SIU officials testify as House probe opens

By Nathan Jones, Ingrid Tarver & Steve Brown
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

Lengthy testimony by eight witnesses opened the first day of an Illinois House Subcommittee hearing on budgetary practices at SIU Thursday.

The hearing will continue at 9 a.m. today in the University Center Ballrooms.

The five and a half hour hearing Thursday, conducted by Rep. Philip Collins, Chicago, subcommittee chairman; Rep. Jim Nowlan, Toulon; and Rep. Richard Hart of Benton, probed into use of "overhead" and "indirect funds" by the University and placed special emphasis on the controversial University House, estimated to cost $975,698.

Robert W. MacVicar, chancellor of the Carbondale campus, was the first witness called. MacVicar gave only brief testimony and was not questioned concerning the University House.

President Delyte W. Morris was then called for testimony. Morris made no formal statement, but answered questions directed to him.

His testimony was restricted to questions concerning the House.

Morris said his present home was not adequate to carry on desired functions. He said the new house will provide for engaging public functions.

When asked what those functions might include, Morris said "Homecoming, women's club picnic and the annual student watermelon feast."

The new house will provide entertainment areas and 10 guest rooms to accommodate visitors to the University, Morris said. The number of University guests vary, he testified, but include foreign dignitaries, government officials, guest speakers and others.

Morris cited that the master plan from 1956 called for the present house to come down and also other buildings in that area, for construction of a proposed Humanities Building.

It was then known that the president's residence would be moved to an area near the Lake-on-the-Campus, he explained.

Morris stated, however, that he has always wanted to live off campus, but the Board of Trustees has an established policy for the University president to reside on the campus.

Collins asked Morris if the Board of Higher Education had approved University House. He replied that the question could be better answered by John S. Rendleman, chancellor of the Edwardsville campus.

Rendleman was vice president for business affairs at SIU when discussions about University House were started by the Board of Trustees.

Hart asked Morris about "priorities" at SIU in establishing budgetary procedures. Morris said priorities were a process of continual analysis from departments; to the Chancellor; to the Central Office; and finally to the Board of Trustees.

When asked if student views were considered in establishing priorities, Morris said his job was "too removed" for him to accurately answer, but one of his assistants could.

Some evidence of disapproval of this statement was made by students attending the hearing.

Morris was then questioned concerning the use of "overhead" funds by the University. He said that "indirect costs" was a better term to describe the funds.

The amount of these funds vary from institution to institution, Morris said. The Here no evil?

Restricting his testimony to questions related to University House, SIU President Delyte W. Morris told the Illinois House Subcommittee hearing that his present house was not adequate to carry on desired functions.

There no evil?

John S. Rendleman, chancellor of SIU at Edwardsville, told the hearing that if "indirect cost" money had not been used for University House, it would have been spent for "microscopes, encyclopedias or any legitimate educational project."

SIU officials testify at hearing

Indirect costs involve expenses incurred by the University in operating projects specified by the grants. The amount of indirect costs is a figure computed by the University and the granting agency, he said.

Morris referred other questions concerning specific appropriations and use of overhead funds to other University officials who have the job of managing the funds. Chancellor Rendleman was then called to testify.

He was asked where "indirect cost" money could have gone if University House had not been constructed.

The money could have been spent on "microscopes, encyclopedias or any legitimate educational project," he answered.

Then asked if the University would later have to ask for state funds for such educational purposes, Rendleman replied, "yes."

He was also asked by Hart, if the $900,000-plus present estimation of the House was correct. Rendleman said he was not familiar with any revision of figures since the $500,000 figure in the fall of 1967.

Upon his request, Morris took the stand again. He told the subcommittee that the original cost estimate presented to the higher board was about $500,000. He said this figure included only the house, not other costs such as a driveway, landscaping, placement of water lines and the like.

When queried about the total cost estimate of the project, Charles Pulley, University architect, said that "to the best of my judgement, the project will not exceed one million dollars when complete."

However, it was discovered by the subcommittee that this estimate does not include "indirect costs" that have been incurred by the University architects office.

Pulley said that the errors in the estimated project costs were caused by both his office and Thomas Graman, the University House project architect.

Anthony Blass, director of the physical plant, then spoke on the controversial heated driveway leading to the University House.

According to Blass, the heating cable which has been inserted into the driveway cost $1600.

When asked whether any additional employees had to be hired to work on the project, Blass said approximately 13 brickmasons and 10 laborers were added.

Chancellor Rendleman reappeared before the subcommittee to answer questions dealing with a $200,000 loss during the Mississippi River Festival.

Rendleman said that the festival was a "cultural and artistic success but a financial failure." The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra was at the Edwardsville campus for six weeks, Rendleman said, but an average crowd of only 1800 attended each of their concerts.

Appearing in conjunction with the symphony for the festival were pop groups, Rendleman continued, which had as many as 15,000 attend.

The University lost $150,000 and the St. Louis Symphony $50,000, Rendleman added.

Ivan A. Elliot Jr., a member of the SIU Board of Trustees, was asked if he was informed that the Illinois Board of Higher Education would not approve the University House as Rendleman had stated during the morning session.

Elliot said he was not informed but that he felt the structure would have been approved by the Board of Higher Education because it was not just a home, but also a place to entertain VIP's.

The reason it was withdrawn from the Board of Higher Education was not because we

Rendleman gets faculty support

CARBONDALE (AP)—John Rendleman, chancellor of the Edwardsville campus and former SIU vice president for business affairs, said school officials thought the excess funds were a proper source for University House financing.

Rendleman admitted the school could have cut its requests for state funds had it diverted the surplus monies.

Rendleman's defense of the spending of funds intended for administering private and governmental research projects, was backed up Thursday by the faculty at his own Edwardsville campus which voted 224 to 13 in favor of a resolution expressing confidence in his leadership.

Real cost may come later

The debacle of SIU's University House is not that it will cost $900,000. Nor is it the fact that the disclosure proved embarrassing for certain officials. The real tragedy, its ultimate cost, is the effect the whole affair could have on the future growth and development of SIU.

At issue, beyond the questionable price tag of the structure and the sources for the funds, is the very serious question of the University's methods.

Only two references to the University House, which will double as quarters for SIU President Delyte W. Morris, can be found in the official records of the Board of Trustees.

Minutes from the Dec. 19, 1967 meeting indicated the president's home would have to be relocated and plans were being drawn up. The only other reference came April 19, 1968, at which time the Board voted unanimously not to bring the project before the Illinois Board of Higher Education, since it was felt the house was a relocation of an existing facility.

In between the two actions was a request from SIU to the Higher Board asking approval for expenditure of $750,000-$800,000 on the house. The Board in turn requested additional details on the source of funds being used—so called "overhead" funds.

The answer never came. Instead the Board of Trustees took its April 19 vote bypassing the state Higher Board on a motion suggested by Ray Page, state superintendent of public instruction, who is an ex-officio member of the SIU board.

The real question in the minds of most people is what took place off the record between the two "official" acts of the Board.

It is this probably more than anything else which irks state officials, especially in a time when greater efforts are being made to disclose the finances and business participation of legislators, judges and top administrative officials at all levels of government.

The closed meeting sessions of the SIU Board of Trustees have been under fire before. It appears now that legislative ire has been provoked even further and the results could be devastating.

Perhaps some of the most damning evidence on the University's complicity in the affair is the variety of cost figures released.

In 1967 the structure with site improvements was estimated at a total cost of $250,000. Spokesmen for the University have recently denied that such a figure was ever released, but it was widespread nonetheless. The cost quickly became $500,000, and then was revised upwards to $900,000.

Throughout this sequence of revised cost estimates, the public was largely kept in the dark, as were most state officials.

Now it appears the time for recompense is near.

The state legislature and Board of Higher Education jointly approve budget requests for all the state universities.

The Higher Board approved a $26 million appropriation for SIU for 1970-71. The University of Illinois received $47 million.

SIU's budget grant represented 39 percent of the total requested. The University of Illinois received 56 percent of what they asked for.

Total requests granted by the Higher Board averaged 64 percent of the budgets requested from all the state's colleges and universities.

SIU did not fare well, either in comparison with the University of Illinois or with the state average.

Whatever the outcome of this latest publicity on the University House, SIU's prospects for future appropriations is indeed bleak.

The real cost of SIU's new house will only be measured at some future date when the state Higher Board, which was bypassed once, will sit down to decide how much SIU needs.

With a one million dollar University House, the Higher Board may just decide the answer to that question is not much.

They're watching you, Dwight, so hang loose

To the Daily Egyptian:
"As long as we play petty politics with one another, we can go nowhere."

Dwight Campbell
April 25, 1969

The promises of politicians are probably the most transient rhetorical inanities that can be perpetrated upon mankind. Before the election, almost any politician will offer to bring his electorate the moon in a platinum canister, and then will offer at least a half-dozen reasons why he cannot after he is elected. This fairly general truth is particularly applicable to SIU's own self-appointed deliverer and sometime-Saviour, Dwight Campbell, undisputed king and head mouth for the Unity Party.

The Unity Party, avid campus politicians will recall, is an allegedly heterogeneous organization, founded on Campbell's sincere, but paranoid, view of the Administration, to wit: "... (the problem) is not with one another, but with the Administration." The administration, in Campbell's premier performance, is played by any convenient scapegoat.

We realize that mere mention of the Unity Party is enough to create violent nausea among many students. We are also aware that a good case can be made for disbelieving anyone who quotes Dwight Campbell on anything. Please bear with us, however, while we recall the first plank of the Unity Party April election platform:

Unity of all students.

Analysis: Baloney. Our 1969 Homecoming was ruined by racially-biased cretins (both black and white) who decided that nothing was more important than the expression of their four ha-pennies worth of opinion.

SIU couldn't even have a peaceful Moratorium on Vietnam without squalling flower children disrupting classes, or muscled pseudo-masculine apes threatening to beat them to a pulp if they continued.

Unity? There's only one point the students are unified on: mutual hatred.

Campbell's goal, then, appears to have been thwarted. But it doesn't take a genius to ask whether it was a feasible goal in the first place. Then an even more serious question emerges: Did the Unity Party ever really intend to unify all the students?

This is precisely the kind of question that should be asked about all of Campbell's utopian promises. But the questions should have been asked before we elected him, not afterward.

We feel some obligation to put Campbell's administration under the magnification of reason. In subsequent weeks, therefore, we will closely examine the progress of our so-called student government in light of its 13 campaign promises. The goal is simple: We want to start the student body thinking rationally about who they have elected and why. Our theme is: Think About It.

So hang loose, Dwight, baby, and do your thing. But do it carefully because we'll be watching you.

Says Towers should resign

To the Daily Egyptian:

Within the past couple of weeks we have been hearing about requests for the resignations of such people as President Delyte W. Morris, Dwight Campbell, Jack Hazel and others.

Since we are in the mood, why not ask for another resignation, specifically that of Dick Towers as head football coach. Granted, Towers' poor job in three years of head coaching may not be of considerable importance as compared to other University issues, nevertheless, if this school ever intends to improve its football program it will have to start by getting rid of an incompetent coach, namely Towers.

One incident of Towers' incompetence was illustrated in a Daily Egyptian quote made after the Homecoming loss to East Carolina. Towers took the blame for Southern's poor passing game by saying, "It's probably poor coaching on my part and the fact that our pass patterns are maybe not too good."

In other words what Towers is saying is that he admits he is a poor coach and even goes as far as to say that his pass patterns are "maybe not too good."

Now if our good coach Towers does not have confidence in himself or in his plays, how is he supposed to install confidence in his players?

It is a mystery how Towers has remained as head coach for three years with his record, while a person such as former baseball coach, Joe Lutz, is forced to resign because he supposedly had a personality conflict with the athletic director, Donald Boydston.

Boydston is now considering taking a position with the University of Buffalo. (At this point I would like to make a personal plea.) Don, if you go to Buffalo, please take Dick with you he might not be too good of a football coach, but he sure as hell has a nice personality.

Jacobini discusses Vietnamese Center

H.B. Jacobini
Director
Center for Vietnamese
Studies and Programs

By Bob Carr and Morris Jones
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
(second of two articles)

"The intensity of faculty participation in the project has been fantastic, and the amount of faculty concentration has been prodigious. It's been very stimulating to me," H.B. Jacobini, director of the Center for Vietnamese Studies and Programs said. "What we have here is what other academic institutions dream about."

The million dollar Center has drawn considerable criticism from certain groups, and praise from others.

The main purpose of the Center, according to Jacobini, will be purely academic in nature.

"What we are interested in is scholarly study about Vietnam. Our purpose is to build academic expertise in academic programs."

The project began three years ago as an idea circulating in the International Services Division, Jacobini said. Ralph W. Ruffner, vice-president for area and international services, became interested in the project, since it would be the only one of its kind in the nation. According to Jacobini, the project stayed with Ruffner and on Feb. 28 a meeting of all interested faculty and staff was called. The 26 people who attended the meeting finalized a draft "establishing" the Center. An ad hoc advisory committee was formed and a proposal was made to the SIU Board of Trustees, Jacobini said. The motion passed unanimously. The proposal next traveled to the Illinois Board of Higher Education, which also approved the program.

On July 11, SIU President Delyte W. Morris and Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar met with John A. Hannah, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, for the presentation of a one million dollar 211-D grant to SIU to finance the Center.

According to Jacobini, "The Center was established before we received the grant, but we did know that there was money in the 211-D fund to be had."

MacVicar concurred with Jacobini. "The Center was established previous to the grant," MacVicar said, adding that SIU was no newcomer to Vietnamese affairs.

"Previously, there have been two programs there (Vietnam) established by SIU, a technical institution from the early 60's to 1965, and another started in 1962 to assist in the development of normal schools for elementary teachers," he said.

The latter project is still operational, but will be discontinued in the future.

The point stressed by both MacVicar and Jacobini is that the Center is intended for academic expertise only.

"The only purpose of the Center as set up by the grant is academic; there are no provisions for training of any sort. We will not send anyone over from the Center or from SIU. If anyone is sent, he will be sent by the federal government," the chancellor noted.

According to Jacobini, "This Center will be primarily an academic operation, dealing with such fields as language arts. This is in contrast with other University programs which are basically service in nature. There will be little resemblance between our program and the other service programs."

Much of the controversy surrounding the project centers on the fact that Hannah and Wesley Flisbel, presently a visiting professor at SIU and an advisor to the Center, were both connected with an alleged Vietnamese Center scandal at Michigan State University around 1965. At the time, Hannah was the president of MSU, and Flisbel was the director of the Michigan State Center. According to Ramparts magazine, the Center was being used to train CIA agents to go to Vietnam. With both men now being connected with the SIU Center, the controversy spread.

Jacobini said that the MSU program was not the same as SIU's. Michigan State had a technical assistance program, whereas SIU's program is academic, he said. "They have absolutely nothing to do with us," Jacobini said. "To speak of MSU and other service programs and what we are doing here in the same breath would portray vast misconception. The misinformation about our Center is enormous. That wild CIA talk is bizarre. There is no connection with the CIA or other such groups here."

MacVicar asked, "Do you believe everything you read in Ramparts? There's no bugs under the chips." In connection with Hannah's alleged pressured resignation from MSU because of the center there, MacVicar said that he "didn't know that Hannah was pressured."

Although academic in nature, the possibility exists that individually funded programs could be instituted in conjunction with the Center to provide training in certain areas, such as reconstruction activities, land reform, irrigation and socio-economic needs, MacVicar said.

As it now stands, the Center's main function will be to establish a library on Vietnam and try to convince various departments at SIU to adopt Vietnam-related courses. One such course, a continuing study of the Vietnamese language, is now being offered. The first level of the course will again be offered during the winter quarter. In addition, the SIU Department of Government has established two courses, one graduate and one undergraduate, to be given during the summer, dealing with Vietnamese politics and development.

"Other than that," Jacobini said, "we can't really identify what will happen at this point."

Some graduate work through the center will allow students to travel to Vietnam for study. In addition, Jacobini said, "We have here the possibility of funding a number of professorships and graduate and Ph.D. scholarships and fellowships. They will be competitive with the best scholarships and fellowships anywhere. The possibilities of building a library of Vietnamese information are the best in the world. We have a real prospect with enormous possibilities."

"The implications are potentially enormous for academic excellence. It is because of these possibilities that the criticism is so disheartening. The Center could actually benefit many of those people who are criticizing it," he added.

The question of how much information on North Vietnam can be gathered is puzzling. Both MacVicar and Jacobini realize that there are two governments in Vietnam and, as MacVicar said, "there is clearly a civil war in the South."

"The question of getting information about the North is real," Jacobini emphasized. "We are considering every facet of Vietnam, and the problem of making substantial contact with the North is serious. We have contacted people who are in contact with Hanoi, but it has not been enough. I don't know the real answer."

Although still in its infant stages, University personnel have great hopes for the Center's future. "Anyone interested in Vietnam should at least touch base with us when we have been going long enough to make a mark," Jacobini said. "Right now we are a fledgling organization, completely new. We will hopefully have a sizable program going by the end of the year, though."

The first of a series of newsletters concerning the Center is now available to interested persons. Dated Sept. 15, it deals with the establishment of the Center and its activities during July and August. Copies may be obtained at the Information and Scheduling Center in Atherton Hall or at the International Service on the south wing of the first floor of Woody Hall.

According to MacVicar, the newsletter will be issued "periodically," possibly quarterly. But according to Jacobini, the letter "will be issued occasionally."

"There will not be a set basis for its issuance," Jacobini said. "It will not be issued monthly, quarterly, or semi-annually, but rather only when there have been enough developments to merit the issuance of another," he added.

Senate okays amendments on voting, election procedures

By P. J. Heller

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU Student Senate approved the following amendments to the Student Senate election laws and voting procedures at its Wednesday night meeting.

Fee statements, ID cards and meal tickets will be required by residents of University Park, Brush Towers, Thompson Point, and University City in order for residents to vote in Wednesday's Student Senate elections.

The residents of the above areas may vote only at the central location in their living area from 9 a.m.—6 p.m.

East side dorm and non-dorm and west side dorm and non-dorm may vote at all other polling areas. Small Group Housing residents may vote only in their area or the University Center.

Since there will be no candidate from Small Group Housing, students from that area are urged to take part in the referendum. Ballots will be available in the student government office, according to Rhonda Starnes, elections commissioner.

Polling booths will remain open from 8 a.m.—5 p.m. in University Center, Wham Education Building, the Home Economics Building and Morris Library, and from 9 a.m.—4 p.m. at VTI and the SIU Airport.

The amendment states that no one may vote after closing time who was not already in line.

The following permanent polling places were established for all elections: University Center, Home Economics building, Morris Library, Wham Education Building, Brush Towers, University Park, SIU Airport, VTI, and Thompson Point.

When there is a Senate seat available in University City or Small Group Housing, polling places will be set up.

The Senate elections at these two areas usually coincide with the spring election of student body executive officers.

Visit the Colonel

The public is invited to come and share in the coffee hour following the address, President Edward L. Adams said.

Fishel slated to discuss Vietnam war Sunday

Wesley Fishel, visiting professor of government, will address the Unitarian Fellowship at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

His talk will be the first in a three-part series discussing the Vietnam War.

The title of his address will be entitled "American Prospects in Vietnam." Next Sunday, another speaker will take a position opposing America's involvement in the war. On Nov. 23 the congregation will hold a pro-con discussion based upon the two talks.

Fishel was professor of political science at Michigan State University and professor at James Madison College before coming to Carbondale. He lived in Vietnam from 1954 to 1959 and returns there annually.

Clayton's book 'Little Mack' story of forgotten newsman

A late-nineteenth century St. Louis newspaper editor was the man actually responsible for many journalistic techniques for which others have received credit, according to a new book by a recent-day St. Louis news-veteran.

"Little Mack," the story of Joseph B. McCullagh of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is scheduled for early December publication by the Southern Illinois University Press. Its author is Charles C. Clayton, now a professor of journalism at SIU, who spent more than 30 years on the Globe-Democrat, first as a reporter and later as an editorial writer and assistant to the publisher.

Clayton sees McCullagh as "a better newsman than Pulitzer ever was." The author says McCullagh's contemporaries such as Joseph Pulitzer and William Randolph Hurst gained credit for ideas which were McCullagh's because McCullagh was never a publisher himself, he never worked in New York, and he wasn't much of a self-publicist.

"Little Mack" traces McCullagh's career from his days as a Civil War reporter and Washington correspondent. Later, as managing editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, McCullagh invented the interview, Clayton says, when he scooped the nation with the first in-depth interview ever given by a President of the United States, Andrew Johnson.

Clayton also credits McCullagh, who edited the Globe-Democrat from 1872 to 1896, with being the first crusading journalist in community building, the first to use the mass interview of leading figures at political conventions and attempting to predict the outcome of conventions, a pioneer in the development of the Sunday newspaper magazine, and the first to promote classified advertising on a large scale.

"Little Mack" is part of the SIU Press's "New Horizons in Journalism" series under the general editorship of Howard Rusk Long, chairman of the SIU Department of Journalism.

SIU presents reports to Agronomy Society

Five research reports on soils and crops will be presented as scientific papers by SIU plant industries department faculty members and graduate students at the 61st annual meeting of the American Society of Agronomy in Detroit, Mich., Nov. 10-14.

Faculty members making reports will be Keith Leasure, Donald Elkins and Joe Jones. Graduate students presenting papers in collaboration with SIU faculty members are Ronald Raber of Flanagan, Ill., and James Faix, now a doctoral student at Cornell University.

Leasure's paper will be on "Influence of Varying Rates of Nitrogen Application on Cell Size Nitrogen Content of Corn."

Elkins will report on "Crownvetch Establishment on a Simulated Roadcut, Using Two Seeding Methods and Two Nursegrasses." Faix will present the paper on "Crownvetch Forage Yield as Influenced by Fertilizer and Lime Placement on an Acid Soil."

Jones' paper is titled: "Influence of Cultural Techniques on Corn Growth: Influence of Density and Planting Pattern on Soil Moisture Energy Levels."

Raber's paper on "The Effect of Rate and Placement of a Liquid Starter Fertilizer on the Phosphorus and Zinc Content of Corn."

Unique college allows students to learn at own rate of speed

By Susan Harigan
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES—On any Monday morning students can walk in, sit down and start school.

At Miller Community College in Los Angeles, men and women learn at their own rate of speed and do very well, according to the college's president, Herman F. Miller.

The new concept of beginning education without the traditional semester system has worked for the many graduates at Miller, where the average age of students is 30.

Miller, which became a private community college this fall, has been primarily a business and court reporting school since 1936. The school caters to the inner city and draws many of its 75 students from the minority community.

Although the school is private and charges between $225-$250 for its day school course per quarter and about $120 for evening instruction, minority students can qualify for Miller through scholarships, state aid, the GI Bill and other funds.

"Many of our minority students get the money through the federal government's guaranteed loan fund, which loans $1,000 to the student for a year. He then has nine months to pay back the loan after he gets out of school," Miller said.

Miller said the administration would help a student get a job if it thought he was deserving.

"We have had many students work in the office to help them pay their way and learn their trade," he said.

The only other colleges in the United States where a student can begin any Monday morning are the Community College of Philadelphia and Oklahoma Christian College, Miller said.

Miller College's philosophy permits students who miss school because of illness to resume studies without loss of units. Also, the college allows students to complete a two-year course in less time if they can pass daily efficiency tests with superior grades.

Miller requires students to be 90 to 95 per cent accurate on each lesson in a course. If not, the student must learn the lesson until he has mastered it.

"Through this programmed learning, students are under constant supervision," Miller said. "They can go as fast or as slow as they like."

The college curriculum of 100 courses is built around each student going at his own pace, said William Harker, treasurer of the school's seven-member board of trustees and the mayor of nearby Temple City.

"The entire concept of the school is building block or modular," Harker said. "We will continue with adding courses as the school builds."

Within four of five years the college is expected to expand to 2,000 students and its present operational budget of $100,000 will rise to millions, Harker said.

Expansion plans include construction of a $20,000, six-story building on the school property north or west.

Community involvement was what motivated the opening of the private college to the community, Miller said.

"There's lots of young people in the core of the city who need a good education," Miller said.

"And that's the very thing that impelled me to develop a college through an independent nonprofit corporation."

The school's president said the objectives at Miller are intensive training which will lead to early employment, a program for students who may not qualify to attend a recognized college, remedial training and more experience in post-high school work before entering a college.

Miller awards diplomas and associate of arts degrees in professional and vocational programs.

They include medical transcribing; stenographic; court reporting; general; technical and legal secretarial; stenotype, and law enforcement.

The college has adopted the quarter system, but only for those students who prefer it. Most of the students start Monday mornings, Miller said.

One teacher is provided for every 20 to 30 students. Most of the teachers are experts in their fields and some are employed on the outside, Miller said. They hold master's degrees and also may teach smaller numbers of students depending on the size of the class.

Engineering Club balloons travel south to beat pollution

Balloons released on Oct. 23 by the SU Engineering Club have been found in a large area south of Carbondale.

The balloons were released to dramatize the problem of air pollution in conjunction with Cleaner Air Week, observed nationally Oct. 19-25, and also to determine where air currents might carry pollution from the Carbondale area.

Persons reported finding balloons near Puxico, Mo., 70 miles southwest of Carbondale, and in the Land Between the Lakes National Recreation Area, 90 miles southeast of Carbondale and at several points in between. Other balloons were found near Joppa and Dongola in Illinois and Wyan and Bloomfield in Missouri.

According to Howard E. Heath, assistant professor at the School of Technology, prevailing surface winds on Oct. 23 were from the east north east. He said different wind patterns would have caused balloons to be found in different areas.

Heath noted that while pollution from the Carbondale area is not serious, the results indicated that Carbondale, 90 miles southeast of St. Louis, was probably receiving pollution from the St. Louis area on that day.

Peace march deposits due

All people interested in making the trip to Washington D.C. Nov. 15-16 to take part in the mobilization for peace are asked to make a $10 deposit for bus fare by Monday, announced Ken Zucker, program coordinator for the group.

Total cost for bus fare will be $14.76 per person, but the deposit is needed by Monday to ensure the availability of busses. At least 280 persons have already signed up to make the trip, and according to Zucker, any additional persons wishing to go may do so.

'Hallelujah Train,' something akin to IC

By Lucine Swick
Daily Egyptian Special Writer

The "Hallelujah Train" rumbled into Carbondale as the first Celebrity Series production. Unfortunately, the show came off like something akin to our beloved IC.

The Eva Jessye Choir and Ensemble presented a singing tour through America to less than capacity audience Wednesday night at the University Theater.

Beginning with the Indians, the tour went through the South, Vermont, Boston and finally ended on Broadway. Songs included "Ten Little Indians," "Moonlight in Vermont," "La Rondine" and "They Call the Wind Maria."

Most of the scenes, however, were too short to do the songs justice. The audience had just adjusted to the lights and setting when the song was over. Also, there was so much action and movement during most of the pieces that it distracted from the singing.

One of the better segments was a collection of Negro spirituals sung in a revival-church setting. The choir sang about five songs in this scene including "Heaven is One Beautiful Place," "Rocking in Jerusalem" and "Give Me Your Hand."

"Give Me Your Hand," which was dedicated to Martin Luther King, John and Robert Kennedy and Medgar Evers, featured two of the show's most impressive performers—Lessa Foster and Hugh Harrell.

SIU Dames Club to sponsor film

The SIU Dames Club will sponsor showings of the Academy Award winning movie "A Patch of Blue" at 7:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. today in Furr Auditorium in the University School. Admission is 75 cents.

"Ashita"—that's the way the Japanese say "Tomorrow."

Miss Foster had the dubious distinction of playing the loose woman in several scenes, and her performance brought the only real life to the show. Harrell was notable because of his superior voice.

The best single performance was, ironically, by a dancer—Charles Atterbury—who danced to "Feelin' Good" from "Roar of the Greasepaint."

Another good, all-round performer was Kenneth Roudett who played the conductor-narrator throughout the show. He also gave fine voice to two of the best-received songs—"Old Man River" and "Bess, You Is My Woman Now" from "Porgy and Bess."

The production's choreography left much to the imagination—like cohesiveness and unity. Someone was always either out of step, out of beat or just completely out of it. Since the majority of the singing was bad, these extra distractions made it impossible to listen to the music.

This may have been a step in the right direction, though, because the four-piece, on-stage band was also bad. It was too loud for the small area, and the music did not always fit the mood of the song.

Many of the voices, particularly those of the women, were too operatic for a Negro choir. Miss Foster's version of "La Rondine" was either under-done satire or over-done opera—the audience accepted it as the latter.

One good point worth mention is the lighting effects. The lights of a passing train opened and closed the show, and several beautiful sunset and shadow scenes were produced.

One thing to say in favor of the Eva Jessye Choir is that they were not conventional, they did not stand en masse on a platform and just sing—they tried different things. Perhaps with more work.

Ogilvie calls for budget cuts

ALLERTON, PARK, Ill. (AP)—Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie told Illinois college administrators Thursday that the state has started cutting budget requests for the next fiscal year and that the administrators are expected to do likewise.

Ogilvie informed about 150 officials of state supported and private schools that enactment of the new state income tax "does not turn on the spigot for state spending for higher education."

The school officials are attending a two-day Illinois conference on higher education.

The meeting will end Friday. "We have already started making the first cut in budget requests for the next fiscal year," Ogilvie said, "and it is apparent that there will not, and should not, be sufficient funds for all requests."

"We are going to cut and cut again, and you as college administrators must do the same," the governor said.

Ogilvie said all state budget requests will be reviewed "from top to bottom."

"The long-standing practice of looking only at the increase in each department's budget cannot be tolerated in the face of overwhelming demands for government services," he said.

"We are converting as fast as possible to 'zero base' budgeting in which every expenditure, no matter how long it has been allowed, will be questioned and must be justified," the chief executive said.

Ogilvie has commented on the controversy surrounding the construction of a president's house at Southern Illinois University at a cost of nearly $900,000.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education has criticized SIU trustees for going ahead with construction of the palatial residence without the board's approval.

Ogilvie indicated Wednesday he will support disciplinary action by the board in the SIU matter.

Officials testify at probe

didn't think it would pass, Elliot said, but because it was the relocation of an already existing facility.

Hart commented that it was "a little bit of a stretch of the imagination to relocate a $50,000 home into a $1 million one."

"If the Trustees wanted to hide the house it wouldn't have been submitted to the Board in the first place," Elliot said.

SIU Board of Trustees member, Melvin G. Lockard, during Tuesday's Illinois Board of Higher Education meeting in Chicago took the same position and said that the Board (SIU trustees) did not try to cover up the house.

"If our Board had been trying to hide the president's house, we wouldn't have sent that letter seeking board approval," Lockard said.

Lockard represented the SIU board in Chicago, not Chairman Lindell W. Sturgis, as reported Wednesday.

SIU Budget Director Clifford Burger said that besides the University architect's office, he could not think of any other "indirect costs" which University House has accrued.

Burger's testimony will continue today at 9 a.m. at which time the subcommittee asked that a priority list on overhead balances be presented.

Ending the testimony was Beavin E. Parson, representative of the Illinois American Cancer Society, who said that the use of cancer monies for buildings was against the grant agreement.

Burger has reported that "overhead recoveries have been about $400,000 a year for the past couple of years" which includes money given by research agencies.

"We hope that all the grant money was used for the purpose designated," Parson said, "and that it will not in any way be identified with University House."

Thursday was the first of several hearings into all facets of state college and university budgeting.

Adlai unhappy with Vietnam address

By Terry Peters
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

State Treasurer Adlai E. Stevenson III voiced dissatisfaction Thursday afternoon with President Nixon's recent address on Vietnam, but said the administration should be "given the benefit of the doubt" for a little longer.

Stevenson, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for U. S. senator, answered questions before a capacity crowd in Morris Library Auditorium in a program sponsored by the SIU Young Democrats.

He said he regards the government of South Vietnam as a definite obstacle to peace and added that he thinks it is as "corrupt and belligerent" as its counterpart in the north.

"But we shouldn't do anything to encourage the recalcitrance and belligerence in the north," Stevenson said. "I think the proposed march in Washington would be most unfortunate, and I hope it won't take place."

He said he feared the march might lead to a violent confrontation, and therefore opposes it even though he supported the October 15 Vietnam Moratorium.

Stevenson said he would not rule out entering a primary to seek the senatorial nomination. But he emphasized that he is confident he "won't have to make that decision."

The state treasurer said he expects to get the endorsement of the state Democratic party organization in his campaign for the nomination, thus avoiding a primary fight, which he termed "always costly and often divisive."

Stevenson said he supports in principle the idea of a draft lottery, but questioned the wisdom of having a volunteer army.

"At this point in history, I'm afraid such an army would be composed primarily of blacks, and I wouldn't like to see that," Stevenson said.

On the issue of draft evasion, he said, "We can't decide for ourselves which laws to obey, and that includes draft laws."

He said he favors changing the draft law, and expressed interest in former Attorney General Ramsey Clark's suggestion that those who refuse to serve in the military should not be treated as criminals. Stevenson said he wasn't clear on what alternative Clark has proposed, however.

The candidate said progress has occurred in the state Democratic party organization, as well as on the national level.

"The Chicago convention in 1968 led to an unprecedented act of self-criticism by a political party," Stevenson said. "But so far we've had nothing but lip service from the Republican Party on political reform."

He said he has been accused of "changing his tune" because he had previously called the state Democratic organization "feudal."

"But there has been real progress in the party organization since then," Stevenson said. "I was particularly pleased to see Mayor Daley endorse the popular selection of delegates to nominating conventions."

Moving to the issue of gun control, Stevenson said he favors the registration of hand guns, but not long guns.

"Hand guns are the principal instruments of violent crime in this country," Stevenson said.

Test deadline Mon.

Monday is the last day to register for the American College Testing Program (ACT) to be given Dec. 13. Persons wishing to enter SIU or another college spring quarter are advised to sign up for this test at the Counseling and Testing Office in Washington Square.

Those who have not taken the ACT and want to enter SIU winter quarter may take a residual ACT test. The residual ACT test is administered and graded at SIU and there is no registration deadline.

Does Adlai know something?

State Treasurer Adlai E. Stevenson III injected a note of humor into his appearance at SIU Thursday afternoon.

When a student asked him his opinion of the University House controversy, Stevenson replied:

"I came here today to announce that I am no longer a candidate for the U. S. Senate.

"I am a candidate for president of Southern Illinois University."

'Alice's Restaurant'—a moral feast

Editor cites film hero as ideal to follow

By Marty Francis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Utilizing his interpretations of two current films, "Easy Rider" and "Alice's Restaurant," Harold Hayes, editor-in-chief of Esquire magazine, bridged the generation gap at Thursday's convocation series in the SU Arena.

Hayes described the two main characters of the films, Peter Fonda, in "Easy Rider," as a "dumb, unthinking individual," and Arlo Guthrie, in "Alice's Restaurant," a "thinking, feeling creature," and told the convocation audience that he hoped the younger generation would lead his generation in the direction of Arlo Guthrie, and not Peter Fonda.

The six year veteran editor-in-chief said that he was curious about this new group of young people whose achievements had caused this "country to change its attitude."

Hayes said the new generation was hard to communicate with and in this high speed world the only people who could see it as an existing reality was a ten-year-old who was growing up in it. "This new man," as Hayes referred to the ten-year-old, "would not be really significant until 1984, when he was 19." In the meantime, Hayes, continued, the most effective bridging of the generation gap was through film.

"No reasonable adult could sit through 'Easy Rider,' and 'Alice's Restaurant,' and not grant several assumptions to the characters." These assumptions are, war is bad, military is a wasteful way of life, modern society is repressive, law and justice favor the middle class and the university is hobbled by its traditions.

In spite of the achievements of young people in the sixties, to change the country, they have also performed some dubious achievements. One example of dubious achievement is the idea of conformity.

"Conformity," said Hayes, "is the failure to think for yourself. This is as prevalent in SDS and long hair as in crew cuts."

And citing the younger generation's criticism of education, Hayes said that a "liberal education is to teach you how to think, not what to think."

In closing, Hayes, said, "I salute you, the class of '73."

He told the primarily freshman audience that he was fascinated with this new generation, but hoped they would lead everyone down the road of Arlo Guthrie, who "saw both good and evil all around him and in all ages."

Menard State Prison boasts enthusiasm of 'College Gang'

By De
Student Writer

It may not be the easiest way to earn college credits, but the "students" are highly enthusiastic. Hundreds of them, prisoners at Menard State Prison, have participated in the SIU Extension Program which began in 1956. According to Raymond H. Dey, dean of SIU's Extension Services, grades earned by the prisoners are higher than those earned by comparable classes in residence at SIU.

The first SIU faculty member to teach at Menard was Charles Clayton, a veteran editor and newsmen and a professor in SIU's Department of Journalism. In the fall of 1956, he taught courses in journalism at the request of the staff of the prison newspaper, the Menard Time. The paper has since won several awards in competition with other prison newspapers and the journalism courses are still popular.

Because of the success of the first courses, others were offered such as a speech course taught in 1957 by C. Horton Talley, dean of SIU's School of Communications. Since 1956 more than 100 different courses have been taught at Menard and 75 SIU faculty members have gone there to teach.

In 1962, Thomas E. Cassidy, an assistant professor in the Department of English at SIU, suggested a college program of 96 quarter hours for the prison. A program was started but members of the program, known as the "College Gang," were screened by SIU's Counseling and Testing Center. Those that were admitted to the program were allowed to take three courses of general studies work per quarter.

The "College Gang" students are full-time students and have no prison duties. One result, according to Dey, is that SIU faculty members like to teach at Menard because of the students' enthusiasm. These classes are "equal to or better than resident college classes," Dey said.

SIU contributed an initial $10,000 worth of books to the Menard Library in 1967 at the recommendation of Chancellor Robert W. MacVicar. Menard also used funds from the state to increase the size and quality of its library. Robert E. Birkhimer, a member of the SIU library staff, inspected book titles, catalogued, selected books and taught three courses for the prison librarians.

In the fall of 1968, the Extension Services through VTI's Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency, and Corrections offered a course in Corrections and Law Enforcement for 37 members of the prison staff. According to Dey, keeping abreast of the latest rehabilitation techniques is a continuing process and one course is offered each quarter in this area.

Tuition and fees for members of the "College Gang" and other prisoners taking courses are 25 per cent of the amount charged for resident students. The prison pays part of that amount. At any given time about 100 prisoners are taking courses.

Students at Menard are so enthusiastic about the program that they are hoping to be able to earn more than the present limit of 96 quarter hours.

Many hope eventually to earn a degree.

Many prison parolees enroll at SIU to earn their degrees and most succeed. However, not all do so well. Causes of failure include money problems and the more permissive atmosphere of the college campus, said Dey.

But the number of successful parolees justifies the effort being made at Menard, he added. "Experience has shown that inmates who have participated in the SIU Extension Program have a lower rate of return than the general parolee population," Dey said.

State seeks to penalize seven water polluters

SPRINGFIELD—The Illinois Sanitary Water Board Wednesday requested and authorized the attorney general to take penalty action in seven cases of alleged water pollution.

The board seeks to collect fines for water pollution in all of the cases and asks injunctions to prevent further pollution activity in five of them. Clarence W. Klassen, technical secretary of the board, said.

Included in the seven alleged cases is the City of Cartersville, Williamson County; $500 penalty for observed pollution when raw sewage from a defective sewage lift station was discharged to a natural drainage tributary to Crab Orchard Lake.

Penalties for water pollution are not to exceed $5,000 for the first violation, plus an additional amount not to exceed $200 for each day during which the violation continues, Klassen explained.

"In the matter of fish kill," Klassen continued, "penalties are based upon estimates of fish biologists of the Department of Conservation concerning the number and kind of fish involved. Money collected from these penalties is deposited in the state's Fish and Game Fund and is used to restock streams."

SIU students to study in Luxembourg

Immediate action by students who wish to register for the second semester at the Vita-International Study Center at Ansembourg Castle in Luxembourg is urged by John O. Anderson, dean of International Education.

Applications are now being received by Mrs. Sue Fanzio in the Intercultural office, Woody Hall. Anderson said the number who can attend from SIU is limited, and the deadline is Nov. 15.

Approximately 165 students, of whom 35 are from

SIU, are attending courses in history, languages, art, theater, economics, and government at the historic castle that had served as a home for the Ansembourg family since 1647.

The castle was leased by Vita-International, Chicago travel agency, and made available to a group of colleges.

Anderson said the other schools, which previously had been involved together in education programs, invited SIU to join because its representatives were impressed by the University's theater program. On the faculty from SIU is Archibald McLeod, chairman of the department of theater, who will return to campus at the end of the semester and be replaced by Christian H. Moe, SIU professor of theater, for the second semester starting around Feb. 1.

Some of the SIU students will return after the semester, and some plan to remain for further study. The colleges involved have set up a governing council, composed of a representative of each school and the Count of Ansembourg. Anderson was named to the group's executive committee.

The costs to attend a semester of study include $368 for round trip fare, and about $595 room and board, plus the University's regular tuition. Any special European travelling is done by the student at his own expense although there will be organized field trips.

The objectives of the program, Anderson said, are to give the U. S. student a curriculum enriched by travel and first hand experiences, and to increase communication and understanding by getting young people of different cultures together.

Bruce Ruzgis, 24, the new owner of the corporation, said there would be no liquor served upstairs in the restaurant and that the business would open between Nov. 10-15.

Ruzgis said that a code violation would be removed when a half-swinging door leading to the women's rest room is replaced with a full one.

Americans may be marrying more for better than worse

By Frank Macomber
Copley News Service

Are young American men with relatively low incomes less likely to marry than those with higher earnings?

The question may get you an argument, for there are seemingly valid yes and no answers on both sides.

The National Consumer Finance Association, an organization furnishing business information to both industry and consumer groups, says men with low incomes are slower to marry before they reach age 35 than those in higher salary or wage brackets. It quotes a nationwide consumer behavior survey based partly on U.S. Census Bureau studies, and adds:

"Men with a college education (who usually are earning the higher incomes) are more likely than men with only a high school education to marry when they are 25 to 34 years old.

"If they do marry before 35, men who have not attended college are more likely than married men with college training to discontinue living with their wives by the time they are 45 to 55 years old." The survey, challenged by a long-time California marriage counselor as being wide of the mark, fails to establish whether the college-educated man's wife remains with her spouse because of his greater income status or because college training makes him a better mate.

Bert A. Anderson Jr., of La Jolla, who has counseled hundreds of premarital and postmarriage couples, disagrees with the findings of the NCFA survey.

"Most of the young people whom I have advised before marriage don't think that much about finances," Anderson says. "Most of them don't follow reports of inflation trends in the newspapers and if they hear it on television apparently they don't pay much attention."

Anderson's counseling also has convinced him the average marriage age for American men has dropped partly because so many college students are marrying while both still are in school, regardless of finances.

Commenting of the survey report that young college-trained men more often stay married longer than those whose education stopped with high school, Anderson disagrees again.

"I don't think the greater earnings of a young college graduate makes him a good bet to stay married longer than the high school graduate," he observes.

Students pilfer own property in University Center cafeteria

By John D. Towns
Student Writer

Fall quarter has been a hectic time for the University Center cafeteria, according to manager Ron Rogers, because this is when students stock up on silverware and other items.

"There seems to be a misconception about whose property the items in the cafeteria really are, but it is really the students' property," Rogers said.

Abuse of silverware, china, salt and pepper shakers, and sugar containers has caused the cafeteria management to take several steps. The disappearance of several sugar shakers, for example, resulted in small packages of sugar being issued. "The sugar packages are cutting down on the pilferage," Rogers said. Some students would pour sugar on the table and drawings or play tricks by putting sugar in the salt shakers, he said.

Disposable salt and pepper shakers with lids that are not easily removed are now being used. When the containers are empty they are thrown away and it cuts down on breakage cost.

"The new salt and pepper shakers make it inconvenient for the students to play games with them and the experiment with the shakers is going well," Rogers said.

The manager explained that spoons have been the most frequently pilfered items. "Rumors circulating say that we were one of the cheap suppliers for jewelry making," he asserted. Metal spoons had frequently been used to make jewelry—until they were replaced with the plastic type. China cups also have been replaced by plastic holders with throw away refills, Rogers said.

Replacing these items with plastics, however, is not due only to pilfering. "The plastic type coffee cups were first used in the Oasis, but it was not economical. The reason for going to plastic was because we had trouble without dishwasher," Rogers said.

Rogers said the pilfering is reflected directly in the price of food.

Ice cream is one item in particular that has increased in price this quarter. "The ice cream price increase got most complaints. The nickel ice cream cone was like a nickel cup of coffee," Rogers said. "We were losing three cents on every cone of ice cream and the students had to subsidize the loss. The raw materials for the ice cream cone were eight cents and we were selling it for five cents. Now we are almost at a break even point."

Last year $10,000 was spent on replacements, roughly $833 per month, the cafeteria manager said. About $700 was the year's average for pilferage.

"During the first two or three weeks of each quarter the pilfering rate is fantastic. When people close house and leave they don't have the courtesy to return the items. They could put them in a box and leave them on the cafeteria line. We would like to get them back," Rogers said.

"When students steal, they steal from other students," said Rogers. "Sometimes the student loses sight of the fact that this University cafeteria is for his use and if they, on an individual basis, are dissatisfied with what they get or how they are handled, it is in their best interest to get in touch with me or the supervisor on duty."

"This is our only way of knowing what the students want. If a student feels that he has a justifiable complaint I want to hear it because, in a sense, I am his employee, just as any restaurant operator is," Rogers said.

Japanese alumna goes home to find adjustment difficult

"I do have a little difficulty with adjusting to Japanese way of living," confesses Suzuko Mita, who has returned to her teaching post at Obirin Junior College, Tokyo, after almost five years as a student at SIU.

Miss Suzuko, a graduate of Obirin and a teacher there, came to SIU in December, 1964, to work toward a bachelor's degree in home economics. She remained to complete the master's degree, also in home economics, last August.

In a letter to Anna Carol Fuhs, chairman of the SIU home economics education department, Miss Suzuko said "Japan has changed tremendously since I left in 1964, especially around me: my house, the neighbors, and Obirin."

Before returning to Japan, Miss Suzuko toured the United States, visiting both east and west coasts. "Leaving of the States suddenly makes me to feel I left something in the States," she wrote.

In 1965 Miss Suzuko was awarded the Illinois Future Homemakers Association $200 scholarship for international students.

At Communications Building

Phase II progressing on schedule

Phase II of the Communications Building is progressing almost exactly on schedule and should be completed by the latter part of August, 1970, according to Lloyd J. Weber, project manager.

Phase II will house the Department of Film Production and the Department of Cinema and Photography. Numerous labs, equipped with the latest advancements in film production and processing, will be provided for them.

The offices and labs of the Department of Journalism and the Daily Egyptian offices and presses will also be located in the new building. The Department of Theatre, which is located in the first stage of the Communications Building, will be provided with additional workshop space.

The cost of this building, which was begun in February, 1969, will be approximately $3,876,000 at its completion. This figure includes all necessary mechanical equipment. A new Mechanical Equipment Room, located in the basement of Phase II adjacent to the Mechanical Equipment Room now in use, will house one of three subcentral refrigeration plants on campus, according to Weber. The equipment in this room will supplement the existing Mechanical Equipment Room.

"This plant, at the completion of the project," said Weber, "will have the capacity of producing 3600 tons of refrigeration."

This 3600 tons of refrigeration would cool 900 houses. The plant will have the total refrigeration capacity to cool the Communications Building, the second stage of the Life Science Building, Pulliam Hall, Woody Hall, the Agriculture Building, the Phase III Theatre Complex of the Communications Building, which will not be built until the completion of Phase II, and the new Classroom Complex, which will be built west of Lawson Hall. In addition, provision has been made for cooling future buildings not yet named.

IM eagers practice Monday

Intramural teams planning to participate in basketball can begin practicing in the Arena on Nov. 10, according to the Intramural Office. Reservations must be made at the Intramural Office in the Arena, Room 128, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

There are eight courts that can be reserved from 8:15-10:30 p.m. Monday thru Thursday until Dec. 1. A team, ordinarily, may schedule a court for one hour per night. An additional court may be reserved after 3 p.m. if it has not been reserved by another team.

Basketballs and jerseys will be available through the graduate assistant in charge of the Arena. A student checking out equipment must have his identification card and a current rent fee statement. Lockers and showers will also be available.

Managers of intramural basketball teams may rent white jerseys and colored jerseys from the Intramural Office for $2 per shirt. The shirt may be returned at the end of the season and the $2 will be refunded.

Shirts may be checked out on November 20-24 at the Intramural Office, room 128 in the SIU Arena. Each team will need two sets of jerseys.

Guest speaker featured

Miss Gwendolyn Drew, of Washington University, St. Louis, will be a guest speaker at 7:30 p.m. in Furr Auditorium. She will discuss "Physical Education Around the World."

Frosh gridgers host Memphis State

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Coach Mark Bolick's freshman football team will host Memphis State University today in their first action since a sound 56-0 drubbing of the University of Evansville two weeks ago.

Memphis' strongest offensive threat is Gerald Tinker, a 5-foot-10-inch, 160-pound flanker from Florida.

Tinker is exceptionally valuable as a receiver because of his outstanding speed. He holds the Florida high school 100-yard dash record with a clocking of 9.4 seconds and also holds the national high school 220-yard dash record with a time of 20.6 seconds.

In last summer's National AAU track meet, Tinker finished seventh in the 220 against a field including Olympian John Carlos and SIU's Ivory Crockett who beat Carlos once last summer in the 100-yard dash.

Bolick said Tinker is a "good pass receiver who they like to hit on the deep patterns. But lately people have been playing him loose so he's had to settle for the short patterns."

In addition to his importance as a receiver, Tinker has returned three punts and one kickoff for touchdown in Memphis' first three games.

Bolick's yearling gridgers will carry a 1-2-1 record into the game with Memphis but this is not a true indication of the ability of the team.

The Salukis have had a very good offense in some games and a good defense in others but the Evansville game was the first time both units performed well at the same time.

The Saluki frosh run an I-slot offense with 50 per cent power plays over Billy Story and Bob Krol tackles and either Jay Purnell, Gerald Wilson or Bob Smith carrying the ball.

Purnell and Wilson shared tailback duties against Evansville when they gained 158 and 179 yards respectively. Smith operates at fullback where he gained 152 in the lone Saluki win played at West Frankfort.

Coach Bolick said Wilson "has great speed and is a real threat after breaking through the initial defensive line" and praised Smith as the "toughest, hardest runner we have." He also said he thinks Purnell is comparable in ability with varsity star Bob Hasberry who is in excellent striking range of the single season rushing record at SIU.

Amos Bullocks set the single season record in 1960 with 996 yards to his credit. Hasberry has 820 yards in seven games.

Bolick also uses a sprint out pattern with quarterbacks Mike Epstein and injured Billy Richmond because he says both are "very fine runners" and capable of completing a pass while on the run.

The former Kansas State University athlete said his freshman defense revolves mainly around middle linebacker Bill Brotemarkie and tackles John Jackson and Robert Scheer.

Bolick also said he thinks this year's defensive secondary is potentially better than that of last year's 3-1 frosh team but has been hurt on occasion by an inability to cover the deep pass pattern.

This could hurt the Salukis today if the Memphis quarterback is able to connect with the speedy Tinker.

Memphis State uses the Houston option about 90 per cent of offense. On this play, the quarterback can elect to either hand off to the first halfback into the line, roll out and run himself or pass to the tight end or, lastly, rollout and elect to run himself or pitch back to a trailing halfback.

Bolick thinks the only weaknesses Memphis has are the lack of an outstanding runner in the backfield, a weak middle line-backer and susceptibility to the short pass.

Commenting on his team, Bolick said, "We've come a long way in a week. Of course, after you win a ballgame, you have better spirit. We also have some good personnel in sports where they will need help and this is important because the purpose of a freshman team is to prepare players for the varsity."

Elated coach

Coach Mark Bolick was obviously happy after his freshman football team beat Evansville 56-0 two weeks ago. The Saluki frosh host Memphis State University at 2 p.m. in McAndrew Stadium.

Frosh to face varsity Dec. 2

SIU's freshman basketball team opens its 16-game schedule Dec. 2 against the varsity reserves, preceding the varsity opener with Texas-Arlington.

Coach Jim Smelser has trimmed his roster down to ten players who he feels are the best of the 35 candidates who tried out for the squad.

Leading the Saluki yearlings will be Nate Hawthorne, Mark Selp and Don Portugal. Hawthorne, a 6-foot 4-inch forward, led Mt. Vernon high school into the "Sweet-Sixteen" in last year's Illinois high school basketball tournament. Selp, standing 6-foot 7-inches is from Tuscola while Portugal is a 6-foot 4-inch forward from Arcola.

Smelser said the three are SIU's type of ball player because of their dedication and academic soundness as well as their quickness and shooting ability.

Freshman team members also include John Marker, 6-foot 1-inch guard from Beement, Larry Lingle, 6-foot 3-inch forward from Dongola, Chuck Johnson, 6-foot 1-inch guard from Zion, Melvin Meyer, a 6-foot 2-inch forward from Peotone, Wayne Tomkins, a 6-foot 1-inch forward from Waukegan, Ray Burkiewicz, 6-foot 5-inch forward from Warrenton, Mo., and Armando DeGuzman, 6-foot 1-inch guard-forward from Chicago.

Smelser termed Marker quite impressive after watching him in team try-outs and commented that Lingle has good jumping ability and "can do things well."

Roughest opponents on the schedule according to Smelser will be Paducah Junior College which took the national junior-college championship last year and Robert Morris Junior College which grabbed fourth place. He also mentioned the St. Louis U. and Bradley freshmen as tough games.

Salukis at full strength to battle Ball State Saturday

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Coach Dick Towers' offensive line will be at nearly complete strength for the first time in three weeks when the Salukis host the Ball State Cardinals at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium. The game will provide spectators with a look at another team from the new athletic conference. When Southern played host to Indiana State University three weeks ago, the Salukis upset ISU 29-7 and sent them to defeat for the first time since the second game of the 1968-69 season.

Northern Illinois University and Illinois State University are the other teams in the five school conference.

The Saluki offensive line was riddled with injuries after the Indiana State game. Tackle Earl Collins sustained a leg injury against ISU and Towers expects him to be full strength for the first time since.

On the following Monday, letterman tackle Dick Smith broke a bone in his foot and was lost for the season.

Captain Terry Cotham has been bothered all season by an injured knee but Towers said he thinks Cotham is ready to resume his right guard duties. Cotham is a four-year varsity player.

Ball State's 4-4 record isn't any indication of their ability.

Towers said Ball State coach Wave Myers thinks he has a better team than three years ago when the Cardinals went to the Grantland Rice Bowl.

The Cardinals have a good running attack. Phil Farris, an outstanding flanker who has caught 21 passes for 279 yards and one touchdown, is the strong point of the Cardinal's air game.

Quarterback Willard Rice has completed 94 of 179 passes for 1061 yards and five touchdowns this season. Last season Rice broke Ball State passing records when he completed 124 of 209 passes for 1,592 yards and 12 touchdowns.

"Ball State's defense has always been noted by their strong, interior linemen and this is true again this year," Towers said.

The predominantly sopho-

The contest will pit strength against strength since Southern's passing has been weak as is Ball State's pass defense. On the contrary, Ball State has allowed only 2.7 yards per carry by opponents and SIU has gained 1,856 rushing in seven games.

Saluki halfback Bob Hasberry needs only 128 yards to break the all-time SIU single season rushing record.

Amos Bullocks holds the existing record with 996 yards in 1960.

"I think this game will be similar to the Indiana State game," Towers said. "The team that gets the breaks and is mentally alert will take the game."

Guelker given three top spots

EDWARDSVILLE—Bob Guelker, head soccer coach at SIU, Edwardsville, has been named to three national committees by Erwin A. Single, president of the United States Soccer Football Association.

Guelker was named chairman of the Olympic Committee, chairman of the joint standing committee of the USSFA and the North American Soccer League and chairman of the ad hoc committee of the USSFA to work with the national Muscular Dystrophy Committee to promote fund-raising drives for MS and to bring soccer to the attention of the American public.

Guelker, whose SIU kickers are 8-0-1 for the current season, unbeaten in 18 straight games and ranked ninth in the nation, is the immediate past president of the USSFA, having served two one-year terms.
