which means action on it may not be taken for up to 90 days, members of his staff are already reviewing it.

Dunn said he doubts the bill will lower insurance costs in the state, in addition to possibly raising taxes. He said this is in part because the bill failed to put limits on how much judges can award for punitive damages and how much attorneys can charge.

While he has no reservations about allowing plaintiffs to receive as much as the court deems fair in actual damages such as medical costs and damage to property, Dunn said limiting punitive damages would not hamper a victim's right to be compensated for being wronged.

He also said limiting lawyer fees to one-third of the damages awarded, instead of the 70 percent some receive now, might reduce the size of awards and in turn lower insurance costs.

However, Dunn said he will not be surprised if the governor passes the bill, because, despite its flaws, it does have some positive aspects.

For one thing, he said, the bill would bar defendants who are less than 25 percent at fault in a joint liability action from being sued for damages they did not cause.

Also, plaintiffs who are more than 50 percent at fault for injury could no longer collect damages for negligence or in product liability cases, Dunn said. Another provision of the bill is designed to end frivolous lawsuits, he said.

Richmond agreed that the two changes in liability claims are the key positive aspects of the bill, which he termed "a big move in the direction of ending the crisis."

He said the bill strikes a "happy medium" between trial lawyers, victims' rights advocates and business groups who each hoped to shape the legislation to their likings.

"None of the parties involved were totally happy with the outcome," Richmond said. He said this indicates that all sides were forced to compromise.

He said he was especially pleased the bill did not jeopardize victims' rights. "We must maintain victims' abilities to be reimbursed for whatever happens to them," Richmond said.

Heat-related illnesses more often affect elderly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although summer is a time for outdoor recreation, hot and humid weather can pose severe health problems for many people, especially people over age 50, according to the National Institute on Aging.

Heat-related illnesses, which range from heat fatigue to the potentially fatal heat stroke, are more likely to affect older people because of certain medical factors. These include: diabetes and heart disease; certain drugs, such as diuretics, sedatives and some heart and blood pressure medications that alter the ability to sweat; and changes in the skin, slowed circulation and inefficient sweat glands caused by the normal aging process.

Older people should take these necessary steps to lessen the risks of heat-related illness:

- Drink plenty of water and juices.
- Bathe or shower frequently using cool water.
- Wear lightweight, loose-fitting clothing (cotton is best).
- Avoid vigorous outdoor activity during the hottest part of the day (noon to 4 p.m.).
- Keep shades or curtains down during the day and windows open at night.
- Visit air-conditioned places such as shopping malls, libraries and theaters but avoid overcrowded places.

Monroe Street.

Jim Cleland, a downtown property owner whose building is located on land proposed for a city parking garage that would be part of the convention center package, indicated that Crystal officials had already approached him about acquiring the property.

Councilman Keith Tuzet, a longtime opponent of the downtown convention center project, suggested that the city consider asking local architects if they would be interested in cooperating with the city on a convention center project developed by the city.

Liquor committee OKs beer garden

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission has approved a request to construct a patio-beer garden at Jeremiah's restaurant, 201 N. Washington St.

The commission took the action at Monday's City Council meeting after a favorable recommendation last week from the Liquor Review Board. The beer garden will consist of a concrete patio surrounded by a wooden fence and will be located on the north side of the building.

Tom Sanders, the owner of Jeremiah's, has said he hopes to open the restaurant Monday.
