WWII veteran leaves legacy

From left, Sidney Matthews, Bruce Davis and Bill Daun discuss scripture from the book of Revelation Wednesday morning at St. Peters United Church of Christ in Murphysboro. Bob Downey, who died June 3, attended the Bible studies regularly. "He had been coming here forever," Daun said. "He was one of our good close friends."

Carbondale resident had passion for service

When Carbondale lost Robert Downey, it lost more than a knowledgeable veteran of the last world war. It lost a champion for southern Illinois who dedicated his life to service from the time he enlisted in the navy to the day he died, several friends, family and others across the community said.

"Bob was one of our most valuable and valued members," said Post Commander David Conrad, who served with Downey for years at the Veterans of Foreign Wars post in Carbondale. "It will literally take three people to replace him."

Downey, a lifelong southern Illinois resident, died June 3 due to complications from surgery to remove a rare cancer. He was 85.

Downey's death has spurred numerous memorials and speeches throughout southern Illinois, from the Carbondale City Council meeting to a Flag Day ceremony given Monday.

In a speech at the Flag Day ceremony, U.S. District Judge J. Phil Gilbert of Benton remembered Downey as "one of the most patriotic people I have ever known."

"His love for his country and old glory were surpassed only by his love of God and family," Gilbert said in the speech. "If someone asked Bob to raise his hands, he would be holding the Bible in one and the American flag in the other."

Downey began his service career shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor, when he enlisted in the navy. He served aboard a landing craft support ship that was sunk during the battle of Okinawa in February 1945.

Like many veterans, Downey did not like to talk about his experiences during the war but was proud to serve his country, his wife Helen Downey said.

The two met at the First United Methodist Church in Carbondale shortly after his three-year military stint.

Murphysboro looks to expand

City drafts plans to claim Carbondale land

A pending boundary agreement between Carbondale and Murphysboro could move the line drawn between the two cities.

The Murphysboro City Council has decided to turn down a proposal from the Carbondale City Council to renew the agreement that Country Club Road is the boundary line between the cities, Murphysboro Mayor Ron Williams said. He said the council is working on an alternate proposal that would give Murphysboro room for expansion.

"We feel that we have our needs and the city of Murphysboro needs this opportunity to grow," Williams said.

"I was singing a solo and my girlfriend told me later that there was a guy, back here from the service going back to school, in church this morning and he heard you sing and wants to meet you," she said.

They met that night at a Methodist Youth Fellowship meeting in October 1946. By the next June, they were married. The two would have celebrated their 61-year anniversary Sunday.

After they married, the couple had two children and lived in Herrin, where Downey worked for Nabisco and taught Sunday school.

"His belief in God was always strong," said his daughter Karen Downey.

Downey stayed an active member of the Methodist church where he and his wife met. He attended church weekly and rarely missed a

It has been nearly eight months since the Carbondale City Council sent the renewal agreement to Murphysboro. The current line, on Country Club Road near the new Wal-Mart, has been the boundary for the past 25 years, having last been renewed in 2001.

Carbondale Mayor Brad Cole said he has not corresponded with anyone from Murphysboro on the matter and would not comment until there is an official response from the neighboring town. Other officials directed questions to Cole.

The new proposal would allow Murphysboro to claim land five miles east of the current boundary and also includes the possibility of expanding north and south, Williams said. The Murphysboro City Council plans to vote on the measure at its July 14

BRIEF Former Chancellor Treviño becomes Florida dean

Former Chancellor Fernando Treviño was appointed dean of the Robert Stempel School of Public Health at Florida International University in May, according to FIU's Web site.

Treviño accepted a tenured professorship at SIU School of Medicine after President Glenn Poshard demoted him in April for failing to perform basic job duties.

He is currently due for an arbitration hearing to seek full relief of his contract, which promises Treviño $290,000 annually until 2010.

Treviño was unable to be reached for comment, but his secretary said he would not be in the office until early July, though his FIU contract took effect June 1.

New director would aid in enrollment crisis

Second candidate interviewed for admissions director

Jeff Engelhardt
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIUC took another step toward finding an administrator to help conquer its biggest challenge Wednesday. Instability in the administrative positions in the admissions and enrollment departments has plagued the university for the better part of three years. To help combat the problem, a search committee brought in Courtney Kohn, the second of three candidates for director of undergraduate admissions, for an on-campus interview. Interim Director of Undergraduate Admissions James Carl said the new admissions director, whose primary focus would be recruitment, would face scrutiny because of the university's continuously declining enrollment numbers. The university has lost nearly 5,000 students since its peak year in 1991. Fall 2007 enrollment was 20,983. Administrators have said the losses affect all aspects of the university, from student fees to facility maintenance. Kohn said recruitment is important because students have more options than ever before. She said it is harder to compete with other universities because students are applying to 10 or more colleges and one impression could make or break the student's decision.

Carl said the efforts of the admissions director could not produce a magic fix without help from other administrators.

"Everybody gets in to that mindset thinking 'Here comes the white knight to bring great change to the world,'" Carl said. "It's just an office that needs to be run. Yes, it is an important responsibility, but there is nothing supernatural about it."

Carl said retention is just as important as recruitment.

SIU lost 671 of 2,222 first-time, full-time freshmen from fall 2006 to fall 2007.

Kohn, who graduated from SIUC in 1996, presented ideas she developed and executed as dean of admissions and director of undergraduate admissions for Robert Morris College during the last eight years.

Unlike the first candidate, Patsy Reynolds, Kohn directed her mock presentation towards transfer students instead of prospective freshmen. Kohn worked on SIU's Two Plus Two plan as a graduate assistant.

The Two Plus Two plan allows students working on an associate's degree at John A. Logan College to easily transfer to SIU to work towards a bachelor's degree.

"I have always had a soft spot for transfer students," Kohn said. "It's where I started and had success. We had a 20 percent growth (at Robert Morris) in transfers in two years."

Kohn's ideas for change included an instant chat available for prospective and current students and using social network Web sites as a retention tool.

Because Robert Morris is a private university with a small alumni base, Kohn said enrollment was the sole moneymaker. She said changes could be made quickly at Robert Morris because it is a private institution.

The changes she implemented exceeded the goal set for graduate student enrollment by 200 percent when she first took the position in December of 2007.

Kohn said it is important to expand the way universities recruit students electronically.

"Students in this generation want information now," Kohn said. "Students are the shoppers now so it is important to change with the times."

Victoria Valle, assistant vice chancellor for enrollment management, acknowledged changes occur more slowly in a public university but said a new director would play an important role in reversing the enrollment decline.

Valle heads a new strategic enrollment management committee that will include the new director as one of the members.

"This committee is going to have people from all parts of the university," Valle said. "That's how we are going to work towards fixing this problem, with people coming together giving feedback."

Rance Larsen, the third and final candidate for director of undergraduate admissions, is scheduled to visit the campus June 24.

Jeff Engelhardt can be reached at 536-3311 ext. 259 or jengel@siu.edu.

Courtney Kohn, a candidate for the director of undergraduate admissions, delivers a presentation to SIU employees Wednesday at Woody Hall. Kohn has held six different admission and enrollment positions at Roger Morris College over eight years.

Archaeologists unearth ancient stone tools

Liz Mitchell
McCLATCHY TRIBUNE

HILTON HEAD, S.C. — A local man has unearthed two ancient stone tools in an archaeological dig in Allendale County, S.C., a rare find that could provide more information about how early Americans lived.

And if more evidence proves the artifact is a new type of tool and one archaeologists haven't found before, it could be named after Matthew Carey of Hilton Head Island.

The 22-year-old University of South Carolina anthropology major volunteered at the Topper Site where USC archaeologist Dr. Albert Goodyear has been excavating for 10 years. Carey found the tools on June 8, the last day of the 2008 dig.

Though it's Goodyear's project, new finds are typically named after their discoverers.

That would make Carey the second local resident to earn name recognition by contributing a new find at the dig.

In 1998 — thanks to Beaufort County resident David Topper — Goodyear found artifacts at this ancient rock quarry near the Savannah River that indicate humans lived here 37,000 years earlier than originally thought. Goodyear named the site "Topper" after the resident who found it.

The site is one of a handful of excavations across the country where evidence is being uncovered that could rewrite America's history.

So far, there have been two sets of artifacts found at Topper:

— Stone flakes and tools that date to the Clovis people, which history books say are the first Americans who arrived here 13,000 years ago via a land bridge from Asia.

— A fire pit that contained plant remains dates back to 50,000 years ago, which could help prove Goodyear's theory about when humans lived here.

Goodyear believes the site was a factory for the Clovis people, where they came to make tools.

The new find could show it was also a site used by the Taylor people, who lived at least 1,500 years after their Clovis ancestors in an era called the Early Archaic period.

In the dirt, 4 inches above Clovis artifacts, Carey found the tools dating to 11,000 years ago that could have been used as knives or projectile points for hunting.

"When we dug them up, I got a good look and thought, 'Yeah, it's a point,'" Carey said. "The next day I was brushing over the area next to it and I uncovered the exact same thing 5 centimeters to the right of it."

The tools are pointed with straight sharp edges. They are unlike those typically found from the Taylor people, known for making pointed tools with jagged edges that would have been attached

Bush to Congress: Embrace energy exploration now

H. Josef Hebert
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — With gasoline topping $4 a gallon, President Bush urged Congress on Wednesday to lift its long-standing ban on offshore oil and gas drilling, saying the United States needs to increase its energy production. Democrats quickly rejected the idea.

"There is no excuse for delay," the president said in a statement in the Rose Garden. With the presidential election just months away, Bush made a pointed attack on Democrats, accusing them of obstructing his energy proposals and blaming them for high gasoline costs. His proposal echoed a call by Republican presidential candidate John McCain to open the Continental Shelf for exploration.

"Families across the country are looking to Washington for a response," Bush said.

Congressional Democrats were quick to reject the push for lifting the drilling moratorium, saying oil companies already have 68 million acres offshore waters under lease that are not being developed.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi called Bush's proposals "another page from (an)... energy policy that was literally written by the oil industry — give away more public resources."

Sen. Barack Obama, the Democrats' presumptive presidential nominee, rejected lifting the drilling moratorium that has been supported by a succession of presidents for nearly two decades.

"This is not something that's going to give consumers short-term relief and it is not a long-term solution to our problems with fossil fuels generally and oil in particular," said Obama. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, lumping Bush with McCain, accused them of staging a "cynical campaign ploy" that won't help lower energy prices.

"Despite what President Bush, John McCain and their friends in the oil industry claim, we cannot drill our way out of this problem," Reid said. "The math is simple: America has just three percent of the world's oil reserves, but Americans use a quarter of its oil."

White House spokesman Tony Fratto retorted: "Anyone out there saying that something can be done overnight, or in a matter of months, to deal with high gasoline prices is trying to fool people. There is no tool in the toolbox out there that will lower gas prices overnight, or in weeks, or probably not even in months."

Bush said offshore drilling could yield up to 18 billion barrels of oil over time, although it would take years for production to start. Bush also said offshore drilling would take pressure off prices over time.

“Despite what President Bush, John McCain and their friends in the oil industry claim, we cannot drill our way out of this problem.”

Obama says bin Laden must not be a martyr

Nedra Pickler
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama said Wednesday he would bring Osama bin Laden to justice in a way that wouldn't allow the terrorist mastermind to become a martyr, but he may be killed if the U.S. government finds him.

"First of all, I think there is an executive order out on Osama bin Laden's head," Obama said at a news conference. "And if I'm president, and we have the opportunity to capture him, we may not be able to capture him alive."

He said he wouldn't discuss what approach he would take to bring bin Laden to justice if he were apprehended. But he said the Nuremberg trials for the prosecution of Nazi leaders are an inspiration because the victors acted to advance universal principles and set a tone for the creation of an international order.

"What would be important would be for us to do it in a way that allows the entire world to understand the murderous acts that he's engaged in and not to make him into a martyr, and to assure that the United States government is abiding by basic conventions that would strengthen our hand in the broader battle against terrorism," Obama said.

Obama was questioned about bin Laden after he met with a new team of national security advisers. The meeting came after rival John McCain's campaign said Obama had a pre-9/11 mind-set for promoting criminal trials for terrorists.

"I refuse to be lectured on national security by people who are responsible a the most disastrous set of foreign policy decisions in the recent history of the United States," Obama said in opening remarks that in part referred to the Iraq war.

ISRAEL

Rockets, airstrikes hit hours before Israel-Hamas truce

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian militants fired 50 rockets and mortars toward Israel on Wednesday, and Israel responded with airstrikes in Gaza just hours before a truce was to take effect, illustrating how fragile the cease-fire between Israel and Hamas would be.

In another diplomatic initiative, Israel called on neighboring Lebanon to open peace negotiations — an overture that was quickly rejected by Lebanon's prime minister.

WASHINGTON

Government warns more levees may overflow

WASHINGTON (AP) — As many as 30 more levees may overflow along the Mississippi River from Burlington, Iowa, down to St. Louis, the government said Wednesday. Twenty levees already have been topped by flood waters this week, the Army Corps of Engineers said. Twenty to 30 other levees could overflow if sandbagging efforts fail to raise the height of the structures. The levees in danger protect rural, industrial and agricultural areas, not heavily populated towns. The levees protecting large towns are not as at risk of overflowing, officials said.

POLITICS

McCain reveals plan for reliance on foreign oil

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Sen. John McCain called Wednesday for the construction of 45 new nuclear reactors by 2030 and pledged $2 billion a year in federal funds "to make clean coal a reality," measures designed to reduce dependence on foreign oil.

In a second straight day of campaigning devoted to the energy issue, the Republican presidential nominee-in-waiting also said the only time Democratic rival Barack Obama voted for a tax cut it was a "break for the oil companies."

ALASKA

Missing hiker calls her mother, says she and friend are safe, crews still looking

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — One of two backpackers missing nearly a week in Denali National Park and Preserve called her mother and said they were safe Wednesday, but helicopters sent out after authorities tracked the signal did not immediately find them. The park dispatched two helicopters to pick up Erica Nelson and Abby Flantz, but three hours later they had not been located.

OUR WORD

Struggling for stability

With several permanent directorships and dean positions empty, it seems like SIU would be better suited to stand for “Southern Interim University.”

The top tier of the university’s administrative structure lends any outsider insight to this fact. Former Chancellor Fernando Treviño left the university in mid-March and interim Provost Don Rice stepped in. He fulfilled both duties until SIU President Glenn Poshard appointed former Board of Trustees member Sam Goldman as interim Chancellor.

Unfilled positions include deans of the Colleges of Engineering and Mass Communication and Media Arts. Directors of the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute, Honors Program and Admissions are also filled with temporary help.

Now, just two months after he came out of retirement to assume the university’s highest position, Goldman is taking on responsibilities beyond those his predecessor couldn’t handle — he wants to be directly involved with searches to fill the empty positions.

Goldman said his higher education background and 23-year relationship with the university lend him unique understanding of the types of leaders it needs.

Rice, who previously had authority over the searches, has said Goldman wanted to involve himself directly in the process and address the board’s concerns about a lack of diversity in the university’s top positions.

These sound like good intentions, but right now Goldman is another in a long line of administrators who have attempted to offer a quick fix to a rapidly growing problem.

We need stability. The administration has certain positions that hold specific expectations for the people chosen to fill them.

When these responsibilities are not carried out — or, in this case, passed around between officials — duties are not distributed evenly and problems quickly arise.

This could be the reason for the high turnover rate in some of the university’s highest positions. People who should be held in the highest regard are merely viewed as temporary authority figures.

Shuffling responsibilities among the top members of university hierarchy has proven similar to placing Band-Aids on a wound desperately in need of sutures.

Goldman’s background suggests he could be the man to provide solutions, but this university has been disappointed before. No one should know this better than someone who has Goldman’s history with SIU.

We hope his energy is equal to his experience.

POLES APART OF THE WHOLE

The gays are getting married

dsoliwon@gmail.com

The gays have been having an A to B conversation for centuries, and California is finally C’ing its way into it.

If you haven’t heard already, new gender-neutral marriage licenses using “Party A” and “Party B” instead of “bride” and “groom” are flying out of city halls like wedding confetti since late Monday.

In the last two days, the largest populous state has issued twice as many marriage licenses — about 2,700 — than it ever has in a typical June week, according to a survey by the Los Angeles Times.

What’s more? Unlike Massachusetts, the only other state to legalize gay marriage, California, is opening its gaydom up to anyone in the country — there is no residency requirement for its marriage licenses.

In the words of myself about five times a day, it’s about flippin’ time.

As the California Supreme Court ruling explained, the ban on same-sex marriage violates the “fundamental constitutional right to form a family relationship.”

More and more, men who love men and women who love women are finally starting to have a right that has been reserved for pairings of the opposite sex —half of which have left their own mark in history by giving the U.S. a divorce rate of nearly 50 percent.

You have to admit, despite the discrimination
we’ve faced,
we’ve managed to maintain a pretty cheery attitude.

Here’s the point: If any two people want to give it a shot, why shouldn’t they? Of course gays should have the same opportunity to get it wrong (or right) as the rest of the world.

After all, it’s safe to say we’ve paid our dues. Homosexuality has been around since the beginning of time, and many have been tortured, shunned and killed for that reason for just as long.

My word of advice to the objectors is this: If you just set aside the differences you have about sharing your stuffy institution, you would probably realize that gays are capable of bringing much joy to your lives. You have to admit, despite the discrimination we’ve faced, we’ve managed to maintain a pretty cheery attitude.

Life is too short for fruitless debate — why not consider the pros of having a little more gay in your life?

First of all, there’s the matter-of-fact truth a gay man will tell you about a pair of cheek-strangling slacks you just can’t part with.

The lesbian couple next door is twice as likely to have a wide range of extra batteries should you run out.

Economically speaking, the ruling will surely fuel a frenzy of gay travelers to the West Coast. If you’re in the airline business, consider it a stimulus package from us to you.

Most importantly, Ellen DeGeneres is planning her own wedding. Her comedic material should be inspired by a rejuvenated lover’s high for at least another 10 years. That’s that much longer daytime television will be worth watching!

Come on — don’t you want to say, “Yay for the gays!” just once?

Meet the Editorial Board

Diana Soliwon
Editor in Chief

I knew when I signed on to oversee the DAILY EGYPTIAN newsroom for the next couple months I’d be sacrificing a chunk of my social life, a consistent tan and the likelihood of catching Tila on time.

I also knew I wouldn’t want it any other way. This is my fifth semester at the DE and one of my last as an undergraduate at SIUC. My contribution to this editorial board will reflect the pride I take in this learning experience, paper and profession.

And, of course, my unparalleled humor.

Alexis Boudreau
Voices Editor

I’m a junior starting my fourth-and-a-half semester at the DAILY EGYPTIAN and my first go as voices editor. Here’s to hoping that you take full advantage of this forum and let your words be heard. In turn, I hope you also read ours. I value strong opinions, varied perspectives, halfway-decent grammar and blueberries.

Allison Petty
Campus Editor

This is my third semester at the DAILY EGYPTIAN and first as campus editor. Reporting is the only job I have ever really loathed. It is also the only job with which I have ever truly fallen in love. I hope to bring the same zeal to the editorial decision-making process. And if all else fails, I brew a mean cup of coffee.

Sean McGahan
City Editor

A wise man recently told me that the downfall of my generation will be the inability of its members to think for themselves.

If we blindly eat up the company line, we’re likely to end up with a case of salmonella of the soul. My goal on the editorial board is to consider the ways in which decisions made in this city, state, nation and planet affect everyone from Walter V. Wendler to Winston T. Bagel Man.

Brandon Augsborg
Sports Editor

I am a 22-year-old senior from Batavia with a journalism major and a sociology minor. I have worked at the DAILY EGYPTIAN since the spring of 2006. I am currently the sports editor and night circulation manager, but have also been the city editor, a city reporter and a copy editor during my time at the paper. I am set to graduate in August.

Paul Flowers
Newsroom Representative

Being welcomed into the newsroom as the only non-MCMA or journalism major was a shock; being selected for the Ed board was another. As this world turns and the time burns, people turn to the media for the things they learn. Now, working with the media is a bittersweet feeling. My hope is to bring peace, love and prosperous feelings. Someone has to do it and it might as well be me. I’ll help the paper spread the truth.

MISSION STATEMENT

The DAILY EGYPTIAN, the student-run newspaper of Southern Illinois University Carbondale, is committed to being a trusted source of news, information, commentary and public discourse, while helping readers understand the issues affecting their lives.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

“ I know he died,
but I don’t want change.”

A villager in Voinesti
in Romania, where residents reelected the dead mayor, Neculai Ivascu, to prevent his living rival from winning

SALUKI SUMMER DAYS ARE HERE!

Saluki Summer Days are here and we would like to extend a little Southern Hospitality to faculty, staff, their families, friends, and neighbors. It is never too early for you as a parent, family member, or friend to introduce someone you know, someone ready to begin planning his or her college career, to Southern. If you know someone in high school who is thinking about college, help us show off what we have to offer at one of these fun, free, summer events.

For more information, or to register, please contact us at 618-453-7141 or admissions.siu.edu

Today's Birthday — (06-19-08)
Be fiscally responsible this year, and you'll make great advances. Others will be impressed with what you accomplish, even if you hide your wealth. You don't have to show it off; they'll know.
To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 7 — Produce what's required quickly, and you'll make a fantastic impression. This doesn't bring you any more money yet, but if you keep it up, it will.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 7 — As you try new things, you find allies you didn't expect. There are many folks who share your values, whom you haven't even met. Get outside your box and discover a lot of great new friends.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 6 — Put away more than you think you'll need. If you must have a treat, choose something that's affordable. Don't spend your savings on it. Enjoy a delicious morsel thoroughly.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is a 7 — You have several offers of help. Choose the one with the most experience and the best sense of humor. Might as well have fun while you're producing results.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is a 7 — The workload has increased exponentially. Luckily, you're imaginative under pressure. A friend has a good idea, too. Together, you'll find a way to solve the problem.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 7 — Schedule more time for cuddling. You and a person you love won't have to talk things over much. You already know what to do.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Today is a 7 — Don't let other people's demands tear you limb from limb, emotionally. You're more apt to have the winning idea if you keep your wits about you.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Today is a 7 — It's getting easier to untangle financial messes. Look again at paperwork you've had trouble understanding. You'll even understand the fine print.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 7 — It's a good day to go shopping for household items. Real estate itself falls into that category. Look for fixer-uppers, and save a bundle. Get stuff that's structurally sound.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 7 — A lot of the logjams are breaking up, seemingly all on their own. Truth is, your continual picking at them has done more good than harm. Congratulations.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is a 7 — There's a financial surprise coming. You might find a coupon that hasn't expired ocr a deal on something you need ... or lose your wallet. It could go either way. Pay attention.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 7 — Others appreciate your talents more than you realize. You're building a collection of fans who think you're wonderful. They're right, you are. Get used to it

'Weeds'

New episodes air at 9 p.m. Mondays on Showtime

When a sitcom begins to lose viewership or garners a bit of negative press, the program's writers always seem to do one of two things: have one of the show's children sneak a monkey (it's always a monkey) in the house, or throw a guest star into the mix for a couple of episodes.

While Showtime's third best series, "Weeds," hasn't lost a great deal of viewers or slipped much in popularity, the show's third season did mark a dip in quality.

After three seasons of being stuck in suburbia, Nancy Botwin (Mary-Louise Parker) and her single-mom, pot-dealing ways had exhausted its send-up of the white middle-class that had grabbed audiences at the beginning.

Monday's season four debut was without a monkey. However, "Weeds" did introduce a big name guest star.

Comedic legend Albert Brooks got all worked up on the small screen for the first time in years as Lenny Botwin, Nancy's father-in-law.

He makes his first appearance at his mother's house in Ren Mar, where the Botwins fled after wildfires torched their home and neighborhood. Nancy Botwin used the fire as a way for her and her sons (Alexander Gould, Hunter Parish) and brother-in-law (Justin Kirk) to sever ties in Agrestic, where police have cracked down on the marijuana trade. However, Lenny Botwin is less than welcoming as he has yet to forgive her for not being Jewish and marrying his son.

Brooks' Lenny might be getting up there in age, but he's still full of vitriol and biting sarcasm towards his shiksa daughter-in-law. His screen time is short, but he makes for the most snarky dialogue in the episode — and his exchanges with Parker showed true chemistry.

While the Botwins deal with dear old granddad, Nancy's move down the coast was not purely to evade police snooping around Agrestic. She's moving onto bigger things, like bringing the weed into America — not just selling it to bored middle-aged white guys.

The new wrinkle in setting coupled with Brooks' arrival has breathed some life into a show that was on the verge of flat lining.

College of Education gets new leadership

Justin Kabbes
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The College of Education and Human Services has bid farewell to one associate dean and welcomed another.

Associate Dean Brad Colwell began his new job Monday. Former Associate Dean Norma Ewing worked at the university for 30 years and held the position of associate dean for the past decade. Colwell faces the challenge of filling Ewing's shoes and leading a college whose enrollment has recently declined.

"My task is not only getting the students here, but while they're here, making sure their stay is a good one," Colwell said.

The number of students in College of Education and Human Services has dropped from roughly 3,200 to about 3,000 from fall 2005 to 2007.

The new associate dean said he wants to go the extra mile to attract more students. Colwell plans to visit Illinois high schools to market the college, but said his focus extends beyond recruitment.

The college needs to bring in more faculty members and prepare for reaccreditation, Colwell said.

Though he does not expect to experience problems with the accreditation committee, Colwell said it usually takes a long time to prepare for their visit.

"I mean, literally, it will take hundreds and hundreds of man-hours," Colwell said. "We have to present lots of data regarding student achievements, information about faculty, I mean anything you can think of that will show how proficient our ... college is."

Colwell was born in Bluford, which is 10 miles east of Mount Vernon. Colwell said he is prepared to take on the duties of associate dean because he has worked his way up from an entry-level professor position during the past 12 years. Before he came to SIUC, Colwell practiced educational law. He said this experience gives him a more analytical perspective.

Erin Wilson said she hopes the new leadership will improve the college's enrollment.

"Being from around here, you know, enrollment is important to my community as a whole," said the senior from Murphysboro studying elementary education.

THOMAS BARKER ~ DAILY EGYPTIAN

The new Dean of the College of Education and Human Services Brad Colwell works at a desk in the dean's office of the Wham Education Building Wednesday, less than 72 hours after taking up the new position.

"Economically, the more students we get down here, the stronger the surrounding area is in a lot of ways."

Former Associate Dean Norma Ewing plans to leave the university June 30. During her time as associate dean, Ewing oversaw an increasingly diverse student body. From 2003 to 2007, the percentage of black students in the college grew from roughly 10 percent to about 17 percent.

Ewing did not say if she would retire or find another job elsewhere.

"I don't have anything I'm ready to announce," she said.

Saluki Insider

Tiger Woods said Wednesday on his Web site that he will have season-ending knee surgery to repair a ruptured ACL sometime in the near future. He also said he has a double stress fracture of his left tibia. These announcements come just days after Woods won the U.S. Open — playing 91 holes in five days. Woods clearly has more guts than a southern-style fish fry, but what is the gutsiest performance ever by an athlete?

BRANDON AUGSBURG
bauggie@siu.edu

The toughest athletic performance I've ever seen was the second vault by Kerri Strug at the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. She destroyed her ankle on her first attempt, sucked it up and stuck her second landing like a pro with the whole world watching to secure the gold medal for the U.S. Tiger is tough, but Kerri is a beast.

It was only a small-time World Touring Cup Championship race back in 2006. But for former two-time Champ Car Champion Alex Zanardi it was much more than that. The race was held in Oschersleben, Germany and was Zanardi's first win since being out of racing for almost half a decade after a horrific crash that almost killed him. It was an impressive feat in itself. But what made this win that much more special for Zanardi was that he did it with prosthetic legs.

SEAN MCGAHAN

He had already overcome racism, doubting high school coaches, the death of his father, a flop in baseball and serious gambling debts. But Michael Jordan was not quite the legend we know today until he overcame food poisoning. His Airness squashed the loyal attempts of Salt Lake City cooks when he lit up the Jazz for 38 points in a crucial Game 5 victory in 1997. If the current Bulls could play like a sickly Jordan, maybe Chicago fans wouldn't feel so ill watching them.

Cristiano Ronaldo this summer, so I'm not exactly sure who he thinks will fill the midfield void. If Guardiola is already unsatisfied with Messi's defense, I'm sure the coach won't let him play the wing, which means a huge drop in talent on the outside.

Whatever happens with the squad before the season starts, Guardiola just better know what he is doing. The Spanish fans won't give him very much leeway, especially when he is dismantling the team.

At least he knows not to set the bar too high, saying, "I can't and won't promise titles from the first day because I think that would be a mistake."

At this rate he might as well not promise any titles for the next decade or so.

Pep Guardiola, you are in my doghouse.

Obergoenner named academic All-American

Golfer earns third team honor

Ian Preston
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU golf followers know junior Todd Obergoenner can get it done on the course. What many don't know is that the senior is just as good at hitting the books as he is golf balls.

Obergoenner was recently named to the ESPN Academic All-America At-Large Third Team. His grade point average of 4.0 for the year tied him with three other All-Americans for the highest GPA on the third team with the 19 others who received the honor.

"It's really an honor," Obergoenner said. "You don't come into college expecting something like this."

To be eligible for the award, an athlete must be on the varsity team and maintain at least a GPA of 3.2 on a 4.0 scale. They must also be at least a sophomore and nominated by his or her university's sports information director.

The at-large part of the academic All-America program is mainly for the lesser spectator sports such as fencing, gymnastics, hockey, lacrosse and golf, among others. Obergoenner is the first athlete in school history to be named to any of the three teams in the at-large category by ESPN.

"It really is a great honor for him," men's golf coach Leroy Newton said. "He's one of those guys on the team van when we're traveling always working on something for class."

Obergoenner isn't the only SIU men's golfer who's a book worm. The entire team has earned a cumulative GPA of 3.5. It is a fact Newton does not take lightly as he has made sure to put academics first and foremost on his squad.

"The athletic department in general has really stressed academics a lot more than when I went down here," Newton said. "We've really become a good university for student athletes to get a good education."

Obergoenner is currently studying exercise science. He plans on graduating next spring despite transferring from the University of Kentucky and changing his major from chemistry.

The native of Cape Girardeau, Mo., was also named to the Missouri Valley Conference Scholar First Team and ESPN Academic All-District V At-Large First Team — another first for a SIU athlete.

"I just tried to put as much effort and hard work into my academics as much as I do my athletics, and somehow I've managed to balance the two. To be named an academic All-American is an absolute honor," Obergoenner said. "To see all that hard work pay off is really incredible."

The SIU golf team finished second at the MVC Championship earlier this year — tying the best finish in school history. The Salukis will be a legitimate contender for the title next year when Obergoenner

15 MINUTES WITH ...

Christian Cornelius

Ian Preston
DAILY EGYPTIAN

No doubt SIU basketball player Christian Cornelius is one of the toughest guys on the team. He's come back from two season-ending knee surgeries that for many others would signal the end of a basketball career. Cornelius had another big test ahead of him when the DAILY EGYPTIAN caught up with him for an onslaught of some tough questions in another edition of 15 minutes.

DAILY EGYPTIAN: Was there ever a point in your rehab where you thought about just giving up on basketball?

CHRISTIAN CORNELIUS: There were lots of times actually. It was tough, but I decided that I really wanted to stick it out, if for nothing else, because I had close friends on the team. Coach Lowery had really done a lot for me over the past three years and he gave me the opportunity to come back to the team. I'm glad because I love basketball and I love being in Carbondale.

DE: What was the moment like when you stepped out onto that court for the first time completely healthy?

CC: It was like a weight being lifted off my shoulders. It was emotional. My parents were there. My mom was crying. I didn't want it to be such a big deal because I knew I was back on the court, but I knew it was a long road ahead of me if I really wanted to get back to the point where I was before the injuries.

DE: What's an example of something that makes Coach Lowery such a cool guy? Because it seems like anytime fans see him, they see the scowl and him yelling all up and down the court.

CC: I'm sure I could call him right now and ask him if I could come over and go swimming in his pool and have Mrs. Lowery cook me some food and I'm sure it would happen. It's just things like that. When you commit to SIU he takes you in as one of his own.

DE: Do you give Carlton Fay a lot of flak for looking like a California surfer?

CC: (laughing) Some people do. I don't because I'm living with him right now over the summer, but I don't say anything to him about it.

DE: Well he is quite a bit bigger than you.

CC: (laughing) Yeah that is true. No, he's a cool kid, and yeah, he's got that blonde hair and that big body and he's got that pretty boy look going for him. I don't say anything though because he gets enough of that from the team and coaches. They all say he's got no problem getting girls.

DE: What did you think about the dance Nick Evans was doing when he was introduced at last season's Midnight Madness? Are you guys going to get him dance lessons?

CC: I don't know what he was doing with that one. Nick is a different type of kid. He has his moments more often than not. He's always going to do goofy stuff like that, but he works hard on the court and that's all that really matters.

DE: So what do you like to do with your free time?

CC: Sleep. It really wears on you. I also like to go back home or chill and play Playstation 3.

DE: What game have you been playing lately?

CC: NBA 2k8. I just beat Grand Theft Auto 4, so I've been on my NBA 2k8, but when Madden comes out, I'll be on that for a while.

DE: Are you one of those guys who likes to create yourself in the games and make yourself a superstar?

CC: No, I used to do that when I was younger but I grew out of that stage.

DE: But if you did what attributes would you give yourself?

CC: Not a good knee, I'll tell you that. I don't know though. I'd probably make myself a small forward with a decent jumping ability.

DE: So who's the best gamer on the team?

CC: Right now, probably Kevin Dillard, from what I've seen. Matt Shaw was a big video game head but he's not on the team anymore. But Kevin has been over here beating everybody.

Barca Blunder

Brandon Augsburg
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Barcelona introduced Pep Guardiola as their first-team coach Tuesday, and almost immediately, he started shaking things up for the Spanish soccer powerhouse.

At his introductory press conference, the 37-year-old former Barcelona captain said, "All of the players in the first-team squad last season are of a very high level. But with the technical secretary we are forming a squad and Deco, Ronaldinho and Eto'o are not in our minds."

What, what, what?

Those three mega, super, ultra stars don't fit into your system?

All three are headliners and still right smack dab in the middle of their prime. Ronaldinho's production has dropped over the past two seasons, but his ball striking and shooting make him indispensable for any team on the planet. Deco is in direct competition with budding star Lionel Messi, but please Guardiola, you're the coach: find a spot for both of them. Moving Eto'o might be the only move that makes sense because he doesn't work well when he is not the focal point of the attack.

OK Guardiola, you've rocked the boat a little. Now impress me with your plan to move forward without them.

He said he plans to keep Thierry Henry, who had a lackluster first season for Barcelona, as the main attacker. Then Guardiola busted out Messi, probably the only superstar he'll have left this season, saying, "He [Messi] must feel part of the group and feel that when other teams score against us, it is partly his fault."

I watched Messi play for his national squad — Argentina — against the U.S. a few weeks ago, and all I saw was a man on a mission. He didn't score any goals, as the game ended in a 0-0 tie, but man, did that kid play defense. And now Guardiola has the audacity to rip Messi for focusing on scoring goals. The rookie coach ought to take a step back and think a little more before he keeps ripping his players in the media.

By letting Giovanni Dos Santos leave for the Premier League and by seemingly shopping Ronaldinho around, Guardiola is leaving the left side of his midfield wide open. He has already said he won't pursue
