Percy pledges aid for Crab Orchard cleanup

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

Sen. Charles Percy said on Monday that a PCB-contaminated dump site at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge will be placed on a federal study list by August.

Percy pledged his support of cleanup efforts of the former Sangamo Electric Co. dump site, and said that he hopes to obtain up to $800,000 for the study after touring the area.

Percy said that he has been assured of complete cooperation from the Environmental Protection Agency, and that by August the situation at Crab Orchard will have been declared a national priority.

Percy also addressed the water needs of Marion, and said that Devil's Kitchen Lake looked like the answer to Marion's problem.

"We're not going to let a city go without water when we've got the purest water in Illinois in Devil's Kitchen Lake," he said. "It's the most logical alternative."

Marion Mayor Robert Butler said his city has two concerns: The availability of Devil's Kitchen Lake for the city's use, and the health and safety of the community.

The Fish and Wildlife Service has been "less than enthused with our request to use Devil's Kitchen Lake," Butler said.

Butler said that he was told by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Regional Director James E. Gritman that such use of the lake would cause a decrease of the water level, which would result in drastic effects on the water quality, the ecology of the lake and the recreational use of the lake.

Butler said that he and his staff were assuming that Gritman was referring to a high usage of about 4 million gallons per year, and Marion won't hit that figure until the year 2001.

Butler also said that Gritman told him that as far as he (Gritman) was concerned, there would be no pumping from Devil's Kitchen Lake.

Gritman said that in order to use Devil's Kitchen Lake, Marion would have to first file an environmental impact statement, which would examine all other alternatives.

"There are alternatives available to Marion besides using Devil's Kitchen Lake," Gritman said.

Marion officials had proposed a limit be set on the decrease of the water level, in the eventuality that Marion is allowed to use the lake, Butler said.

Mace resigns; officials are 'surprised'

By Anne Flasz
Staff Writer

George Mace, associate professor of political science, surprised University officials by resigning from his position late last week, John Baker, executive director of planning and budgeting said Tuesday.

Mace, who served as vice president for University Relations from 1975 to 1982, was unavailable for comment on the move, which is reported to be effective immediately.

Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research (planning), said he has not yet received Mace's written resignation, but said that he had been told of the move by others in the department.

John Foster, political science department chairman, who would have received the resignation, was also unavailable for comment on Tuesday.

Baker said the administration was surprised with the move.

Mace reportedly plans to take a position in private industry and leave the Southern Illinois area.

Mace was arrested on May 25 and charged with battery and aggravated assault with a handgun, after an altercation with two SIU-C students in a campus restroom. Mace is accused of threatening the students with a handgun from inside his car as he and the students were driving separately northbound on U.S. 51.

A hearing is set for June 29 in Jackson County.

According to Baker, no one from top University administration has spoken to Mace regarding the charges pending against him.

Shepherd said he was not surprised by Mace's resignation.

Prison protesters pray

By Mike Majchrowitz
Staff Writer

About 30 people gathered outside the gates of the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion to pray and sing, hoping to bring attention to what they allege is a lack of religious freedom in federal prisons.

The demonstrators were largely supporters of imprisoned American Indian Leonard Peltier. Although Peltier is not currently in the Marion facility, the demonstrators said they were praying for the remainder of the inmates as well as trying to draw attention to a situation some described as a culminating religious war.

The Rev. Daniel Buford of the Clergy and Laity Concern, a New York City based organization, likened religious restrictions in federal prisons to the activities of repressive regimes in Latin America. "These are serious matters that we would expect to hear from an oppressive regime in El Salvador," Buford said.

Dean Leach, a spokesman for the penitentiary, called the allegations "not accurate, not substantiated, without merit."

"The position of this institution is to encourage, within security concerns, the practice of an individual's religion," Leach said.

The controversy centers around intervention by prison authorities into a religious fast by Peltier, Robert Wilson, also known as Standing Deer, and Albert Garza, a sephardic jew. All three were taken to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons Medical Center in Springfield, Mo., where they began taking nourishment on threat of being forced.

Leach justified the intervention into the fast by the prison. "I think the First Amendment rights of religious freedom have to be balanced against the realities of incarceration," Leach said. "Under Bureau of Prison regulations we have an obligation to provide for the well-being of the prisoners."

Calling the Marion facility an "empire unto itself," Buford said he doesn't believe it is unique in religious restrictions, but that the problem is a national concern. "Marion certainly isn't special. It's indicative of the entire penal system gone amuck," he said.

Another demonstrator, Archie Fire, also known as Chief Lame Deer, said prisons are not only incarcerating the inmate's

Chinese teachers visit SIU, stress unity

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

Another small step toward the "global village" was taken last week as SIU-C was paid a return visit by a group of officials from China's Liaoning University.

The delegation, which included the university's president, Feng Yuzhong, Liu Qitao, vice president and professor of chemistry, and Professor of Economics Chen Jiasheng, is in town for a conference with SIU-C officials that participants called the "second day of linkage" between the two universities.

A group headed by SIU-C

President Albert Somit visited Liaoning Province last October and signed an agreement with the university that opens the door for future cooperation, including student and faculty exchanges between the institutions. An agreement was also made at that time between the state of Illinois and Liaoning Province.

According to Feng, the two universities have much to gain from this kind of close contact.

"Whatever we have seen here, whatever we have heard here, we will use to benefit our university," he said. "We

Fasting inmate taking fluids

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A Jewish inmate who began a religious freedom fast at the federal prison in Marion more than two months ago continues to drink a nutritional supplement, an official said Monday.

The inmate, Albert Lore De Garza, and two other once-fasting Marion prisoners — American Indian Movement leader Leonard Peltier and Robert Wilson, who prefers the Indian name Standing Deer — were transferred to the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo., last month.

Attorneys for the men have said Wilson and Peltier resumed eating May 25 when faced with the possibility of force-feeding.

Paul Taylor, a spokesman for the Springfield facility, said by telephone Monday that De Garza, 43, was not eating solid foods but was voluntarily drinking the supplement. "He's in fine health," Taylor said, adding that De Garza is in no need of force-feeding.

Taylor said Peltier, 39, also was in good shape. The spokesman had not obtained permission from Wilson to discuss his case with a reporter.

Asked why Peltier and Wilson were still in the medical facility, Taylor said he had to leave his office and did not have time to discuss the matter further Monday.

believe that through these visits our universities will be promoting a new stage." Professor Chen translated for the group at a press conference Friday at President Somti's office.

A more concrete goal of the agreement is to "promote academic learning of science and technology," one said. Basically, though, Feng said that they just wanted the universities to "learn each other."

Feng, 50, is the youngest university professor in China. Asked how he had risen so fast, Feng laughed and said, "How fast? I'm 50 years old!"

Chinese educators not only a cultural interest in SIU-C but a philosophical one as well. It was pointed out at the press conference that Chinese premier Deng Xiaoping recently remarked that three of the biggest influences on Chinese education are Mao Zedong, Confucius and John Dewey.

Feng said many Chinese college students are interested in new methods of management. He said he noticed that Chinese students are busier than most American students because they generally take more classes and attend classes six days a week, taking off Saturdays. Some of Chinese students' favorite elective courses are singing, dancing and photography courses, he said.

The Chinese visitors also related some of the general impressions they got from Americans and SIU-C in particular.

"I have a deep impression of America as being a very practical people," Feng said. "What's right is right and what's wrong is wrong; it is the spirit of American morality." SIU-C, he said, struck him as a place where "the students work very hard and play very actively."

He also was envious of the Student Center.

"I was surprised to see such a big place for the students. I wish we had one," he said as he smiled.

Feng and his colleagues extended an invitation to SIU-C students and faculty to visit Liaoning soon.

bodies, but their minds and souls also. "Sometimes getting your religious freedom in prison is one thing — it is a road to freedom," Fire said.

Buford said he wasn't expecting miracles, but was optimistic that the prayer rally was a step toward awakening the issue. "We are a people of faith and a people of prayer and we believe it will move mountains, and we've seen this happen in this country," Buford said.

"If it's convenient for the politicians to raise a fuss over this matter, then we hope to see some action," Fire said.

Peltier was convicted in the July 26, 1975, shooting deaths of two FBI agents.

Court to decide on lethal injections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether states may continue to execute convicted murderers by injecting them with deadly drugs even though there is no proof the method is a "safe and effective" way to kill people.

The justices will review a federal appeals court decision barring lethal injections, permitted or required by 12 states' death penalty laws, without approval by the federal Food and Drug Administration.

But other executions by lethal injection likely will occur before the high court announces its decision sometime next year. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger last March 21 postponed the effect of the lower court's ruling.

Editorial writer's jailing upheld

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The Illinois Supreme Court said Monday that a St. Clair County judge can jail a newspaper editorial writer for refusing to reveal confidential sources.

In a three-paragraph order, the high court refused to block continued contempt-of-court proceedings against the writer, Richard Hargraves, who was the target of a $1.6 million suit stemming from an editorial he wrote for the Belleville (Ill.) News-Democrat.

5 inmates stabbed in prison fight

PONTIAC (AP) — Five inmates were stabbed during a brawl Monday at the Pontiac Correctional Center in what state prisons Director Michael Lane said was the latest in an upsurge of street-gang violence at Illinois' maximum-security prisons.

Two of the injured were taken to St. James Hospital in Pontiac, where one was listed in very serious condition and the other was in stable condition, Lane said. The three others were treated at the prison hospital, he said.

About 200 inmates were involved in the disturbances, but no guards or other prison employees were injured, Lane said.

Bank robber gets 125 years

BENTON (AP) — A federal judge has sentenced Richard McCue to 125 years in prison for the armed robbery of a Jackson County bank last December.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mike Carr said Monday that McCue, 33, of New York, was sentenced Friday in U.S. District Court after pleading guilty to armed bank robbery and to taking a hostage to avoid apprehension.

McCue, who was sentenced by Judge James Foreman of Metropolis, also was given a concurrent 2-year term for firearms possession.

Carr said McCue and Cathy Cremer of Marion took Rebecca Graff of Ava hostage during their getaway attempt. The hostage was not harmed, but McCue was shot in the leg when he was captured after the robbery of First State Bank of Campbell Hill.

McCue already has served terms for numerous offenses, including armed bank robbery.

He was to remain in federal custody until he is tried in Williamson and Randolph counties on charges brought in the robbery and shooting of an Energy man and the robbery of a Percy pharmacy in November. Trial dates have not been set.

McCue also is awaiting trial on two federal counts of armed bank robbery in the state of New York and weapons charges in Missouri.

Ms. Cremer, 27, was sentenced earlier to 55 years after pleading guilty to state armed robbery and home invasion charges, authorities said. The government will recommend that she be sentenced to a concurrent 55-year term on federal charges, Carr said. If needed, she will testify in McCue's upcoming trials, the prosecutor added.

City awaiting result of conference center meeting

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council expected on Monday night to receive a status report on a meeting held in Washington, D.C., last Thursday to discuss funding arrangements for the city's downtown conference center project.

The outcome of the meeting, held between most of the parties involved in the project, means there may be new hope for the project, according to City Manager Bill Dixon. The Farmer's Home Administration showed an apparent willingness to extend its guarantee on revenue bonds for the project if center developer Stan Hoyer could show no significant changes in the original bond issue arrangements of 1981, he said.

The previous set of bonds are set to expire in December 1984 because construction of the hotel-conference center will not be completed.

Although a decrease in the size of the conference center location has caused an increase in the total project cost, it is unlikely the FmHA will increase the amount of the guarantee, Dixon said. The length of time for the extension is unknown, he said.

The total cost of the project is now $16.5 million, according to Dixon. Bonds would be issued for $14 million, with the FmHA's guarantee accounting for about $10 million. The rest of the bonds would be backed by the city. Don Monty, director of community development, said the city had spent $200,000 of its own money on land acquisition.

Dixon said the city's guarantee would be for only a few years.

"The city expressed serious concerns over guaranteeing the bonds for a full 10 years," he said.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development indicated at the meeting held in the office of Rep. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, that it would not take back its Urban Development Action Grant of $2.071 million if the city were able to meet the original requirements of the grant, Dixon said. The grant was awarded in 1979 for land acquisition purposes.

Bracy woes linger

WHO WOULD have thought that a big empty warehouse would be such a big source of aggravation and disagreement for SIU-C and the owners of the building?

That is what the Bracy building in Marion has become.

Virginia Cline, owner of the building, is now suing the University in the Court of Claims for $1.14 million. This amount includes the difference between her original asking price of $1.6 million and the $575,000 belatedly offered to her by the Illinois Capital Development Board for the building.

In a second part of the lawsuit, Cline asks for back rent payment for the time period from Sept. 1982, when the University stopped paying rent, to April 16, 1984, when SIU-C was asked to vacate the building. Cline also asks for the payment of about $22,000 in damages she alleges were made to the building in this time span.

MOST OF the charges made by Cline are straightforward and reasonable, considering what she has had to put up with from the University since the two began dealing with each other. Cline has to be fed up with the constant "maybe" she got from SIU-C, preventing her from finding other possible purchasers for the building, and at the same time, making her unsure as to the University's intentions toward buying Bracy.

The portion of the suit concerning damages to the building is the point where Cline may have gone too far. It is hard to figure how the University could have sustained $22,000 in damages to a building that has been for all practical purposes unoccupied for the entire time in question. While Cline has a legitimate complaint for the most part, her lawyers may find it hard to justify these damages.

BUT THIS possible overestimation of property damages does not excuse the University's foolish handling of the entire situation. Why, for instance, did the University seem so intent on buying the Bracy building if they did not want to pay the price? Looking over the history of the library storage facility search, it seems apparent that SIU-C passed over some property that would have been much less expensive, even if renovations needed to be made, to make a deal for Bracy.

When this mess all began, there was a freeze on construction at state institutions. But as long as the Bracy negotiations have taken, SIU-C officials might have been able to use that time more wisely to push for construction funding, which may have been granted by now.

THE BRACY deal has hung over the University like a big, expensive wet blanket. Every other option has been extinguished by the University's foolhardy decision to commit itself to buying this building.

The University was insistent on rushing blindly into the Bracy deal, without studying the possible consequences of the decision. SIU-C seemed to reply to each new twist in the long saga with a knee-jerk reaction instead of a considered opinion. Apparently, the University did not want to consider the long-range implications of its decisions, preferring instead to "wait and see what happens."

And now, as a final result, the University faces a lawsuit. The school may end up paying more than money; it could pay more in the amount of credibility it will lose in the eyes of Southern Illinois businessmen who have to deal with the University.

Military macho becoming thing of the past

WITHIN OH, 20 years or so, the Soviet Union will be able to crush the United States in a war of any size — or at least it is beginning to sound that way.

How's that? you say. Will our troops lack the strength to fight? Will our strategists paint us into a corner? Will the Soviets outpace us in technology?

No, our troops and strategists are capable. And it's a matter of terminology, not technology.

The politicians in Washington will lose the war for us. They're the ones who give our weapons and forces such wimpy names.

NOT THAT the president and Congress are consciously toppling the balance of power; no, they believe they are doing just the opposite. For instance, Ronald Reagan wants more nuclear missiles to keep us on par with Moscow, but he knows that the thought of nuclear war scares the hell out of most of us.

Jay
Small
Staff Writer

So he comes up with a new name for his missiles to make them seem less dangerous, easier to accept. Congress, recognizing Reagan's ploy, OKs them, knowing that some constituents will be baffled into believing that more is less.

And that's how an MX missile, once a deadly nuclear weapon, becomes a "Peacekeeper."

THE TREND is strictly recent. In World War II, the United States and the Allies proudly swarmed in on Hitler with tanks named for our finest combat leaders — Sherman and Patton, to name two.

In the dawn of the nuclear missile era, we dared the Soviets to start something against our Redstone, Atlas or Titan missiles. Later, we stood constant guard with Minuteman rockets. Now we're muscled with Pershings, named for yet another famed tough-guy general.

How macho can a weapons arsenal be?

We've scrambled F-15 fighters into the air. We've scarred the land with B-52 bombers. In war, letter-number combinations brim with John Wayne-ish charisma.

LOOK AT the Soviets. They strafe the countryside with MiG-21s and Backfire bombers. They've braced for holocaust with silos full of SS-20s. Those names are macho to the point of being spooky, a la Zorro.

As it is, the balance of macho is assured, but not for long.

We're losing ground fast. What did we send when the crisis deepened in Lebanon to the point of near disaster last year? A battalion of troops to go in and mop up? No, we sent a "peacekeeping force." It got no respect. The force had to leave.

Now we've taken the most destructive weapon available, an intercontinental nuclear missile, and reduced it to the same role: "Peacekeeper."

I'M NOT of a particularly impressive stature, but I wouldn't bat an eye upon meeting a peacekeeper in a dark alley. The name shrinks what it represents to a puddle of whimdom. It's gutless — and for all we know, the weapon might be too.

I fear for the future, a time when military hardware will be tamed by name to the point of uselessness simply because knee-jerk, peace-loving liberals won't let Washington get away with remakes of "Flying Tigers."

We might as well keep the troops at home when the Pentagon announces its new line of "Yutz" tanks. The "Nerd" fighters will drop like flies. And nobody will want to break a bottle of bubbly on the new "98-pound-weakling" nuclear submarine.

Ultimately, we will have to surrender when our best ballistics experts produce the "You-wouldn't-hit-a-guy-with-glasses" missile.

Strangely enough, "peace through strength" begins to sound sensible.

Protest construction in forest and save endangered critters

The LaRue-Pine Hills Ecological Area of the Shawnee National Forest is in trouble because the arms of progress are reaching out for it. Its unique and delicate ecosystems may be in jeopardy.

The endangered eastern woodrat makes its home at the base of the limestone bluffs. Now its very existence may be threatened by the Illinois Department of Transportation's proposal to pave and widen a road running through Pine Hills.

Environmentalists have voiced their many concerns regarding the direct impact that the construction will have on the area. The road is on the watershed divide so that any run-off of road materials, road salt, etc., will affect water on both sides of the divide. The steep hills on either side will develop erosion problems if timber is removed to widen the road. Clearing of timber will also thin out the canopy above the existing gravel road. The plant life is abundant in this area, but there are over 40 species of rare and endangered plants. Construction and enlargement of the vistas will damage these exotics.

The Forest Service is well aware of the delicacy of the plant and animal life at LaRue-Pine Hills. Yet it has chosen to support the project. When is the Forest Service going to wake up to the fact that the preservation of life in all of its forms is more crucial to human survival than the laying of another blacktop?

There is still time for people to speak out and put a stop to this project. There are very few areas in this country remaining in a nearly preserved state. Let's not let another wilderness area slip through our hands for the sake of bureaucracy.

Take a hand in ending violent crime

To stamp-out child abuse and violent crime against the person much of our social culture must learn to "Think Straight."

In full support of this great need there is now a new program available to everyone. It is based on self-development or tutورش and covers all forms of emotional disorders, anonymously.

"Think Straight" is an easy to understand chemistry-of-the-mind and thought control that rounds out the attitude and habit of behavior. It's range is from early infancy and throughout life. This spectacular program affords every child, teenager, parent or adult information and knowledge of themselves, their children and all others of impending urges and behavior that may threaten their safety.

People everywhere are in desperate need of information and knowledge of themselves, their children and strangers as functional civilized human beings. "Thing Straight" is the philosophy specifically designed to fill those needs.

Residents told at workshop not to fear police questioning

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

If you are stopped by the police, don't be afraid. Give your name, and address, account for your presence in the area, and don't say anything else.

The police may frisk you for concealed weapons and search you or your car if they feel they have probable cause. And if you are taken to the police station in handcuffs, questioned and bond will be set. If bond is not immediately set, you will be taken before a judge within 24 hours.

Those were the messages delivered by two attorneys at the first of a series of workshops sponsored by the NAACP to help diffuse hostilities between the Carbondale police and some city residents.

During a workshop Thursday night at the Eurna C. Hayes Center, Jackie Abel, a Jackson County public defender, and Jim Roberts, a Carbondale attorney, said that just being stopped by the police or taken to the police station for questioning does not constitute an arrest. They said residents should not be alarmed or defensive when approached by the police.

"YOU ARE not arrested until you're read Miranda," Abel said, referring to the familiar rights statement which begins: "You have the right to remain silent..."

"Even if you are arrested, the police do not have to read Miranda if they are not going to question you or if they don't need a confession." But, she said, an officer must read you your rights before questioning. Abel said the worst thing suspects can do is to try to talk their way out of the situation. She said anything you say will be remembered by the officer and used in court. Even if you are not guilty of the charge you are arrested for, you may be found guilty of obstructing an officer if you lie to him during the questioning. The best thing to say, according to Abel, is "I don't want to answer any questions. I want to talk to a lawyer."

WHEN YOU are brought before a judge, other charges besides those outlined at the time of arrest may have been filed against you, Abel said.

Roberts classified confrontations with police into three types:

The first is a casual meeting with the officer — an exchange of hellos or short conversation not relating to the investigation of a crime. Your rights in this type of encounter are the same as any other citizen.

The second is the stop and

Board names Mitchell, Karnes public service award winners

A veteran English Department faculty member and the longtime director of the University's Area Services Office have won the 1984 Lindell Sturgis Memorial Public Service Award offered by the SIU Board of Trustees.

Betty Lou Mitchell, assistant professor of English, and Rex Karnes, director of Area Services for the Office of Regional Research and Services, were named winners of the fifth annual award during the trustees' meeting last Thursday at the Touch of Nature Environmental Center.

The Sturgis Award was established in 1980 by the family of the late Lindell W. Sturgis of Metropolis to recognize "significant non-job-related service to the community, area, state or nation."

The award, which carries a cash gift of $500, was set up through an endowment fund in the SIU Foundation.

Sturgis served on the Teachers College Board and the SIU Board of Trustees for more than 30 years before he retired in 1971. He was chairman of the board from 1969 until his retirement. He died in 1972 at the age of 73.

Mitchell, a 35-year member of the English Department, was cited for "dedication and commitment which have gone far beyond the classroom and the department."

A longtime member of the Carbondale Public Library Board, she is past president of the Carbondale City Panhellenic organization and former membership chairwoman of the Jackson County Humane Society.

She won the Carbondale Panhellenic's Woman of the Year Award in 1973 and the SIU-C Student Affairs Service Award in 1982.

A two-degree graduate of the University, Mitchell is a native of Benton.

Karnes, who joined the University in 1965 as assistant director of the Area Services Office and has been director since 1973, was awarded the first Sturgis Award presented for professional achievement.

Karnes served as chairman of the Sturgis Award committee from 1980 to 1983. A native of Carrier Mills who was reared in Golconda, he is well-known in Southern Illinois, having represented the University in numerous organizations, such as Southern Illinois Inc., the Shawnee Hills Recreation Association and the Southern Illinois Recreation Council.

frisk. You may be frisked if the officer feels he has a reasonable suspicion that you have committed a crime and that he must guarantee his own safety. Cause for a frisk can be a conspicuous bulge in a pocket of a suspect, a hand in a pocket or even your presence in a high crime area. At that point, Roberts said, you are still not under arrest, but must identify yourself and account for your actions. If the officer has no probable cause to arrest you, and you react reasonably, he must let you go, Roberts said.

THE THIRD type of encounter is the arrest. At that time you will physically be taken into custody. The officer has already made the decision that you have committed a crime based upon a warrant or observation. Do not resist, the attorneys advised. Resisting arrest can be running away from the officer, pushing the officer, pulling your arms away or even just sitting down. Verbal harassment is not considered resisting arrest, but it isn't smart, Abel said.

The workshop was held by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People as one solution to charges of alleged harassment of Carbondale blacks by the Carbondale Police Department.

Carbondale NAACP president Al Ross said community members need to know more about their rights, and "have the responsibility to insist that direct action be taken" on all acts of harassment.

Richard J. Robison and Denise Cocking are in the Stage Company production of "Bus Stop."

'Bus Stop' casting a success

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

The Stage Company's opening-night presentation of William Inge's "Bus Stop" as dinner-theater in the Southern Illinois Airport's Flight Restaurant was entertaining and well-paced.

The actors, working on a set that looked like a part of the restaurant's dining room, gave credible performances. The audience, numbering more than 100, obviously enjoyed the show about eight characters who spend the night in a small-town Kansas diner that doubles as a bus stop.

The parts for most of the roles were well-cast.

Bil Dwyer as Bo Decker, the young cowboy who falls in love with the untalented chanteuse, Cherie, is a natural for the role. He gives Bo a frantic and stubborn nature when unsure, as a way to cover up his insecurity and gentle nature.

Another natural is Nick Earl as Virgil Blessing, Bo's older pal. Earl handles the role with ease, as one could observe not only from his western speech but also from his mannerisms and facial expressions. He makes his character sympathetic and, in a way, pathetic.

A Theater Review

Denise Cocking as Grace Hoyland, the owner of the diner, and Richard Robison as Carl, the bus driver and Grace's lover, are adequate because their roles are not very challenging.

Tammy Rosa as Cherie caused the audience to roar at one point in the performance during her nightclub routine. Though Rosa gave the part a lot of energy, it's hard to see the character as anything more than a dumb blonde. Luckily, for the sake of variety, Rosa is a brunette.

Cam Garbutt as Dr. Gerald Lyman, the drunken English professor who has an eye for young Elma Duckworth (Kim Balsley), slurred his words so much in the beginning of the first act that he was hard to understand. But he and Balsley played well off each other, especially when the two characters played Romeo and Juliet.

David Flavin as the sheriff, Will, seemed miscast. Although Flavin gave the role the good old college try, his young, fresh face did not jibe with the maturity of the character.

Although this presentation of "Bus Stop" was entertaining, it was also watered down to lighten it up for dinner-theater. This diluting only takes away some of the dimensions of the characters.

A newcomer to this play would find it hard to believe that Blessing and Lyman are capable of soliciting pathos.

Young's blues straight from heart

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

There's on'y one way to play the blues — straight from the heart. You can show off with all the style in the world, but if there's no feeling behind it, you may as well pack up and go home because you'll never reach your audience.

Mighty Joe Young, an electric bluesman in the vein of Freddie King and Luther Allison, reaches his audience and then some. Kicking off the Sunset Concert Series on Thursday evening on the steps of Shryock Auditorium, he wove a brand of Chicago-style urban blues through the crowd that put the world and its troubles on hold for a few hours.

A Concert Review

Having "educated" the public with his guitar and voice for almost 30 years, Mighty Joe knows when to cut out a scorching lead on the guitar he calls Josephine and when to wail on a vocal for maximum effect.

But simply possessing fantastic technique and ingenuity isn't enough when you're playing the blues. More than any other form of contemporary music, the blues requires an outpouring of feelings with each performance that lends meaning to all the flashy stylistics. Technique is the vehicle, but the emotion is the message.

Mighty Joe's message is clear — forget your worries, have fun and dance. As he shook and pushed his guitar so he could get as much music out of it as possible, it was clear this blues stylist was getting his message across. Simply seeing the crowd of punks, hippies, straights, whites, blacks, old and young turned into a dancing, swaying and jerking mass during the performance was evidence enough.

Between hour-long sets, Mighty Joe spoke about his love for the blues.

"I like a groove to my music," he said. "It makes you happy."

Although there is a groove to the blues that appeals to a surprising large cross section of races and ages, the blues, because of its lyric content, has had a difficult time catching on with younger blacks.

"Black people had a hell of a p.s.t. and the young ones don't want to think about it," Mighty Joe said. "They want to move on, but they'll pick up on the blues because it's their identity, because it's part of us," he said.

Everyone picked up on Mighty Joe's version of "Sweet Home Chicago" at the close of the second set. The song had the crowd breaking the rope barriers in front of the stage and dancing up the steps.

Judging from Thursday night's offering, the blues will always be here in one form or another. Whether it is called rock, rhythm and blues or funk, the blues will always come through as the driving force behind the music. That is, as long as we have artists such as Mighty Joe Young around.

Operators' stereotypical voice being replaced by microchips

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) -- The stereotypical nasal voice of the directory assistance operator is being replaced all over the country with a voice generated by computer microchips.

Slowly but inexorably, telephone systems nationwide are installing computer equipment that generates a female-sounding voice that recites the requested number twice.

Forty percent of the old Bell Telephone system nationwide has the computerized audio response system, and all directory assistance offices will be using it by mid-1985, said

Richard Keener, a district manager for Bell Communications Research.

The reason, quite simply, is economic. Operators can handle 25 percent more calls with the help of their computerized sidekick.

With the new system, an operator takes a call, finds the requested number on a monitor and then punches the information into a computer that could be a hundred miles away. The computer voice synthesizer repeats the phone number twice and then tells the caller he or she can stay on the line if they want to talk to a human again.

Program's students earn credit for volunteering

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

SIU-C students can gain up to nine credit hours this summer for doing volunteer work as far away as Chicago by signing up for the Credit for Structured Volunteer Service program.

CSVS, a replacement for the University Year for Action program, has been offering academic credit as an incentive to encourage undergraduate and graduate students to do structured volunteer work.

Under the leadership of Paul S. Denise and Anita Rosen, faculty members in social and community services, CSVS has grown from 10 student volunteers when the program began in Fall 1982 to 60 volunteers for the Spring 1984 semester.

For the first time, the CSVS program is being offered during the summer. According to Denise, the growth of the program is a major reason for expansion into summer semester.

DENISE SAID any student, regardless of major, may enroll in one of the four offered courses. The amount of work a student wants determines which course that student should take.

Denise said a daily log is the only requirement aside from actual volunteer work that students are responsible for. The log must be updated daily and turned in at each month's end, he said.

The daily log illustrates the success or failure of the volunteer's work, Denise said. In one case, he said, a volunteer was responsible for reading to a blind student in order to compensate for a lack of appropriate texts done in Braille. Denise said he later found out through the log that the volunteer was amazed to discover that the student she was helping was actually better read than she. Moreover, the log showed that a very special relationship formed as a result of their work.

Although most of the program's volunteers work in the Carbondale area, there is a growing number of volunteers doing work far from the city.

DEBBIE Birdsong is involved in the University Studies program and is engaged in her second semester of CSVS related work - helping to get a United Way chapter started in Mount Vernon. Although home life and a full time job at Illinois Power have kept Birdsong from enrolling in the program this summer (a minimum number of volunteer hours must be maintained during the week to receive credit) she still does as much volunteer work as she can.

Birdsong received four hours of credit for her work during the spring and hopes to enroll in the program again next fall.

"I've gotten more out of this than I have most courses. I'm receiving credit and filling a need," Birdsong said. Although Birdsong has done volunteer work in the past, notably with the Red Cross, she said this is the first time she has really gotten involved with a meaningful, non-paying job.

Lisa Foropoulos is earning five credit-hours for her volunteer work at the Northeast Illinois Planning Commission. Foropoulos, like Birdsong, is involved in senior-level work and is glad to be gaining academic credit while home for the summer.

DENISE said one student received credit through the CSVS program last year while in Texas.

While CSVS offers academic credit many miles away from campus, Denise said that the strength of the program is in its service to local organizations and groups. "Our first semester, we served seven area organizations ... but 32 have since been served and over 40 could be served now," Denise said. A few of the organizations involved in the CSVS program are the Women's Center, Synergy and the Jackson County Network.

In addition to the myriad of off-campus organizations involved in the program CSVS also offers credit for on-campus volunteer work, according to Denise. People working at the Thompson Point sound room, for example, are earning credit-hours through the program. Denise stressed that offering credit for on-campus volunteer work is tricky and that determining what qualifies under the program is a case-by-case situation.

COURSE grading is based on the thoroughness of the log and the written report of respective organizations' supervisors at the end of the semester.

Denise said he encourages any undergraduate or graduate student to sign up for the program. Those who are interested can contact Paul S. Denise at the Office of Community Development, 453-2243.

AMA asked to support air bag law for new cars

CHICAGO (AP) - Requiring air bags to be installed in all new cars and light trucks would do much to soften the blow that highway traffic deaths deal Americans each year, an American Medical Association committee was told Monday.

"Automatic air cushions have been used in over 12,000 cars driven about one billion miles in the United States and Canada, and (in) about 24,000 cars in Europe," according to Dr. Edward Pressor, co-author of a resolution supporting federally mandated air-bag installment. "In the nearly 300 crashes that occurred during such driving, the cushions performed satisfactorily."

Pressor's remarks were included in information supplied to the AMA's legislative committee, which will make a recommendation on the proposal to the 353-member House of Delegates. The delegates have gathered this week for their annual meeting.

Pressor noted that the AMA in 1970 endorsed passive restraint systems in automobiles, and that twice since then the U.S. Department of Transportation has backed off on a safety standard requiring "full passive restraint" in the front seats of new vehicles.

"The U.S. Supreme Court in June 1983 found that 'For nearly a decade the automobile industry waged the regulatory equivalent of war against the air bag and lost - the inflatable restraint' was proven sufficiently effective," Pressor noted.

He added that under the court's decision, Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole has a July 11 deadline to "either consider the matter further or adhere to or amend the standard along lines which its analysis supports."

Four resolutions on seatbelts or air bags were being considered by the committee Monday in what one doctor called "a full-court press to carry the day for air bags."

"We don't want to give up the idea of manual seatbelts - they should still be included as standard equipment in all cars," said Dr. Eugene E. Eldredge, another co-author of the resolution supporting federal requirements.

"The fact is that there are a lot of people who do not buckle up," said Eldredge. "Average seatbelt use nationally is only 10 percent to 14 percent, in spite of years of education and public information efforts."

One opponent to the resolution, Dr. Andrew McCansie of Kansas City, said no figures exist to show how many traffic fatalities could be prevented by the use of air bags.

McCansie, a surgeon since 1961 and medical director for a General Motors plant for the past year, said he has been a "near-100 percent" seat belt user since his brother was thrown from a sports car and killed in 1961

He said a decade of trials with air bags at General Motors met with a lack of interest from the public, and plans for a second generation of testing were scrapped. The bags add about $900 to $1,100 to the price of a new car.

Automakers, safety groups eye state seat belt bill

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The auto industry and highway safety groups are closely watching the Legislature, which could pass the nation's first mandatory seat belt law within the next two weeks and spur similar action in other states.

Legislation that would require seat belts to be worn by drivers and front-seat passengers in cars and pick-ups has motored through the Illinois House and a state Senate committee. It is now at passage stage in the full Senate.

Gov. James R. Thompson has not taken a position on the legislation.

The push for the new law has spawned an unusual coalition of carmakers and safety groups, which is battling opposition from those who complain government shouldn't try to protect people from themselves.

"If Illinois passed it, it would give momentum to the bills that are being considered in Michigan, New York and Delaware," said Katy Godar, spokeswoman for the Washington, D.C.-based Highway Users Federation.

Prospects for Senate approval before the scheduled June 30 adjournment are uncertain. The measure cleared the House last month with one vote to spare.

The legislation, which allows a fine of up to $25 for violations, was introduced at the automakers' request by state Rep. John Cullerton, a Chicago Democrat.

The automakers want mandatory seat belt laws to ease pressure on them to install air bags or other so-called passive restraints in cars, he said. They have hired lobbyists who are adding votes to the legislative scorecard, he said.

"I don't share their motivation, but I share their goal," Cullerton said.

On the other side of the issue are people who argue government shouldn't be interfering with their lives.

"If you pass this, let's prohibit smoking and drinking," said Republican Rep. Dwight

Friedrich of Centralia during the House debate. "I don't think it's the obligation of government to regulate everything."

Cullerton dismisses that argument.

"It's not a matter of individual liberties," Cullerton said. "The purpose of this bill is to save lives."

Automakers are keeping tabs on developments in Springfield "because we think Illinois probably has one of the best chances of passing the law," said Al Rothenberg, spokesman for the Motor Vehicle Manufacturer's Association in Detroit.

The measure also has support in New York, where similar legislation has cleared the Senate and awaits a vote in the Assembly.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo last week signed a bill that makes New York the first state to require insurance discounts for cars equipped with air bags or automatic seat belts, which wrap around a driver when the car door is closed.

The action in the state legislatures has been prompted, in part, by the federal government. A Transportation Department regulation recommended during Jimmy Carter's administration required automakers to install air bags or automatic seat belts. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole is considering alternatives to that rule, including one that would exempt states with mandatory seat belt laws, said Bob Marx, a spokesman for Mrs. Dole.

Proponents of the seat belt laws say the measures will save lives, and cite statistics to back up their claim.

If seat belts were worn by 80 percent of drivers and passengers, nearly 13,300 lives would be saved yearly, according to a Highway Users Federation spokeswoman. About 331,000 injuries could be avoided, she said.

Cullerton estimates the law could save 500 lives a year in Illinois.

Police would not stop motorists to check if they were obeying the law, but could cite violations in stopping drivers for other traffic offenses, Cullerton said.

He acknowledged there could be some problems in enforcing the law, but said it would achieve its aim by promoting seat belt use.

Beg your pardon

It was inaccurately reported in the Daily Egyptian on Friday that the bachelor's degree program in Clothing and Textiles would be reassigned from the Division of Comprehensive Planning and Design in the College of Human Resources to STC's Division of Advanced Technical Studies.

The program will actually move to the Department of Vocational Education Studies, College of Education.

Also, the bachelor's degree in Consumer Economics and Family Management will move from the Division of Human Development, College of Human Resources, to the Division of Advanced Technical Studies School of Technical Careers.

Frey hopes Philly sweep will help Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) -- To Manager Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs, nothing is disastrous, not even losing four straight to the Philadelphia Phillies and dropping out of first place in the National League East. Not after what Frey went through in his first spring training with the Cubs.

"I knew the team had problems like little pitching and no real leadoff man," recalled Frey, "but we just couldn't win a game. The pitchers couldn't get anybody out and our outfielders couldn't catch a ball."

"Everybody kept asking me what was wrong and I kept telling them I had a plan. I was working on my plan," said Frey. "At one time our record was 3-14 and the big boss from the Tribune (Stanton R. Cook) comes down and asks me 'Jim, what's wrong with the team? I told him I was working on a plan. He thought for a moment and then said 'Jim, have you ever considered changing your plan?'"

Frey laughed as he related the story involving Cook, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, whose parent company owns the team. He's not laughing now but neither is he changing any of his plans following four straight losses to the Phillies last weekend which dropped the Cubs into third place.

"Hopefully, this will motivate us to play hard and get together again," Frey said. "You can't take anything for granted."

There could have been a tendency that we didn't need the extra effort. We can turn this into a plus. In the long range, it could have a good effect on us.

"Everybody loses four in a row, it's not the end of the world, it's nothing to pack up your bags about and go home," rationalized Frey. "We have to pull up our boot straps, go out and win five in a row and all of this will be forgotten."

Frey said he had no immediate plans of calling a team meeting.

"There will come a time when I'll have something to say, not now," Frey said.

CUBS: Green's on track

would start. He deserved that. But I can't help but believe the Cubs got the better end of the deal.

I honestly do not know how Green pulled off the trade. Boston knew the Cubs were desperate to get pitching help by trading Buckner. But the Red Sox pitching situation was not much better than the Cubs', yet they traded what many people felt was their best pitcher in Eckersley. The Cubs, understandably, were delighted.

IF CUBS fans were happy about that deal, they had to be ecstatic about the trade with the Indians last week. Sure, the Cubs lost some young talent in outfielders Mel Hall and Joe Carter and pitcher Don Schulze. But only Hall was on the major league roster and it was always hard to tell if Carter and Schulze would ever get their chance with the Cubs.

In acquiring pitchers Rick Sutcliffe and George Frazier along with catcher Ron Hassey, the Cubs dealt directly with their problem -- pitching and a backup to regular catcher Jody Davis. They may also be in the very enviable position of not having to make a trade for a good while.

The pitching staff, only a short time ago considered the worst in the National League, may now be one of the best, thanks to Green. And it certainly is strong enough to lead them throughout the remainder of the season, especially if two key members come back off the disabled list.

THE CUBS' starting rotation is now a very respectable one. In Steve Trout, Eckersley, Sutcliffe, Chuck Rainey and Rick Reuschel (believe it or not), the Cubs appear to be settled in for the rest of the season. And if Dick Ruthven and Sanderson make it back soon from the disabled list, the staff will be even deeper.

PITCHING is the key to the Cubs' success during the remainder of the 1984 season. In contrast to recent years, however, the Cubs seem to have that key now. Barring a complete hitting breakdown, the north-siders should be near the top all season. The biggest problem they will contend with is ridding themselves of their reputation as losers.

Runners' night set

Area joggers and runners with varying degrees of skill and levels of fitness are invited to attend the "Runners' Night Out" program each Tuesday night at 7 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium.

Runners' Night Out is a combination of training and socializing with other area runners. Relay events, handicap races, interval training and orienteering are some of the activities being planned in an effort to make summer training more enjoyable.

SCOTT: She'll try new ball

dunk much more feasible."

Scott said the main criticism other coaches have with the introduction of the smaller ball is that it will make women's basketball inferior to the men's game. Scott said she sees little validity in that argument.

"I think the biggest criticism of the rule is that it is taking away from the credibility of the game," Scott said. "Some feel that it means we (women) cannot compete on the same level with men. But we have never competed on the same level with men because of obvious physical differences, so I don't see much point to that argument."

Furthermore, Scott said it would be difficult to distinguish the smaller ball from the larger one.

"Nobody in the stands will be able to recognize the difference," Scott said. "In fact, when you put the two balls side-by-side, it's still hard to tell the difference."

Scott said the team worked out with the smaller ball before they left for summer break.

"Our players worked out with the new ball for about three weeks and were pretty excited about it," Scott said. "I like the idea very much."

While four-year institutions will use the smaller ball next season, it appears that junior colleges and high schools will continue to use the larger ball.

Green, Cubs on winning track with recent trades

I CAN HEAR all the laughs and put-downs already, but I don't pay any attention to them. Everybody who heard or saw the results of the Cubs-Phillies series over the weekend is probably saying, "Well, the Cubbies are doing their June swoon."

The Cubs did indeed swoon over the weekend, losing all four games to Philadelphia. But the losses are not an indication of things to come. Believe it or not, the Cubs have a good team this season, a contending team. They were not in first place by mistake during most of May. So, you people that like to laugh at

From the
Press Box
David Wilhelm

the Cubs' misfortunes had better enjoy it while you can.

I think Cubs' General Manager Dallas Green is beginning to make believers out of other National League teams through the players he has been putting on the field all season, especially on the mound. In recent years, the Cubs have been known to have plenty of hitting, but no pitching. Green has quieted critics of the Cubs' pitching over the last month.

I GUESS the recovery of the pitching corps began at the winter meetings last December when the Cubs got Scott Sanderson from the Montreal Expos in a three-team trade. Then they acquired Tim Lincecum from the Oakland A's in an effort to shore up the bullpen. Those two moves were fine, for starters.

Green was not about to stop there. His last two trades have been hum-dingers and I think almost every Cubs fan would agree.

I know all about Bill Buckner and how much everyone adored him. He was the heart of the Cubs for seven seasons and he contributed much. He won the National League batting title in 1980 and gave 100 percent at all times for a team that was going to end up, at best, only in fourth place. And I agree that it was sad watching him ride the bench this season while the Cubs started winning games. Buckner deserved to be a part of all the fun.

BUT BASEBALL is in the money-making business. And to make money, a team has to win games. The Cubs were doing that without Buckner. When it was announced that Buckner had been sent to Boston for pitcher Dennis Eckersley, I don't think anyone was very surprised. It was good to see Buckner go to a team where he

Franks and Sayre working for positions on Olympic roster

SIU-C sprinter Michael Franks moved one step closer to his dream of qualifying for the United States Olympic team at the U.S. Track and Field Trials in Los Angeles Sunday night.

Franks, who will be a senior on next year's Saluki team, passed the first test in a four-step process by tying for second in the preliminary round competition of the 400-meter dash. Franks' time of 45.35 tied Antonio McKay of Georgia Tech University. Indiana University's Sunder Nix was first in the preliminaries with a 45.22.

"He (Franks) had some soreness in his foot and started very tentatively," SIU-C Sports Information Director Fred Huff said of Franks' performance. "But he turned it on in the tail-end of the race to win his heat."

The top 32 placers qualified for Monday night's second round. The field will be cut to 16 Tuesday in the semifinal round. The top eight placers in the semifinals will compete Thursday in the finals. The top three finishers in the final round will gain a berth on the United States' Olympic team.

Franks is considered a favorite in the 400-meter. He is ranked third in the world in the event. Nix is ranked second, however, and McKay holds the indoor record in the 400.

"They are certainly considered to be contenders on the basis of what they did in the NCAA finals," Huff said of the three early leaders. Franks finished second in the 400-meter in the NCAA finals. McKay was first.

But Franks will not get a free ride in his bid for a spot on the Olympic team. The 400-meter event is full of contenders, according to assistant track coach Bill Cornell.

"The 400 is a very competitive event," Cornell said. "especially in the U.S. It seems that there are always new faces coming around. The field is wide open."

If Franks is able to qualify for the team, he will also gain an automatic berth on the United States' 1,600-meter relay team. Franks was part of the Salukis' record-setting 1,600-relay team last season.

Cornell said if Franks can continue to win his heat during the competition, he will have a solid chance of making the team. If he wins his heats, he will be placed in the more choice lanes on the track for upcoming races. Inside lanes are considered better.

"By winning his heat, he will get a good lane to run out of," Cornell said. "As long as he's got a good lane to run in, he has a good shot at making the team."

Meanwhile, 1978 SIU-C graduate Bob Roggy was the leading qualifier after Sunday's javelin competition. Roggy's toss of 280-8 was the best among the 12 finalists. The finals in the javelin competition took place Monday night.

Another former Saluki, David Lee, did not fare so well. Lee was attempting to qualify for the team in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles but withdrew because of a pulled hamstring.

John Sayre, who ended his career at SIU-C by placing second in the decathlon competition at the NCAA finals earlier this month, is also vying for a spot on the Olympic team. Decathlon competition begins Thursday.

New golf coach optimistic for Saluki success

New SIU-C women's golf Coach Sonya Stalberger says she enjoys working with young golfers. Many of the golfers she will be coaching next season are not much younger than she is. At 23, Stalberger will be the youngest coach in the Gateway Conference.

Stalberger, a former golf star at the University of Iowa, succeeds Mary Beth McGirr, who resigned in May to take a full-time teaching position in North Carolina.

Despite her youthfulness, Stalberger, from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, is hardly short on experience. Among the list of credentials Stalberger will bring to SIU-C Aug. 1 is experience on the Woman's Professional Golf Tour (1983) and the Futures Tour (1983 and 1984).

In addition to her professional experience, Stalberger has coached at the Elcona Country Club in Indiana and was captain of the University of Iowa golf team in 1981 and 1982. During her four years at Iowa, Stalberger was named to the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women All-Region team twice and All-Big Ten once.

"I'm what you'd call an old 23," Stalberger said. "I've worked around golf for a long time and I've played at both the pro and amateur level. I think I can bring a good attitude, hard work and dedication to this program."

Last season, the SIU-C women's golf team finished strong by winning the Gateway Championship Tournament. But, as well as losing McGirr, the team also lost three of its top players to graduation.

Stalberger inherits seven new golfers recruited by McGirr. She admits that she is unfamiliar with them.

"I really don't know what kind of players we have," said Stalberger. "I do know that we will have a young team, but I feel confident that Mary Beth (McGirr) did a good job of recruiting and we'll have some players to work with."

SIU-C woman's Athletic Director Charlotte West said Stalberger's "solid background" in golf will give her an advantage as coach.

"Sonya's experience as a competitor and teacher are impressive," West said. "She had outstanding references from everyone with whom she'd worked."

Scott's giving new ball a chance

The controversial decision by the Girls' and Women's Basketball Rules Committee requiring four-year college and university teams to begin using a smaller basketball next season has met some stern opposition, but SIU-C women's basketball Coach

Cindy Scott is not among those opposed to the smaller ball.

A recent survey taken among the 648 members of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association showed that only 57 percent of the coaches favored the change. The new ball is almost an inch smaller in circumference (between 28.5 and 29 inches) and about two ounces lighter (between 18 and 20 ounces) than the ball used by men's and women's teams last year.

"I'm willing to give the new ball a chance," Scott said. "It will make the game more exciting for the fans. It will speed up the game, increase shooting range, be easier to handle and make the slam
