Board establishes pay raise guidelines for administrators

By Jacqui Kozerczak Staff Writer

Salary increases for the SIU system's administrators will be sealed down next fiscal year by new salary plans approved by the Board of Trustees Thursday in Springfield.

The action comes about a month after higher education administrators were called on to justify their salaries during a state Senate appropriations Committee hearing.

In his proposal to the board, President Robert Watson said, "The plan is a compromise between equitable distribution of salary funds and being competitive in the market for quality administrators."

The compromise is "not a happy one, but a necessary one," he said.

Under the plan, some SIU-C officials making $40,000 or more 2 years would receive a lower percentage increase than the rate prescribed by the state for higher education. Senate passed legislation, pending in the Illinois House, would set salary increases at 8.5 percent next year.

Hardest hit by the plan are the system's top three administrators—the chancellor and the campus presidents.

Shaw's salary increase will be "at least 3 percent" below the state-approved increase, and the two presidents are assigned increases "at least 2 percent" less than the state's rate, the plan states.

Shaw earns $65,000 annually. Albert Einstein College appointed SIU-C president, takes office Aug. 15 at a salary of $62,300.

An increase 1 percent below that rate is slated for administrators who report directly to the chancellor, presidents or vice presidents whose salaries are above the $40,000 mark.

At a press conference after the meeting, Shaw denied that the plan "resulted from legislative pressure. Evaluating salary levels "is a yearly thing," he said. "The plan the board saw today is a compromise, one that is fair (to University employees) and yet it considers the market condition also."

However, Shaw's proposal to the booted states. "Salary increases for 'high paid' administrators were a matter of considerable discussion during our fiscal year 1981 Senate budget hearings. These discussions along with other expressed opinions have led to the development of salary increase guidelines for administrators reporting to the top three officials."

Shaw said. If the system "is to

Trustees make it official: Somit is in as president

By Jacqui Kozerczak Staff Writer

"BE IT RESOLVED, By the Board of Trustees of Southern Illinois Universties in regular meeting assembled. That Albert Einstein, be and is hereby appointed President of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, effective August 15, 1979, and it's official."

The Board of Trustees on Thursday passed a resolution, stated above in part, formalizing Somit's appointment as the University's 14th president.

At a meeting on the SIU School of Medicine campus in Springfield, Student Trustee Bob Saal introduced the motion to appoint Somit. It was seconded by SIU-C Student Trustee Greg Warren and then passed unanimously by the seven-member board.

Somit attended the meeting, rising from his chair briefly after the board's acceptance to acknowledge a round of applause from board members, constituency leaders, SIU-C acting President Hiram Lesar, and 15 board members of the SIU Foundation.

At a special conference after the meeting, the 60-year-old executive vice president of the University of South Carolina, Ralph Buffalo said one of his first priorities will be filling the chancellor's spot.

Bids are close as two groups vie for sports broadcasting contract

By Mark Pabich Sports Editor

The second set of bids for the exclusive rights to broadcast all SIU-C football and men's basketball games were opened Thursday at the SIU purchasing office. The only two offers were close in figures.

WINI radio in Murphysboro bid $2,500 for the two-year contract — $2,500 in cash and $7,000 in advertising credits. Saluki Sports Network bid $3,000 in cash for the two-year period.

Two initial bids were rejected May 28 by George Mace, vice president for university relations, because "none were acceptable to the university."

WINI General Manager Dale Adkins expressed optimism concerning his station's bid. "Our bid covered every aspect and specification asked for," he said. "We've met or exceeded all of the requirements and our entire bid was submitted as a complete package."

Adkins said he was concerned about the way Saluki Sports Network turned in its bid. "To our knowledge, the only thing Saluki Sports Network handled was financial data with a bid of $30,000 cash," he said. "As far as we know, the bid at the purchasing office contained none of the other bids specifications such as experience, network capabilities, promotional ability."

"I really don't see how SIU can accept the other bid if everything wasn't included when the bids were opened," Adkins said. "I'd be disappointed if the other network didn't hand in everything correctly because then the bids can't be judged equally."

Mark Nichols, owner of WEBQ and partner in Saluki Sports Network, said his group's offer was more than complete.

"We've done our homework and have covered every inch of specification needed," he said. "Our offer is $30,000 cash. No advertising promises. We informed the people at SIU of our network which includes powerful stations covering the St. Louis and Springfield areas.

"There's a simple joy in looking at your children and watching them grow," says John White, father of Erich, left, and Davey. "I feel frustrated at times, especially for student, but White says he has balanced his time between the roles. See story on Page 11.
Evergreen rent boost approved by trustees

By Mike Mansson
Staff Writer

Eighteen Evergreen Terrace residents lost their battle Thursday in Superior Court as a board of trustees raised the rent $30 a month, effective Aug. 1.

The vote was the second case for Evergreen Terrace residents—primarily married couples—married to whose children now attend the school. The first increase of $18 went into effect Jan. 1. Prior to that date, residents had been able to live in the complex for 2½ years without a rent hike.

The raise is due to the approval of the SIU Foundation and the Illinois Department of Housing and Urban Development if it is to take place as scheduled. HUD officials in Chicago have indicated that approval is forthcoming.

Evergreen Terrace is owned by the SIU Foundation and managed through HUD and by the administration.

Administration officials said that the increase is necessary to prevent a $20,000 accrued deficit from growing even larger. Without the increase, officials feared that the deficit in fiscal year 1981 alone would amount to $64,000. A rent increase is not expected to retire the entire deficit, board members said.

The raise will amount to $6 a month for an Evergreen Terrace resident living in a two-bedroom unit.

The rent hike will go into effect July 1, 1981, minimum wage level.

continue attracting and maintaining quality administrators, salaries must be kept in line with the market.

During the meeting, board members said that their guidelines are both conservative and temporary.

William Hull (who is in lieu of the chair of the board under a by-law change adopted Thursday) said, "I’m sure we don’t want to get into the habit of amending these things often."

A permanent policy of fixing administrators’ salaries at no more than the market rate is "pay me and I’ll be happy," Hull said.

Salary hikes for faculty, staff were approved

Rules for faculty and administrative professional employees will be distributed entirely on the basis of job performance.

Salary increases for those currently at or near the top of the pay scale will be considered for entry into a degree program if they have a 3.0 grade point average and at least 26 semester hours at SIU-C and are considered for entry on the same basis as transfer students.

During the fall and spring semesters the athletics fee for a full-time student is $30, and the student fee for a part-time student to student-grant program fee for full-time students are both $45.

Carbondale man to be tried on rape charge, judge rules

By Doria Penner
Staff Writer

Circuit Judge Richard Richman found probable cause

Thursday to try a Carbondale man for rape.

After a preliminary hearing in the Jackson County Cour-house in Murphysboro, Richman found that there was sufficient evidence had been presented to try Steven D. Davis, 27, for a rape alleged to have occurred April 3.

The rape victim, called the stand by her name of Mary Thomas, identified the defendant as the man who forced himself on her and allegedly raped her on the night of April 3.

The woman testified that Davis flung open her car door and pushed her toward the passenger side of the car just as she had finished parking her vehicle off the Center parking lot about at 8:30 p.m. on April 3.

Davis’ bond, previously set at $10,000 ($1,000 cash required to be posted), was continued. A trial date has not yet been set.

Athletics, medical, STS charges waived for some part-time students

By Jacqui Koonsnak
Staff Writer

The 1981-82 Wednesday evening hours may not be the most convenient time to attend classes at SIU-C, but now students may choose their own schedule to the greatest extent if a degree program is to be entered.

At its monthly meeting, the Board of Trustees approved waivers of three student fees, the athletics, student-to-student grant program, and medical benefit fees, for students enrolled in the weekend and evening program.

The board also determined that student fee money leftover from the Recreation Center construction fund would be spent on operating the $9.6 million complex. About $160,000 remains from the fund, which was used by a student fee since 1967.

The aim of the fee waivers, according to the trustees, is to make the university more accessible to SIU-C part-time because it is now more economical.

To be eligible for the waiver, students must register for classes scheduled after 4 p.m. on weekdays or during three-weekends that are part of the regular class schedule are offered.

Students enrolled in the weekend and evening program who have not yet declared major will be considered for entry into a degree program if they have a 3.0 grade point average.

The special number is available from August 13 through August 27 to all students living in the Carbondale District, which includes Carbondale, DeSoto, Dowell, Elkville, and Makanda. Student should give the company at least two days notice when calling for service connections. No service connections will be made on Saturday or Sunday.

The number to call is (509-2313). All other inquiries and requests can be made in person or by calling the office's regularly listed number, 457-4158. Regular office hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. After August 27, the regular number will be for all services requests.
Senate passes amended draft bill; House action may come next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate last night passed an amended version of the Selective Service System draft registration bill, a key vote in the battle to secure a draft registration system.

Barring a successful court challenge, the amended registration bill will be told to register during the first week, and men born in 1961 will register the next week.

The Senate vote came at the end of a filibuster, including a 22-hour marathon session.

By a vote of 58 to 34, the Senate approved spending $3.3 million to carry out the registration. Earlier, the Senate voted 58-34 against a plan to cut the funds to $4.7 million, enough to upgrade Selective Service computers.

Registration will be carried out over a two-week period at 34,000 post offices across the country. The Senate action will tell the registration to register during the first week, and men born in 1961 will register the next week.

Some parking fees doubled

ST. LOUIS — Some parking fees have doubled.

A parking meter is now $2.50 an hour, up from $1.50.

Political leaders are warning that the increase will hurt businesses.

"It's a shame," said Mayor John H. "Bamm" Brown. "This is a time when we need to be helping businesses, not hurting them."

Brown said the increase is not fair to businesses, especially small ones.

"This will put a strain on small businesses," Brown said. "They can't afford to pay more for parking."

The increase is part of a broader effort to increase revenue for the city.

"We need to do this because we're running out of money," Brown said. "We have to find ways to make ends meet."

Halloween festival didn't flop

The festival of 1979 displayed unique and bizarre costumes made and worn not only by students, but by faculty members as well. Halloween was a roaring success and drew visitors from nearby towns as well as Chicagoans. I enjoyed the 1979 Halloween celebration and I disagree with Mayor Fischer when he suggests Mike Dukakis for 1980. I read the June 10 edition of the Daily Egyptian that last year's celebration was a flop.

Prior to the carnival of 1980, I recommend notes to be posted expressing the importance of maintaining during the celebration. Owls, witches, pumpkins, whatever you decide to dress up as, throw your case, bottles, etc. in the available trash barrels. Trash is dirty and looks terrible scattered over the street. Be responsible for your actions and respect all other property. You, nor I, would like the Festival of Halloween 1980 to be cut out. Participants!

Voice your opinions so the decision for Halloween 1980 becomes a two-sided story. — Maxine Master, Junior, Speech Pathology and Audiology.

Workers have no alternatives if coal production is stopped

By Michael McCreedy

Students Write

A recent editorial in the Daily Egyptian asked that 9,000 Southern Illinois coal industry workers sit idly by for the sake of environmental morality while the nation finds an alternative to nuclear and the burning of fossil fuels.

The editorial did make a strong appeal for the safety of many at the expense of a relative few. This is fine, but what it did not do was give an alternative for these 9,000 or so people who now make a living in employment elsewhere. It creates, because there simply is none.

Environmental quality is great, but this area already is sorely lacking employment opportunities. Asking that miners give up the only substantial means with which to feed their families brings to mind the picture of a starving Hindu sitting on a mud mound. The bare-boned Indian sits in the street, wondering where his next meal will come from, while a fat but sacred cow wanders by with no fear of the slaughterhouse. This seems a harsh comparison, but it is fact.

In addition to this, the population of Southern Illinois is growing at a rate of 20 percent by the end of the decade. Without coal, there won't be much of an economic base to support this increase. The area will be hard-pressed to find an alternative.

Coal burning has a few unpleasant side effects, but to me breathing a little less cleaner air is better than not breathing at all, which might be the case if we were to phase out coal. Meltdown or contamination from an externally toxic dump sight.

Until solar and other viable energy sources are put into use, coal should be employed with as many environmental regulations as it can accommodate. And until some other power sources wres us from under the thumb of OPEC oil ministers, the nation needs coal. But most importantly, Southern Illinoisians need jobs!

A downstate answer Mike Royko

Editor's note: The Campbell Cartoon Service is a new service the Daily Egyptian is receiving.

By Bill Campbell

Campbell Cartoon Service

Folks, downstate communist Mike Royko recently wrote a column about the perennial conflict between the city of Chicago and downstate Illinois in which he said some unkind things about downstaters.

To save us as hasseed louts who lead dreary, bleak lives that consist mostly of church pews and bars, Saturday night dances at the VFW hall and high school basketball games. He also declared that some of the worst food in America is being served in the state capital.

It is not possible to get a decent meal more than 10 miles south of Chicago. He described our diets thusly:

"Greasy chicken, glob-like meatloaf, acid-filled colas and water, served by bored and listless waitresses named Pearl."

Much of this is true, but I think Royko treated Pearl pretty shabbily. He's never seen her on Saturday nights at the VFW hall all dolled up with her false teeth in.

Royko believes that much of the animosity between Chicagoans and downstaters stems from our envy of their lusty, sinful, bawdy lifestyles. I disagree — it's every time I go to Chicago. I have a friend named Smirkketti who lives in Chicago and delights in introducing me to new bars found only in that town. I take great pleasure in being shocked.

We do restaurants where the food and drink is so succulent it makes the tongue of a downstaters go spasms and collapse. We also go to other places and sometimes virtually newspapers that provide exotic experiences not available anywhere in the heyday of India.

It is great fun. The following morning, I take a train back to scenic Baid Bluff Township, where life goes just like my friends in chucking my tongue and waggling my finger at Chicago for its evil ways.

Meanwhile, Smirkketti goes on living in Chicago, dodging muggers and feeling very amok.

Once a week, he gets his regular downstaters down and to visit me. We have some wild times down here, too. A couple of niceballs, a high school basketball game maybe, then it's off to the VFW hall. Actually, Smirkketti doesn't want me very often any more. He has a sinus condition which is aggravated by clean, fresh air. And the peace and quiet down here are very good for his ulcer, according to his doctor.

Royko also complained about sneaky small-town cops who set up speed traps downstate to to pounce on unruly city folk who happen to be passing through Royko insists our cops experience even more satisfaction when they nab a Chicagoan. Of course they do. Most Chicagoans go into the countryside measuring about outside Cook County are probably up to no good, anyway. And even if they aren't guilty of speeding, they doth are guilty of other infractions of which they have escaped punishment.

Besides, someone has to pay for the new sidewalk down here in front of the feed store. Why should we pay for speed traps when they go on the outskirts of the city slickers? Also, according to Royko, many of our downstate legislators are simple-minded. Well, naturally they are. Some are downright stupid. We intentionally select such types because we found them to be generally less inclined to steal and quicker to doze when the General Assembly is in session. A sleeping legislator is less troublesome than one who is awake. The sleazy habits of our lawmakers do possess they learned from being exposed to Chicago lawyers.

But as Royko said, there is always some sort of Chicago-downstate feud going on and I suppose I have contributed to it. So in the interest of better Chicago-downstate regulations, I would invite Mike Royko to Bald Bluff Township for a weekend.

To avoid speed traps I will send a good ol' boy in a pickup truck to fetch him and drive him down here. Good ol' boys in pickups are immune to speed traps. I will buy him a basket full of Chicago grub — two days worth — so he will not have to eat that mealy meatloaf and grossy apple pie while he is here.

And Saturday night I will take him to the VFW hall and introduce him to Pearl. She'd like to meet him.

Scientists to attempt inducing rain

URBANA (AP) — Scientists plan to fly into the clouds over Illinois this summer to find out if they can induce rain to help crops grow.

The Illinois State Water Survey will conduct the tests in July and August. Two airplanes equipped with meteorological instruments, including those capable of producing showers and thunderstorms, will collect data about them.

The study will be the first stage in what could be a 10-year rainmaking experiment involving the Water Survey, Midwestern universities and agricultural groups.

Gaston discovered that one-fifth of those who returned the questionnaire did believe in ghosts. "This gave me a very good national sample," he said.

Other scientists interested in the nature of peoples' beliefs in ghosts; why they believe in them. Gaston, though he prefers not to use labels, defined what a ghost is in light of his research.

"One is referring to two kinds of phenomena," he said. "One is that in which a person sees an image. The other usage is when an event takes place and people believe that the event was caused by the spirit of a dead person."

People do not always fear encounters with ghosts, according to Gaston.

"Some consider the experience very frightening, but others find the experience very pleasant," Gaston said.

Gaston hopes that his studies on the subject will provide a foundation on which to base other studies in the future.

I'm looking to see what the issues are. One can't make many conclusions about a phenomenon without having a lot of studies done on it. Whatever I conclude will be based on a very limited kind of inquiry.

Gaston hopes that his studies on the subject will provide a foundation on which to base other studies in the future.

Ghosts and the supernatural are not a fad, according to Gaston.

"A fad comes, reaches a peak and leaves," he explained. "There may have been peaks and valleys in the interests of the supernatural, but there has always been an interest. I don't see any demise in the interest."

Ol' Dad isn't what he used to be in '76

By Carrie Sweeney

The old trite phrase, “A woman's place is in the home,” is enough to make even the least active of feminists gasp. For, there was a time when the statement was not only a correct summation of the American family structure, but also an expectation placed upon those of the female gender. The early American family structure, where men worked and women stayed home and raised children, ironically enough serves as the basis for our present day societal roles. In addition, understanding the history of the family serves as a measure of the emotional growth of people and the subsequent “modernization” of what is accepted by society, said Melva Ponton, assistant professor in the Division of Human Development at SIU-C.

In 1976, Ponton and her family became interested in the 1776 family structure as a comparison of the changes made over the past 200 years. A workshop, “The Bicentennial Family,” developed from her studies and was taught at SIU. One of the most significant changes of the male-female role has been that of the father, and the results have been heart­warming to most. Today, father is in the kitchen and “sunday room just as often as he is found in the garage. And those who benefit from this attitude are the family and home, of course, the children.

In early family days the men and boys tilled the farm land and the women took care of the basic needs of clothing and food. “Little children used to be thought of as small adults,” she added, “Not only were these boys and girls as ‘little men’ and the girls as ‘lilb’-women. The boys went with the men and the girls with the women. That’s the way the roles were played out.

“Today, due to a change in societal expectations and guidelines, it’s perfectly normal and healthy to see a man with his daughter.” Noticeable in the early family are two distinctive father-child relationship patterns. Ponton said. This is partly due to the difference of the children’s economic value in the farm and city dwelling family.

“Rural families, which were large in number, had a great deal of togetherness and openness. Boys were expected to ‘pull their share of the work load’ during farming season and by the age of 13, girls had already mastered the skill of running a home.” Ponton said.

“Father used to work long and hard hours and had the responsibility of training the boys, so a certain classroom developed between the two,” she added.

Here is a collection of thoughts about fathers on Father’s Day.

When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be 21, I was astounded at how much the old man had learned in seven years.

—Samuel Clemens

My father’s back was always more to be feared than his bits. He would threaten loudly, but punish mildly or not at all. —John Burroughs

Today, Father is father’s day, And we’re giving you a tie, It’s not much you know, It’s just our way of showing you, We think you’re a regular guy, You say that it was nice of us to bother, But it really was a pleasure to him.

For according to our mother you’re our father, And that’s good enough for us.

The night you were born, I ceased being my father’s boy and became my son’s father. That night I began to live. —Henry Gregor Felton: from “Letters to a Teen-age Son”

Father, dear Father, came home with me now, The clock in the belfry strikes one.

You said you were coming right home from the store
As soon as your day’s work was done; Our fire has gone out, our house is all dark, And Mother’s been watching once tea, With poor brother Henry so little and tall.

There’s no one to help her but me. —Henry Clay

No man is entirely responsible for his father. —Mark Twain

Father’s birthday. He would have been 96, 96, yes, today; and could have; been 96 like other people one has known, but mercifully was not. His life would have utterly ended mine. —Virginia Woolf

Many a father speaks his child for things his father should have spanked on; at him. —Don Marquis

And all to leave what with his tail had won.

To that unfathered two-legged thing, a son.
—John Dryden

Nearly every man is a firm believer in heredity until his son makes a fool of himself. —Unknown

All fathers entertain the pious wish of seeing their own lack laced in their sons. It is quite as though one could live for a second time and put in full use all the experience of one’s first career.

—Johann Wolfgang Von Goethe

My Daddy worked his whole life, For nothin’ but the pain, Now he walks in empty rooms, Lookin’ for something to break, You inherit the sin, You inherit Life’s scars, Adam raised a Cain. —Bruce Springsteen

It is not flesh and blood, but the heart which makes us fathers and sons. —Johannes Von Schiller

Von stood on end at the casks and the charges of these boys. Why was I ever a father? —Charles Dickens

You have to dig deep to bury your Daddy. —Gypsy Proverb

‘Leatherette’ is mostly ‘rehash’

By Edward R. Berry

Student Writer

Grace Jones’ “Warm Leatherette” has to be one of the year’s greatest rehashed albums.

“Leatherette” is a combination of Jones’ electronic funk-style songs and an array of numbers from some of today’s hottest bands.

Jones proves that she is capable of singing other band’s songs nearly as well as the original singers, but her own songs don’t compare to the album’s remixes.

“Love Is the Drug,” (Roxy Music). “Breakdown,” (Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers) and “Private Life” (The Pretenders) are just three examples of songs that supply “can’t miss” fire to this album.

In comparison, Jones’ own songs have a more dance-oriented sound to them. One that stands out in particular is “A Rolling Stone.” Supplied with a disco-swing type beat, the tune promises to leave listeners shuffling and tapping their feet.

Overall, “Leatherette” does have a lot of potential. But, it’s too bad most of its success has already been experienced by the original artists themselves.

Jones’ band could develop into one of today’s hottest recording groups...as soon as they figure out how to produce a hit song of their own.

be a harsh person," Ponton said. "There was a great deal of respect within the father-child relationship, but not a lot of open communication."

Ponton said that even within early families who communicated well, an irony existed. "Men still didn't really help the women around the house. But, when the men were absent from the family because of death or war the women took over everything, including the men's jobs."

True for 1776, but not for 1980. Almost from the point when women began formally educating themselves and entering the workforce, men have also begun to assume a more sharing relationship in regard to the managing of a home or the raising of children. Almost obsolete is the man who demands that his wife stay home to bake cookies and clean the house while he "brings home the bacon."

And so, gone are the days when childbirth, 2 a.m. feedings, diaper changes, household chores and food preparation are left entirely to the woman in the house. Young boys, as early as the fifth grade, are willingly, or at least almost willingly, pursuing the art of Quiche, Lorraine and Beef Stroganoff. And young girls are following suit by mastering the skills of carpentry and car maintenance.

One apparent factor in the laxity of role models is the increased awareness that men and women have about each other. The challenge to grow with the times, which Ponton compares to that of a child growing up, has also had a marked effect.

"As a child sees something new and different he challenges it. Sometimes, he will even rebel. Then, as he acquires confidence about what is new, he accepts it and challenges something else," she said.

This pattern of challenging new ideas never stops. It is a cycle which each individual repeats throughout his life, she added. "As adults we constantly receive new information. Then, we wait until our confidence is up and we challenge."

When father is participating in the child-rearing process and in the managing of the home, there is equity in the family life, Ponton added. "One of my favorite sayings describes the positive aspects of a participating father," she said.

When father never stands as tall as when he reaches down and helps a child."

Roles of the father can be expected to continue changing as 3-year-old Jamie Kelly of Carterville grows into father's jacket.

Returning to school allows father to share equally in daughters’ lives

By Karen Clare

Fatherhood for John White, 36, has been a sense of completeness. As the father of two girls, Darcy, 7, and Erin, 5, White equally shares in the raising of his daughters, at least for now while he and his wife, Jane, are attending doctoral programs at SUU.

White, a former high school English teacher in Decatur, said since he has returned to school, he has taken on a more active role in his children's lives than when he was out in the "real world." Obviously, working the traditional 9-to-5 shift did not give White much time to be with his children, but he is now making up for that.

"Now there are times I need to be with them when my wife is attending class," he explained. "There is a more equal division of labor."

White, who celebrated his 14th wedding anniversary this week, said he thinks there is a difference between young student-parents—those who are still doing their doctorates work—and older student-parents like himself. White, who was 29 years old when his oldest daughter was born, considers himself a "late starter."

"I'm not typical of the parent-student type. I think we're different in terms of experience. I've been out of school longer than I've been in," he said as he watched his daughters, dressed in their Sunday-best, play in the grass outside his office.

"We tried to work our Ph.D.s into having a life and family. This creates problems and pressures."

White said he tries to put aside one day and one night a week to spend exclusively with his family. He said he considers Sunday family day and enjoys sailing and sharing his hobbies with his family, especially Darcy.

"I think she's going to be a pretty good sailor. She enjoys the wind," he said with a smile. "Sometimes, I feel like she's going for ice cream."

"Yeah, we kind of got into that habit," her dad laughed and said.

Both of White's daughters are full of life and bursting with curiosity about the world which is opening up for them.

"There's simply a joy in looking at them, watching them grow. You can't imagine how smart they are," he said as Darcy listened intently.

For White, being a father means being surprised. It's frustrating at times. They are a lot slower going places. But that can be good because it forces you to take a look at where you're going.

White offered some tips for future fathers of girls: "A lot of people are going to ask you if you want a son. I think that's a disgusting question."

"When you're the father of girls, you realize how much stereotyping goes on. Males have to overcome that within themselves to help their own daughters develop as normally as they can."

White said his daughters are always sending him messages, all with a common thread—I love you.

Jags imitate, slur, rush their rock

By Ken Mac Garrigue
News Editor
If you're gonna imitate, pick somebody worth imitating.
On The Jags debut LP "Evening Standards," the Jags give the impression they were just recording a laboratory-recording studio against their will and came out an "Elvis Costello-sounding clone. And if you're going to be a clone, why not go with one of the best?"

However, something must have gone wrong during this operation.

The Jags have Costello's voice, minus the power. His clever lyrics, minus the anger. His style of music, minus the bite.

"Party Games" sounds like "Party Girl. "Tune Into Heaven" sounds like "Beat Army."
The similarities are interesting but only to a point.

While you're not going to know what he's singing, the Jags rush through songs like the Jags. They have to catch an 11 o'clock flight to London. The Jags write fairly good lyrics, but they slur their words so fast and unemotionally that any feeling gets lost. The Jags were smart enough to include their song lyrics on the album sleeve though.

"Back Of My Hand" would probably be a big hit if a big group like The Knack or Cheap Trick had recorded it.

However, they didn't and probably won't. So the Jags must fight bitting the dust after only one album. Right now they're touring with The "Cretones" who are getting a lot of airplay because Linda Ronstadt records their songs. And also because The Cretones are good.
Perhaps The Jags need that "in" with a big time artist to magically turn them into a big time act.

A name change might be a good place to start. "Jags" has somewhat negative connotations. Though Webster's gives one definition of jags. A state of feeling exhilaration or intoxication especially when induced by liquor. For instance, he had a good jag when he left the bar. Jags also means a "thrill." as in "He takes the stuff because it gives him a jag."

You won't be tempted on this album. Other songs worth hearing on the LP are "Tune Into Heaven" and "Woman's World."

New Tyner album 'amazes' listener

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer
McGee Tyner is a unique, individualistic composer and splintered pimpled piano regular who normally pumps out four-star albums. His music ranges from blues to "Highway 13 West," the almost-classical piano composition of one of the contemporary greats of jazz.

His latest album, "Horizon," is another indication of his well-deserved reputation. The tunes range from the fast-paced "Womans of Tomorrow," to the very slow "New Horizon." The latter is the finest tune on this album.

Tyner features a group rhythm section of Tyner, bassist Charles Fambrough and drummer Al Foster. Though not really evident on the rest of the album, Fambrough, a past Tyner bassist, strums his stuff on this upbeat song and makes the listener long for more.

The title track opens the disc and has received some radio play. This song, as well as several others, benefits from the choppy violin style of John Blake. Blake trades off with the smooth soprano sax of Joe Ford to provide a full and jazz effect. As usual, Tyner amazes the listener with his top-notch piano playing. His left-hand independence, which has allowed him to forge rhythms on past tunes, makes one wonder if two people are on the wrong end, the one complaint about this song, though it might be long on jazz.

Tyner never seems to tire of the news on his albums, this one is no exception. Plenty is heard from saxophonists Ford and George Adams, both of whom also play flute on Blake's dreamy, "Womans of Tomorrow."

This is a jazz album, with the gentle flute sounds weaving in and out of a soft piano-violin duet.

A Music Review

Percussionist Guilhem Fuensaldaña comes off this airy tune. Fuensaldaña shows to the sax dominated "Motherland," and a Blake composition. Here Fambrough thumps on bass, while Tyner displaces his last and crystal-left hand.

"Just Feelin'." Tyner tune, utilizes the quick-moving, side-rang-tener of Adams. Tyner is really given a chance to cook here. This is the last piece on the album, and Tyner seems to consciously shut off his band. Tyner must have been feeling good when he wrote this, because the song is a happy, upbeat closer that leaves a sweet taste and leaves a desire for more.

A recent Down Beat magazine review said that Tyner's valleys are others, peaks. His diverse and plentiful repertoire makes it hard to imagine anyone covering it. As that writer stated, "What's left for him to do?"

That was written two albums ago, and Tyner has again answered the question in a forceful, imaginative way with his "Horizon."

"Horizon" is a must for any fan of Joe Ford or Adams, probably for the rest of us.

By the way, Joe Ford gets the "Tune of the Week."
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House easily passed a major civil rights bill Thursday that is designed to strengthen enforcement of the landmark 1968 fair housing law.

Passage, on a 310-99 vote, came only after opponents of the measure narrowly lost a last-ditch attempt to send the legislation back to conference with instructions to strip much of the enforcement powers from the bill.

The measure allows the Department of Housing and Urban Development to file complaints in discrimination cases, rather than merely mediate complaints. It also increases the power of the Justice Department to act on such cases.

The legislation, the only major civil rights bill to come before Congress this year, now goes to the Senate where a subcommittee already is working on similar legislation.

The margin of victory on final passage belied the difficulties faced by supporters in getting through the House the legislation which President Carter had called "perhaps the most important civil rights bill in a decade."

An attempt by opponents to strip much of the enforcement provisions from the legislation failed last week only after Rep. Joseph Gabaldon, D-Pa., switched his vote at the last minute.

That vote switch gave supporters a 299-204 victory and kept the key enforcement provisions intact.

Opponents then mounted another attempt to modify the bill Thursday, asking that it be sent back to committee with instructions to delete the enforcement provisions. That move failed on a 290-196 vote.

Supporters contended the legislation was needed because the 1968 fair housing act had no effective means of enforcement.

Under that law, HUD could only mediate complaints alleging housing discrimination. It had no power to actually settle the cases. The Justice Department could bring suit in housing discrimination cases only where there was "pattern or practice" of discrimination.

The new bill, however, allows HUD to file complaints of housing discrimination with an administrative law judge in the Department of Justice. The law judge would have authority to settle the cases and order appropriate remedies, including imposing a fine of up to $50,000.

The Justice Department also would be given greater latitude in prosecuting cases of alleged housing discrimination. The bill allows the department to pursue cases of "general interest" rather than merely those where there is a pattern or practice of discrimination.

The new law also extends to the handicapped the protections against housing discrimination granted by the 1973 law, which prohibits discrimination based on race, color, sex, national origin or religion.

Tech program awaits robot

C3PO's kin coming to campus

By Scott Canon

The Society of Manufacturing Engineers announced last week the selection of a $6,000 grant to SIU-C's Industrial Technology Program toward the purchase of a five-axis industrial robot.

H. Besterfield, an SIU-C professor for the College of Engineering and Technology, said the robot will give students an opportunity to gain experience in a new technology which he said is expected to have a significant impact on manufacturing productivity in the next five years.

The SME grant, coupled with grants from local industries and the University of Illinois-Urbana-Champaign, along with funding from the University, will pay the $48,000 cost of the industrial robot, said Besterfield.

Besterfield said he planned to use the robot to help students get a good education in manufacturing technology.

"The robot can help students get a good education in manufacturing technology, and it can help them get a good job," Besterfield said.

Besterfield said the robot could be used in hazardous areas of manufacturing such as spray painting, where a person performing the same task might inhale toxic fumes.

The robot could also reduce assembly costs for a manufacturer after the initial investment is returned in a period of about two years.

The five-axis robot, which will duplicate the motions of a human, will be purchased from a company in France.

Lawyer: Rum burned Pryor

By The Associated Press

Two doctors treating comedian Richard Pryor died Wednesday that the 39-year-old Pryor's stomach was not. They have been using a flammable drug mixture when he was engulfed in flames and critically burned.

Pryor's attorneys, meanwhile, said the comedian had told them that he was burned when a glass of rum ignited when he lit a cigarette.

Police had said Tuesday that Pryor, himself, one of two physicians treating Pryor, reported the comedian was using a mixture of ether and Coca-Cola known as "free base" and that they had exploded. The police said they stood by their account.

Study examines corn stalks, stills as potential fuel-plan ingredients

By Carol Knauf in Muff Willett

Corn stalks and stills may become important ingredients in future fuel plans, according to SIU Champaign Dan McIlroy.

McIlroy and Robert Wolff, an agricultural engineer in the school of Agriculture, are studying, on corn alcohol production from a practical viewpoint. A still has been built for the project, and ways to make alcohol from corn stover are being sought.

"We are investigating the feasibility of making farm energy independent by producing alcohol with a minimum of too proof, which is 70 percent alcohol," McIlroy said.

With some engine adjustments, the alcohol produced could be used as fuel in farm machinery, according to McIlroy. Residual distilling materials could be used to feed farm animals.

"Our problem right now is yield," McIlroy said. "We are only getting in percent of the yield we'd like to get."

Although McIlroy said he thought alcohol could never replace petroleum, he said that alcohol has a potential of meeting 10 percent of our fuel needs.

McIlroy said the process is accomplished by breaking down the cellulose in the corn stover to sugar by means of a green fungus. Yeast is then used to ferment the sugar into alcohol. Solids are separated from the alcohol and the alcohol is distilled.

Economics, not love of 'bonbons,' is reason most women work

By Laurie Murphy

Married women who work outside the home have less money to buy 'bonbons.' Walker's study examined how women work outside the home and in the home. Most of the women-43 percent-support themselves or are married to men who earn less than $5,000 per year. Past generations of men kept their self-esteem high if they weren't the sole support for the family. Walker said, "Young men feel less pressure to be the moneymaker if their wife works. If the husband is laid off temporarily, the wife's income could keep the family going economically," Walker said.

Walker's study examined how money is saved in families where the wives worked and in families where they didn't. She found there were different patterns of saving in the two types of families.

In families in which the wives do not work or are more eager to liquidate, meaning there is money on hand in checking and savings accounts. If the wife works, there is more money to invest in longer term plans such as buying real estate, Walker said.

She said another notion about women who work is that they will spend more money on ready-made convenience grocery items which cost more than items made from scratch. Other added costs for a woman who works are costs of transportation, clothes, lunch and having a separate office gift fund, Walker said.

Opposing these costs, there are opportunity costs for the woman who doesn't work. Walker said. There is an opportunity cost of not developing a job skill for women who find themselves divorced or widowed and who need to make a living. A woman's job skill may be outdated and she may have no insurance or pension plan for herself. Walker refers to these women as "displaced homemakers."

There are choices for families to make concerning whether the men work outside the home or stays at home. As for herself, Walker said she would love to have someone at home who could take care of the home and have dinner ready at night.

Unemployment eligibility bill OK'd

By Tom Anderson

The House Labor and Commerce Committee voted 8-6 to send to the full House a measure tightening up eligibility for unemployment insurance benefits. The measure had already passed the Senate. However, Rep. Richard A. Maximiano, D-Spring Valley, sponsor, said he did not like the measure in the form it was approved.

Nicholson affected by reviews; critics unsure of 'The Shining'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The worst thing about being an actor, says Jack Nicholson, is reading the reviews. After 22 years in acting, I'm still affected by them. "Sometimes I get a review that makes me think I did a pretty good job. Then for the same performance, I get knocked so badly that I think I shouldn't be in the business, that I'm stealing the money."

"The other day I saw a review on television for 'The Shining.' The guy threw up his hands and said, 'I just don't know.' Imagine that! He couldn't make up his mind whether he liked it or not."

Few critics have taken the central position on the new Stanley Kubrick film, which is getting wide release from Warner Bros. this month. Newsweek and Time have proclaimed it one of Kubrick's finest efforts. Daily Variety, which is not ordinarily scornful, said it may be Warner's biggest box office disappointment since 'Exorcist II.' "I've had mixed reviews ever since I won the Oscar," remarked Nicholson, best actor of 1975 for "One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest." "One person will say I'm the greatest, the other will say I should retire. I liked 'The Shining.' And when I like something I'm involved in, I'll talk about it."

Meaning interviews. Ordinarily Nicholson is incommunicado with the press ("I just don't have anything to talk about.") but he agreed to help Warner launch "The Shining." Elegantly dressed in a variety of checks (and wearing suspenders), he sipped coffee in suite 1660 of the Century Plaza Hotel and talked of his life and work. "The Shining" is based on the novel by Stephen King ("Carrie"). A family — Nicholson, Shelley Duvall, young Danny Lloyd — occupies a Colorado Rockies hotel during the deserted winter season. Strange things start happening, harrying back to a family murder in years past; Nicholson is seized by a homicidal frenzy, and that's divided critics.

Nicholson is in the middle of what he terms his two-year cycle of acting. He made an appearance in the Warren Beatty-Diane Keaton movie about revolutionary John Reed, and recently completed "The Postman Always Rings Twice." After "The Border" with Harvey Keitel and Valerie Perrine, Nicholson expects to take another hiatus, perhaps devoting a year to another film as director.
Duran vs. Leonard in title fight

By Paul Reis
Staff Writer

Dempsey vs Tunney Laws vs Walcott Ali vs Frasier In boxing's "ring of fire" throughout the world via satellite and by closed circuit television at the St. Louis Checkerdome. There will be no live home-town boxing event in the United States.

Leonard, who will be 31 on May 17, is undefeated in 27 professional fights. Of those 27 battles, 18 have been knockouts. Wladimir Klitschko, the Olympic gold medalist at Montreal in 1976, Leonard captured the welterweight crown November 26, 1976. The 29-year-old Duran brings a record of 69-1-1 into the bout, including an amazing 55 knockouts. He has been fighting professionally since 1968, when Leonard was only 11.

Duran holds the World Lightweight title on June 26, 1972, when he defeated Bob Buchanan in 13 rounds at Madison Square Garden. He defended his title 11 times before relinquishing it in 1978 to seek the welterweight championship.

Tickets for the closed circuit screening at the Checkerdome are priced at $10 and $12.

Saluki Lee to challenge world champion Moses

By Paul Reis
Staff Writer

World record holder and 1984 Olympic gold medalist Edwin Moses will present another challenge for SIU hurdler David Lee when the two meet for the first time this season in the Athletics Congress outdoor championship.

Lee, who breezed to the NCAA 400-meter intermediate hurdle crown last April, and Computers SIU hurdler David Lee at the meet — Bob Roggy, NCAA javelin champion. The Lee record was set on May 19. SIU 440-yard dash champ, 1973; George Woods, 1966 NCAA champion. Stan Fosdick, Hampton thrower, Andy Roberts -110-meter hurdles and two-pole vaulters, Tino Johnson and Gary Hunter. Besides Lee's impressive NCAA meet victory, the junior claimed hurdle titles this season at the Drake and Kansas Relays. The University City, Mo., native also helped the Saluki to the MVC outdoor championship four weeks ago, winning both the 110 and 400-meter intermediate hurdles and the long jump.

Lee has run the world's fastest into intermediate hurdle time this year — the 48.47 second mark he recorded in Saturday's final heat — but that still fails more than a second short of Moses' 47.45 record. "Moses is the premiere hurdler in the world right now," Hartung said. "But a lot of people, including myself, told me that Moses and David are the two best hurdlers in the world. "David Lee is still not as good as a hurdler as he will be."

In addition to Lee and Moses, the ACO meet's welter intermediate hurdle field will include 1976-79 NCAA champion James Walker and UCLA's Andre Phillips, who came into the meet as NCAA champion in the intermediate hurdles, but finished a disappointing seventh with a time of 51.67.

Once Lee finishes with the ACO meet, his next hurdle will be the Olympic trials in Eugene, Ore. "David and I don't necessarily expect him to win the trials," Hartung said. "We're hoping for a finish in the top six.

TV STAR—Saluki track star, NCAA 400-meter intermediate hurdle champion David Lee will be featured on SIU's Saluki Sports. The popular program will feature highlights of the 1980 NCAA track and field tournament held last weekend in Austin, Texas. Lee's winning world record, season performance and junior Olympic trials will be highlighted as LIABC-TV's Wide World of Sports shows last week's meet.

The show will be shown locally on Channels 2 and 3.
