Gunman kills eight, self at loan office

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — A man with a violent criminal record whose car had recently been repossessed sprayed a loan office with semi-automatic rifle fire Monday, killing eight people and injuring at least five, authorities said. The gunman then killed himself.

Duval County Sheriff James McMillan said the gunman, James Edward Pough, 42, of Jacksonville, also was a suspect in the weekend killings of an alleged prostitute and her reputed pimp. He also served five years probation for aggravated assault, and once was arrested for assault with intent to murder.

One of the guns Pough had during Monday's massacre was registered under his name, and it was unclear whether the document had been properly issued in light of the gunman's criminal record.

"It is one of the worst things I've seen in my 20 some odd years of police work," McMillan said of the attack, noting that one of the dead was a police officer's wife.

It was the nation's worst mass fatal shooting since Sept. 14, when Joseph T. Wesbecker, 47, a pressman on disability for mental illness, fatally shot eight people and wounded 12 others at a printing plant in Louisville, Ky., then killed himself. It also matched the worst single-gunman massacre in Florida history, when eight people were killed in a Miami machine shop in August 1982.

Pough walked through the front door of the General Motors Acceptance Corp. auto finance office near downtown Jacksonville about 11 a.m. EDT and began shooting customers with a .30-caliber semi-automatic carbine, McMillan said. "He didn't say anything," the sheriff said. "He just walked in and started indiscriminately shooting."

Pough, also carrying a .38-caliber revolver, then went through the office firing at employees, some of them hiding under desks, before shooting himself in the head, McMillan said. There were 86 employees in the office at the time. Seven people, including Pough, died at the scene and seven more were taken to hospitals, where two more died later, McMillan said.

McMillan said GMAC repossessed Pough's car Jan. 24, and "we suspect this may have triggered his irrational behavior." Pough drove to the GMAC office Monday in a different car, in which investigators found a 9mm machine pistol.

Mandela asks U.S. not to lift sanctions

OTTAWA (UPI) — Black leader Nelson Mandela, seeking renewed support from the West in his struggle against apartheid, said Monday he is optimistic the United States will maintain economic sanctions against South Africa's white minority government.

The 71-year-old deputy vice-president of the African National Congress, who is on a six-week, 13-nation tour that in large part celebrates his release from prison after 27 years, also appeared to have relaxed his position on a key ANC plank to nationalize key industries.

Mandela said his concern is a growing economy that offers full employment.

In Ottawa Monday, he spoke often and eloquently about the need to maintain pressure against the system of racial discrimination.

Mandela, who travels Wednesday to New York to start a 12-day, eight-city tour of the United States, was unwilling to comment on reports that a U.S. diplomat caused his arrest in 1962.

"My simple answer is to let bygones be bygones. Let's consider the present and the future," he said.

In an address to Canada's Parliament, Mandela warned apartheid will never be destroyed.

Committee passes paper recycling bill

By Christen Coriasco
Staff Writer

A bill that would require newspapers to use a certain amount of recycled newsprint recently passed the Senate Committee on Energy and Environment.

The bill, if fully passed, would require newsprint used by Illinois newspapers to contain an average recycled fiber content of 22 percent by 1991; 25 percent by 1992; and 28 percent by 1993.

That may ease the enormous amount of newspapers that presently account for 11 percent of the total urban waste as well as reduce the number of newspapers going into landfills.

Tasis Karayiannis, owner of the Southern Recycling Center, said the usage of recycled content would help in more ways than one.

"It will divert the volumes. Instead of going to landfills, the newspaper will go to paper mills," Karayiannis said.

"It will also help because using recycled paper saves energy. It takes paper out of paper instead of trees. It will also save power, transportation, and pollution," he added.

The bill would effect the newspapers in the area as well.

Carl Rexroad, editor of the Southern Illinoisian, said the cost of producing their paper would probably go up at first.

"The supply [of paper] is there. The problem is getting it to someone who can turn it into something usable. A lot of paper mills will have to re-tool their operations so that will raise the cost," Rexroad said.

Gary Buckles, superintendent of the Daily Egyptian print shop, said the problem is that at this time,

Loan not based on financial need soon available at SIU-C

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

A new financial aid loan that is not based on financial need will soon be available for SIU-C students, Pamela Britton, financial aid director, said.

Applications for the Illinois Opportunity Loan Program will be available June 19, for loans for the fall 1990 semester.

The new loan is non-subsidized and available to sophomores, juniors, seniors, and graduate students. The loan is different from other loans because it is not based on the financial need of the applicant.

Also the students must pay the 8 percent interest on the loan each quarter while they are still in school. The minimum loan amount is $1,000 dollars, in which case the interest each quarter would be $80.

The loan is designed to assist middle income families and eligibility for the loan will be determined by the financial aid administrator.

Flood death toll at 21, 14 still missing

SHADYSIDE, Ohio (UPI) — The death toll in last week's flash flood disaster rose to 21 Monday, and authorities said they still had not accounted for another 14 people in Ohio's worst weather disaster in 21 years.

The body of the 21st victim of Thursday night's storm was discovered Monday morning, but Fire Chief Mark Badia did not release any other information. He said the number of missing dropped Monday from 16 to 14. Intermittent rain overnight hampered the search effort and a brief thunderstorm Monday morning raised fears of more flooding.

"Around 7:30 (a.m.), it looked like it was 10 o'clock at night," Ray Ponzio, director of the emergency crisis center, said, "with thunder, lightning, heavy rain."

But the storm ended quickly and the only damage was to an area filled in with dirt Sunday by the Ohio National Guard.

The Thursday night flooding was the worst weather disaster in Ohio since July 4, 1969, when severe thunderstorms swept off Lake Erie in the late afternoon, killing 40.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, parent agency of the National Weather Service, has begun an investigation into why no flash flood warning was issued that night.

Ed Heath, meteorologist in charge of the Akron-Canton bureau, told The Cleveland Plain Dealer the investigation was routine.

"The policy is whenever five people or more die, they have a review board check the areas of responsibility to see if there was

NCAA requirements met by Illini

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — University of Illinois officials said they met a Monday NCAA deadline for responding to allegations of what were called "major violations" of recruiting guidelines that could lead to a "death penalty" for the school's basketball program.

The charges involve recruiting of at least two top high school prospects, believed to be LaPhonso Ellis and Deon Thomas, although the names were deleted from the NCAA's Official Inquiry letter to Chancellor Morton Weir in February.

The letter listed a series of allegations — six described as major — including offers to students of $25,000 and $80,000 in cash and autos.

U of I spokeswoman Judy Rowan said the school complied with the NCAA's request for a full response by June 18. The information, which Rowan said would not be released to the public, will be used in a series of conferences by NCAA and university officials over the next several weeks.

"It's received by the NCAA staff and the committee on infractions," said NCAA spokesman S. David Berst from NCAA headquarters in Kansas, adding the response was needed "to review all of the issues and all the documentation available."

He said next step is called a pre-hearing conference, with institutional personnel and coaching staff involved.

Berst added it is possible some of the allegations against the Illini basketball program could be dropped in the process, although he wrote in February "it is reasonable to expect the NCAA Committee on Infractions will find violations."

Berst said the league would not announce if any charges are changed, but it is not unusual for that to happen in the next stage of the process.

"There have been allegations that are adjusted or modified after the response was received," Berst said.

The infractions committee is scheduled to meet in Colorado Springs, Colo., August 11-14, Berst said. University officials have said they hope to make Illinois' case at that time.

"Generally, a month later a report is issued by the committee."

Irwin wins third U.S. Open

Donald trumped

MEDINAH, Ill. (UPI) — Hale Irwin came from two shots behind with three holes to go Monday, then beat Mike Donald with an 8-foot birdie putt on the first hole of the U.S. Open's first sudden-death playoff to capture the tournament a third time.

Irwin, 45, became the U.S. Open's oldest winner. He entered the playoff thanks to a 40-foot birdie putt on the 72nd hole Sunday, and seemed to be a certain loser as the two men stepped to the 16th tee of the 18-hole showdown.

He trailed by two shots, and Donald was playing well, having steadied himself after a shaky front nine. But Irwin hit his second shot on the par-4 16th to within 5 feet and made a birdie that moved him within a stroke of Donald.

Then, after two pars on No. 17, Donald needed only a par at the final hole to win. However, he pulled his tee shot at the 18th into the long rough, from where he could only gouge it into a bunker in front of the green. His bunker shot landed 15 feet short of the hole and his putt skidded by on the right side.

With both players having shot a 2-over 74, the first sudden-death playoff in the Open's 90-year history began at the 385-yard, par-4 first hole of the Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course.

Irwin hit an excellent drive and his approach settled 8 feet from the hole. Donald, after a good drive, came up short with his second shot and his 30-foot birdie putt never had a chance.

That left it up to Irwin, whose putt hit the center of the hole.

Cards can salvage season

By Tricia Lynch
Staff Writer

The frustration may temporarily over for Todd Zeile and the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals.

After an autograph session Saturday at University Mall, the rookie catcher returned to St. Louis where the Cardinals dominated the Montreal Expos 5-3.

On Sunday, St. Louis bashed the Expos 7-1 for its second consecutive win.

The rookie is riding a six-game hot streak, (8-for-23, .348) with seven RBIs, to raise his season average to .242.

Zeile signed autographs for more than 200 people at an event co-sponsored by the mall and TCI Cable.

During a press conference, Zeile said each of the Cardinals were down on themselves after falling into a five-game losing streak before Saturday's game.

After stumbling out of the gates this year (27-37, fifth place in the N.L. East), St. Louis has the potential to turn their season around, Zeile said.

"We're not to a point where we can get down and give up on the season, our attitudes are pretty good," Zeile said. "I don't feel it's a life or death situation."

Zeile said everyone on the organization knows they have a better ballclub than they have shown and the potential is there, it has not clicked yet.

"Early in the season we had pitching and no offense, and now there is more offense and less pitching," he said. "It's been a team thing the whole way and we know one of these days pitching and offense will go at the same time and something good will happen."

In 1989, Zeile replaced catcher Tony Pena, who left St. Louis for the Boston Red Sox in the American League.

Reflecting on his rookie season, Zeile said it has been an interesting year with St. Louis. He struggled early in the season, but now people might expect him to struggle the rest of the season.

"When I struggled there was a lot of focus on it—a microscope effect—because of pre-season expectations, but then I relaxed and snapped out of it," Zeile said.

He said he struggled because of the expectations he set on himself, not because of the press.

Americans looking to save face

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI) — The United States and Austria find themselves in the same boat — each looking to salvage a point in the World Cup.

Both have lost Group A games to Italy and Czechoslovakia. They play their final first-round game Tuesday night in Florence.

"Many of the so-called experts predicted (Austria) would easily advance to the second round, and here they are in the same position we are," U.S. Coach Bob Gansler said. "We've lost twice, they've lost twice and neither one of us wants to go home 0-3."

"Each still has a mathematical chance of advancing to the last 16 as a best-placed third team, with Austria in a much better position than the Americans."

"There will be a lot of pride involved in this game," Gansler said. "I don't know about our chances for the next round. I'm worried about Austria. After that, if there is a reason, I'll worry about the next round."

Many believed the Austrians would challenge for second place in Group A. But weakness up front proved critical in 1-0 losses to Italy and Czechoslovakia. And now Austria is all but through.

"It is very difficult to say what the outcome will have for us," Coach Josef Hickersberger said. "We cannot dwell on that aspect. We will play hard. I would not say we are looking past the United States."

The Americans, making their first appearance in the World Cup since 1950, have lost 5-1 to Czechoslovakia and 1-0 to Italy. Paul Caligiuri scored the lone U.S. goal.

Earlier this year, Hickersberger said Austria's game against the United States would be a "formality." He was also quoted as saying the U.S. presence in the World Cup was "useless," although he denied making the statement.

Even last Sunday, after his team lost to Czechoslovakia, he said of the upcoming U.S. game: "I'm sure we will win."

On Monday, he was singing a different tune.

"We are not underestimating the Americans," he said. "If we do, we will not win."

The Austrian press reported Tuesday's game would be critical for Hickersberger's future, but he denied he would step down if Austria loses.

The United States is expected to start the same 11 who went against Italy. Gansler had made several lineup changes after the Czechoslovakia debacle, and the results were encouraging.

"Our game against Italy really lifted our confidence and we're going into this match believing we can do something positive," Caligiuri said. "The important thing is we stay in the match mentally. We have to keep our composure. We came here wanting to get a win and we've got one chance left."

Austria has managed only 14 shots on goal in two games. Toni Polster and Gerhard Rodax, two of the more prominent scorers in Europe, have combined for just three shots. Hickersberger now may field three men up front — Polster, Rodax and Andrea Ogris.

Sullivan's misfortune a gift for Andretti in Grand Prix

DETROIT (UPI) — The way his luck was running this season, it came as no surprise to Michael Andretti that a bad break decided the $1 million CART Detroit Grand Prix. The only twist was that it wasn't his own misfortune.

Danny Sullivan was riding in second place Sunday when his pit stop led to a tire mishap, enabling the 27-year-old Andretti to become the first Indy-car driver since 1987 to lead wire-to-wire.

Sullivan pitted after 47 laps to replace his tires. However, the right rear tire was loose and forced him out of the race — with Andretti leading at the time by only 0.26 seconds.

"I think it would have come down to our pit stops," said Andretti, who registered his 10th career victory and first since last year's Michigan 500. "When he did finally drop out, it was a big relief. All we had to do then was bring it home."

For a change this season, luck was on Andretti's side. An engine problem at Phoenix, vibrations at Indianapolis and running out of fuel while in the lead at Milwaukee all resulted in early race retirements for him.

"I hope we broke the ice again," Andretti said. "Last year we were able to come back and do it twice, and then fall into the old rhythm again."

Soviet troops stop prison riot, unknown number killed

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Hundreds of heavily armed Soviet troops Monday put down a prison riot in central Russia led by "hardened criminals," but inmates apparently held part of another facility in the Ukraine, official reports said. An unknown number of prisoners were killed or wounded in the rioting, government media outlets reported. They said the assault was made when the rioters refused to release guards who had been taken hostage.

Texas prepares for oil from Mega Borg spill

GALVESTON, Texas (UPI) — Booms were set out Monday to protect sensitive coastal marshlands and volunteers worked to clear trash from a 40-mile stretch of beach before the arrival of oil from the fire-scarred tanker Mega Borg. The Mega Borg dropped at least 3.9 million gallons of light crude into the Gulf of Mexico after it was rocked by a series of explosions and fire that began June 8.

Chernobyl hero on respirator, chances poor

SEATTLE (UPI) — A heroic Soviet helicopter pilot who exposed himself repeatedly to radiation while sealing the exploded Chernobyl nuclear reactor fought for his life Monday on a respirator against a fungal infection in his lungs. Anatoly Grishchenko, 53, remained in critical condition but was conscious enough to welcome relatives and friends who came to visit, said Susan Edmonds, spokeswoman at Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

Atlantis shuttle moved to launching pad

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. Atlantis, mounted atop a mobile launch platform and carried by a crawler-transporter, began the 3.5-mile trip from the Assembly Building to launch pad 39A at 11:16 p.m. EDT Sunday.

Seaplane pilot hopes for Soviet fuel stop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tom Casey of Seattle, trying to become the first person to fly a seaplane around the world with water-only landings, said Monday he hopes Moscow will relent and let him land on Soviet territory as a safety measure. Casey, 53, was denied permission to cross the Soviet Union on a westward flight path last month.

Convicted killer put to death in Arkansas

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (UPI) — A convicted killer described as the most dangerous on Arkansas' death row was put to death in the electric chair Monday night in the state's first execution in 26 years. John Edward Swindler, 46, a husky, red-faced native of Columbia, S.C., was sentenced to die for the 1976 shooting death of Randy Bassnet, 30, a police officer in Fort Smith, Ark.

Court upholds videotaping drunken drivers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court upheld Monday the practice of videotaping suspected drunken drivers, but placed limits on the kinds of questions police are permitted to ask. The high court, reviewing a Pennsylvania case, held that using a videotape of a suspect as evidence at a drunken driving trial does not violate a person's constitutional right against self-incrimination. However, the court said police do not have unlimited authority in making such tapes.

SIU artists create sculptures from scrapped iron radiators

By Rob Coné
Entertainment Editor

It takes the creative eye of an artist to see old, discarded household steam radiators as works of art. And that's just what the vision of 14 sculptors created Saturday afternoon during the School of Art and Design's annual iron pour.

Nearly two tons of bashed radiator bits were superheated, ladled, poured and cast into molds lined up in the center of the compound at SIU-C's Foundry on Pleasant Hill Road.

Martin Munson, master of fine arts candidate, said preparations for the event started months ago with visits to local scrap yards to collect the iron. Radiators are used, said Munson, because they contain a high-quality metal called gray iron.

To separate the gray iron from other metals and fittings, the artists become sledgehammer-wielding steel drivers to reduce the radiators to rubble-sized pieces that can be melted in a cupola—a miniature version of a coke (purified coal)-fired blast furnace capable of heating the iron to 3,000 degrees.

The iron pieces were bagged into 56 paper sacks of 50 pounds each. As the metal melts, alternating charges of coke, iron and limestone are continually fed into the cupola.

"There's nothing tricky about it (pouring iron)," Munson said, "all you need is fuel, spark and oxygen."

However, Saturday morning the artists needed the services of a skilled iron worker or at least a little more luck. When they combined the necessary ingredients Munson said were required to melt iron, the would-be metalsmiths failed to fully ignite the all-important bottom layer of softball-sized coke chunks.

It took a few charges of coke and iron to snuff out the fire. But by the time the artists realized their mistake, a disk of red-hot iron and coke 18 inches across and 8 inches thick had wedged itself against the refractory walls of the furnace.

Munson said the meltdown was the foundry's first "cherry bomb" in four previous iron pours.

The sculptors, fearing a possible week's delay, pounded away at the disk and just when the day seemed lost, the disk let go its grip and thudded onto the sand pit below.

Spirits revitalized, the cupola was reassembled and shortly after noon, the pour was on. And this time, a steady stream of lava dribbled from the spigot.

"Once the metal starts pouring, there's no stopping it," Munson said.

To keep up with the two hours of sweltering non-stop casting, almost 20 student, faculty and former student volunteers dressed in leather aprons and chaps or inter-weight clothing worked in tandem in the oppressive 90-degree heat to serve the ladles of molten iron like so many servants scurrying from tureen to table and back again.

Munson said that while the iron pour "allows us to pour an unlimited amount of metal," the intense labor involved inhibits more than one pour a year.

Experts say pets need to stay cool

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

Pet owners need to take special precautions to keep their animals healthy during this hot and humid summer, a Carbondale Humane Society official said.

"A cool, shady area is a must to maintain the health of your pet," Sue Wagner, assistant manager at the Humane Society said.

A pet needs a constant supply of fresh water, especially if the animal is outside, Wagner said.

"Leaving an animal in a parked car can be a deadly mistake," Wagner said. "On a hot day the temperature in a car can reach 160 degrees in a matter of minutes even with the windows partially open, she said.

"In virtually every instance, leaving your pet in the car is dangerous," Wagner said.

"It's best not to leave the animal in the car at all," Marilyn Pulley, office manager at Central Hospital for Animals, said.

Pets do not perspire the way people do. Dogs, for example, use their tongues as cooling systems—that is why they pant. If the animal has only hot air to breathe, it can quickly suffer brain damage or die from heatstroke.

In some states leaving an animal in the car during the summer is illegal, but Illinois has no state legislation that outlaws the practice, Wagner said.

"There are no municipal ordinances against leaving your pet in the car. It's merely a strong suggestion from the Humane Society," Wagner said.

Hosing a pet with cold water can make the hot easier for the animal to bear and can help reduce the chances for heatstroke, Wagner said.

"If the animal is in distress (from heatstroke), get the body temperature down as soon as possible before you take it to the vet," Pulley said.

The early morning and late evening are the best times to take a dog for a walk during the summer, Wagner said.

"Short walks are the best when it's hot," Wagner said.

The Fourth of July can be dangerous for pets that are afraid of loud, sudden noises. Dogs are often found miles from their homes, confused, disoriented and exhausted, Wagner said.

"July 5th is one of our more busy days because we pick up animals that ran away the night before," Wagner said.

"If you know your pet is sensitive, stay at home with it during the Fourth of July or make sure someone stays with him," Wagner said.

Tranquilizers are available for animals that are frightened of the noise.

"If an animal is afraid of storms, chances are it will be afraid of the July 4th firecrackers, and you might want to get some tranquilizers for your pet," Pulley said.

SIU artists create sculptures from scrapped iron radiators

By Rob Coné
Entertainment Editor

It takes the creative eye of an artist to see old, discarded household steam radiators as works of art. And that's just what the vision of 14 sculptors created Saturday afternoon during the School of Art and Design's annual iron pour.

Nearly two tons of bashed radiator bits were superheated, ladled, poured and cast into molds lined up in the center of the compound at SIU-C's Foundry on Pleasant Hill Road.

Martin Munson, master of fine arts candidate, said preparations for the event started months ago with visits to local scrap yards to collect the iron. Radiators are used, said Munson, because they contain a high-quality metal called gray iron.

To separate the gray iron from other metals and fittings, the artists become sledgehammer-wielding steel drivers to reduce the radiators to rubble-sized pieces that can be melted in a cupola—a miniature version of a coke (purified coal)-fired blast furnace capable of heating the iron to 3,000 degrees.

The iron pieces were bagged into 56 paper sacks of 50 pounds each. As the metal melts, alternating charges of coke, iron and limestone are continually fed into the cupola.

"There's nothing tricky about it (pouring iron)," Munson said, "all you need is fuel, spark and oxygen."

However, Saturday morning the artists needed the services of a skilled iron worker or at least a little more luck. When they combined the necessary ingredients Munson said were required to melt iron, the would-be metalsmiths failed to fully ignite the all-important bottom layer of softball-sized coke chunks.

It took a few charges of coke and iron to snuff out the fire. But by the time the artists realized their mistake, a disk of red-hot iron and coke 18 inches across and 8 inches thick had wedged itself against the refractory walls of the furnace.

Munson said the meltdown was the foundry's first "cherry bomb" in four previous iron pours.

The sculptors, fearing a possible week's delay, pounded away at the disk and just when the day seemed lost, the disk let go its grip and thudded onto the sand pit below.

Spirits revitalized, the cupola was reassembled and shortly after noon, the pour was on. And this time, a steady stream of lava dribbled from the spigot.

"Once the metal starts pouring, there's no stopping it," Munson said.

To keep up with the two hours of sweltering non-stop casting, almost 20 student, faculty and former student volunteers dressed in leather aprons and chaps or inter-weight clothing worked in tandem in the oppressive 90-degree heat to serve the ladles of molten iron like so many servants scurrying from tureen to table and back again.

Munson said that while the iron pour "allows us to pour an unlimited amount of metal," the intense labor involved inhibits more than one pour a year.

Experts say pets need to stay cool

By Christina Hall
Staff Writer

Pet owners need to take special precautions to keep their animals healthy during this hot and humid summer, a Carbondale Humane Society official said.

"A cool, shady area is a must to maintain the health of your pet," Sue Wagner, assistant manager at the Humane Society said.

A pet needs a constant supply of fresh water, especially if the animal is outside, Wagner said.

"Leaving an animal in a parked car can be a deadly mistake," Wagner said. "On a hot day the temperature in a car can reach 160 degrees in a matter of minutes even with the windows partially open, she said.

"In virtually every instance, leaving your pet in the car is dangerous," Wagner said.

"It's best not to leave the animal in the car at all," Marilyn Pulley, office manager at Central Hospital for Animals, said.

Pets do not perspire the way people do. Dogs, for example, use their tongues as cooling systems—that is why they pant. If the animal has only hot air to breathe, it can quickly suffer brain damage or die from heatstroke.

In some states leaving an animal in the car during the summer is illegal, but Illinois has no state legislation that outlaws the practice, Wagner said.

"There are no municipal ordinances against leaving your pet in the car. It's merely a strong suggestion from the Humane Society," Wagner said.

Hosing a pet with cold water can make the hot easier for the animal to bear and can help reduce the chances for heatstroke, Wagner said.

"If the animal is in distress (from heatstroke), get the body temperature down as soon as possible before you take it to the vet," Pulley said.

The early morning and late evening are the best times to take a dog for a walk during the summer, Wagner said.

"Short walks are the best when it's hot," Wagner said.

The Fourth of July can be dangerous for pets that are afraid of loud, sudden noises. Dogs are often found miles from their homes, confused, disoriented and exhausted, Wagner said.

"July 5th is one of our more busy days because we pick up animals that ran away the night before," Wagner said.

"If you know your pet is sensitive, stay at home with it during the Fourth of July or make sure someone stays with him," Wagner said.

Tranquilizers are available for animals that are frightened of the noise.

"If an animal is afraid of storms, chances are it will be afraid of the July 4th firecrackers, and you might want to get some tranquilizers for your pet," Pulley said.

Riding the Rails

Passengers say it's Amtrak or bust

By Jerianne Kimmel
Staff Writer

Amid questions riding Amtrak because of a presidential veto of federal funding for the train, Carbondale Amtrak passengers say they don't want to hit the road.

For some students travelling to Chicago, Amtrak is the only way to go.

"If it weren't for Amtrak, there would be a lot of stranded people," one passenger said. "There would be no transportation to Chicago for people who don't have cars. And the train is much, much faster than the bus."

For others, Amtrak is a convenient way to go north.

"You could drive or get a ride, but this is definitely the easiest way," said Ken Houston, undecided freshman from Palos Heights.

About 70 percent of Amtrak passengers are students, said ticket agent Nelson Miesner. Two trains run daily from Carbondale to Chicago, one from Carbondale to New Orleans and one from Carbondale to St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.

Some downstate residents say Amtrak helps to shorten the distance between them and family who live in Chicago.

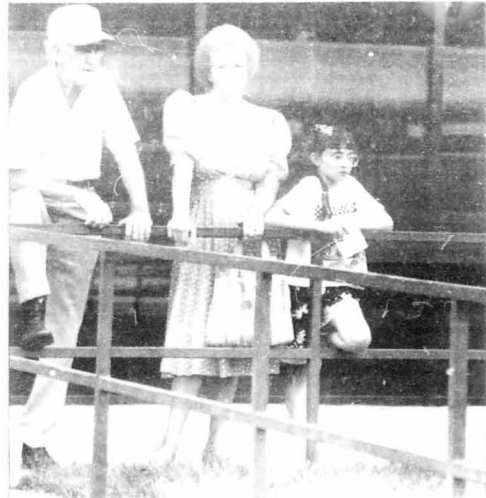

"We need Amtrak desperately," said Karen Choate, 19, from Vienna. "We have relatives who go to Chicago and back to see us. The train is vital to Southern Illinois."

A Missouri resident agreed.

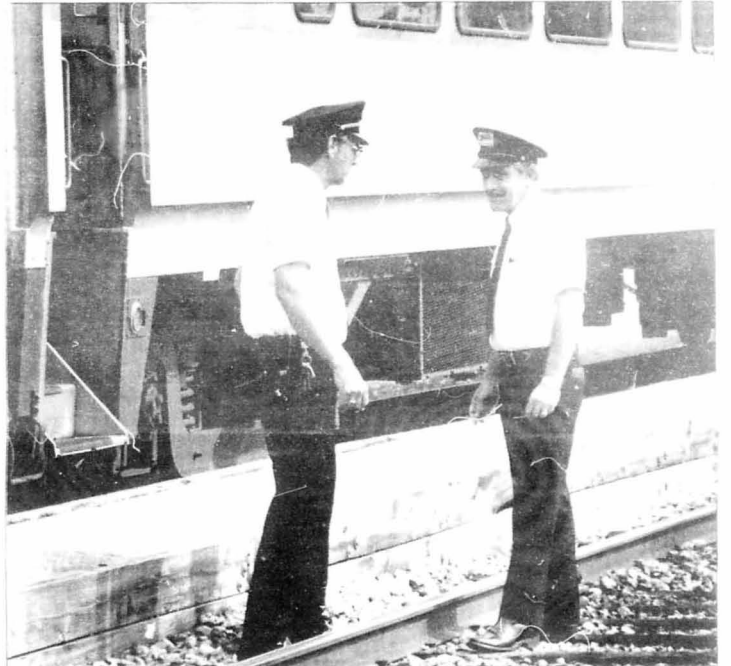

"We would be affected very much (if Amtrak service was disrupted)," said Dennis Holt, 43, from Cape Girardeau, Mo. "The kids live part of the year with their mother in Chicago. I live in Cape. When I have to send them, I don't have to drive them. Amtrak alleviates our visitation. This is the better way."

The Amtrak train leaves Carbondale to Chicago and another returns to Carbondale from Chicago twice daily with reserved and unreserved seating.

Two SIU-C students receive research funds

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

The National Science Foundation, awarded research funding to two University seniors in electrical engineering, under a new policy of undergraduate funding.

Annette von Jouanne, from Renton, Wash., and Jason Nanay, from Chicago, will work with Nazeih Botros, an associate professor in electrical engineering, on a project to develop a classification system of liver disease through digital analysis.

It is a new policy of the NSF to give undergraduate funding. The NSF grants usually go to graduate students or professional researchers, and very few undergraduates have received NSF funding over the past 20 years.

"They (the NSF) want to encourage undergraduates to pursue careers in the field and want them to continue the research," said Botros.

"They especially want to encourage female students and minorities."

Among the many liver diseases, the researchers are mainly looking for cirrhosis and fatty liver. Other diseases, like hepatitis, can be included later, according to von Jouanne.

"We are applying ultrasound to digitized livers, using imitation livers, and are trying to classify the back-scattered signals by means of pattern recognition," said von Jouanne. Botros spoke to academic advisors in electrical engineering and chose the students on the basis of their academics and merit.

"It's a great honor," von Jouanne said.

The electrical engineering department has provided the funding for a third person, junior Pam Fligor, to assist in the project. She works 20 hours per week at minimum wage from the department.

The students will help to develop a classification system of liver disease.

Since von Jouanne will graduate in December of 1990 and Nanay will graduate in May of 1991, Fligor will be able to "run the show" later, according to von Jouanne.

The project began five years ago and the NSF gave the department $60,000 two years ago. The NSF's funding ended last February. But in March, the Foundation added an additional $10,000 for undergraduate search experience. The group is now in the project's midway stages.

Both von Jouanne and Fligor feel that they have gained much knowledge and experience working on the project.

"It gives us teaching experience to present our work to the research group," said Fligor.

One other person is contributing to the study, Tee Tong-Han. He is working on his master's thesis in electrical engineering.

IBM hopes new computer will be household hit

By Paul Freiberger
San Francisco Examiner

The home computer has been a dream for some and a nightmare for others. For IBM no nightmare was ever more vivid than the PC-Jr. Now that the failure of that home computer is four years in the past, the computer giant is dreaming again of making the computer a ubiquitous home appliance.

According to people in the industry who are familiar with IBM's new computer, at least three models will be available. The entry-level unit, which is expected to cost just under $1,000. The introductory model will have no room for add-on cards.

and the man was in serious condition.

Another victim died at St. Luke's Hospital, spokeswoman Kim Price said.

Three other injured were taken to Baptist Hospital in critical condition, spokeswoman Cindy Hamilton said.

The attack matched the worst massacre by a single gunman in Florida history. On Aug. 20, 1982, eight people in a Miami machine shop were killed and three were wounded by Carl Robert Brown, 51, who was angry over a wedding bill. Brown was killed by a car that rammed his bicycle as he fled.

On April 23, 1987, William B. Cruse stalked two Palm Bay shopping centers and killed six people and wounded 14 others. He was sentenced to death and is now on death row.

Describing Monday's shooting, GMAC employee Rich Langill, who works in the office's back room, said Pough "shot at a couple of customers on his way to the counter, and then started picking us off. ... At first, back where we were, the noise of it sounded like a copy machine or something had blown up."

Co-worker Jean Waggoner said, "We locked our doors and kept a lookout for more people coming in, and they were hysterical and they were going into shock. We had one lady faint on us. We more or less turned our office into a hospital."

Nita King, a county employee in nearby Ocala, said she got a phone call from a woman at the GMAC office about the time the shooting started. "I answered the phone and didn't get an answer a couple of times ... and she says, 'Help! Help! Help! ... We're being robbed. Please help,'" she said.

"About that time I could hear some gunshots in the background," she said. "... (The caller) was under her desk. ... I heard at least 8 or 10. I guess, people screaming and carrying on. The girl was so upset, she kept begging for help."

Pough was suspected of shooting to death a prostitute, Doretta Elaine Drake, 30, and her pimp, Louis Carl Bacon, 39, near his home early Saturday because he believed he had been cheated in a sex deal, McMillan said. Both had been shot with a .30-caliber rifle, and the killer's description matched Pough's.

McMillan said Pough's criminal record included five years' probation for a 1971 guilty plea to aggravated assault; stemming from the shooting of a friend who had insulted Pough's girlfriend. The judge expunged the conviction after Pough finished probation.

Pough also was arrested in 1966 for assault with the intent to murder, but it was unclear whether he was convicted of the charge, sheriff's Sgt. Steve Weintraub said.

The .38-caliber revolver was registered in Pough's name, but police did not know whether Pough also had permits for the carbine or the machine pistol. "We're trying to find out where he got the guns," Weintraub said. "The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms will be looking into it also."

Two women and a man from the GMAC massacre were taken to University Medical Center, where one of the women, Denise Highfill, a wife of a Jacksonville police officer, died about a half hour later, spokesman Vince Scolari said. The other woman was in fair condition.

unless nations continue to apply sanctions.

"We must continue to apply this form of pressure against the apartheid system," Mandela told political leaders, who responded with several standing ovations.

In a later meeting with reporters, Mandela said he could not predict the outcome of meetings with U.S. policy makers, but he was counting on the "tremendous support" he has received so far from Americans and the U.S. Congress.

"I have no reason whatsoever to be pessimistic about our visit to the United States and the response we are likely to get on the question of sanctions," he said.

Mandela predicted the "overwhelming majority" of leaders at next week's meeting of the European Community in Dublin, Ireland, will support continued sanctions despite strong pressure from Britain to end them.

Mandela paid moving tribute to the thousands of South African blacks who died in the fight against apartheid. "We come from a people who ... would not accept to be treated as subhuman," he said.

At the same time, Mandela described South African President F.W. de Klerk and members of the National Party as "men and women of integrity", adding they are "honestly committed" to participating in South Africa's political transformation.

Asked how he reconciles the ANC's position of nationalizing key industries with moves in Eastern Europe away from socialism, Mandela said state participation in industry was only one of the options that would be considered when apartheid has been dismantled.

"We will look at other options as well," Mandela said, adding he doesn't share concerns of businessmen over state intervention.

"Our concern is the economy should grow and flourish and offer full employment," he said.

Mandela won unequivocal support from Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney for continued sanctions.

In words clearly aimed at the Bush Administration and Britain, Mandela told Parliament it would be a mistake to use the limited reforms of the de Klerk government as an excuse to lift sanctions.

anything we missed or if there are weaknesses," he said.

"As far as I'm concerned nothing broke down," Heath said, adding it was impossible to predict the amount of rain that fell in Shadyside based on what showed on weather radar.

Tom Allison, 38, who lost just about everything except his dog and the clothes he was wearing when he fled his house, said a warning would have been meaningless.

Had he seen one, Allison said he would have "probably (done) nothing, because who would think of a flood on that creek? When they say flood in this area, you think of the Ohio River."

At this point, Allison said he's more concerned about rebuilding his life. All that's been found of his most prized possession, his truck, has been one tire.

"It's like being 16 again and starting all over," said Allison, wearing clothes donated at a crisis center in Shadyside.

How long will it take to rebuild? The unemployed pipe fitter replied: "About 20 years. That's how long it took me to put everything together."

Ray Ponzio, a school teacher now running the crisis center, questioned how many of the people will move back to the creek area torn apart by what was described by one weather official as a once-in-a-thousand-year storm.

"I bet you some of these people won't even attempt to rebuild in that area," Ponzio said. "A lot of them were in the category of retired."

recycled newspaper is not readily available.

"The company we deal with, it's (recycled paper) not even available. We are looking into it, it will have to go out for a bid if the bill passes," Buckles said.

Buckles also said that the price of the paper would probably increase because the demand for the recycled paper would be high.

"We have to worry about going into a new market and finding a new supplier. The demand will be large and because we are such a small newspaper, we might be in trouble," Buckles said.

Comic strip style helps 'Dick Tracy' to succeed

Film Review

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

"Dick Tracy" proves that a comic strip can be appealing on film as well as on paper.

The film is designed to look like a moving comic strip with its vivid blue, green and red colors. The script has plenty of gunfire and fist fights but no blood, which makes it suitable for the entire family. This format makes it a welcome relief from the graphic scenes that currently dominate the movie industry.

Warren Beatty, who directed, produced and starred in the film, plays the straight-faced, workaholic cop. He radiates style in a canary-yellow trench coat and matching hat.

Tracy is as relentless as he is reliable. He is not above badgering witnesses in jail to get information—especially when this information includes his chief enemy, Big Boy Caprice.

Al Pacino plays Big Boy Caprice, an obnoxious Mafia chief with enormous stooped shoulders, a thirst for power and an appetite for blondes and walnuts. He spitefully calls Tracy a "servant of the people" and dispenses wisdom along with his crooked schemes to control the city.

"Our limitations are our shackles. Put them behind you," he says to his gang of thugs.

Madonna plays the ambitious nightclub singer Breathless Mahoney in a series of revealing costumes. The boldest is a tight black dress that faces up the back.

She matters sexual one-liners reminiscent of Lauren Bacall to Humphrey Bogart. "Baby I always get my man," she croons in her attempt to seduce Tracy. Her idea of grieving for her dead mafia boyfriend is to wear black underwear.

The orphaned "kid" played by Charlie Korsmo, is a freckled-faced miniature Tracy. Taken off the street by Tracy, he soon wiggles his way into the private-eye's heart. He shares Tracy's zest for adventure and sneaks along by clinging to the back of Tracy's car.

In addition to the good cop versus bad guy script, there is also a mysterious masked villain who plots to destroy Tracy and make it appear as if Big Boy Caprice were behind the schemes.

The all-star cast is virtually unrecognizable beneath pounds of hideous makeup and rubber masks. Dustin Hoffman is superb as the indistinguishable "Mumbles." The cast also includes Dick Van Dyke, James Caan and Charles Durning.

SIU-C's AAF chapter takes second in national advertising competition

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

Members of the SIU-C chapter of the American Advertising Federation was No. 2 in the nation for the second time in AAF history.

Bethany Kahl, Jennifer Banks, Jeff Marren, Robb Hass and Ron Sone, representing 25 members of the SIU-C chapter of the AAF, competed last week at the National Student Advertising Competition in St. Louis.

SIU-C came this far once before. In 1984 the University's team competed in the nationals held in Denver, where they also claimed the title of second in the nation.

Only 15 schools of about 180 get to contend in the national competition each year.

This year's competition was sponsored by the Hearst Corporation.

"Our job was to find a niche in the magazine market that is currently unserved," said Johan Yssel, AAF student advisor.

The contest's primary requirement was that the students design a magazine that had the potential for achieving a circulation of 750,000 in three years time.

Usually the sponsor of the contest provides the students with the product and asks them to develop an advertising campaign, but this year the Hearst Corporation had a new idea.

"This was the first year they wanted a whole magazine," said Marketing Director John Morrison. "It was the craziest assignment they've ever given us."

In the regional competition in April, SIU-C competed against top-rated schools in the region, including the University of Illinois, Michigan State University and Ball State.

SIU-C's AAF took first in the regionals, which placed it in the top 15 schools to contend in the national competition.

The students worked on the magazine from September 1989 to March 1990, beginning with primary research in five cities to decide on their target group.

Research indicated that single parents were the most untapped resource in the magazine market.

By the end of March the advertising campaign, editorial content for the first year, operational expenses, circulation and the target group "single parents," had been decided.

Single parents was a unique target group at the regional competition, but was shared by three other advertising groups at the national level.

The magazine's content included articles ranging from "Dealing with Your Ex," and "Overcoming the Stigma of Being a Single Parent," to "Single Parent Profiles."

Despite the hard work, AAF's President Bethany Kahl said he would do it again.

Foreman, 67-2, rolling to another shot at title

LAS VEGAS (HSNS)—The Big Man just keeps on rolling.

George Foreman, 263 pounds of rippling mass packed behind his fists, moved a step closer to a heavyweight title shot in his reborn career with a quick-work second-round knockout of Brazilian Adilson Rodrigues.

The loquacious and lumbering Foreman, who spent 10 years building his girth as a preacher in Houston, stung Rodrigues with a left jab-right hook combination just over two minutes into the second round. Seconds later, Rodrigues was on the canvas, the victim of a powerful left hook.

Rodrigues was counted out, thus becoming the 22nd straight victim in Foreman's comeback career and

Big George says boxing fans in need of a 'real world champion' and he's looking to back his talk with a thundering left the 21st to be sent reeling with a KO.

Rodrigues, outweighed by 44 pounds, also became the seventh man to be knocked out by Foreman in either the first or second round.

"I didn't come here expecting a quick knockout," the 41-year-old Foreman said. "I was looking to stop him somewhere around the seventh."

But Rodrigues failed to protect himself in the second round as Foreman stalked him near the ropes, and before he knew what hit him, he was heading south.

"Being an Angelo Dundee fighter, I figured he would be tricky," Foreman said. "For sure, I expected Rodrigues to cover up more than he did."

As a celebrity-studded crowd watched in the outdoor stadium, Foreman stalked Rodrigues calmly and without expression before striking.

The first round was a feeling-out session, with Foreman patiently blocking Rodrigues' blows. Foreman finally landed a pair of effective left jabs late in the round, but two of the three ringside judges gave the round to Rodrigues.

It didn't appear the end of the fight was imminent at that point, but then Rodrigues waded into Foreman's combination. The dazed Brazilian never saw the punch that put him on his back.

Foreman connected on 39 of his 65 punches, while Rodrigues connected on 29 of 82.

He is 67-2 overall, and Foreman truly believes he can regain the heavyweight title he owned in 1973-74 before losing it to Muhammad Ali.

"People deserve to get a real world champion," he said. "My ultimate goal is to fight for the heavyweight championship of the world."

Rodrigues, whose vocal contingent of 300 Brazilian fans had nothing to cheer about, is now 36-4.

"I really expected more from Rodrigues," said Sugar Ray Leonard, who worked the fight for HBO.

So did Foreman. But these days, the Big Man's on a big roll.

Dome food prices skyling

Fans simmering

By RUDY PLATIEL
Toronto Globe and Mail

TORONTO — A simmering feud over SkyDome food prices between several box holders and the Stadium corporation has moved to the Ontario Supreme Court.

Four private SkyDome box holders have filed a suit against the Stadium Corp. of Ontario claiming damages because of exorbitant food prices.

A writ says the corporation and its caterer, Bitove Corp., have interfered with the enjoyment of the boxes by having the box holders searched for food when they enter and requiring them to buy food and beverages from the caterers at "three to four times" the cost. Robert Russell of the law firm Borden & Elliot, which represents holders of the four boxes, said his clients claim the costs of the boxes were not what they were originally led to believe and that the Stadium Corp. has breached the Competition Act.

The writ asks the court to find that the food prices "constitute an oppressive exploitation" and rule the clause requiring box holders to buy from stadium caterers void.

The suit was filed last week and comes after a year of negotiations between a group of box holders who formed Independent Skybox Holders Association. The plaintiffs are also seeking $1-million in damages for "tortious interference" and a permanent injunction prohibiting the corporation and the caterer from interfering with the boxholders.

The plaintiffs say that $1.5-million was paid for 10-year leases on two of the boxes, $1-million for a third and $2.25-million for the fourth. That entitled the box holders to two rows of seats outside the sliding doors and "possession of what was virtually a bare concrete shell," according to the writ.

"Fitting-up costs" for the boxes ran between $98,000 and $162,000 and box holders still had to buy seat tickets for each event, carry $5-million in insurance for each box and pay for "their own service or catering staff" at a cost of between $80 to $225 for each event. (SHNS)

Tyson must settle for less

LAS VEGAS — Monday was supposed to be the night undefeated, undisputed world champion Mike Tyson established the high ground as one of the best heavyweights in history by withstanding the calculated challenge of the young, accomplished and extremely dangerous Evander "The Real Deal" Holyfield.

Or not. In either case, the fight that was scheduled for Monday in Atlantic City, N.J., would have provided a correct and orderly decision by the division's best fighters, and that slice of the sports spectrum would have had something it rarely attains — common stability.

Tyson would have earned $20 million and Holyfield close enough to that figure that he could routinely avail himself to valet parking.

Of course, all that was before Tyson failed to lug his unfortunate indifference out of the way of a lightning bolt named Buster Douglas in February, and that threw the division into the mud.

Two fights here Saturday night, victories by Tyson and George Foreman against twin stiff Henry Tillman and Adilson Rodrigues, didn't so much as nudge the picture toward a final focus.

One of the obstacles to quick resolution — aside from Don King, Bob Arum, Tyson, Foreman, three or four sanctioning bodies, Steve Wynn, John Johnson, Donald Trump, HBO, Caesars Palace and probably only about 400 other entities including the wonderful legal system — has been the champion, Douglas, and the public's perception of him.

Douglas could have fought Holyfield Monday, with the winner free to do with Tyson, or even Foreman, as he would. But Buster said he preferred to hang out until the fall "to enjoy being champion for a while."

Your correct inference here is that Buster will not be enjoying it for more than another 10 rounds, whenever they might come. Douglas is spent energy.

Unless litigation dictates otherwise, Holyfield will take the title from Douglas Sept. 20 to resounding yawns from a fight public that more eagerly awaits the fate of the more compelling Tyson and the far more intriguing Foreman.

But if Douglas is spent energy, Foreman is the next closest thing, and no one realizes it better than Foreman.

"By the time Douglas wants to fight me I'll be an old man with a long gray beard," Foreman said.

Rowan said McGarr's fee is $250 an hour. She said the amount of his bill will not be known until the conclusion of the case.

The death penalty, if it were applied, would affect only the basketball program.
