Carbondale City Council tables proposed Adult Use ordinance amendment

BRETT NAUMAN DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Carbondale City Council tabled an ordinance amendment at Tuesday night's meeting that would have forced Internet pomography websites to comply with city zoning laws, after the council rushed to add the item to their weekly agenda.

The proposed amendment was to the city's Adult Uses ordinance and would have required pomographic latence whether to nonzet in certain areas of Internet websites to operate in certain areas of Carbondale and follow regulations of zoning laws. The purpose of the proposed amendment was to specifically define the role of the Internet with the city's Adult Uses ordinance. The council tabled the ordinance amendment after they decided further research was needed for them to make an educated decision on the

The proposed amendment was a reaction to a pomographic website that was operating in three rooms at the Sunset Motel, 825 E. Main St. Police discovered the operation Thursday afternoon and asked its operators to stop conducting business. The website was violating a zoning regulation because it was within 1,000 feet of liquor establishments.

The website was owned by John Bowlin, who also owns JB's Show Place in De Soto, Boo Jr's., 828 E. Main St., and the Sunset Motel. Bowlin has expressed that the council's actions have infringed on his First Amendment rights.

It is undetermined when the issue will come before the council again. After stating last week that he would work to drive the website, from Carbondale, Councilman Larry Briggs admitted that he and other council members reacted too quickly after they discovered Internet porn in Carbondale.

"We've had a knee-jerked reaction here," Briggs said. "We need to take a step back and take a good, long hard look at this."

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan also expressed oncern about deciding the issue too quickly.

"Given this is the world's oldest profession, we can't eact too quickly," Flanagan said. "We need to look a little deeper into this."

Attorney Alfred Sanders, who represented Bowlin, presented information to the council members at the meeting that helped them decide to postpone their decision. Sanders said that MTC, the parent company of the Sunset Motel website, informed him that it was not the only such business operating in Carbondale. Sanders said MTC informed him that multiple people operate pornographic websites from their private resi-dences. He also felt that the council hurry to add the amendment to the agenda was politically motivated.

amendment to the agencia was poluicing monvacu.
"If anyone is trying to get attention for their re-election campaign, well you got it." Sanders said. The comment was met with a quick chuckle by Briggs, who along with Flanagan is up for re-election in April.

Councilman Brad Cole said that the council need-with caution regarding the proposed amendment. He said putting Bowlin's website under such restrictions could lead to the council restricting all types of adult businesses in the future. Cole said he was types of adult businesses in the nuture. Lose said he was also concerned with the proposed ordinance being perceived as Internet regulation.

"The Internet is a challenging place," Cole said.

"Congress in its infinite wisdom has not been able to address Internet issues. I don't think they'll be looking. to Carbondale for advice."

Alfred Sanders defends John Bowlin's internet business that was shut down due to zoning laws at the city council meeting Tuesday night. Web site manager David Rennison also attended the council discussion.

Halloween break extended to nine days, Thanksgiving cut to four

MOLLY PARKER DAILY EGYPTIAN

Last year's Halloween celebration debacle has pushed campus administrators to close the University and city officials to shut down bars for Halloween 2001, but some students and trustees have reservations about the decision that will result in a shorter Thanksgiving break.

What interim Chancellor John Jackson is calling a "fall break" will be a total of nine days, including the weekends. The break revolves around the entire week of Halloween, which around the entire week of Halloween, which falls on a Wednesday this year. But to make up for lost school days Thanksgiving break will be shortened to Thursday to Sunday instead of the previous week-long break.

Jackson said the University and the city is reverting to what worked during the previous five years. However, previous fall breaks lasted an average of four days including the weekend, and did not interfere with the Thanksgiving holiday

The Carbondale City Council voted to reopen bars on the Strip last year, but after the 2000 Halloween episode they voted at the fol-lowing council meeting to close bars Halloween night and the weekend before and after as well as restrict the sale and possession of kegs.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said he did not think it was feasible to only close the bars and leave the school open, because the problem is not with the bars, it is with the street. Although the street closed Halloween night at 1:15. Doherty said this did not keep partiers from filtering in from the bars and the city.

"The bars themselves are not the problems; it is the street. People want to come down and party," Doherty said.

The decision to extend fall break and shorten Thanksgiving break will be presented to the board on Thursday as an informational item, which will allow it to be discussed at length, but will probably not move to a vote, Jackson said.

Jackson said although the final calendar is his decision, he thinks the board has the power to override his decision if they are not in agree-ment. A calendar committee composed of two students, faculty, staff and administration chose the final recommendation. And Jackson is confident the board will support his decision, which normally votes to approve the calendar.

"It can always be overruled by the board, but that is not likely," Jackson said. He said he understands the needs of students who travel on Thanksgiving to be with their

Cancer institute coming to SIU

Medical school awaiting budget approval

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA

Between 2000 and 2005, 40,000 people in Southern Illinois will die from cancer, according to research done by the SIU School of Medicine and SIU Physicians and Surgeons.

The research was done as part of the strategic planning for the SIU Cancer Institute, to be located in Springfield. After about three years of nning, the first steps to erecting the Cancer planning the may soon be in motion.

On Feb. 21, Gov. George Ryan unveiled his proposed state budget, which included $14.5 million for the institute's building and $2.55 million for operations. During the next few months the heridature will have been found in the proposed to the heridature.

months the legislature will hash out a final bud-get using the governor's proposals.

Carl J. Getto, dean and provost for the Medical School, said the Medical School requested $3.33 million from the state for operations, which is $780,000 more than what the school will receive if the governor's proposal is approved.

"It will fall short, but it would be enough for a very good start," he said.
The institute will be used for continuing research on cancer already being done at the Medical School and add treatment and diagnosis of cancer patients in the region.

Although the institute will be located in Springfield with the Medical School, Getto said it would serve the entire region, with an emphasis on rural areas.

budget approved.
"The Cancer Institute will become an excel-lent center for research and service for SIU,"

The SIU Board of Trustees approved the institute proposal Feb. 10 of last year.

If the funding is approved the first step will be to hire an executive director and a medical director. Getto said the preliminary stages of recruining have already begun.

families, but with a four-day break he believes this opportunity will not be lost.

"I have heard some of that and it is not completely without merit, but most students can get home by Wednesday night and have Thanksgiving and four days with their family, Jackson said.

But the construction of the 2001 fall break is only a short-term recommendation, Jackson said the board has directed that the University look for new solutions and that some trustees are not satisfied with the plan.

Jackson made it clear this is not going to be a long-term solution.

"[The trustees] have obviously been in the newspaper saying they are not thrilled about this," Jackson said.

Trustee John Brewster said he has reservations with the administrations decision to shut down the University on Halloween. He said it is not fair to punish the entire student body because a few students misbehaved on the Strip on Halloween weekend. But he understands the decision to ensure the safety of the University and the students.

Although he expects discussion between the board and administration at the meeting on Thursday he does not expect it to be a controversial

"But it is the hope and expectation of board members that this not hapn again," Brewster said. Glenn Poshard, vice chancellor for Administration, also supports the decision although he said he sympathizes with students who need to travel long distances to home.

"I understand the students' concern about Thanksgiving holiday time but I also say that what went on there last Halloween has to be stopped," Poshard said.

Poshard said.

The Board of Trustees meeting will be Thursday at 10:30 a.m. at the East St. Louis Higher Education Facility. The board is also scheduled to vote to increase equipment fees in the School of Dental Medicine and a new "Safety Center Building" that will be built near Thompson Lake. The new building will serve primarily as a motorcycle training facility and be paid for through grants. Trustees will consider the feasibility of studying the power plant to provide SIUC with more energy.

The board will also consider buying a new airplane. For financial and safety reasons, the board will consider replacing one of the University's two rwin-enpine Cessnas.

twin-engine Cessnas.

The original schedule to vote for approval of the campus land-use plan was moved to the April meeting when trustees are on the Carbondale

Also, Walker and Jackson will discuss their recent trip to Cuba and Washington D.C. In Cuba, Walker met with Cuban President Fidel Castro and in his trip to Washington D.C. he met with the congressional delegation as well as both Illinois senators.

"The [senators] were very supportive and felt very good about SIU; that is always good to hear," Walker said.

The second phase would bring continued efforts to organize and extend, in order to qualify the institute for participation in National Cancer Institute research. For this effort research groups and partnerships with health care providers and cancer programs will be formally established.

Faculty and staff recruitment will be com-pleted in the third phase, as well as the region-al community network and the institute becoming equipped.

problem with campus structures because of the cost. The University spends more than $100 million each year in maintenance, the cost of retro-fitting all buildings on campus could run 10 times this figure.

"Given the expenses involved with retro-fit-ting buildings, there just isn't enough money to complete this kind of project," Poshard said. The largest recorded quakes to strike the area

OUR WORD

Ghosts of Halloweens past should not haunt Thanksgiving's future at SIUC

Last December, the Campus Calendar Committee voted to recommend that fall break be extended to a full week during Halloween, and the traditional Thanksgiving break shortened to two days. Thursday, the SIU Board of Trustees will review the issue, with interim Chancellor John Jackson as the final arbiter on the matter. Since Jackson has already spoken publicly in support of the extended fall break, the abbreviated Thanksgiving break seems like a done deal.

But to infringe upon one of the students' most cherished opportunities to be at home with their families . was a bad idea then, and it's a bad idea now.

First, the new calendar recommendations treat Thanksgiving as just another holiday, a few more days on the calendar to tinker around with. But that is most certainly not the case. To most Americans,

Thanksgiving is one of the most important family holi-days. Unlike some of the so-called "Hallmark holidays," Thanksgiving is a nearly sacred tradition, one that dates back to our nation's very origins. To prevent a great number of students from celebrating this time with their families so that the administration can take the most extreme of measures on controlling Halloween is a troubling proposition, one that the board should

According to the new calendar, SIUC would be closed on Thanksgiving day and the weekend following. But that still leaves those who live far away from Carbondale with a number of problems, including arranging transportation and time enough to visit with family members they might not see at any other time of year. These are not trivial concerns. They represent the very real problems that students will have to face come November if this calendar recommendation is adopted.

The key issue behind the committee's recommendation is not Thanksgiving, however, but Halloween and how to prevent the type of rioting seen last year on the St.ip. From 1995 to 1999, the University and the city had two restrictions in place; the University had a fall break, and bars along the Strip were closed along with a restriction on keg sales throughout Carbondale. These measures were largely successful, or the bars would never have been reopened last year. The University seems to be ascribing this past success to the fall break, with no regard to the alcohol restrictions. To do so minimizes the role that alcohol played in the riots. But the only way that last year was different from the 1995-1999 period is that the bars were open and liquor sales were unrestricted. The cause-effect relationship is obvious; if the fuel is removed, the fire will be extinguished.

Because Halloween falls on Wednesday this year, the city of Carbondale has already decided that bars along the Strip will be closed both the weekend before and the weekend after Halloween. This leaves the issue of the academic calendar and how to protect students during this time when it is uncertain what may happen, open bars or not. The best way to ensure students' safety may be in fact to extend the fall break to cover the entire week. However, that leaves open the problems with the Thanksgiving break.

A look at last year's fall break may contain the answer. During the fall 2000 semester, the University was closed from Saturday, Oct. 28 to Wednesday, Nov. 1, which left Thursday and Friday as class days. Combined with the five days at Thanksgiving, this resulted in a net loss of eight days of instruction.

If, as an alternative to the current recommendation, the Thanksgiving break started or. Wednesday, the resultant loss of class days would be the same days. If the prospect of a two-day school week was acceptable last year, it is only reasonable to believe that it should be acceptable this year.

Students at SIUC are not automatons in an educational assembly line. They are real people, with lives and families. Ending Halloween at SIUC must not have the unfortunate and unintended consequence of taking away from Thanksgiving for the student body. We understand the substantial difficulties attached to such a decision; the mayhem of last year's Halloween must be avoided to ensure the safety of students as well as the protection of local businesses. Jackson's intentions are also unquestioned, as he has nothing but the best interests of the University at heart.

However, we believe that the addition of Wednesday to the Thanksgiving break schedule is a reasonable compromise, one that the board and Jackson should support.

Do multicultural coalitions really perpetuate African liberation in America? euphemistically sounds like the Truth.

The inclusivity of "Visible Ethnic and Racial Groups" defined out of the political category of "whiteness" in a struggle to end all discrimination seems to show compelling interest for the need of inclusive enclaves and coalitions that focus on the experiences of oppression. Many authors would advocate this approach, most notably Cornel West, but the question still remains — how does the inclusion of diverse ethnic groups solve the identity issues moted in the Black/White racial binary? If it is true that political activism through multiculturalism is practical and desirable we must operationalize the experience of oppression to be universal in effect. Does this mean that all forms of oppression are racism, or that seeks m is just as bad as maism? (Remember Susan B. Now that the Faculty Association contract has been signed, I propose a further step toward improving relationships between faculty and administration.

The Problem:

The formation of the Faculty Association was an outward manifestation of a deep prob-lem in existence for many years. There was then, and still is, a deep cultural gulf between the faculty and the administration — they live in different places, shop at different places and seldom communicate socially. This is in part a product of the large discrepancy in salaries between the two groups. As might be expected, these two isolated cultures circulate very different narratives of the University and each other. Faculty narrative of administration:

As faculty, we circulate among ourselves a very unflattering perception of administration at SIU. Some faculty have come to believe, over University for their own welfare more than for the welfare of faculty, students or academic mission. Faculty need to be convinced that administrators care about the University and its mission as much or more than their own selfnterest. In this narrative, the long-lived custom of taking away faculty positions and keeping faculty salaries down, at the same time that istrative numbers and salaries are increased, does not play out well. Patronizing explanations of "reality"— in other words, "we can't just manufacture money" worsen the situation.

Their own communications to faculty, as well as reports from personnel friendly to faculty, respoiled and argumentative children, unable to understand the "big issues" of the University, or 2) faculty are isolated eggheads unable to look up from our microscopes to deal with "real life." These attitudes are, I feel, largely respon-sible for the unusual resistance at SIU to shared governance. They affect interactions at every level.

Both sides: Both administrators and faculty agree on one position: That the other group holds its own selfish self-interests over Guest the welfare of the institution. Column have seen the effect of this relatively small measure on other fronts. I remember, two decades ago, when it was widely accepted to tell sexist jokes in front of women and then to tell them they had "no sense of humor" when they didn't laugh. I remember before the civil rights movement, when racist jokes were all too common. I am glad those days are past. The rise of an ethic against expressing certain attitudes leads, eventually, to a different way of thinking. I propose that faculty speak as though administrators had the interests of the institution at heart, and that administrators also speak of faculty with respect. Let both sides regard the other as intelligent adults able to collaborate fully for the best interests of the larger com-munity. I propose that this new ethic be most in effect when no members of the other group ethic by disapproving when we hear the other group denigrated. This is, at least, a place to

A dampened spirit only lessens the enjoyment of the game

DEAR EDITOR:

After reading Corey Cusick's article on Saluki fans being an embarrassment, I sadly had to sit back and agree. Being a senior member of the Saluki pep band, I've really siever been to an MVC Tournament game that was so incredibly dull. I don't think it was the players, I think the "fans" in the stands were the ones who dampened my spint.

To those of you who do take pride in this school and go to the games to cheer on the team, thank you for making the trip to St. Louis worthwhile. I appreciate the effort. Too bad your enthusiasm didn't rub off on the people sitting next to you. The band played incredibly hard on Satunday and tried their hardest to get you out of your chairs. It would have been wonderful to have the entire Savvis Center filled with Marson colors standing and cheering or their team, instead of half filled derful to have the entire Sawis Center filled with Marson colors standing and cheering or their team, instead of half filled with people almost saleep in the stands.

To those of you planning to continue to go to the SIU basketball genes, please note that you should stand during the playing of the school song. It is incredibly disrespectful to this institution and the team if you don't. It's also disrespectful to the band and the cheerleaders who try so hard to get you involved in the earne.

the band and the cherleaders who try so hard to get you involved in the game.

To the band and the cherteaders, thank you for making my college experience a great one. You are the most spirited group of individuals Ive ever had the pleasure of working with. Your leadership at this University is so tremendous that I have no worness that your spirit will be here as long as the University still stands. Thank you.

A plea to the University to support the new arts fee

DEAR EDITOR:

I would urge the Board of Trustees and other areas of this University to support the new arts fee. Being involved with the arts at this University has opened up avenues of my life that I never had before. An increase in cost doesn't throw students' money away on useless projects, it permits them to par-ticipate in activities that they could have never done before.

Recent USG proposal will not benefit students

DEAR EDITOR:

I was very disturbed to read about the voting registration requirements Undergraduate Student Government is pursuing for RSOs to receive funding. I don't question the motives of USG President Bill Archer as the sole enactor of this policy himself. However, I do question the merit and the actual thought process in pursuing such a policy that violates students rights. USG is supposed to be fighting FOR student rights. Every semester, students are compelled by the University to pay Student Activity Fees. These funds along with funds from the state are allocated to the RSOs by the USG finance committee. It is not fair for the RSOs that students ratificints in or that stronger student events to be OSO instance communice. It is not an in the resolo that such dents participate in or that sponsor student events to be deprived of funds to continue operations. The committee cha insuefit is opposed to such a policy. I really hope Bill Archer realizes that this proposal will not materialize and get over it.

Porn site does nothing but objectify women

DEAR EDITOR:

I have to disagree very strongly with Burke Speaker's guest column that pernography is good for Carbondale. Pomography is very degrading to both women and men. It tries to give men the image that the sole purpose for women is to gratify a man's sexual lusts. The media have increasingly used pomography in this way for the last three decades. BET and MTV repeatedly show a large number of scantily clad women to boost their ratings. And these are networks that women to boost their ratings. And there are networks that are trying to say that they are trying to give positive images to young people. The only image that I see being portrayed is that women are for a cheap one-night stand and that is it. Pomography is degrading because it perverts a man's image of women. They are not able to see a woman as having emoto women. They are not store to see a woman as maning emo-tions and intelligence. All they will be able to see is a body that pomography has trained them to believe is only designed for their sexual gratification. Speaker stated that pomography sites are good for the local economy. But that is only true for the operators of these sites. The women on these sites are being degraded and cinotionally scarred.

Pornography is not only a blight on Carbondale and the University, but also our society. The Carbondale City Council has my full support.

The students have spoken and they want Archer's cynicism gone

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing this letter in bold response to Büll Archer's comments concerning the Carbondale City Council primary. In Wednesday's DAILY ECTYPTIAN, Archer is quoted twice as saying. The students have spoken, and they don't give a damn." Parts of his statement are true. the precinct numbers; the numbers show that the most votes were for our candidate, not Bill Archer.

Is it possible that pamphlets that we passed out encouraging people to inform themselves and make an educated decision on whom to vote for, were more successful than Archer's ambiguous emotional pleas on Student Center table placards? I believe so, and Archer's dialogue before and after the election clearly tells the stud nts just exactly what he thinks of us. And it isn't a whole lot.

Yes, voter turnout was low on exampus, but this is the City Council, and this is the City Council primaries. As a student we have a chance to change the stigma that Bill Archer places upon us, since it is simply not true. As such I excourage everyone to educate themselves on the upcoming referendum and the four candidates running on April 3rd. If not, then we'll help you do so by distributing informat on to help you make an informed decision. We will not east you off as ignorant students, because you aren't. So take the initiative, the five minutes really, to vote in the coming election this April.

It's a big job, the director of Student Health Programs has to do it

Cheryl Presley looks forward to meeting the challenges involved with Student Health Programs

> · ANDREA DONALDSON DAILY EGYPTIAN

As director of Student Health Programs, Cheryl Presley has to be the glue that holds everything together. Responsible for all aspects of student health, Presley has to keep all of the health branches on the same track — providing students with the best possible health care at the lowest cost.

Presley, who has served as interim director of SHP for about a year and worked in health services for 15 years, was appointed director Feb. 1, pending the approval by the Board of Trustees at Thursday's meeting.

Larry Dietz, vice chancellor of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management, recommended Presley to fill the position after working with her since April. During that time she led the health department through reaccreditation, showing him her dedication and leadership.

The University did have a national search for the position last spring, but Dietz said the three final candidates did not meet the committee's expectations.

"I'm not really interested in hiring people that are just O.K.," Dietz said.

Dietz met with staff members of SHP in December to get their recommendations, and he sai. t was almost unanimous that another search was not needed.

They encouraged me not to go through another time consuming and expensive search," he said.

Presley, who will receive an $85,908 annual salary, will also be serving as an assistant to Dietz for Student Affairs research. Dietz said he is confident in her filling the position because she has an extensive background in research, serving as the executive director of the Core Institute, which studies trends in how college students use alcohol and drugs. Her work with the Institute has won national Presley said she recently submitted a 10-year-plan to Dietz that focused on the future of SHP. She said the plan looked at expanding service times, adding a dermatologist, expanding training options and integrating more with academics, adding eye care facilities, expanding the dental program and possibly becoming attached to the Receration Center.

"I really respect him and look forward to broadening and deepening the program, she said.

As director of SHP, Presley said she is in charge of maintaining health services to keep a high level for accreditation, maintain quality services and deal with personnel issues.

"The director really kind of has to pull that together so we're going in one direction that keeps us providing," Presley said. "Our main goal is to keep students in the environment where they aren't having the financial challenges they would have if they went off

"We always look at better ways to continue our services," she said

Presley said despite the challenges she faces in maintaining SHP, she had no hesitations in taking the director position.

It's a big job and I love it, "she said. "It's a wonderful organization to work for and with."

Council's actions could bring porn bus to Carbondale

DAILY EGYPTIAN

If the Carbondale City Council was con-cerned about a pomographic website operating within city limits, the reaction of the website's parent company, voyeurbus.com, will surely incense them.

In a telephone interview with the DAILY EGYPTIAN Tuesday, voyeurbus.com CEO Mark Rausino said he believes the Carbondale City Council would exceed its legal authority if it were to add an amendment to the Adult Uses law regulating the Internet. Rausing said he will file a civil lawsuit against the city for what he says is a violation of his First Amendment rights if they amend the ordinance to prohibit porno-website from city limits.

Carbondale Police shut down a voyeurbus com subsidiary pornographic website operating at the Sunset Motel, 825 E. Main St., Thursday afternoon. The city did not discontinue the website for content, but because it was violating zoning regulations by operating with-in 1,000 feet of liquor establishments. The Adult Uses ordinance states that adult businesses must obtain a city zoning permit and operate in specific parts of Carbondale away m schools and churches.

The move to shut the website down has angered Rausino and could prompt him to send his company's "voyeurbus," a see-through bus with naked women on board, to prove his point that the Internet should not be regulated by the Carbondale City Council.

"If they decide to pass this thing, it will be an opportunity for us to come in with the national press and make an issue of this thing," Rausino

The voyeurbus is a converted full-size Greyhound, remodeled so its viewers can see the naked models inside of it. It has four 5 by 5 foot windows on each side, allowing passersby to view the bed, full-size bathtub and toilet, where models perform live broadcasted Internet chats. The bus is illuminated at night so onlookers can continue to watch the models. Rausino said he will send the bus to Carbondale and have it parked on one of the city's streets to illustrate his opposition to the city's Adult Uses

"This is only the beginning of the bigger fight," Rausino said. "If we let Carbondale do this, every other town is going to start in on us."

He said the council is infringing on the First Amendment rights of his company and the website's operators John Bowlin and David Rennison. Because the federal government has not found a way to regulate the Internet, he feels he night fate handed Greg Traver a second chance at life was probably like the rest of those hot August nights in 1995, but he can't remember. He is told it was three days after his 18th birthday and that he was en route to his girlfriend's house. He does remember speeding — make that flying — on his motorcycle. That's about all.

He doesn't even remember if it was night at all. The most concrete evidence he has of it being nighttime is a newspaper clipping he keeps stating the paramedics' 10:15 p.m. arrival at the scene. But he can remember feeling the speed. That 1100 Kawasaki motorcycle sure could speed.

Greg now lives in Carbondale, though growing up in Peoria, his life paralleled how he drove. Using and selling cocaine, shooting heroin, dumping high school at 16, a convicted felon at 17, Greg figured he'd either be dead or jailed by 20. His mother believed the same. Not that Greg cared much'. That was just the way he was — a tough punk, and he knows it couldn't have turned out any other way.

"They never thought I'd make it the three minutes to the hospital,"

Greg says now. "Three minutes."

So when Greg barreled up the hill that night without a helmet, he had nothing to lose by speeding the way he did. He just never thought it would happen to him. Looking back, he must have taken the turn too sharp. But he'll never know. The bike sped at least 85 mph up that incline, in a 25 mph zone. He will always remember the speed. He doesn't remember the

For weeks Kim remained with her son, going home only to step. Doctors said Greg would likely live the rest of his life in a contact. After about a month, it was decided he'd be placed in a nursing home, so that he could have the proper care. The arrangements were complete prior to surgery. Greg needed a skin graft on the fourth-degree burn inches above his ankle. Doctors also needed to install a tube into his stomach to feed him.

The state the nurser to propose the proposed.

But after the surgery something happened.

THE PAIN WOKE HIM.

THE PAIN WOKE HIM.

A dull, searing pain roused him from the coma that doctors feared he'd never wake from. He did, though, and was rewarded with a tube protruding from his gut and a large skin graft taken from his upper leg. He couldn't speak. He tried crying out from the pain, but it was more of an animalish screeching.

"He was screaming horribly," Kim recalls. 'He was in gony and couldn't express it." Both surgeries were performed without any pain kilters, the fear being that drugs may cave the patient to slip further into a coma. The pain forced his body awake, and the rest became a daily strugele toward recovery.

Greg Boesn't remember much about waking up; just the pain and trying to jump start a memory that didn't want to cooperate. Where was he? What happened? How bad were his injuries? He wouldn't learn until much later that when they arrived on the scene, paramedies canceled the lifeline helicopter. "They never thought I'd make it the three minutes to the hospital," Greg says now, shaking his head. "Three minutes."

In the hospital, he'd try to remember his life and come up with only bits and pieces. Pictures helped, but in conjuring up other memories held have to rely on his mother. But Greg considered himself lucky. "I'd lay there in bed and watch this man, the guy I shared the room with, talk to his wife," Greg recalls. "He had brain injuries too, and he couldn't remember her. He never remembered who she was."

That terrified Greg more than anything. He realized how incredibly important his family was to him. It was just dumb luck that he remembered them. Yet he couldn't even swallow. He'd be sitting on the edge of the hospital bed watching television, drool clopping out of the side of his mouth. Therapy began immediate-almost three months for him to regain some semblance of speech.

Kim remembers coaxing him into saying his first word.
"He wanted to get back to the hospital bed, and I told him if you want back in bed you have to say it," Kim recalls.
Greg tried, but couldn't.
"If you want the bed you have to say 'bed," Kim repeated.
Greg slowly formed the word.
"Behhhd."

Kim's heart leapt. "Say it again."

GREG ENTERED THE HOSPITAL A MAN, but three months later

he left a child.

Before Greg was allowed to go home, hospital therapists wanted to make sure he could make it up and down the stairs of his house in case of an emergency. All Greg could do was crawl. For Kim, there was nothing more heartbreaking than watching her 18year-old son barely crawling up the stairs.

But he was decreased was fewer than expected. The doctor

Previously left-handed, he had to learn to use his right after his left was rendered nearly useless from ataxia, a side effect from the coma. While Greg slowly learned to dress himself, he'd often run into trouble. One day Kim heard Greg call out to her. "Mom," he said, "I don't know how to tie my shoes

The worst, it first appeared, was that Gregs friends all but deserted him. His best friend had even slept with his girlfriend while he was in his coma. His friends pretty much turned their backs. After all, Greg wasn't like them anymore. He had changed. Growing up, he couldn't remember not being in some kind of trouble. He'd been rebellious and loved to run with that kind of crowd. Now, family mattered. Getting better mattered. Causing more

Now, family mattered. Getting better mattered. Causing more grief for those who loved him was the last thing on his mind.

Greg transferred to the Center for Comprehensive Services (CCS) in Carbondale. He finished rehab by the age of 20. Soon after, he got his GED, a difficult feat for someone with a brain injury. After going home to visit his family and the few friends he had left, Greg returned for good. Hed met good people in Carbondale. And there was a CCS program he was interested in injuring.

The accident slammed a new mentality into Greg, and he no longer felt the need to live a high-flying existence. It was time to get his life together. The teenager who once sold drugs to his tather's friends became the lighthearted man who now knew only too well that life is way too short to cause others pain.

"It's bizarre that I say this, and I know it may sound had, but the accident really has been a blessing," Kim says. "It made him calmer and slowed him down. It completely changed his attitude. He doesn't have the ability to get angry. He can't stay angry with people."

Greg's old life died on the side of that road. And he knew it.

Now Greg wasn't sure what was next.

THE CARBONDALE COMMUNITY HIGH SCHOOL driver's education class has just finished watching a video in which young adults speak out about their debilitating head and spinal cord injuries. They're watching, but some seem a little bored.

They re watching, but some seem a little borea. Cindy Davie, the director of staff training and development at CCS, flips off the video while motioning toward Greg. With short-cropped hair, a lanky build and a casual smile, Greg could be any college guy. Then he speaks.

When he first begins to talk, you can see slight shock in the students' faces. Greg's voice sounds like he is mentally handicapped.

"I may joke around, but this is not funny. This can happen to any of you," Greg tells them. Their attention never wanes. Greg makes sure of that. "Look at me," he says. "Do you want this to happen to you?"

Greg's newfound passion, one he began in September 1997, is to tell his story. It's part of a porgram called Think First, a nation-wide initiative aimed at preventing brain and spinal cord injuries in young adults. Greg travels across the southern part of the state, visiting high schools, junior highs and some elementary schools. He tells his tale and warns others. ### Yeomans to speak on spiritual women in history

DAILY EGYPTIAN

When Melinda Yeomans gives her lecture on spiritual women throughout history, she will explore the writings of everyone from the Queen of Sheba to Joy Harjo, modern Native American poet. Liberal Arts Adviser Melinda Liberal Arts Adviser Melinda Yeomans will lecture today about women writers throughout history and the subject of spirituality from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

The lecture is titled "Historical Literary Explanation of Women's Petrioschip to the Secard" and its

The lecture is co-sponsored by Women's Services, a group that provides counseling, outreaches and workshops for women and Shades of Sisterhood, which is part of multicultural programs as SIIIC. tural programs and services at SIUC.

Yeomans will distribute handouts with quotes and poetry from the book, "Women in Praise of the book, "Women in Praise of the Sacred," which spans 43 centuries of women's writing on the spiritual.

"The idea is to highlight women's thoughts and writings on religion and spirituality throughout history," said Jane Maxwell, Women's Services outreach and group coordinator, who invited Yeomans to speak. There will be examples from

There will be examples from schools of spiritual thought such as Buddhism, Taoism, Judaism, Christianity, Islam and Hinduism.

"There's a wealth of literature that comes down to us and this evening is about appreciating the experiences of the sacred as it comes through women." Yeomans said.

Yeomans teaches Women's Studies 492: Women in Religion.
"She was referred to us because she is held in high regard on these topics," Maxwell said.

Though Yeomans will be focusing on women's experiences, she said

Garry Patterson, a geologist with the Center for Earthquake Research and Investigation at the University of Memphis, said there is an effort to better understand the threat of a large event in the central United States. # J is a place to hatch

The Dunn-Richmond Economic Development Center houses an incubator that hatches something unusually associated with this term — businesses.

David Lightfoot, a professor in plant and soil sciences, eded a place to house Genome and Agricultural Biotechnology Inc., a business he created through research done on campus. The company, which tests the genes of soybeans, needed a space to begin, so he moved his company to the Small Business Incubator.

"We evolved to where we were ready to try it," said

Lightfoot, director of the company.

The facility, located at 150 E. Pleasant Hill Road, provides rental space for 15 tenants to start and expand businesses in the community. Three of the private sector businesses, the Genome and Agricultural Biotechnology Inc., Lindsey Associates and DxR Development Group, started from research performed by professors on cam-

GAB sells genetic information to public soybean breeders after testing the samples from these companies. Lightfoot, along with three employees, tests the soybean seeds using computers to find out if they are resistant to a fungus in the beans, which causes soybean sudden death syndrome.

Companies such as GAB could help the region and the state profit from their discoveries. Although this year had a record yield for soybean harvests, 20 percent of the harvest was lost to soybean sudden death syndrome, Lightfoot said. His company's goal is to reduce that percentage.

"I see this as a real opportunity for the University as well as the region," said Kyle Harfst, manager of the Small Business Incubator.

Lindsey Associates, a company started by Jeff Lindsey, a professor in electrical engineering technology, is an engineering design business that makes military communication products. It received space in the incubator in 1991, the second business to be housed there.
"One advantage is the association with other busisses," Lindsey said.

Lindsey, the owner of Lindsey Associates, received struction on the operation of his business, which is another advantage for start-up businesses in the incuba-

MICHELLE DOWLAND

DAILY EGYPTIAN

When Kendra Bumpus came to SIUC, she signed up for a program that would make her transition from high school to college easier. Bumpus signed up for Saluki Advantage, a program that puts first-year students with the same classes on the same floors.

The program recently received $30,000 from a Resource Allocation Management Plan proposal.

Bumpus, an undecided freshman from Thayer, said the program was helpful overall in preparing her for college classes. "If you had a problem and were apprehen-sive to go to the teacher, you could find someone on the floor who could help you with homework," Bumpus said.

With the added funds, the program will add three more floors to its list next fall.

The three extra floors will give the program a total of 16.

The 12th floor of Mae Smith will be dedicated to students with classes in American Studies and the 11th and 6th floor will cater to students with classes in Social Issues and

ing program coordinator, said the programs have been successful so far and she is eager to add three more floors to the Saluki Adva system.

"We're so excited for the new students to see the program," Lorentz said.

"The departments are excited about it too

Lorentz said the program helps students by giving them others to talk to about classes and having groups when it comes time to study for tests.

Admissions and Records has been recruiting new students from high schools to to join the pro-

Beth Scally, coordinator of marketing in housing, said these reasons are why it was destined to succeed with those who have participated in the program.

"It was very well received by the students,"

Scally said.
While students like Bumpus do not deny that the program eased the transition from high school to college, she said not everyone was excited about the program.

"A lot of the kids from the bigger cities didn't like it," Bumpus said.

Bumpus said some of the older students found it as a reason to poke fun at the freshmen.

Despite the slight problems some have had with the program, others like Michelle Dowland, an undecided freshman from Modesto, said the program has been helpful overall and has helped her adjust to college life.

"You get to know the people on your floor," Dowland said. "If you need someone to talk to, they're there.

A lil' summthin' from grad student to community

DJ Prince "love" gestures in the WDBX studio during his show "A Lil' Summthin' Summthin'" Tuesday evenings.

DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIUC graduate studen: Prince Taylor is trying to build a relation-ship with the community through radio show on WDBX 91.1

Now both SIUC students and residents who tune-in will be able to get the latest news and events rring on and off-campus.

The station features a show called "A Lil' Summthin' Summthin' with Prince "love" and Niambi. Taylor and Niambi Rowland are hitting the airwaves to get support from students who nt to promote their organiza-ns and events on or off-campus.

"I'm trying to increase aware-ness about my show and extend an invitation to each organization to visit and talk about themselves," said Taylor, a graduate student in workforce education from Chicago.

Taylor has been volunteering at the radio station since January 1997. He said the show is diverse and attracts a wide variety of local acts. Even his co-host Rowland, a junior in radio-television from Springfield, was originally a guest before deciding to become co-host. Rowland and her sister, Ayanna Rowland, have formed a duo called Az One.

Rowland said after they were inter-viewed on the show, she enjoyed it and decided to secure a position there.
"I asked him if I could work in the summer, and I just enjoyed [hosting] since I started it," Rowland said. "I enjoy [hosting] because no one really knows who you are, its fun, [and has little] restrictions

A Lil' Summthin' Summthin', which airs from 8 to 10 p.m. every Tuesday, fea-tures music genres like funk, soul, reggae, hip hop and rock. The show also features local artists like Deep 6, Mello, Don P, N-Tense, Writaz Block, Az One and others who want to showcase their talents.

Brian R. Powell, station manager for WDBX, said Taylor is a valued member of the staff who has certain qualities that make the show a successful one.

"His program is excellent," Powell said. nonstrates] one of the greatest air personalities, abilities and sensibility toward the community."

Melvon Acoff, also known as Mello, a cal artist in the Carbondale area, said the show has had a positive effect on him and a number of other local artists.

He said he gained more recognition because of his air time on the show and the support he received from Taylor.
"He opened up a lot of doors for me and others," said Acoff, a senior in speech communications from East St. Louis. "He interviewed me and played my music and just showed me love.

Taylor said the show receives calls from a range of people who support the show, but he would appreciate more support nition and a way to communicate with Carbondale and SIUC.

"I feel our organizations do a lot of good, positive things that tend to get over-looked, poorly promoted or just not suplooked, poorly promoted or just not sup-ported," Taylor said "Many Taylor said. "Many times lack of support comes from people simply not knowing or finding out at the last minute

In an attempt to change this, Taylor and Rowland have contacted organiza-tions, groups and individuals on the SIUC campus and asked them to provide a listserv with a representative to send out

"Its a good opportunity for us to get experience and for them (organizations) to get free publicity," Rowland said. The show has had some progress since its first debut.

Taylor has conducted interviews with Dawn Roberts, an SIUC student activist dubbed the "governor's pie lady;" Sam Kofi

New turf moves to the fore as stadium plans are delayed

Turf immediate issue while talk of new facility still in planning stages

> JOSEPH D. JOHNSON DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU has sidelined plans for a new sports complex to replace McAndrew Stadium, focusing on replacing McAndrews artificial surface first.

"Our concentration is on getting bids on the turf," said interim Chancellor John Jackson. "That's the immediate Jackson is still looking at working toward a new facility for the long term, though SIU and Kansas City-based con-sulting firm HOK continue to work hand in hand formuis to be proposed at the April Board of Trustees meeting.

The plan, developed by Civitas, a firm assigned to examining land-use options, includes the placement of new signs around campus, new lighting, the refurbishing of older buildings and satisfying space and inventory needs. According to Jackson, discussions of the sports complex will coincide with a presentation of the land-use plan at the

BOT meeting.

The actual proposal for the sports complex could be some time down the line, though, as SIU plans to direct its energy to preparing the new turf for McAndrew Stadium by the time football season rolls around in autumn.

In February, the BOT approved a plan to pay for new turf for McAndrew Stadium, costing an estimated $750,000.

Although he won't be there to see the complex completed, Jackson, in the midst of his final semester as chancellor,

"A project of this magnitude requires a great deal of study and work," said Jackson. "[But] were moving along on the more long term, as well."

Jackson originally favored building a multi-purpose domed stadium on Route 13 between Carbondale and Marion, but abandoned that idea last summer because of cost and geography problems. A more pragmatic football cost and geography problems. A more pragmatic football complex was then planned for either the current location of McAndrew or another site on campus as to keep a core connection between the football program and the student body.

up to the plate for McDonald's, eerily appearing in just about every commercial break during Saturday morning

I don't suggest that quarter pounders are the equivalent to crack, but I do question if it's such a healthy idea to endlessly shove messages affiliating athleticism and happiness with the consumption of such unhealthy food down the throats of America's youth.

McDonald's spends $2 billion a year on advertising, some of it containing misleading messages. For instance, McDonald's said 'only delicious chunks of juicy breast and thigh meat go into chicken McNuggets," when in fact the chicken meat is mixed with chicken skin and the McNuggets are cooked in high-fat beef lard that is absorbed into the chicken

I won't even go into McDonald's destruction of rain forests and exploitation of a non-union underpaid work force, but I will say that McDonald's is an economic imperialist power that makes people in third-world countries a lot thinner and people here a lot fatter.

lot thinner and people here a lot fatter.

But their sponsoring of sports continues. McDonald's has already begun its full crossover, prepared to sponsor anything that will accept their money. Before you know it McDonald's will be sponsoring a Super Bowl half-time spectacle that will include crucifixions of condemned killers and vegetarians on 20-foot high Golden Archies right on the 50-yard line, while The Backstreet Boys belt out a heart-weapship gradition of "America the Beautiful".

wrenching rendition of "America the Beautiful."

A McExecution. Would you like fries with that Well, OK, that's taking things to the extreme. But in a culture that salivates over violence, how far are we away from that? If this obscene thirst that hides like a filmy, bad-tempered Gila Monster within the innards of the American umer didn't exist, how else could you explain the popularity behind auto racing or the fact that ESPN2 televises those vapid lumber-jack contests. Why else would someone watch that drivel, unless the chance exists that there could be an abhorrent mishap at any moment. Well, I'll stop here be an abhorrent mishap at any moment. Well, I'll stop here as not to become the stereotypical cynical sportswriter or to further perturb any disgrundled Southerners.

What stops McDonald's from eventually taking over the world? No, I don't mean they're going to organize a coup d'état on Capital Hill and anoint Ronald McDonald "Dictator For Life." I mean sponsoring anything and everything that can be sponsored to the most extreme point.

How much has the McDonald's symbol already become embedded on our minds and of what importance does it

My perception of McDonald's has changed significant-ly. Now, when I walk by the ominous site in the Student Center, I see McCholesterol, McCancer and McCardiac se on the menu. What do you see?

Perhaps this is just an over-exaggeration and there's absolutely nothing wrong with McDonald's capitalistic pursuits. Perhaps McDonald's branding everything from the Olympics, to professional sports to Little League baseball shouldn't be cause for alarm.

Or perhaps we should worry about the loss of our national identity to a monolithic corporation that opens shop somewhere in the world every three hours and serves (an unhealthy) breakfast to one out of three of us every norning.

I know I'm worried that those Golden Arches are becoming more recognizable, than the stars and stripes. I sure don't want to live in McAmerica.

Brown said that he expected the tailbacks to have a good day, considering that all the players were just wearing shorts. The NCAA requires that the first two days of spring practice be conducted without full pads.

Victor Ike worked out as the first-string tailback, while Kenny Hayter worked out with the second team and Ivan Williams with the third team.

"We have leaned on Ricky and Hodges so much for the last three years that none of the guys have stepped up," Brown said. "It's a great challenge for these guys right now knowing that that's one of the major concerns for this football team."

You're at a party. There's lots of drinking going on. Some guys are having sex with a young woman whose drink they've spiked. You don't interfere, thinking it's no big deal.

Well, the law sees it differently. Because if she's unable to give her consent to having sex, it's considered rape. A fclony. Punishable by prison.

It benefits everyone for you to stop it from happening. You'll be keeping a woman from tremendous emotional pain if you do. And you could be helping your friends commit a crime if you don't.

Coach search ends Friday

Current Saluki interim head coach Lori Opp's future with the women's basketball team is unknown, as a national search for the position moves

Permanent women's basketball coach may not be named until after spring signing period

The nationwide search for a new women's basketball coach will end Friday, but Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk hasn't set a date to reveal his final decision

Kowalczyk said he would like to name the new coach before April 4, ROWALCZYK Stati ne WOULD like to harme the new Coach before Appli 4, the beginning of the spring signing period, but it may take longer.

"I just don't know that that's possible," Kowalczyk said.

But the longer it takes, the harder it will be to recruit new players. SIU women's basketball has five a thletic scholarships to fill.

"This isn't the best time to fill those," Kowalczyk said. "We want to do this as quick as possible but without cutting any corners, certainly.

Current intenim head coach Lori Opp is still a viable candidate. Her name is among a large stack of resumes Kowalczyk has received, which includes coaches with head coaching and assistant coaching experience at the college level.

We'll stop taking resumes on Friday," Kowalczyk said before he mentioned that Opp's win-loss record won't affect her chances of retain-interim coach less than three months before the season started, is in a familiar position now. Her squad's unimpressive record was due, largely in part, by season-long injuries. And she also operated this season with a coaching staff that had one less assistant coach than the NCAA allows. "We're addressing that," Kowalczyk, "but the first priority is head coach and then we go from there."

Opp remains dedicated to SIU basketball. She is carrying on as if she has been named the coach and has continued to recruit players throughout the semester, which should help whomever is named to the position

"I think whoever comes in here to do this job has got a lot of work to do because we basically have to rebuild," Kowalczyk said. "We know we have some good players in place, but we don't have a lot of numbers. And Kowalczyk realizes that time is of the essence.

"I am trying to move this thing along as quickly as possible. I don't like the suff siting out there. And it hurts us in recruiting, and it hurts our student-athletes."

New logo to be released in August

In order to build more excitement, the Athletic Department has postponed revealing the new athletic logo until late summer

> JAVIER SERNA DAILY EGYPTIAN

Marketing strategies can change anything. The new Saluki logo, originally scheduled to be released this month, will now be revealed in August, SIU Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk Kowalczyk had originally intended for the logo to be revealed this month to coincide with the 50-year anniversary of the Saluki, which changed from the former mascot, the Maroons, on March 19, 1951.

"It delays my desire, but I think it is the wisest choice," Ko

"It delays my desire, but I think it is the visest choice," Kowalczyk said. "March is not a good month from a retail standpoint and from a public-relations impact standpoint. In talking with the Collegiate Licensing Company and other people in the business, [August] would be the most opportune time for us."

While it won't be revealed for months, the logo is nearly complete, but Kowalczyk said another thing holding back the release is that the University needs to approve the logo.

Aaron Coldren, university service coordinator with CLC, has worked with logo changes at other universities recently, and is involved with SU's new Saluki. He said that pushing the logo back will allow retailers to clear their shelves of merchandise with the current logo on it, as well as introducing the logo in a way that could gain the public's interest in a

Welcome to McAmerica — it's gotta be the fries

What should worry the avid sports fan the most about the world of athletics? Is it drugs? Is it violence? Is it greed? No, it's Happy

Throughout the Grand Ole U.S. of A., McDonald's, that grease-friendly food chain we've grown to worship, has slowly, subtly began its quiet assimilation of the world of sports. Although my hypothesis borders on extreme, trust me — it has merit.

Let's look at the evidence. McDonald's sponsors the 2000 Summer Olympic Games in Sydney. Am I the only who finds this immensely disturbing? How many Olympic athletes do you actually believe sucked salt-laden golden fries and antiartery Big Macs prior to competition?

The sports world has been even worse, has been even worse, fueling McDonald's gimmicks to the point of nausea. What's next? Happy Meals with Rae Carruth action figurines? Perhaps an entire set of control. entire set of controcollects Zig Zags and bottles of Febreeze.

Its fattening products are being plugged in association with athletics, as if the athletes competing in these events could compete on the level they do after consuming such junk food.

Perennial advertising sell-out Michael Jordan has even helped hawk McDonald's burgers. The most recognizable person in the history of athleties promoting a food item that is packed with more grease than Par Riley's hair? It seems the two (Jordan and McDonald's) would go together as we'll as George Ryan and a bong, but such is not the case. Other sports gods like Larry Bird, Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire have also dipped their hands in the vat of grease and pulled out gold. Even Bugs Bunny has stepped pulled out gold.
