Athletic Department responds to criticism

Discussion underway, but department awaits Kowalczyk's arrival before finalizing plans

ANDY EGENSE
& ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTERS

The SIUC Athletic Department has voiced its response to public criticism by the Board of Trustees and other campus groups regarding its substantial budget deficit.

In its first public response since the April 13 board meeting ordered the department to devise a plan to decrease its projected $823,000 deficit by September, Associate Athletic Director Kathy Jones called the projection of an $823,000 deficit "the worst case scenario."

Jones said the deficit would only reach $823,000 if the department spends nearly every penny by the end of fiscal year 2000 and said she does not believe the deficit will be that high.

She also said the department is in the midst of formulating ideas to combat the deficit before newly-appointed Athletic Director Paul Kowalczyk takes over for interim Athletic Director Harold Barlo on June 1. Until Kowalczyk arrives, Jones said the department is limited in what course of action it can take.

"I don't want to say anything today that might tie [Kowalczyk's] hands tomorrow,"

Jones said. "Nobody wants to talk about what's going to be done when we are not the boss."

In response to some of the criticism the department has faced, Jones stressed that the Athletic Department's budget is like no other on campus because it is difficult to predict how much revenue will be generated by the department. For example, student fees make up almost half of the athletic budget, but the department has to guess what enrollment figures will be.

Jones said the budget is complicated and unlike a "check book" system because the department does not know how much revenue will be coming in from areas such as attendance at events and sponsorships.

"I wish I had easy answers, but it isn't that simple," Jones said. "It's like the rest of life — it's fairly complicated."

Jones, who has one semester on the job, said she is still trying to figure out the problems that pre-dated her arrival.

"I don't feel like anybody knows the whole picture," Jones said. "I want to know before we do anything what the facts are."

Jones said within the next couple months, the department will be sharing information to pinpoint exactly how the problem began. The department conducted a meeting April 25 to discuss cost-cutting measures to alleviate the deficit.

One cost-cutting measure that has been brought up will restrict coaches from supplementing their budgets with unused

Looking back at the riots of 1970

Thirty years later, SIUC still remembers one of the darker chapters in its history

GEOFFREY M. RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Guy Anderson was just taking a break from his studies to enjoy a few drinks with friends at a downtown Carbondale bar in May of 1970. But when he heard screaming hoards of people outside and caught the scent of tear gas slowly drifting in, he knew it was time to get out.

Thus, Anderson, who was a graduate student in educational psychology at the time, bolted down South Illinois Avenue. His only thoughts were on his wife and baby, who were at his home

But between him and his family lied three blocks of chaos — a swollen street of students running about like ants while Carbondale police shot clouds of tear gas through the air.

"By that time, so many of the shop windows had been broken, there was just glass everywhere," Anderson recalled. "It looked like a bomb had landed in downtown Carbondale. It's something I'll never forget, that's for sure."

And Anderson is far from the only one left with memories of when, 30 years ago this week, the students of SIUC declared war on their own University in protest of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War, an event that was repeated at colleges throughout the nation.

"What we had here was a local manifestation of what was going on nationally," said interim Chancellor John

Jackson, who was a professor in political science at the time. "It was very tense and a very unsettling time."

While several causes have been attributed to the counter-movement of college students, the intense rioting of early May was spawned by the escalation of the Vietnam War on May 1, when President Nixon sent ground forces into Cambodia. The subsequent death of four students at the hands of National Guardsmen during a protest at Kent State University added to the fury.

The shootings and the controversy surrounding the center led to a week of turmoil on the SIUC campus beginning May 6, causing more than $75,000 in damage to the University and the city, and more than 400 students being arrested. On May 12, seeing no other options before him, SIUC President

Archer may face another charge

Judicial Board hearing requested

KAREN BLATTER
GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Bill Archer, Undergraduate Student Government president elect, may face an additional charge against the Student Conduct Code after a fact-finding conference with Student Judicial Affairs on Friday.

Archer may face an eighth violation of the Student Conduct Code for possession of an empty alcohol bottle in his residence hall room after an April 10 incident.

On that date, Archer, who was a student resident assistant at the time, and five other men were found in Archer's room at about 4:30 a.m. by Felts Hall head resident Keften Greenstreet and head resident of Kellogg and Warren halls Todd Firth. Greenstreet stated in a Judicial Affairs Disciplinary Report that she had heard loud voices and smelled marijuana outside Archer's room and investigated the situation.

Archer was brought up on charges of unauthorized possession and/or use of cannabis or controlled substances, excessive noise, quiet hours, guests' behaviors, furnishing false information to the University with intent to deceive, and failure to comply with directions of University.

Because the fact-finding conference revealed conflicting stories, Archer still claims his innocence of smoking marijuana, and has requested a Judicial Board hearing, for which a date is still yet to be determined.

Student looks at cheating at SIUC

Senior's thesis examines dishonest academic behavior

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Almost one-third of SIUC students have cheated in their years at the University, and three-fourths of students have witnessed a friend cheat, according to the results of a psychology student's thesis. Jonathan Connor Self, a senior from Joliet, prepared his honors thesis for his Psychology 499 class on cheating behavior at the University. Self surveyed 160 SIUC students between the ages of 18 and 56. It took him more than a year to finalize the results, and he was surprised at how frequently cheating occurs.

"I found a lot of things I didn't expect to find," Self said. "Ideally, the more people cheat, the less valuable their degree is."

Another conclusion gathered from his research is that personal factors, such as gender and risk-taking behavior, are not related to academic dishonesty.

The greatest factor that leads to cheating, he said, was having cheated before. Self also found that rationalizing played little role in the decision to cheat or not to cheat.

"It doesn't really matter what reasons you use to justify cheating or not justify

Dean's search still in progress

Eight semi-finalists in line for the MCMA dean's position

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

On June 30, 2000, Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, will step down from his position.

The MCMA dean's search committee has not appointed anyone to fill his shoes yet. The committee has eight semi-finalists it is trying to narrow down, said Lyle White, associate professor of educational psychology and special education and head of the MCMA dean's search committee.

searching

"We're trying to find suitable candidates to bring in for interviews," White said. "I hope at the end of the week we will have names to send to Dr. Winters."

The committee will send three to five names to Margaret Winters, interim provost and vice chancellor of Academic Affairs, and she will plan campus interviews for each candidate.

There are three main qualifications being considered in the decision-making process. The candidates will need to have an earned terminal degree appropriate to the mission of the college. Along with a degree, the candidates should also have been recognized for excellence in teaching, scholarly research or creative activity, professional achievement, academic leadership and administrative ability.

The dean's position is available July 1, 2000, but White said he doesn't know if a candidate will be chosen by then.

Discover the wonders of nature this summer

Knowing the rules to Crab Orchard before entering can make trip more enjoyable

JASON COCKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With warmer summer weather, many students will take to the beauty of Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

But many do not understand the rules of Crab Orchard and this gets a lot of people in trouble, said Jonathan Shaffer, assistant refuge manager at Crab Orchard.

Crab Orchard is unique among wildlife refuges because most of it is open to the public. Of the nearly 50,000 acres that make up the refuge, there are three large lakes: Crab Orchard, Little Grassy and Devil's Kitchen.

About 20,000 acres of this are off limits to the public. Many people do not know this, and a lot of people drive into these areas, Shaffer said.

Crab Orchard, founded in 1947, is a part of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and is one of 517 wildlife refuges throughout the country.

For the people allowed to drive in, a sticker is required for their car. It costs $15 to buy a sticker for the whole year, Shaffer said. There is also a $5, 5-day pass and a $2, 1-day pass. He said these stickers are sold at every campground, so there are no excuses for not getting one.

"The University is a great opportunity for us to interact with young people.

JONATHAN SHAFER
assistant refuge manager at Crab Orchard

While the sticker program is unpopular, the money collected goes to building trails and for general maintenance, among other items. He said all parking tickets on the refuge are $100, and this money goes to the government and cannot be used at Crab Orchard.

About 140 SIUC students volunteer or intern every year at Crab Orchard. Shaffer said students should volunteer because they would benefit from the experiences they would have going into the wildlife refuge.

Crab Orchard has a variety of recreational activities people can engage in, such as hunting, fishing, wildlife photography, hiking and fishing. Bald eagles have been placed here and tours are allowed, he said.

"The University is a great opportunity for us to interact with young people," Shaffer said.

While most people obey the rules, Shaffer said too often people litter, throw cigarette butts on the ground, and do not obey the signs. Law enforcement is a problem since there are only four officers to monitor about 1.2 million visitors that come each year, he said.

International Student Council elects new leadership

ISC votes in a new president with a vision of his own

International Student Council looked to chart a different course with the election of a new president.

John Li won ISC's presidential election Friday defeating incumbent Aashish Lakhani, taking 11 of the 18 ISC member votes. The votes accounted for 16 of the council's individual student council presidents eligible to participate in Friday's election, in addition to two proxies.

Li, a junior in physics and music from Singapore, said his primary focus will be on increasing ISC's membership and redefining its mission.

"I hope to build on tradition and not be bogged down by old things, but to create new and exciting things for our community," Li said.

Li's goals include increasing the group's status within the University community by reaching out to graduate and professional students.

He is also looking to have a greater collaboration with International Students and Scholars and other student organizations.

Li's immediate plans will be to meet with the rest of ISC's members this summer to start building the framework for a new administration for the fall, he said.

Since coming to SIUC in 1998, Li's other accomplishments include serving as an active member of ISC as chair of its sports committee, a coordinator of last year's cultural show and volunteering for ISC events.

Li delivered a strong speech Friday that left a positive impression with members, including Carla Coppi, associate director for International Students and Scholars, who serves as an adviser to the council.

"He has a true vision for ISC," she said. "He's a professional, well-organized gentleman, and I couldn't be happier for him."

Coppi also had kind words for ISC's outgoing president, calling Lakhani an outstanding president who guided the organization during one of its toughest periods.

Lakhani, a junior in computer science and information technology from Kenya, was appointed president of ISC in 1999. During his tenure, Lakhani oversaw ISC's International Festival and annual soccer tournaments.

"I hope to build on tradition and not be bogged down by old things, but to create new and exciting things for our community.

JOHN LI
ISC president elect

Earlier this year, Lakhani helped lead the effort in opposing a federally mandated fee imposed on international students. He said he supports the new president and will continue to play a role in ISC's future in some capacity.

"I wish them a happy future, but I will definitely come and help them out if they need any," Lakhani said. "[Being president] is basically a learning process, and John now has his chance to implement his plans the best he can."

The council also had elections for two other executive offices. Karen Schayman was re-elected as ISC's vice president of finance, and Bedi Erim was re-elected to the post of vice president on internal affairs. Both Schayman, a junior in foreign languages and international trade from Bolivia, and Erim, a senior in finance from Istanbul, ran unopposed.

CARBONDALE

Commission works on death penalty recommendations

Gov. George Ryan's Commission on Capital Punishment, co-chaired by former U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, has only done primary work on getting the commission started.

The commission was established by Ryan after he placed a moratorium on the death penalty in Illinois. The commission's goal is to come up with recommendations to Ryan.

"At this point, we have just gone through procedural things," Simon said. "We haven't got to the substance yet."

Since the death penalty was reinstated in 1977, 13 death row inmates have been cleared of execution and 12 have been put to death.

Simon, who is opposed to the death penalty, said the committee has a wide range of opinions on the death penalty.

Simon said he does not know what the outcome of the committee will be.

"Not sure of results," he said. "I guess we will try and tighten the procedures."

The hearing will be shown live as it takes place at the Peoria Civic Center. Almost 20 farmers from Illinois and surrounding states will present their views on trade regulations, farm policy and other agricultural issues.

Debated mass transit fee to be voted on Thursday

The Board of Trustees finance committee will vote on the 36-percent raise to the mass transit fee after two months of debate between Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council on Thursday at SIUC.

The fee, which will increase from $23.50 a semester to $32 a semester if passed, was approved by USG President Sean Henry earlier in the semester. However GPSC voted against raising the fee, citing alternatives for maintaining the transit system other than a fee increase.

Other fee increases voted on for fiscal year 2002 are the intercollegiate athletic fee, Student Center fee, Student Health Services, residence hall rates, student recreation, and textbook rental. A proposal to decrease the student recreation fee will also be voted on.

The board meeting will begin at 9:00 a.m., Thursday in the Meridian Ballroom of the Delyte W. Morris University Center at SIUC.

Archer's behavior raises more questions than answers

Undergraduate Student Government members should be well-prepared for the public life after they graduate, as this semester has brought as much scandal and controversy to the organization as any professional politician's office.

Bill Archer, USG president elect, will begin his tenure under the dark cloud of controversy. He was elected a week after he was asked to resign from his position as a student resident assistant for possible violations of the Student Conduct Code. Archer claims he is innocent of the eight charges under review in Student Judicial Affairs, which include furnishing false information to the University with intent to deceive and unauthorized possession and/or use of cannabis or controlled substances. But Archer is not behaving like an innocent man. His statements have been misleading on several occasions and his attitude strikingly casual for a man with so much at stake.

When Archer resigned from his resident assistant position, he told the DAILY EGYPTIAN he was asked to do so because of a circulating rumor that he was "arrested or busted for smoking marijuana in his dorm room."

"Because I am such a public figure on campus and this rumor was bringing too much bad P.R. to [University] Housing," Archer insisted, adding that the rumor was maliciously started to ruin his campaign for USG president.

But later, it would become evident that, whether the charges are true or not, they surfaced as a result of an investigation by two other student resident assistants. Archer's room was searched in the early-morning hours of April 10, when head resident Kefren Greenstreet said she heard loud noises and smelled marijuana smoke outside his room. The search of Archer's room revealed little incriminating evidence, namely, an empty bottle of alcohol, a couple of lit candles and some open windows. So why did Archer resort to a conspiracy theory, rather than just telling the truth?

Although Archer has made his Judicial Affairs Disciplinary Report public, he has never responded to key accusations in the report. Greenstreet wrote in the report that when Archer was asked about the smell of marijuana coming from his room, Archer said "we were smoking in the car on the way back from the ATO house." Archer has said he has not used marijuana since he began work as a student resident assistant, but he hasn't attempted to clarify or deny statements attributed to him in the report that suggest otherwise.

Last week, Archer gave another explanation for the smell of marijuana outside his room:

"It could have come from any particular place whatsoever, because other people on the floor smoke marijuana ... It's not that odd for people to smoke marijuana in the dorms."

As a student resident assistant, Archer was under contract to uphold the rules of Student Conduct Code, but his statements nonchalantly reflect that he knew students on his floor broke rules regularly and somewhat openly.

If Archer is innocent of the charges that have been brought against him, he should have no reason to distort the facts of the situation. Archer is no longer representing only himself — he now represents both USG and the undergraduate student body.

Gregory's opinions are shared by few

DEAR EDITOR:

The letter by John Gregory in Wednesday's edition of the DAILY EGYPTIAN and its only slightly revised version which appeared in Friday's "Southern Illinoisian," bears a Johnny-one-note theme of "the sky is falling, the sky is falling, blame it on the BOT." Phrasing this in the kindest way I can, Gregory's tired rhetoric is becoming a bore. Its deficiencies beam glaringly when measured against the EGYPTIAN's well-articulated editorial, "SIUC vigilante pied us all" and a letter in the Southern submitted by Kimberly Taylor of Herrin, both of which more accurately reflect the feelings of the majority of people of this region.

Sadly, Dr. Gregory and his colleagues, who apparently share Ms. Roberts's insatiable need to grab headlines, keep appearing again and again, whistling the same tune, in the columns of two of the area's most widely-read newspapers. If it proves these individuals truly are the HOPE for the future of Southern Illinois University, it would appear we are in greater peril than any of us realized.

Judicial Affairs in need of change

DEAR EDITOR:

I would just like the chance to give my opinion about this whole Judicial Affairs thing before everyone goes home for the summer. Just to clear up a couple of things, no one in my room was a member of any fraternity. Second of all, no one ever smoked anything but cigarettes in my room. As far as the whole report on me goes, I feel that the person that wrote the report felt like she was doing the right thing. Even though all of the charges against me are totally unjustified, this should show everyone why the whole Student Conduct Code and the Judicial Affairs Office should be reviewed. The way things are now, anyone in a residence hall can be documented for just about everything they do. If you have an alarm clock that goes off in the morning, you are breaking about three or more regulations as things are now. Although it is unfortunate that I had to be the poster child for why things need to change, I feel that I am well prepared to help all of the students change the status quo that we have now. In talking with many different people on both sides of the issue of Judicial Affairs, it seems that everyone agrees that there needs to be some changes. Having been a resident assistant, I know first hand that people do in fact get in trouble in the residence halls for breaking rules that are not even rules. Sometimes a person may in fact get in trouble for just having a conversation in their room past 7 certain time.

I do feel that, over all, the process that resident assistants go through to keep the peace is good, but I do know that there are some things that need to change. Hopefully with the efforts of some students in the next year, we can all live together happier than what we have now.

USG: Undergraduate Student Greed

DEAR EDITOR:

I will try to be brief and let the facts speak for themselves. This week I received a copy of the Undergraduate Student Government fee allocation meeting and was appalled by what I saw. To say that there has been an abuse of power and misappropriation of funds is an understatement, but I won't spend my time bashing USG. I think the SIUC student body should be aware of the facts and decide for themselves.

As I looked down the list of Registered Student Organizations and their respective dollar amounts, I noticed that there has been large sums of money doled out to particular greek organizations that didn't make any sense. Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity has been allocated $7,606, yet according to its own fall roster, it only has seven members! Beta Phi Pi, a thriving organization of eight members, received $7,854 and Iota Phi Theta's six members received $7,125. These organizations do not even qualify as RSOs because they have fewer than 10 members.

On the flip side, the 79 members of Alpha Tau Omega received a measly $500. The baseball club, with 35 members, received $200. The Interfraternity council applied for $14,000 and only received $1,000. Even the Pan Hellenic council was short changed, only receiving $1,000. Does anyone else see a problem here? Do you think that it is purely coincidence that USG President Sean Henry is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and Iota Phi Theta fraternity is represented on the USG financial committee? Do these individuals really think the SIUC student body is so ignorant that they will sit on the sidelines while Henry and party divide up student money for their own use? I think not.

I would like to challenge the SIUC student body to stand up and demand an explanation for how their money has been spent. It is your right as students to know how the money you paid in fees is being used. As a past USG senator, I do not know how the current officers can walk through campus and look their fellow students in the eye. I would be ashamed. You have not only disgraced your office, but yourselves and this University. Mr. Henry and party should know that greed is an ugly green-eyed monster. You may be laughing to the bank now, but eventually it will come back to bite you.

Roberts' actions an act of student awareness

DEAR EDITOR:

Since I haven't yet seen anyone defend Dawn Roberts' actions in the DAILY EGYPTIAN, I feel obliged to say that there are those on the faculty who both understand and support her gesture, and that Chancellor John Jackson overstated his case in writing to the governor that her opinions do not reflect those of the faculty.

In his May 4 letter, my colleague Phil Glenn rightly describes her pie toss as "guerrilla theater," and points out that "there is a time and a place for throwing hostile pie in someone's face."

On a large and diverse campus there will naturally be differences of opinion as to when such a gesture is appropriate; and while Glenn and many others have rushed to condemn this gesture as "an embarrassment," others among us appreciate the courage and conviction Ms. Roberts has demonstrated. The established order will always attempt to dismiss such direct political action as "childish," but the examples of Henry David Thoreau, Mahatma Gandhi, Rosa Parks, Martin Luther King Jr., ACT UP, and many others suggest that going along to get along isn't always the best road to change.

While some of us may harbor doubts about the efficacy of Ms. Roberts' specific act of civil disobedience — even her mother, professor Jane Adams, seems to have some qualms about these tactics — I wish that the community of people who are working for constructive change on this campus wouldn't so quickly ostracize a student who is clearly committed to righting the wrongs she sees here. She will have to face the consequences of her actions, of course, and nothing I've read to date suggests that she is unwilling to do so. Some on campus seem to fear that SIUC may also have to pay a price — perhaps that fear explains the current rush to judgment. If nothing else, however, Dawn Roberts has raised the visibility of the problems at SIUC to a national level. We might honor the convictions behind her action, if not necessarily the action itself, by standing in solidarity with her.

Roberts, your fifteen minutes of fame are up

DEAR EDITOR:

Well, Dawn Roberts, you wanted your moment in the spotlight and you got what you asked for. Unfortunately, you have just shown your total lack of concern for the SIUC community. Did you ever think to call me or any other respectable member of the SIUC community before you acted, or was this simply selfish ambition? "Freedom of expression" is that what you are citing? Freedom of expression means that nobody can choose to tell you who to be or what to believe, it means that in America if you want to paint yourself polka dot and cackle like a chicken, you can do just that. It does not mean that you can commit assault because you don't agree. You did not expose any rich heart-felt agenda when you threw a pie in the face of our governor; what you did was assault an unknowing victim because you didn't like him. Well I know a lot of people who do not like you, and I pray that they act more responsibly in these objections than you did. The one thing I am most sad about is that you have not considered the ramifications for your action. I am not talking about the direct consequences of making people angry, I'm talking about the job application you will have to answer yes to when they ask about felony convictions. And then how will you explain your action, childish mistakes? Childish is true but you are way past age of responsibility now. I do know that there is a slim chance of you becoming a government official in your lifetime and that will allow me to sleep easy. I could not imagine someone in an actual position of power slapping a pie in a foreign diplomat because he didn't do exactly what we asked.

Gov. George Ryan, please accept my apologies for the actions of one very young and childish person. I may not agree with every political decision you make, but be assured that from me you will get a letter.

Bill Cornell will be missed by all

DEAR EDITOR:
I would like to start off by thanking the SIUJ Athletic Department, and my coach Bill Cornell for four wonderful years here at SIUC. As my coach retires from the track program in May, he leaves a giant crater in the athletic staff. Coach has held up a standard of excellence on our team, which began back in the Lou Hartzog days. Now comes the hard part: finding someone to keep up this string of excellence.

As many people know, the job has been opened up to a nationwide search. Why look across the nation, when excellence sits right here at home? Cameron Wright is originally from Marion and competed here at SIU during the mid-'90s. He has coached All-American status numerous times and was a member of the 1996 Olympic Team. He is now an assistant coach for the track team and is in the running for the head coaching position. Coach Wright bleeds maroon and white and has the energy and standard of excellence to take this program to the next level. He has led our team through most of the outdoor season as coach Cornell has been out with health problems. He is young, enthusiastic, and has many new ideas. I guess the best thing I can say is that he doesn't know how to lose, therefore he won't. Coach Wright has proven to the team and myself, that he is capable of doing the job and he welcomes the opportunity to carry on the legacy of SIU Track and Field.

Columbine video fails to give clearer picture of tragedy

Column by Robby Meur
Campus Correspondent - Northern
Arizona University
May 03, 2000

They've won. Their purpose was to wreak havoc by killing their classmates. They planned their course of action and constructed bombs in their bedrooms. They wanted to be remembered. They wanted to be famous.

Now it seems as if they've won their posthumous Oscar. The nation stopped on April 20th as it mourned that horrible scene from one year ago, as two students armed for war walked into their school in Littleton, Colo., and shot their fellow students as if they were playing a video game. Last week, Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold proved that you don't need to be alive to instill fear and anger -- and they did it with the release of their new home video.

What we do with the release of these graphic, horrifying images can either promote healing or encourage insurmountable hurt. The day after the shootings, firefighters entered the school, with a video camera to capture the aftermath of an attack that took the lives of two murderers, one teacher and 12 students. What the department now calls a training video is nothing more than a memoir of murder. And now, anyone can purchase it for $25.

In the last year, it has taken a river of tears and unspeakable pain for the people of Littleton -- and the U.S. for that matter -- to overcome this tragedy. Ever since it happened, Harris and Klebold have been the benchmark for every school shooting -- and will remain so for years to come.

The video's public release does nothing but reward the killers, who, in death, are getting the fame and infamy they wanted. The film gives everyone a chance to see their handiwork. The pools of blood. The backpacks scattered on the floor. The desks overturned so that students could seek cover.

Again, our focus is off. We're caught up in the gory aftermath and forgetting about addressing all of the things that could have been done -- should have been done -- to prevent this atrocity. School teachers and students who noticed the boys' oddness, but ignored them -- even tormented them. The Klebolds and Harris -- couple who could have rescued their sons had they only taken the time to look in their bedrooms, where guns were propped against the wall and bomb-making materials scattered throughout.

But no. People are clamoring to see this video, which has been set to music. If everyone wants to consider this a training video, fine. But make sure it's aimed at parents who need to be more active in their children's lives. Make sure it's aimed at teachers who ignore the taunting some students in their classes have to endure. Make sure it's seen by all of the popular, pretty people who think they can belittle and insult whomever they please. Make sure it's aimed at the troubled, who need to know there is a better way to overcome their pain. If this video isn't teaching real lessons, hard lessons, then it amounts to little more than entertainment. And when we watch it solely for that purpose -- to squal at the gore of it all, to satisfy a morbid curiosity -- with little understanding of the lives that have been destroyed -- we are continuing to contribute to this tragedy.

Three excuses not to study

SIUC dorms will receive three new cable channels

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

At the beginning of the Fall 2000 semester, students living in University Housing will find a surprise when they turn on their televisions.

They will find three new channels in which they can spend hours watching. The three new channels are Turner Network Television, the USA network and VH1. They will be added without removing any of the old stations like The Cartoon Network.

The students will probably give the new channels more than a warm welcome, but it seems that many of them were happy with the ones they had.

Cameron Counts, a freshman in cinema from Wayne City, said he likes the cable system at SIUC because it includes The Cartoon Network, HBO, SPC-TV as well as others.

"I was very, very happy when we got a WB affiliate," Counts said.

The Paducah station, WDKA 49, was obtained because of the demand for WB programs such as "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and "Popular." The fact that WB affiliates carry Saturday morning cartoons was also a factor for students like Counts to vote to have it added to the channel selection this semester.

This is exactly why University Housing obtained the three new stations. The students voted on what channel they would most like to have and the top three turned out to be TNT, VH1, and USA.

However, some students come from a home that hosted something in the vicinity of 200 channels. Jeffrey Alberts, a junior in cinema from Chicago, said he got used to the selection offered on campus.

"The channels here cover a pretty broad spectrum," Alberts said.

Alberts went on to explain that the current selection covers areas like music with MTV, cartoons with The Cartoon Network and sports with ESPN.

Gus Bode:

Gus says:
Three more reasons not to go to class.

To get the wide variety of channels, University Housing has an independent cable system that uses several satellites to get the ones they want.

Glenn Stine, assistant housing director for facilities, said they are always looking to expand the cable selection. While content with getting new channels, students like Counts are happy with the channels that are available.

"It's better than what I got back home," Counts said.

Students protest Michigan voting law

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Students at the University of Michigan are contesting a state law that they insist makes it more difficult for them to vote.

Their efforts to overturn the law, approved by state legislators last summer, took a hit last month when a federal judge denied their motion to block the law from taking effect.

Student leaders of the protest movement said they're not sure whether they will continue to press the matter in court, but are making sure students know about the new voting rule.

The law, commonly known as Public Act 118, requires voters to register in the same district as the address appearing on their driver's licenses. As a result, students are either forced to update their license addresses every year or vote by absentee ballot in the district where their parents live.

Michigan's secretary of state has pushed for the measure, which helps the state use only one database for voter, driver and other records. Students—many of whom are Democrats—have long suspected that the legislation is an attempt by the state's predominantly Republican lawmakers to keep them from heading to the polls.

Despite their arguments, U.S. District Judge Victoria A. Roberts ruled last month that the new law doesn't place an unnecessary burden on the students. The solution, she said, was for the state to educate young people about the new rules.

Metallica tells Napster 'put up or shut up'

Band is using Napster's own policy statements to force closure of more than 300,000 user accounts

DAVID OSBORNE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Metallica's latest broadside in its battle against Napster could result in the cancellation of a large number of user accounts.

In a nearly 60,000-page document, Metallica delivered the names of 334,345 Napster users who made their music available through Napster's server. The band's attorney hired NetPD, an online consulting firm, to monitor Napster's server during the April 29 weekend. Citing Napster's own terms of use and copyright policies, Metallica is demanding the users be blocked from the service.

Napster is a software and server that has been under fire from the Recording Industry Association of America for alleged copyright infringement. The band Metallica and rapper Dr. Dre have filed their own lawsuits against Napster. At the heart of the lawsuit are CD-quality music files for the computer, known as MP3s. Napster's software allows users to make MP3s available across the Napster server. The lawsuits alleged that Napster aids in copyright infringement because Napster users are trading copyrighted music without compensation to the artists.

This latest tactic ups the ante in the battle against Napster by making it more personal to the end user. While Metallica has no plans to add Napster users to their lawsuit, the band is hoping that by identifying users, it will set an example for other artists.

SIUC Napster users Austin Grammer and Grant Morrow are unconvinced the actions will have much effect on the usage of Napster. Grammer, a sophomore in radio-television from Champaign, does not see this latest gesture as a threat to Napster users.

"If they do block people that have Metallica, what's to keep them from signing up a new user name," Grammer said, "or a fake alias and getting right back on there?"

Grammer said even if he had Metallica songs on his computer, this latest move by the band would not deter him from using Napster.

"I don't own any Metallica, but if I did and I still wanted to get on Napster, I just wouldn't share my Metallica songs," Grammer said. "That's only one tiny aspect of all the music that's out there."

Even if other artists follow suit, Grammer sees no change until enough artists blocked a sufficient number of users that he could no longer find the music he likes. At that point, he would just find another program.

"The Internet makes everything available to you, it would so easy find a new program," Grammer said.

Morrow, a radio-television freshman from Memphis, Tenn., said he has between 1,300 and 1,400 MP3 files. Of those, about 12 are Metallica songs. Since he was not using Napster the weekend NetPD identified the users sharing Metallica, he figures he is not on the list.

"I'll just put the 10 or 12 Metallica songs in this folder and share all the other 1,350 songs," Morrow said.

Like Grammer, he said if Napster were shut down, he would just find another program similar to Napster that allows users to share MP3 files.

"The other programs are already out there, like Grutella," Morrow said. "There's always a way. I'm really not concerned."

BUDGET

scholarship money. The money will now be used to decrease the deficit.

Former Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West said the budget deficit involves a myriad of factors. West, who was part of SIU athletics for more than 40 years as an administrator before retiring in 1998, worked closely with the budget during her tenure.

She said when the Illinois Board of Higher Education took away about $600,000 in allocated state funds in the mid-'90s, eliminating nearly 11 percent of revenue from the department, it made operating the department a difficult task.

"We were not in a deficit until that happened," West said. "That was too much to overcome without going into a deficit."

The department responded by issuing a budget reduction plan to the Board of Trustees that would have it on track toward a fiscally sound department, which was still on target when Bardo took office in January 1999, according to West.

"We were working our way out of [the deficit] and we were decreasing it every year," West said. "So this new spring-up of the deficit has been just simply spending funds that weren't budgeted."

SIUC student trustee Ben Syfert said the board is asking for the Athletic Department to take some financial responsibility.

"I think [the board is] going to take a look at future fee increases if it can't control [the department's] spending," Syfert said.

While Syfert acknowledges issues such as the IBHE's cut in funding for athletics and the department's recent move to full scholarship funding, he said the department still needs to be accountable.

"They had a decrease in revenue and they just kept spending," Syfert said.

But if the rest of the University

“We were working our way out of [the deficit] and we were decreasing it every year. So this new spring-up of the deficit has been just simply spending funds that weren't budgeted.”

former associate athletic director community is patient and allows the department to devise a measure approved to the budget problem, Jones said she is confident that Saluki athletics will come out of its deficit and play a large part in restoring the University to its proud heritage.

"This University used to be a great University, and I think it still is a great University," Jones said. "But we don't act like it."

Jay Schwab contributed to this story.

RIOTS

Delyte Morris ordered the indefinite closure of the University.

In addition, SIUC had its own angle on the national chaos. In 1969, the Agency for International Development gave the University $1 million to develop a center to study Vietnamese culture, a center that many believed had connections to the Central Intelligence Agency.

"Essentially, it was an attempt to get together some scholars to ask how we got involved in east Asia," said Joel Maring, who helped to form the center. "Unfortunately, the center really represented the war."

The students across the nation who turned their schools upside-down in the spring of 1970 represented a new generation and a generation that was seeing the world for the first time, according to Terrence Buck, a psychology professor at the time.

Buck said the most interesting event of his college days was the traditional school bonfire, the newer generation, however, was the first to watch the true face of combat splash across the evening news, almost 60,000 Americans fighting a war that few really understood.

"It was just such an angry crowd," Buck said as he recalled the roar of thousands of students protesting on the lawn in front of Morris Library. "The life they were leading at 21 was so much different than what I was doing when I was 20."

However, Buck said, today's students have grown up in a different world. Cable networks such as CNN and MSNBC have made news more accessible, and the Internet has made information from the other side of the world just a mouse-click away. Buck said this has created students who are much more knowledgeable about their world.

“They got their point across eventually, but the violent things they did set them back.”

CAROLYN BLODGETT
junior in political science at SIUC

And as a result, the way students voice their concerns to politicians has changed as well. Anderson's niece, Carolyn Blodgett, is a junior in political science at SIUC, and she is politically active in organizations ranging from Undergraduate Student Government to the College of Liberal Arts Advisory Council. Writing letters, talking to students and distributing literature, she said, prove to be effective means of voicing protest.

"They got their point across eventually, but the violent things they did set them back," Blodgett said. "When dealing with politicians, if you show them you care, they will listen to you." But for many who were here for the "Days of May" in 1970, the riots are but a distant memory.

Helen Hickenberger, who now teaches at a high school near Peoria, was days away from finishing her final year at SIUC when the riots broke out.

She said she remembers walking into the Foreign Language Department one day, only to find the windows shattered and file cabinets overturned from when students tore through the ROTC Office on the floor below.

The images of rioting students and fleets of National Guardsmen, she said, are ones that she has tried to move beyond.

"It was not an easy thing to go through," Hickenberger said. "In the whole Vietnam thing that people lived through, there's a lot we've tried to forget."

“With plagiarism, students don't know exactly what it is. They may be plagiarizing, but they don't know that they're doing it.”

it," Self said. "You are either going to do it or not going to do it."

Stephanie Dollinger, an associate psychology professor, has served as Self's faculty mentor since the start of his thesis.

Dollinger, who has been teaching psychology at SIUC since 1989, said she has seen cheating occur in almost every form, from copying Scantron forms to hiding notes under baseball caps.

In large lecture classes that force students to sit close together "like sardines," Dollinger said, cheating poses a greater threat. She also said with some forms of cheating, people may not realize that what they do constitutes cheating.

"With plagiarism, students don't know exactly what it is," Dollinger said. "They may be plagiarizing, but they don't know that they are doing it."

Through his work, Self discovered the repercussions of cheating at SIUC are not very severe, with the most serious punishment as failing a course.

"I am disappointed that the punishments are not very stiff," he said. "I expected them to do more about it."

Self's work was funded by the Chancellor's Undergraduate Research Award. Self will graduate this month and will continue his education in psychology as a graduate student at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Comic Striptease

by Jason Adams

Dear Readers,
After four years at SIU and two semesters of "Comic Striptease" I'm leaving Carbondale with diploma in hand to take on the world. One of the hardest parts of this is saying goodbye to Rein, Annie, Moe and the rest of the Striptease cast. When the comic began last August I never expected it to have the impact it has had on my life as well as others. I'd like to thank Lance Speere and the Daily Egyptian staff for letting me share my stories and for their support throughout. Special thanks to Jason Stepanaitis and Andrew Marczak for the biting sarcasm, Jody Eklund, Ryan Beliveau, Chad Westall, Amy Huddleston, and Kevin Treiman for their inspiration, to Larry Briggs for sponsoring the animation and book, and to Jolene Kosma for her love and support.

Last of all I'd like to thank all of you for embracing the social satire and emotional outlet that is Comic Striptease. And, of course, the talking Bong and Keg.

-Jason Adams

Women's teams earn Scholar-Athlete Awards

Four SIU women's tennis players and three Saluki women golfers were selected to the 2000 Missouri Valley Conference Scholar-Athlete Team.

For the Saluki tennis team, sophomore Simona Petrucci (3.93 GPA), sophomore Erika Ochoa (3.79) and junior Keri Crandall (3.78) were named first-team selections, while sophomore Pamela Floro (3.13) was an honorable mention choice. The three first-team selections are the most since the 1996 season.

The golfers, who recently won the MVC championship, senior Andrea Walker (3.78) was selected for first-team honors and sophomores Alison Hiller (3.29) and Andrea Turner (3.80) made the honorable mention team.

SIU Women score big at Missouri Invitational

The SIU women's track and field team scored eight first-place finishes at the Missouri Invitational, an unscored meet, in Columbia, Mo.

Sophomore Marian Appiah-Kubi, junior Tanya Dolgowska, the 4 x 100-meter relay team, junior Desiree Cocks, senior Jenny Monaco, junior Hilla Medalia and junior Cayn Poliquin all scored first-place finishes in their respective events.

Appiah-Kubi (57:09) won in the 400-meter dash, Dolgowska (1:02) in the 400-meter hurdles, the 4 x 100-meter relay team ran a 47:20, Cocks (19-6 3/4) in the long jump, Monaco (17:47.40) in the 5,000-meter run, Medalia (39-5) in the triple jump and junior Cayn Poliquin in both the shot put (42-11) and the hammer throw (169-9).

Meanwhile, junior Yolanda Mask recorded a second-place finish in the 100-meter dash (12:34) and a third-place spot in the 200-meter dash (25:05). The only other second-place finisher was freshman Danielle Lavary (41-7 3/4) in the shot put.

Five Salukis placed third in their events — junior Becky Cox (4:42.52) in the 1,500-meter run, sophomore Sarah Bobbin (1:04.20) in the 400-meter hurdles, freshman Krissy Mitchell (18-7 3/4) in the long jump, freshman Katie Meehan (18:14.77) in the 5,000-meter run and junior Stacy Hancock (5-2) in the high jump.

The Salukis compete May 17-20 in the Missouri Valley Conference Championships at Wichita State University in Wichita, Kan.

Lawsuit finds Pittsburgh football coaches negligent

PITTSBURGH, Pa. — A former football player at the University of Pittsburgh has won a multi-million-dollar lawsuit against the institution that legal experts say could mean big changes in the way in which college athletes are insured for injuries tied to their sport.

Lawyers for Demale Stanley, who was a wide receiver, value the settlement at $31 million, while university officials have confirmed a payment of about $5 million.

Stanley was finishing his first year at Pitt in 1996 when he ran into a drilled cement wall while completing a pass at the university's indoor practice facility. The next day, coaches ordered Stanley to run the same route. He hit the wall again, that time shattering portions of his spine. He is a quadriplegic as a result.

In 1998, Stanley sued the university and its football coaches for negligence. While the resulting settlement doesn't in itself break new legal ground, it could have serious ramifications for other colleges and universities.

Injured athletes have, in the past, claimed they were covered under institutions' worker's compensation policies because they were being given compensation in the form of scholarships in return for competing on a university-sponsored team. Courts have widely rejected those claims.

But the Stanley case may prompt institutions to embrace worker's comp and treat athletes as regular employees. Applying worker's comp to student-athletes could feasibly cost universities millions of dollars — but would protect them from future lawsuits that could result in the payment of much higher damages. Worker's comp might become especially desirable because the liability under it is much lower than negligence. Worker's comp claims are typically paid with no inquiry into negligence.

"Walks and wild pitches will come back to hurt you," Blaylock said regarding the lead-off walk in the 13th and the two wild pitches from Winters in the game.

The Salukis opened the tournament with a 1-0 victory over Creighton Friday in the opening round, but then let one slip away against Indiana State University, which beat SIU 2-1 on two unearned runs on Saturday.

The Salukis regrouped to defeat Bradley 7-6 in an elimination contest Saturday afternoon.

Junior pinch hitter Chiara Calvetti, junior pitcher Erin Stremsterfer and sophomore left fielder Jenny Guenther all had two RBIs in the game. Stremsterfer also picked up the victory; her second of the tournament, to improve her record to 15-7.

"The kids kind of had a never say die attitude," Blaylock said. "We did what we had to do to win."

The 13-inning season ending loss to Creighton ended the career of four Salukis seniors — pitcher Tracy Remspecher, second baseman Lori Greiner, shortstop Jamie Campbell and Winters.

"I'm happy to have had them in the program. I think they all did a service as a student-athlete for SIU," Blaylock said.

Winters ends her career as the SIU and MVC all-time strikeout leader and was Blaylock's most intimidating mound presence. But with Stremsterfer, freshman Katie Kloess returning and a highly regarded high school senior coming in next season, Blaylock is confident SIU will continue its rich tradition of success on the mound.

"[Erin] really carried us at the end of this year, so I'm not worried about her being able to step up as the leader next year," Blaylock said. "We will still be a very good pitching team."

Illinois State University finished a perfect 4-0 to win the MVC Tournament and receive an automatic berth to the NCAA tournament.

Cleaning up in Missouri; Valley next

SIU men's track and field team gets extra boost of confidence heading into MVC

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With the SIU men's track and field team's season coming to an end, it appears the Salukis are primed and ready for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in two weeks.

Thirteen different Salukis placed in the top three spots, including six first place individual finishes, at the Missouri Invitational Saturday in Columbia, Mo last weekend.

"It was a very solid meet right before conference," assistant coach Cameron Wright said. "This is the right time for the guys to start coming around."

Several Salukis finished first in their events, including seniors Brian Bundren (15:00.18) in the 5,000-meter run, Charles Stelk (53.39) in the 400-meter hurdles, Matt McClelland (9:18.50) in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, senior Aaron Shunk (7-0 1/4) in the high jump and Brad Bowers (24-3) in the long jump.

Junior Brock Lovelace (199-3) was the other first-place finisher in the javelin.

Wright said he was proud of the Salukis that placed first.

"Matt ran a great race, and Brad looked real good in the long jump," Wright said. "Aaron easily cleared seven feet in the long jump. He could have gone a few inches higher."

Senior Erik Olson (195-4) came in second in the javelin, junior Loren King placed in second in the 400-meter hurdles and junior Greg Denagall (46-0 3/4) took the second spot in the triple jump.

Meanwhile, sophomore Joe Zeibert (3:56.01) came in third in the 1,500-meter run, as did junior Chris Owen (9:43.76) in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, sophomore Joe Hill (6-6) in the high jump and senior Allen Lakomaki (16.24) in the 110-meter high hurdles.

The Missouri Invitational, an unattached meet, was the Salukis' final meet before the Missouri Valley Conference Championships, which takes place May 17-20 at Wichita State University.

“There is no doubt I am going to make this one.”

BILL CORNELL
SIU men's track and field coach about his final meet at SIU coach.

“There is no doubt I am going to make this one,” Cornell said of the MVC Championships. “Hopefully, we can finish as high as we can. Anything can happen when we get on a roll.”

• THE SIU MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD TEAM IS OFF THIS WEEKEND AND WILL RETURN TO ACTION MAY 17-20 AT THE MISSOURI VALLEY CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIPS AT WICHITA STATE UNIVERSITY IN WICHITA, KAN.

Rejoining the Salukis will be head coach Bill Cornell, who stayed at home this weekend intending to have knee surgery, before deciding not to have the procedure, so he could travel with the team to Wichita.

The conference meet will be Cornell's last as Saluki head coach, as he is retiring at the end of the season.

“There is no doubt I am going to make this one,” Cornell said of the MVC Championships. “Hopefully, we can finish as high as we can. Anything can happen when we get on a roll.”

SIU started things off on the right foot in Friday's opener by coming away with a 9-8 victory. The winning effort was highlighted by a six-run second inning that began with a Jeff Houston home run and was capped by freshman outfielder Steve Mazzola's grand slam.

The Salukis' monster inning gave them a 6-3 lead, but the Panthers came back to tie the game 7-7 in the bottom of the seventh. However, the Salukis scored twice in the top of the ninth, buoyed by a Mazzola RBI double and a Houston sacrifice fly.

Northern Iowa trimmed SIU's lead to 9-8 in the bottom of the ninth, but Saluki closer Luke Nelson fanned Panther pinch hitter Brian Kobliska with a man on first to put the Salukis in the win column.

"This was a big win for us (Friday)," Callahan said. "It was pretty impressive how we battled for two runs in the ninth."

SIU starter Jake Allry struck out a career-best 12 batters in seven innings of work, but also allowed 12 hits and seven runs. Hardin (2-3) earned the win.

Northern Iowa drew first blood in Saturday's doubleheader, breaking a 2-2 tie by scoring once in the fifth and twice in the sixth to take command of the game. The Panthers held on for a 5-3 victory, win No. 1,000 in Northern Iowa school history.

In the second game, SIU's bats came to life and rallied the Salukis to a decisive 13-6 win. SIU belted 17 hits, including home runs by Houston and Kohlberg. Houston notched four hits in the game, one of six Salukis to record multi-hit games.

Along with Houston, senior infielder Joe Meeks was swinging a hot bat Saturday. Meeks went 5-for-7 on the afternoon and drove in four runs.

Brendon Fort (4-5) pitched seven innings of six run ball to pluck the win, while Ryan Aird came out of the bullpen and pitched the final two frames.

"Our starting pitching didn't get it done (Saturday), but our hitters took it upon themselves in game two to get us one win," Callahan said. saga. All of SIU's student-athletes should take the incident as a lesson: along with the prestige of being an athlete comes accountability for the way in which you represent the University.

And then there's the bottom line. One of the most substantial issues in the department remains its substantial deficit, which unlike fine wine, becomes less savory the longer it sits around. Incoming athletic director Paul Kowalczyk's much-ballyhooped fund-raising expertise better be the real deal, because until the financial problems are rectified, the department's No. 1 dilemma of antiquated facilities will be nearly impossible to remedy.

Despite the problems the Saluki Athletic Department and some of its teams are facing, cheering on the Dawgs will remain among the best aspects of life at SIU once the calendar turns to August.

SIU will be going on minus a pair of irreplaceable Cornells. Longtime men's track and field head coach Bill Cornell, who is unable to continue because of Parkinson's disease, will be dearly missed by not only his players, but everyone who took the time to notice all he has done for the University. And come the fall, it will be hard not to notice the absence of Cornell Craig. Craig's four years of excellence on the Saluki football team and his upbeat attitude will be missed.

But life goes on, and new storylines are just waiting to unfold.

We're only a few months from finding out whether the SIU football team's defense will turn over a new leaf under the direction of a fresh defensive coaching staff, whether the youthful Saluki men's basketball team will have enough size and heart to run-and-gun its way back into the NCAA tournament, and discovering what a handful of new coaches and administrators will bring to the table.

The challenges are out there for all of SIU's athletes, coaches and administrators, who in the face of some serious obstacles, must strive to develop a winning attitude and work even harder to endear the program to the student body and community.

There is much to be accomplished, and you can't count on Bruce Weber to do it all by himself.

Unlucky 13 in season finale

SIU softball ends MVC Tournament with 13-inning loss to Creighton

COREY CUBICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

There's something about Peoria and extra innings.

The SIU softball team ended its season in a 2-1, 13-inning mini-marathon loss against Creighton University Saturday at the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament at the EastSide Centre in East Peoria.

Creighton outlasted SIU to earn the 2-1 victory and eliminate the Salukis from the tournament with a 2-2 mark, and a final record of 41-22 for the year. The 13-inning game was the third longest game — in terms of innings — in Valley tournament history. The game lasted three hours and 43 minutes.

"We could have won that game in regulation," Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock said. "We had some opportunities, but things just didn't fall the right way."

The 13 innings only classifies as a mini-marathon compared to the Salukis' 18-inning affair, the longest game in Valley history, against Bradley University April 2. That game, also a Saluki loss, took place in Peoria.

In her final game as a Saluki, senior pitcher Carisa Winters struck out a conference tournament record 18 batters in the game, but still suffered the loss. Winters finished with a final record of 15-13 on the season.

Unfortunately for Winters, SIU's sporadic offensive struggles re-surfaced at the wrong time, and Creighton, eventually took advantage.

The Bluejays rallied for the decisive run in the 13th inning after a lead-off walk to second baseman Ashlee Trapp. Trapp advanced to second on an infield single by shortstop Rebecca Goodspeed. An ensuing fielder's choice advanced the runners to second and third, setting up the game-winning heroics for first baseman Marie Gieron, who delivered an RBI single to win the game.

Saluki sports earns an incomplete

Salukis' 1999-2000 seasons are history

Final exams are underway all around campus, and soon we'll all know where we stand in our classes.

As for the Saluki Athletic Department, call the year an incomplete.

Another school year of Saluki sports is almost in the books, a year that contained plenty of engaging moments but too many bumps along the way to be labeled a success.

You had the hunch things were too good to be true when the Saluki football team started off 3-0. Unfortunately, they were.

A Karlton Carpenter soap opera here, a few Coach Q meltdowns there — sandwiched all around some painfully poor defense — and before you knew it, a sensational offensive campaign fizzled into a 5-6 disappointment. Throw in a woeful autumn of Saluki volleyball, and SIU's fall sports left plenty to be desired.

Luckily for some of the struggling programs, the Saluki men's basketball team diverted most of the attention by continuing its resurgence last winter. The Dawgs' 20-win, National Invitational Tournament season was enough to stir quite the buzz around campus and in Southern Illinois. Even the SIU student body, sensing a rowdy party at the SIU Arena late in the season, brushed aside its apathetic tendencies and created a true college hoops atmosphere at the Arena.

There's little reason to doubt the momentum of Bruce Weber's program will keep snowballing. Here's guessing that Weber and his staff will skillfully build around Kent Williams and Jermaine Dearman and have the Salukis back in the NCAA tournament before long.

Meanwhile, SIU's lower profile sports did their share to add luster to the department. The women's swimming and diving team and the women's golf team delivered the goods once again, as the pair of under-appreciated Saluki programs kept up their winning ways and bagged themselves Missouri Valley Conference titles.

On the other side of the coin, there are a few programs that will find themselves running out of excuses if things aren't turned around soon. The women's basketball, volleyball and baseball programs are a few of the sports that have plenty of past success to build upon, and need to do a better job of keeping the winning tradition alive.

Sadly, the spring brought some disturbing off-the-field developments. The recent arrests of SIU football players Steron Davidson and JerMarsh Robinson on burglary charges demonstrate a lamentable and serious breakdown in judgment.

Regardless of how the court proceedings shake out, the incident dumps more baggage on a Saluki football program that's crying out for good news, rather than another public relations mess on the heels of last summer's Carpenter

Split leaves Diamond Dawgs in limbo

After a 2-2 weekend at last place UNI, SIU sweating out MVC tourny chances

JAY SCHWAB
SPORTS EDITOR

The SIU baseball team will head into the final weekend of regular season action with its Missouri Valley Conference tournament hopes in peril, after splitting a four-game weekend series at last-place Northern Iowa.

Sunday's loss was particularly damaging, as the Salukis squandered 5-1 and 6-3 leads before succumbing to the Panthers, 10-7. SIU reliever Pat Hon (0-1) was saddled with the loss after allowing five runs, three of which were earned, in an inning of work after coming in relief of starter Billy Hardin.

The Salukis had taken a 4-1 lead after a two-run homer to left-center from Kyle Kohlberg in the top of the third inning and added another run when Scott Boyd touched home plate after a wild pitch in the fourth.

But Northern Iowa had the last laugh. The Panthers scored twice in the bottom of the fifth before exploding for five runs in the seventh to take a 8-6 lead. The outburst was led by a three-run homer from Panther slugger Ryan Brunner, who tagged Saluki pitching for four round-trippers in the series.

Despite Sunday's disappointing defeat, the Salukis remain in a tight race to be among the six clubs to qualify for the MVC tournament May 17-20 in Wichita, Kan.

SIU (23-27, 12-16 MVC) remains one game in back of Southwest Missouri State University for the sixth place in the Valley. The Bears split a weekend series with league-leading Wichita State University.

The Salukis' final regular season action will come this weekend, with a do-or-die four-game series against Creighton at Abe Martin Field. Had SIU squeezed out another win or two against Northern Iowa (21-32, 9-22), head coach Dan Callahan's Salukis would have a little bit more breathing room.
