Bush returns from hospital

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush eagerly plucked back into work Monday after hospitalization for an "out of the blue" irregular heartbeat that left doctors puzzled about its cause but confident it will not slow his aerobic lifestyle.

In high spirits, he ended a 39-hour hospital stay that at one point raised the prospect of a brief transfer of power to Vice President Dan Quayle in the event more than medicine had been needed to treat his ailment.

"It's great to be back," he exclaimed on being welcomed back to the White House from Bethesda Naval Hospital with cheers and applause from staff members gathered in the rain-soaked Rose Garden.

Bush, rated an A-1 patient, was discharged with a less-than-perfect bill of health — the irregularity was still present at the hospital though not later in the Oval Office — but an optimistic prognosis.

Though the cause may never be pinpointed, physicians said he will be free perhaps in a matter of days to bring his usually high energy level back to full spate, even if medicine is needed indefinitely to keep the problem at bay.

Capt. Bruce Lloyd, chief of cardiology at Bethesda, told reporters a decision on long-term medication can be made only after careful monitoring establishes if, when and how long the irregularity recurs.

Meanwhile, White House physician Barton Lee underscored the point that Bush, robust and active in a way that belies the approach next month of his 60th birthday, had suffered no heart damage or other physical problems.

Lee, who supervised the medical team, said its members "decided unanimously" at a 5:30 a.m. meeting to discharge Bush even though his heart rate, while improved, had again turned erratic after six hours of overnight stability.

Lee emphasized that no "political or other considerations" had come into play.

The decision to release Bush without arresting the irregularity averted the use of an electric shock procedure that would have meant his brief incapacitation and a temporary transfer of power to Quayle under the 25th Amendment of the Constitution, dealing with presidential succession.

"Needless to say, the president want ed out. He's not a guy who likes to lie in a room," Lee said. "But this, I can promise you, had no bearing on our decision to release him."

WASHINGTON — Some AIDS victims fear the program they are eligible for the program, Kari Pipenburg, spokesman for the department, said initially the program was not targeted for budget cuts.

But new guidelines were approved by the public aid department last month because officials say the program cannot continue to operate at its existing level in the midst of a state budget crisis.

About $600,000 in state funding was spent on the program during the last fiscal year.

The program, which currently saves about 1,300 people and is growing by 80 to 90 a month, helps victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome buy free anti-AIDS drugs, including AZT, which acts to slow the spread of the AIDS virus.

AZT, the most expensive anti-AIDS drug, costs AIDS victims $6,000 to $8,000 a year.

State drug program turning away AIDS patients

A state drug program that helps pay for expensive anti-AIDS drugs for thousands of middle-class Illinois AIDS victims started closing its doors to new patients last week.

Guidelines for participation in the AIDS Drug Reimbursement Program were tightened May 1 by the Illinois Department of Public Aid, sharply reducing the number of patients eligible for the program.

Kari Pipenburg, spokesman for the department, said initially the program was not targeted for budget cuts.

Orienteering SIU's Orienteering elements of nature and came out the part icipants made the trek in Page 16

“Orienteering is a sport where the competitors must find a compass and the person running the course. Participants are given a detailed map of the area to be orienteered and it is their choice how to complete the course in the shortest amount of time. The map includes all contours of the land, all rivers, swamp areas and all other objects, such as rocks, large trees, and buildings. The course portrayed on the map has a series of circles representing physical markers connected in a loop from the start of the course to the finish. It is the participants' responsibility to follow the map, to each marker.

The physical markers are orange and white nylon bags connected to a hole punch similar to a time clock. When the runner reaches a marker he punches his card to let the judges know he successfully completed the navigation.

Each participant runs the course individually, but the individual times are added together to form a final team score. The team with the lowest times for both days of orienteering is the winner of the race.

The Yankee Springs course covers 15 kilometers and features woods as well as drastic elevation change while running the course, Schafermeyer said.

Schafermeyer, a junior majoring in geography, said orienteering is a thinking sport because the runner is making choices throughout the race about what route to travel. Those choices directly influence how well he or she finishes the race.

"The main idea is to go the quickest route possible," Schafermeyer said. "We study the map before the race and plan out the quickest route between the markers. Then we run at race speed to each marker. What makes it difficult is we are running through the woods without a path to follow. We must follow it directly off the map."

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Derrick Coleman, who boasted on the day he signed an NBA contract he would become Rookie of the Year, fulfilled that promise Monday when he was awarded the Eddie Gottlieb Trophy for the 1991-92 season.

Coleman, taken by the New Jersey Nets with the first pick in last June's NBA draft, was the overwhelming choice of a panel of NBA writers and broadcasters. He received 69 votes from the 96-member panel, ousting runner-up Lionel Simmons of Sacramento.

"One of the toughest things you have to do when you're picked No. 1 is to prove you deserve to be No. 1," Nets Coach Bob Hill said. "Even with all the pressure D.C. had put on him, it still was no contest.

In winning the award, Coleman became the first No. 1 pick to be named Rookie of the Year the following season since New York's Patrick Ewing in 1985. David Robinson of San Antonio, last year's winner, had to wait for a two-year contract negotiation before being selected No. 1 in 1987.

Protracted contract negotiations kept Coleman out of a Nets uniform until five days before the season. On the day he signed a five-year contract worth $15 million, the Syracuse product punctuated his expectations.

"Being a starter for this team, being Rookie of the Year, helping the Nets win more ballgames than they did last year," Coleman said at the time.

The 6-fo ot-10 forward did all that. He led all NBA rookies by averaging 18.4 points and 10.3 rebounds.

Saluki women hope to stay on winning track

By Wayne Frazer

The Saluki women's track and field team will try to continue its winning ways when it hosts the Gateway Conference Outdoor Championships in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The Salukis have not finished lower than second since 1986. Prior to last year, the Salukis had won the championship four years in a row.

"This year should be different for the Salukis," coach Ed Noon said. "We have a good team this year. The conference statistics show any of the five teams could win the championship.

On the basis of conference statistics so far this season, Illinois State is the favorite with 114 points. Illinois State is close behind with 103, followed by SIU at 88 points and Southwestern Missouri State with 79.

DeNoon said even though Illinois State leads right now, the title is still up for grabs.

"I found out Illinois State's quarterback-mile who leads the conference has a stress fracture," DeNoon said. "This kills 10 of their points. Illinois State had one of its girls quit and some of the athletes did not look good this weekend."

The Salukis' strength lies in numbers instead of first-place athletes. The only SIUC athlete ranked first in the conference standings is junior Michele Williams in the long jump. DeNoon said Illinois State's reliance on first-place finishers could hurt them.

"The disadvantage of having so many of your points coming from wins is that you must finish first to assure those points," DeNoon said.

"In our case, everybody is down the list somewhere and they could finish up and score higher."

The Salukis are hampered by some nagging injuries. Sophomore Becky Coyne has had a foot injury. She is questionable for the meet. See TRACK, Page 15

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Four Picasso paintings worth about $30 million were stolen from the National Gallery in Prague early Monday, the CTK news agency reported. Thieves broke through a door leading into the garden of the Scenery Palace, the home of the art collection, national gallery director Lubomir Slavicek told the news agency. The gallery was equipped with a sophisticated alarm system, but police couldn't get to the scene until 17 minutes after the thieves struck. The paintings stolen included "Absinthe and a Card," "Mandolin and a Glass of Pernod," "A Table with a Bottle," and "The Art of Cadeau.'"

Police shooting ignites riot in Washington

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A mob, angered when a rookie policewoman shot a Hispanic man, clashed with police Sunday night, hurling bottles and rocks at helmeted officers and overturning and burning six police vehicles. Six police officers suffered minor injuries and were treated at area hospitals, said police Lt. Reginald Smith.

Brief, intense storms strike northeastern Illinois, kill 2

United Press International

Two teen-agers were hospitalized in serious condition Monday as a result of a freak weather-related mishap in Western Springs, that left two others dead, authorities said. The Sunday deaths were the result of a brief but intense line of storms that hit parts of northeastern Illinois. Everywhere around the state, heavy rain fell in many sections, including 5 inches of rain in Springfield, forecasters said. Monday brought cooler temperatures in the 40s and 50s and cloudy skies over much of the state except a stretch along the Mississippi River from Cairo to St. Louis, said forecast Paul Mezick. The colder readings brought brief snow flurries in Des Moines, Iowa, about 6 a.m., he said.

Some city staff members may soon try to find out what can be done about bicyclists posing a safety problem for pedestrians in front of the Recreation Center.

Community Director Donald Monty said although pedestrians may get in the way of bicyclists, he feels more bicyclists ride on sidewalks, causing unsafe conditions for pedestrians.

There were 22 pedestrians and 34 bicyclists injured in Carbondale last year, according to statistics from the Carbondale Police Department. Statistics were not available for injuries in front of the Recreation Center.

"The problem is people are not paying attention," Monty said. "In general, bicyclists ignore the city ordinance. You can't ride on sidewalks."

Two strips of pavement are parallel to Grand Avenue in front of the Recreation Center. The pavement closest to the Recreation Center is for pedestrians only and the pavement on the other side of the street is for bicyclists. Both paths are marked with city signs.

Monty said the paths have been marked since the late 1970s because of the high traffic volume along Grand Avenue.

In addition to education about bicycle regulations, Monty said one way to reduce the number of bicycle and pedestrian accidents is to issue tickets for disobeying the city ordinance.

According to the city ordinance, prices for the tickets would be:

• $15 if paid within two days after issuance;
• $20 if paid between two and 14 days after issuance;
• and $25 if paid 15 days or later but before a complaint is filed.

There are two exceptions to riding on sidewalks: Children 12 years old and younger may ride bicycles on sidewalks, and anyone may ride a bicycle on a path designated as a dual-bicycle-pedestrian path.

SIUC Security Director Bob Harris said he is not happy with the way paths for pedestrians and bicyclists have been designated in front of the Recreation Center.

Harris said the best way to prevent accidents is to enforce the city ordinance.

"(But) I don't have the people to enforce it," he said. "I don't know what can be done."

The "bike only" sidewalk across from the Recreation Center is the center of attention among city staff members who want to find out what can be done about bicyclists who pose problems for pedestrians.

1991 Sunset Concert Series faces council vote

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will vote tonight to continue legal open consumption alcohol at the 1991 Sunset Concert Series.

The ordinance requires approval by the City Council each year because it is normally illegal to consume alcohol on city property.

The 1991 Sunset Concerts begin at 7 p.m., every Thursday between June 13 and July 25.

The concerts alternate between Shryock Auditorium and the area in front of Shryock Auditorium. This year, the music selection ranges from reggae and hard rock to blues and Dixieland jazz.

Other items on the council agenda include the swearing in of Mayor Neil Dillard and councilmen Richard Morris and John Mills, who were re-elected April 2.

The appointment of the city clerk also is scheduled. Dillard is asking the City Council to approve his appointment of Janet Vaught for a four-year term.

City Manager Steve Hofffer also will deliver the State of the City Report.

In a memorandum to the mayor and City Council, Hofffer said five goals guided city government in the past year: economic development and community growth, investment in public infrastructure, citizen participation and community pride, human services, housing and other community accomplishments.

"Economic development continued to be the City Council's highest priority in the fiscal year just completed," Hofffer wrote.

Economic development projects Hofffer considers positive for Carbondale include the renovation and expansion of the University Mall and restoration of the former passenger depot located on the corner of Main Street and Illinois Avenue.

Hofffer noted, however, some projects including a new psychiatric hospital and a new civic center are awaiting construction or funding.

One of the topics Hofffer included in investment in public infrastructure is the progression of the Northern Connector study. The Northern Connector is the name given to a proposed highway that would go around Carbondale and reduce traffic through some of the more highly traveled streets in the city.

Citizen participation and community pride also will be a positive point in Hofffer's address.

"More Carbondale citizens are directly involved in their city government than at any time in the recent past," Hofffer wrote.

The city has more than 25 standing boards and commissions. "Our staff has responded to numerous challenges in the past year, and the community is strong and poised for future growth and See COUNCIL, Page 14

Fighting party image gets harder for SIU

WHILE THE MAJORITY OF PARTY school stereotyping comes from out-of-town, key players of the problem are out-of-towners themselves.

During the 1991 Springfest weekend, 23 of 39 arrested on campus were from out-of-town. Off campus, 50 of the 68 arrested were from out-of-town.

This growing presence of non-Carbondale partiers has been an element in the infamous Halloween celebration for years. Until 1989 when the Halloween break spanned one week, crowds estimated at 25,000 converged on Carbondale, bringing with some of them violence and destruction.

FOR THE MOST PART, SIUC’S PARTY image is just that—an image. That is not to say the student body doesn’t do its share of partying. Considering 25,000 students attend this University, it would be unreasonable to assume a substantial amount of drinking doesn’t take place.

But considering SIUC boasts one of the top debate teams in the nation, holds the collegiate record for blood donations, enjoys extensive men’s and women’s basketball success and is home to the marketing and director of the Master of Business Administration program at SIUC, one would think the students don’t cause the problems that promote the party image. Yet it is SIUC students who are faced with combating a very negative stereotype.

IT HAS EVEN BEEN SPECULATED that graduates looking for work in this area will have SIUC’s image working against them.

When the out-of-control behavior exhibited during two weekends out of the year, and predominantly by out-of-towners, begin to negate the positive efforts and accomplishments produced by this University, something needs to change.

A solution to regulating Springfest and Halloween celebrations may lie in stricter dorm rules regarding the two weekends. If dorm residents were restricted on the number of out-of-town friends staying with them during those weekends, the number of non-SIUC celebrators may go down.

KEEPING IN MIND THE $3,000 worth of damages Springfest 1991 partiers left at the Holiday Inn, stricter dorm rules may be a little short-sighted. It would, however, be a start.

To help, SIUC and other students could practice being responsible drinkers. Students of legal drinking age shouldn’t be told not to drink. But they should have the common sense to police themselves so the authorities don’t have to.

In the midst of trying to dispel the party image plague, SIUC certainly doesn’t want to seem cold to visitors. When the visitors begin to damage property, other people and the reputation of a major state university, maybe it’s time to roll up the welcome mat.

Quotable Quotes

“If there is little demand in the field for your degree, then a master’s degree is probably not a practical goal for you.” —John Summey, associate professor of marketing and director of the Master of Business Administration Program at SIUC.

Letters

Sextist language may be based on one’s attitude

You have had a number of letters that are specifically lately about sexism in the language. Admittedly, sextip people use the language in a sexist way. We have also heard of people using it in jesting part in perpetuating sexism.

Yet it may not be entirely the fault of the language if it is understood as sexist.

Part of the apparent sexism in English may be a misunderstanding on the part of some users of our beautiful language.

Many of us Americans speak only one language. It is hard for those who do, to understand that words like “he” are neuter unless specified otherwise by their use.

Maybe it would help if more of us learned more languages. In the end you find that “he” are neuter unless specified otherwise by their use.

It may be that the attitudes parents convey with words are more basic or more important than the words themselves.

After all, when you compare word pairs like “he/shes,” “male/female” and “men/women” you find that the neuter-male term is merely the common denominator for the parents of two words.

This comparison can lead one wide the sense of female superiority: What is a male, if not an incomplete female?

Admittedly, I am biased. I believe in women's equality and I'm an English major.

I also believe that anyone who learns to love great American authors, such as Emily Dickinson, Eudora Welty and Willa Cather, will develop a similar attitude.—Larry Roemer, junior, English.

All campus residents need quality housing

Sexist language may be based on one's attitude

By talking to several students at SIUC, I have heard several complaints on the difference between the triads and the towers, in line with the myth about Brute Towers.

Many people favor the towers; because the facilities are more convenient, considering there are only four people to a bathroom instead of eight.

Also, they do not have to leave the rooms to use the washrooms, as is the case in the triads.

There are stoves and washing machines on each floor in the towers. Therefore, students are able to cook their own food and they can easily do laundry without the inconvenience of having to leave the building.

The triads have no stoves or washing machines. As a result, students living in there cannot cook and only have access to the one microwave provided to the room that is shared by all the residents.

Thief steals hard work

I would like to attempt to appeal to the consciousness of the person or persons who thoughtlessly broke into my car and took my backpack.

This incident occurred on Friday, May 3 at approximately 1 p.m. My automible was parked behind Clothes Pro Laundry on South Illinois Avenue.

At this time someone deliberately broke into my car and took my maroon, leather backpack.

This was nothing of any value to anyone in this backpack, however, it did contain an important semester of very important paperwork and research that is pertinent to the completion of my semester.

It also contained my purse, the drivers license and student I.D. which is also of no value to anyone but myself. These items contained were not to be worth anything to anyone, but to me they are irreplaceable.

I am a graduate student and the papers in my backpack represent hours of work that cannot be duplicated.

If the person who took my belongings has any conscience or sense of ethics they should return my property or even leave it anonymously with the Carbondale Police Department.

This request may seem futile but anyone who has ever done research of this nature will understand my desperation.

I am not out for revenge or vindication, I simply would like to get my belongings back.

If anyone has any information concerning this incident, please contact the proper authorities.

Taxpayers lose with Sununu’s trips when business mixes with pleasure

IT DIDN’T TAKE LONG for the White House to brush aside the intense questions about John “Frequent Flyer” Sununu’s many trips on Air Force corporate-type jets. As it turns out, the White House chief of staff wasn’t kidding about his own pleasure on political business.

Just about every time the pilot switched on the engines, at a minimum hourly cost of about $490 to taxpayers, Sununu was roaming around some important and essential official business.

We know this because the White House has released documents showing that of 77 trips made by Sununu in the government jets, only 10 were for official business.

The rest of the time, he was traveling in his official capacity as a big cheese in the White House, or on a political mission, for which the Republican Party paid the government with the price of a commercial airline ticket.

THE OFFICIAL PURPOSES of his trips show what an assessor’s responsibility it is to be a big cheese in the government.

For example, in December of 1989, Sununu had to fly to Vail, Colorado, an appropriate moment to make a speech to a group of people from Ski Magazine. It must have been a long speech, because he missed several days. That same December, he went on another official mission to Anchorage, Alaska, to talk to a group of people from Ski Magazine.

It’s reported that reassuring, since a loyal and well-informed Ski Magazine staff is essential to the security of our nation. One never knows when this country might be invaded by the enemy Finns or Norwegians, so our ski patrols should be always on the alert.

It’s been reported that while he was away on official mission, Sununu did some skiing.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

Undoubtedly, that was done to let the Ski Magazine people know that he was personally prepared to lead an attack against any hostile Norwegians, who are seen as moral.

According to the travel documents, Mrs. Sununu accompanied her husband on both official Ski Magazine Missions. But because she was not making a speech to the Ski Magazine people, Mrs. Sununu paid $1,220, the commercial rate, for each trip. I’m impressed. She not only joins her husband on important missions, but she pays her own way.

A loyal wife is a precious gift.

“Sununu also made 16 official missions to his home state of New Hampshire. It wasn’t explained what official White House business was conducted in New Hampshire. Possibly that is classified. But he could have gone there to make sure the maple syrup was flowing. Or is it Vermont where maple syrup flows? Well, it’s somewhere up there, and what would America’s pacesetter be like without maple syrup?”

WHATEVER HIS 16 official missions to New Hampshire were for, they surely have a tie-in with the all-time record for New Hampshire missions by a White House chief of staff. And it’s about time, I say.

Sununu has been shamefully ignored by press-hungry White House chiefs of staff. After all, New Hampshire is on the Canadian border and you never knew when those people might strap on their skis and come charging down on us in the dead of the night. It’s a geopolitical jungle out there.

As for his personal trips, not once did Sununu fail to pay for the use of the Air Force jet.

Once he went to New Jersey for a football game. He reimbursed the government $200.

ANOTHER TIME HE Flew from the Florida Keys to West Palm Beach. That was just a short hop so he paid only $167. And the other two times, he flew to Boston to visit a dentist. He paid $420 a trip. That sounds steep to me, but I guess he flew both ways. You would think they’d give him a discount.

Of course, his critics are saying that it’s all well and good that he paid $200 to jet to a football game, and that the Republican Party paid for his purely political trips.

But it’s conservatively estimated that all that flying around cost at least $800,000, and probably more. But if you include the crew’s paychecks, the government has reimbursed only $42,000—most of it from the GOP. Which still leaves more than $700,000 whobobbling out of the jets.

THAT’S WHAT I CALL nit-picking. Sununu is a big cheese, a big heel, a top tamales. As the White House Journal, it’s essential that he be capable of being in contact with the commander in chief at any given time.

So that’s why he has to be on the Air Force corporate jet. If that doesn’t make sense, what does it? It’s worth every penny to know that when Sununu was soaring along at 15,000 feet on his way back from Vail or Aspen, the president could call him and say “John, how did the official Ski Magazine mission go?”

The White man has perverted Jesus’ messages

“Time and time again, the black, the brown, the red, and the yellow races have met and suffered under the white man’s small ability to understand the simple notes of the name. ‘The white man seems tone deaf to the total orchestration of humanity. Everyday, his place of power to cause suffering among those people who challenge the authority to hold such power.”

Jesus still teaches humans to walk peacefully upon this planet. You decide who knows better.—Joe Keck, sophomore, cinematography.

Smart gets verbal whipping from father-in-law in court

Superior Court Judge Douglas B. Brown has denied a motion by Smart's mother, Linda Wojas, to dismiss Smart's case against her. Smart, 23, was convicted March 3 of being an accessory to first-degree murder, conspiracy and witness tampering. She was accused of helping her lover, William Pynn, and three companions to murder her husband, Gregory Smart, last May in the couple's Doris Condominium.

Immediately after the verdict was announced, Smart sentenced Smart to a mandatory sentence of life in prison without parole for life.

He said the New Madrid fault line has been active for quite some time and that it produces a few hundred quakes a year, but they are so small in magnitude, about 1.0 or 2.0, that people don't feel them.

When people do feel one, it starts them thinking again about being earthquake-proof, he said.

Sexton said the quake Friday night was fairly large, said Sexton.

But he noted that Carbondale residents felt last September, its epicenter was near New Hamburg, Mo.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A group of congressional Democrats proposed imposing a tax on the wealth of the nation's largest households with children, calling the plan "very good policy and very good politics."

The legislation, to be introduced in Congress Tuesday, would offer new tax breaks for families under $100,000 in income.

It would increase the tax base for children by providing a tax credit of $800 for each child up to age 18 and an $800 tax credit for parents over 65.

Local governments' taxing policies seriously questioned by state study

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A study by an Illinois tax think-tank released Monday recommended the General Assembly pass a list of strict laws to stop local governments from employing "illegal" or "loophole" practices in their taxing policies.

The Illinois Federation of Reformed Illinois has already reported that 64 percent of Illinois counties failed to meet the standards in their taxing policies.

Bangladesh student group raises money to ransom home

By Chyrese Wolf

The Bangladesh Student Association has been conducting a relief fund-raising drive for the victims of a deadly typhoon which struck their homeland last week. It has been estimated that the 146 mile-per-hour winds and 20-foot tidal waves which rose above the Bay of Bengal have taken about 130,000 lives. The last typhoon to hit Bangladesh was in 1970 and killed 300,000 people, said Sultan Mizia, doctoral student in physics from Patna, Bangladesh.

"We (Bangladesh students) wish we could go home and do something to help," Parez said. Despite the recent devastation, Bangladesh has been stricken by disasters before, said Annon Mizia, doctoral student in sociology from Bar-Ial, Bangladesh.

"Bangladesh has gone through mishaps... after another since its independence, including natural disasters and political coups," Mizan said. This has hindered political and economic progress, he said.

Recently, however, the country has been showing economic progress, Mizan said. Now it will have to be rebuilt.

Ali A. Ahmed, political science instructor at John A. Logan College, said Bangladesh is a poor country. The government doesn't have enough resources to rebuild after such a disaster, he said.

"The family will have a triple effect. Every part of the country will be affected," Ahmed said.

Consequences of this disaster will be long term.

Prime minister appeals to U.N. for ceasefire

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen in Phnom Penh has appealed to the United Nations for “neutral foreigners” to monitor a shaky ceasefire in Cambodia, the official SKP news agency reported Monday.

"I propose that the voluntary ceasefire be immediately observed by neutral foreigners to be agreed to by the two sides so as to discourage any eventual violations and increase mutual confidence," Hun Sen said in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Hun Sen’s chief decided later to send a review team to Cambodia to assess the situation. Hun Sen said the success of the volunteer ceasefire was key to agreement on an official ceasefire that is part of a U.N. draft plan for a political settlement of the 12-year-old Cambodian conflict.

Both Hun Sen and a three- part rebel coalition have charged each other with violations of the voluntary cease-fire that began May 1.

Children flood camps; families leave homes

ZAKHO, Iraq (UPI) — Mohammad Fals Jakasa, his wife and two children have fled into a Kurdish refugee camp after an exhausting three-day journey from mountains near the Turkish-Iraqi border.

Kurds from the family headed up a dirt road to their newly assigned tent in the valley, they looked tired and hungry. The family had no milk and no food for the baby.

"Three days. No food, no shelter," Jakasa said. "It was a day’s walk to Zakho, one of Jassan’s children.

A younger brother, Ali, 12, carried a box of twigs and sticks for the campfire.

Hamid, 12, said, "We have had enough food and supplies and we are thankful to God for all the help we had today.

Hamid, 12, said, "We have had enough food and supplies and we are thankful to God for all the help we had today.

"They do not know if the family is still living. He was back after resting and drinking, but he feels certain his village is safe.

Jassan does not like Turkish or Kurdish soldiers, and wants allied troops to stay until Iraqi forces leave the country.

Like other Kurds, he feels a Kurdish country will be created for them, but his chief worry now is the survival of his wife, mother- in-law and children.

It is the children who dominate daily life in southeastern Turkey and northern Iraq. They fill the tent city, prance through high green grass, pose for pictures and lure at wave of U.S. soldiers.

"Hello, mister, how are you?" is heard everywhere as children happily seek out soldiers.

"We are very happy," the family said.

Saluki softball team lives up to No. 1 rank

The SIU softball team ripped through its season and won the Gateway Conference's regular season title for the first time. It is now ready to try for it all and win the Gateway Tournament.

The Salukis finished their regular season in a doubleheader Saturday against conference foe Wichita State, sweeping past the Shockers 5-0 and 4-3. These two wins brought their season record to 38-4 and their conference mark to 14-0.

This is the first time in the conference's nine-year history for a team to go unbeaten in league play and it sets a school record for most consecutive Gateway wins in a season.

SIUC also set a new school record for most consecutive wins. The Salukis went most of their season without experiencing defeat, winning 23 straight before falling to Southeast Missouri State May 1.

SIUC coach Kay Brechelsbauer said her team has worked hard to get where it is.

"It was not an easy task to win the regular season title," Brechelsbauer said. "We worked hard and had to come from behind many times. The team just never gave up and that is why it deserves credit."

The conference chose the Salukis from the very start, ranking them No. 1 in the preseason poll. SIUC did not let it down, living up to that ranking by defeating every Gateway school it faced.

The softball players along with Brechelsbauer agree this is the best team SIUC has seen in many years and it has potential to go all the way.

"This is the best team I have been on," senior left fielder Shannon Taylor said. "Up and down the lineup we have steady players. Any player could bring in the winning run for us."

"This is the most consistent team I have ever played on," Finchbach said, "and it felt good to be the preseason No. 1 pick. It gives us confidence to know the other coaches in the conference think so highly of our team."

Brechelsbauer said balance and consistency are the team's key to success this season.

The Salukis will travel to Wichita, Kansas, Wednesday to start play in the Gateway Conference Tournament Thursday through Saturday.

Brechelsbauer said right now the team is focusing on exams and on resting to be ready to play.

If the team wins the Gateway Conference Tournament it will automatically advance to the NCAA Championship.

“They are all so routine they probably will go through with no comment,” Peet said.

The new programs in Allens, Bloomer and Wright Halls, part of University Park’s residential area will be updated to meet new regulations for life safety systems.

The National Fire Protection Association suggested the updated systems five years ago, said Jim Filla, senior engineer.

The University currently is in the fifth phase of updating the campus’ fire system.

"The system will upgrade and replace all fire systems on campus," Filla said.

But fire protection is not funded through the state, updated campus housing fire systems is not covered in the University phase-in program.

"Provisions included in the program are funded by housing revenues, Filla said.

If approved renovations will include additional detection of such as supplemental audio and video alarms.

Audio and video alarms are not always from boxes that sound when a fire is sighted.

"We have elected to stay with them because of attention gathering abilities," Filla said.

Funding for the renovations, which will come from housing revenues, is estimated to cost $150,000.

"Housing issues to be addressed will be to accept contracts for repairs to the McPharson Terrace and Allen Hall."

The request for proposals for McPharson had the lowest bid for the job to begin phase II of the old McPharson Terrace, the married student residence area south of campus.

Although Phase 11 was estimated at $600,000, the company agreed to complete the job for $58,809.

Phase 12, which will include replacing about 100 interior and exterior doors, was approved at the April board meeting, dealt with replacing the heating and air conditioning systems at Allen Hall.

Contracts for renovations to modify the heating and cooling systems in Allen Hall also will be let before the board.

Changes in the system are needed because of frequent repairs and maintenance problems.

The project is estimated to cost $180,000, but bids from H & H Mechanical and Electrical Contractors and Wilson Electric Services, both of Carbondale, totaled $267,076.

If approved by the board, H & H will be responsible for the project’s mechanical work while Wilson will be responsible for the electrical work.

Funding for both the McPharson Terrace and the Allen Hall renovations will come from housing revenue.

Contracts to resurface various roads, drives and parking lots on the campus also will be considered by the board.

Areas under consideration are Lot 14 and a drive west of the University Park, Lot 49 west of Greek Row, the drive into the Wham parking lot and the drive into Thompson Point.

The estimated cost of these renovations was $652,000, the lowest bid, given by E. T. Simonds Construction Co. of Carbondale, was $657,697.

The board also will decide on replacing the original gymnasium floor in the Student Recreation Center.

Flooding, which occurred in 1977, 1987 and 1989, has caused damage to the maple hardwood floor that was installed in 1977 when the center opened.

The estimated cost for the project is $133,000. Insurance will pay $80,000 and the center will pay the remaining $53,000.

The flooding problem, caused by storm water runoff and inadequate drainage, has been corrected with a new addition to storm sewer lines and diverting the water runoff from the building.

Larry Von Behren, an AIDS doctor with the SIU School of Medicine, said the new guidelines essentially eliminate the eligibility of the program’s target population: middle-class people with AIDS.

The new guidelines reduce the level of federal aid. A person must be a documented AIDS victim from 700 to 200 percent above the federal poverty level.

Under the new guidelines, an AIDS victim would have to make $15,000-$30,000 to be eligible for help from the drug reimbursement program.

AIDS victims with an income level 200 percent above the federal poverty level are less likely to show up for treatment at local hospitals, local health centers or other state welfare programs.

"The program was essentially effective ended," Von Behren said.

But Terry L. Dobbs, the drug program’s administrator with the Department of Health, said the program will continue to help the most needy AIDS victims.

Dobbs said the state will spend about $1 million for the program next fiscal year, a $400,000 increase from last year.

As more AIDS victims need the program, however, money is not available to help all of them at the same rate under old guidelines, Von Behren said.

Dobbs and Von Behren said participants in the program for May 1 will not be forced out because the new guidelines only apply to people eligible for the program after May 1.

The Illinois Department of Public Health records 89 reported cases of AIDS and 4,669 reported cases of people tested positive for the AIDS virus in Illinois as of March 5.

Of the reported cases of AIDS in Illinois, about 25 percent participate in the drug reimbursement program.

"I wish we had the money to buy drugs for everyone who needs them, but we don’t," Dobbs said. "It’s a strictly a budget matter."

The program is designed to buy drugs for AIDS victims in the advanced stages of the disease to keep them productive as long as possible.

Von Behren said middle-class AIDS victims no longer eligible for the program will either buy the drugs themselves after May 1 or go without.

If they go without the drugs, he said, the state pays more in the end to care for AIDS patients who become unable to work and hospitalization in the advanced stages of the disease.

AIDS is a disease in which a virus attacks the body’s immune system, leaving victim susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

The drug reimbursement program was reduced not only because of the state’s financial problems but also because of a sniffer of federal anti-AIDS funds.

The federal Comprehensive AIDS Resource Act consolidates money for AIDS and targets money for AIDS populations in the advanced stages of the disease.

Von Behren said this “body count mentality” hurts states such as Illinois, which have smaller AIDS populations and fewer patients in advanced stages of the disease.

"The fact is that taxpayers in Illinois are not willing to spend any more money for these services," he said.

Peoria, Rockford, Springfield, Tinley Park, Waukegan and at two locations in the St. Louis Metropolitan Sytem.

About 30 people marched ahead Illinois Department of Public Health, the head of the AIDS Health Center through the noon hour. A number of tractors and barrels soaked the TEENAGE HEALTH Institute.

The four months he served in the Gulf, he said, along with several friends, continued to fly after night crew chief let them into the area where the F-16s were being kept.

"It seemed like the appropriate thing to do at the time, and that several other bombs also were being inspected.

"The next day we were told they had been properly delivered to their proper destinations," Becker said.

"That location, however, was never identified," he said.

"Becker has been home form the Gulf for nearly a month and said I has been great to back.

Hoffner said the city could face some financial problems.

"Beyond (fiscal year) 1992 our financial future is very uncertain, and we are committed to facing these problems in a comprehensive and anticipatory manner," he wrote. "...we face continuing declines in state and federal aid, a rainy day fund, existing taxes and user fees, and increasing expectations for services and efficiency in local government.

Detroit again, it brings hack M c Hale, who has been part of the basketball scene. The Pistons were scheduled for Thursday and Friday nights. The rare meeting of the Plainsmen and Rambler has been agreed upon to avoid back-to-back games.

The Boston Celtics and Pistons meet in Tuesday night, the second game of their playoff series.

The Celtics are all familiar with Bill Laimbeer’s rebounding style, Dennis Rodman’s exuberant display and Isiah's style of playmaking and ballhandling.

The defending champions are equally familiar with Larry Bird’s toughness, Kevin McHale’s post-up play and Robert Parish’s high-court playmaking and rebounding.

The Celtics guard Brian Shaw said, “The intensity level of intensity will go up a few more notches because it’s Detroit.”

Thomas, who underwent wrist surgery in mid-season, is back to playing. But he is not back to playing great basketball.

Both are very lucky gentlemen, said both players suffered a bruised heart, but neither will need surgery.
