Budget delay may stall pay from SIU

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

If legislators wait any longer to pass a budget, SIU employees may be waiting for their paychecks.

Beginning July 16 if a budget is not passed, the first set of paychecks will be delayed, said SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit. On July 19 student paychecks also will be delayed if the budget has not been agreed upon.

All state agency payrolls are sent to the Comptroller's Office, but because there is no budget for any agencies, the checks cannot be released, said Rick Davis, spokesman for the comptroller.

"Until the budget impasse is resolved, we'll just have to wait," Davis said.

State employees still may

Legislators fail to meet; frustration mounts

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The possibility that some state government workers will not receive their first paychecks of the new fiscal year grew dramatically Monday when the four legislative leaders did not meet with Gov. Jim Edgar.

The frustration also was heightened by a letter from state Comptroller Dawn Clark Netsch that indicates a firm budget agreement must be reached by Thursday at noon or more than 10,000 state workers will not receive their paychecks on time on July 15.

If the impasse stretches several days beyond Thursday, a total of 21,000 state workers will not see checks. Ironically, employees in the governor's office will be in the first group not to receive checks if there is no fiscal year 1992 budget.

The Senate and the House actually met in session for less than an hour and they have not met for a full 60 minutes on any day since Friday. It was the eighth day of the new fiscal year receive paychecks until July 15, but Davis said it would be for work done before the beginning of the new fiscal year July 1.

Pettit said the July 16 payroll for SIUC includes about 1,200 employees who are paid semi-monthly. The total amount of that payroll is nearly $1.7 million.

The July 19 payroll includes nearly 3,300 student employees.

Without a budget, all state agencies are facing delays, but the University has tried to make some leeway in the draining financial pool.

Pettit said Garrett Deakin, SIUC executive assistant for external affairs, asked members of Gov. Jim graduate student in sculpture, carefully pour 2,800-degree molten iron into a sculptured cast Saturday at the SIUC Foundry on Pleasant Hill Road.

SIUC foundry's rare cast iron pours lure participants from around nation

When the metal got hot Saturday, the artists got going to the one of the best foundries in the nation.

Artists from around the nation gathered in Carbondale at the SIUC foundry Saturday to make sculptures from melted iron. Iron pouring is an ancient technique done in only two schools in the nation, said University Museum assistant curator of art Ben Meeker.

School of Art and Design Director Brent Kington said SIUC is one of the best foundries in the nation, and it is one of only two schools that do iron pouring. Foundries are facilities for casting molten metals.

"We offer a total foundry experience to the student,"

Kington said.

Iron is used at SIUC because it is less expensive than other metals. Large objects can be done inexpensively. Iron is about 18 cents a pound and bronze is about $2.30 a pound.

The iron is heated to about 2,700 degrees in an eight-foot-tall barrel lined with sand in the bottom. The melted iron is poured into ceramic shell or resin-bonded sand molds.

Ceramic shell molds are made from silica that is fused together and resin-bonded sand molds are made from sand that is bonded together with a catalyst.

Steven Steinke, graduate student in sculpture from Montana, said while being poured, the iron is so hot it is almost white. Two tons of cast iron is poured continuously for two hours.

The molds are broken away after the iron cools to reveal the sculpture.

Some of the sculptures made Saturday included wall plaques and abstract statues.

Steinke said he had about six molds he was using at the same time.

"I start working two or three weeks before the pour," he said. "I do this at least once a year."

Thad Duhigg, sculptor from Texas, said he came to Carbondale for the iron pour to get a lot of work done and to socialize with people who get together from all over the country to participate.

Duhigg's sculptures are part of larger pieces he will assemble when he returns to Texas.

"It's a lot of work. We've worked straight through the holiday, 18 hour days," Duhigg said.

USG sends Chamber of Commerce list for improving student-proprietor relations

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Undergraduate Student Government representatives are trying to resolve perceptions some students may have about the relationship between the University and local businesses.

USG President Jack Sullivan presented Carbondale Chamber of Commerce officials Monday with a list of problems he feels exists between SIUC students and the business community.

Sullivan said he went to the chamber because of numerous complaints he received from students.

The loss of the University debit card, problems with using checks and the attitudes business owners have for students topped the list.

Sullivan said the loss of the University debit card is forcing students to depend on the point-of-sale system that may take a long time to be made possible in Carbondale. It may not be available to all students if they do not have accounts with banks that offer the service.

"We want a debit card accessible to all students if point-of-sale ever comes," he said. "We don't have any choice now."

A point-of-sale system is similar to the once-proposed SIUC debit

Iraq reports on nuclear capabilities

VIENNA (UPI) — Iraq has given the United Nations a report detailing its nuclear weapons capabilities, including a uranium-enrichment program whose existence President Saddam Hussein had previously denied, the International Atomic Energy Agency said Monday.

U.N. officials both in Vienna and New York were noncommittal about the 29-page report, saying it was under study, and no details were released. The Bush administration in Washington welcomed the document, but expressed skepticism that Saddam's government was making full disclosure.

Iraq's ability to make war again, particularly with nuclear weapons, has been the focus of international efforts since hostilities ended in the Persian Gulf War. U.N. Security Council Resolution 687 demands the elimination of all Iraq's chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

Saddam had consistently denied he had any nuclear weapons or was even engaged in developing them, but two U.N. inspection teams last month were repeatedly denied access to suspected atomic energy sites in Iraq.

Broken records

Top athletes compete at track classic

By John Sommerhof
Staff Writer

Track and field athletes shattered stadium and meet records at the Mid America Classic Saturday in spite of the blazing heat.

A pole vaulter from Arkansas leapt more than 18 feet to break stadium and meet records.

Kelly Riley set new stadium and meet records by jumping 18 2 1/2.

His toughest competitors were training partners Jeff Hartwig and Scott Shaffer.

"There is a lot of comradery between us," said Hartwig, who finished third with a jump of 17-4 1/2.

Scott Shaffer finished second to Riley after vaulting 17-9 and declining to try any more vaults.

"I quit at 17-9 because I knew I wouldn't beat Kelly today," Shaffer said.

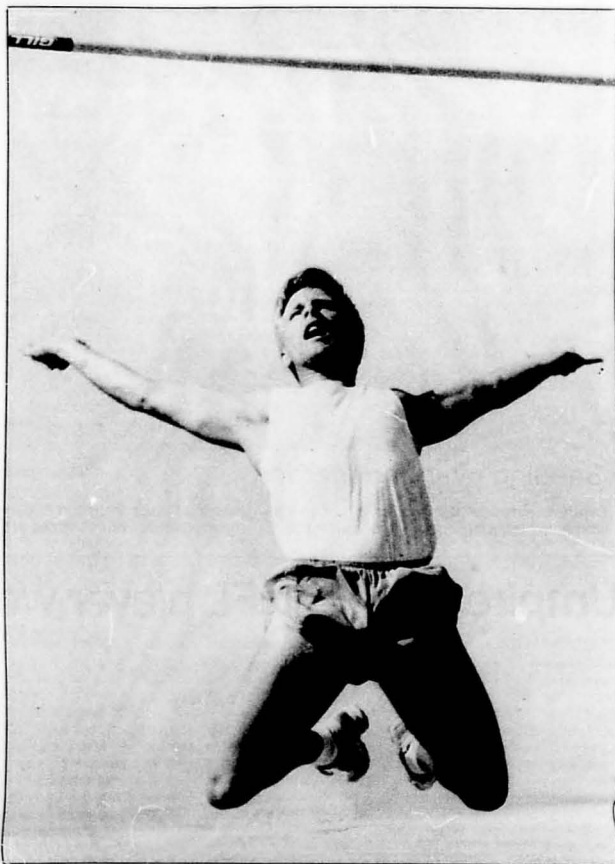

Shaffer said he hadn't been training for the long approach to the pit and just felt out of it.

But Riley said the conditions on Saturday were ideal for pole vaulting.

"This steady wind keeps you in control on your approach," Riley said. "The wind helps you heft the big poles it takes to make the big jumps."

Riley tried for a personal best of 18-8 1/2

Olympic committee considers republics

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — The Baltic republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia Monday pressed their claims for Olympic recognition and the right to compete in the Games under their own flags.

A commission set up by the International Olympic Committee had a three-hour meeting with the Baltic delegates in the latest round of talks to prevent Baltic athletes from boycotting the 1992 Olympics.

"We asked them to be able to compete under our own flag or under the flag of the IOC, but we will not compete under the Soviet flag," said Arturas Poviliunas, president of the Lithuanian National Olympic Committee.

"Lithuanian sportsmen do not want to compete under the Soviet flag, not because of an animosity but because they want to represent their own independent state."

Morris, Glavine to start All-Star game

TORONTO (UPI) — Minnesota's Jack Morris and Atlanta's Tom Glavine Monday were named the starting pitchers for the All-Star Game Tuesday night.

Glavine was an expected selection, with a 12-4 record and a National League best 1.98 ERA. Morris, 11-6 with a 3.65 ERA, was a somewhat surprising choice.

"It was the toughest call," said Oakland's Tony La Russa, the AL manager. "I thought it came down to two or three guys who seemed like they had the most plusses for us."

La Russa said Toronto's Jimmy Key and Boston's Roger Clemens were considered. Key and California's Mark Langston, however, are the only left-handers on the AL staff.

"I felt like with just a limited number of left-handers on our staff, we'd want to keep Key and Langston available for later innings," La Russa said.

National League Manager Lou Piniella said he had no problem selecting Glavine.

"He's 12-4 with a 1.98 ERA," Piniella said. "That doesn't make it very tough."

Piniella said Los Angeles' Ramon Martinez and Montreal's Dennis Martinez were possibilities. "(Glavine) beat the Dodgers the other day and that cemented it," Piniella said.

Glavine was 10-12 last year. He attributed his improvement to a return to the way he pitched in 1989.

"Last year I tried to pitch a shutout every time," he said. "In four or five games already this year, I've gone out there and something's been missing and I've still been able to win."

"I'm still trying to get ground balls because that's my style of pitching, but the strikeouts have been coming."

Glavine said he was informed of the selection Monday morning.

"I just felt with the first half I'd had, I'd put myself in position to be considered," Glavine said. "It was a little bit of having a good first half and little bit of being in the right place at the right time."

Ramon Martinez was removed from a game Sunday against Atlanta with an injury and was scratched from the All-Star lineup.

Mike Morgan was added to the roster in his place. Martinez probably wouldn't have pitched because of his Sunday start.

Piniella selected Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla as his designated hitter.

Montreal's Ivan Calderon was named starting left fielder in place of Darryl Strawberry.

Cycle clones: Student rider experiences thrills of pack racing that drive Tour de France racers to competition

By Rob Neff
Staff Writer

Riders in the Tour de France know the thrill of racing a bicycle in a pack of cyclists.

SIUC student Larry Millard, a junior in electrical engineering, also knows the thrill.

"You've got people riding right in front of you, right behind you and on either side of you," he said. "They're so close to you, it's like you're part of a machine. It's fast and it's smooth—it's just incredible."

For the next three weeks the riders in the Tour de France will feel the magic as they race more than 2,000 miles for first place in one of the most prestigious bike races in the world.

"I think it means a lot to people who are into racing," Millard said about the race. "Watching the races on television, you see the technique and the new technology the racers are using. It can help you develop your own skills."

Millard competes in all types of races from track racing to ultramarathon, in which he once rode 250 miles in one day.

"The most exciting part of the race is when the pack hits the finish line," he said. "Everyone starts sprinting, and the well-tooled machine that has been together for most of the race just breaks apart and scatters, and everyone just goes all out trying to win it. That's where I think a lot of people get the thrill from racing."

Millard races in the civilian category of the United States Cycling Federation, the national organization of amateur cyclists.

He averages two first places, a second place and a third place seasonally.

That record placed him second on his track last year.

His favorite event is "Missing Out," in which the pack races around the track, and every lap the last place cyclist is pulled out of the race. The winner is the last person on the track.

Another version of this is the Danish Missing Out, in which the racer in front is removed from the race every lap. In this version the loser is the last one on the track.

Millard said he likes these events because they involve strategy and because they force him to get to know his competition.

"Knowing your competition is where it's at," he said. "When I've seen the people I'm racing with before, I figure out where I will probably place. I don't tire myself out trying to beat someone who's faster than me. I might wait until

Serbian, Croation war heats over territory disagreement

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — A senior Serbian leader said Monday that Serbia would not permit Croatia to secede with its Serbian-dominated enclaves, and warned of war if the issue was not resolved. Croatia vowed to resist any attack and called for U.N. intervention. In Ljubljana, differences emerged within Slovenia's ruling coalition over a new tentative European Community plan to avert new clashes with the federal army that was brokered by three EC foreign ministers in marathon negotiations on the Adriatic island of Brioni that ended early Monday. Slovenian President Milan Kucan said he had made no concessions.

Soviet delegation to speed up arms negotiation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev agreed Monday to send a high-level delegation to Washington this week to conclude an arms agreement that can be signed at a superpower summit in Moscow in late July. Gorbachev acquiesced to the stepped-up negotiations on the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) as a result of Bush's personal appeal Saturday urging him to break the bureaucratic bottleneck in Moscow. Bush told reporters that Gorbachev's quick response was "a good sign" and asserted there is "plenty of time" to reach an arms agreement for a summit meeting at the end of the month.

Palestinian fighters withhold heavy weapons

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The commander of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army militia said Monday that Palestinian fighters in southern Lebanon are retaining their weapons despite efforts by the Lebanese army to disarm them. Gen. Antoine Lahd, whose South Lebanon Army controls an Israeli-declared "security zone" in southern Lebanon, told reporters that Palestinian fighters in refugee camps around the port city of Sidon have handed over only "one-tenth" of their heavy and medium weapons to the Lebanese army. Lebanese troops began to expand southward last week to reassert government control over wide stretches of the south.

Austria denies moves to annex Yugoslav areas

VIENNA (UPI) — Chancellor Franz Vranitzky, in a hard-hitting speech before parliament Monday, denied that Austria wanted to annex part of Yugoslavia, and said his nation stood neutral in its European neighbor's crisis. Austria came under fire from the Yugoslavian federal government Sunday as Belgrade called in the Austrian ambassador and accused Vienna of meddling in its affairs and of allowing the export of weapons to the breakaway Yugoslav republics of Croatia and Slovenia. But Vranitzky refuted suggestions his country wished for a "nostalgic annexation" of any part of Yugoslav territory.

New international bureau to monitor elections

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe announced Monday the opening of its Office of Free Elections in Warsaw. Ambassador Luchino Cortese of Italy, who arrived in April to head the new office, said it would serve as a clearinghouse for information on elections in the member countries, which include all 33 European states plus the United States and Canada. The office, which has an annual budget of about $300,000, will not itself monitor elections, but could serve as a coordinator for monitoring teams from various institutions.

Report indicates nation's recession improving

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The policy-making committee of the Federal Reserve agreed in May that the nation's economy had begun to recover from a 10-month recessionary hangover and that there was no immediate need to further ease interest rates. The Federal Open Market Committee acknowledged in a report of its May 14 meeting that recent economic signals were mixed, but said "on balance (the data) suggested that business activity might be in the process of stabilizing." The Fed cited a declining unemployment rate, stabilizing industrial output, and strengthening retail sales as signs that the economy has improved.

Rainbow's End still searching for home at end of rainbow

By Christiann Baxter
Staff Writer

Rainbow's End infant and toddler program will lose its temporary home on Aug. 2, and a permanent facility has not been found, said program director Cheryl Walton.

A number of buildings in Carbondale were looked at, she said.

The problem is trying to find a facility to house both Rainbow's End and Headstart, Walton said.

Rainbow's End is a University day-care center for children of SIUC students, faculty and staff. Headstart, which also was housed in the Lakeland building, is a program for children ages 3 to 5 of low-income families. Headstart doesn't operate in the summer.

It is preferable for the two programs to be in the same building to keep costs down, Walton said.

The Department of Children and Family Services has strict fire code requirements for day-care centers, she said.

Centers must have a fire wall, a smoke detection system connected to the main fire system in the building, a separate pull alarm connected to the fire department and two exits onto the ground floor.

"If you think about the average building or house, you don't usually have that," Walton said.

Most buildings were built for offices, not for housing children, she said.

Rainbow's End lost its lease on the Lakeland School building June 30. The school-age and pre-school program is temporarily located in the Student Recreation Center, and the infant and toddler program is in the First Presbyterian Church-USA, 310 South University.

The Presbyterian Church will not be available after Aug. 2, Walton said. The church runs a nursery school program in the fall and spring, she said. The rooms currently used by Rainbow's End will be needed for that program.

If a permanent location is not found by Aug. 2, Rainbow's End will have to find another temporary location for the infant and toddler program or eliminate the program, said SIUC President John C. Guyon.

Nancy Hunter Pei, director of student development, said, "We'd have no alternative if we can't find appropriate space where we could be licensed."

Rainbow's End has eight infants and 10 toddlers. There are 89 children enrolled in the program altogether. The school-age and pre-school program will be able to stay in the Rec Center if a permanent location is not found, Walton said.

The cost of leasing the Presbyterian Church is higher than that of the Lakeland School Building, she said. She declined to disclose the cost difference.

Pei said the extra lease money is coming from the Rainbow's End budget, supplied by user fees and a $1 subsidy for all students.

Walton said building a facility for Rainbow's End will be cheaper than leasing in the long run.

"Any building you're looking at, you're talking about leasing for about five years and renovation," she said.

If a facility is built, there's no worry about anyone taking it back or the price being raised, she said.

Study: Nintendo may help on tests

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

Many students choose to stay home with Mario rather than go to Morris Library but, says an SIUC researcher, they benefit just the same.

In a recent study conducted by Suzanne Keller, formerly an instructional developer at the learning resources center at Morris Library, found that playing Nintendo video games brings higher standardized test scores to high schoolers.

In this study on Nintendo, Keller found that playing the games Mario Brothers, Super Mario 2, Super Mario 3 and Tetris is linked to better inductive and deductive reasoning abilities and other skills.

In her research for completion of her doctorate in education curriculum and instruction, she also discovered Nintendo games improved hand-eye coordination and basic skills used in reading.

"I examined several games and looked for common thinking patterns in the games," Keller said. "All I needed to do then was find a test to measure the students' abilities. I chose the Cornell

Illinois' budget blues head into overtime

LET'S FACE IT: No one likes budgets.

They just aren't fun to make and they are even less fun to stick to because budgets mean boundaries, limitations. However, they are necessary because money, energy and time are limited.

Governments are no different than people. Each spring the Illinois Legislature has the formidable task of designing a budget that will financially direct the state for the next year. This is a difficult job, especially when there is about a $1.9 billion difference between available money and needed money. Bipartisan differences add to the difficulty of reaching an acceptable budget.

However, the financial budget isn't the only budget the Legislature seems to be having trouble meeting. June 30 was the time budget allotted to the Legislature to reach agreement on a budget. They already have exceeded this budget by eight days and the end does not seem to be in sight.

IT COULD BE rationalized that creating a state budget is an extremely important and intricate task that should not be rushed.

And, of course this is true, but legislators knew the budget deadline was June 30 and they had plenty of time to reach an agreement before this date passed.

Because the 1991 state budget expired June 30 and no budget has been finalized for 1992, state-funded agencies are in a financial bind. In essence they are spending money blindly not knowing what amount they actually have to spend.

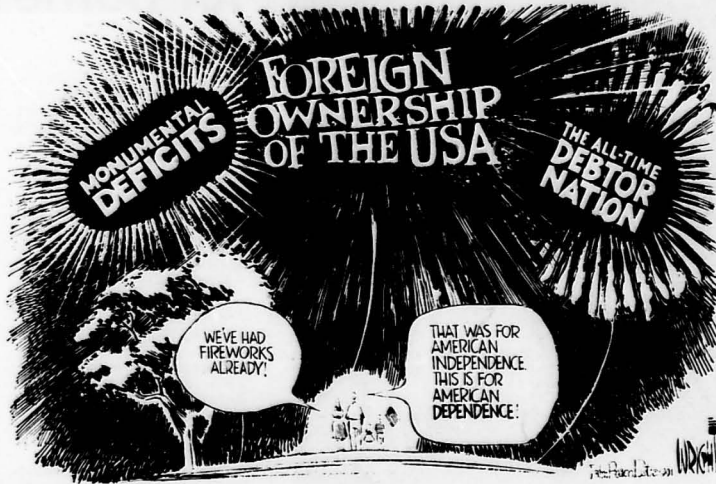

The state government runs the risk of a shutdown if the stalemate continues.

ON TOP OF THIS, legislators receive $77 every day the General Assembly is in session to meet the expenses of staying in Springfield. That equals $13,629 the state pays legislators every day the Legislature goes into overtime. This figure does not include the bill the state picks up for legislators' aides.

Although this amount is not large compared to the $1.9 billion that needs to be cut from state spending, it is money that could have been spent elsewhere.

Let's hope the legislators budget finances better than they budget time.

Budget solution: Pettit begs on TV

Budget, budget, budget, that is all we hear and read about anymore.

From a hiring freeze to tuition hikes, it is time for this University to try some new money raising schemes. After all, if it worked for Oral Roberts, why not SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit?

Imagine the scene. It's a typical Tuesday night. There are no great bar specials, so you settle down for a relaxing night of watching television.

As you flick through the variety of channels offered locally, you are confronted with the same person.

Hmmmm. Who could it be? Dressed in a nicely common business suit Chancellor Pettit quickly is recognized by the average viewer.

Mr. Pettit is noticeably disturbed. What could it be? You thumb the volume control until the vocals of our Chancellor echo throughout the apartment.

"Last night while I was sleeping the Lord told me that unless I raise $111.2 million for higher education hands with that one I have a few more ideas.

LIVE ONLY ON PAY-PER-VIEW.

The president-with-a-punch John C. Guyon battles currently undefeated champ Chancellor Lawrence K. "Killer" Pettit.

With a little hype from fight promoter Jack Dyer, sporting a Don King hairdo, I'm sure ESPN would follow it.

It would be the clash of the titans. We could even get Candice Stark to walk through the ring announcing the rounds.

The idea of watching two of SIU's top administrators go at it would bring in millions. Every student faculty and staff member would watch. For that matter all of Southern Illinois would watch.

But there is just one little catch. TCI, our local cable company, doesn't offer pay-per-view.

The only other idea I have is to get Jerry Lewis to do a telethon, but I hear Gov. Jim Edgar already has booked him to help pay for some rose garden.

Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication.

Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

card because it would allow money to be deducted from the account when a purchase is made.

James Prowell, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce, said it is working on bringing the point-of-sale system to the city, but it wants to make sure the system can accommodate all.

"We will find a way to do it," he said. Sullivan also said using checks written on new accounts is a problem because most students open new accounts when they come to SIUC. Check numbering for new accounts begins with 101 and many merchants do not accept checks numbered lower than 300. Prowell said numbering checks this way is probably a state law, but the chamber will find out for sure. "It's not a double standard, it's only a standard," he said. "If I have to go by it, the students have to go by it."

Sullivan said the overall attitudes merchants have toward students is disappointing, and the discontinuation of the Club Card more than a year ago is an example.

Club Cards provided student discounts for purchases at participating stores. They were distributed by USG and local merchants, but Prowell is working on bringing them back.

"When you add all this up, it looks like the city of Carbondale doesn't want our (students) business very much," Sullivan said.

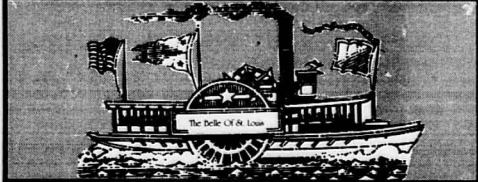

Both Prowell and Sullivan said they were pleased with the way the meeting went and think USG and the Chamber will have a good working relationship in the future.

Sullivan was invited to make a presentation before the Chamber of Commerce Board at its next meeting Aug. 13.

without a budget and 15th straight day of session.

Lawmakers planned to return to work at noon Tuesday.

Netsch, a former longtime state senator, said she was "discouraged, depressed and demoralized" by the situation.

"It looks not very good at this moment," Netsch said.

Even though budget conferees keep meeting daily and they have reached agreements on many agency budgets, they cannot make a final deal until the tax question is resolved by the four leaders and Edgar.

The main disputes are focusing on whether Illinois' 3 percent state income tax rate should be permanent or temporary for two years and whether the state should pass a law limiting local property tax increases to 5 percent or the rate of inflation.

One of Edgar's top legislative supporters, House Republican Leader Lee Daniels of Elmhurst, said he is less hopeful that state paychecks will go out next week and state services will not be curtailed or shut down.

"We're still waiting to hear from them," Pettit said.

Although no one is trying to cause a panic since a workable budget could solve the entire matter, SIUC President John C. Guyon said without a budget all the University can do is wait.

Vice President for Student Affairs Harvey Welch also said there is nothing to do but wait to see what happens in Springfield.

Welch said it would be premature to think there will actually be delays and so far there have been no effects on student employment.

Fiscal year 1991 ended at midnight June 30. Because the General Assembly and Edgar have been unable to agree on a budget, the legislative session has run over. Until a budget is passed, all state agencies have begun the new fiscal year penniless.

"It might be the craziest session I've ever seen," Pettit said.

Critical Thinking Test."

The Cornell test is a test used to measure the higher-level thinking skills that are not normally taught in a classroom. It is a test used in a situation where a person wants to measure critical thinking, Keller said.

Nintendo players she tested last spring at Du Quoin High School scored substantially higher on the Cornell test than those students who didn't engage in the activity, and although Keller's research was not designed to determine a cause-and-effect relationship, she said the numbers show there is a link.

Keller tested 235 students and found those who played Nintendo scored an average of 44 points on a 75-point scale, whereas the students who did not play scored an average of 38.

"In the Cornell test the same skills are used," Keller said. "The only difference with the Cornell test and Nintendo is the test is a written format and not a visual one. Both the games and the test make you think no matter what the format."

Convinced by the evidence she found, Keller recommended that parents should consider buying Nintendo games for their children, but they should limit the amount of time spent with the games to 10 hours a week.

Bob Loewe, a senior in English education from Bolingbrook, said he can see how Nintendo would stimulate critical thinking.

"My roommate has one game that has been befuddling me for the past four or five days," Loewe said. "I think it is okay to play Nintendo because it helps you figure things out, but I don't know how much it influences critical thinking."

"But if research shows kids are scoring higher, I think that is great. Any way you can get a kid to learn should be used," he said.

The only complaints Keller has heard from parents regarding Nintendo games was the amount of noise the games made and the amount of time their children spent playing it. Another common complaint were the fights caused by siblings over who gets to play Nintendo.

Keller's survey showed more than one-fourth of the students spent 26 or more hours a week at Nintendo and read their school assignments, but did nothing else.

She also said these children rely too heavily on television and video games for entertainment, and they are not able to create their own fun.

"These kids depend on their parents and technology for constant entertainment," Keller said. "They don't get up and find something to do or go outside to play."

Even though it makes children less creative, Keller said someday she hopes to see Nintendo used in schools and clinical centers.

"Even if they bring Nintendo into a study hall it would be helpful," Keller said. "Especially for the children who misbehave. This would give them a quiet activity that also stimulates learning."

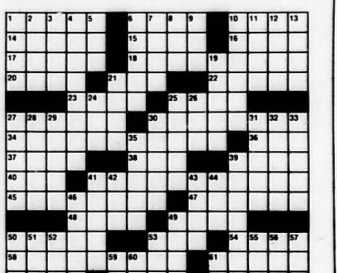

"Nintendo also helps with right/left patterns, and I think it would be helpful for such things as dyslexia and should be used in clinical centers. I just hope everyone starts taking Nintendo more seriously because it does help with higher-order thinking skills."

Keller said she began her research on Nintendo after both her sons were attracted to video games.

"I was mad my 12-year-old Dylan was spending so much time and money on these games," Keller said. "But then I noticed how Nintendo wasn't going to go away. In fact, I was impressed by the sophistication of the games."

Corporation formed to raise $200 million for education goals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush announced Monday the formation of a corporation charged with raising up to $200 million to develop innovative new schools "to meet the challenges of the future."

"It's a private venture in the public interest," explained former New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, who will head the New American Schools Development Corp.

The corporation is part of Bush's America 2000 education reform strategy that hopes to create an environment in which the national education goals are met and new types of schools are created.

"The revolution begins right here," Bush said at a Rose Garden ceremony. "We've done enough hand-wringing about the state of our schools and now, let's act. Let's apply America's special genius for invention to our schools."

Over the next three years, the corporation hopes to raise $150 million to $200 million from the private sector, which will be awarded to up to seven research-and-development teams.

The teams, consisting of corporations, universities, "think tanks" and educators, will come up with innovative ideas for 535 proposed "break-the-mold" schools, as Bush calls them. Communities may use these ideas to develop one of the schools.

The president alluded to some educational changes he has in mind.

In these model schools, he said, students would meet certain standards set for math, science, English, history and geography. Schools, for their part, would be open to experiment, such as holding classes year-round, yet operating on a budget comparable to conventional schools.

"We don't want gold-plated schools. We just want results to be gold-plated," the president said.

In addition to a 12-month school calendar, Kean suggested more than one teacher in a classroom. But he rejected the notion that these changes and others would cost more money.

"We're going to set up models that communities can afford. By making some changes in the way we teach, the structure of the school, using innovations that many teachers already are experimenting with, and by spreading those around the country, we can then develop schools that we need to compete in the world," Kean said.

So far, Bush said, $30 million has been contributed to the new corporation, of which $10 million comes from Walter Annenberg in the form of a challenge grant. Annenberg, former ambassador to Great Britain and media mogul, is a member of the schools corporation.

In addition to privately raised money, Bush has asked Congress to appropriate $1 million for each of the 535 schools — one in each congressional district.

NAACP to review new court justice

HOUSTON (UPI) — Officials of the NAACP said Monday they are "unfavorably impressed" with the record of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas and requested a meeting with him to clarify his position on vital civil rights issues.

The NAACP board requested the meeting and authorized an exhaustive study of Thomas's record in public office, to be presented on or before Aug. 15. Results of both will be used by the board to determine whether to support, oppose or take no action on Thomas's nomination, said NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks.

Hooks and William Gibson, chairman of the NAACP board of directors, issued a statement questioning Thomas's record on discrimination while serving as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The NAACP, gathered in Houston for its annual national convention, has been struggling to establish a public stance on Thomas's nomination to replace retiring Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, a former lawyer for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People who is the first black to serve on the Supreme Court.

"We are seeking to put together a comprehensive set of questions to determine where he stands on civil rights issues," Hooks said. "He has a mixed record ... His paper trail leaves some ambiguity. Personally, I have made no decision at all about what my recommendation to the board will be."

Bush hails Gorbachev for fast answer on arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush Monday hailed Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's quick response to his appeal to speed up arms talks as "a good sign" and said there is "plenty of time" to reach an arms agreement for a late July super-power summit meeting in Moscow.

Bush made the comments at the start of a meeting on building new American schools.

Earlier, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced that on Sunday Gorbachev responded to Bush's appeal by agreeing to "redouble efforts" to complete a long-range strategic arms reduction treaty (START) and accepting an invitation to send a delegation to Washington this week to pursue the negotiations.

Fitzwater said Gorbachev said Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh will arrive in Washington Wednesday evening for meetings with Secretary of State James Baker on Thursday and Friday.

The high-level Soviet delegation will include

Bush said Gorbachev's quick response to his appeal to speed up arms talks is "a good sign". There's "plenty of time to reach an agreement"

Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev and Aleksei Obukhov, a deputy foreign minister, as well as a number of arms experts.

A similar announcement was made in Moscow with strong indications that the Soviets were ready to break the logjam on the remaining technicalities that have blocked a final accord.

Referring to the new U.S.-Soviet talks, Bush said, "Well, a lot depends on this meeting that's coming up between Secretary of State James Baker, the Soviet foreign minister and Moiseyev."

"I've said before what we want to do is have a summit meeting with the Soviets," Bush said. "They're coming here in response to an appeal I made to President Gorbachev, so it's a good thing that they're coming."

"And there's plenty of time to get this done so we can have a meeting at the end of July," Bush added.

"But whether these last difficulties can be ironed out, I just don't know," Bush said of the impediments to a START agreement. "But this should be seen as a good sign, whether we get it completed for a July summit or not and I'll have a chance to talk to Gorbachev in London in a few days," referring to his July 17 luncheon meeting with the Soviet leader at the conclusion of the economic summit.

Walter Annenberg, former U.S. ambassador to London who was present when Bush made his comments, suggested to the president, "In other words you want fulfillment, not conversation."

Bush, laughing, said Annenberg had summed up the problem well.

Cities facing crises with late budgets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The finances of U.S. cities, both large and small, are deteriorating — with one in four facing a budget gap of more than 5 percent this year, an annual survey showed Monday.

The study by the National League of Cities found that more than seven out of 10 cities reported they are in worse financial shape this year than last.

Of the 525 cities surveyed, 26.5 percent said 1991 expenditures would exceed revenues by more than 5 percent. Nearly 30 percent of the communities with populations below 100,000 faced budget shortfalls of 5 percent or more.

Bridgeport, Conn., last month declared bankruptcy, and New Orleans Mayor Sidney Barthelmy, president of the NLC, said the survey results showed that other cities could face similar fates.

"What's documented in the NLC survey, and what we are seeing in Bridgeport, are the effects of choices made to redirect national priorities away from investments in our cities and away from America's future," Barthelmy said.

Housing bureau red tape ties up availability of lower cost homes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush Monday unveiled a report condemning the "maze of bureaucratic barriers" impeding affordable housing for moderate and low income families and set a national goal to cut through the red tape.

Housing Secretary Jack Kemp presented him with the report of the federal Advisory Commission on Regulatory Barriers to Affordable Housing at a final meeting of the panel at the White House.

The report, denouncing "the needless rules, red tape" and community opposition to moderate-priced housing in their neighborhoods, is titled "Not In My Back Yard."

The commission urged strong action by federal, state and local governments, as well as the private sector, to eliminate regulations that drive up the cost of housing and homeownership for low-income people.

Among some 30 recommendations, it also called for the creation of an Office of Regulatory Reform in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Bush would study the report but the president described as

"just appalling the maze of bureaucratic barriers" blocking affordable housing.

"We've got to confront this problem of regulation and excessive red tape ... that has made it difficult to construct low income housing," Bush said. "... It's a worthy national goal and we've got to succeed."

Americans will sacrifice—pay more for gas, food to protect environment

CHICAGO (UPI) — Americans are willing to pay more for gasoline and groceries and would sacrifice economic growth and jobs, if necessary, to protect the environment, a national opinion survey revealed Monday.

Three-quarters — 74 percent — of the Americans interviewed said they believe the government should keep environmental protection a priority, even if it means slower economic growth, the survey showed. It said only 14 percent disagreed.

Fifty-nine percent of those polled said they would be willing to pay 25 cents more for a gallon of gasoline and 76 percent said they would pay 10 percent more for environmentally "green" grocery products, the survey reported.

The survey disclosed 55 percent of Americans would pay 50 percent more for garbage collection to ensure safe long-term disposal.

A majority of those surveyed, 54 percent, backed "serious" government action against polluters — even if it means closing down factories and losing jobs in their own communities.

The survey, "Environment U.S.A. '91," interviewed 2,000 American adults across the nation and was a joint project of Golin-Harris Communications, a U.S. public relations agency, and the Angus Reid Group, a top Canadian market research organization.

Drivers speeded to Salt Flats to race; geologists in race to save salt in time

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Speedsters in high-powered cars have come to the Bonneville Salt Flats in search of records for nearly a century, but the race now under way is to find out how to save the "Salt."

The flats, about 90 miles west of Salt Lake City, are reverently called the "Salt" by die-hard racers who show up year after year to tweak the last drop of speed from souped-up racers.

The first-known contest was held there in 1896 — a bicycle grudge race. By 1898, a pair of Frenchmen had pushed a crude motorcar to the fantastic speed of 39 mph. Henry Ford set the record of 91 mph in 1904. Englishman Richard Noble rocketed to 633 mph in 1983.

But the salt is disappearing. Geologists worry that within a few decades the flats may become a vast region of alkaline mud. They want federal money to finance a study to save the region and restore it.

"I'm really concerned about the delays," said Deane Zeller, manager of the Bureau of Land Management's Salt Lake office. "Each year we delay (the study) another 1 percent of the salt is lost."

Commission to give report on King brutality case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The independent commission formed to investigate police brutality in the aftermath of the videotaped Rodney King beating on Tuesday will release its much-anticipated report on whether excessive use of force and racism pervades the Police Department.

The report, three months in the making, is expected to have far-reaching ramifications that could affect the city for many years to come.

Police Chief Daryl Gates has said he will resign if the panel finds that his leadership created an atmosphere in the department that allowed officers to believe their beating of the black motorist was acceptable behavior.

Mayor Tom Bradley, who appointed the 10-member Independent Commission on the Los Angeles Police Department and who will not see its report until Tuesday morning, has asked commission members to stay on for several months to help implement their findings.

Investigation widened to include role of City Council

Bradley convened the commission, headed by former Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, less than a month after the March 3 videotaped beating of the 25-year-old King thrust the LAPD into the national spotlight.

While charged by Bradley to investigate whether department policies and procedures have led to excessive use of force among officers, over the course of its 90-day review, the commission widened its probe to include the role of the District Attorney's Office and the City Council in providing adequate oversight of police misconduct cases.

In addition, the commission examined all department operations, including recruitment, training, promotion, leadership, and the relationship of the Police Department to the civilian Police Commission and to the structure of city government.

It also examined several months worth of car-to-car computer transmissions to determine whether officers routinely refer to members of minority groups in racist terms.

City officials and civil rights leaders are hoping the report's findings will lead to substantive reforms in how the department investigates citizens' complaints of police misconduct, how officers are disciplined and how the department relates to members of the city's minority communities.

"Everybody's hoping for some real changes," said Bill Lee, western regional director of the NAACP's Legal Defense Fund.

Much of the commission's work was being done behind closed doors, except for five public meetings to hear testimony from citizens.

With its 20-member staff of attorneys from some of the city's top law firms, the commission has interviewed every clerical city leader, Chief Gates, police officers from Los Angeles and elsewhere, defense attorneys, community activists, religious leaders and others.

Christopher has said the report will provide a "comprehensive look at the operation not only of the Police Department but other governmental institutions that can have an effect on police operations."

In the early phase of its inquiry, civil rights leaders questioned whether a panel of mostly white male attorneys and businessmen could effectively investigate police brutality.

The commission includes one woman, one black and three Hispanics and five white men — all of whom are prominent in their professions and noted civic leaders.

Many critics harkened back to the 1965 Watts Riots and the federally appointed McCone Commission charged with investigating the root causes of that violent episode in city history.

Poet laureate Nemerov, 71, dies of cancer in St. Louis

UNIVERSITY CITY, Mo. (UPI)

— Howard Nemerov, the former poet laureate of the United States who died of cancer at his home in suburban St. Louis, was remembered as "one of the most wise and talented people of this age."

Nemerov died Friday night at the age of 71. Plans for a memorial service will be announced later.

Nemerov was appointed to the post of poet laureate in May 1988 and was reappointed the next year. He was the third poet to hold the post, an advisory and largely honorary position that previously was held by Robert Penn Warren and Richard Wilbur.

He gave up the post in May 1990 after undergoing surgery for cancer.

Nemerov won a National Book Award and a Pulitzer Prize in 1978 for "The Collected Poems of Howard Nemerov," which contained all of his published poems from 1945 to 1975.

At the time of his death, he was the Edward Mallinckrodt distinguished professor emeritus of English and distinguished poet in residence at Washington University in St. Louis.

"Howard Nemerov was one of the most wise and talented people of this age," Washington University Chancellor William Danforth said.

"He was a hero nationally and also to the people of his city, St. Louis, who loved his charm, his humor, his wisdom, his affection and his courage.

"His many friends will miss him but remain thankful for his poetry, from which we will continue to learn better to understand the world and ourselves."

President Ronald Reagan presented Nemerov with the National Medal for the Arts in 1987. He also was the winner of the first Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Award in 1968 and won a $10,000 fellowship from the American Academy of Poets in 1971.

Nemerov was a chancellor of the academy, a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

He was born in 1920 in New York City, where his father owned a fashionable women's clothing and fur store on Fifth Avenue.

His sister was the photographer Diane Arbus, who committed suicide in 1971.

Nemerov earned a bachelor's degree from Harvard in 1941.

Police obstruct festival promoting hemp uses

NEW CARLEISLE (UPI)

— A group dedicated to legalization of marijuana was unable to hold its festival on the leader's land in northwest Indiana over the weekend because sheriff's deputies set up roadblocks.

The LaPorte County Sheriff's Department acted on the basis of an injunction issued at Michigan City by LaPorte Superior Court Judge Walter Chlapala after a hearing Friday.

Chlapala concluded as many as 5,000 people might show up for the festival arranged by Ray Christ of rural New Carlisle, who says he heads a group called Christians for HEMP.

He said HEMP stands for Healing, Education and Medicine for People.

Christ had said before the event that he expected to have 25 bands. He said Chlapala acted unjustly in ordering the roadblocks just because Christ had no permit.

He said Monday that only 20 tickets to his "Independence Camp" had been sold and evidence was that no more than 500 people would show up.

Just 25 people eventually were on the property, but only Christ, as landowner, was able to go back and forth, he said.

He said three people live on the property.

Christ compared his situation to that of the Chinese students in Tiananmen Square who demonstrated against their government.

"When they do it to the Chinese kids, we're outraged," he said. "When we do it here, they say, 'You're trying to legalize marijuana.'"

Survey: Britain slipping further into recession

LONDON (UPI) —

Despite a brief lift in business confidence at the end of the Persian Gulf War, Britain's economy has slipped further into recession, two key business surveys said Monday.

A report from business information services giant Dun and Bradstreet Corp. said post-war confidence, apparent in last quarter's survey, has disappeared.

"Our survey shows we are now on the second downward phase of a double-dip recession which we first measured in early 1990," said Philip Mellor of D&B. The survey said the recession was expected to continue at least until the end of the year.

A survey by the Institute of Directors also published Monday concurred that the recession was not easing. The IOD urged the government to cut interest rates "at the earliest opportunity," to aid ailing businesses.

"Our survey confirms that the euphoria recorded in the spring survey was a blip and directors are now expressing greater doubt both about the UK economy and company prospects," said Peter Morgan, the institute's director general.

Royal Navy gives war heroes discharge, ceremonial honors

GIBRALTAR (UPI) — The Royal Navy discharged the six birds known as the "Chirping Heroes" with full ceremonial honors Monday on Britain's Rock of Gibraltar for bravery during the Gulf War.

The entire crew of the missile destroyer HMS Manchester was on the helicopter flight deck as the birds were returned to civilian life after 173 days of active service.

The budgerigars, canary-like birds known as budgies, were recruited from the colony's St. George's School to help detect poisonous gas aboard the destroyer during the Persian Gulf War.

The birds were honored with bronze medals, stamped with the ship's crest on one side and the birds' names on the other, and the citation commendation for bravery that read "for meritorious conduct and devotion to duty aboard Her Majesty's Ship Manchester during the Gulf War 1991."

Umpire, former NFL player wounded in holdup

DALLAS (UPI) — Major-league umpire Steve Palermo and former Miami Dolphins football player Terence Mann were hospitalized Monday after being shot while attempting to stop a robbery outside a restaurant.

Palermo, 41, of Overland Park, Kan., was in fair condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital with a gunshot wound in his lower back.

Mann, a defensive tackle from 1983-86 at Southern Methodist University who was drafted in 1987 by the Dolphins, was shot in the neck. He was in good condition at Presbyterian Hospital.

Another American League umpire, Rich Garcia, had accompanied Palermo to the restaurant but left 30 minutes before the incident.

"He's in a lot of pain," Garcia said. "It's not a life threatening situation. But the possibility of paralysis still exists."

"He has feeling off and on in his feet. When he had pain, at least they knew he had feeling."

A close friend of Palermo's said doctors were optimistic the umpire would recover. Doctors said they would have to wait a few days to assess the possibility of paralysis.

Four men were arrested in nearby Highland Park after the shooting at 1:30 a.m. Sunday outside Campisi's Egyptian Restaurant, about four miles north of downtown Dallas.

Mann and Palermo were dining separately at the restaurant. Palermo had worked Saturday night's Texas-California game in Arlington.

A bartender who saw the robbery yelled at employees and patrons that a woman was being robbed outside the restaurant, and Palermo, Mann and several others ran to the door to help, police said.

Golf tourney grass ready for hot field

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — It's going to be so hot at the U.S. Women's Open this week that even the grass needs to be fanned.

Players began arriving Monday for the world's most important women's golfing event.

Among other things they discovered huge fans standing on eight-foot poles and set up around and behind six of the 18 greens at the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth.

The air circulation around those greens, all of them sheltered by trees, is minimal and without the air being stirred the tender bent grass would soon turn brown and disappear.

The National Weather Service issued an "excessive heat advisory" through Tuesday, indicating the combination of heat and humidity would create "heat index values in the 105 to 110 degree range."

Such conditions create a challenge for those trying to keep grass on the greens.

"I know they use the fans here in the summer to keep the greens alive," said Judy Bell, a member of the United States Golf Association's executive committee. "The question is whether we will have the fans going when play begins on Thursday."

"We will have to discuss that question during the week. I, personally, don't see anything wrong with it."

Whatever we can do to keep the air circulation on those greens, we should probably do. And the fans don't make that much noise. I don't think it will be a distraction to the players," she said.

In addition to the fans, as many as five to a green, members of the maintenance crew applied a brief shower of water on the greens every 30 minutes in an attempt to prevent stress.

"We aren't going to cut these greens so short that they will only survive the week of the tournament," Bell said. "We are determined to leave the greens in as good or better condition as we get them."

Bell is in charge of setting up the course.

Belgian wins third Tour stage

DIJON, France (UPI) — Etienne de Wilde of Belgium won the third stage of the Tour de France cycling race Monday, a distance of 130.9 miles between Villeurbanne and Dijon. Rolf Sorensen of Denmark retained the overall leader's yellow jersey.

De Wilde broke to the front only a few hundred feet from the finish line and barely held on to edge Dutch sprint specialist Jean-Paul van Poppel and Germany's Olaf Ludwig.

the second or third lap to take the lead and take my place."

Mike Segars, a salesman at Phoenix Cycles in Carbondale, says racing has become big business.

Racers pay top dollar to have the best equipment for a race, he said.

"Someone just starting out in racing will spend about $600 on a bike and equipment," he said. "For more advanced riders, a two grand investment is a conservative estimate."

Segars races in Category Two of the USCF, one level below the professional bikers and Olympians.

Segars said although he has been held up by injuries this season, he plans to race in an upcoming race in Paducah, Kentucky where he will race in a stage race made up by a timed trial, in which he will race the clock, and a road race.

Earlier this season, Segars place 6th at the Sauk Village Road Race, and 5th at Alto Pas Road Race.

He expects the competition at the race in Paducah to be moderate, because of a larger race being held in Wisconsin the week of the competition.

Pittsburgh president to resign for Marlins

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Pirates President Carl Barger Monday said he will resign from the team to take the same position with the Florida Marlins, the National League expansion franchise that will begin play in 1993 in Miami.

"This was the most difficult decision I have ever had to make," said Barger. "Anyone who knows me knows that I bleed black and gold (the Pirates' colors)."

Barger, 58, was instrumental in putting together a public-private coalition that purchased the Pirates in 1985 and kept the team in the city. Pittsburgh Associates consists of 12 investors, representing nine corporations and three people. Barger has been president of the club since December 1987.

after his winning vault of 18-2 1/2.

But cheers from his competitors and the crowd of about 300 spectators in the stands weren't enough to raise him over the height.

"This was a good meet and it feels good to be here," Riley said. "It was fun to compete against these guys because I know most of them and a lot of us train together."

Shaffer said if Riley's attempts at the 18-8 1/2 mark hadn't been a personal best he would have made it.

Assistant meet director Don DeNoon said the number of records broken was a reflection of the field at the meet.

"The quality of the field was good," he said. "It just wasn't very deep in some events."

The pole vaulting event was not the only record-breaker Saturday as four other stadium and meet records fell.

Stephine Saleem, beating the meet record of 55.61, with a time of 54.46.

Chuck Wilson beat former SIUC track star Elvis Forde in the 400. Wilson beat the stadium record (45.91) and meet record (46.18) with a time of 45.78.

Long jumper Antonio Palacios leaped to a new stadium record.

Palacios made a record jump of 25-9 beating the old mark of 25-1 3/4.

The meet shot put record was tied at 61-8 by Scott Erickson.

Local athletes also placed as top finishers.

SIUC 110-meter hurdler Ed Williams raced across the finish line with a winning time of 14.44.

Saluki high jumper Darrin Plab won the high jump event with a jump of 7-2.

Lithuania already has withdrawn some of its athletes from Soviet teams in various international competitions.

"We told the commission our republic had 20 sportsmen of very high level who could be Olympic medalists," Povilunias said.

The Baltic delegates presented a 20-page document to support their claims for separate national Olympic committees.

Commissioner Francois Carrard said the IOC does not want to dictate a solution. He said the IOC is counting on the "goodwill of both sides."
