Bush returns from hospital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush eagerly plunged back into work Monday after hospitalization for an "out of the blue" irregular heartbeat that left doctors puzzled about its cause but confident it will not slow his aerobic lifestyle.

In high spirits, he ended a 39-hour hospital stay that at one point raised the prospect of a brief transfer of power to Vice President Dan Quayle in the event more than medicine had been needed to treat his ailment.

"It's great to be back," he exclaimed on being welcomed back to the White House from Bethesda Naval Hospital with cheers and applause from staff members gathered in the rain-soaked Rose Garden.

Bush, rated an A-1 patient, was discharged with a less-than-perfect bill of health — the irregularity was still present at the hospital though not later in the Oval Office — but an optimistic prognosis.

Though the cause may never be pinpointed, his physicians said he will be free perhaps in a matter of days to bring his usually high energy level back to full speed, even if medicine is needed indefinitely to keep the problem in check.

Capt. Bruce Lloyd, chief of cardiology at Bethesda, told reporters a decision on long-term medication can be made only after careful monitoring establishes if, when and for how long the irregularity recurs.

Meanwhile, White House physician Burton Lee underscored the point that Bush, robust and active in a way that belies the approach next month of his 67th birthday, had suffered no heart damage or other physical problems.

Lee, who supervised the medical team, said its members "decided unanimously" at a 5:30 a.m. meeting to discharge Bush even though his heart rate, while improved, had again turned erratic after six hours of overnight stability.

Lee emphasized that no "political or other considerations" had come into play.

The decision to release Bush without arresting the irregularity averted the use of an electric shock procedure that would have meant his brief incapacitation and a temporary transfer of power to Quayle under the 25th Amendment of the Constitution, dealing with presidential succession.

"Needless to say, the president wanted out. He's not a guy who likes to lie in a room," Lee said. "But this, I can promise you, had no bearing on our decision to release him."

State drug program turning away AIDS patients

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

A state drug program that helps pay for expensive anti-AIDS drugs for thousands of middle-class Illinois AIDS victims started closing its doors to new patients last week.

Guidelines for participation in the AIDS Drug Reimbursement Program were tightened May 1 by the Illinois Department of Public Aid, sharply reducing the number of patients eligible for the program.

Karl Pipenburg, spokesman for the department, said initially the program was not targeted for budget cuts.

But new guidelines were approved by the public aid department last month because officials say the program cannot continue to operate at its existing level in the midst of a state budget crisis.

About $600,000 in state funding was spent on the program during the last fiscal year.

The program, which currently serves about 1,300 people and is growing by 80 or 90 a month, helps victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome buy three anti-AIDS drugs, including AZT, which acts to slow the spread of the AIDS virus.

AZT, the most expensive anti-AIDS drug, costs AIDS victims $6,000 to $8,000 a year.

Mental health clinic workers protesting proposed budget

United Press International

Employees at state-run mental health centers around Illinois Monday marched outside their places of work and spoke out against Gov. Jim Edgar's proposed budget for next year.

However, a spokesman for Edgar said their effort was unlikely to change the governor's mind.

Employees at nearly all of the 21 facilities used their lunch hours to picket outside the facilities. They are concerned about Edgar's proposed budget, which calls for eliminating up to 718 jobs and 370 patient beds from the Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities.

Under the governor's plan, about 300 of the jobs to be cut would be done through layoffs. However, few direct care employees would lose their positions.

"The workers are angry. They feel that the burden of balancing the state budget is being put on them and their patients and they're angry about it," said Steve Trossman, spokesman for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which organized the demonstrations.

The protests were held at mental health centers in Alton, Anna, Centralia, Chester, Decatur, Dixon, Dwight, Elgin, Hines, Jacksonville, Kankakee, Lincoln, Park Forest,

The SIU Board of Trustees meeting Thursday will be a series of rubber stamping, said Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, adding jokingly, "don't print that."

Pettit said although all of the about 11 renovation projects up for discussion at the May 9 meeting will be considered carefully, the board will pass all of the renovation proposals.

Orienteering Club takes third in championships

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

Three SIUC students braved the elements of nature and came out winners.

Jeff Schafermeyer, Troy Ward and Jim Eschenbach, members of SIUC's Orienteering Club, travelled to Middleville, Mich., April 27 and 28 and competed in the USA Intercollegiate Orienteering Championships.

The threesome placed third in the nation behind West Point Military Academy and Texas A&M. Over 25 teams and 250 participants made the trek in Middleville's Yankee Springs Recreation Area.

Schafermeyer, the Orienteering Club president, also placed third individually with his time on the course.

"I think Troy and Jim did real well considering they are relatively new to the sport," Schafermeyer said. "We thought it said a lot for SIUC to take third in the nation behind such schools as West Point and Texas A&M."

Orienteering is a sport where the only three objects involved are a map, a compass and the person running the course. Participants are given a detailed map of the area to be orienteered and it is their choice on how to complete the course in the shortest amount of time. The map includes all contours of the land, all rivers, swamps and forests and all other objects, such as rocks, larger than one and a half meters.

The course portrayed on the map has a series of circles representing physical markers connected in a loop from the start of the course to the finish. It is the participants' responsibility to navigate, using the map, to each marker.

The physical markers are orange and white nylon bags connected to a hole punch similar to a time clock. When the runner reaches a marker he punches his card to let the judges know he successfully completed the navigation.

Each participant runs the course individually, but the individual times are added together to form a final team score. The team with the lowest times for both days of orienteering is the winner of the race.

The Yankee Springs course covers 15 kilometers and participants had to endure woods as well as drastic elevation change while running the course, Schafermeyer said.

Schafermeyer, a junior majoring in geography, said orienteering is a thinking sport because the runner is making choices throughout the race about what route to travel. Those choices directly influence how well he or she finishes the race.

"The main idea is to go the quickest route possible," Schafermeyer said. "We study the map before the race and plan out the quickest route between the markers. Then we run at race speed to each marker. What makes it difficult is we are running through the woods without a path to follow. We must follow it directly off the map."

Coleman 1991 Rookie of Year

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Derrick Coleman, who boasted on the day he signed an NBA contract he would become Rookie of the Year, fulfilled that promise Monday when he was awarded the Eddie Gottlieb Trophy.

Coleman, taken by the New Jersey Nets with the first pick in last June's NBA draft, was the overwhelming choice of a panel of NBA writers and broadcasters. He received 69 votes from the 96-member panel, far outdistancing runner-up Lionel Simmons of Sacramento.

"One of the toughest things you have to do when you're picked No. 1 is to prove you deserve to be No. 1," Nets Coach Bill Fitch said. "Even with all the pressure D.C. had put on him, it still was no contest."

In winning the award, Coleman became the first No. 1 pick to be named Rookie of the Year the following season since New York's Patrick Ewing in 1985. David Robinson of San Antonio, last year's winner, had to serve a two-year Navy commitment after being selected No. 1 in 1987.

Protracted contract negotiations kept Coleman out of a Nets uniform until five days before the season. On the day he signed a five-year contract worth $15 million, the Syracuse product announced his expectations.

"Being a starter for this team, being Rookie of the Year, helping the Nets win more ballgames than they did last year," Coleman said at the time.

The 6-foot-10 forward did all of that. He led all NBA rookies by averaging 18.4 points and 10.3

Saluki women hope to stay on winning track

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

The SIUC women's track and field team will try to continue its winning tradition this weekend at the Gateway Conference Outdoor Championships in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The Salukis have not finished lower than second since 1986. Prior to last year, the Salukis had won the championship four years in a row.

This year should be different for the Salukis. Saluki head coach Don DeNoon said the conference is very balanced this year and the conference statistics show any of four or five teams could win the title.

On the basis of conference statistics so far this season, Indiana State is the favorite with 114 points. Illinois State is close behind with 103, followed by SIUC at 88 points and Southwest Missouri State with 87.

DeNoon said even though Indiana State leads right now, the tide is still up for grabs.

"I found out Indiana State's quarter-miler who leads the conference has a stress fracture," DeNoon said. "That kills 10 of their points. Illinois State has one of its girls quit and some of the athletes did not look good this weekend."

The Salukis' strength lies in numbers instead of first-place finishes. The only SIUC athlete ranked first in the conference standings is junior Michele Williams in the long jump. DeNoon said Indiana State's reliance on first-place finishers could hurt them.

"The disadvantage of having so many of your points coming from wins is that you must finish first to assure those points," DeNoon said. "In our case, everybody is down the list somewhere and they could move up and score higher."

The Salukis are hampered by some nagging injuries. Sophomore Becky Coyne has had a foot injury

Men's track prepares for conference

By Wayne Frazer
Staff Writer

The Salukis are looking to run away with the Missouri Valley Conference Outdoor Championships this weekend at Wichita State.

The SIUC men's track and field team, who finished second in the meet last year, have eight conference leaders coming into the championships, but the title is by no means SIUC's to walk away with. Saluki head coach Bill Cornell said the field is very even this year.

"I'm very nervous right now," Cornell said. "We recognize it is a five-team race, which is healthy for the conference. Illinois State and Indiana State were in it with us in the indoor championship, and then add Southwest Missouri State and Wichita State because they're better outdoor teams than indoor."

Wichita State has the edge because the meet is on its track. Cornell said some people are picking the Shockers to win because of that advantage.

The Salukis are powered by NCAA qualifiers Darrin Plab and Ed Williams. Plab, a sophomore high jumper, has gone 7-61/2 this year and finished fifth in the nation during the indoor season. Williams is a junior hurdler and also made the trip to the NCAA indoor championships.

The key to SIUC's success will be the performance of other athletes such as junior Mark Stuart. Stuart has not been seriously threatened in the steeplechase this year and leads the conference with a time of 9:08.61. That time put him over 15 seconds ahead of his closest competition.

Sophomore Bernard Henry will also be trying to win in the 800-meter run. Henry is currently third in the Valley, but he is only .34 of a second off the leader, Dave Rzeutko of Illinois State.

Sophomore Kenton Rolle is closing in on the 400-meter run title. Rolle has come on in the last month to position himself third in the conference standings heading into the Valley finale. .27 of a second off pace-setter Benjamin Kelly of Indiana State.

Other conference leaders for the Dawgs are freshman Torry

Phillies' Dykstra, Daulton injured in car accident

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Lenny Dykstra and Darren Daulton of the Phillies were injured in a car accident early Monday in suburban Philadelphia. Police said Dykstra will be charged with drunken driving and may have been speeding.

"His blood alcohol level was above the .10 percent limit," said Radnor Township police Sgt. Thomas Flannery. "A summons will be issued for him to appear and answer to the charge of driving under the influence."

The two players, reportedly driving home from a bachelor party for teammate John Kruk, were admitted to Bryn Mawr Hospital following the 1 a.m. EDT accident. They were listed in fair and stable condition.

Neither was wearing a seat belt, Flannery said. The car's air bags did not inflate because the side of the car crashed.

Dykstra, the center fielder who is hitting .302, suffered a broken right collarbone, three fractured ribs and a fractured right cheek bone, along with cuts and bruises of his chest, hospital spokeswoman Ellen Madison said.

Daulton, a catcher hitting .192, had a scratched cornea on his left eye and a fracture of the orbital bone that makes up the left eye socket, as well as cuts and bruises of the face and chest.

The Phillies placed Dykstra on Thieves broke through a door leading into the gardens of the Sternberk Palace, the home of the art collection, national gallery director Lubomir Slavicek told the news agency. The gallery was equipped with a sophisticated alarm system, but police couldn't get to the scene until 17 minutes after the thieves struck. The paintings stolen included "Absinth and a Card," "Mandolin and a glass of pernod," "A table with a goblet," and "The port of Cadaques."

Police fired tear gas to break up the disturbance in the racially mixed Mount Pleasant neighborhood, but bands of rioters roamed the streets into the early hours of Monday, looting a convenience store and setting trash cans on fire before order was restored. Six police officers suffered minor injuries and were treated at area hospitals, said police Lt. Reginald Smith.

Brief, intense storms strike northeastern Illinois, kill 2

United Press International
Two teen-agers were hospitalized in serious condition Monday as a result of a freak weather-related mishap in Western Springs, that left two others dead, authorities said. The Sunday deaths were the result of a brief but intense line of storms that hit parts of northeastern Illinois. Elsewhere around the state, heavy rain fell in many sections, including 5 inches of rain in Springfield, forecasters said. Monday brought cooler temperatures in the 40s and 50s and cloudy skies over much of the state except a stretch along the Mississippi River from Cairo to St. Louis, said forecaster Paul Merzlock. The colder readings brought brief snow flurries in Des Moines, Iowa, about 6 a.m., he said.

Bicyclists ignore city ordinance; officials worried

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Some city staff members may soon try to find out what can be done about bicycles posing a safety problem for pedestrians in front of the Recreation Center.

Community Director Donald Monty said although pedestrians may get in the way of bicyclists, he feels more bicyclists ride on sidewalks, causing unsafe conditions for pedestrians.

There were 22 pedestrians and 34 bicyclists injured in Carbondale last year, according to statistics from the Carbondale Police Department. Statistics were not available for injuries in front of the Recreation Center.

"The problem is people are not paying attention," Monty said. "In general, bicyclists ignore the city ordinance. You can't ride on sidewalks."

Two strips of pavement are parallel to Grand Avenue in front of the Recreation Center. The pavement closest to the Recreation Center is for pedestrians only and the pavement on the other side of the street is for bicyclists. Both paths are marked with city signs.

Monty said the paths have been marked since the late 1970s because of the high traffic volume along Grand Avenue.

In addition to education about bicycle regulations, Monty said one way to reduce the number of bicycle and pedestrian accidents is to issue tickets for disobeying the city ordinance.

According to the city ordinance, prices for the tickets would be:

- $15 if paid within two days after issuance;
- $20 if paid between two and 14 days after issuance;
- and $25 if paid 15 days or later but before a complaint is filed.

There are two exceptions to riding on sidewalks: Children 12 years old and younger may ride bicycles on sidewalks, and anyone may ride a bicycle on a path designated as a dual bicycle-pedestrian path.

SIUC Security Director Bob Harris said he is not happy with the way paths for pedestrians and bicyclists have been designated in front of the Recreation Center.

Harris said the best way to prevent accidents is to enforce the city ordinance.

"(But) I don't have the people to enforce it," he said. "I don't know what can be done."

The "bike only" sidewalk across from the Recreation Center is the center of attention among city staff members who want to find out what can be done about bicyclists who pose problems for pedestrians.

1991 Sunset Concert Series faces council vote

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will vote tonight to continue legal open consumption of alcohol at the 1991 Sunset Concert Series.

The ordinance requires approval by the City Council each year because it is normally illegal to consume alcohol on city property.

The 1991 Sunset Concerts begin at 7 p.m. every Thursday between June 13 and July 25.

The concerts alternate between Turley Park and the area in front of Shryock Auditorium. This year, the music selection ranges from reggae and hard rock to blues and Dixieland jazz.

Other items on the council agenda include the swearing in of Mayor Neil Dillard and councilmen Richard Morris and John Mills, who were re-elected April 2.

The appointment of the city clerk also is scheduled. Dillard is asking the City Council to approve his appointment of Janet Vaught for a four-year term.

City Manager Steve Hoffner also will deliver the State of the City Report.

In a memorandum to the mayor and City Council, Hoffner said five goals guided city government in the past year: economic development and community growth, investment in public infrastructure, citizen participation and community pride, human services, housing and other community accomplishments.

"Economic development continued to be the City Council's highest priority in the fiscal year just completed," Hoffner wrote.

Economic development projects Hoffner considers positive for Carbondale include the renovation and expansion of the University Mall and restoration of the former passenger depot located on the corner of Main Street and Illinois Avenue.

Hoffner noted, however, some projects including a new psychiatric hospital and a new civic center are awaiting construction or funding.

One of the topics Hoffner included in investment in public infrastructure is the progression of the Northern Connector study. The Northern Connector is the name given to a proposed highway that would go around Carbondale and reduce traffic through some of the more highly traveled streets in the city.

Citizen participation and community pride also will be a positive point in Hoffner's address.

"More Carbondale citizens are directly involved in their city government than at any time in the recent past," Hoffner wrote.

The city has more than 25 standing boards and commissions.

"Our staff has responded to numerous challenges in the past year, and the community is strong and poised for future growth and

Fighting party image gets harder for SIU

WHILE THE MAJORITY OF PARTY school stereotyping comes from out-of-town, key players of the problem are out-of-towners themselves.

During the 1991 Springfest weekend, 23 of 39 arrested on campus were from out-of-town. Off campus, 50 of the 68 arrested were from out-of-town.

This strong presence of non-Carbondale partiers has been an element in the infamous Halloween celebration for years. Until 1989 when the Halloween break spanned one week, crowds estimated at 25,000 converged on Carbondale, bringing with some of them violence and destruction.

FOR THE MOST PART, SIUC'S PARTY image is just that—an image. That is not to say the student body doesn't do its share of partying. Considering 25,000 students attend this University, it would be unreasonable to assume a substantial amount of drinking doesn't take place.

But considering SIUC boasts one of the top debate teams in the nation, holds the collegiate record for blood donations, enjoys extensive men's and women's basketball success and is home to a quickly growing law school, obviously a whole lot more than just partying is going on.

University officials have said that in general, SIUC students don't cause the problems that promote the party image. Yet it is SIUC students who are faced with combating a very negative stereotype.

IT HAS EVEN BEEN SPECULATED that graduates looking for work in this area will have SIUC's image working against them.

When the out-of-control behavior exhibited during two weekends out of the year, and predominantly by out-of-towners, begin to negate the positive efforts and accomplishments produced by this University, something needs to change.

A solution to regulating Springfest and Halloween celebrations may lie in stricter dorm rules regarding the two weekends. If dorm residents were restricted on the number of out-of-town friends staying with them during those weekends, the number of non-SIUC celebrators may go down.

KEEPING IN MIND THE $3,000 worth of damages Springfest 1991 partiers left at the Holiday Inn, stricter dorm rules may be a little short-sighted. It would, however, be a start.

To help, SIUC and other students could practice being responsible drinkers. Students of legal drinking age shouldn't be told not to drink. But they should have the common sense to police themselves so the authorities don't have to.

In the midst of trying to dispel the party image plague, SIUC certainly doesn't want to seem cold to visitors. When the visitors begin to damage property, other people and the reputation of a major state university, maybe it's time to roll up the welcome mat.

Letters

Sexist language may be based on one's attitude

You have had a number of letters in the Daily Egyptian lately about sexism in the language.

Admittedly, sexist people use the language in a sexist way. This does its sad part in perpetuating sexism.

Yet it may not be entirely the fault of the language if it is understood as sexist.

Part of the apparent sexism in English may be a misunderstanding on the part of some users of our beautiful language.

Many of us Americans speak only one language. It is hard for those who do, to understand that pronouns like "he" are neuter unless specified otherwise by their use.

Maybe it would help if more of us learned more languages as children. Perhaps it is more important that parents teaching their children to speak use words like "he" inclusively, so children get that sense of them.

It may be that the attitudes parents convey with words are more basic or more important than the words themselves.

After all, when you compare word pairs like "he/she," "male/female" and "man/woman," you find that the neuter-male term is merely the common denominator between the two words.

This comparison can leave one with a sense of female superiority: What is a male, if not an incomplete female?

Admittedly, I am biased. I believe in women's equality, and I'm an English major.

I also believe that anyone who learns to love great American authors, such as Emily Dickinson, Eudora Welty and Willa Cather, will develop a similar attitude.—Larry Roemer, junior, English.

All campus residents need quality housing

By talking to several students at SIUC, I have heard several complaints on the difference between the triads and the towers, in University Park and Brush Towers.

Many people favor the towers; because the facilities are more convenient, considering there are only four people to a bathroom instead of eight.

Also, they do not have to leave their rooms to use the washrooms, as is the case in the triads.

There are stoves and washing machines on each floor in the towers. Therefore, students are able to cook their own food and they can easily do laundry without the inconvenience of having to leave the building.

The triads have no stoves or washing machines. As a result, students living in there cannot cook and only have access to the one microwave provided to them that is shared by all the residents.

In order to do laundry, people living in the triads have to carry their loads of clothes over to the basement of Trueblood Cafeteria.

Another problem the residents in the triads and the towers have to deal with is not having screens on the windows. On warm days without air conditioning, it's quite difficult to stay in the rooms without opening the windows.

When we want to get air we have to put up with unwanted pests flying in the rooms, which is very irritating.

Because there is going to be an increase in tuition, a solution to some of these problems should be put into consideration.

Students pay the same amount for their rooms each year, and for that reason changes should be made to make living on campus as comfortable as possible for everyone.—Katrina McIntyre, freshman, pre-major.

Thief steals hard work

I would like to attempt to appeal to the conscious of the person or persons who thoughtlessly broke into my car and took my backpack.

This incident occurred on Friday, May 3 at approximately 1 p.m. My automobile was parked behind Clothes Pin Laundry on South Illinois Avenue.

At this time someone deliberately broke into my car and took my maroon, leather backpack.

There was nothing of any value to anyone in this backpack, however, it did contain an entire semester of very important paperwork and research that is pertinent to the completion of my semester.

It also contained my purse, Illinois drivers license and student I.D. which is also of no value to anyone but myself. These items could not possibly be worth anything to anyone, but to me they are irreplaceable.

I understand that whoever took my backpack is probably either long gone or simply does not care, but I am making this appeal to try to save a semester of hard work.

I am a graduate student and the papers in my backpack represent hours of work that can not be duplicated.

If the person who took my belongings has any conscience or sense of ethics they should return my property or even leave it anonymously with the Carbondale Police Department.

This request may seem futile but anyone who has ever done research of this stature will understand my desperation.

I am not out for revenge or vindication. I would simply like my work and belongings returned. If anyone has any information concerning this incident, please contact the proper authorities.

I find it hard to believe that anyone would have the nerve to take these items which are so important to me.

I hope that whoever has done this will do the right thing and return my belongings.—Jane Deppe, graduate.

Taxpayers lose with Sununu's trips when business mixes with pleasure

IT DIDN'T TAKE LONG for the White House to brush aside the snide questions about John "Frequent Flyer" Sununu's many trips on Air Force corporate-type jets.

As it turns out, the White House chief of staff wasn't gadding about for his own pleasure on political benefit.

Just about every time the pilot switched on the engines, at a minimum hourly cost of $4,000 to taxpayers, Sununu was roaring away on some important and essential official business.

We know this because the White House has released documents showing that of 77 trips made by Sununu in the government jets, only four were for personal reasons.

The rest of the time, he was traveling in his official capacity as a big cheese in the White House, or on a political mission, for which the Republican Party reimbursed the government with the price of a commercial airline ticket.

THE OFFICIAL PURPOSES of his trips show what an awesome responsibility it is to be a big cheese in the White House.

For example, in December of 1989, Sununu had to fly to Vail, Colo., on an official mission to make a speech to a group of people from Ski Magazine.

It must have been a long speech, since he stayed there several days. The following December, he went on another official mission to Aspen, Colo., to again speak to a group of people from Ski Magazine.

I find that reassuring, since a loyal and well-informed Ski Magazine staff is essential to the security of our nation. One never knows when this country might be invaded by an army of slaloming Finns or Norwegians, so our ski patrols should be always on the alert.

It's been reported that while he was on those official mission, Sununu did some skiing.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Undoubtedly, that was done to let the Ski Magazine people know that he was personally prepared to lead an attack against any hostile Norwegians, which sure raises my morale.

According to the travel documents, Mrs. Sununu accompanied her husband on both official Ski Missions. But because she was not making a speech to the Ski Magazine people, Mrs. Sununu paid $1,220, the commercial rate, for each trip. I'm impressed. She not only joins her husband on important missions, but she pays her own way. A loyal wife is a precious gift.

Sununu also made 16 official missions to his home state of New Hampshire. It wasn't explained what official White House business he conducted in New Hampshire. Possibly that is classified. But he could have gone there to make sure the maple syrup was flowing. Or is it Vermont where maple syrup flows? Well, it's somewhere up there, and what would America's pancakes be like without maple syrup?

WHATEVER HIS 16 official missions to New Hampshire were for, they surely have set an all-time record for New Hampshire missions by a White House chief of staff. And it's about time, I say. New Hampshire has been shamefully ignored by previous White House chiefs of staff. After all, New Hampshire is on the Canadian border and you never know when those people might strap on their skis and come slaloming down on us in the dead of the night. It's a geopolitical jungle out there.

As for his personal trips, not once did Sununu fail to pay for the use of the Air Force jets.

Once he went to New Jersey for a football game. He reimbursed the government $200.

ANOTHER TIME HE flew from the Florida Keys to West Palm Beach. That was just a short hop so he paid only $167.

And the other two times, he flew to Boston to visit a dentist. He paid $420 a trip. That sounds steep to me, but I guess he flew both ways. You would think they'd give him a discount, though.

Of course, his critics are saying that it's all well and good that he paid $200 to jet to a football game, and that the Republican Party paid for his purely political trips.

But it's conservatively estimated that all that flying around cost at least $800,000, and probably more if you include the crews' paychecks. And the government has reimbursed only $42,000—most of it from the GOP. Which still leaves more than $700,000 whooshing out of the jets.

THAT'S WHAT I CALL nit-picking. Sununu is a big cheese, a big heat, a top tamale. As the White House says, it is essential that he be capable of being in contact with the commander in chief at any given moment. So that's why he has to be on the Air Force corporate jet.

If that doesn't make sense, what does? It's worth every penny to know that when Sununu was soaring along at 15,000 feet on his way back from Vail or Aspen, the president could call him and say:

"John, how did the official Ski Magazine mission go?"

"Don't worry, Mr. President, the Norwegians won't dare invade."

'African Holocaust': America to blame

Let the court of history record that Western (white) conquest of the world is responsible for the "African Holocaust" and the virtual "destruction of African civilization"...

We call America to the witness stand... tell the truth and nothing but the truth.

Indictments: 1) America you kidnapped Africans and brought them to North America.

2) You killed them in the Middle Passage and whenever they tried to break free; among the recent Africans in America killed for attempting to escape you injustices... Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X.

3) You have imposed and forced an alien culture on Africans causing the break down of their families, the strong moral fiber of their cultures and their institutions.

4) You even promised to reconcile your misdeeds with 40 acres and a mule (after reconstruction) and now claim to give them "justice" with affirmative action... both of which you have reneged on... or at least want to...

Claims: In the interest of justice the prosecution chooses to settle for nothing less than: 1) An African homeland based the precedent of Israel (the "Jewish homeland")...

Point of Information: Six million Jews were killed in a holocaust and then given their own separate homeland. Africans, also displaced and dispossessed of their original home, lost 100 million lives in the African holocaust.

2) Because Africans have contributed just as much as whites have to the building of America via inventions, advanced knowledge of science, and general socio-political philosophies (a lot of which whites claim as their own,) white America you must concede real justice and equality to the Africans (blacks) and the Indians who actually own the land (i.e. practice real democracy, pluralism), eliminate majority rule by either fully integrating American society starting with the drafting of a new constitution... or give Africans (and Indians) their independent states based on the precedent of the American revolution.—Nate Luster, junior, political science.

White man has perverted Jesus' messages

"Time and time again, the black, the brown, the red, and the yellow races have witnessed and suffered the white man's small ability to understand the simple notes of the spirit.

"The white man seems tone deaf to the total orchestration of humanity. Every day, his newspapers front pages show us the world that he has created.

"The white man has perverted the simple message of love that the prophet Jesus lived and taught when he walked upon this earth."(Malcolm X, 1964.)

Nothing has changed in 1991. The white man retains the power to cause suffering among those people who challenge the authority to hold such power.

Jesus still teaches humans to walk peacefully upon this planet. You decide who knows better.—Joe Keck, sophomore, cinematography.

MCI to use legal loophole to curtail phone sex services

WASHINGTON (UPI) — MCI Communications Corp. said Monday it will use a legal loophole to curtail customer access to the fast-growing phone sex industry.

Telephone companies are required by law to carry salacious telephone programming, such as 1-900-USA-GIRL, as long as they are not found to be legally obscene.

Any telephone customer can dial a "phone sex" number to hear lurid tales of sexual escapades between men and women, women and women, and men and men — so long as they can afford the hefty fee that appears in their monthly phone bill.

But MCI said Monday it was under no obligation to provide billing and collection services for phone sex services, leaving that responsibility up to the companies themselves.

An MCI spokesman said the change would ensure that 900 phone numbers are used "responsibly."

The company also plans to assign all adult programs the special prefix of 754, allowing others to readily identify the services.

Smart gets verbal whipping from father-in-law in court

EXETER, N.H. (UPI) — A tearful Pamela Smart, already serving a life sentence for enticing her teen-age lover to murder her husband, pleaded with a judge Monday as her father-in-law branded her a "cold-blooded murderer."

The former high school media director, appearing for sentencing on additional charges, wiped her eyes, stood and interrupted William Smart as he read a bitter statement in court that wished Smart a long life in prison.

"Your honor, I can't handle this. Do I have to sit here and listen to this? I mean, come on," Smart appealed to Rockingham County Superior Court Judge Douglas Gray.

Smart's mother, Linda Wojas, shouted to William Smart: "Where does your vengeance end?"

Smart, 23, was convicted March 22 of being an accomplice to first-degree murder, conspiracy and witness tampering. She was accused of luring her lover, William Flynn, and three companions to murder her husband, Gregory Smart, last May 1 in the couple's Derry condominium.

Immediately after the verdict was announced, Gray sentenced Smart to a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole on the accomplice charge.

On Monday, Gray also sentenced her to 7 1/2 to 15 years in prison for conspiracy and 3 1/2 to 7 years for witness tampering. The terms will run concurrently with her life sentence.

Gray also allowed William Smart, Wojas and lawyers to make statements.

Smart, reading a blistering statement, addressed his daughter-in-law by her maiden name, Pam Wojas.

"May you live a very extra long, long life," he said. "I pray that if you do maybe you will suffer a small percent of what this family has had to suffer."

New Madrid shaken by 4.6 earthquake May 3

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

The lessons learned as a result of Ben Browning's Dec. 3 earthquake prediction should not be forgotten, said an SIUC professor of geophysics.

John Sexton said he did not believe the quake that occurred at 8:19 p.m. on May 3 is related to anything Browning predicted, but people always should be prepared.

Residents of New Madrid, Mo.

and people as far as Memphis, Tenn. and St. Louis, Mo., felt a jolt that registered 4.6 on the Richter scale. It may have reminded a few people that the possibility of a devastating earthquake in that area is not unlikely, Sexton said.

The epicenter of the quake was about 10 miles west of New Madrid, Mo. Harvey Henson, a graduate student in geophysics and full-time geophysics researcher from Marion, said the quake lasted about five to six minutes, but was felt only 25 seconds at the point of highest intensity.

The 120-mile New Madrid fault stretches from Marked Tree, Ark., to Cairo.

In the early 1800s, it produced some of the strongest quakes ever recorded in North America, as high as 8.7 in 1812.

Sexton said a quake of 4.6 magnitude occurs every four of five years, based on the history of earthquakes in the area. Sometimes there are a few more, he said.

He said the New Madrid fault line has been active for quite some time and that it produces a few hundred quakes a year, but they are so small in magnitude, about 1.0 or 2.0, that people don't feel them.

When people do feel one, it starts them thinking again about being prepared, he said.

Sexton said the quake Friday night was fairly close in size to the one that Carbondale residents felt last September. Its epicenter was near New Hamburg, Mo.

Democrat tax plan hits rich

Proposal increases excise on wealthy, helps middle class

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of congressional Democrats proposed Monday raising taxes on the wealthy while cutting taxes for about 35 million middle-income families with children, calling the plan "very good policy and very good politics."

The legislation, to be introduced in Congress Tuesday, would offset its new credits for children under 18 in working and middle-class families by raising the tax rate for the wealthiest Americans to 35 percent from 31 percent and applying an 11 percent surtax on those earning above $250,000.

The bill would increase the tax benefit for children by providing a tax credit of $800 for each child up to age 18 rather than a limited personal exemption.

The proposal could reopen wounds from the bitter budget battle of last fall, when similar plans to target the rich were scuttled during the partisan political brawl, and will be introduced with the looming 1992 presidential campaign as a backdrop.

The chief Senate sponsor is a possible Democratic presidential hopeful, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee.

He acknowledged the certain opposition from the White House, but predicted Congress will pass the legislation.

"I guess that the president and his advisers would probably balk at the 35 percent rate. I hope I'm wrong," Gore said. "But I believe the American people will support it. It is the right thing to do — tax relief for families that need it, for a change."

"Who's side are you going to be on?" Gore added. "The families that need the tax relief, the families with children who they're having trouble financing health care for or buying clothes for? Or are you going to defend those who are making more money than ... all but 1 percent of the people in this country?"

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., said the legislation's "tax equity and tax justice" have "always been very good policy and very good politics."

Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., invited Republicans to back the bill because "they've been very anxious to shed their image as tribes of the rich."

The congressional Democratic leadership praised the idea behind the legislation without specifically endorsing the bill.

Local governments' taxing policies seriously questioned by state study

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A study by an Illinois tax think-tank released Monday recommends the General Assembly pass a host of strict laws to stop local governments from employing "illegal" or "illusory" practices in their taxing policies.

The Taxpayers' Federation of Illinois report has already led to proposed legislation that would put local governments up for "sunset" review, meaning they could be terminated if a poor performance is found.

The study is another effort to attack Illinois' 6,600 taxing districts, the largest number of local governments for any state in the nation. However, an official representing Illinois cities said there is no quick way to solve the problem.

"One has to look at the history in Illinois of why there are so many units of local government rather than just say you are going to get rid of some units," said Ken Alderson, the assistant director of the Illinois Municipal League.

Among the chief findings and recommendations of the report, which examined cities, villages, townships, school districts, drainage districts and other types of taxing units:

- Among the poor financial practices used by local governments, some tax levies were issued by taxing districts without statutory authority, some local governments accumulated excessive amounts of tax funds and some never adequately explained why the levy money was needed;
- Accounting practices were manipulated by changing budgets, padding figures to show increased revenues or other methods; and
- The amount of excess funding local governments can keep on hand should be limited and a notification should be sent to all taxpayers of how proposed tax levies and budgets would affect them.

"We have to begin to redefine what state and local governments are about," said Jim Nowlan, the president of the taxpayers' federation.

The study was conducted by Ronald Picur, an accounting professor and the director of undergraduate studies at the University of Illinois at Chicago. Even though he found some local governments were breaking the law, Picur said the report does not include their names because he was told much of the information by accountants who refused to publicly reveal their clients.

Picur said he also did not think many of the local governments knew they were breaking the law but he accused them of "good faith incompetence."

"We've got people whose hearts are in the right place but they're just overwhelmed," Picur said.

Bangladesh student group to raise money for homeland

By Chyrese Wolf
Staff Writer

The Bangladesh Student Association has been conducting a relief fund-raising drive for the victims of a deadly typhoon which struck their homeland last week.

It has been estimated that the 146 mile-per-hour winds and 20-foot tidal waves that washed ashore from the Bay of Bengal have taken about 130,000 lives.

The last typhoon to hit Bangladesh was in 1970 and killed 300,000 people, said Sultan Parrez, doctoral student in physics from Pabna, Bangladesh.

"We (Bangladesh students) wish we could go home and do something to help," Parrez said.

Despite the recent devastation, Bangladesh has been stricken by disaster before, said Annon Mizan, doctoral student in sociology from Barisal, Bangladesh.

"Bangladesh has gone through mishaps one after another since its independence, including natural disasters and political coups," Mizan said.

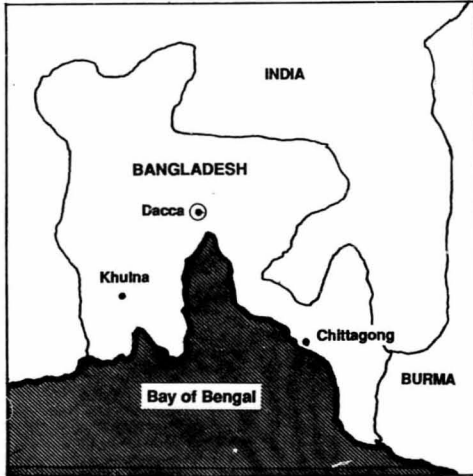

This has hindered political and economic progress, she said.

Recently, however, the country has been showing economic progress, Mizan said. Now it will be hard to rebuild.

Ahmad, political science instructor at John A. Logan College, said Bangladesh is a poor country and doesn't have enough resources to rebuild after such a disaster, he said.

"The overall economy will have a ripple effect. Every part of the country will be affected," Ahmed said.

Consequences of this disaster will be long term.

"Famine and disease is what we (Bangladesh students) are concerned with," he said.

According to a UPI report, U.S. health specialists predict waterborne diseases, cholera, and diarrhea will inflict survivors of the typhoon.

Health officials fear the outbreak of disease will be high in slum areas of major cities, UPI reported.

Mohammad Mohsin, president of the Bangladesh Student Association, said Bangladesh relies on agricultural production for survival, but the storms have killed thousands of cattle and devastated the land.

It will take two to three years for the ground to be ready for cultivation again, he said.

"The country will have to start over again," Mohsin said.

The Bangladesh government will have to build new roads and replace buildings, he said. Property damage has been estimated at $21 to $24 billion.

The BSA is requesting that people make checks payable to Bangladesh Student Association and mail them to M. Mohsin, president, Bangladesh Student Association, P.O. Box 3973, Carbondale, Ill. 62901.

All collected contributions will be sent to the Bangladesh Embassy in Washington, D.C., Mohsin said.

Children flood camps; families leave homes

ZAKHO, Iraq (UPI) — Mohammad Fala Jassan, his wife and nine children crowded into the Kurdish refugee camp after an exhausting three-day journey from mountains near the Turkish-Iraqi border.

As part of the family headed up a dirt road to their newly assigned tent in the valley, they looked tired but their spirits seemed to rise with each step.

On their backs were boxes and bags containing their worldly possessions.

Asked whether they had gotten a ride from the mountains, all vigorously shook their heads and said they had walked.

"Three days. No food, no sleep," said 18-year-old Zakia, one of Jassan's children.

A younger brother, Ali, 12, carried a box of twigs and sticks for the campfire.

His mother, Hamdia, carried more supplies, and cheerfully declined assistance.

Their temporary home is one of more than 1,000 tents put up outside Zakho in camps for thousands of Kurds.

The family's tent was crowded with children. The youngest, an 8-month-old girl with curly hair and big brown eyes, looked up at one of her older brothers and smiled as he waved away flies.

"All the soldiers say, 'Welcome, welcome.' I am very, very happy," said Mohammed Fala Jassan, lighting a cigarette with matches from a U.S. military rations packet.

The family fled their home near Dahuk, Iraq, several weeks ago, and lived in the mountains a month. Like hundreds of thousands of other Kurds, their life has been a daily struggle for survival.

It was frigid in the mountains, and they burned tree stumps to stay warm. For some time there was no food and no milk for the baby.

The family decided to leave the mountains when they learned allied troops were setting up the large tent city outside Zakho.

Jassan, a businessman, said he has no idea if his home is still standing. He will return after resting and when he feels certain his village is safe.

Jassan does not like Turkish or Iraqi soldiers, and wants allied troops to stay until Iraqi forces leave northern Iraq.

Like other Kurds, he feels a Kurdistan country will be created for them, but his chief worry now is the survival of his wife, mother-in-law and children.

It is the children who dominate daily life in southeastern Turkey and northern Iraq. They fill the tent city, prance through high green grass, pose for pictures and love to wave at U.S. soldiers.

"Hello, mister, how are you" is heard everywhere as children happily seek out soldiers.

Prime minister appeals to U.N. for cease-fire

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen in Phnom Penh has appealed to the United Nations for "neutral foreigners" to monitor a shaky cease-fire in Cambodia, the official SPK news agency reported Monday.

"I propose that the voluntary cease-fire be immediately observed by neutral foreigners to be agreed to by the two sides so as to discourage any eventual violations and increase mutual confidence," Hun Sen said in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The U.N. chief decided later to send a review team to Cambodia to assess the situation.

Hun Sen said the success of the voluntary cease-fire was key to agreement on an official cease-fire that is part of a U.N. draft plan for a political settlement of the 12-year-old Cambodian conflict.

Both Hun Sen and a three-part rebel coalition have charged each other with violations of the voluntary cease-fire that began May 1.

The SIUC softball team ripped through its season and won the Gateway Conference's regular-season title for the first time. It is now ready to try for it all and win the Gateway Tournament.

The Salukis finished their regular season in a doubleheader Saturday against conference foe Wichita State, sweeping past the Shockers 2-0 and 4-3. These two wins brought their season record to 38-4 and their conference mark to 14-0.

This is the first time in the conference's nine-year history for a team to go unbeaten in league play and it sets a school record for most consecutive Gateway wins in a season.

SIUC also set a new school record for most consecutive wins. The Salukis went most of their season without experiencing defeat, winning 23 straight before falling to Southeast Missouri state May 1.

SIUC coach Kay Bretchelsbauer said her team has worked hard to get where it is.

"It was not an easy task to win the regular season title," Bretchelsbauer said. "We worked hard and had to come from behind many times. The team just never gave up and that is why it deserves credit."

The conference chose the Salukis from the very start, ranking them No. 1 in the preseason poll. SIUC did not let it down, living up to that ranking by defeating every Gateway school it faced.

The softball players along with Bretchelsbauer agree this is the best team SIUC has seen in many years and it has potential to go all the way.

"This is the best team I have been on," senior left fielder Shannon Taylor said. "Up and down the lineup we have steady players. Any player could bring in the winning run for us."

Senior third baseman Mary Jo Fimbach agrees. "This is the most consistent team I have ever played on," Fimbach said, "and it felt good to be the preseason No. 1 pick. It gives us confidence to know the other coaches in the conference think so highly of our team."

Brechelsbauer said balance and consistency are the team's key to success this season.

The Salukis will travel to Wichita, Kansas, Wednesday to start play in the Gateway Conference Tournament Thursday through Saturday.

Brechelsbauer said right now the team is focusing on exams and on resting to be ready to play.

If the team wins the Gateway Conference Tournament it will automatically advance to the NCAA Championship.

"They are all so routine they probably will go through with no comment," Pettit said.

The fire alarm systems in Allen, Boomer and Wright Halls in the University Park residential area will be updated to meet new regulations for life safety and fire protection.

The National Fire Protection Association suggested the update to fire alarm systems five years ago, said Jim Filla, senior electrical engineer.

The University currently is in the fifth phase of updating the campus' fire system.

"Eventually we will upgrade and replace all fire systems on campus," Filla said.

But because housing is not funded through the state, updating campus housing fire systems is not covered in the University phase-in program. The housing system will be funded by housing revenues, Filla said.

If approved renovations will include additional detection devices and additional audio and video alarms.

Audio and video alarms are the red fire alarm boxes that sound when a fire is sighted.

Strobe lights will replace the current flashing lights that accompany the siren when the box is triggered.

"We have elected to go to strobe lights because of their attention-getting abilities," Filla said.

Funding for the renovations, which will come from housing revenue, is estimated to cost $150,000.

Other housing issues to be addressed by the board will be to accept contracts for renovations to Evergreen Terrace and Allen Hall.

Fager Builders of Murphysboro had the lowest bid for the job to begin phase II of renovations to Evergreen Terrace, the married student residential area south of campus.

Although Phase II was estimated to cost $60,000, the company agreed to complete the job for $58,909.

Phase II will include replacing about 100 interior and exterior doors.

Phase I, which was approved at the April board meeting, deal with replacing the heating and air conditioning systems at Evergreen Terrace.

Contracts for renovations to modify the heating and cooling systems in Allen Hall also will go before the board.

Changes in the system are needed because of frequent system failures.

The project was estimated to cost $180,000, but bid totals from H & H Mechanical and Electrical Contractors and Wilson Electric Service, both of Carbondale, totaled $167,076.

If approved by the board, H & H will be responsible for the project's mechanical work while Wilson will be responsible for the electrical work.

Funding for both the Evergreen Terrace and the Allen Hall renovations will come from housing revenue.

Contracts to resurface various roads, drives and parking lots on the campus also will be considered by the board.

Areas under consideration are Lot 14 and its drive west of University Park, Lot 49 west of Greek Row, the drive into Wham parking lot and the drive into Thompson Point.

The estimated cost of these renovations was $652,000, the lowest bid, given by E. T. Simonds Construction Co. of Carbondale, was $657,697.

The board also will decide on replacing the original gymnasium floor in the Student Recreation Center.

Flooding, which occurred in 1977, 1987 and 1989, has caused damage to the maple hardwood floor that was installed in 1977 when the center opened.

The estimated cost for the project is $153,000. Insurance will pay $80,000 and the center will cover the remaining $73,000.

The flooding problem, caused by storm water runoff and inadequate drainage, has been corrected by installing an additional storm sewer line and diverting the water runoff from the building.

Peoria, Rockford, Springfield, Tinley Park, Waukegan and at two locations in Chicago, Chicago-Read Mental Health Center and the Illinois State Psychiatric Institute.

About 50 people marched along Illinois 31 in front of the Elgin Mental Health Center through the noon hour. A number of drivers of trucks and passenger cars honked their horns while driving by to show their support.

AFSCME Local 26 President Will Nanzer said if the governor's financial plan is approved, the future is bleak for the Elgin facility.

"What's happening is the paper work is increasing, and the caseloads are increasing," Nanzer said. "And until or unless there is additional revenues found some-where, that will not change. It'll just get worse."

"What this is all about is the budget cuts, and the lack of staffing and the extreme difficulties we're having with patient care."

About 12 people at the Andrew McFarland Mental Health Center criticized Edgar when they said he received a raise and extra perks by going from secretary of state to governor in January. They also said the centers could get more dangerous with the fewer staff members.

There are 1.6 staff members per patient at the centers but Trossman said there should be a 2-to-1 staff to patient ratio.

However, mental health department spokesman Pat Alvarez said there is no "optimum number" of employees.

the four months he served in the gulf. He said he, along with several friends, painted bombs after flight crew chiefs let them into the area where the F-16s were being kept.

He said it seemed like the appropriate thing to do at the time, and that several other bombs also were being inscribed on.

"The next day we were told they had been properly delivered to their proper destinations," Becker said.

That location, however, was never identified, he said.

Becker has been home from the gulf for nearly a month and said "it has been great to be back."

Becker's call to service delayed his plans to graduate until December 1992. Although he said he was disappointed about the change in plans, he's looking forward to getting school straightened out.

improved efficiency in the delivery of local government services," Hoffner wrote. "At the end of (fiscal year 1991) the city of Carbondale is strong and healthy."

Hoffner said the city could face some tough time ahead.

"Beyond (fiscal year 1992) our financial future is very uncertain, and we are committed to facing these challenges in a proactive and anticipatory manner," he wrote. "...we face continuing declines in state and federal aid, a reluctance to pay higher taxes or user fees and increasing expectations for service and efficiency in local government."

AIDS, from Page 1

Larry Von Behren, an AIDS doctor with the SIU School of Medicine, said the new guidelines essentially eliminate the eligibility of the program's target patients: middle-class people with AIDS.

The new guidelines reduce the level of income of eligible AIDS victims from 700 to 200 percent above the federal poverty level.

Under the May 1 restrictions, an AIDS victim would have to make less than $14,000 to be eligible for help from the drug reimbursement program.

Most AIDS victims with an income level 200 percent above the federal poverty level or less already are eligible for Medicaid or other state welfare programs.

"The program has been effectively ended," Von Behren said.

But Terry L. Dobbs, the drug program's administrator with the Department of Public Aid, said the program will continue to help the most needy AIDS victims.

Dobbs said the state will spend about $1 million for the program next fiscal year, a $400,000 increase from last year.

As more AIDS victims need the program, however, money is not available to help all of them at the same rate under old guidelines, she said.

Dobbs and Von Behren said participants in the program before May 1 will not be forced out because the new guidelines only apply to applicants for the program after May 1.

The Illinois Department of Public Health recorded 5,029 reported cases of AIDS and 4,669 reported cases of people who tested positive for the AIDS virus in Illinois as of March 31.

Of the reported cases of AIDS in Illinois, about 25 percent participate in the drug reimbursement program.

"I wish we had the money to help (more middle-class), but we don't," Dobbs said. "It's strictly a budget matter."

The program is designed to buy drugs for AIDS victims in the earliest stages of the disease to keep them productive as long as possible.

Von Behren said middle-class AIDS victims no longer eligible for the program will either buy the drugs themselves after May 1 or go without.

If they go without the drugs, he said, the state pays more in the end to care for AIDS patients who need treatment and hospitalization in the advanced stages of the disease.

AIDS is a disease in which a virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

The drug reimbursement program was reduced not only because of the state's financial problems but also because of a merger of federal anti-AIDS programs.

The federal Comprehensive AIDS Resource Act consolidates money for AIDS and targets money for states with AIDS populations in the advanced stages of the disease.

Von Behren said this "body-count mentality" hurts states such as Illinois, which have smaller AIDS populations and fewer patients in advanced stages of the disease.

"The fact is that taxpayers in Illinois are not willing to spend any more money for these services," he said.

Celtics-Pistons meet again

BOSTON (UPI) — No introductions will be necessary when the Boston Celtics and Detroit Pistons meet in Tuesday night's opener of their playoff series.

The Celtics are all too familiar with Bill Laimbeer's rebounding style, Dennis Rodman's exuberant defense and Isiah Thomas's playmaking and ballhandling.

The defending champions are equally familiar with Larry Bird's toughness, Kevin McHale's post-up play and Robert Parish's high-arcing jumpers and non-stop running.

The Eastern Conference semifinals will be the fifth Celtics-Pistons postseason meeting in seven years. While both teams respect the other's abilities, there is also a lot of animosity.

"It's a love-hate relationship," said Detroit's John Salley. "They've had the same guys for years and so do we. We know each other."

"It will be nice to play against Detroit again, it brings back good memories of times gone past," said McHale, who has been part of three Boston championship teams. "Until someone beats them, they're the best. We were in that position for an awful long time."

The best-of-seven series has Game 2 scheduled for Thursday afternoon at Boston Garden, which was already booked for Thursday and Friday nights. The rare weekday game was agreed upon to avoid back-to-back games.

"When you work all year for home-court advantage, you don't want to go back-to-back," Boston Coach Chris Ford said.

The Celtics and Pistons were both taken to a decisive fifth game by their first-round opponents. On Sunday, Boston edged Indiana by three points while Detroit routed Atlanta by 32.

"We match up better against the Pistons than we did against Indiana, which was bigger," Celtics guard Brian Shaw said. "And the level of intensity will go up a few more notches because it's Detroit."

"It will be another classic," predicted Thomas. "It doesn't matter if it's Detroit vs. Boston, Detroit vs. L.A., or L.A. vs. Boston. As long as people have 'Celtic,' 'Lakers' and 'Pistons' on their jerseys, people are going to want to play those teams."

Detroit has won the last two NBA crowns largely because of its defense. This year, the Pistons slumped somewhat but were again the league's best defenders, yielding an average of just 96.8 points.

In the Detroit-Atlanta series, The Pistons never let the Hawks shoot over 48 percent and in Game 5 limited them to just 29.7 shooting.

"They like to keep games (scoring) in the 80s and 90s," said Shaw. "We'll look to push it up and be as efficient as possible with the half-court game."

Thomas, who underwent wrist surgery in mid-season, is back to being the Pistons' leader, although the wrist is not completely healed.

"Isiah is like Larry and Kevin and those guys who will win is so strong that if they can walk and run, they'll play," Ford said. "Isiah is back to playing great basketball."

rebounds per game, finishing second on the club in scoring and 10th in the NBA in rebounding. Though he missed eight games with a sprained ankle early in the season, his addition helped the Nets to a nine-game improvement over a franchise-low 17-65 record in 1989-90.

"I was definitely conscious of (my predictions) during the season," Coleman said. "I try to put pressure on myself so when things get tough, I can remember what I promised myself so I can achieve my goals."

"I knew in the beginning it was going to be tough. I was coming from Syracuse, which had a long tradition of winning. I look at (the Nets) as a rebuilding process — we've got a lot of young players. I knew it was going to be a struggle at first, but I looked at it as a learning process. I know we're going to build something great."

Coleman, who set the NCAA career rebounding record while at Syracuse, said his toughest adjustment to the NBA was the longer season and constant travel.

"All the traveling we did, I really had to adjust," he said. "There were times when you'd wake up and you didn't know what day it was or what city you were in."

"As far as playing, I tried not to worry about how many points or how many rebounds I had. I just tried to be a complete player and help my teammates win."

It was that attitude that most impressed Fitch.

"When you're on a young club and have guys trying to establish their own identity, it's hard to be a team player," the coach said. "He has always been a team player."

"What also makes it difficult is you do not know which will be the fastest path until you travel it, so you are running the race without knowing if the path you chose was the fastest."

Schafermeyer has been orienteering for 10 years and said many people choose not to run the course, but rather walk, using it as a way to get exercise as well as experience nature firsthand. Schafermeyer said his father gained his interest in the sport and he has been an avid participant ever since.

Ward, a senior in finance, has been practicing the sport for a year and agrees it is a great way to combine physical activity with mental choices.

"It is fun sport and a great way to enjoy the outdoors," Ward said.

"But you are also thinking the whole time you are running, so both areas of your body, your mind and your muscles, get a workout."

Eschenbach, the Orienteering Club vice president and a senior majoring in mechanical engineering, has been orienteering for three years.

SIUC's Orienteering Club has approximately 20 members who gather weekly to go over maps and new routes. The club also meets at either of two orienteering courses to train and perfect speed and stamina.

Courses in the area include one at Giant City and one at Touch of Nature. Over the past year, the club has held five meets on these courses.

The club has also competed in one national competition in New York and two regional races in St. Louis.

Schafermeyer said even though the club doesn't practice daily, individual members train on their own and try to stay in shape for the meets.

There is also an orienteering class offered by the university and taught by the club's faculty supervisor, assistant professor Ken Ackerman.

"We are always looking for new members," Schafermeyer said. "I think the hardest thing is for people to try it for the first time. Once you've tried it, you enjoy it, but it is just hard to get started. If someone is not sure if he will enjoy it or not, the class is a great way method of introduction."

all year and her training is limited. She won the unseeded hurdles at the National Track and Field Invitational during the weekend.

Junior Jamie Dashner is also having a foot problem. Her status is questionable for the Gateway Championships.

DeNoon said many Salukis have a shot at being All-Gateway Conference selections this year. To be named to the conference team, an athlete must finish in the top three in her event.

In the throwing events, sophomore Cheryl Evers and freshman Jennifer Bozue have a chance in the discus and the shot put.

On the verge of making All-Gateway in the distance runs are sophomore Leeann Conway in the 3,000-meter and 5,000-meter runs, sophomore Dawn Barefoot in the 3,000-meters and junior Amie Padgett in the 10,000-meter run.

Freshman Rhonda Brown and senior Beverly Klett will both attempt to score in the high jump and sophomore Nacolia Moore will try in the triple jump.

Both Coyne in the 100-meter hurdles and Dashner in the heptathlon and the javelin have a chance to place if they are healthy.

The Salukis' practice schedule has been hampered by finals week. Most of the team stayed home to study this weekend instead of travelling to Indianapolis for the meet. DeNoon said academics have to come first.

King in the discus, sophomore Gerallt Owen in the 1,500-meter run and the 4x100-meter and 4x200-meter relay teams.

Cornell said the rest of the Missouri Valley has already picked the Salukis to win.

"Everybody's made us the favorite," he said. "But when you start looking at some of these events like the pole vault and the javelin, they're very tough."

Wichita State has five athletes in the top 10 in the conference in the pole vault and three in the javelin. The Shockers also have the top competitors in the 100-meter dash, the 200-meter dash, the 5,000-meter run, the 10,000-meter run and the hammer throw. The Salukis' top decathlete, sophomore John Bookout, may be out for the meet. He has had problems with a hip injury suffered during the pole vault earlier this year and has aggravated the problem.

Assistant coach Darren Barber said the team is just cruising right now until the meet.

"The last two to three weeks have mainly been maintenance for our athletes," Barber said.

Cornell agreed with his assistant.

"We've done our jobs preparing our athletes," Cornell said. "We've seen them getting a little better every week."

the 60-day disabled list and Daulton on the 15-day disabled list.

Dr. David Rose, the attending physician, said both players suffered a bruised heart, but neither will need surgery.

"Both are very lucky gentlemen," Rose said. "The kind of shape they were in, as strong as they are, helped them."

Team president Bill Giles was near tears at a news conference to discuss the accident.

"This is not a very happy day," he said. "Life is so unpredictable. Things are going so good, you win six out of eight (games), and then you get slapped in the face. This is not a happy day."

Dykstra was driving his 1991 Mercedes. A statement from Radnor Township police said: "There were indications the vehicle was being operated at excessive speed. There were also indications alcohol was involved."

No breathalyzer test was administered at the scene, police said, but blood samples were drawn at the hospital and hospital records would be sought as part of the investigation.

Dykstra reportedly had a blood-alcohol level of .18, but Dr. Philip Marone, the Phillies' team physician who examined both players at the hospital, said he could not confirm that.

Police said Dykstra was driving eastbound when he crossed the oncoming lanes at an intersection and struck two trees. Both men were walking when police arrived and did not appear seriously injured, police said.

Marone said Dykstra was more seriously injured than Daulton, whose eye was to be examined further by an ophthalmologist.
