Alix Carl, a senior from Carterville studying English, crosses Poplar Street on her bicycle Monday, a week after Gov. Pat Quinn signed legislation that could punish motorists who crowd bicyclists. The bill allows for up to one year in Jail and a $2,500 fine for drivers who drive recklessly or unnecessarily close to bikers sharing the road. DIANA SOLIWON DAILY EGYPTIAN

Drivers who crowd bikers could see jail time

LAUREN LEONE Daily Egyptian

The state recently followed suit in a matter that SIUC has already learned the hard way.

Gov. Pat Quinn signed a bicycle safety bill July 5 to increase penalties for drivers who overcrowd bicyclists. but Todd Sigler, director of the SIUC department of public safety, said the university has already made strides to insure bike safety.

We don't want to see any injuries," Sigler said. "With our population trying to travel on campus, you've got a lot of things coming together in just about any form of transportation."

The bill, which will take effect

January 1, will make it illegal for drivers to crowd or threaten bicyclists by unnecessarily driving too close to a cyclist, according to the Illinois state website. Depending on whether serious injuries occur, it is either a Class A misdemeanor or a Class 4 felony: The misdemeanor is punishable up to one year in prison or a $2,500 fine, putting it on the same scale as a firsttime DUI, Sigler said.

In 2001, Anne Coleman, a student in the Dental Hygiene Program, was killed in a crosswalk when a vehicle struck her bicycle on SIUC's campus. Following the death, the campus speed limit dropped from 25 mph to 20 mph, Sigler said speeding in spring 2002 - the spring following Coleman's death - as compared to spring 2001, according to a DAILY EGYPTIAN report. Fines for speeding increased from $15 to $50 in 2002 but have not increased since, Sigler said.

Police issued 414 more warnings and tickets to motorists caught

Sigler said if a driver had intentionally tried to run into a bicyclist with their car, it was only classified as reckless conduct before. The new law is an addition to the Illinois Vehicle Code, which allows for penalties for violating the law to be attached to one's drivers license, he said.

Sigler said department records show there were five accidents involving bicycles on campus in 2009. Two of the five involved a car, with minor injuries to the blcyclist. In 2008, six of 10 collisions involving bikes also involved a car, Sigler said In 2007, two of the eight bicycle accidents involved a car, with minor injuries to the bicyclists.

SIU has had one car-bike collision this year, with injuries to the cyclist's hand, knee and elbow. The cyclist declined an ambulance, Sigler said.

The consequences of overcrowding bicycles were hit or miss before the bill was signed, said Anne Johnson, vice president of the Carbondale Bicycle Club and board member for the League of Illinois Eicyclists. "A car would do something by accident to a cyclist, but nobody did anything about it most of the time, she said

Student Services Center constructs parking questions

RYAN VOYLES Daily Egyptian

Plans for the construction of a new student service building have taken a turn, which could turn people to scramble for fewer parking spaces.

Kevin Bame, vice chancellor for administration and finance, presented plans for a new service student center to the Board of Trustees on Thursday, which would be built at the site of the two-story parking garage on Lincoln Drive, next to the Student Center.

SIU President Glenn Poshard said construction of the building, which would house departments such as Undergraduate Admissions and Financial Aid, is vital to appealing to prospective students - as well as making life easier for current students.

There's no question of how great a need this is," he said.

He said the "the Woody Hall Shuffle" process where students go around the former dormitory looking for different departments, has been an annovance since he was at SIU in the 1960s.

"That building is so inadequate to meet the needs for our students that it's not even funny," Poshard said.

The building, which still needs the approval of the BOT before con- Please see BUILDING | 3 struction staris, will cover 75,000 square feet and cost about $32 million, said university spokesman Rod Sievers. He said it would be paid for through student fees already in place and issue revenue bonds.

The Student Service Center will take the place of the current parking garage near Faner.

Despite the close proximity of departments within the planned building, getting to it may be a whole different problem.

SIUC Chancellor Rita Cheng said she estimated a loss of "a couple hundred" parking spots when construction starts. She said administrators are looking into the expansion or creation of temporary lots in the shortterm to replace the spots lost from the parking garage. She said future spots could be created when McAndrew Stadium is replaced with administration buildings.

"We're looking at options of expanding other lots and/or creating a new lot temporarily to replace the amounts lost, Cheng said. "Long-term, we feel administrator buildings and other buildings may provide more parking opportunities."

Cheng said administrators always look for "tasteful" ways to add more parking when new building is constructed.

The parking garage has 240 parking spots, Bame said. The new service building would hold about 50 spots, with an additional 80 spots coming from expanding other lots in the area.

Ed Hightower, vice chair of the BOT, said it would continue to evaluate the project in regard to parking and student worth, but it was vital to keep attracting students to the university with projects like this. "Even during these difficult

"Even during these difficult financial times ... We cannot stop planning for the future," he said, "We have to do the kind of thiags that will let the university attract new students.

"They have a choice ... if you are running all around the campus, and you don't have a one-stop shop and it's not up to par — why in the world would someone we're trying to recruit come to SIU?"

University receives nearly $800,000 in research grants

LAUREN LEONE Daily Egyptian

University research projects will collectively receive more than $770,000 in grants.

For the third time in three weeks, the university has been awarded a research-based grant. The most recent grant of nearly $420,000 will support Michelle Kibby, assistant professor of psychology, and her project titled 'Are Frontal Lobe Sizes and Executive Dysfunction Contributors to ADHD and Dyslexia," according to a news release from Congressman jerry Costello.

"This is great news for the institution," Chancellor k 'a Cheng said, "It's a testament to the quality of our faculty and research."

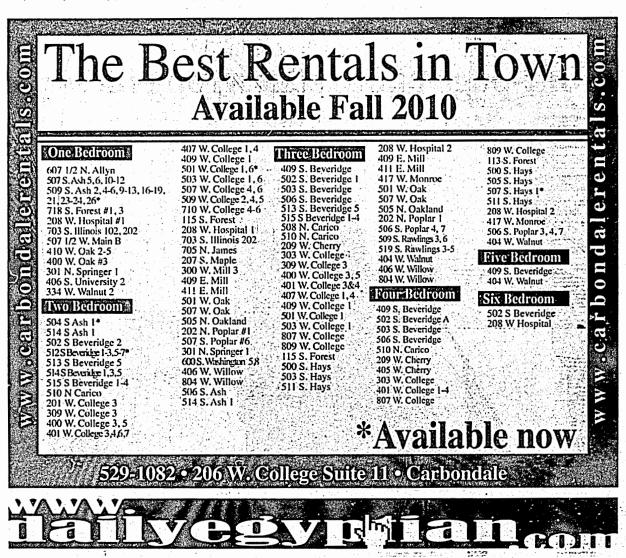

"I believe Michelle Kibby's research will be of great impact to practice and a better understanding of contributors to ADHD and Dyslexia," she said. "This is just a great example of all the work that is being done."

The Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services awarded the grant.

"Federal research and development provides tremendous benefits to not only the university, but all of society," Costello said in the release.

More than $360,000 was awarded to a research project under the physiology department June 29. The grant money came from the National Institutes of Health and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and will be used for a research project led by James MacLean, assistant professor of physiology. "The fact that we're getting that kind of money speaks well of our researchers and the work they do here," University spokesperson Rod Sievers said.

The university was also awarded $10,000 from the National Endowment for the Arts on June 29. The funds will be used for a public outreach education program focused on the University Museum's American Pop Art collection.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sunset concerts are not "debauchery"

DEAR EDITOR:

The report on the front page of the July 8 DAILT EGYPTIAN is very misleading in a negative way regarding the sunset concerts and SIUC. One misleading report could lead to a lot of negative effects for the university. People who have never been to a sunset concert, prospective students and their parents, anyone considering donations to SIUC, affiliates from other communities or universities, etc. could be very misled when the DAILY EGYPTIAN posts a huge photo of a student sucking a beer bong and captions beside it with quotes such as "one big party" and "the best part of the concerts is the fact that spectators may drink on campus".

There is a lot more to the sunset concerts than students gathering to drink alcohol. The concerts are sponsored in part by the city of Carbondale and the Carbondale Park District, so they are a community event. In addition to students, other people from Carbondale and the surrounding communities, along with faculty and staff from SIUC attend these concerts, bringing family members, visitors from out of town, etc. Some people go to the concerts to relax and socialize, listen to the music, dance to the music, etc. --- it's not all about been bongs!

Besides, half of the concerts are not even held on campus. They are held at a local park, so the statement about drinking on campus is out of context and makes people think that SIUC actively promotes this "debauchery." I'm certain that the majority of SIUC affiliates (even students) are not in favor of this image. Especially at a time when SIUC is desperate to increase enrollment and gather monetary donations for projects for which the budget simply does not exist these days.

In the future, I hope the DAILY EGYP-TIAN will use a little more discretion and promote the sunset concerts and SIUC in a more positive and accurate manner by telling the whole story, not just publishing negative, out-of-context quotes and photos.

Why search for donors?

DEAR EDITOR:

Editorial Roard

Why do we need to have someone else's name on our new football stadium? Saluki Stadium is a great name and should remain the permanent narse for the new stadium. There have been many donors in the Saluki Way project and it's not right to just put one person's name on the stadium because they had the most money.

If someone wants their name on the new stadium that bad they should make it where everyone who donated gets to put their name on it, too. That means the

Salukis are the biggest donors

DEAR EDITOR:

What's the big deal about naming the new football stadium? The structure should be called Saluki Stadium, and not as a "placeholder" name, but as a permanent name. After all, it is the students - that is, the real Salukis - who are picking up the tab for most of its cost. So why not honor our own, the biggest underwriters of the new sports facilities, instead of some mysterious donor that our athletic director hopes will appear before "the end of time"?

I would find it a glant kick in the butt of all fee-paying SIUC students if the university were to engrave the name of some buffoon on the stadium wall for a donation of $10 million - even if they could find someone city of Carbondale, all the students who paid fees, and all the private donors would get to have their names on the stadium somewhere.

- Jeff Engelhands, Voices Edito

The name Saluki Stadium would work better because it represents all the donors as well as the university. If the saying, 'every little bit counts' is true then we need to make sure that we recognize that when it comes to the new stadium.

> Kassandra Sullivan senior studying art with that kind of money before Armageddon, which is doubtful. The students - Salukis - are paying for $41.5 million of the facilities; let me know when you find a donor that tops that and I'll paint his name on the stadium myself.

Name the white elephant for the students; they've paid for it, and will be doing so for decades to come, whether they like it or not. Applying any other name will simply acknowledge that our students are good enough to pay the bills but not good enough to be given any credit for it.

GUEST COLUMN

I am an SIUC graduate with a doctorate degree from the Department of Psychology some years ago. I also work and reside in the Carbondale community. This is the first time I've written to the DAILY EGYPTIAN regarding the content of your usually excellent newspaper.

I think it was a very poor decision on the part of the DAILY EGYPTIAN editors to place a large and colorful photo on the front page of the July 8 edition of the newspaper of a student "chugging his drink using a beer bong. The caption reads "On-campus debauchery." The quote from a named SIU senior included by DAILY EGYPTIAN writer less Vermeulen with this photo goes on to state, "I love going to sunset concerts because they are like one big party." The rest of this brief paragraph went reported this named student as saying that the best part of the concerts is the fact that "spectators may drink on campus and surrounding residential communities, has worked long and hard over at least the past 30 years to combat the reputation of SIUC as a "party school" and to emphasize its academic excellence and success of its graduates. Over the years, I have been told by numerous parents that they would never send their children to SIUC because of "all the drinking that goes on there."

The SIUC community, which includes the town of Carbondale

Your front-page photo of a beer bong and the accompanying commentary creates as an indelible image of the university as a "party school" which serves to decrease the number of qualified applicants seeking admission to this university. As the enrollment decreases, the financial situation worsens and the quality of education currently provided is threatened.

The other damaging thrust of this photo and accompanying article highlights that a senior at this university is proud to share his immature opinion that the best reason to go to the sunset concerts is to drink on campus. Nothing is mentioned about the quality of the music and the togetherness this fosters among the attendees or any of a myriad number of other healthy and educational reasons one might gather with others to enjoy music outdoors.

I strongly urge the editors of the DAILY EGYPTIAN to become more aware of the academic excellence of this university as well as the regional mores of this extended community in which they live and study. It is incumbent on you to take your responsibilities seriously in portraying this university a leader of education in this geographic area and the positive impact the institution makes on its students

"I really love Audra and the entire SIU team," Love said. "The campus was beautiful and the school has a great academic reputation."

Lee, a freshman from Las Vegas, Nev., won the Nevada high school state championships in singles and doubles. The network ranked her as the No. 1 high school player in Nevada. She is ranked 126th nationally and is a three-star player. During her senior year, she was 10-9 against four-star players.

That's what is impressive about them," Nothwehr said. "They already have a good ranking but they should be ranked even higher."

Butovi, a freshman from Burundi, Africa, trained at the International Tennis Federation academy in South Africa with Saluki Anastacia Simons and 2009 MVC Tennis Player of the Yea: Fadzai Mawisire. Nothwehr said Simons and Mawisire told her about 1 in Kenya.

Nothwelfr said she doesn't know. who will play and who will not, but the players from last year's team are working hard this summer to keep their spot in the rotation. There are eight players on the team, but only six can represent SIU at competitions.

"I don't know who has those six spots," Nothwehr said. "Usually I know this person will play this, this and this. I really don't know how they're going to fall in."

Blacketer said the coaches give the recruits and the returning players time to visit without the presence of coaches, giving them a chance to bond as a team.

"We always ask the girls what they think of the recruits," Blacketer said." They all said they would fit in great."

The Heat could possibly win three to four championships in the next five years, but the Bulls could provide the toughest challenges out of all the teams in the conference. The Boston Celtics, who resigned Paul Pierce and Ray Allen, are too old and will not be able to run with the Heat. Orlando has the athletic ability and shooters, but it has not shown the winning drive needed to beat a team with three players who came together with the sole ; purpose of winning multiple championships.

As a Bulls fan, I was upset the Bulls didn't get one of the three big name free agents, but with their other moves they quickly went from summer losers to winners.

but he didn't have the right to make himself more important than the NBA Finals or to verbally disrespect the Cleveland Cavaliers and their fans.

big splash when they signed Utah Jazz power forward Carlos Boozer. Boozer was the fifth best player available behind Bosh, Wade, James and Amare Stoudemire. He is a veteran who can play both sides of the ball in the low post.

Then the Bulls signed Boozer's Jazz teammate Kyle Korver. Korver is a sniper from the threepoint line. He is also a true small forward who has an NBA body for defensive and rebounding purposes.

The two needs for the Bulls were successfully addressed with an offensive post player and a shooter.

But in order for James to save win at least three consecutive championships.

James killed his positive image with NBA fans when he decided to go on ESPN to announce his plans. The way he handled his contract negotiations is unprecedented in sports. He made sure all lights were always on him. James had the right to choose where he wanted to play, but he didn't have the right to make himself more important than the NBA Finals or to verbally disrespect the Cleveland Cavaliers and their fans.

STAFF COLUMN Three is company, five is a team

The doudy confusion has been cleared as the NBA free agency predictions have become ink-bound contracts.

The self-proclaimed king, LeBron James, and the only reason the Toronto Raptors have sold tickets since Vince Carter left, Chris Bosh, will join Dwyane Wade in South Beach as members of the Miami Heat.

Wade and James are two of the three best players in the league, Bosh is one of the best scoring big men in the NBA and all of them are in their prime. Add them together and the result is the beginning of a dynasty. On paper, this is the best trio in the league and arguably of all time.

Championship parades will be happening in Miami if the Heat can survive one major problem — they have to field a minimum NBA active roster.

Miami Heat President Pat Riley has only Mario Chalmers on his roster besides the big three and the NBA requires at least 12 players. Miami spent most of its money on James, Bosh and Wade. Anybody else who joins the team will have to take minimum contracts. Usually, the only players who will take a pay cut to win a championship are the veterans.

The first one who comes to mind is Shaquille O'Neal. The 38-year-old is only going to be in the league for one or two more years. Why not go out on top? Bosh, who was a center by default in Toronto, has stated many times he wants to play his natural position. O'Neal is the big body the Heat would need to make Boshs dream come true.

Another possibility is forward Mike Miller. Miller is a glue guy, meaning, he can do a little bit of everything statistically and the intangibles such as extra passes, court vision and hustle — not in box scores — but helps the team play better.

Other than O'Neal and Miller, the Heat will probably sign second or third year players for small contracts who will do nothing on the court.

If the Heat fail to surround their holy triumvirate with solid veterans, the Chicago Bulls may be contenders.

Who is your favorite Home Run Derby champion of all time?

BUILDING THE BODY Melvin Williams chooses from an array of dumbbells in the weight room Monday at the Recreation Center before he conducted a workout focuised on his biceps. Williams, a senior studying exercise science and information systems technology, said he participated but lost in a bodybuilding competition Sunday. He competed on the professional card and lost to someone who had 30 more pounds of muscle, he said. Now, instead of eating jars of peanut butter to burn off and make weight, he's focused on working out seven days a week, he said. "I'm getting lean, eating fruit and chicken, rather than trying to gain weight fast," Williams said.

WOMEN'S TENNIS Salukis boast 13th ranked recruitment class really think this dass is going to come in and make a statement right away.

BRANDON LACHANCE Daily Egyptian

SIU women's tennis team has added its highest ranked recruiting class in the past decade to the program.

The Tennis Recruiting Network ranked the Salukis incoming class 13th among mid-major teams. No other Missouri Valley Conference team finished in the top-25.

Head coach Audra Nothwehr said she is excited about her three new players: Korey Love, Anita Lee and Aziza Butoyi.

"It's really exciting, because I think the returning players know they're going to get pushed by these freshmen," Nothwehr said. "Usually It takes freshmen," some time, a year or so, to get acclimated to the pace of college tennis, but I really think this class is going to come in and make a statement right away."

Ame Blacketer, an assistant coach and graduate assistant in sports studies, said players are ranked on a five-star system. Blue chip means the player is one of the best in their high school class. Five-star is the next best ranking, while one star is the worst.

- Audra Northwehr head coach

Love, a freshman from Port Orange, Fla, won singles in the Florida high school state championship in 2009, beating opponents ranked higher than her.

According to the Tennis Recruiting Network, Love is ranked 96th in the nation and is a fourstar player. She finished 19-12 during her senior year, going 0-6 against blue-chip players, 5:3against other four stars and 12-0 against other four stars and 12-0 against players ranked below her.

Love, who has played tennis since she was 7 years old, said she talked to a few big schools but liked SIU because of its campus environment. She also said the ability for her to enjoy tennis, instead of playing with the additional pressure big schools could bring, led her to SIU.

Please see RECRUIT | 7

Anita Lee, a freshman from Las Vegas, Nev., is part of the 13th ranked recruiting class for the women's tennis team. Lee was ranked the No. 1 player in Nevada.
