Athletics income cuts total $122,448

Editor's note: This is the last in a four-part series examining the men's and women's athletics budget and the proposed $10 athletics fee increase.

By Cindy Michaelson
News Editor

In addition to a $64,175 shortfall in student fee money for the athletics program this year, University officials now say they will withhold from the athletics budget another $58,773 in predicted student fee income.

Associate Vice President for University Relations Jerry Lacey said Wednesday that although SIU-C Institutional Research issued a projection on Oct. 8 of $822,591 in athletics fee income, the budget will reflect fee income of only $763,818.

The budget released last week proposes $510,296 in student fees be allocated for men's athletics, $240,522 for women's athletics, and $13,000 for the Saluki Flying Team.

"The figure has been reduced $58,773. It's not reflected in the budget. The attitude was like things happen (with projections) that no one can explain to us. We don't have all the money projected, so we're not going to take that figure and use it," Lacey said in explaining the decision to undercut the projection by Institutional Research.

The total amount of student fee income for the athletics program shown in the budget to be presented to the Board of Trustees Thursday morning is $122,448 less than what was available last year. That cut comes despite the fact that the Illinois Board of Higher Education announced earlier this week that total "full-time equivalent" enrollment, a calculation of the total semester hours carried divided by the normal full-time load of 12 hours, has increased at SIU-C by 0.8 percent over last year.

The budget proposal has particularly caused dissatisfaction in the men's program. Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers said Wednesday that some of the coaches will be "very disappointed." Sayers said cutbacks would be made in operating expenses and in tuition waivers for athletes.

student fee money available to the athletics program is due to the $13,000 allocation to the Saluki Flying Team. When asked how the Office of University Relations justified the proposed allocation of athletics fees to an organization that is not recognized by the National Collegiate Athletics Association, Lacey responded, "I think you probably ought to pursue that with (Vice President for University Relations George) Mace."

When asked if he had been told why the allocation is being proposed, Lacey repeated his previous answer.

Mace was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

In referring to a subcommittee report of the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee that urged the University to get away from "the burdensome intercollegiate athletics fee," Lacey said he construed the recommendation as one that does not negate the possibility of using additional student fees to support athletics.

"I did not see anything in the (IAC) report that said, 'Do not use student fees.' The report did indicate exploring all areas of additional revenue. And we've done it. We've gotten additional state revenues and additional contributions and now we're trying to get additional student support," Lacey said.

"I feel that the information that has been made available, based upon current levels of projected expenditures in the athletics program, it's necessary to develop additional revenue and that includes student fees," Lacey added.

Sayers: Budget cut will hurt program

By Ray Robinson

Staff Writer

Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers said Wednesday that the $169,000 being cut from his operating expenses "is going to hurt. No question about it."

"You can't keep cutting a sport and expect it to be competitive," Sayers said. "And this is what we're expected to do. We're being asked to bring recognition to the University, but we're constantly being cut back."

Sayers said the cut in operating expenses and a planned $31,000 cut in tuition waivers for athletes would not come from any sport in particular but from the athletics program as a whole.

Sayers said he first heard about the shortfall in student fees, which necessitated the cuts, about a month ago, but that the coaches learned of it only last week.

"I think any time you cut a sport, the coach is going to be very disappointed," he said. "I gave out the budgets in the middle of July saying, 'This is your budget.' Now all of a sudden I have to come back and say, 'That's not your budget. We have some other cuts we have to make.'"

Sayers said that when he met with the coaches last week, some of them suggested that only certain sports—not their sports—be cut to allow the others to remain at the same level of funding.

"But I'm not going to do that," he said. "Everybody's in the same boat. We're going to sink or swim together. I'm not going to destroy one program to save another."

Sayers said most of the cuts in operating expenses would be made in "general travel" which includes coaches' trips to conference meetings and recruiting trips. He was not optimistic about the possibility of making up for the cuts with self-generated income, which consists mostly of ticket sales and fund raising.

"I really feel we can make up for some of it. But as for the total amount, I don't think so," he said. "I don't think we have the power to go out and get $200,000 right away. We don't have that potential here."

Sayers said he expected his fund raising efforts to bring in about $85,000 this year from 400 different contributors, some of whom give as much as $5,000. He said he thought $150,000 to $200,000 could eventually be raised each year.

"But it's going to be a period of time," Sayers said. "It's not going to happen tomorrow. It's not going to happen two years from now. If we can increase our private funding by $10,000 to $15,000 a year, I think that's great. But we need the money today."

The University's approach to obtaining that money is a $10 increase in the athletics fee paid by students, which will be proposed to the Board of Trustees Thursday. Almost one-third of the athletics budget comes from the fee now $30 per semester.

Sayers said SIU was one of only about 100 colleges in the country where students pay a fee to support athletics. But he said the hope of someday reducing the fee was faint.

Budgeting for merit poses problems

By Ella Reilly
Staff Writer

Budgeting for merit personnel in the Sheriff's Department will be one of the biggest problems posed by the tentative Jackson County budget.

Gary Hartlieb, county finance committee chairman, said if there would be a problem with the tentative $2,777,687 budget, he anticipates it being in the Sheriff's Department concerning personnel covered by the merit commission.

Jackson County Board Chairman Bill Kelley said the county board and the merit commission have not agreed on a merit personnel budget. The merit commission sets the budget for the deputy sheriffs and presents it to the board for approval. The county board can't change the request, it can only approve or disapprove it.

The merit commission's first budget was rejected several months ago, Kelley said. It included a 7 percent increase in deputy's salaries, more health insurance coverage and an increase in uniform upkeep allowance. The 7 percent increase also included the jailers.

The county board passed an ordinance last April excluding jailers from the merit system. In August jailer Willie Mason filed a lawsuit against the county board for damages and a declaratory judgment to require the county board to reinstate the jailers as merit employees.

Hartlieb said the budget for the merit employees can "become a very complicated mess." He said he thinks—but says he is not sure—if the sheriff included the merit employees' salaries in his budget. The finance committee voted down requests in the sheriff's budget for more insurance coverage and uniform allowance for deputies. He said that way at least the deputies will be paid if the county board and merit commission don't come to terms. The merit commission oversees tenure, promotion, discipline and the discharging of deputy sheriffs.

11 candidates to run for S-Senate seats

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

Eleven candidates will be on the ballot for 16 Student Senate positions in Wednesday's senate elections, according to Kellie Watts, election commissioner of the Undergraduate Student Organization.

Watts said students interested in running for undergraduate senate positions who did not get the paperwork completed in time to get their names on the ballot may still run as write-in candidates.

Watts added that she had to disqualify five people for various reasons, including academics, not showing up for mandatory candidate meetings and not turning in petitions on time.

There are six full-time senate positions available in both the East and West Side districts, Watts said. Two full-time seats and one half-time seat are open in the East Campus district, and one half-time position is open on Thompson Point, Watts said.

Senate positions are allocated in each district based on the population of that district. Watts said that each semester, half of the positions in a district are elected. A full-time position is held for two semesters, while half-time positions are re-elected each semester, Watts said.

According to Watts, the most intense campaigns will be in East Campus, where there are six people on the ballot for three open senate seats. Two people will be on the ballot for the six seats open on the West Side, and three are on the ballot for the six open East Side seats. No one turned in a petition in time to be placed on the ballot for the half-time Thompson Point position, Watts said.

Four senators are running for re-election. East Side Senators Leah Sughrive, Christ J. Cordogan and Kevin C. Jans, and East Campus Senator Tom Sheehan are on the ballot for re-election.

Also running for the East Campus positions are Bruce Bellak, Ed Collins, Tom Cromwell, Linda Schneider and Joe Winztraub. West Side candidates who will appear on the ballot are James Bryson and Mark Michalcik.

Watts said that there will be 11 polling stations where undergraduates may vote. Three will be at each of the dining halls of the on-campus dormitories, two in the Student Center and one each at Woody Hall, Lawson Hall, the Communications Building, the Health Service Morris Library and the Carbondale STC campus.

Watts said that students must present a valid student ID and a paid fee statement when they vote. Students living in dormitories may vote only at their respective dining hall and must present a meal ticket in addition to an ID and fee statement.

Watts said that candidates may display campaign posters only on University bulletin boards or inside businesses in town. She said that no posters may be displayed outdoors or in Morris Library, and that there may be only one poster per candidate on each bulletin board.

Posters may be no larger than 11 inches by 14 inches and must be taken down by 8 p.m. the day before the election.

There is also a $33 campaign spending limit per candidate, Watts said.

Five fee increases on Trustees' agenda

By Ray Robinson
Staff Writer

The SIU Board of Trustees is scheduled to meet Thursday in Edwardsville to discuss an agenda that includes five fee increases for the Carbondale campus.

The 10 a.m. meeting in the SIU-E University Center Ballroom, is open to the public.

The only one of the five increases the board is expected to act upon is the $18 rent increase at Evergreen Terrace, which was presented in October.

The other increases, which will be presented to the board Thursday and probably acted upon in December, are an increase in rates for residence halls and apartment complexes other than Evergreen Terrace; the $6.60 increase in the Bond Retirement Fee forecast by Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne when the fee was approved by the board in March; a 60-cent increase in the Student Activity Fee; and a $10 increase in the athletics fee.

Both the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate Student Council have passed resolutions favoring the student activity fee increase.

Both organizations have also passed resolutions opposing the athletics fee increase.

GSC President Gary Brown said Tuesday afternoon that he was circulating a petition against the athletics fee increase, and had already collected 1,000 signatures. Brown said he would address the board and ask that the item be removed from the agenda until the reasons for the increase are made clearer.

The board is also expected to take final action on the executive session guidelines proposed to it in October by Chancellor Kenneth Shaw as an answer to public criticism of its frequent closed sessions.

Shaw's guidelines call for the abolition of routinely scheduled executive sessions before regular monthly meetings. No such executive sessions have been scheduled before board meetings for the last two months.

The guidelines also call for Chairman Harris Rowe, at the next regular meeting after an executive session, to announce "the part of the Illinois Open Meetings Act that made an executive session legal, if one is held."

This is a practice Rowe began at the July board meeting in Springfield, after Madison County State's Attorney Nicholas Byron filed a suit against the board, charging it with violating the act.

And finally, the board is scheduled to discuss a "working paper" for the Chancellor's Office, which is meant to clarify the chancellor's responsibilities in the new system of governance the board created.

SBA to seek middle ground fund approach

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

The law students would like to take a "middle-of-the-road" approach to receiving funds, said Jim Rodgers, Student Bar Association president.

Rodgers said in a letter to Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs, that the SBA would like to receive separate funding without seeking constituency status.

The law students chose to withdraw from the Graduate Student Council in October after more than a year of conflict between members of the SBA and GSC. Rodgers said the conflict earlier stemmed from a disagreement over allocations of funds by the GSC.

In the letter that prompted Rodgers' reply, Swinburne gave two options to the law students: they could either become a recognized student organization and request formal support from one of the recognized student constituencies (either the GSC or the Undergraduate Student Organization) or seek constituency status at the same level as the seven existing constituency groups.

In reply to Swinburne's letter Rodgers said, "We feel that just as President Derge recognized the GSC in 1973, allowing it to seek and receive separate funding without being a constituency group, you, as vice president for Student Affairs, can recognize and grant funding to the SBA."

"Your letter seems to imply we must remain subject to the

Diplomats refused Iran entry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two American emissaries sent to negotiate the release of some 60 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran were stalled in Turkey on Wednesday when Iranian leaders refused to let them into the country.

Ramsey Clark, a former U.S. attorney general, and William Miller, a staff member of a Senate committee, were reported by the State Department to be waiting in Ankara for further instruction.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the two emissaries, carrying a personal message from President Carter to Iranian leaders, would remain in Turkey indefinitely "pending clarification" from the Tehran government.

Three kilograms of cocaine seized

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal authorities have arrested two suspected major cocaine dealers believed connected with a nationwide cocaine distribution ring and seized three kilograms of cocaine with an estimated street value of $570,000.

Awaiting appearances Wednesday before a U.S. magistrate in Chicago were Pedro Jimenez, 37, of South Chicago Heights, and Donald Cook, 38, of Lansing. A spokesman for the federal Drug Enforcement Administration said both men are stewards for Local 588 of the United Auto Workers in Chicago Heights.

Keith Sieger, DEA special agent in charge of the Chicago office, said Jimenez was arrested at a motel in Harvey where he allegedly sought to sell a kilo of cocaine to an undercover agent for $64,000, at wholesale price.

About four hours later, DEA agents, with a federal search warrant, arrested Cook in his condominium apartment, the spokesman said.

Two charged with hiring killer

CHICAGO (AP) — A suburban Brookfield woman and her 24-year-old son have been charged with attempting to hire a professional killer for $4,000 to murder the woman's husband, police said.

Fotula Adamopoulos, 55, and her son by a previous marriage, John Stavrakis, were accused Tuesday of trying to arrange the murder of her husband, George, 47. They were arrested as they allegedly solicited an undercover policeman to do the job.

Fee increase worthy of board's attention

The SIU Board of Trustees, as it says Page 3 of its by-laws and statutes, has the duty "to examine into the conditions, management, and administration of Southern Illinois University..."

When the board meets in Edwardsville today, it will have a fine opportunity to exercise that duty when it considers the proposed $10 increase in the athletics fee.

While the board does not generally concern itself with individual programs on campus, the fiscal Frankenstein created by the Carbondale athletics program might be worthy of the trustees' time.

For the most part, the University's services like the Student Center and Health Service, which are dependent on student fees, manage to match their expenditures with income at the end of the fiscal year. To be sure, each area has had to grapple with increased energy costs, increased salaries and wages and other expenses that have jumped in recent years. And more than one of these service programs has had to ask the board to increase the student fee which supports it.

The athletics program, however, is a different story. Supporters of the fee increase are quick to point out that there has not been an increase in student fees to support athletics in some four years. True. But income from ticket sales, contributions, concessions and the like have more than doubled since 1975. According to Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers, SIU is one of only 100 universities in the nation which still use a student fee to support intercollegiate athletics.

Other supporters cite the mandate of equality in intercollegiate athletics in Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 as the reason behind increasing the fee $10. If the University were to allocate all the increase to the women's athletics program, equality would then be achieved. But where would that leave those who say the men's program is crumbling from lack of financial support?

Then there is inflation to think about. The 50 percent increase in the athletics fee might cover the rise in the consumer price index since 1975. If so, what would happen to equality in athletics? Would it be left to the wayside until another fee increase is proposed next year? Also, how would the men's program expand at the rate some claim is necessary to achieve self-sufficiency?

One more problem: Deficits. Associate Vice President for University Relations Jerry Lacey says the athletics departments may end up spending $361,303 more than is available in income. It's interesting to note that the fee increase would generate just about $400,000.

Lacey told the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee earlier this week that the fee increase was needed to cover all three bases: Title IX, inflation and deficits. Here, an old adage might be appropriate: You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

The trustees should look hard at this particular proposal because many students and faculty will be looking hard at the trustees. There are too many unanswered questions on the proposal and there has been too little input from those affected by it.

Utility firm makes conservation pay

PORTLAND, ORE.—It sounds like one of those dizzy theories from the Blue Eagle School of Screwball Economics, but in the Pacific Power & Light Company some hardheaded guys are making it work: They are acquiring energy by not consuming it.

Let me run that by you again. The company is deeply committed to a program predicated upon not selling its own product. Every kilowatt hour saved, in its book, is a profit earned. Less is more. This is energy conservation put to practical work.

For the record, Pacific Power serves 600,000 customers in the great Northwest. At one time, 15 or 20 years ago, virtually all of its power was hydroelectric power, generated from the rivers that tumble out of the Cascade Mountains on their way to the sea. As the area has grown, steam plants have taken over 75 percent of the total load. For the foreseeable future new power needs must be met by new coal-burning plants—and new coal-burning plants cost a fortune.

The conventional approach to meeting power needs is to generate more power. The management of Pacific Power had a better idea: Reduce the need. A year ago the company won approval for an innovative Zero Interest Financing Program in Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho. District managers took aim on 104,000 homeowners with all-electric space heating. Typically, the individual homeowner was consuming 10,000 kilowatt hours a year to heat his house. Could that demand be reduced to 5,500 or 7,500 KWH?

In Oregon alone, company analysts found that 49,000 homes could benefit from floor insulation, 33,000 from ceiling insulation and 48,000 from the installation of storm windows and doors. Not all those prospects could be sold, of course, but if incentives could be devised to pull even 65 or 70 percent of them into the program, significant savings would result.

Pacific Power began to offer eligible homeowners a deal they could hardly refuse: loans with no interest and no repayment schedule. In the past year, 4,600 loans have been made, averaging $1,354. They become a lien on the property, to be repaid when the property is sold or inherited. As the program has gained momentum, completions have reached a level of 100 houses every week. Over the next five years the company realistically expects to see 60,000 homes insulated, weather-stripped or storm-windowed. At that point the company will not be generating and selling 300 million kilowatt hours a year that it otherwise might have sold.

James J. Kilpatrick

And the company figures it will be much better off. By treating the loans as a resource, the loans become part of the company's rate base; the company is entitled to earn a reasonable return on the investment. It costs 14 mills to save a kilowatt hour by conservation; it costs 56 mills to generate a kilowatt hour in a new steam plant. The program isn't of sufficient magnitude to replace an actual plant, but it will postpone the time when new plants must be put on the line. Meanwhile, the participating consumers benefit and the company prospers.

Six other utilities in the Pacific Northwest are now offering similar programs. The Tennessee Valley Authority makes term loans for the same purposes. And while the specific approach won't work everywhere, it makes a certain crazy sense out here in the land of cheap power.

A few critics have voiced reservations. Non-participating customers are hard put to understand how the company's $1,300 loan to a neighbor could be part of a system-wide rate base. California and Wyoming commissions have refused to go along. Even though company engineers check completed jobs before payment is made to the insulation contractors, complaints have been heard of shoddy workmanship. On the whole, however, the program has gone modestly well. For those who have been skeptical about "energy conservation," the Northwestern companies are providing a profitable answer: It works.

Abortion veto story not good journalism

In regard to your article entitled "House Votes to Override Abortion Veto" which appeared in the October 31, 1979, edition, I think it was biased, poorly researched, and a terrible example of journalism. Since when is there only two quotes and one side represented in a story? And since the State Senate and House of Representatives felt it necessary to leave the constitutionality of this bill up to the courts, I hardly think the staff of the DE is qualified to do any differently.

In fact, the Supreme Court's ruling was that pregnancy should be treated as any other medical condition. It was the Court's feeling that women had a right to an abortion just as they had a right to correct any other medical disorder.

However, by law, minors are not allowed to have medical procedures performed on them without parental consent. Not even a simple appendectomy can be done without their permission, so why should a much harder medical procedure such as an abortion be allowed to be performed on minors without parental consent. It is not "a way to harass women who want abortions" but simply a way to treat abortions like any other medical procedure.

Why don't you get the opinions of the Southern Illinois Representatives whom you reported as voting to override the veto. I'm sure they would be happy to talk with you and help you to get the one-sidedness out of your news story, which should never be biased and opinionated.

There's way to help

A letter in the D.E. last week addressed the issue of hundreds and thousands of starving Cambodians. I also would like to remind you of this situation in which many die daily due to lack of food and medical aid and also remind us all of our own personal comfortable living habitats and full bellies.

There is a non-profit organization "World Vision" that reaches out with food, medical care and much love to these people. Any amount of money, large or small, can be donated to a specific need if so desired. The address is World Vision International, P.O. Box 0, Pasadena, California 91199. They will be glad to supply information about themselves before you donate your money.

Aid director wants new role; cites EDP improvement needs

By Shelley Davis
Staff Writer

In an effort to concentrate more time and energy on improving data processing operations for the financial aid office, Gordon White, director of Student Work and Financial Assistance, has asked to be reassigned as associate director of that office.

White, who has been director since 1977, said his decision to request reassignment was not connected in any way with the recent shifting of responsibility in the office from the dean of Student Life to Vice President of Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne.

"At this point, I support the change in administration," White said. "I have just been putting in extremely long hours and something had to give."

Due to his added duties as head of the financial aid office, White said he has not been able to devote as much time as he would have liked to improving automation in the office. He said he now can concentrate on using the computer to assist in the vast amount of paperwork that is involved in determining financial aid awards.

"Eighty to 90 percent of our work is done in a routine pattern," White said. "The computer would give the staff more time to deal with problems that don't fit the pattern."

White has worked with data processing for 14 years. Some of the changes he would like to see include key punching Illinois State Scholarship awards directly from notification forms, having the computer do a greater share of all clerical processes as well as prepare the financial aid award package.

"It is my goal to shorten the time between when the student applies and when the University is able to deliver the funds," White explained.

Swinburne said he is supportive of White's decision. "It will make super good use of an area in which Gordon is very strong. We are looking to be as responsive as we can possibly be to the students," he said.

White will remain the director of the unit until a successor for him can be found. Swinburne said he hopes to find a replacement within the University system, a process which could take about three months.

arise, especially in the rural area, she continued. The course will be offered next spring.

The program is offered to workers in public and private child welfare agencies in Southern Illinois, Rosen said. Some of these agencies include the Southern Illinois offices of the Department of Child and Family Services, Hoyelton Children's Home in Hoyelton, Hudson in Centralia and the Baptist Children's Home in Carmi, she said.

SIU-C is the only extension in Southern Illinois to help provide services and training for these agencies.

The money granted will pay for faculty time, developing courses, providing materials and for the participants expenses.

Child welfare workers get aid

By Julie Balsley
Student Writer

Child welfare workers in Southern Illinois will get extra training and education from SIU-C through a $34,380 federal grant.

The grant for the training is the first received by SIU-C from the U.S. Office of Human Development, according to Anita Rosen, assistant professor in Social Welfare and director of the training grant.

"The purpose of the program is to teach skills to non-university students who are directly involved in working with an agency," Rosen said.

The workers will be taught how to offer and deliver courses in child welfare. They will also be instructed on how to deal with the different needs that will

'Silent Partner' views life as a game

By Jorda a Gold
Staff Writer

If life is combined with a chess game, odds are a chess player could succeed in it more often than say, Bobby Fisher has. In "The Silent Partner," life is looked at as a game of chess by Miles Cullen, an unassuming Toronto bank teller. And Cullen succeeds most of the time.

Cullen, played by Elliott Gould, loves fish. He tells most everyone he meets. As a result, he is underestimated by most everyone. When he becomes the "victim" of a bank robbery, even the robber underestimates him. Cullen takes home most of the money.

The only people who know that Cullen has most of the money are himself and the bank robber, played by Christopher Plummer. Their resulting encounters add to the suspense of this thriller-comedy, as do Cullen's reactions to them.

Cullen feels that he is a pawn in everyone else's game of life. He gets tired of being used and starts to use others as though they are chess pieces. Cullen, in one swift change, transforms from a "fish" into a chessmaster.

SBA seeks funds, not constituency

purse strings of the GSC or we must seek constituency status. I believe that some sort of middle ground can be achieved," the letter said.

Rodgers also said that the SBA would associate with one of the recognized student constituencies on university issues as long as the SBA receives separate funding.

"If the middle ground is not available, then the SBA would have no other choice than to seek constituency status," Rodgers said.

In the letter to Rodgers, Swinburne said that he sensed the mood of the campus was opposed to any new constituency groups.

Tom Busch, assistant to Swinburne, said the vice president will issue his reply to Rodgers on Monday.

A Review

After using the bankrobber, he uses his fellow bank workers, especially Julie, played by Susannah York, and his girlfriend, played by Celine Lomez. From this point, the thriller builds to an exciting climax.

"The Silent Partner" is funny at times and at others it is brutal. Violence is blatantly depicted without any sympathy for the audience. Director Darv Duke lulls the audience into the safety of comedy and then explodes violence onto the screen.

Gould is excellent in his role, as is Plummer as the violent, sadistic bank robber. York and Lomez, however, merely perform like window dressings. Lomez, in her first major movie, stumbles across her lines while York mainly looks pretty.

Music for the film was written by jazzman Oscar Peterson. He does a great job following Duke's mood changes.

Backgammon tournaments on upswing

By Jordan Gold
Staff Writer

Backgammon, which two years ago wasn't even recognized on campus, has suddenly become one of the most popular sports in Carbondale. In a span of just over three weeks, five major tournaments will be held in the area.

At 12:30 p.m. Saturday at the Dugout in Carbondale, Pi Sigma Epsilon, known in English as the Marketing Club, is holding a tournament. Registration is $3 and is open until noon on Saturday. First prize at the tournament is $25 in cash, a trophy and various prizes from Carbondale merchants. Second, third and fourth prizes will also be awarded.

On Nov. 13, 14 and 15, Beefmaster's in Cartersville will be holding a tournament. Registration is limited to 40 entrants and costs $5. This tournament also features an unique idea called a "buy-back." This allows everyone who loses in the first round a chance to buy their way back into the tournament for an

Jazz quartet performance set

Jeanne Trevor and the St. Louis Jazz Quartet will perform at 8 p.m. Nov. 15 in Shryock Auditorium.

The quartet was described by one jazz enthusiast as one that plays "great jazz in variegated hues ranging from blues to red hot."

A pre-concert dinner will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Old Main Room of the Student Center. Included on the menu are red snapper, fried chicken, corn and okra creole, french fried onion rings, jambalaya fruit salad, tossed salad with cucumber dressing, wheat rolls and cherry jubilee.

Tickets for the concert are $1.50 for students. The cost of dinner and the concert is $5.25 for students. Dinner is priced at $4.95 for the public and season ticket holders.

Virgil Hughes, who is conducting workshops on campus this week about dulcimer building, demonstrates his craft.

Dulcimer has backwoods past

By Jennell Olson
Staff Writer

In order to appreciate the dulcimer, it helps to understand the backwoods people of the Appalachian Mountains, says Virgil Hughes, a builder of the folk instrument.

Hughes, president of the Hughes Dulcimer Co. of Denver, Colo., is visiting SIU-C this week to conduct workshops on how to build the instrument. His demonstrations point out several of the old superstitions associated with the dulcimer.

One of the folk stories of the Appalachian Mountain people involves the three-stringed dulcimer, which is regarded as wicked. "The devil's pitchfork has three tines, so the three-stringed dulcimer is considered an instrument of the devil," Hughes explained.

"The people aren't really foolish enough to believe that, but the actual reason is so bad that they can't actually talk about it," he added.

Hughes, who was raised on the ideas of the backwoods people, learned to play the dulcimer at age 4. "It's their instrument and knowing their folklore enhances one's appreciation of it and what it's all about," he said.

Hughes said he admires some of the mountain people's attitudes, such as their feelings about music. "The people in the Appalachians believe that if you just listen to music, you are being rude. Just listening means that you think you are above them and expect them to entertain you," Hughes said. For that reason, everyone, from the 4-year-old child to the 70-year-old grandmother, takes part in the music. "In our culture, we're often too afraid of making a fool of ourselves to do additional $3. Play will be held each night beginning at 7 p.m. Chuck Boner, assistant manager of Beetmaster's, said that registration will be held until Monday night, the day before the tournament. First prize is $100, second is $50, third is $25 and fourth is a $10 dinner for one. Boner added that the highest woman finisher would also get a dinner.

The SIU-C Backgammon Club, which holds free tournaments almost every Wednesday, is not being left out. President Jim Gevas has set a tentative Nov. 28 date for the club's next major tournament.

This tournament will be a tune-up for the SIU Championships on Dec. 1.

Merit budgeting poses problems

the county $57,925 in the red, Hartlieb said he is not worried. "I'm sure the budget will be balanced when it meets final approval in a special Jackson County Board meeting later this month," Hartlieb said. He added that the county could always use the uncommitted cash surplus of $650,000, which it carries every year.

The budget, an increase of $800,000 from last year's, will give all offices an across-the-board 6 percent increase in each personnel line item. Hartlieb said each office decides specific personnel salaries.

The budget will be on public display for 15 days. The county board will decide at its regular meeting Wednesday on a date for its special meeting for final action on the budget. Kelley said the budget will be discussed at the regular meeting, but no action will be taken.

Hartlieb has predicted there will be few changes in the tentative budget.

"There are always changes," Hartlieb said. "But this year there will probably be the fewest ever. The committee has been careful to anticipate changes."

Hartlieb said the budget requests from each office were cut, but not by much. He said each office "could live with it." Of the 24 offices, only six appealed the committee's budget decisions and three of those appeals were granted, he said.

All the revenue sharing funds, $262,000, have been included in the county budget. Only a few of the agencies, which made $300,000 in requests for the revenue funds in October, will receive funding. Hartlieb said. He said they may also receive the funding from the $650,000 surplus.

Hartlieb said the county board will have to decide if and how much of the $650,000 it wants to keep as surplus. He added that there is really no place to cut the budget and if cut it will be "nickel and diming it."

Folklore contains tales of dulcimers

that," Hughes said.

In addition, not everyone plays the same instrument, for there are 42 different versions of the dulcimer. Among these are a woman's and a man's model.

"Women aren't supposed to play the men's dulcimer when strangers are around," said Hughes. "That would be as wicked as wearing trousers."

While the woman's dulcimer is shaped like a fish, the man's version is "shaped like a lady," Hughes said. He added that he was once reprimanded by a jackwoodsman for grasping the instrument from the bottom, which is the wrong place to touch a dulcimer.

The folk instruments of the Appalachian people are very simple because they are made by hand. "They believe that if you need something you should make it yourself, or you are slapping the face of God," Hughes said.

Hughes travels to universities and other institutions during 10 months of the year to teach people how to build the dulcimer and other folk instruments.

He often returns to the mountains where he enjoys playing his instrument with the jackwoods people. "Carrying his dulcimer into the mountains shows that you're real, that you're honest...that you're their kind of folk."

Campus Briefs

Court rules in favor of Air Illinois in $250,000 sex discrimination suit

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

A sex discrimination suit brought by a stewardess against Air Illinois has ended with a favorable ruling for the airline.

A federal district court in Benton last week decided against awarding former chief flight attendant Roxana Rea the $250,000 in punitive damages, the undetermined amount in back pay and job reinstatement which she sought from Air Illinois.

In her lawsuit, Rea contended that when she contacted Air Illinois after a three-month maternity leave of absence, she was offered less than the "comparable position at comparable pay" that is required under Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act.

Her complaint states that Air Illinois president at that time, E.R. Dzenolett, offered her a part-time position in Jonesboro, Ark. "with a substantial reduction in wages and with a loss of seniority and accrued benefits."

According to the court transcript, Dzenolett testified that Rea was offered a senior flight attendant position at "the same salary she received in the past, plus a $75 increase."

However, three days after the Oct. 29 ruling, Charles C. Hines, Air Illinois attorney, said Dzenolett had actually offered Rea the senior flight attendant position "with a cut in pay of about $75 a month, or maybe a little less." He said Dzenolett made the offer during a private meeting with Rea in April 1977.

When asked about the discrepancy between his version of Rea's offer from Air Illinois and the version in the transcript, Hines said, "I don't want to say which is right or which is not right. The court order speaks for itself."

The transcript does not specify whether the $75 was to be a monthly increase.

Rea, as chief flight attendant, was in charge of all the flight attendants at Air Illinois' Carbondale location. Hines said that as senior flight attendant, she would not have had as much managerial responsibility but she would not have lost any seniority.

Contacted shortly after the court ruling, Rea said she did not feel she could comment on the case "at this time." Her lawyer, John Huffman of Carbondale, said he was still "holding to everything that we said in the complaint."

Rea was terminated from Air Illinois shortly after Dzenolett's offer because, according to the transcript, Rea agreed to take the position, but then failed to show up on the day she was scheduled to return to work.

The transcript states that Rea informed Dzenolett that she would not return until she spoke with her lawyer. She subsequently filed suit against the airline.

Hines said Air Illinois did not violate the federal law because an employer is not required to restate an employee in the same position with the same pay. Rea was offered a "comparable position with comparable pay," he said, "and that is all the law requires."

He added that Rea's former position as chief flight attendant had been filled by another employee when she left on maternity leave.

The court said it was upholding the airline because "there has been absolutely no evidence showing that men on sick leave are treated any different than plaintiff was in this case."

New cagers adjust to SIU style

By Scott Stahmer
Staff Writer

Mixing the "old" and the "new."
That's what women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott has been attempting to do ever since the Lady Salukis began practice several weeks ago. With 10 "new" players — seven freshmen, two junior college transfers and one transfer from a four-year school — Scott says the chore has been difficult, but she has seen a great deal of progress.

"Everyone is playing together more," Scott said. "The players are getting used to each other's moves. It's a problem on offense than it is on defense."

Scott will have a chance to see how much the team has progressed, Nov. 13, when the Salukis will hold a Maroon-White scrimmage at Davies Gym. Coach Scott in the game will be WCIL sportscaster Mike Reis and Frank Marock of WPSD-TV in Paducah, Ky.

The adjustment has been particularly difficult for Kellye Rogers, a 6-foot freshman forward from Batesville, Ark. Rogers averaged 38 points per game last year as a senior, but played half-court, six-on-six ball.

"It hasn't been easy at all, but I have adjusted," she said. "I've had to learn how to play defense. In high school, the forwards played better defense than the guards, but here, everybody has to play defense."

Offensively, Rogers said it has been a change not to be relied on as a big scorer.

"I'd like to average 38 points a game here," she said, "but I've had to adjust to not scoring a lot. Everybody here was a big star in high school. They're just as good as I am."

Rogers said six-on-six basketball, which also is played in Iowa and Tennessee, has always been played in Arkansas. She added, however, that Arkansas will switch over to full-court, five-on-five basketball this year.

"It's always been six-on-six, but it is changing over to five-on-five for the first time this year," Rogers said. "There has been a big lawsuit about six-on-six ball. It has affected players who want to go on to play college basketball."

The other Rogers on the Salukis, Alondray, said she has learned new maneuvers on offense and defense.

"In junior college, they teach you how to front (a defensive strategy used by forwards and centers) one way," the 6-foot transfer from Memphis' Shelby State Community College said. "Here, they're teaching me how to do it another way."

"They're teaching me new things offensively, too," Rogers added. "I'm learning new moves toward the basket, like how to drive the lane."

Connie Erickson, the catalyst on last year's Niles West High School state championship team, said she has had to adjust to the quality of play in practice.

"I've got to work on my all-around game," she said. "We played more of a passing game in high school. Here, it's a faster game, with more running. I've had to adjust to the faster game and the better defense that is played."

Erickson, 5-foot-6, said she feels the team has looked inconsistent in practice.

"We have our 'on' days, and our 'off' days," she said. "Yesterday, we looked good in practice. It's just going to take time."

How does SIU's leading returning player, Sue Faber, feel about the team?

"It's different having so many new people here," Faber, who is recovering from an injury, said. "But they are all so talented, I expect them to have no trouble adjusting."

Although she is a veteran team member, Faber said she does not expect to fill a leadership role.

"I don't really think I'll have to be a leader," she said. "If we stay close together as a team, we won't need a leader."

Knee injury sidelines Muenz

Gymnastics Coach Bill Meade said that it is going to be a little rough on his team, but that he is used to dealing with injuries and he'll have to rely on freshman Jim Muenz, Dan's brother and David Hoffman to cover the loss.

"I'm going to have to coach a little harder," Meade said. "Both Jim's and David's scores are going to count now, where before they could have been thrown out. We had three last year, there is nothing that can be done."

Meade said that knee injuries are common for gymnasts because of the difficult routines that the athletes have developed. He said that the loss of Muenz meant a loss of 10 team points to his squad.

"The tricks are a lot harder now because the gymnasts are so good. Dan's is a 9.2 gymnast and the freshman are around 6.0," Meade said. "We are just going to have to build back up."

Muenz said that he feels the two freshman will do a good job and that they are improving with every week. He said that he feels they'll be receiving scores of around eight plus by the end of the season.

"They are both learning right now," Muenz said. "They should do well if they keep working."

Money woes stop JV cagers

The men's athletics department, in an effort to cut expenses, dropped its junior varsity basketball program Wednesday.

The team, made up primarily of walk-ons and players not yet ready for the varsity squad, was abolished to try and save money because of recent budget problems in the men's department.

Drake looks to alter MVC race

By David Gatrick
Sports Editor

Drake University is a team with a mission. No longer can it win the Missouri Valley Conference football title. It can, however, decide which team will win it.

The Bulldogs, 1-2 in conference play and 3-6 overall, play host to the Salukis on Saturday and travel to West Texas State the following week. A victory over the Salukis ends SIU's hope for a shot at the crown. Should SIU win, and Drake recover to beat the Buffaloes, SIU and West Texas State will share the championship.

"We can now go for the fact that we can be second in the Missouri Valley and beat the team that wins the title," Head Coach Chuck Shelton said. "The kids are looking forward to these last two games. We can win both of them."

Had it not been for Drake's penchant for losing leads late in the fourth quarter, the Bulldogs also might be in contention for the title. Drake led Louisville, 21-18, Long Beach State, 14-10, Wichita State, 17-2, and Northern Michigan, 20-9, heading into the final quarter. The opposition has outscored Drake 63-6 in the final 15 minutes.

"It's the most frustrating thing I've ever had to deal with," said the third-year coach, who has won but nine of 31 games. "This is a team of lost opportunities. We feel we have to play with a little more intensity and mental toughness in the fourth quarter.

"Some of the teams that have come from behind to beat us have been pretty good, Louisville in particular," Shelton continued. "However, the last two games, against Wichita State and Northern Michigan, I felt we should have won."

Drake, however, has been successful against the Salukis. The Bulldogs lead the series, 10-6, and have won the last two games played between the teams.

To be successful this time around, Shelton said his team must stop the Saluki ground game. He added Drake must control the Salukis' ofensive line.

"They've been getting an excellent charge out of their offensive line the past few games," Shelton said. "Both teams have to control the line of scrimmage to win."

In SIU's case, the offensive line has allowed Saluki backs to average five yards per carry since the Sept. 29 game against Eastern Illinois.

"They ran for a lot of yards in beating Indiana State," Shelton said. SIU ran for 344 yards against the Sycamores, and has gained 1,207 in 243 carries since the Eastern Illinois contest.

Shelton is concerned with stopping the passing game also.

"They have to think they can throw against us," Shelton said.

The statistics show Shelton isn't lying. Northern Michigan rushed for only 10 yards, but completed 33 of 53 passes for 381 yards. Two of the completions were for fourth-quarter touchdowns.

Drake likes to balance its offense between passing and rushing. Shelton said his team has had better success throwing. Junior quarterback Rick Casko's favorite receiver is tight end Rich Suchanuk, who has 22 receptions. Casko seeks also to throw to his running backs.

"I feel he's one of the better quarterbacks in the Valley," Shelton said. "He's an extremely good thrower and has been able to put them on the board."

Casko is the team's third-leading rusher, behind starting fullback Wardell Wright and tailback Dwaine Ball. Wright has gained 659 yards this season, while Ball, who is coming back after knee surgery at the end of last season, has just 251. Casko has run for 117.

"I compare Wardell to Burnell Quinn," Shelton said. "He's a real money ball player. He makes the big plays. He's a string runner, a good blocker and a good receiver."

Shelton believes SIU is finally coming into its own and is living up to the expectation as the pre-season favorite.

"We think they're an excellent football team," Shelton said. "They were picked to win the conference, and right now it looks like they're living up to that prediction."

The Salukis' Ty Henry, (19), attempts to break up a pass intended for Indiana State's Kirk Wilson, (44). Wilson, the Missouri Valley Conference's leading receiver going into the game, caught a 7-yard touchdown pass, but the Salukis won, 41-38.

Top gymnast out with injury; Muenz may return in 3 months

Dan Muenz, SIU's top all-around gymnast, has been through it before. Twice in fact. And now for the third time. He has undergone knee surgery. Unlike the two previous operations, this incision was performed on his right knee. But like the first two, the consequences are still the same. He'll still have to recover, rehabilitate, and to work himself into the condition that has made him one of the top international gymnasts in the United States.

Muenz, a silver medalist at the 1979 Pan American Games, tore a ligament in his knee while performing a double-twisting somersault dismount from the still rings at the Big Eight Invitational last week. He was x-rayed at the meet and no structural damage was indicated. But when doctors at Memorial Hospital probed his knee Tuesday, they found the ligament that connects the knee to the femur had snapped.

"I haven't heard much about it yet," Muenz said. "I know that the ligament snapped and I'll probably be out for six weeks. The same thing happened to my other knee but they couldn't repair it. They had to reconstruct the whole thing."

After a possible six weeks in a cast, Muenz said that he figures to be out another two months rehabilitating the knee and getting his body in the shape it was before the accident.

"I'm going to have a lot of rehabilitating to do," he said.

"I'll work on isometrics to start with, then I'm going to have to get myself back into shape."

"I don't know how long I'll be out for sure. It all depends on how quickly I recover, of course."

Optimism high as spikers head to state tournament

The women's volleyball team will cross the first bridge of post-season competition this weekend, when the Salukis travel to Northern Illinois University for the IAAW state tournament. Eight Illinois schools will compete for two, and possibly three places in the regional meet.

The winner and second place finisher will advance to the regionals, and because Illinois is a tough volleyball state, the third place team may also get a bid.

The schools were placed into two pools of four teams, according to the way each university was seeded by state volleyball officials. The Salukis, seeded seventh, are in a pool with No. 2 ranked DePaul, Illinois, 3, and Northern Illinois, 6.

Coach Debbie Hunter was surprised by her squad's seventh place seed, but was quick to add that SIU was a better team than seventh place shows.

"The times we lost to in-state schools this year, we had some of our worst games while they were having some of their best," Hunter said. "The rest of the teams in the tournament aren't going to take us lightly. We have to be considered a strong outside threat."

Hunter said that she was optimistic about finishing high in the tournament, although she was concerned about two of the teams in her pool — DePaul and Illinois.

"I respect both of those teams," Hunter said. "It wouldn't surprise me to see both of them in the finals."

"I can't count out the teams in the other pool, however. Illinois State has been tough all year." The Redbirds, seeded first, have defeated every school in the state this season.

SIU will open the tournament Friday afternoon against Illinois. Hunter said that her team would have to display a potent offensive attack.

"Illinois plays good defense,

"We weren't saying it should be the 12th sport," McGinnis said. "We used it as an example of a revenue-producing sport."

McGinnis said he talked to Charlotte West, women's athletics director, Gale Sayers, men's athletics director, George Mace, vice president for University relations, and Debbie Hunter, women's volleyball coach, to gain knowledge about the possibility of volleyball becoming the 12th sport. He said soccer, another of the possibilities, wasn't considered in the report.

McGinnis said volleyball is growing in popularity. Besides being able to charge money for admission, McGinnis said SIU has a good facility where varsity volleyball can be played.

The men's present budget, with a projected deficit of about $289,000, may not permit volleyball or soccer to be added. Sayers said at least $20,000 would be needed to be added volleyball and sustain the sport. He said $30,000 would be needed if soccer was added.

Sayers has said he favors water polo, which would need an outlay of $8,000. In all cases, scholarship and coaching salaries represent the biggest part of the expenditure.

"If there is revenue potential in a sport, we need to ask two questions," McGinnis said. "Do you need to give out scholarships? And, do you have to have a program of national prominence?"

McGinnis said that by minimizing basic costs, including scholarships and travel expenses, volleyball and soccer may be feasible choices. He said travel could be limited to 200 to 300 miles of the campus. Travel expenses could be increased and scholarship money could be given as revenue increased, he said.

"I respect the situation we're in," McGinnis said. "It appears we need money. It is now a situation of how you approach the problem."

One possible way to add soccer or volleyball as the 12th sport, he suggested, would be to take part of the revenue from the proposed $10 athletics fee hike and appropriate it to help start the sport.

so we'll have to attack them hard," Hunter said. "They also have the disadvantage of playing a tough match against DePaul right before ours."

"If the game is going along pretty equally, we should have an advantage because we'll be more fresh and less tired."

The Salukis will also have two other matches Friday, against NIU and DePaul. Hunter said her team is prepared for DePaul, especially after playing them in 11 games this season.

"We're going to create mismatches at the net because of their size," Hunter said. "We'll use what little height we have to our best advantage."

Hunter's team has been enthusiastic about the tournament all week, something she said will make a big difference in her squad's performance.

"We're all approaching the tournament optimistically," Hunter said. "Our enthusiasm is contagious. Volleyball is a game of generating momentum, and we are generating a lot of excitement."

No matter what happens at the state tournament or any other post-season tournament, the Salukis are guaranteed one of the 20 places in the national championships at the SIU Arena Dec. 6-8. Tickets may be now ordered at the women's athletics department.
