Justice Mike Jonscher said since no one is waiting to step in as president, USG President Tim Hildebrand could refuse to give up his office May 16.

The board was asked to appeal the commission's nullification decision by Trojan party presiden-tial candidate Mike Contile and vice presidential candidate Brian Hawkins, who won the April 11 election before the results were nullified by the commission one However, instead of granting the Trojan's appeal the board sent the campaign violations back to the election commision to be reexamined.

"There were over 10 violations of all parties," Todoroff said. "Whose to say (the results) might not have turned out differently." Contile said there was no proof of fraud or of students changing their votes.

USG lauds boycott on soda machines

Student leaders raise furor over 55-cent cans

Student leaders are advocating boycott of campus pop machines because of the increase in prices.

A resolution in support of the boycott on campus was passed Wednesday night by the Undergraduate Student by the Student

The resolution, written and submitted by east campus senator Rod Hughes and science senator Nishi Vakharia, says the increase adversely affects the student body and the senate must "show its dis gust with the administration's continuous disregard for the students' desire.

AIDS education lacking for high school students

WASHINGTON (UPI) Schools provide the least amount of AIDS education to 11th and 12th graders—a time when their sexual activity most likely increase—and to students in smaller school districts, government repens said Thursday.

The reports by the General Accounting Office, Congress watchdog agency, recommended more instruction on acquired immune deficiency syndrome to all students and that state and local governments use Centers for Disease Control funds to collect survey data on AIDS education in schools.

SIU researchers study toxin in effort to develop antibody

Soldiers' lives could be saved through SIU-C research funded by the Department of Defense, a representative of the defense agency responsible for the search said. The researchers are investigating a toxin that occurs naturally and infects tropical fish. When an individual eats a fish infected with the ciguatera toxin, symptoms ranging from gastrointenal distress to death can result.

Donald Tindall, a SIU-C botanist responsible for growing the samples, said the ciguatera toxin is a natural occurring toxin common in tropical waters. Fish carrying the toxin can cause illness among humans who eat the infected fish.

The illness causes gastroin-testinal distress in three to six hours and can eventually cause malfunction in the nervous sys-

In rare cases, this can lead to death by suffocation in infected individuals. When digested, a person's diaphragm can stop functioning, Tindall said.

Tindall said there is a great deal of interest in the ill-sess because little is known about it. It is undetectable in fish and is accumulated in the fatty tissues in the human body.

"There's no good clinical treatment for it," he said.
Chuck Dasey, public affairs officer at the U.S. Army Medical

West: ISSC study a healthy endeavor

The Intercollegiate Sports Study Committee's study on the role of SIU-C athletics is rolling along and there seems to be sup-port in favor of keeping Saluki sports intact.

Ouestionnaires were sent out to constituency groups around campus and the surrounding community and two open forums were conducted to allow an equal chance for all to present their views on Saluki athletics. The open forum was designed to let those who were not sent a survey respond with any comments or suggestions.

The purpose of the study is to help Saluki intercollegiate athletics gain knowledge and perceptions about Saluki athletics. Charlotte West, SIU-C associate athletic director said the sub-committee was devised to assess attitudes and give individuals a chance to give a free response as to the role of athletics at the University.

"I don't view the study as threatening in any way," West said. "I think we've garnered a lot of suppor it seems, for mainte-nance of the present scope of our programs. I view it as a healthy endeavor."

Approximately 20 people attended the open forums and more than 1,000 of the original 3,350 questionnaires, all of which are confidential, have been returned. The information is expected to be complete by the end of summer.

"We thought the questionaires would be a valid representative of our different groups of people and then we would supplement that with the open hearing," West said. It was designed to give everyone an opportunity and nobody could say they were denied the right to express their point of view.

The study was a direct outgrowth of anthropology professor Jerome Handler's belief that the University should drop its foot-ball program, West said.

"Handler presented his case to the IAAC last year," West said.

'And I think it caught the com mittee members a little off guard." A March 22, 1989, Daily Egyptian article reported that Handler asked the Faculty Senate to reconsider the social and eco-nomic value of SIU-C's football

In retrospect, West said the IAAC should have pursued the issue at that point but it didn't take action until Handler present ed his case to the senate.

"The president wanted it to be studied as fairly and as objective-

Softball team plays 4 times this weekend

By Eric Bugger

The SIU-C softball team is hoping to extend its 16-game winning streak this weekend as it wraps up regular-season play at Illinois State Friday and Indiana State Saturday.
The Salukis are ranked 18th in the nation and their 29-6 record is one win shy of tying the school

Peay.
The Salukis haven't faced a conference opponent since April when they swept a doubleheader from Wichita State. SIU-C coach Kay Brechtelsbauer hopes the layoff doesn't adversely affect her team going down the stretch.

"There is no sense in wasting energy worrying about something we can't control," Brechtelsbauer said. "This is a veteran ballclub and I think they'll rise to the occasion.

The Salukis take a 10-0 conference record into the two double-headers this weekend. SIU-C was picked by the Gateway Conference coaches in the latest poll to win its first-ever conference tournament

Even with the conference tournament just around the corner. Brechtelsbauer isn't looking pasi this weekend.

"This is a determining week-end," Brechtelsbauer said. "We are in a position to win it. It is in our hands."

If the Salukis can sweep Illinois State and Indiana State they will be in a great position to take the top seed going into the tournament, even though rain kept them from proving themselves against preseason conference-favorite Western Illinois. The Westerwinds (27-13 overall, 8-2 conference) are presently third in the conference behind SIU-C and Illinois State (27-24, 10-2).

The Salukis have a 20-33 career record against Illinois State and have lost five of the last eight games against the Redbirds. The teams split last spring in a double-header in Carbondale.

They're a good ballclub, they have a strong pitching staff," Brechtelsbauer said. "I think their conference record is indicative of their team. Their overall record is misleading because they played a lot of ranked teams early in the

It is rare occasion to see a ream progress from worst to first in one season. Saluki baseball fans could witness one such rare occasion this weekend.

After finishing last in the Missouri Valley Conference at 6-14 last season, the Salukis are 40-8 overall and lead the Valley with Creighton are tied at 12-4, one game ahead of Wichita State.

The Salukis enter the final weekend of the conference season in the best position. If the Salukis sweep Indiana State, they are con-ference champs. Coach Richard "Itchy" Jones likes his team's anyone else does. We will not be looking over our shoulder."

The Salukis would win a tiebreaker over Creighton. They defeated Creighton three times in a four-game series April 14-15 here. But the Salukis wouldn't win a tiebreaker with Wichita

Second game a charm for Blackhawks

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — The Chicago Blackhawks, who lost the openers of their first two playoff series, went on to win each in seven games. So far, they have stuck to formula in the Campbell Conference final, looking terrible in a 5-2 loss to the Edmonton Oilers.

If this is the secret to success, nobody has filled in Coach Mike

"I'd like to see us come out and play," he said. So far this year, that has been the Blackhawks' history. It seems there is seldom middle ground. They're on or they're not. And they've been "on" in Game 2 against previous opponents Minnesota and St. Louis but both those games were in Chicago. This time, the Blackhawks are without home advantage as the Oilers finished the regular season with 90 points to Chicago's 88.

The biggest flaw in the Chicago Formula may be the Oilers. With four Stanley Cups in the 1980s, Edmonton became a team known for playoff excellence which can't be said of Minnesota or St. Louis.

The Oilers won Game 1 with only a mediocre performance.
"We were not sharp in Game 1, particularly with our passing," Edmonton Coach John Muckler Edmonton Coach John Mucker said. "But we will play better in Game Two, particularly on our power play. They had more chances on our power play than we did," he added of the team that leads the NHL with four short-handed playoff goals.

Oilers veteran defenseman
Kevin Lowe said the game plan was right but the execution could have been better.

"I think we were a little rusty (after eight days off) on a couple of instances but we played the type of game we needed to to beat the Hawks. They're too disciplined to let us freewheel."

As for Chicago's attack, attention still centers on Keenan's choice of benched players, and forechecking winger Dirk Graham missed the game because of his injured knee Asked to speculate on why his team has been so inconsistent

NATO allies hear proposal to cut European missies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Secretary of State James Baker presented NATO allies Thursday with a U.S. proposal that would scrap plans to modernize its aging short-range nuclear arsenal in Europe and speed up arms-control talks with the Soviets. The White House proposal, outlined by Baker at a special meeting of NATO foreign ministers, was not unexpected. West Germany and other allies have said for weeks the modernization program was a dead issue because the short-range missiles could reach only the recently democratized and now-friendly countries of Eastern Europe

RIGA, Larvia, U.S.S.R. The re-election of Anatolijs Gorbunovs as chairman of the Suprame Soviet, the effective president of the republic, was seen as a sign of moderation for Lavia, which wants to avoid Moscow's wrath—and economic sanctions like those imposed against Lithuania—while declaring independence.

City of New Orleans crashes; 25 injured

The southbound City of New Orleans Amtrak, which stops in Carbondale, slammed into a log truck at a railroad crossing in rural Durant, Miss. Thursday. Officials said 20 passengers and four crewmembers were treated for minor injuries and released. The truck driver was listed in stable condition with a fractured arm. A spokesman at the Carbondale Amurak office said no Carbondale crew members were aboard the train at the time and that it was "hard to tell" whether any passengers from Carbondale were on the train. The wreck was the third in 10 days for the rail carrier.

State tax program generates financial help for homeless

Illinois taxpayers gave the homeless a bigger break than rapayers donated more than $130,785 to the Assistance to the Homeless Fund by entering the amount they wished to give on line 11d on their income tax fund.

Having already surpassed its goal by more than $30,000, the Department of Public Aid plans to provide homeiess shelters in Illinois with counseling programs, meals and adequate shelter.

There are at least 50,000 people in Illinois right now who are acting director of the department. "I'm glad Illinois taxpayers want-ed to help make a difference this

Dan Pittman, DPA spokesman, said he the amount currently raised is not set in stone, and it is going up all the time as late income tax forms come in.

"I am pleased we hit our plateau," Pittman said. "That money will really make a differ-ence to shose who are homeless."

Since the DPA reached its goal, the program will continue next Pitassa said the opportunity for people to designate an amount for the homeless fund has been offered in past years, but the program hasn't always been successful.

The program was offered last 1986 and the goal was not met. Pittman said the fact that people were only allowed to donate up to $10 per income tax form may have been a primary reason the goal wasn't met.

This year, people could donate any amount of money from $1 on Pittman said the money has yet to be designated to any shelters in Illinois because new funds keep

'Hands on' project teaches kids positive attitude towards science

Students in local elementary chools will trade in their science books for pulleys, circuit boards, live animals and plants as part of a hands-on science program SIU-C started last year

The Illinois Board of Higher Education and the National Science Foundation have recently awarded SIU-C two separate grants to expand the program to include students in kindergarten through the sixth grade at Carbondale, Murphysboro, Du Quoin and Pinckneyville elemen-

Students get a better sense of what science is about by doing it rather than reading about it, said Kathleen Pericak-Spector, an associate professor in mathematics at SIU-C and co-director of "Hands-on Science for the Elementary Grades."

"The program gets children thinking about science. It's not 'Let's learn these facts about sci-ence.' It's, 'Let's learn what it's like to be a scientist and discover things," she said.

When the students make their own discoveries, science has more meaning for them, said Susan Pearlman, an assistant professor in curriculum and instruc-tion at SIU-C and co-director of the program.

Students have fun and develor a positive attitude toward science," Pearlman said, "They become interested in learning more about it.

Softbail, baseball making us proud

FOR SPORTS FANS, 1990 must be the year of the First it was basketball. Well, it was almost basketball. Now it's baseball and softball, vying for attention left over from other sports teams.

Who to watch? Now that the Blackhawks have clinched the Norris Division, eyes of sports fans in Southern Illinois are all over bats and balls. Becoming more wrapped up in Saluki base runners with every win, baseball and softball Salukis have given fans plenty of reasons to be excited this AMID SIGNS-recruit signs, that is-of an even better season next year, Coach Richard "Itchy" Jones and his team continue to impress fans with a non-stop pitching and batting streak.

By the middle of April, the baseball Salukis were ranked inside the top 20 teams in the Collegiate Baseball/ESPN Poll. Saluki baseball earned a No. 10 ranking and the attention of fans nationwide May 1.

THE SOFTBALL SALUKIS threatened to join their athletic counterparts in the rankings, receiving votes for the top 20 in mid-April. The women were excluded from the NCAA Softball Committee's poll although they beat the No. 18 Connecticut and No. 14 I ouisiana Tech. So goes our luck with rankings ...

But 10 days after the softball Salukis were denied access into the NCAA poll they were awarded the 18th spot in Division I play. The team's overall record is a towering 29-6 in the midst of a 16-game winning streak.

FEW DISAPPOINTMENTS have clouded an otherwise spectscular softball season. Pulling ahead in Gateway Conference play at 10-0, Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer is busy building a young team. Already she has signed four seasoned players to next year's squad.

Jones' squad is in first place in the Missouri Valley Conference. Hopefully, it will clinch the Conference championship and prove a one-year comeback from last place is not a distant dream.

Good luck to both teams in the final games of two fantastic seasons. Thanks for making us proud.

Spingfest ruins condition of Arena playing field

Before everyone would have you believe that the new Springfest location is perfect for the ages, let me tell you about one group who thinks not—

Before the Arena Playfields became one day a year Springfest grounds there existed nearly 270 days a year for 8,000 participants on 450 Intramural football and softball teams. Although their fields never were in great shape (hint, hint) and Spring season always makes for a challenge completing scheduled around wet fields and before finals-we were promised that the condition of these fields would soon be improved. We seem now to be literally and figuratively losing "ground" though.

The recent Springfest escapades left truck ruts, broken glass, pull tabs, straw, mud slicks and holes, cigarette butts, banana peels and who knows what else to contend with hy several thougand Striping. with by several thousand Spring softball participants. To say these fields are now completely unsafe for human play may be putting it mildly.

One of five areas has been put off limits until the damage of one day can be repaired. I question whether or not at least to or three of the other areas shouldn't also be banned. In an era of the law-suit, I see several coming SIU's

We have been told that one of SIU's most highly rated programs by students and the University community as well as profession-als in the field, is the Intramural program (rated third in student service programs in the most recent survey of students).

Wheelchair safety should be everybody's goal

Last weekend my roommate and I were driving down Cherry Street at 1 a.m. along side of the road I saw someone riding in a wheelchair. My roommate, who was diving, came very close to hitting his person. It saddens me to think that if we weren't paying attention we could have caused bodily harm to this individual.

Now I realize that many of the sidewalks in Carbondale are cracked, bumpy and just aren't wheelchair accessible, so I do understand why this person was driving in the street. But, what I do not understand is why this individual did not have a light or some sort of reflector for oncom-ing cars to see them. Another question that comes to mind is why do most of the main streets in Carbondale have special lanes for wheelchairs but, not the side streets. Hopefully in the future Carbondale will do something about this problem. In the mean-time for those of you who are forced to drive in the street (especially at night) please carry a light or some reflective device.—Judith Misuraca, junior, speech communication.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editori-n-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, are was staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member. Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Shifting right and left

By Jackie Spinner

Middle class yuppies wearing Ronald Reagan grins, sporting conservative slogans and fighting liberal battles for democratic

FOR POLITICAL scientists and observers of college politics, this trend of the '80s and new '90s generation of college students doesn't make sense.

"An increasing number of young people are saying 'I'm Republican,' but it doesn't mean anything," said Barbara Brown, a University political science lecturer. "They aren't being consistent with partisan and candidate choice and issue content.

Brown, like many of her colleagues who observe political behavior, says former President Reagan had some influence, molding many college students into a more conservative form.
"College students are especially vulnerable to the influences of a John Kennedy, a Ronald Reagan," Brown said. "The fact that Ronald Reagan a fascinating media president, was there makes a difference." a difference.

John S. Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said college students clearly supported Reagan and the Republican party in the '80s.

"They don't care Rorald Reagan was opposed to everything they supported," he said. "They liked Ronald Reagan."

BUT TONY Zagotta, national chairman of the College Republicans, said conservatism in college students goes deeper than the surface.

"A lot of people think our generation was fascinated with Ronald Reagan, the man, not the associated with the Republican party," said Zagotta, a May 1989 graduate of Illinois State University. "College students may not tow and 20,000 members nationwide.

During he 'bos, the College Republicans grew to more than 1,000 clubs and 125,000 members. Membership has since leveled.

Zagotta said 40 percent of the Republican party is under the age of 40. National polls tend to reflect this number.

The Wirthlin Group, a Virginiabased polling organization, released a poll last April that merged the results of 6,000 people nationwide.

THE POLL showed people under 30 are the strongest supporters of the Republican party with 48 percent between 18 and 34 showing support and 35 percent of those more than 50 showing support.

Bill McInturff, senior research

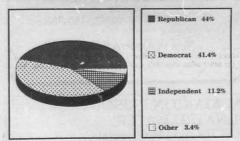

Bill McInurff, senior research associate for Wirthlin, said in the last seven years, polls have shown increasingly more support for the Republican party among the 18 to 20 agc group.

"Young people were not exposed to Nixon, Watergate and Vietnam," McInturff said. "They've seen 90 menths of economic growth and associate that growth with the Republican party,"

Of those surveyed, 44 percent said they affiliated with the Republican party, 41.4 percent with the Democratic party, 11.2 percent said they were independent and 3.4 percent said they affiliated with other parties.

Four hundred students were randomly selected from the University Directory to be surveyed by telephone with 132 responding. They were interviewed April 28 through May 2.

Although more students identified with the Republican party, 41.4 percent considered themselves neutral on political issues. Contrasting liberals to conservatives, 5.3 percent said they were very liberal, 24.1 percent liberal, 20.3 percent conservative and 9 percent very

Appeal on behalf of Walker denied by judge; execution date to be set

U.S. Supreme Court justice Thursday refused to suspend a ruling that opened the way for Illinois' irst execution since

Justice John Paul Stevens, without comment, rejected an appeal by a group that had been trying to stop the execution of Charles Walker, Walker was condemned to death in the 1983 murders of a Mascoutah couple, whom he tied to a tree, robbed and shot. The victims were fishing in a creek

The ruling foliowed Monday's Supreme Court rejection of an appeal filed by the Illinois Coalition Against the Death Penalty and followed by one day Wedh.ssday's 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision upholding the constitutionality of Illinois' 1977 death penalty statute.

"I didn't know what to expect," Jon Stromsta, the attor-ney for the coalition, said of Steven's action. "His decision won't hinder our petition for a rehearing in the Supreme Court."

Stromsta said he was uncertain what effect Wednesday's federal appeals court ruling will have on his client.

"All I know is what I've read in the newspapers," he said. "It's kind of hard for me to comment at this point but it sounds like another issue for the Supreme Court, I don't think that's the end of the case. It's not the final event.

Broken-legged rodents aid in bone healing experiment

LOS ANGELES (UPI) experiment that involved sending rats with broken legs into orbit aboard a space shuttle has provid-ed evidence that broken bones heal faster in gravity, a researcher said Wednesday. Dr. G. June Marshall, director of research at Orthopedic Hospital and associate dean of the University of Southern California School of Medicine, said the experiment was conducted aboard a flight of the space shuttle Discovery in March 1989. The results of the experiment will not have any influence on how doctors treat fractures on Earth. Rather, it confirms that gravity aids in the healing of broken bones.

"The application is not too much for astronauts today, but for future space travel ... someone's going to break a bone and you'll know ahead of time that unless

With continued backing from University administrators, conditions for female employees will continue to improve, women's issues activist said

She also said plans are under way to better recognize distin-guished female faculty and to develop a mentor system to help women more easily be socialized into their academic environments.

"Something is wrong with the way we are indoctrinated into the system," Sekarar said. She said that women on tenure track need to make themselves aware of the steps required to be promoted and added that her own experience as a chairperson for the Department of Management was prompted when she was told that she was

New book takes close look at Saturday night activities

By Jeanne Bickler Entertainment Editor

Saturday night is unlike any other night of the week.

For this reason, Susan Orlean, author of "Saturday Night," looked at Saturday night a little closer than most people ever will. Orlean traveled all over the United States, participating in local Saturday night rituals.

local saturday night rituals.
While traveling, Orlean was looking at certain themes. For example, what is it like to work on a Saturday night? Who spends Saturday night with who, and what do they do? How have Saturday night traditions changed? Saturday changed?

She found Saturday night was Site found Saturday night was really an exceptional night. More people get together on Saturday nights. The band she met, No Means Yes, played every Saturday night at the Stuart Anderson Cattle Company lounge, a folksy steak restaurant chain that is popular in the Northwest. Customers usually listen to the band in the lounge while they wait for their table.

Because the majority of the loungers are waiting to hear their name called for a table, the band has to stop playing every time a name is called. As you can imag-ine, this somewhat stifles the cre-ativity of the band.

nority program launches first class

By Rob Coné

A new minority leadership program designed to train students to take a more active role in campus organizations recently graduated its first class and is already showing signs of success.

Deborah Walton, coordinator for the Emerging Leaders Program, said that of the 11 predominantly black and Hispanic second-semester freshmen who participated, one was elected to the Undergraduate Student Government and two others are now involved in the Hispanic Student Council, which will have its first meeting during fall semester 1990. One student did not complete the course, Walton said, because of commitment con-a leadership role.

Walton said the Center of Student Involvement targeted minority students for the program because mr ay of campus student organizations lack minority par-

"On this campus, if you look at the 'priority one' organizations—Undergraduate Student International Government, "Student Student Student International Student Council, Student Programming Council (among others)—everything with the exception of the Black Affairs Council and the International Student Council, the presidents are not minorities," Walton said. "We have close to 380 student organizations and out of those you can probably count the num-ber of minority presidents, secre-taries, treesurers and so forth."

Of the 36 representatives who served on USG during the past

por

year, only four were minorities—this figure does not include USG's seven white female representatives.

Walton said low minority par-ticipation in SPC is a reason to question whether the SPC was gearing enough programs toward

Amie Riech, executive chair-woman for SPC, admits that the programming council's 13 com-mittees have only a few minority representatives. But she said all of the University's registered student organizations are asked for input. She added that during the past year SPC co-sponsored 50 events with campus RSOs and pointed to their joint sponsorship with the International Affairs Council's moon cake festival and the Black Law Students Association lecture national anti-apartheid speaker, as two prime examples of minority programming

Because she believes most minority students are unaware of the value of an RSO, Walton said the leadership program's weekly sessions attempted to familiarize the participants with the various student organizations and then give them the skills and confidence to get involved.

In addition to graduate student mentors, Walton said, the students met with presidents from many of the priority one organizations and were given seminars on leadership styles, communication skills, community involvement and eti-quette. With these skills, she said, "We hope to make them better scholars and citizens."

To ensure the graduates' success, Walton said, "We will be monitoring their progress throughout their college careers."

Walton said the pilot program is scheduled to be offered again next spring. To date, no college credit is awarded to those who complete the course, but she said efforts are being made to have it accredited She also said plans are being made to include sophomore minority students.

Democrats call for reforms in campaign spending laws

WASHINGTON (UPI) Leading Senate Democrats pro-posed a sweeping bill Thursday to reform campaign finance laws, including a limit on spending and a plan to ask each taxpayer to donate $3 to pay for most costs of the races.

The proposal also suggested that political action committees, known as PACs, be prohibited from donating to Senate candidates—an idea similar to one outlined by Eurobland and the control of lined by Republicans earlier this

However, while the two parties appeared close on the PAC question, the spending limit and the public financing proposal are bit-terly opposed by Republicans and likely to be major stumbling blocks to a compromise when the matter reaches the full Senate, perhaps next week.

Despite the intense GOP opposition, it had been expected that Democrats would push for the spending limits. However, many Democratic figures privately conceded for weeks that it appeared nearly impossible to win passage of any public financing proposal.

Under the Democratic -backed by Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the party's expert on the issue—Senate candidates could, if they meet certain qualifications, have up to 70 percent of their general election costs paid by the taxpayers.

That money would come from voluntary $3 contributions made by tarpayers on their annual tax forms. Aides to Boren said that unlike the presidential campaign financing system the December 1. financing system, the Democrats' bill would require that if a person agreed to give the money, it would be added to that person's tax bill. Under the presidential system, a taxpayer can designate a $1 for the fund, but that does not raise or lower a person's Boren said he believed enough Boren said he believed enough people would donate the money to make the plan viable. "Maybe we should not underestimate the people," Boren said. "I don't believe our people would mind investing a few million" to pay for a better campaign system.

Democratic aides added that the checkoff provision, because it involved taxes, would technically have to be included in another bill have to be included in another bill coming from the House. No matter how it is fashioned. however, any proposal to limit spending and provide public financing for congressional races is certain to cause major problems in the Senate. In 1988, Democrats unsuccessfully tried for weeks to break a Republican filibuster blocking a bill which included spending limits.

Mitchell also conceded that he did not believe all Democrats would line up behind the plan. Nonetheless, he and Boren argued campaign abuses, was ready for a reform bill.

Boren added that he considered all parts of the bill negotiable, except for the spending limits—the very item Republicans do not want.

The only meaningful way to reform the campaign finance sys-tem is to have meaningful limits," added Mitchell. "Anything less is not real reform."

Kevin Johnson, spokesman for the Department of Revenue, said only 1.8 million returns have been sent in, and 5 million are expected overall.

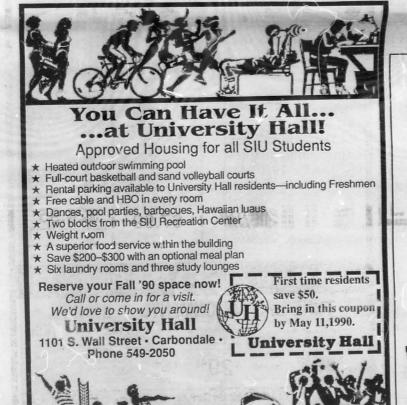

Johnson said his department will give the money to the DPA in three installments, one the end of June, one the end of July and one sometime in October.

Pittman said the DPA will decided which homeless shelters and agencies are to receive the funding after the first installment has been paid. U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, said the homeless problem is an alarming one across the country as well as in Illinois and said this money is coming just in

A report from the General Accounting Office said America's homeless youths receive considerably ices aid than runaway

Simon said he found these findings particularly troubling and urged the DPA to focus some of the money on the homeless

Federal judge rules against leaders of sex church

federal judge Thursday ruled against the leaders of a church that promised salvation through sex in exchange for cash "sacri-fices," saying it was established merely to skirt pandering laws

After hearing six days of testi-mony, U.S. District Judge William Matthew Byrne Jr. found that Will and Mary Ellen Tracy's Church of the Most High Goddess is not based on a bona fide religion and that its leaders are insia-cere in their claimed religious beliefs

"I find their testimony is incredible. The religion has no basis to it other than sexual conduct," Byrne said in ruling from the bench.

The church "is nothing but a shield attempted to be asserted by from the laws of the state of California," he added.

The decision ends a civil rights lawsuit filed against the city of Los Angeles by the couple. The Los Angeles by the couple. The suit was brought after the Tracys were convicted by a Municipal Court jury Sept. 8 of operating a house of ill repute, and Mary Elien Tracy was also found guilty of prostitution.

In the suit, the Tracys, who represented themselves, alleged that authorities were denying them their freedom of religion and expression by investigating them for sexual offenses.

After the judge's ruling Thursday, Will Tracy told reporters, "There is no religious defense in federal courts. I think (the decision) is appalling

His wife, Mary Ellen Tracy, the 47-year-old mother of eight who claims to have had sex with 2,000 men as the High Priestess of the church, said she was "totally devastated."

"This is such a slap in the face after all I've gone through," she

Will Tracy said the ruling will be appealed, but that the church will be forced to shut down. During the trial, the Tracys testified their religion requires its copulation on Mary Ellen Tracy, offer a $150 sacrifice, then "purify" themselves by having intercourse with her.

Assistant City Attorney Byron Boeckman, who dubbed the trial "the civil rights case from hell," argued that the church was noth ing more than a front for prostitu-Byrne agreed

"The sacrifices, I believe, were really a payment for sexual favors," he said, adding that the fact that church members were almost all male "also tends to show a lack of sincerity in (the Tracys') religious beliefs."

Moreover, the judge pointed out that the couple probably took in prome of more than $100,000. "but no books or records were kept of any kind, and all the bills were paid in cash."
"I find the church is an innovation of the plaintiffs set up as a result of their arrest for prostitution," he said.

A day of activism commemorating the Kent State Massacre and the Carbondale student uprisings of May 1970.

On May 4, 1970, several Kent State students protesting the Vietnam War were killed by National Guard troops. The following day, anti-war protests spread to SIUC, riots erupted here and Carbondale officials soon placed the town under martial law. What can we learn from history? How has the 1970 student movement effected SIUC student life?

Official: Cairo needs gambling boat

CAIRO, Ill. (UPI) - No city in Illinois has a richer history of riverboating than Cairo and a spokesman for the impoverished city's chamber of commerce said Thursday no Illinois city needs the economic boost riverboat gambling can provide more.

"After what this town has gone through for 50 years, this might be the last chance to save it," said James E. Wilson, head of a Cairo Charaber of Commerce committee to bring riverboat gambling to the city of 5,000 where the unem-ployment rate is about 30 percent. A native of Cairo, Wilson, 39, said he has had trouble sleeping because of his enthusiasm for the project. Charter buses from the south will wear themselves out getting here." Wilson said.

Wilson noted that cities like

Nashville and Memphis are only about 160 miles from Cairo — to say nothing of Evansville, Ind., Paducah, Ky. and Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The state will award five licenses to operate boats beginning no sooner than Jan. 1, 1991. Four of the licenses will be for the Mississippi River and one will be for the Illinois River. Each license authorizes a maximum of two

The five-member Illinois Gaming Board will decide who gets the five licenses, said Illinois Gaming Board Chairman William

The political subdivision whe. the bosts are docked will received $1 for each passenger and 5 per-cent of the boat's adjusted gross profits. That could net Cairo between $100,000 and $400,000, depending on the traffic, Wilson said.
"Over and above that we have additional sales taxes, motels and restaurants doing business," Wilson said. "This is something the state is handing to us on a silver platter we have to take advan-tage of."

tage of."
Wilson said he expected both Alexander County and the city of Cairo to pass legislation endorsing the project. He said he had already been contacted by people interested in docking a boat in

Herbicide testing in streams shows low concentrations

WASHINGTON (UPI) Recent testing for the presence of herbicides in streams in 10 midwestern states found a low concentration at most of the 145 sites sampled, the Interior Department's U.S. Geological Survey announced Thursday.

USGS hydrologists said detectable concentrations of herbicides were found to be low at 79 percent of the sites sampled during October and November of 1980

In earlier sampling conducted in May and June of last year — after herbicides had been freshly applied to the fields to control weeds — relatively higher con-centrations were found at 98 percent of the midwestern sampling sites, the USGS said.

Stream tests conducted last October and November were expected to have lower concentrations because most of the water in streams is derived from ground water instead of surface runoff during that time of year, scientists

Atrizine and metolachlor were the most frequently detected herbicides, with the highest concentration found in the Minnesota River at Jordan, Minn., during late October, the USGS said.

The latest test results are part of ongoing USGS study to determine the seasonal and geographic distribution of herbicides in streams of an agricultural region. The Midwest was chosen because about 60 percent of the pesticides used in the United States are applied in that region to produce more than 75 percent of the nation's corn and 60 percent of its soybeans.

Owl vomit research a payoff, article claims

SPRINGFIELD, III. (UPI) - A ed by the Illinois State Museum $180,000 program to research vomit from Ulinois owls is a payoff aimed at silencing a persistent critic of the state Conservation Department, according to an article in a national wildlife maga-

The May issue of Audubon magazine contends the study duplicates existing research and will shed no new light on the diet or life of owls. The Conservation Department is funding the research, which is being conduct-

Rep. Ted Leverenz, D-Maywood, said he will ask the Legislative Audit Commission to investigate how and why the agency decided to undertake the multi-year study, which involves collecting pellets of undigested material coughed up by owls. The pellets are analyzed to determine owls' prey which is then used to discover the best way to preserve owl habitat.

Leverenz is especially interested in why the researchers chose wille free-lance nature writer Pam Gibson to conduct the fieldwork for the study. Gibson, a columnist on wildlife issues, has attacked Conservation practices policies.

and policies.

Gibson is paid $25,000 a year plus mileage for the owl research. She said no payoff was involved and added she has continued to criticize the agency since she received the owl contract in 1988.

Conservation Department

spokeswoman Carol Knowles also denied the allegations.

Germany pollution dubbed 'unbelievable

ESPENHAIN, East Germany The statistics on pollution in East Germany are so appalling as to be almost unbelievable, onethird of the rivers and forests dead, air pollution in the cities up to 100 times the safe level, life shortened by years. Unbelievable.

BUT COME TO Espenhain and believe.

The map says Espenhain is a small town just south of Leipzig, but it looks like it has been transported to Dante's Inferno.

It's noon, but the sky is so dark that the streetlights have come on in front of the red brick factory that stretches for blocks along the main street of town.

Chimneys sprout from rooftops, a forest of them, tall and short, narrow and wide. Smoke pours from chimneys, sometimes in small wisps, sometimes in thick, rolling plumes.

NEXT DOOR IS a power station with four great cooling tow-ers, cauldrons that send steam boiling upward with an unnatural mist

White smoke, gray smoke, black smoke, sulfurous orange and yellow smoke — it fills the sky over Espenhain with a permanent poisonous cloud. The smoke gets in your eyes and makes them water. Soon you have to take your contact lenses out; you can't get them clean.

Statistics reveal air contamination 100 times beyond safe level

THE SMOKE GETS into our throat and makes it raw. It fills your mouth with a nauseat-ing, acidic taste; water is undrink-able.

Across the road from the factory, the ground suddenly opens into a great, gaping hole that stretches to the horizon. It looks like the Grand Canyon, with craters and ridges, but this isn't a natural phenomenon. It's a coal mine gouged deep into the earth. Through the haze, dim figures are moving — bulldozers, derricks, cranes and trains, dwarfed to toysize by the immense pit.

THE MINE IS encircled by its creations — more factories with more smoke pouring from their chimneys. There's a glint of light in the sky, but it's not the sun; it's gases being burned off.

The houses of Espenhain come right up to the gates of the factory. Their walls are stained a murky brown; cracked plaster is falling away from the underlying brick.

BICYCLISTS ARE OUT. church bells are ringing, people are working in their gardens. Flowers bloom in Espenhain, but sniff them and all you smell is sultur.

Why would anyone live here?
"You have to understand, for a long time we didn't realize what was happening to us," said Walter Christian Steinbach, leader of a local citizens' effort to do something about the pollution.

"When we started to suspect something was wrong, the gov-ernment refused to talk to us so we knew nothing for sure. Besides, this is our home. What would you have us do? There are 80,000 people in this district alone. We can't all move away." turned to the only fuel it had in abundarce the soft, brown lig-mined around nite coal Espenhain.

IT WASN'T JUST used for industry; people also heat their homes with it. Heaps of it lie everywhere -- or sidewalks, in back yards. Its acrid tang is the poisonous cloud.

AFTER WORLD WAR II the Soviet Union created an Eastern European industrial zone from southern Poland to northern Czechoslovakia. Its heart is in East Germany, which became one of the world's top 10 industrial nations, producing synthetic rub-ber, gas, chemicals, plastics, fer-tilizers, machinery, precision instruments, optical equipment

Eastern Germany had always been an industrial area, but before the war it was powered by hard coal from the western part of the country. When that fuel was cut off after the war. East Germany smell of Eastern Europe.

And that's the heart of the prob-lem: lignite is full of sulfur. Every year millions of tons of sulfur dioxide are poured into the atmo-sphere from Eastern Europe. It returns as acid rain, it contributes to global warming and its byproducts cause cancer.

But it's not just the lignite fuel. Factories have been dumping chemical wastes directly into the rivers, which are also afflicted with nitrates from fertilizer runoff. Drinking water is contaminated far above the minimum standards of the West.

ESPENHAIN HAS THE world's highest rate of sulfur dioxide pollution.

Steinbach, 45, is a minister who lives in Roetha, the next town down the road from Espenhain. He has a raspy voice and blood-shot eyes, both of which he shot eyes, both of blames on the pollution.

PEOPLE WERE HAPPY when the factories came, he said, because they provided jobs for virtually all of the district's 15,000 workers. But after a while, people in his congregation began to talk.

"It seemed that people were getting sick more, dying earlier," Steinbach said. "The doctor noticed symptoms of problems with people's lungs, but he was told to be quiet. We had nothing concrete, and it was forbidden to talk about these things. When I made inquiries of the government, I was threatened with arrest."

The official silence ended when the communist government was thrown out last fall. But what can be done for Espenhain?

Joseph Lewis Jr. was knocked to the ground. The .30-caliber steeljacketed bullet hit him just beneath the waist, passed through and exited at his hip. Another bullet split open his lower left leg as he lay on the ground. He tried to sit up. A female student held his hand, a girl he'd never seen before or since.

A split-second earlier, Lewis had raised his middle finger and ges-tured at the Ohio National Guardsmen who were on the cam-pus of Kent State University 20 springs ago. He watched as some of the guardsmen turned, rifle butts coming to shoulders. He didn't believe the rifles were loaded.

JOHN CLEARY, an 18-year old freshman, was between classes and taking pictures of the protest. Sandra Scheuer was walking to class, almost 400 feet away. Alan Canfora was waving a black flag. Both Lewis and Cleary didn't believe the National Guard had live ammunition in its weapons. All

It happened 20 years ago today. More than two dozen armed National Guard troops opened fire on students at Kent State. The students had been demonstrating for four days over President Nixon's announce-ment April 30 of the invasion of Cambodia. More than 60 shots were fired and 13 students were hit, four of them fatally — Jeffrey Miller, Sandra Scheuer, William Schroeder and

Just 10 days after Kent State, a college student and a high school student were killed and seven people were wounded at Jackson State University in Jackson, Miss. Students had gathered in front of a dormitory on the night of May 14 to protest the war and the deaths at Kent State. State highway patrol officers and Jackson police them to disperse. Then the shooting began there, too.

The shootings at Kent State pro voke intense reactions. Some who were wounded generally do not bring it up in casual conversation.

"I HAD A tendency to put it behind me as quickly as possible," says John Cleary, shot in the chest.
"Not forget it, but get on with

"I kind of keep that from peo-ple," says Robert Stamps, shot from behind. "It was such a giant event and it has so many different meanings to so many different peo-ple. I don't like for people to get to know me that way, before they really get a chance to know me."

"As I lay there, some people came up to me," says Joseph Lewis. "I said, 'How bad is it?' It didn't seem very long before the ambulances came. I began to realize I was seriously injured. I could feel myself growing very faint. I

Charles Fassinger, who was their commander that day, says he was knocked down by a rock. He believes the guardsmen are sincere when they said afterward they felt threatened

"I WAS THERE and know why they felt (threatened)," Fassinger said. "I was older and I vas a combat veteran and I didn't feel very comfortable. The vast majority of the shooters said they felt threatened.

"I heard a sound that was a very distinct, sharp, loud sound. I imme-diately looked to my right and at that instant-in microsecondsome of the guardsmen began firing toward the students. We ordered cease-fire. I had my lieutenant, who had a radio, call headarters and have them get some ambulances. I could see what appeared to me to be two wounded

The new memorial to the events of 20 years ago will be dedicated today. The memorial has become as embroiled in controversy as the event it commemorates.

EIGHT OF THE nine wounded students are expected to be on campus and as many as six of them might participate in a "silent protest" at the dedication ceremo-ny. The main objection is over the size of the memorial—it is much smaller than the one originally envisioned and the university maintains it is because not enough money could be raised.

"I'm going to boycott that (dedi cation)," says Alan Canfora, 41, shot in the wrist. "We're not supcation) portive of the university's attempt to build only 7 percent of the origi-nal design. They are attempting to minimize the significance of life and death, and we cannot stand for that. My friend Jeff Miller was urdered there."

UNTIL JUST A week ago, the memorial was not going to display the names of the students killed, which angered the wounded stu-dents and some the parents of the slain. But the university reversed itself, and a plaque with the names will be placed near the memorial.

Both Dean Kahler, the most seriously injured of the students (he remains a paraplegic) and Stamps will participate in the dedication for the memorial.

"I think the university has made some mistakes," Stamps said, "but I'm going to be at the memorial in the spirit of working together, If there's a silent protest going on, I'm going to be supporting that, too."

"As the ambulance left, I was fear-ful I was going to die" says Lewis. "The thought that ran through my head—and remember, I was 18 years old—was, 'This could be it, Joe.' Well, if that's the case, it's OK. It was a good 18 years. Soon after that, I lost consciousness

SOME ARE STILL bitter, some have forgiven. Most all have gotten on with their lives.

Canfora lives in Barberton, Ohio, and is director of the Kent May 4 Center, an organization leading a campaign to raise money for a larger memorial. Lewis works for a municipal water department in Oregon.

Stamps teaches sociology at the University of La Verne in California. Kahler is an Athens County, Ohio, commissioner. Cleary is an architect in Pittsburgh. Tom Grace is a social worker in Buffalo, N.Y.

The observance, Lewis says, has created "an odd combination of feelings. It's like a class reunion, an anniversary and a funeral all in one."

ued by the command.
The purpose of researching ciguatera toxin, Dasey said, is to develop an anti-body that would combat illness suffered by soldiers and civilians who may come in contact with either naturally occur-ring or introduced—chemical war-fare, in other words—toxins.

"It is to make an antibody against that kind of toxin," Dasey said, "Our ultimate goal is to come up with one that protects against a family of toxins.

Paul Brandt-Rauf, a toxicologist and associate professor at Columbia University in New York City, said the ciguatera toxin is "an insidious toxin because it is water soluble.

He said though it is mainly trop-ical in nature, it can exist in other climates. Another reason the toxin is hazardous is because cooking and purification systems won't affect it.

Though the rate of death is only between five and 10 percent of those infected, it is not the common cold.

"People who get this are sick for a long time," Brandt-Rauf said.

The file in the SIU-C Research Development and Administration outlining the proposal said the mis-sion of Tindall and Donald Miller, a professor in the school of medicine, is to grow, test and deliver toxin samples to the medical command in hopes an anti-body can be developed.

The file said the toxin would be tested on connections between the muscle and nerves of crawfish, lobster and frogs. The toxins are also to be tested on mice and the intestines of guinea pigs.

Miller said the testing is neces-

"If we didn't do (the testing), we'd be in trouble," Miller said. You have to do that to prove you're producing what you say you are producing."

The toxin occurs naturally in me tropical species of dinoflagellates, single-celled organisms, which live with aquatic plants.

Plant-eating fish which ingest
the dinoflagellates become infected. Meat-eating fish ingest the other fish and humans eat the meateating fish, such as redsnapper and barracuda, and become infected.

Documents in the file indicate the project began in December 1986 and is scheduled for completion in November 1990 with a total estimated cost near $1.2 million paid by the U.S. Army Medical Research and Acquisition Activity, with the medical command at Fort Detrick, Md.

The Department of Defense is sponsoring the current research. It has previously been sponsored by the Food and Drug Administration, National Institute of Health and other agencies.

Total funding from all sources is close to $2 million, Tindall said. Research on the organism responsible for the toxin has be done in one form or another since 1978, he knowledge base of how to protect people against toxins," Dasey said.

The concern, according to press coverage in the spring of 1989, was that some of the anthrax virus could escape from the laboratory and harm people and animals alike.

He added the command conducts many health-related research pro-jects, such as better ways to combat malaria.

Dasey also denied anything but a very limited health risk involved in the research. He said the toxin cannot reproduce because it is dead, and safety standards are required by the University, the state and the command.

Paul Brandt-Rauf, a toxicologist and associate professor at Columbia University in New York City, said the toxin was "not high on my list" as a choice for the development of a biological weapon. He said the toxin is dead and can't reproduce. If introduced into a water system, the toxin would become too diluted to harm humans, though deaths may occur from eating infected fish. Brandt-Rauf said it is remotely possible to develop the toxin into a weapon, but if he were to develop a weapon from a fish, he would use the poison, such as the one carried the very poisonous puffer fish. He wouldn't chose the ciguatera toxin. "As it exists in nature, it's not very good (as a potential weapon),'

Tindall agreed. "There are other compounds that are much more

Mark Huntley, an intern with The Foundation on Economic Trends, a Washington, D.C. based watch-dog group concerned with the effects of new technology, said he isn't convinced the research is ared to protect the lives of individuals or military personnel who eat tropical fish carrying the ciguatera toxin.

The implication is that defensive systems can be used offensive-ly," Huntley said.

The foundation has been using the court system for about 10 years to get access to documents concerning military research conduct-ed at non-governmental facilities.

The contract Canteen has with the University allows the company to raise the price if it can document that its costs have gone up a certain amount, Corker said.

"They came to us about raising the price, and it was approved, he said.

According to Hughes, a majoriof pop machines in Southern ty of pop machines in coal Illinois have prices less than 55

Hughes said he believes after Canteen raised its price, the Student Center raised the machine price to keep the same level of profit.

The price could have been kept the same and the University's profit lowered, he said.

Hughes said the price change should have gone before the Student Center Board.

"Any increase must be mutually agreed upon," Hughes said.

But according to Corker, the vending machine contract is a campus-wide contract and is not something the Student Center Board usually considers. "I don't see the problem. The only thing that is going to be hurt-ing (from the boycott) is the Student Center," Corker said.

Revenue from the Student Center machines is put pack into the center, Corker said. Funds from all other campus machines are put into a central account, the Student Welfare and Development fund, which is then transferred over to the Student Center, he said.

Baseball's 'wealthy' landing in the cellar

Cardinals, Ciants, New York teams in unfamiliar area

By Mike Tully UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — No one has ever found a way to redesign baseball's cellar.

It's a slum all to itself, a place where no one wants to receive his mail. This is one house that will never be a home. Reams of wallpaper could scarcely improve it, and a new layer of tile would just go to waste.

and a new layer of the would just go to waste.

When you reside in last place in any baseball league, forget about getting the right set of drapes. Don't even bother with new furniture. Santa Claus will never come down this chimney. Even the cockroaches won't want any part of it, and the houseplants would die in 24 hours.

You could install a hot tub in this cellar, and no one would ever get wet. Don't even dream of entertaining there. After all, who would visit if they could help it? Door-to-door salesmen will walk past with their nose in the air.

Down in this basement, the pipes are always leaking and the washing machine overflows. There are spider webs in the corner, and you'll probably step on a nail. It's no party time down there, not even on Saturday night or on birthdays.

If nothing else, baseball's cellar is a model of stable real estate. The value of this neighborhood never goes up or down. Attila the Hun could live next door without burring the prices. You couldn't give it away, with or without an oil well.

Anyone who lives in basebali's cellar will relocate in a minute. They'll sell low just to get out.

And leave the furniture and dog. Any resident would burn the place down, even after living there for years.

English I

Considering all this about baseball's cellar, you wonder why the rich and the very rich are exploring the neighborhood. San Francisco has taken a ride up and down the streets. Kansas City has done everything but pick out the paint. St. Louis and New York are measuring the walk to the bus stop.

Entering Thursday night's games, only Adanta was preventing the Giants from legal residence in the National League West cellar. Just last summer, it seems, the Giants lived high on a hill overlooking the Pacific. They used to jog by the bay in the morning, and have dinner in Sausalito.

As for Kansas City, that midwest greenery smelled pretty ar ever this spring, with the chance that some newcomers would help the Royals move back to where they lived for most of the 70s and 80s. Instead, Kansas City is such a depressed area, the real estate agents can't even be polite.

Then there's New York, where $200 can buy you a hotel room the size of a suitcase, and a mid-town apartment will occupy three salaries. In this market, both the Mets and the Yankees are shopping for a cellar dwelling. At least you get the feeling the Mets will eventually choose a better neighborhood. That's more than you can say about the Yankees.

Things could improve for San Francisco, Kansas City and New York, Until then, some of base-half's wealthiest citizens have learned once again what real estate agents and pitching coaches have known for years — w.zn you play this game, so much of it is location, ³ocation and location.

Co-owner: Royals not a good buy

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Saying "not anyone with any intelligence would buy the Kansas City Royals, team co-owner Ewing Kauffman said Thursday he will wait before considering his "drowning" partner's plan to put the team on the auction block.

Attorneys for Avron Fogelman forwarded a plan to Kauffman in which the team's founder once again could become the sole owner. Kauffman would be requested to loan $34 million and also match the high offer at the end of a bidding pro-

Kauffman, 73, said the plan called for him to personally lend the Royals $34 million, which then would be loaned to Fogelman to help the real estate developer from Memphis, Tenn., resolve his financial problems. The loan would come due Jan. 2, 1991. If there were no bidders at that time, Kauffman could foreclose and be the sole owner.

"Although this procedure is very onerous to me from a financial perspective, I believe it is one way to assist Mr. Fogelman and keep the Royals secure in Kansas City," Kauffman said at a news conference at Royal's Stedium.

He said he may reach a decision on the plan by the end of the month.

"I'll be truthful, it is not a good financial investment. You are soing to lose money on the Royals.— cash plus depactation. So it has turned into somewhat of a civic opportunity."
