A Library: Many Things -Plus a Special Freedom

By Floyd H. Stein

Freedom to read is important to Ralph E. McCoy. With a book collection at the 900,000 mark, he has a special interest in such matters. Actually, the volumes aren't his. He's director of Southern Illinois University Libraries and has strong feelings about freedom of the press and of speech.

"We don't lock up anything to keep it away from people," he says, "Our shelves are full of controversial materials—I hope."

His collection has grown from 190,000 volumes in 1957 to the 900,000 figure as a result of vigorous book-buying activities to meet the needs of SIU students on the graduate and undergraduate levels, as well as for scholarly research.

Some materials are kept "behind the counter" in protective custody, though. That's to insure they'll be available to those who must use them.

McCoy describes them as "sensitive items." They are materials that seem to disappear or are mutilated about as fast as they're put on the shelves. Included are volumes dealing with abnormal sex practices.

"Since you can find these at corner drugstores," McCoy says, "it's silly to try to keep them away from people using the libraries."

Besides, he is convinced students are discriminating and "capable of making selections of materials they want to read, from what is available."

But there are materials that are not in the least bit controversial or "sensitive" that can't be kept on the open shelves. That's because some of these, too, have a habit of disappearing or being torn.

They include cook books, sports handbooks and Digest of Books. The digest seems to be the most troublesome, appealing to students who have to submit book reports.

Then there are the expensive, irreplaceable collections in the Rare Book Room of Morris Library. But these too are made available under certain conditions.

Keeping some materials out of reach—but still available—"is a matter of common sense, not ideology," says McCoy.

The library collections concentrate in certain areas and are contributing to the stature of the University as a center of learning and research.

In the area of literature, emphasis is being placed on 20th Century American and British works.

Represented in two notable collections are manuscripts of some 300 American and British avant-garde writers, members of the "expatriate group who lived and worked in Paris between the World Wars.

In one collection, besides books and "little magazines," there are numerous letters, manuscripts, diaries, photographs and paintings from such writers as Richard Aldington, Maxwell Bodenheim, Kay Boyle, Hatt Crane, Harry Durrell, Ford Maddox Ford, D. H. Lawrence.

La Universidad en la América Latina

En la mayoría de las naciones latinoamericanas los meses de febrero y marzo marcan el comienzo del año académico universitario. Casi todas trabajan a base de un sistema de semestres, y el año termina hacia fines de noviembre o principios de diciembre. De ordinario los cursos son de un año y los exámenes finales vienen al final del curso. Un examen semestral se administra algunas veces hacia fines de junio.

Las universidades de la América Latina siguen en general un plan de estudios más semanal al frances que al de Estados Unidos, Alemania o Inglaterra. Hasta hace poco las enseñanzas profesionales y la carrera de medicina se administran al mismo tiempo que la licenciatura. More Than Just Books and Shelves

Room Revives
19th Century

Away from the paths of book shelves and study tables in Morris Library is a room that is the only place in the building that is not in modern, 20th Century decor.

The tone of the room is set by a walnut wood carving of Abraham Lincoln that stands outside the imposing white portal behind which is a touch of the historical past.

Above broad double doors is a small, unimposing sign outside the imposing white building that is not in modern, 20th Century decor.

You'll see a walnut bookcase and a Victorian hall tree from the home in Washington, D.C., of William P. Dole, commissioner of Indian affairs in the Lincoln administration.

President Lincoln is known to have been a visitor in the Dole home and may possibly have hung his hat on the hall tree or taken a book from the case.

There is an inlaid cherry chest of drawers made by Thomas Lincoln, father of the president, which is considered the most beautiful of all Thomas Lincoln furniture.

There's a walnut desk used by Daniel Baldwin Parkinson, fourth president of SIU between 1898 and 1913, as well as two tables that are pieces of furniture used in the president's office.

Hanging on the walls are several period paintings, including a landscape by George Innes and a Lincoln portrait by Alban J. Conant of St. Louis, done in 1865 presumably from a sketch of the president.

Another Lincoln portrait of interest is one by Edward Dal ton Marchant, Philadelphia artist who died in 1887. A note on the back of the painting states, "Mr. Marchant told me in his studio, Filbert near 17th, that this portrait was made from life."

Library Tapes Textbooks
So the Blind May 'Read'

Among the tens of thousands of books and tapes in Morris Library not every one can read.

There are some who are physically handicapped. They are the sightless.

These people need help in keeping up with their reading. They get it in a cooperative effort by the library and a group of local women.

The women, members of the Jewish Women's Club and other volunteers, record on tape textbooks that the sightless may "read."

The Audio-Visual Department has tape recordings of some 50 texts that if played continuously would take about 117 days to complete. That's almost twice as long as the present winter quarter.

The tapes range from 4 to 67 tapes for each text recorded, and each tape requires two hours to play through.

The recorded subject matters include advertising, business, philosophy, economics, psychology, chemistry, biology, and more. A text that requires 67 tapes or 134 hours to playback is "Our Heritage of World Heritage."

There are the book recording project was started several years ago, initially as a small program that grew to 10 books.

The women expressed interest in the program and offered their services. The library provides them the texts, tapes and a recorder if the reading is done here. But many take the books and tapes home to record on their own machines.

Supplementing this reading program, the library also has available to the sightless an unabridged dictionary and the World Book Encyclopedia, both in Braille.

This is only one area in which the Library is attempting to build an institution that supports the overall University program, one of its main aims.

Thus, there are more than just books in the library. In the Humanities Library, for instance, there is a growing collection of some 5,000 phonograph records, including mostly classical music, but also plays, poetry readings and documentaries.

There are, 5,000 individual musical scores and related monographs. Some 5,000 motion picture films and film strips are also available.

There is a framed-print collection totaling about 400 pieces which are loaned to students and faculty members. This collection will be expanded in the Fall with original works.

There are some 80,000 maps of various kinds, newspapers, trade catalogs, government documents.

The library is a many things to many people. It's a place to browse, to meet a date, to read, to study, to research, and, yes, even to sleep.

The Egyptian Book Scene:

China–Taiwan and Red-Explored in Two Books

Every thoughtful American should read "China Assignment" to get an authentic picture of U.S. involvement in the Far East.

With candor and detail, former Ambassador Rankin tells of his task at Peking from the years 1950–58, and how the United States committed itself to the support of the nationalist regime. The work is not only for the excerpts from original diplomatic correspondence but for the moral fervor of the dedicated Foreign Service officer.

The author takes us through a maze of dramatic events, such as Britain’s recognition of Peking, the Korean war and its aftermath, the United Nations’ debate on UN admission of Communist China, the operations of the JCRR, and the CA and the JCRR, the separate peace treaty with Japan, the Taiwan crisis, the larger crises over Quemoy and Matsu and the Mutual Defense Treaty he wrote: "...to sustain the necessary degree of cooperation from the Chinese government and its armed forces, and to have at hand a worthwhile margin of offensive military power for various possible uses..."

China Triumphs is a book of a totally different vantage. Senor Julio Alvarez del Vayo, an anti–Franco leader and former Ambassador Rankin’s, is a country that will assert, is a country that will sustain the necessary degree of cooperation from the Chinese government and its armed forces, and to have at hand a worthwhile margin of offensive military power for various possible uses..."

"An American in Rome"

"La' (Stern) 'Dolce' (Stern) 'Vita'

A study in Mike Stern; New York: "Vita" the reporter, foreign correspondent, Author of best-selling New York Times best seller. "Vita" is dedicated to accuracy and the harsh truth. The old school of tough reporters, Native American at home in Rome, Author of the best seller. "Vita." The gaze of Rome during World War II. Blue Mediterranean sky; evening sky descending curtains drawn up by tanks and bulldozers, Picturinesque scenes of ancient Roman musical scenery; the sour-smelling sweet of human dead left on the streets. The growth of Christianity; the murder of Mussolini. A Michelangelo sculpture and Murillo’s "Madonna with Child"; the crematorium at Pachau.

And the birth of an eternal city - the spires and saddles of encircling mountains; the new second stories and patched roofs of houses and churches. The fountain at Trevi; unrationed water. The Aurelian Wall and the Roman Way; the Autobahn with its turning cars and buses, Vibrant green umbrella pines; powdered milk and dehydrated eggs from America. The ruins of the Colosseum; the trial of Aron Dolzer, murderer of 12 American soldiers, Julius Caesar; Harry Truman.

A study of Stern in Rome:

"For the Roman a book of the development of the speaker and the biographies of all the men who have held this powerful position..."

The book answers many of the questions of the development of the speaker and the biographies of all the men who have held this powerful position. The discussion of the role of the speaker is not especially inclusive enough to provide an adequate knowledge, but lay readers of government affairs will benefit from the presentation.

Presented equally well are the biographies of the great Henry Clay; the great defender of democracy, and the great men of the East, "Uncle Joe" Cannon; and Mr. Rayburn.

However, it is through Mr. Sam that the author actually makes a real contribution. Having worked for President Johnson, who is called by many politicians a prodygie of Mr. Rayburn, and having known Mr. Rayburn personally, the author has been able to delve into Mr. Sam’s innermost secrets of how best to work the chair.

Mr. Mooney’s only other book contribution was "The London Johnson Story," a volume that didn’t quite measure up to the objectivity of Mr. Speaker.

The style of writing makes for easy reading. Having been trained as a newspaperman, Mr. Mooney retains the art of constructing short, understandable sentences to relate well-selected illustrations about the four great men.

Though Mr. Speaker may never rank as a literary masterpiece, it deserves attention from the serious studies of American history and from the lay reader as well.
Conant Charges National Education Policy Lacking

James B. Conant, in his latest commentary on the American educational scene, states that nationwide educational policy has fallen short of today's needs. He believes that existing policy has been determined by a more or less haphazard intersection of (1) leaders of public school teachers, administrators and professors of education, (2) state educational authorities, (3) a multitude of state colleges and universities, (4) private colleges and universities and (5) the variety of agencies of the Federal Government through which large sums of money have flowed to individual institutions and states.

In the first chapter, "Educations becomes a National Concern," the author observes that we are in the throes of a revolution precipitated by the rapid change taking place in social, political, economic and scientific areas.

Conant's lack of faith in present methods of shaping educational policy are aptly illustrated when he writes: "It is my belief that there will be more radical changes in the future and this in turn means that our old methods of determining educational policy need drastic revision to meet the impact of the educational revolutions."

The second chapter, "Policy Making for the Public School," concentrates on the "Establishment" and State Departments of Education. The "Establishment" is portrayed as rather broad in scope and includes school administrators, the National Education Association, Vocational Policies Commission, National Association of Secondary School Principals, accrediting agencies, etc.

The author charges that -owned academic leaders and members of the lay public have been heard too little and that the "Establishment" has not given a statement of sound policy. An interaction of the views of all groups is needed.

Chapter three, "Policy Making for Higher Education," deals with both public and privately controlled schools. The great diversity of effort to provide high education is stressed. The existence of the two types of schools is credited partially with creating the diversity.

Conant contends that "independent bureaus" of higher education and various higher collegiate alumni groups result in understandable programs in the public institutions. Illinois was selected as a state to illustrate this point. The thesis is proposed that the system of public higher education evolved slowly and that they will not demonstrate desirable changes quickly.

Chapter four, "New York and California," is a case study of educational policy in our two most populous states. Incidentally, Conant feels that "... each state may be considered as furnishing something approaching an ideal solution to Dart of a total problem."

Survey Report Probes the 'Why' Behind the 'Wandering Scholar'

The Mobility of College Faculty. by Charles D. Caplow, New York: Pageant Press, 1964, 152 pp. $5.

Professor Marshall's inquiries revealed mobility was stimulated, as a new chairman, by discovering he had three vacancies to fill by receipt of a grant. From many individuals, he received usable replies from 347 economics chairmen, 297 English chairmen and 324 chemistry chairmen, plus 420 returns from economists.

The "Wandering scholar" has been a phenomenon in Western culture long before and certainly after Helen Wadell used that title for a study of medieval poets. Has movement of academic personnel among institutions increased today?

Library Room Offers a Rare Look Into the Past

Want to see a page from the Gutenberg Bible or original galley; and page proofs of Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass? There's a catch. Both items are among the varied collections in the Rare Book Room of Morris Library, and that room's manuscript collections are intended for thesis or dissertation research, or for special studies by independent scholars.

Ralph W. Bushee, Rare Book Room librarian, explained the library has a collection of publisher's editions of books, manuscripts and other items-in the special portion of the library are not intended for casual browsing. Qualified students or staff members with a good reason for access to any of the room's materials, however, will have no difficulty seeing them.

Many of the volumes are available in the regular library stacks, Bushee pointed out, but copies are kept in the room to round out special collections.

Often, Bushee said, students will come to the Room seeking books they have found in the general library card catalog in the rare book collection. In many cases, he said, the same books are available in the open library stacks, but the novelty of the rare book room intrigues students.

In many cases, Bushee said, undergraduate students are permitted use of books in the collections. Materials they want to see, however, must be unavailable in the regular part of the library and they must "demonstrate a valid need."

In a recent case, a graduate student was readily granted access to copies of the Conservator, a literary publication of the 19th Century. The student, working on a seminar report on Walt Whitman's difficulties with Boston censors, was judged to have a valid reason for using the old magazines.

Procedure called for signing a log book and taking the volumes used. The student also was told that rules of the Rare Book Room forbid the use of either ball or fountain pens for taking notes. Bushee explained that fountain pens might drip and ball pens might smear. So only pencils are allowed.

While materials cannot be borrowed or taken from the room, single study space is provided for researchers as part of the three-room suite. Xerographing service is sometimes permitted for scholars unable to come to Carbondale.

The library has a collection of publisher's editions of all books published by the Black Sun Press, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crosby in Paris from 1927-29. Crosby, a nephew of banker J. Pierpont Morgan, published works of a number of expatriate writers who left the United States for Paris in the 1900's.

Included in the collection, given to SIU by Mrs. Crosby, are works of Archibald Macleish, Ernest Hemingway, Edgar Allan Poe, D. H. Lawrence, Lewis Carroll, Marcel Proust and a number of lesser-known writers. Many volumes are illustrated and include the artists' original art. Crosby started the Black Sun Press as an outlet for his own poetry. While living in Paris he tried unsuccessfully to find a publisher for his writings. Finally in desperation, he decided to print his own. He soon added writings of his fellow Parisian writers and reportedly even made money with his publishing enterprise.

Bushee is working on a complete bibliography of publications of and correspondence relating to the Black Sun Press. Henry Miller has already written an introduction for the bibliography.

Bushee said that in addition to the collections already housed in the Rare Book Room, the library is building a growing collection of Dylan Thomas drafts and correspondence. A complete collection of architectural drawings, plans and patents of R. Buckminster Fuller, inventor of the geodesic dome and professor of design at SIU, are also housed in the room.

The library's collection of writings, manuscripts and letters of Richard Aldington is believed to be one of the most complete in the world. Other volumes, part of a collection of Irish writers, feature works of William Butler Yeats and James Joyce.

While many of the works in the Rare Book Room's collections have been gifts to SIU, Bushee said both he and Ralph E. McCoy, SIU director of libraries, keep a close watch on listings of old books and private collections for sale or auction to fill gaps in existing collections at the library.

Rusk Spells Conditions For Viet Negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) - U.S. officials said Friday that a peaceful settlement of Viet Nam should include withdrawal of Communist guerrillas from South Viet Nam and an end to any further infiltration of North Vietnamese men and arms.

The listing of requirements for a peace solution was made known after Secretary of State Dean Rusk outlined the Southeast Asian situation to 27 Latin-American ambassadors.

Rusk's private talk to the group was part of a U.S. effort to build support for its Viet Nam policy around the world. Other ambassadorial groups will be briefed later.

The Latin-American diplomats declined public comment after the 50-man Liberation at the State Department.

Wilson Faces Crisis On Viet Nam Policy

LONDON (AP)--Prime Min­ister Macmillan said Friday that the worst internal crisis of his four months is office, the Labor Party left wing was ap­parently in open rebellion against his support for U.S. action in Viet Nam.

Only Thursday night left­wing members of Parliament called on him to declare "publicly and unequivocally" that he is unable to support the United States in its air strikes against Com­munist North Viet Nam. Then Friday a junior minister in his gov­ernment quit over the same issue.

His defection-the first Wil­son has suffered—further threatens the government's razor-thin majority and the combined opposition of the Labor and Liberal groups will be briefed later.

Hawaiian Volcano Blows Its Top;

Poses No Threat

HILO, Hawaii (AP)—Kilauea, a volcano on Hawaii’s Big island Friday spewing out four flows of lava and steam, poured 500 feet into the air.

It was the first major eruption since 1963 of the famed volcano, 20 miles from Hilo, the island’s chief city.

The first burst, two-thirds of the way up the side of 964 feet, spewed out so much material it created a new crater, crame, after two hours of activity.

It was followed by three subsequent bursts. One lava flow cut a mile-wide path through a forested area, but residents said they posed no danger to inhabited areas.

A rain of cinders and pumice fell to a mile from the crater.

Rusk: "open war threats" against North Viet Nam

Rusk said in a New York speech Thursday night that U.S. forces are in Southeast Asia "to help independent peoples resist aggressions, to prevent the spread of a Communist nation from South Viet Nam to the rest of Southeast Asia and to prevent the spread of aggressions from the combined opposition of China and Viet Nam."
It was a highly successful year for Southern's gymnastics team and for several of the Saluki performers as well.

The Saluki gymnasts added 11 more victories, stretching their consecutive dual meet winning streak to 38.

For the year the Saluki team scored 803 points compared to their opponents' total of 474. The team's high score was registered here against the University of Colorado when the gymnasts piled up 88 points.

The low score was also recorded here against Iowa State University.

Several of the gymnasts also had a big year in scores.

The leading scorer for the Salukis was Larry Lindauer, the Salukis-all-around performer. He accounted for 209 of the team's total points.

Frank Schmitz, a three-event man for Coach Bill Meade, missed two meets when he was in London competing in the World’s Trampoline and Tumbling Championships, but still finished second with 151 points.

Schmitz was the most consistent of the Saluki performers as his scores ranged from a meet low of 14 against Wichita State University to a high of 18 which was recorded against four opponents.

Third in the scoring derby went to captain Bill Wolf with 139 points. Wolf, who works three events, had his best performance at the start of the season when he scored 18 points against the University of Denver.

Behind Wolf in fourth place is Brent Williams. After missing the opening meet with a knee injury that bothered him for much of the season, Williams came on strong at the end and wound up with 93 points.

Rick Tucker finished fifth in scoring with 91 points.

Southern's single event men rounded out the team's scoring with Mike Boegler's 59 points leading the way.
SIU to Field Full Track Teams at University of Chicago Open

Frosh, Varsity Squads Ready
By Roy Franke

With everybody in the fold for the first time, Coach Lew Haritz's indoor track squad heads for the University of Chicago Open today.

The Salukis freshmen and varsity teams will join Western Michigan, Loyola, DePaul, Notre Dame, and the host school in the meet. Although no team scoring will be kept, Southern has potential in several events.

Best chances for victory appear to be nationally prominent short putter George Woods, speedy freshman distance man Dwane Brooks, future conference star Dan Shaughnessy, and SIU's track mile relay quartet of Bobbi Coventry, Bill Cornell, Jerry Fenrich and Gary Carr.

Woods, who only last week made his first appearance on the Illinois indoor track record charts with a toss of 57 feet 3 inches, will try to improve on his high jump and possibly top a brilli-

Surely, this season solely because you've worn that red hat all season, that it would be unfortunate if luck if you didn't get it back, and that the student body probably would drum you out of town sundown the day of your next meet if the hat with the Marshall Field tag was missing.

So now you have your hat back, or a reasonable fac-

Student Council Okays U. Center Policy Board

The Student Council passed a bill tonight that seeks to establish a University Center Policy Committee.

The rejection of the committee report and the acceptance of the bill mean that Miss Newberry will continue to be the vice president for student and area services and the vice president for business affairs to find the possibilities of establishing the committee.

Central Mich. Upsets Jackson State, 83-78

Central Michigan College scored 62 points at the buzzer of the game and closed out the SIU Arena Friday night.

The hot-shooting Chippewas were able to put the game out of reach early. They scored 44 points in the first half and outscored the Tigers 34-21. The Chippewas went on to win 83-78.

Gasode says if the students pay more attention to what they do in the dorms, they will do less damage to the surrounding areas. He says it's a matter of being considerate of others.

The game marked Central Michigan's 15th victory in 25 outings. The loss was the seventh against 20 wins for Jackson State.

The Chippewas will meet the winner of Friday night's SIU-Concordia College game tonight at Chicago.
