Irvin wants to improve SIU's image

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

Recently elected student trustee Stan Irvin believes that SIU-C's image in the state legislature is suffering because of salary payments granted to administrators on leave.

Irvin, elected April 15 by a 1,205-vote margin, is working for Senator Kenneth Buzbee, D-58th District.

Specifically citing George Mace, who resigned from the University May 12 but will continue to receive his $50,000 annual salary, Irvin said, "I feel this is a mistake that is going to hurt the Board of Trustees and the image of SIU, especially in the Legislature." Irvin said he has heard complaints by legislators that SIU-C already has high administrative costs.

Irvin said that petitions protesting the salary payment to Mace will probably be passed over when the matter comes up at the next board meeting on July 9 "because I feel this is a deal already negotiated and will pass with de facto approval. In the long run, this decision will reflect on the administration," Irvin said.

Irvin defeated Kevin Jans for the office and based his campaign on making students aware of the existence of a student trustee. "In my campaign, I found most students didn't know what the board and the student trustee do."

Irvin said that he plans to reach as many students as possible. "I'm going to continue going door-to-door in dorms and apartments just as I did in my campaign but not as heavily. I plan to attend as many different club meetings as possible and will ask to sit in to find out their concerns and exchange ideas.

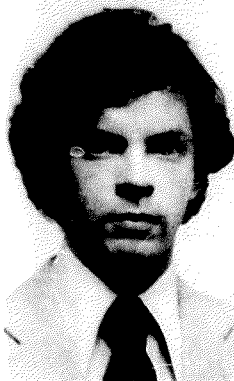

"Also, I'm going to try and implement a newsletter for students, if the funding is available. It would basically be an educational apparatus and would mention some of the issues touching directly on the students," Irvin said. The newsletter would explain what the Board of Trustees is, what its purpose is and why the board is important, Irvin said. He added he was hopeful that the newsletter would be published at least once a year.

Another point in Irvin's student contact plan is to set up some sort of informal council that would meet about a week before meetings of the Board of Trustees.

"I'd like to unite representatives from the major university organizations and campus newspapers in order to seek advice on how issues should be dealt with. I value

Justice Stewart retires; woman may replace him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Potter Stewart, a longtime swing vote between conservatives and liberals, announced Thursday his retirement after 23 years on the Supreme Court. The vacancy sparked speculation over President Reagan's pledge to name the first woman to the nation's highest bench.

Stewart, who personified a middle-of-the-road approach to interpreting the Constitution, gave no reason for the publicly surprising decision to leave the court July 3.

"Now that it is time to go, I leave with the hope that the Supreme Court will be in good and wise hands," Stewart said in his retirement letter to Reagan, dated May 18.

Reagan, who learned of Stewart's decision in a secret Oval Office meeting a month ago, said he has made no decision upon a replacement but added he is "always" looking for a woman to appoint. "We have been quite some time just basically preparing for any future appointments," Reagan said.

"There will be an announcement shortly."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan had directed Attorney General William French Smith to quickly look for a successor to Stewart after he learned of the justice's decision.

"Activist judges" need not apply, Speakes said. He said he didn't know whether Smith, himself a potential candidate, had been instructed to look especially for women. But Reagan "will not seek only candidates who necessarily agree with every position, but rather those who share one key view—the role of the course is to interpret the law, not to enact new law by judicial fiat," the spokesman said.

Stewart, 66, a moderate Republican appointed by President Eisenhower, has not appeared to be in the best of health as he walked through the court's corridors in recent months.

He told his colleagues that in retirement he hopes "to serve from time to time as a member of the federal judiciary," a reference to the right of retired

Judge stands by ruling in faculty parking suit

By Brenda Wilgenbusch
Staff Writer

In a post-trial decision Thursday, Judge Bill Green denied SIU-C's motion to change his April 20 ruling in a parking fines suit.

Though SIU-C is entitled to payment of the parking fines owed by faculty, Green's original ruling said, "I do not have the power to deduct money from paychecks. Green upheld his original ruling.

Though the four employees involved in the suit must pay the $767 they owe in parking fines, Green ruled, the University doesn't have the power to deduct fines from salaries without court order or written authorization from employees.

The suit was filed last year after the University deducted overdue parking fines from paychecks of faculty and staff owing more than $100. The faculty had parked in a University lot without proper parking decals.

The deductions, made as part of a policy begun in December, were ruled illegal by Green. He ruled the deductions violated a state wage deduction law.

Shari Rhode, chief trial attorney for University Legal Counsel, filed the post-trial motion May 20, asking the court to change its ruling because of an appellate court decision in a suit filed against the University of Illinois.

The University of Illinois case involved withholding money to cover an employee's unpaid fines. The appellate court held that the action was legal.

Green, however, said the two cases are different. "The points raised there were different, and they had authorization there," he said.

Herbert Donow, president of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers, said, "The University can't deduct fines from salaries."

Only the court can deduct fines, he said. If the University decides to appeal, Donow said, "they may wind up with less than they've got now."

Joel B. Feldman said he isn't happy with the decision. Feldman, an assistant professor of art and one of the faculty members involved, said he doesn't think he should have to pay the fines.

"We may have abused the letter of the law in principle," Feldman said. "But we were trying to use our time for the University as best as we could."

He said he had received his parking tickets for parking behind Allyn Building while delivering supplies.

Feldman said three of the original four faculty members were from the School of Art and that he knows of others who were ticketed for parking while delivering supplies.

According to Rhode, the University may appeal, but "no appeal decision will be made until President Somit returns." Somit is lecturing in Europe until July.

Oberman reveals candidacy

By Steve Moore
Staff Writer

Chicago Alderman Martin J. Oberman announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for attorney general Thursday at a press conference in the Student Center's Missouri Room.

Oberman, a six-year veteran of Chicago's City Council, is on a two-day tour of Illinois to kick-off his campaign. Thursday Oberman also spoke in Chicago, Springfield and Cahokia.

Oberman, 36, warned, "All those who think that the rule of law applies only to someone else, your quiet, comfortable and profitable days are running out."

He said he was committed to "begin ridding our state of its corrupt and criminal elements—the tax cheats, the polluters, the price fixers and the consumer rip-off artists—who have preyed on us for so long."

Oberman criticized Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who was appointed by Gov. Thompson to complete the term of convicted Attorney General William Scott. "Mr. Fahner does not understand what the job is about. He's only interested in taking care of 'Big Jim' Thompson," said Oberman.

Oberman said that the attorney general's office has the resources to protect Illinois citizens. He said he would use those resources to fight utility rate hikes, prosecute polluters, beef up the attorney general's Medicaid Fraud Unit, and to create a full-time civil rights unit.

Oberman, who is competing for the Democratic nomination with Rep. Dan Pierce, D-Highland Park, said he will appear before the party's Central Committee to seek endorsement—unless "the process becomes a farce."

"I believe it (the endorsement process) should be an open process. It's been an insider's game for too long," Oberman said.

Oberman's campaign committee is co-chaired by Phillip Klutznick.

Oberman said he has raised about $40,000, but might need between $750,000 and $1 million before the campaign is over.

Public relations will keynote new music school head's plans

By Julie Guadagnoli
Staff Writer

The new music school director is coming to SIU with two things in mind: opening the "window" of the music school to the public and making sure his students get the utmost in music education.

Robert Roubos, 46, who was named music school director in May, will come to the University on July 16 with an extensive musical background. He will replace acting director Phillip Olsson.

As music school director, Roubos said he will direct academic programs and provide curriculum and personnel. Also, he said he will head committees and supervise public relations aspects of concerts, festivals, opera productions and the like.

According to Roubos, public relations is the "window to the music school," through which people can see that part of the University.

Roubos said he wants to "provide the very best education for students, something that's often overlooked." He added that sometimes administrators and faculty forget that "the University exists because of the students."

Roubos was in higher education for 23 years, teaching music theory, organ and church music courses. For 12 years he has been in music administration, serving as music department chairman at the State University of New York College at Cortland for five years and at Adrian College in Michigan for four years. Since then, he has had the same position at Indiana University—Purdue University at Fort Wayne, which he will be leaving to come to SIU.

Roubos said he does not yet have specific plans for the music school because he needs to "study the whole situation first" and get acquainted with the campus. However, generally, he would "like to continue the fine growth that the school of music has made."

Roubos was born in Chicago. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in organ performance at Michigan State University. He received his doctorate of musical arts from the University of Michigan.

As an organist, Roubos has played extensively in the United States and Europe. He said he plans to give a recital at Shryock Auditorium

Among his other interests are traveling and antiques, said Roubos. Also, he and his wife Anne usually rise very early in the morning for a brisk three to six mile walk, he said.

China spying on Russians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is getting information on Soviet missile tests and other vital military information from Chinese specialists using U.S.-supplied equipment at two spy stations in northwest China, government sources said Thursday.

The sources, who asked to remain anonymous, stressed their concern that disclosure of the arrangement "might embarrass the Chinese government and cause it to cut off this source of valuable information from the United States."

Iran hunts for Bani-Sadr

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian airport and border guards were alerted Thursday to be on the lookout for President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, reported on the run from Moslem zealots seeking his impeachment, trial and execution.

Transit bailout plan moves

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Republican Gov. James R. Thompson said Thursday he is encouraged by initial legislative response to a GOP push for a statewide sales tax hike to help bolster the state's ailing transportation network.

Thompson said the response to the new transit bailout plan pushed by House Republicans—which would raise roughly $23 million next year for Chicago mass transit and boost the state road program from about $50 million per year—is generally positive.

Trucks sold to Guatemala

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has quietly approved the sale of military trucks to Guatemala, sidestepping "touchy human rights questions with a last-minute change in rules governing the export of items of war."

Another body discovered in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Members of the special police task force probing the slayings of 28 young blacks were called Thursday to an area in southwest Atlanta where a partially decomposed male body was found, authorities said.

Initial reports from Atlanta police homicide detectives indicated the body was that of a black male, but Beverly Harvard, a police spokeswoman at the scene, said the race of the victim had not been confirmed.

Ms. Harvard said the partially decomposed body was found in a creek running through a woods behind a church several miles east of the Chattahoochee River, where several bodies in the case have been found.

She said the body was partially submerged when it was found by two teen-agers about 4:15 p.m. EST Thursday.

The body was taken to the Fulton County Medical Examiner's Office. Ms. Harvard said representatives of the medical examiner could not verify the victim's race at the scene.

Although task force members were called to the scene, the death was still officially being handled by the police homicide division.

At the same time, lawyers for a 23-year-old man prepared to return to federal court Friday in an attempt to win an order banning the news media from calling him a suspect or using his name and picture in reports on the 28 slayings.

Second student attorney will start work July 1

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The student attorney's office at SIU-C is gaining the services of another lawyer. Student Attorney Betsy Streeter announced Thursday afternoon.

Steven M. Rogers will start work for SIU-C students on July 1. Rogers has a bachelor's degree in political science from SIU-C and received his law degree from the Lewis College of Law in Glen Ellyn, Ill., in 1978.

Rogers has been in private practice in Oak Park, Ill., since April 1979 and has represented clients in the areas of divorce, contracts, real estate and bankruptcy.

From September 1976 to November 1978, Rogers worked as a paralegal assistant for the law firm of Morrill, Koutsky, Chuhak, Upton and Tecson in Chicago.

As a paralegal assistant, Rogers researched and prepared legal memoranda for defense of product liability suits, coordinated and summarized research of outside engineering consultants, assisted in all aspects of the civil litigation process and supervised two law clerks.

"The most appealing thing about Rogers is that he went to SIU-C as an undergraduate student in the early 1970s, and he has a good understanding of the student body," Streeter said.

Streeter added that Rogers is very enthusiastic about coming back to SIU-C, and part of his job will be supervising the three law students who work in the student attorney's office.

"He'll also give continuity to the office when I'm sick or on vacation," she said.

Rogers will be able to help students with financial problems because of his previous experience handling bankruptcy cases, Streeter said.

"That's an area I'm unfamiliar with," she added.

Rogers will be paid $15,000 annually and the money will come from the student attorney fee. He will also be reimbursed for his health and malpractice insurance. The student attorney fee was raised for the first time last semester by 75 cents and is currently $1.75.

Justices to hear cases in lower federal courts.

Stewart, a Yale-educated lawyer with three years of Navy service in World War II, is likely to be bombarded with questions on Friday, as he opens himself to a rare session with the press.

Reagan, during a campaign stop in Los Angeles last Oct. 14, said, "I am announcing today that one of the first Supreme Court vacancies in my administration will be filled by the most qualified woman I can possibly find, one who meets the high standards I will demand for all court appointments." "It's time for a woman to sit among our highest jurists," then candidate Reagan added.

President Carter, in a televised interview the same day, responded to Reagan's promise by saying it was a mistake for a president to promise to name "any particular kind of American" to such a post.

Carter was unable to nominate any Supreme Court members during his four years in office.

Last November, the justices quietly dropped the antiquated form of "Mr. — as in "Mr. Justice Stewart."

Salary while on leave for Mace and Brown begs for explanation

SIUC officials have a contradiction to explain. On one hand, the administration has slashed the athletics budget and is preaching parsimony in a time of austerity...

No wonder people such as Carbondale Fire Chief Charles McCaughan, who has started a petition drive opposing pay for administrators on leave from the University, want some answers.

Certainly students and taxpayers, whose money is being spent here, deserve answers. The paying of salaries to George Mace, the former vice president for University Relations, and Vice-Chancellor James Brown...

Mace left to serve a year as a consultant for the American Council on Education after having athletics removed from his University relations domain. But he will still receive his $50,000 salary from SIUC...

Brown will take a semester off to write articles on aspects of higher education aimed at informing a public that doesn't understand higher education's functions. Even though he has yet to search for publishers...

In light of these perplexing actions by SIUC, Brown's articles might prove very worthwhile. If the administration doesn't provide some answers to the question about the salaries, maybe Brown could write an article that would.

ERA nearing quasi-ratification through series of court cases

IN A LITTLE more than 12 months, time will run out for the pending Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution. The amendment, as such, won't be ratified—but a funny thing is happening on the way to the deadline...

The court's progress toward a kind of quasi-ratification hasn't been perfectly paced. Those who believe that men and women should have an absolute equality of rights under the law have won a few and lost a few, but they have won far more than they have lost...

James J. Kilpatrick

advanced dramatically toward the goals that proponents of the ERA have been pursuing.

A couple of decisions in this current term provide support for that observation. On March 23, a unanimous court rejected Louisiana's old community property law. On June 8, by a 5-4 decision, the court extended opportunities for women to sue on charges of sex-based wage discrimination.

The Louisiana case involved a hassle between Joan Feenstra and her husband, Harold. In 1974 she filed a criminal complaint against him, charging him with molesting their minor daughter. He hired a lawyer to represent him, gave the lawyer a $3,000 note by way of prepayment, and without his wife's knowledge or consent put a mortgage on their home as security for the note. Louisiana law then regarded husbands as "heads and masters" of their households and gave them exclusive control over the disposition of community property...

THE WAGE discrimination case involved four matrons in a county jail in Oregon. They felt they were underpaid because of their sex, and filed suit under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. A narrow majority of the court held that nothing in the corollary Equal Pay Act of 1963 prevents them from pursuing their suit. Because of the particular facts in this case, the opinion lacks landmark significance, but it fits into the trend.

Justice Potter Stewart summed up the situation in yet another case this term. "Gender-based classifications," he wrote, "may not be based upon administrative convenience, or upon archaic assumptions about the proper roles of the sexes." Laws that discriminate between men and women are not always unconstitutional. "We have recognized that in certain narrow circumstances a gender classification based on clear differences between the sexes is not invidious, and a legislative classification realistically based on those differences is not unconstitutional."

Back in 1873, when Myra Bradwell boldly applied for a license to practice law in Illinois, the Supreme Court was aghast at the very idea. "The paramount destiny and mission of woman are to fulfill the noble and benign offices of wife and mother." The natural and proper timidity and delicacy which belongs to the female sex evidently unfits it for many of the occasions of civil life. With only one dissenting vote, the court ordered this audacious female to tend to her knitting and to leave the practice of law to "the sterner sex." To the shade of Myra Bradwell, a familiar apostrophe may be addressed: You've come a long way, baby!—(c) 1981 Universal Press Syndicate.

Why weren't the pigeons at Fanner Hall given the option of 50 pounds of bird seed and their walking papers?—Kathy Zeh

Dougherty needed more advice

Kurt Boyle is not the only one who can become outraged: I cannot believe that a university could be so absolutely stupid in handling what is not even a real problem.

Of course, I am referring to the pigeon-shooting escapade.

It is nearly impossible to believe that Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus affairs could be so ignorant and foolish as to issue orders to kill the pigeons that live in or around Fanner Hall just because some professor of political science told him they made him sick.

Did Dougherty consult the health department before he had the birds killed? No, that would have been too simple.

Did he even bother to consult someone with a little more knowledge of medicine than a political science man? Yes, but when he was told that there was no established link between the pigeons and the disease (histoplasmosis), and that we have all been exposed to it for years, he chose to ignore this and have the birds killed anyway.

Did Dougherty bother to use common sense to think that decaying bird flesh is more of a health hazard than just about anything? Don't be silly.

Apparently, Roper holds quite a grudge against these birds, and he will resort to anything to see them all dead.

What I am wondering is why the word of one man has more pull with Dougherty than do the words of the dean of the college of medicine and the state health department combined?

And what will Roper decide needs to go next? I'm just glad I don't own a dog. Ruth Waytz, Senior, Journalism/English.

Disease might cause blindness

Your story in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian left out one significant fact concerning the disease Professor Robert Roper contracted due to the excessive amount of pigeon droppings around Fanner Hall. Ocular histoplasmosis will probably leave him blind. This fact seems to have been overlooked by your reporter Tim Capps, and by the animal lovers who have been contacting Roper.

Any reasonably intelligent person should be able to understand that a serious health problem exists. The decision to shoot the pigeons does seem to be an idiotic method of dealing with this problem. Vice President Dougherty was given other options, but decided against them.

The image of Roper you present is that of an evil maniac carrying a shotgun. That is incorrect. Further, it is absurd. I believe an apology and a more thorough examination of the problem is called for.—Danny L. Rink, Graduate, Public Affairs. Editor's note: This letter was signed by two other persons.

As this is written, the court has yet to decide in this term's most important case in the area of woman's equality. The suit known as Golberg vs. Rostker challenges the action of Congress in requiring that young men, but not young women, register for a possible future draft. A three-judge lower court found the act patently unconstitutional. The complete exclusion of women from the pool of registrants does not serve important governmental objectives and is not substantially related to any alleged governmental interests.

MY GUESS IS that the high court, after paying deference to the power of Congress to write its own rules for raising armies and maintaining a navy, will affirm the lower court's decision. Regardless of the outcome, the underlying trend will not be altered. Women have

American patents decreasing while foreign inventions thrive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of U.S. patents issued to foreigners has almost doubled in the last 20 years because American technology has lagged, the victim of dwindling research efforts in this country.

In 1960, about 20 percent of patents were claimed by foreigners. That climbed to about 37 percent by last year, with Japan, West Germany, England, France and Switzerland collecting the largest numbers, according to Patent office records.

"It's a dramatic change ... American inventions being patented are going down dramatically, and there's no indication that's changing, and foreign patents are going up dramatically," said Michael Blommer, executive director of the American Patent Law Association.

"It's a symptom, a clear and unmistakable symptom, that America is falling behind in new products and in products made with new processes. We're falling behind and we're falling behind regularly," Blommer said.

According to experts, a major part of the problem is the drop in research and development spending by American corporations.

While the United States pours money into an ailing giant like Chrysler, Blommer said, "in Japan and Germany they're pouring money into the most advanced industries, computers, optical scanners ... the things of the future."

Part of the problem may have been overconfidence in American technology in the past, suggested Donald Banner, a former commissioner of patents and trademarks who now heads the Intellectual Property Owners Association, a group of people who invent or create things and hold patents.

In the last 20 years American technology has slipped badly, he said.

Innovation is encouraged by foreign tax laws, noted Eric H. Brown, general counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee, which supervises the Patent Office.

The solution, said Banner, is to encourage research, provide tax incentives and improve the patent office and the patent system in general. He said the United States is "going to have to make things which are more desirable, less expensive, better quality than anybody in the world, and if you do that you do

New roofs will be constructed on University residence halls

By Cindy Clausen
Staff Writer

A project to provide new roofs for four Thompson Point dorms and six buildings at Southern Hills has been approved by the Board of Trustees.

The roofs will replace the buildings' original asphalt roofs constructed in 1962.

Bailey, Bowyer, Pierce and Steagall Halls will receive new roofs. According to Allen Haake, supervising architect and engineer at the Physical Plant, the probable cost for the Thompson Point work will be $100,500 and the Southern Hills roofs will cost $89,815.

The projects will be funded with money in SIU-C housing's Repair and Replacement Reserve account, according to the board-approved proposal. The work was approved at the board's meeting in Edwardsville June 11.

Replacement of heating and cooling pipes in Schneider Hall was approved by the board at its May meeting. Iron pipes that circulate water through the dorms' heating and air conditioning system will be replaced with insulated copper pipes.

The piping work is the beginning of a $400,000 plan to replace piping through Brusa Towers.

Larry Juhlin, assistant to the vice president of student affairs, said work such as roof repair is on a maintenance schedule that keeps track of when work should be done in order to prevent serious deterioration problems.

The Thompson Point roofs will be of a single-ply, rubber-like material that will be covered with gravel, rather than the usual asphalt and gravel style roof, Haake said.

The roofs will be guaranteed for 10 years, and although the materials will cost more, labor costs will be considerably less than they would be on an asphalt roofing project Haake said.

Haake said he will recommend the roofing contract be awarded to the same firm contracted for the new law building—Magnum Roofing, of Mayfield, Ky.

The six buildings receiving new roofs at the Southern Hills family housing area contain a total of 96 apartments

Special effects make 'Titans' more than an average movie

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

"Clash of the Titans" is a film that has the look and style of one of those old Hollywood movies, with a rather simple story and plot and acting that is wooden at times. However, the special effects are magically fantastic.

The film opens with a cruel king and his soldiers marching to the sea with the king's daughter and illegitimate grandson, Perseus (Harry Hamlin). The morally-outraged

Pegasus.

Thetis takes Perseus from his home and leaves him in Joppa. There, Perseus falls in love with the beautiful princess Andromeda (Judi Bowker), formerly betrothed to Calibos.

Perseus has to answer a riddle before he can marry the princess. If the answer is wrong, he must burn at the stake. Although he answers the riddle correctly, Perseus still must tangle with Calibos, Medusa, two giant scorpions and a horrible sea monster before he can marry Andromeda. Now, that's love.

The story may be a little hokey but should appeal to the childlike side of the viewer. The special effects by Ray Harryhausen should also prove appealing.

Harryhausen did the animation and special effects for "Jason and the Argonauts" and all those Sinbad movies, as well as several science fiction films.

Still, this flick shows Harryhausen's animating craft at its finest. Harryhausen's artistry may deal with an older form of Hollywood magic, but it produces some very believable effects, such as Pegasus.

There are even some laughs, as in a scene where Perseus visits the cave of the three blind Stygian witches who have only one eye between them, and in one where a mechanical owl sent to Perseus from the gods falls off a tree.

There are also a few unintentional laughs, but that can be expected of a film that takes itself seriously to the point of solemnity. But the film could not work as well if it did not.

king has her and the child socked into a box and thrown into the raging tide.

However, Zeus (Sir Laurence Olivier) has pity on Perseus and his mother and has them deposited on a friendly shore. Zeus' motives are not entirely altruistic though—he's the daddy.

Perseus grows into a handsome young man and would live out an idle life on his island home if it weren't for the goddess Thetis (Maggie Smith). Thetis is jealous of Perseus because Zeus defamed her son, Calibos, for slaying Zeus' entire herd of winged horses save

Land transport firms awaiting air travelers

By the Associated Press

"It's kind of like the quiet before the storm," said the manager of a bus terminal in Omaha, Neb. "We're just waiting for it to hit—if it does hit."

The storm that Greyhound representative Gary Magnuson was talking about Thursday was the business boom that is expected if the air controllers go on strike Monday as they have threatened.

A walkout would affect more than half the nation's commercial flights, according to the government, and would send travelers scurrying to buses, trains and rent-a-car companies and to the few planes still flying.

Eastern Airlines said it would implement a special contingency schedule if there is a strike, with some 570 flights a day, about 40 percent of normal. It urged passengers with reservations on regular Eastern flights beginning June 22 to make separate reservations on contingency flights. Similar plans were announced by Delta Air Lines and by Pan American World Airways for its domestic flights.

Travel agents tried to reassure—or reschedule—worried customers. "As of right now, we're praying a lot," said Richard Jackson, the head of Arizona International Travel in Phoenix.

Magnuson said he has been warned by Greyhound to keep a close eye on the situation and add extra staff if necessary. Rick Lollar, the Continental Trailways dispatcher in Omaha, also said he is ready for trouble. Trailways is "always prepared," he said. "It's just a matter of two hours or so to get an extra bus down here so I don't foresee any shortage of vehicles."

In New York, Leigh Smith, a spokesman for Hertz, said the car rental company could manage extra autos if the problem was a regional one. But a controllers' strike would affect the whole country. "On a national basis," Smith said, "there are no spares."

Amtrak spokesmen generally said business already is heavy; they didn't know how many reservations were being made by people who were afraid they wouldn't be able to fly. But Jung H. Lee, in Amtrak's Baltimore office, said: "We anticipate a tremendous impact, especially if there is a prolonged job action."

Daniel Boone to sell Lincoln's farm

HODGENVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — For sale: One room, dirt floor cabin, solid wood construction set in beautiful rolling Kentucky hills. Price: $1 million. Previous residents: Abraham Lincoln. Contact: Daniel Boone.

Elizabethtown, Ky. real estate agent R. Daniel Boone says $1 million might ordinarily be a lot to ask for a 200-square foot house — but not when previous residents include the 16th president of the United States.

Actually, 208 acres go along with the one-room cabin to make up the Knob Creek Farm which Lincoln's father bought in 1811 after moving from Abe's birthplace in Hodgenville, 10 miles away.

Boone says he didn't realize the irony of his selling the home until someone pointed out to him that the namesake of one of Kentucky's favorite sons was selling the home of another. Boone now says he's using that fact in his sales pitch.

"We're mostly looking for a historical buff or someone like that," Boone said. "So I'll tell them, if it means anything for you to buy Lincoln's home from Daniel Boone, you've come to the right place."

The widow of Fred Howard, whose family bought the former Lincoln farm in the 1920's, has decided she can no longer afford to keep the historical cabin in good repair. So she has put it on the market, Boone says.

"She was considering asking for it to be made into a national park or something, but they don't have enough money now to pay their salaries, let alone buy another park," he said.

Boone says he hopes to attract a buyer who would like to turn the property into a resort because Mrs. Howard insists the farm be kept as it was.

"I kind of doubt it could be divided. But who would want to do that?" he said. "It's the original farm."

Israel may only get reproval for raid on Iraqi nuclear plant

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Iraq reached agreement Thursday on the wording of a resolution that would censure but otherwise not punish Israel for bombing an Iraqi nuclear plant, according to a source with the U.N. Security Council.

There was no official confirmation of the resolution's content, reported by a source who asked not to be identified. But U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, a party to the talks, said an accord had been reached. He would not disclose details.

Other council sources said the proposed resolution would require "redress" for Iraq but does not specify who would make it. U.S. officials have previously said some compensation for Iraq might be supported by the Reagan administration.

Israel has said it would not pay anything to Iraq.

The 15-member Security Council announced it would convene Friday morning. It takes nine yes votes on the 15-member Security Council to adopt a resolution. Any one of the five permanent members — the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, France and China — can veto it.

The reported accord was hammered out during an hour-long, closed-door meeting between U.S.

Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick and Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hairmadi. The two met for two hours Wednesday night along with envoys from Britain and Mexico.

The development came as the Reagan administration announced it could not support Israel's claim that Iraq was planning to build nuclear weapons at the reactor, Launched June 7.

In Washington, Undersecretary of State Walter J. Stoessel said in a House hearing Wednesday the administrator does not agree with Israel's claim that Iraq had decided to develop nuclear weapons.

Congressional hearings are being held to determine whether Israel's use of American jet planes in the raid violated a U.S. stipulation that they could be used for defensive purposes only. Israel claims the attack was an act of self-defense, but a congressional determination that it was offensive rather than defensive could result in a cutoff of U.S. military aid to Israel.

other people's opinions and insights," Irvin said.

Irvin said he would like to take a more innovative approach to the board and work to improve SIUC.

"I hope that by doing my homework before the meetings I will be able to gain the board's respect. Many student leaders have been seen as reacting and criticizing, but until this last year not offering any alternatives," he said.

Irvin is working on a bill that would give the student trustees in colleges and universities throughout Illinois an official vote on the boards of which they are members. Currently, student trustees' votes are only advisory and not counted when the tallies are added up. The bill will be introduced in January by Rep. Glenn Schneider, D-41st District. Two previous bills with the same purpose have died in committee, Irvin said.

Makanda battle documentary is largest student production

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

The largest production ever attempted by SIU students will be aired on WSIL-TV July 1 at 7:30 p.m. It's a documentary of the April 11-12 reenactment of the Battle of Makanda Junction.

The 65 students who worked behind the production are members of Telpro, a student-run and student-organized radio and television production company that operates out of the studios of WSIL-TV.

The Telpro production team filmed the Civil War reenactment between the Union's 31st Illinois Infantry Unit and the Confederacy's 19th Georgia and 12th Kentucky divisions, according to Larry Collins, who along with fellow students Jane Evans, Bruce Heidorne and Michael Barnes, produced "The Battle of Makanda Junction."

According to Collins, there was never a Battle of Makanda. In fact, the Civil War never even touched Illinois.

Collins said the battle has been reenacted the past three years.

"This year the Confederates won," Collins said, "last year the Union won." The reason for this seeming lack of consistency is because the nature of a battle reenactment is not the same as that of a battle re-creation.

Collins said that with a re-creation, battle plans are used to get down the most minor detail. However, with a reenactment the attention is paid more to the style of the fighting during the period than to the exact tactics and movements of any specific battles.

"They are living history," said Collins of the reenactors. "They are the Civil War, in a way."

Collins said that the first phase of the production was to get the proposal approved by Telpro Operations Manager Bill Beauchamp. The proposal outlined the nature and needs of the production. When that was approved, the students then gathered the equipment they needed—including six cameras, film and video equipment, and numerous microphones and tape recorders.

On Friday, April 10, the students set up the equipment on location for the battle festivities and reenactment that would occur that weekend. On Saturday, the Telpro students commenced shooting of the flag raising ceremonies, the drill and cavalry competitions, the artillery and firearm shootings and the ladies' derringers competition. That evening, they filmed the reenactors' military ball.

On Sunday afternoon, the students filmed the battle. Collins said that the cameramen got "beautiful" footage of the reenactment. To some of the onlookers, the events may have looked phony, he said, but not so when one was in the middle of the action.

"I was changing the film in my camera down in a gulley," Collins said, "when the 19th Georgia Cavalry was riding toward me. I ducked down and saw the heavens jump over me."

The students' enthusiasm over the production was shared by one of the faculty advisors of Telpro, Ron Hamberg, a producer-director of the WSIL-TV broadcasting service.

"Telpro was started to enable students to gain experience and training using broadcasting equipment," Hamberg said, "and for enabling students to do productions."

The work, according to Hamberg, includes producing, directing and lighting.

Hamberg called Telpro "a good organization, the people in it work hard."

Though there were times that he remembers bickering among the Telpro producers after past productions, Collins said that there was none after the filming of "The Battle of Makanda Junction."

"We were like a well-oiled machine," he said of himself and the 65 other students who participated, "and the project was bigger than we were."

Gang leader tells of drugs, murder

CHICAGO (AP) — Street gangs operate much the same as organized crime, with intricate operations involved in drug trafficking, extortion and "hit" murders, a government witness, identified as a former street gang leader, testified Wednesday.

The witness, his identity hidden by a partition, told the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Violent Crime of one gang that had a five-state operation that dispatched its "ambassadors" to consolidate gangs from other states, such as Wisconsin and Indiana.

Asked if the gang structure was similar to organized crime, the witness, whose voice was electronically altered, said, "I would say to every extent with the exception of some investments."

The witness, protected by federal marshals, was led out of the hearing room wearing a black-hooded mask and gloves. He was identified only as a former leader of a 200-member gang, who was convicted of armed robbery and assault and had spent eight years in Illinois penal institutions.

His testimony was part of a day-long series of hearings on juvenile crime, narcotics and street gangs. The task force, appointed in March by Attorney General William French Smith, is holding hearings across the nation on various crime issues.

Former Attorney General Griffin Bell and Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson are task force co-chairmen.

During Wednesday's testimony, the former gang leader said there is increased pressure to join gangs. "You die more quickly," he said.

"There's a lot more force being used (to join gangs) than there was 10 years ago."

He said boys as young as 12 are recruited in the schools and on the streets, where one pays a fee not to be harassed.

Younger gang members sometimes are used to deal drugs because as juveniles, they will receive lighter sentences, the witness said.

The witness, convicted of armed robbery, assault and aggravated battery, said he formed a gang when he was 16 "out of survival."

"We began to perform drug dealing, stealing of guns, extortion and hits if necessary."

'Unseen' thief makes off with jewelry haul

PEORIA (AP) — Nobody seems to have seen a bandit who baffled police by stealing $68,000 in jewelry from a store at midafternoon while employees were on duty and a security was posted nearby.

James Garrott, owner of Garrott Jewelry Store in the Northwoods Mall, said the caper must have taken less than a minute.

An employee noticed that a showcase door was open about 3 p.m. Wednesday and closed it. A short time later, another employee noticed that a large ruby necklace was missing from the case, and an investigation revealed the disappearance of 38 rings and 20 necklaces and pendants.

Garrott said none of his employees is suspected in the theft.

Workers in the store regularly greet visitors soon after they enter, and security guard was nearby Wednesday afternoon. But nobody reported seeing anyone around the showcase about the time of the theft.

Cagers' scholarships revoked to make room for new players

The scholarships of two former Saluki basketball players were revoked and awarded to recruits signed by new head basketball Coach Allen Van Winkle.

Kent Payne, sophomore, and Lawrence Stubblefield, junior, were informed May 15 that their scholarships had been revoked.

Because only two scholarships were available and Van Winkle signed five recruits, three scholarships had to be revoked. Freshman Rob Kirsner's transfer to Texas A & M slimmed the cut to two players.

Signees include James Copeland, a 5-10 guard, Ken Byrd, a 6-3 guard, and Pye Walker, a 6-6 forward, all from Van Winkle's former Jackson, Mich., Community College team.

The other recruits are David Tucker, a 6-9 forward from Lincoln Trail Junior College in Robinson, and Dennis Goins, a 5-11 guard from Vincennes Community College in Indiana.

Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers said Van Winkle realized when he was hired only two scholarships were available and if he could recruit players better than ones on the team, he had that option.

Sayers said that although he regretted such action had to be taken, Van Winkle's decision to revoke Payne's and Stubblefield's scholarships had his approval.

"It was his (Van Winkle's) thinking and I concurred," Sayers said. "We had some who could play and some who couldn't. Players who could not play Division I basketball were not his mistake."

Sayers said many people are concerned with the moral obligation the athletics program has to the athlete.

"It looks bad, yes. But I think it was necessary in order to build our basketball program back to respectability within the Missouri Valley Conference," Sayers said. He said this was not a policy of the program but was a result of a 0-16 record in the conference and the program's transition to a new coaching staff.

Van Winkle said he had met with the players several times and they understood his position.

Payne, contacted at his home in Schaumburg, said he was very upset by the decision. He will attend the University of Indiana-Bloomington next year and has received a verbal commitment for a scholarship after he sits out his first year in accordance with NCAA regulations regarding transfer students.

"I'm very upset and bitter about it," Payne said. "I never heard of any new coach coming in and booting players out."

Payne, a point guard, said he didn't think Van Winkle would take his scholarship, especially after Kirsner's transfer. Payne was benched after the second game of the season but did play in the final six games of the season. He later found out that his foot was fractured during those six games.

Payne said he thought Van Winkle waited to make his decision until after the students had left.

"I think he just wanted to put it off until the last minute when no students were around," Payne said.

"I think it was his plan all along."

"He took our scholarships away so late that most colleges had already signed everyone they needed. I was lucky Indiana wanted me," Payne said. "I don't know what Lawrence is going to do. He'll be a senior. Who's going to want to sign a senior?"

Stubblefield could not be reached for comment.

"I lost a lot of respect for the man (Van Winkle), and the University for letting a man do that," Payne said.

When Van Winkle was told how Payne felt, he said he preferred to look to the future.

"I don't think it does much justice to me, the team or the individuals involved to carry this any further," Van Winkle said. "I really don't want to get back into it."

Jim Thorpe has lead in U.S. Open

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Jim Thorpe, one of the few blacks on the professional golf tour, birdied the last two holes for a 4-under-par 66 and an early 1-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the United States Open.

But Johnny Miller had a warning in the form of a history lesson.

"In the Open, in the first round, it's always a surprise that leads it," Miller said. "Except for last year, the fellow leading in the first round hardly ever wins it."

And Thorpe, a decided longshot playing in his first American national championship and a non-winner on the PGA Tour, wasn't even sure his 6-birdie effort would stand up as the lead.

"I think somebody will shoot lower than that," said the 31-year-old Thorpe, a one-time running back at Morgan State. "The golf course isn't playing that tough and there are a lot of good players out there."

But, with only a handful of the 156-man field still out on the historic Merion Golf Club course, no one had been able to match Thorpe's early effort.

Veteran J.C. Snead, in a long slump over a couple of seasons, chipped in for a birdie on the last hole to finish off a 67 that put him one shot off the lead among the early finishers.

The group at 68, 2-under-par on the 6,528-yard Merion course, included Australian David Graham, a former PGA champion, Chi Chi Rodriguez, former national amateur champion John Cook, Jack Renner and club pro John Ackerman, the first man off the tee at 7 a.m. EDT.

Jack Nicklaus, the defending title-holder who is seeking a record fifth U.S. Open title, and Miller, a former U.S. and British Open champion, were among the group at 69.

Tom Watson, the Masters champion and the game's outstanding performer over the past 4½ seasons, had an opening-round of par-70 that left him four back.

Some of golf's leading performers, former players listed well among the pre-tournament favorites here, had their difficulties with the subtle demands of Merion, however.

Among them were Ray Floyd, second only to Watson on the money-winning list and a three-time winner this season, two-time U.S. Open winner Hale Irwin, Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Tom Kite, who has played so well in recent weeks.

Floyd took a fat 75 in the warm, sunny weather. Kite, seventh or better in his last seven starts, and Ballesteros had 73s. Irwin was 2-over-par at 72.

Arnold Palmer had a 77 that included a triple bogey on the final hole. Gary Player and Lee Trevino, who won the Open on this course in 1971, shot 72s.
