In 1948, a thick fog descended upon the small town of Donora, Pa., reducing visibility to about 20 feet and driving hundreds of residents complaining of headaches, abdominal pains, and burning eyes and throat to the local hospital.

When the fog lifted, 20 were dead and about 7,000 residents were treated for serious health problems.

Now almost 50 years later in a role-playing case-study of the Donora air pollution incident, former Sen. Paul Simon, who was playing the role of the town mayor, had to decide whether to shut down the steel mill, which, in part, caused the incident and also employs much of the town.

The Donora incident was one of four case-studies conducted at the first annual Bertram W. Carnow Memorial Symposia. About 16 experts environmental researchers, professors, medical doctors, and environmental agency officials examined two historical incidents involving air pollution and two hypothetical ones.

"Do you potentially let more people die, or do you shut down the steel plant which employs much of the town and is their livelihood?" Bill Kurtis, a professional television journalist and the moderator for the symposia, asked.

"Well I don't want the town to wither on the vine and blow away, so I guess to say that the University will work with Greeks toward accomplishing most of those standards, but will have a zero tolerance for violations involving alcohol and hazing.

Select 2000 is a nine-part initiative for the greek system that includes maintaining high grades, making chapter houses alcohol and substance-free, and requiring hours of community service. It also details other standards like being a good neighbor or requiring an annual fire drill.

Nancy Hunter Pei, director of Student Development, said the majority of the standards will be enforced by the Select 2000 Evaluation Committee. The committee will evaluate greek organization's progress yearly and work with Greeks to help them to comply with the standards.

She said that greek organizations suspected of violations of hazing and alcohol will face administrative hearings.

"In an administrative hearing we invite both parties to come forward and respond to allegations that may or may not have occurred," Pei said. "Any Registered Student Organizations are subject to abiding by the rules and regulations of the institution, and when an RSO doesn't do that and we get word of that, they are subject to an administrative hearing."

Pei said hearings can be scheduled after Student Development witnesses an infraction or is told of a violation through a phone call, a letter, word-of-mouth or rumors.

Student leaders call for changes in academic advisement

PERSONAL TOUCH: USG looks into moving student advisement to department level.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Changes that could improve the quality of student advisement are being researched by some Undergraduate Student Government members seeking to standardize

SIUC advisement procedures.

Megan Moore, USG vice president, and Kris Bein, USG Academic Affairs commissioner, are wanting to improve the quality of student advisement at the University by encouraging all colleges to advise students at the departmental level.

"Basically, we're looking at ways colleges can move advisement to a more personalized level," Moore said.

While some of the University's colleges advise students at the departmental level, others lump students together for advisement.

Moore said a large part of standardizing departmental advisement within the University simply is making students aware that they can receive advisement from their department.

"In the College of Liberal Arts, for example, students do not always know that they can get advisement at the departmental level," she said.

However, departmental advisers within COLA cannot register students for classes. Students must register for classes through the advisement department.

Moore said the central theme of USG's proposed advisement changes seek to put more responsibility on the student, while providing more customized service.

"Our whole goal is to put the power of shaping students' college careers in their hands," she said.

Bein said that without a University standard for departmental advisement, advisers for a large

Test scores to remain admission prerequisite

PERFORMANCE INDICATOR: Administrators reject trend doing away with standardized tests such as ACT, SAT.

KIRK MOTTRAM
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC administrators say ACT scores should remain a part of admissions criteria even though some policy analysts contend that the scores have become a barrier to college entry.

Charles Rooney, analyst at FairTest, a Cambridge, Mass.-based organization that opposes the mandating of standardized tests in admissions policy, says the new trend in higher education is a move away from standardized test submission.

He said that institutions that still adhere to SAT and ACT scores as indicators of college success are erecting barriers to many qualified students.

"Using tests to distinguish between students isn't working. It has become a barrier to entry into higher education," Rooney said. "That's not how the world works. The world isn't flat. It's round. We shouldn't just lump everybody together."

Rooney is not alone in his contentions, but joins a growing number of administrators and policy examiners who have become critics of the system.

A new law in Texas guaranteeing applicants in the top-10 percent of their high school class admission to the state's public universities, and a proposal in the University of California system eliminating SAT scores from admissions criteria, typify this trend, Rooney says.

According to FairTest, the number of schools that make test scores optional has increased from 189 to 284 over the last three years.

However, SIUC remains resolute in retaining the ACT requirement, citing the need for a complete system of measurement. SIUC's admissions policy mandates that students must score a 20 or higher on the ACT. If an 18 or 19 is attained, the student must be in the top-50 percent of his or her class to be considered for admission.

Walker Allen, director of Admissions and Records, said there is a general acceptance of admissions criteria by University administrators and faculty, and that eliminating test scores would leave a gap in the system.

"There would be fewer indices in predicting student success if you were to make the ACT optional," Allen said. "There needs to be some combination of high school preparation of grades and test scores and other things."

Allen did say, however, that there may be qualified students who are excluded from school because of low test scores.

"There are students who could be successful in school even though their test scores aren't high," he said. "But, there still needs to be some sort of measurement."

Standardized tests originally were created to depict a student's success in his or her first year of college. SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs, a former standardized test developer, said ACT scores are legitimate indicators of this success.

"ACT and SAT scores are valid tests for the purposes for which they were developed," Beggs said. "The question is, how they're used."

Beggs and Allen agree that test scores by themselves do not measure accurately academic merit, but in conjunction with high school grades and activities, they do. The two also adamantly reject the efforts in Texas and California.

"I would not be in support of eliminating the requirement," Allen said. "Scores are

IF THE DOOR IS HOT: Carbondale Township firefighter Louis Herter has Lewis School first grade students feel the fire department's Safety House bedroom door for heat coming from the other side. The Safety House is a trailer that the Carbondale Township Fire Department uses to teach children lessons in fire safety.

IN CASE OF FIRE...

THINK FAST: Safety House helps elementary students learn how to survive fire in home.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A cloud of non-toxic white smoke engulfs the simulated bedroom as Deloris Rhodes' first-grade class practices what they would do in case there is ever a real fire in their homes.

As part of Fire Safety Week, the Carbondale Township Fire Department is making its rounds to local grade schools, and Monday it was the first-graders at Lewis School who had a field trip to the playground for a half-hour of fire-safety fun.

Rhodes said the Safety House has a big influence on her students, who are learning a lot about avoiding tragedy.

"Fire creates such a great picture in their minds," she said. "They are very curious about it (fire), therefore they are very good listeners. And then they learn."

This year's Fire Safety Week theme, "React fast to fire and know when to get out," is the special lesson the fire department is trying to teach the children.

The theme is illustrated by the Safety House trailer. The 4-year-old trailer, used about 20 times a year at various community functions, is just like a real home, only on a smaller scale. It has a living room, a kitchen and a bedroom that the children are allowed to go through. The department purchased the trailer through the donations of local businesses.

The Safety House trailer is an inventive tool designed to show children what procedure to follow if there ever is a fire in their houses. First, children identify fire hazards in the trailer, then they make a mock phone call. And in a dramatic finish, the trailer fills up with a non-toxic smoke that simulates the smoke that is encountered in an actual fire.

Assistant Fire Chief Harry Threlkeld said the Safety House is designed to teach the children more than simply how to leave a house that is on fire.

"The house is mainly to teach them what to do in case there is a fire," he said. "But we hope they also warn their parents about fire safety and how to call if there is ever a fire."

Fire Safety Week

Before the children enter, the house is set up to show children other types of fire hazards commonly found in homes. Some planted hazards for identification include a pile of papers left in front of the fire place in the living room, pots left on the stove with handles turned out, toys left on the stairs and extension cords put underneath the carpet.

The children are told to look around the room and point out what is unsafe in the room. One particularly skilled group found all but one hazard in each room the children went through.

While identifying dangers in the living room, one child in each group is picked to make a simulated phone call to the fire department to make sure the children understand how to report a fire.

After the hazard identification and the mock phone call, the bedroom is filled with the non-toxic smoke to simulate a fire. The smoke alarm goes

Comptroller to run for Secretary of State

Comptroller Loleta Didrickson became the third high-profile state Republican to abandon the race for U.S. Senate Friday, instead declaring her candidacy for Secretary of State.

Didrickson follows Gov. Jim Edgar and Attorney General Jim Ryan in her refusal to challenge U.S. Sen. Carol Moseley Braun, D-Ill., who is seen to be highly vulnerable due to campaign finance problems, personal controversies and a secret meeting with an infamous Nigerian dictator.

Didrickson had been courted heavily by Republican leaders to run against Braun, but in the end, decided she could not contend financially.

The Illinois comptroller, had she joined the race, would have faced conservative state Sen. Peter Fitzgerald, a millionaire businessman from Inverness, in the primary.

Republican leaders say they are concerned with Fitzgerald's candidacy mirroring the Al Salvi disaster of 1996.

Though the conservative Salvi handily swept the nomination, he was defeated in the general election by a more moderate U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. Republicans still are looking for alternative candidates.

Our Word

Waiting game

Late-afternoon departure of Illini route still in limbo

ALTHOUGH THE STUDENT-FRIENDLY departure time of the Carbondale-to-Chicago Amtrak train is safe for now, we should keep sighs of relief to ourselves until Amtrak can offer student customers more reassurance.

Used heavily by SIUC students, University of Illinois students, Eastern Illinois University students and visitors of all three schools, the Illini route always has been an important and trusted link to home on which Illinois students could depend. But for the last two years, SIUC and Carbondale city officials have lobbied to save the 4:05 p.m. departure time of Amtrak's Illini route after Amtrak officials considered altering the departure time to 6 a.m. by July 1 of this year.

This would have meant that students from Chicago or other places on the Illini route would have had to skip all of their Friday classes to catch an early train. If students had decided to attend classes and leave Saturday morning instead, they would have had a minute amount of time to spend with friends and family. Both of these scenarios were unacceptable, and Friday's press conference organized by Amtrak officials announced that the grassroots lobbying by SIUC and Carbondale officials had stymied Amtrak's plans.

HOWEVER, ACCORDING TO CARBONDALE City Manager Jeff Doherty, Amtrak is maintaining its Illini route's 4:05 p.m. departure time from Carbondale "with the understanding that it would be revisited in the future." What does this mean? It means that in spite of our recent success, Amtrak is basically telling us that we are still in danger of losing the 4:05 p.m. departure time.

Amtrak officials have not penciled in any dates on the calendar to discuss changing the Illini route's Carbondale departure time. Nor have they discussed what it would take for us to permanently keep the late afternoon departure time. Instead, they have announced an intense marketing ploy to increase ridership on the route.

BUT CONSIDERING THAT 41 PERCENT OF Illini route riders are students and 49 percent of the route's riders are under the age of 25, it is obvious that Illinois college students are Amtrak's cash cows. Appeals for more college students and their friends to use the Illini route would work best if we knew the stability of the 4:05 p.m. departure time. Why should more of us elect to use a service that may stop catering to our needs?

THANKS TO A LOT OF HARD WORK, WE ALL can look forward to planning a few more weekend get-aways on Amtrak. But in the meantime, because Amtrak officials could again consider changing the departure time in the near future, we still have a cloud hanging over our heads.

Drivers and pedestrians are lower forms of life

I've not had the opportunity to meet Mr. Josh Robinson, author of the Daily Egyptian's "Cancel My Subscription" column.

I've not met him, and yet I feel some sort of kinship with him. He made a statement in his Sept. 24 column with which I wholeheartedly agree.

"Bicyclists do not like to stop."
Duh, Josh. Duh.

As a member of the two-wheeled community in Carbondale, I freely admit I chafe at the thought of having to stop — or even slowing down. Especially for those poor, unfortunate souls trapped inside two tons of steel.

To me, riding a bike is fun. Wait, let me rephrase that. Riding a bike at top speed is fun. When someone is in the throes of great fun, that someone doesn't like having his fun interrupted against his will by someone else.

Pretend you are back in seventh grade. Perhaps you enjoyed playing your Super Mario Brothers 2 game immensely. But when Mom came in and told you to take out the garbage, chances are you answered her with a tortured "Aw, Mommmmm!"

Fun interrupted — against your will — by someone else.

Do you four-wheeled thugs honestly expect a cyclist to actually reduce his speed to the point where his forward motion ceases just because there is a "stop" sign on the corner? Those signs and those pretty red, yellow and green lights are for you lesser humans.

You see, we cyclists are better than you. It's as simple as that.

My bitterest bile, though, is reserved for the lowest form of humanity: the inattentive pedestrian.

Too many times I've been forced to reduce my speed on my way to class (or more likely, on my way to one of Carbondale's fine drinking establishments) just because a vehicularly challenged cretin decides to suddenly remove his head from his ass and check out his surroundings. When this happens, pedestrians are temporarily blinded by the halo above my helmet (yes, I wear a helmet) because they immediately stop dead in their tracks.

The surest way to get run over by a speeding cyclist is to stop moving. You see, a cyclist actually is aware of his or her surroundings. Cyclists plan ways through a crowd at least two turns in advance — and in the case of heavy idiot (oops, pedestrian) traffic, at least three turns in advance.

So by the time a pedestrian sees a cyclist, that cyclist has long since decided how he will get around the two-legged obstruction. When that pedestrian stops, it throws the cyclist's plan completely out of whack. Thus, without the proper amount of whack, the cyclist is forced to 1.) slow down, which is unlikely to happen, or 2.) take a deep breath and knock that silly pedestrian horizontal, which doesn't happen often enough. Usually the cyclist, being a quick thinker, simply comes up with an escape route without losing much speed, and all is forgotten.

WSIU needs opera broadcasts

Dear Editor,

Upon first hearing the news, I was dumb struck. That SIUC's young singers/musicians could be so suddenly deprived of something that had been an integral part of our cultural landscape for an uninterrupted and unprecedented 58 years caused surprise that a person could cynically determine the live Metropolitan Opera Broadcasts would be terminated.

Imagine, if you will, a museum director going through his galleries and putting all the masterworks of Rembrandt, Van Gogh and Picasso in the attic — only to replace them by childish sketches and paintings on velvet. Can one not reasonably say the traditions of fine music and opera, timeless art, historical architecture and classical ballet have a genuinely important place in our oftentime hum-drum lives? These are the very things that so often can genuinely uplift us and make many of lives meaningful, beautiful and ultimately worthwhile.

Last year SIUC's Karen Henrickson — undoubtedly inspired by the broadcasts — won the much-coveted prize of being a co-equal finalist in the Metropolitan Opera Auditions and sang at the "Met." Does it make sense for WSIU to deny the scores of dedicated weekly listeners and other young talented singers/musicians like Karen the opportunity of listening to the "Met" each Saturday afternoon and preventing them from dreaming of what was and, especially, what might be?

Play discusses societal attitudes toward women

STAGE: 'Alias Grace' production explores women's issues.

KELLI SMITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For SIUC graduate student Jill Hilderbrant, conveying the emotional quality of "Alias Grace" is more difficult than the acting itself. The Speech Communication Department will present "Alias Grace," a play adapted from a novel by Canadian author Margaret Atwood, Thursday through Saturday as part of Women's Safety Week.

"It's written so beautifully," Hilderbrant, who plays Grace Marks in the show, said. "The language — and wanting to capture that language the way it should come out and be portrayed to the audience — has definitely been difficult."

"Alias Grace" is based on the true story of Grace Marks, a servant girl in Victorian Canada in the mid-1800s, who was convicted of the murders of her employer and his mistress and sentenced to life in prison.

The show was adapted and will be directed by Elyse Pineau, an SIUC associate professor in speech communication.

The 15-member cast has had about one month to memorize and perform this three-act play, composed mostly of flashbacks revealed by Grace during interviews with a psychiatrist.

The psychiatrist was hired to find out the truth about the murders, after a petition was drafted to have Grace released from prison after 15 years of incarceration. Grace claims to have no recollection of the murders.

The play is set in the parlor of the penitentiary's governor, where the interviews with the psychiatrist take place. As Grace flashes back, people from her memories appear in the background.

Pineau said the play was selected as a Women's Safety Week event because many of the attitudes toward women remain the same today as they were in the 1800s.

"Attitudes about women who were sexually active, attitudes about women and violence — both done to them and by them — are certainly contemporary issues," Pineau said. "One can surely draw parallels."

Pineau has adapted novels and short stories for the stage for the past 15 years.

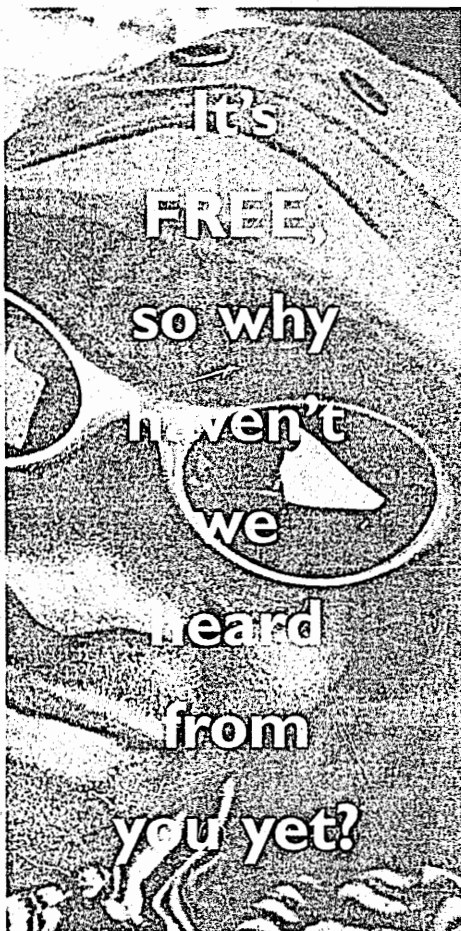

"I just did the framing of characters, very careful editing and my interpretation of the characters," Pineau said. "It's all Atwood's language."

Global warming gets attention

REUTERS

WASHINGTON — While still withholding his actual policy recommendation, President Clinton used a scientific conference on global warming to reiterate he is "convinced" that the problem is real.

Meeting at Georgetown University with some 200 experts on the problem, Clinton said: "The bottom line is that although we do not know everything, what we do know is more than enough to warrant responsible action."

The experts described sharp increases in worldwide temperatures in recent years and decades, a surge in droughts and floods, and the compelling reasons why human activity particularly burning fossil fuels can be proved as the cause.

The president even noted the event was falling on what has turned out to be the hottest Oct. 6 on record in Washington.

good measurements if they're used with other factors.

"Even the people of ACT and SAT that make the tests would agree that test scores cannot stand by themselves, but the combination with high school grades is the best combination of predictors for success in college."

Rooney disagrees with this analysis, saying that standardized tests are not good indicators of a student's success in college because they exclude certain populations. He said several studies have shown students with relatively low scores have matched the success of students with higher scores in their first year.

"(SAT's and ACT's) under-predict performance. They exclude disproportionately lower income and minority students," he said. "There is also a gender gap with the tests."

"The tests are clearly developed in white, middle-class language — that's the setting."

Beggs said the cultural bias argument was disproved a long time ago, and that the tests can be taken in languages other than English.

GAY AND LESBIAN HISTORY MONTH FOCUSES ON THE INDIVIDUALS WHOSE ACTIONS HAVE ENCOURAGED OTHERS TO COME OUT TO SOCIETY

STORY BY BRIAN EBERS

With acceptance of homosexuality growing, Kendra Sweezy says she can feel comfortable walking on campus or in Carbondale holding her girlfriend's hand and publicly expressing her real emotions.

Sweezy, an undecided sophomore from Edwardsville, assisted with the coordination of this year's Gay and Lesbian History Month.

The month is sponsored by the SIUC Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends organization.

"Basically the whole purpose of this organization (GLBF) is to let the community know that we are out there and to educate the community," Sweezy said. "We can focus on people's diversity. I am helping people to understand tolerance of homosexuality and to alleviate the ignorance."

The theme of this year's Gay and Lesbian History Month revolves around the recurrence of prominent homosexual people throughout time who have made, and continue to make, significant societal contributions while paving the road of acceptance for countless gays and lesbians.

Many of today's great artists, musicians, writers and entertainers are homosexual, Tim Rice, an undecided freshman from Cobden, said.

William Burroughs, William Shakespeare, Langston Hughes, Amelia Earhart, Melissa Etheridge and Ellen DeGeneres are some famous homosexuals from the present and past.

Homosexual performers like Freddie Mercury, of the 1970s band Queen, have gained tremendous popularity in America. Queen wrote the popular songs "We Will Rock You" and "Another One Bites the Dust."

"Some of the prominent homosexual people are helping us gain acceptance," Rice said. "In Freddie Mercury's case, a lot of non-gays enjoy the music but overlook their suspicion that he was gay."

Mercury was homosexual and died at 45 from AIDS. "It seemed like it was unmentionable that Freddie Mercury was gay. It was something not talked about much," said Katerie Tattrie, a sophomore in commercial graphics design and coordinator of Gay and Lesbian History Month.

"I think people developed a stereotype about gay men having AIDS about 20 years ago when AIDS was first coming out."

Acceptance and understanding are the foundations of the successful integration of the gay and non-gay communities, Rice said.

"There is a reason why people don't come out," Rice said. "Society allows the bombings of gay nightclubs and the [gay] bashing, and sometimes even the killings. And it's somehow written off as being acceptable behavior."

Alan Ginsberg is one of the most popular writers from what is known as the 1950s Beat Generation. Ginsberg expressed his homosexual feelings through his work.

"In a time when it (homosexuality) wasn't even spoken about, he openly wrote about it," Tattrie said.

The work of Ginsberg is considered enlightening and highly structured among some literary scholars. Rice said Ginsberg's homosexuality sometimes permeated into his writings.

"Ginsberg could express himself very well to a public audience like (many of Beat Generation writers)," Rice said. "Their work was open to interpretation. People could accept them as writers. Ginsberg expressed himself without being overt."

Greg Louganis is an Olympic gold medalist with the U.S. diving team and a champion among the gay community. Louganis is a known homosexual with AIDS.

"What makes Greg Louganis great is what he did for this country, not what he does in bed," Rice said.

"We can focus of the positive images (of historical homosexuals) and see where history has brought us so far.

"Some of those people (Louganis, Mercury, Ginsberg) are the people helping us gain acceptance. They are showing us that it is OK to be homosexual. It can be open. We can be honest."

Gay and Lesbian History Month will be going on for the duration of October. The focus of the month is not to point out prominent homosexuals, but to rather embrace equality, fairness and unity between the two communities, Tattrie said.

"Being 'in the closet' used to be done for your own safety," Tattrie said. "It was to protect yourself. But now we are encouraged by people in the public eye and other historical figures.

"We've got to let people know that its OK to be themselves, and we will be doing that this month by celebrating and honoring those people who have helped us gain acceptance in this society."

Creed honors history

INSPIRATION: Tradition of academic community dictates standards of what is expected from students.

HEATHER YATES
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Posters are being distributed throughout the campus displaying the new Saluki Creed, which was read for the first time during the New Student Convocation on Aug. 23 by Undergraduate Student Government President Dave Vingren.

The Saluki Creed is an inspirational message derived from several sources, including the SIUC statement of objectives, Code of Conduct, the National Inter-Fraternity Conference with Select 2000 and the Carolinian Creed from University of South Carolina.

Vincent Carilli, assistant director of Student Development, was involved in the development of the creed.

"One of the things I had recognized at professional conferences was some institutions had put together a creed to let the University community know what was expected of them," Carilli said. "For the past two years, we have talked about creating one for SIUC."

Carilli said the conduct of students over the last few Halloweens prompted the need for a written set of expectations of students for members of the community.

"I really think it lets people within our academic community know what we school might have to give students a generic schedule instead of a customized one.

"It's unfair to expect advisers (in a large college) to know every detail of every major," she said.

"We want to get advisement departmentalized so advisers don't need to be superhuman."

However, COLA's chief academic adviser Wanda Oakley said her college stopped letting students register with departmental advisers in an attempt to better serve students. There are 3,000 students in COLA.

"The reason we got away from departmentalized advising (including registration) years ago is that we found it was much more efficient if we all prepared to advise all students," Oakley said.

Oakley also said that when COLA used a departmental approach, students sometimes were stuck with an adviser they did not like.

In the current system, a COLA student wishing to register can request any adviser, she said.

"The other way is very narrow, and it didn't pan out for us," she said.

off, and the children are instructed to yell "fire" and then check a door for heat to see if it is safe to exit through. Because the door is hot, the children have to leave out of a second-story porch, climb down a ladder and meet at a pre-designated spot outside.

Having such a planned meeting place is one of the elements of the plan the children are told to make with their parents in case of a fire.

The children are also encouraged to go home and tell their parents about what they learned and remind them to check their smoke detector batteries.

As part of their instruction, the children are also shown a video about fire safety.

Doug Biggs, a Carbondale firefighter who assisted in setting up the smoke simulation, said the Safety House aids a lot in teaching the children.

"The Safety House is the best tool that we have for the kids," he said. "They enjoy going through the house."

"We stress the importance of staying low, meeting outside at a meeting place and not going back inside the house."

Rhodes said the fire department has made an influence on the way children would deal with a real fire crisis.

"It's an exceptional program," she said. "Since it is a visual aid concrete example, anything that the children experience, like the fire Safety House, will stick with them."

The Safety House will be at Lewis School from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, at Parrish School from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday and from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

classes they will have completed at the semester's end, and what classes are needed to complete their degree."

Bein said another part of USG's advisement improvement plan is to get each SIUC department to publish a "survival guide," which will contain information about the best times to register for classes, the last drop date, degree requirements and scholarship information.

The College of Applied Science and Arts currently publishes its own student handbook, which is theoretically identical to Moore's and Bein's idea of a "survival guide."

CASA's chief academic adviser Ratna Sinha said the degree information in the student guide likely streamlines the advisement process.

Sinha also said using both faculty and academic advisers at CASA improves the quality of her college's advisement to its students.

"More faculty involvement in career counseling makes advisement work out better here," she said.

"But different colleges will not necessarily benefit from a similar program. The reason ours works is because of the diversity of our program."

Saluki Creed

As a Saluki, I pledge to exalt beauty.

I will celebrate the uniqueness of our campus, our region, and our people. I will revere and protect the natural and cultural environment that distinguishes the campus and the region of Southern Illinois.

As a Saluki, I pledge to advance learning.

I will practice personal and academic integrity. I will participate as an active learner to the maximum of my potential. I will demonstrate concern for others by developing, encouraging, and maintaining an environment conducive to learning.

As a Saluki, I pledge to forward ideas and ideals.

I will discourage bigotry and celebrate diversity by striving to learn from differences in people, ideas, and opinions. I will embrace the ideals of freedom of civilized expression, intellectual inquiry, and respect for others.

As a Saluki, I pledge to become a center of order and light.

I will respect the rights and property of others. I will know and understand the ideals and values of this community of scholars and will strive to incorporate them in my daily life. I will fulfill my responsibility as a citizen-scholar by striving to make this campus and community a better place.

hearings have already been scheduled for Select 2000 violations.

Select 2000 makes all chapter houses on and off campus substance-free by fall 1998. This year fraternities cannot sponsor or conduct social events that include alcohol, but members of legal age may drink in their rooms.

"We have roughly three cases pending at this time," she said. "They would all three be in reference to possible alcohol violations."

Sermersheim would not expand further on the cases because they are pending.

Pei said the alleged violations are not completely related to Select 2000.

"I would suggest that it's possible that they are in violation of the University alcohol policy regardless of Select 2000 being involved or not," Pei said. "There is a time, place and manner in which you can drink if you are an RSO."

The policy states among other things that bulk containers of more than 2 1/2 gallons of (alcohol) are not permitted in any University housing except as authorized by the chancellor or an appropriate designee.

The policy also states the sale of alcoholic beverages is prohibited by state law on campus except when approved by the University. It further states that University may approve events and locations on campus in which alcohol is served "only at times and places which will not interfere with the academic functions of the University."

Harvey Welch, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, said the three pending hearings and others will be decided on a case-by-case basis by an administrative hearing officer.

"We want to look at each incident without bringing in innuendo and past history," he said.

"Frequently in these instances it is extremely difficult to validate what allegedly happened, and not having the wisdom of Solomon, if we can't have the evidence or documentation that something happened we have to assume it didn't happen even though we think it might have.

"In my belief, if there is any doubt, go with the student if you can without bringing harm to anyone else in the University."

The Select 2000 alcohol policy states that each chapter house and any annex will be substance and alcohol-free.

Greek leaders and members have questioned what constitutes an annex.

Sermersheim said an annex could be any house that greek members live in. She said houses in, which greeks dwell should not try to disguise a fraternity party.

"We want to look at what your intentions are," Sermersheim said. "If your intentions are to get around the rules, then you are probably doing something you shouldn't do."

Jean Paratore, associate vice chancellor for Student Affairs, and other administrators have said that they will determine what an annex is by using the "duck test."

"If it looks like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it probably is a duck," Paratore said.

Nick Dodd, Interfraternity Council president, said conducting hearings on a case-by-case basis is not fair.

"Your setting yourself up for a problem in the future because in one case you did this and another your doing something different," Dodd said. "With this program there has to be guidelines as far as what is and isn't acceptable, and if this happens this is the punishment."

Sermersheim said the penalties for alcohol and hazing could include probation, loss of social privileges, loss of participation in University sponsored activities or suspension or revocation of recognition by the University.

Sermersheim will be the administrative hearing officer and Pei will handle appeals. Welch said his office will oversee the decisions.

"Certainly anything that happens in our unit I will review to determine that we have been fair and given due process and those types of things," Welch said.

Administrative hearings could also be imposed on those groups that consistently fail to comply with standards other than the substance-free and no hazing policy, said Ed Jones, director of University Housing and a Select 2000 evaluation team member.

"Well, I think somewhere along the line if someone refuses to cooperate there has to be some type of consequences associated with that," Jones said. "If there's no consequences or rewards, I don't know how the program is going to work."

Jones said, however, that the central focus of the committee is to work with greeks to attain the Select 2000 standards.

"The evaluation team will come in to see if those standards are met and measure them accordingly," he said.

"It's more of a helping goal than a 'gotcha' role. I don't perceive the role of the team as being mainly disciplinary because believe it or not we were all young once. We want to help people avoid a sense of regret."

He said one such regret is the damage to property that often occurs as a result of alcohol parties.

"There is damage and destruction to houses, and that's an issue we have to address with or without Select 2000," he said. "I'm not a prohibitionist, but my concern is damage that occurs afterward."

Jones said a recently vacated house on Greek Row requires major repairs.

"The old Phi Sigma Kappa house will cost $400,000 to fix up," he said. "We went into the house at the beginning before the year started and at the end of the year, and a lot of things happened over the year."

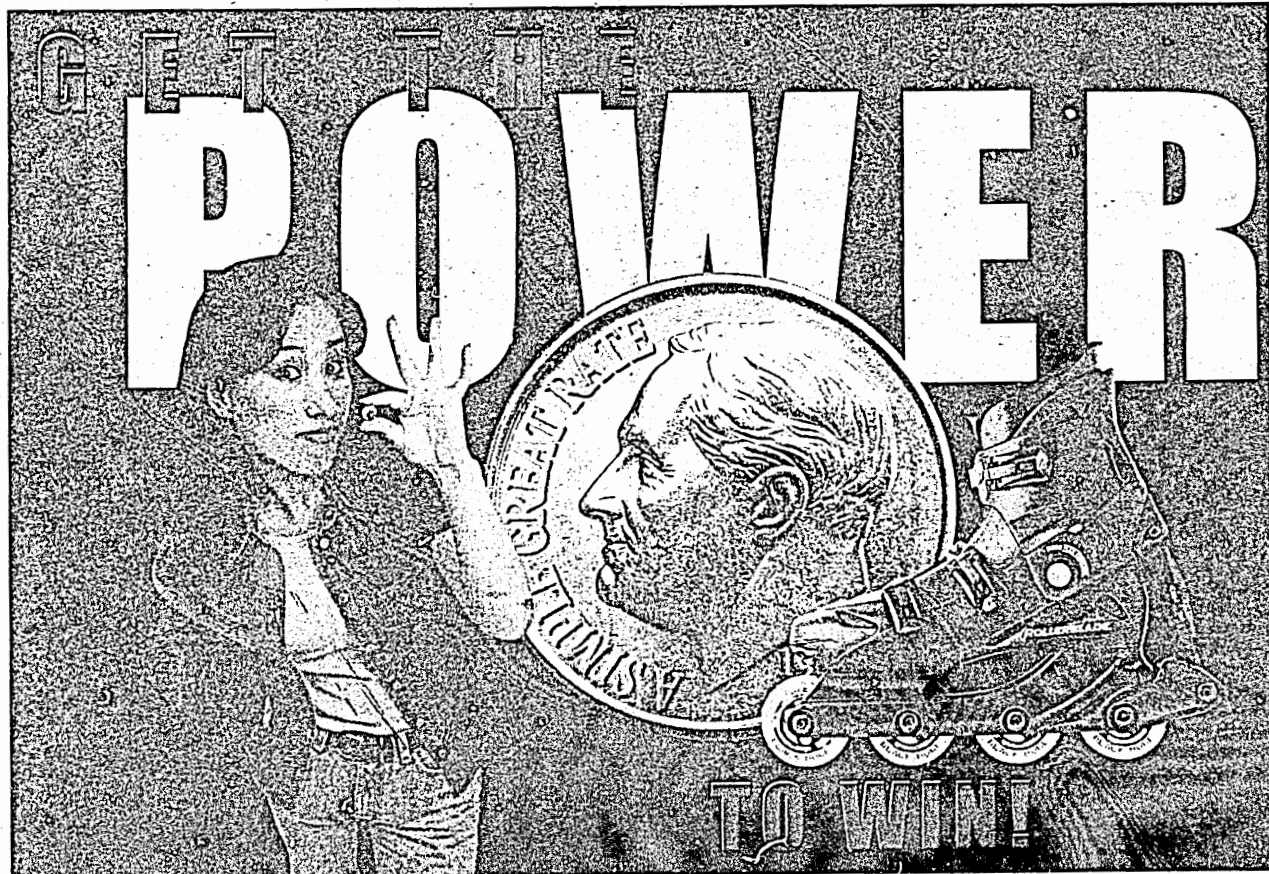

Jones said housing officials are now beginning to inspect rooms for damage because that is where much of the damage was in house 103 on Greek Row.

"So we were saying we wanted people to have freedom, but when we gave them that freedom we saw the result of it," he said.

Jones could not say for certain but said that he speculates that on-campus housing is monitored more then off-campus.

He said, that among other things, inspectors look for Select 2000 alcohol violations.

"We receive reports for on-campus housing every week, and I don't know that they have to look hard to find 32-gallon trash bags full of beer cans," he said. "When they see a lot of beer cans they start to wonder what's going on."

went through to be able to have jurisdiction over tobacco. The FDA wants to regulate tobacco as a drug.

"A drug is any article (other than food) intended to affect the structure or any function of the body," Kessler read from the 1938 Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act.

Kessler stressed that the FDA had to prove that the tobacco industry intended to affect the structure or any function of the body. The intent could be on the part of the company or the consumer.

"If you are the tobacco industry, what do you intend?" Kessler asked. "Pleasure and satisfaction. Just look at the billboards."

Kessler said the FDA discovered that the tobacco industry had done hundreds of studies on the effects of nicotine and used the findings to manipulate the amount of nicotine in cigarettes.

He also told the group about the industry using different blends of tobacco to increase the nicotine content in tobacco products.

"The higher on the stalk, the more nicotine you will find," he said. "There are dozens of nicotine combinations to choose."

SYMPOSIUM

"I'm in a real bind," Simon responded.

After consultation with the expert panel, Simon decided that the best solution would be to close the plant.

"I would have to close the plant temporarily," Simon said. "Even though it will put a lot of people out of work, I don't see any other option."

Simon said the ultimate goal of the symposia was to change public policy.

"I hope to see practical solutions that we can use and make recommendations to both state and national legislators," Simon said.

Simon said the role-playing demonstrated that realistic solutions could be found to real problems.

"Each individual person can play a real role — not an imaginary one — in improving the environment and public health," he said.

The all day event began at 8:45 a.m. and concluded nearly eight hours later. An audience of about 30 faculty, staff and other interested people attended the symposium through various parts of the day.

The symposium also was taped and will be available in the SIUC library and to interested high schools.

Simon said a questionnaire will be sent to all participants to get their input about the symposia, and a decision will be made about what to do with the information.

"I think it has been a great thing, and I am very grateful to everyone for being here," he said.

Kurtis said he was impressed with the results of the symposia.

"Rarely do we get the opportunity to consider one topic for more than 3 minutes on our nightly broadcasts," Kurtis, a former news anchorman, said. "Here we get to see it from all sides."

Kurtis said the results will benefit everyone in the future.

"For me, I'll now be better able to cover environmental issues that come up," he said. "The immediate benefit will be to high school students who will be able to use this as a debate topic."

"The long-term benefit is for the panelists, just in pushing our thinking to new limits."

expect of them," Carilli said.

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said the creed honors history and tradition.

Beggs said the main focus in developing the creed was, "who are we trying to speak to?" and "what do we want to say?"

Beggs said this is a literal creed for those entering the Saluki community.

"If you choose to join this community, we expect reasonable goals from you," Beggs said. "For me, I hope this will become a tradition of the University. The convocation program this fall was the first effort to do so, and we had a very positive response from the creed."

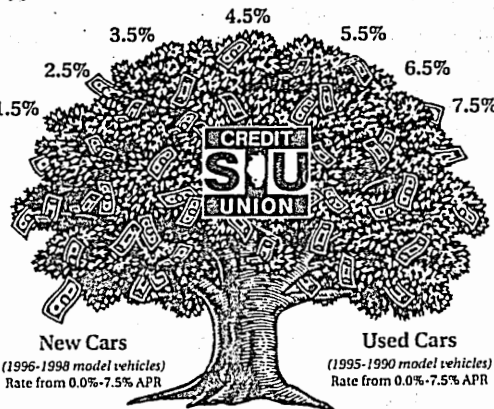

Beggs said students should keep the creed in mind as being part of the University environment.

"When I read the Carolinian Creed, it was so applicable to the University environment," Beggs said. "It provides meaningful structure, and at least from my standpoint, if I were Dave Vingren, I would be extremely excited to be the first person to read it."

Vingren said he enjoyed making a small bit of SIUC history.

"I felt it was a great honor to be the first person to read it aloud," Vingren said.

UNIVERSITY
SELF-STUDY SET TO BEGIN

Help and Guidance Sought From the University Community

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale is beginning preparations for a visit in April 1999 by a team of evaluators representing the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Institutions of Higher Education (NCA/CIHE). The results of this visit will determine SIUC's accreditation status for as long as ten years. The University has been accredited by the NCA continuously since 1913.

The first step in the preparation is a thorough self-study of all the University's activities. For this purpose, eight task forces have been created, each with from ten to fifteen members drawn from a wide spectrum of the University community. These are: Human Resources and Shared Governance, Fiscal Resources, Physical Resources, Academic Affairs, Off-Campus Academic Programs, Institutional Relations and Outreach, Planning, and Campus Climate.

The participation of as many members of the campus community as possible is needed to make the self-study project a success. As the year goes on, you will hear more about the NCA Self-Study and you will have more opportunities to provide information and express your opinions.

For more information call the Self-Study office at 453-1838; or visit our World Wide Web page at: <http://www.siu.edu/~ncasc/>

Knicks full of optimism

FIGHT: Ewing thinks his suspension in last year's playoffs robbed him of championship.

NEWSDAY

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Through the various episodes of Patrick Ewing's career, the supporting cast has changed and there have been both assented and sordid plot twists. Yet, like any formulaic but popular serial, Ewing's annual quest to win an NBA title is required to open with the same scene.

Monday, the New York Knicks' All-Star center did what he has been asked to do to open season after season: He guaranteed that this year his team would finally beat the Chicago Bulls and win it all.

"Guarantees?" Ewing said with a knowing and eye-rolling laugh. "We're kicking (butt) and taking names. We're going to win a championship."

Ewing, of course, said the same thing last year and for the first time in his career, truly believed he had the team to back him up. Ewing said Monday he still believes in that team. Believes it should have won the title and that this year, it finally will.

Last season's installment of the Ewing saga ended with him declaring that the league had robbed him of a title. It was clear Monday that those feelings have not changed. "I still haven't adjusted (to what happened)," Ewing said. "I'm still frustrated. I'm still disappointed in the fact that I didn't lose on the court instead of in the courtroom or whatever."

Ewing believes the courtroom scene was the turning point of last year's story, when Commissioner David Stern suspended five Knicks, including Ewing, for fighting or leaving the bench in Game 5 against the Miami Heat. The Knicks subsequently lost the series in seven games, meaning Ewing never got a chance to meet perennial arch-villains Michael Jordan and the Bulls. "Definitely, I feel like we're capable of beating the Bulls," Ewing said. "I felt we would have beaten them last year, but we didn't have the opportunity. Now, we have another year under our belts together. We know what to expect from each other."

Ewing, of course, wasn't the only one in the organization disappointed. Madison Square Garden President Dave Checketts, in town Monday to catch the morning practice, wasn't issuing any guarantees. "I think this team is the most criticized 57-win team in history," Checketts said. "I like our guys. But ... I think it's time for them to step up their professionalism and be consistently better and keep their goals in mind through all kinds of circumstances and difficult times. If they do that, and I think they will, they're going to have a great year."

With that, Checketts may have singled out the one element of the Ewing story that is most riveting, the hook that keeps fans tuning in season after season. The script always involves some sort of unexpected circumstance or difficulty — whether it be a coach leaving, a coach getting fired or players getting suspended at the worst time.

Only time will tell if this time, the Knicks will back up Ewing's annual promise to win it all. If past episodes are any indicator, Ewing and his supporting cast will make it interesting. Checketts singled out point guard Chris Childs: "I think Chris is going to have a great year. I expect great things from him. ... Probably (our) biggest difference will be at point guard. I don't know if that's the biggest key, but it's a key. You've got to have great play there. I think he's going to step in there and be comfortable right from the get-go. He's in terrific shape. He's really mentally ready to play."

Sir Charles comments on Garnett's deal

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Charles Barkley on 21-year-old Kevin Garnett's new $121-million deal with the Minnesota Timberwolves:

"One hundred 21 million dollars, that's a lot of damn money, isn't it? What a great country. Imagine if he could play."

Asked what he was making when he was 21, Barkley said: "I had a four-year deal for $2 million.

And that was when I was in college."

Add Barkley: He reported to Houston Rocket training camp so overweight, according to Eddie Seiko of the Houston Chronicle, one teammate asked Barkley "If he was in the first or second trimester."

Try again: Among the 6,000 nickname suggestions for the expansion NHL team that will begin play in St. Paul, Minn., in year 2000: Gnats, Frozen Ears, Corn Dogs, and — get this — Fighting Smelt.

Route 66: UCLA's 66-point scoring binge against Texas and Houston is reminiscent of the 1973 season when the Bruins exceeded 60 points in three games and averaged 49.3 points for nine consecutive games.

However, UCLA opened the season losing to Nebraska, 40-13, and closed it losing to USC, 23-13.

Tough greens drop women golfers to seventh

FAST START: Skillman fires first-round 77 for low score of tournament.

TRAVIS AUN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC women's golf team had its chances to finish higher than seventh place in the Lady Rebel Intercollegiate Golf Tournament Sunday, but the Salukis' first-round troubles continued the entire weekend.

The team traveled to the University of Mississippi in Oxford, Miss., to compete against 18 other teams in the tournament.

In the first round, the lowest score of the tournament for the Salukis was senior Stacy Skillman's 77. The Salukis ended the round with a score of 318, but were unable to improve on that score in the second round and scored a 318 again.

Freshman Jamie Schmidt said the team did not play as well as it is capable of playing. There was only about six points between the second-place team and the eighth-place team at the end of the first round, but Schmidt said the Salukis could not get their shots to fall.

"I can't say we played horribly, but we can play better," she said. "I think the course was scorable, but it was tough. The greens were hard. I think we could have scored, but we didn't."

Freshman Elizabeth Uhoff said the team simply was not used to the Bermuda greens; which is one reason the team had trouble hitting shots.

"None of us had experience playing on Bermuda grass," she said. "The greens are a lot quicker, and that was a factor in the whole tournament."

Uhoff shot an 83 in the first round and an 82 in the second round for a two-round total of 165.

Skillman said she did not have any trouble with the greens because she played in North Carolina where a lot of the courses have Bermuda grass. Instead, her biggest challenge was finishing each round as strong as she started.

Skillman shot a 77 in the first round, but her score increased slightly in the second round to a 79 for a total of 157.

"The only thing that was disappointing was that I was playing much better than my scores in both rounds," Skillman said. "I finished each round with a string of bogeys. I was in a position to score between 74 and 76, but the bogeys lowered my score."

SIUC women's golf coach Dianne Daugherty was not available for comment, and the Salukis' individual places were not available at press time.

The Salukis travel to Lexington, Ky., for the Lady Kat Invitational Saturday and Sunday.

Slim pickings slated for baseball's free agent market

UNRESTRICTED: Recent star signings have shrunk pool of available players.

HARTFORD COURANT

BOSTON — A year ago, it was shaping up as a Hot Stove League for the ages.

Future Hall of Famers Greg Maddux and Mark McGwire were expected to be among the free agents. Tom Glavine, Mike Mussina, Sammy Sosa, Ivan Rodriguez and Curt Schilling also were supposed to be peddling themselves.

It would all result in record contracts. After all, if Roger Clemens could command more than $8 million a season, how much was Maddux worth? $12 million?

And if Albert Belle would earn $10 million a year, what would McGwire be worth on a free market? $13 million?

Expansion teams were ready to spend, contenders were itching to upgrade and Monty Hall was ready to move into the commissioner's office. It would be Bud Selig's winter of discontent, when salaries would soar and small-market teams would suffer.

So as the off-season nears, why are all of the checkbooks closed? "Have you seen the list of free agents?" Boston Red Sox General Manager Dan Duquette said.

Indeed, Maddux, Glavine,

Mussina, Sosa, Rodriguez and Schilling have re-signed with their teams. There will be one legitimate star on the market: Atlanta Braves center fielder Kenny Lofton.

Even Lofton may be hard-pressed to set any salary records. He has had a good year with the Braves, but his defense was less than spectacular and his stolen base total was down (27).

So instead, teams will line up for Houston Astros right-hander Darryl Kile (19-7, 2.57 ERA), who was 52-58 in six years before '97.

With 22 pitching spots available next season, the need has never been greater. That means second-tier starters, such as Andy Benes (10-7, 3.10), Wilson Alvarez (4-3, 4.48 with the San Francisco Giants), and Ken Hill (9-12, 4.55), will draw interest. Willie Blair, 25-41 in seven years, picked a good season to win 16 games for the Detroit Tigers. Blair will be free this winter.

In the bullpen, Baltimore Orioles left-hander Randy Myers — the best closer in baseball this season — is free. Giants Roberto Hernandez and Rod Beck will be pursued. Even Milwaukee Brewers right-hander Doug Jones, who resurrected his career with 36 saves, will be popular.

But none of these pitchers are sure things. Even Myers (45 saves) is a risk at $5.

The rest of the available pitchers could consist of those in decline, such as Steve Avery, Pete Harnisch, Norm Charlton, and Doug Drabek.

Want a hitter? Good luck finding an impact player on this market. Andres Galarraga has revived his career in Denver's thin air, but he is 36. Still, he is the best available hitter.

Other free agent infielders include John Olerud of the Mets, Jay Bell and Dean Palmer of the Kansas City Royals, Mark Lemke and Jeff Blauer of the Braves, Joey Cora of the Seattle Mariners and Rey Sanchez of the Yankees. In the outfield, Lofton and Brady Anderson of the Orioles are the best. Joe Carter of the Toronto Blue Jays also is free.

Ironically, as the DH is debated during the realignment shuffle, there will be plenty of DH-types on the market: Carter, along with Cecil Fielder, Mike Stanley, Paul Molitor, Rickey Henderson, Chili Davis, Jose Canseco, and Tony Phillips.

All these players will be on hold until after the November expansion draft. Teams are not required to protect free agents, so teams may let free agents dangle until after the draft. There are reports the Astros have a verbal agreement with Kile, but will not sign him until after the draft.

Also, teams may decline to exercise the '98 option on players they believe they can re-sign, again saving a protection spot. The Red Sox will probably do that with Bret Saberhagen, who will certainly be back next season.

Johnson creating rift with Marino

NEWSDAY

It is difficult to find fault with just about anything Jimmy Johnson has done during his splendid 17-year career as a head coach. Two Super Bowl rings and a national collegiate championship tend to blunt any significant criticism.

But in the case of quarterback Dan Marino, Johnson has made a major error in judgment, one that could wind up costing him a chance at a third Super Bowl title if he doesn't come to his senses.

While Marino admittedly has lost a step at age 36, and the end of his career is within sight, Johnson's admission that he thought about benching Marino in a season-opening win over the Indianapolis Colts has opened a can of worms that the coach has been both unable, and unwilling, to close entirely.

The rift between the coach and quarterback is simmering just below the surface, and it's anyone's guess when it will finally blow a hole in the team.

Next week, next month, next year. It's only a matter of time.

And that's too bad, because Johnson should have stuck to his initial reasoning, for taking the Miami Dolphins job in the first place, namely that he had a Hall of Fame quarterback to build a Super Bowl contender around.

But it appears now that Johnson is simply waiting for an opening to replace Marino with backup Craig Erickson, whom Johnson recruited at the University of Miami.

Of course, it is every coach's prerogative to say what's on his mind, even if it concerns a future Hall of Fame player approaching the sunset of his career.

But Johnson, a brilliant man and a brilliant coach who knows that every word he says has a purpose behind it, certainly realized that talking openly about benching

Marino was tantamount to greasing the skids for the quarterback's eventual departure, regardless of his claim that he simply wanted to express confidence in Erickson.

Johnson repeatedly has attempted to downplay his remarks and has grown weary of telling people that he has no immediate plans to switch to Erickson.

But the controversy he ignited won't go away, and the rumors will continue to swirl around Marino's immediate future.

The situation has even led to ridiculous and unsubstantiated suggestions that Marino will be waived by Tuesday's 4 p.m. trade deadline, something that simply will not happen. Nor will Marino be traded.

Buccaneer punter injured

Tampa Bay Buccaneers punter Tommy Barnhardt suffered a fractured collarbone during Sunday's game against Green Bay.

Barnhardt was hurt in the third quarter while making a tackle on a return by Green Bay's Bill Schroeder. He likely saved a touchdown, but the Bucs still suffered their first loss of the year, 21-16.

The extent of the injury has not been determined, but the Bucs were not forced to punt for the remainder of the game. Barnhardt averaged 45.8 yards on five punts on Sunday and is averaging 45.0 yards per kick this season.

Giants win game, lose starting quarterback

New York Giants starting quarterback Dave Brown aggravated a pectoral strain on the right side of his chest during the second quarter of Sunday's game against the Dallas Cowboys and was forced to leave. He did not return.

Brown was 2-of-7 for eight yards at the time of the injury. For the season, he has completed 91-of-171 passes for 1,009 yards, with five touchdowns and three interceptions.

Brown was replaced by Danny Kanell, the Giants' fourth-round pick in the 1996 draft. Kanell went 10-for-17 for 101 yards.

The Giants defeated the Cowboys, 20-17.

Youngstown State takes top Division I-AA spot

The Youngstown State Penguins moved into the No. 1 spot in the Sports Network Division I-AA poll after a 31-0 whitewashing of Indiana State Saturday.

The Montana Grizzlies, who had held the top spot for the entire season, lost Saturday to Wyoming 28-13.

The Penguins garnered 56 of the possible 93 first-place votes, while the second-place Grizzlies collected 24.

Youngstown State, winners of the national title in 1991, 1993 and 1994, picked up 2,285 points from the pollsters, made up of the TSN selection panel and Division I-AA sports information directors.

The Grizzlies slipped to 3-1 but still recorded 2,217 points in this week's poll.

Villanova University crushed James Madison 49-17 to move to 4-0 and climb one spot to No. 3 in the new poll. The Wildcats collected 2,107 points and eight first-place votes in this week's poll.

McNeese State climbed from 10th to fourth in this week's poll, recording three first-place votes and 1,942 points. The Cowboys defeated Arkansas Tech 55-7.

Western Illinois also was able to climb in the rankings, jumping from ninth to fifth after a 45-6 drubbing of Southern Utah. The Leathernecks received one first-place vote after upping their record to 4-1.

The University of Delaware, Tennessee State University, Southern University and Eastern Illinois University rounded out the top 10.

Runner focuses on consistency

CROSS COUNTRY:

McClelland was state champ in two events as a junior at Rushville High.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC cross country runner Matt McClelland has been labeled as a model of consistency by Saluki coach Bill Cornell because of his solid performance in four races this fall.

McClelland has contributed two top-10 finishes this year and has been the Salukis' No. 4 runner or better in every meet.

At the Saluki Invitational Saturday, McClelland finished in fifth place out of 97 runners with a time of 25 minutes and 47 seconds to help the team win the Saluki Invitational.

In the first meet of the year, Sept. 6 at Carbondale, McClelland contributed an eighth-place finish out of 32 runners with a time of 26:07 to help the Salukis defeat the University of Kansas and Lindenwood College.

"Matt is a very consistent runner who keeps improving and has continued to step up for us," Cornell said.

One reason McClelland has continued to be consistent is because he has avoided injuries and stayed mentally positive.

"I try to stay healthy with both the emotional and physical part of it," McClelland said. "I want to stay injury-free and continue to get better."

McClelland said running has built his character and keeps him busy.

"Running makes me stronger mentally and physically," McClelland said. "It also keeps me out of trouble and allows me to travel and see different places."

Cornell said McClelland's personality makes him easy to coach and get along with. "He's a very easy-going guy," Cornell said. "He's a quiet type of person and is very conscientious about being successful."

McClelland, a sophomore in agriculture education from Rushville, said his goals for this year include a successful showing at the Nov. 1 Missouri Valley Conference meet.

"Personally, I would like to go under 25 minutes and make all-conference," McClelland said. "I want the team to win conference and would like to have all five guys in the top 10."

Freshman teammate Chris Owen said McClelland is always prepared for the meet.

"He's always pretty relaxed and laid back before the meet, but he is a tenacious racer and great competitor," Owen said. "When the race starts, he's ready to rock and roll."

One of the main reasons McClelland came to SIUC was because of the cross country program and the school environment.

McClelland attributes his easy adaptation to SIUC partly to Cornell.

"He's a really good coach who has taught me that he can only teach training, so he lets us learn to go on our own a lot," McClelland said.

McClelland said staying focused on both academics and athletics can be a difficult task, but it is not as hard as it may seem.

"At times, it can be hard because you travel so much, but if you keep yourself straight-laced and attend your classes, it's not that hard," McClelland said.

McClelland was the Illinois High School Association cross country and 1600-meter state champion in Class A competition his junior year in high school. He also led Rushville High School to a second-place finish in the state meet in track and field his senior year.

Cornell said he expected good things to come from McClelland when McClelland first arrived at SIUC.

"We looked for high things after he won state in both cross country and track," Cornell said. "He is used to winning and has continued to be very successful."

McClelland started running in grade school, when his physical education teacher recognized McClelland's potential.

"In sixth grade, my P.E. teacher told me to go out for track and I ended up going to state in the mile and 800-meter races," McClelland said.

McClelland said he enjoys spending his recreational time in the outdoors.

"When I'm not running I like to hunt, fish and farm back at my home in Rushville," McClelland said.

After McClelland graduates he plans on leaving Carbondale and getting into education.

"I plan on going back home after graduating and teach either ag or science, and help my dad work on the farm," McClelland said.

McClelland and the Salukis will not be in action until Oct. 18 at the Chili Pepper Invite in Fayetteville, Ark.

Men's golf team drives to fifth-place finish

IMPROVEMENT: SIUC ends tournament just four shots away from third place.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC men's golf coach Leroy Newton views his team's fifth-place finish Saturday at the 24th annual Northern Iowa Classic in Marion, Iowa, as bittersweet.

The Salukis finished fifth in a 13-team tournament field with a three-round total of 940. That finish is the highest for the Salukis this season, and comes one week after they placed 16th in an 18-team field at the D.A. Weibring Intercollegiate at Illinois State University in Normal.

SIUC opened the tournament by firing a team score of 314 and closed out Friday afternoon by shooting a 315. The Salukis then returned to the par-72 course Saturday with their lowest score of 311 for SIUC's best performance of the year.

But Newton said his team could have finished higher had its members played more consistently.

"We were tickled to death to get fifth, but realistically, we could have gotten third," Newton said. "The kids are starting to play. As soon as I figure out which five are going to play the best, we're in the hunt."

"We just didn't put three rounds together like we're capable of. But we're getting close."

The finish was also a slight disappointment for Craig Castrale, a junior from West Frankfort.

"I was pretty happy with the finish," Castrale said. "But if we had been four shots better as a team, we would have finished third. If everybody could have played well, we could have won the tournament."
