More bikes and parking spaces

A sailboat may be useless as transportation on campus, but bicycles appear to be gaining in popularity although there are more parking spaces for cars, including the new ones on the University School tennis courts. The new parking fees may help alleviate the problem for decal holders.

Transferable auto sticker to go on sale

Transferable car pool parking permits will be available when 1968-69 decals go on sale Tuesday at SJU.

Parking Section Supervisor August LeMarchal announced Friday that up to six persons can chip in for a single pool permit at the regular blue ($45) or red ($25) permit price.

He said each of the pool buyers will be issued a numbered sticker and the entire group will be given one matching number disc which can be switched from car to car. The disc is to be attached to the rear view mirror of the car being used by the pool on any given day.

No provisions were made for pool permits when SIU's new parking fee schedules were announced last month.

Keene invites SIU students to participate

By Wayne Markham

Greater student involvement with city affairs was the chief topic of discussion at a recent meeting between Carbondale Mayor David Keene and Student Body President Sam Panayotovich.

Keene said that students exert much influence on the community and the University. "Students are interested in this town, they know the problems, they really live here," he added.

The mayor had praise for Panayotovich and said he hopes to meet often with student leaders in order to help close the gap which has existed between the academic and civic communities.

At the meeting, Panayotovich submitted the name of a candidate for the post of Student Senate representative to the Carbondale City Council.

Ray Osmus, a sophomore from Oaklawn, Ill., will now be subject to appointment by the City Council and the Student Senate, both of which are expected to take up the matter next week.

While commenting on the meeting with Panayotovich, Keene said he disagreed with the "average" citizen who believes that college students all have long hair and are some sort of hippies.

"Today's young people are full of vigor, they're young and they're sharp, we need them to sharpen us," the mayor said.

He invited students to participate more in city government and bring their suggestions to the city council members.

Keene was critical of people who viewed today's students by standards set in the past.

"One of my friends always talks about when he was a student at the University of Illinois, but he forgets that was 40 years ago."

Even protest must be viewed with a different set of values, he said. "The establishment has just as big an obligation to listen as young people have to protest."

"It seems to me, the establishment in the past has needed hearing aids," Keene said.

City Attorney awaits word on bribe case

Carbondale City Attorney George Fleerlage said Friday he is awaiting word from the Illinois Liquor Control Commission on whether an investigator will be sent here to check alleged bribe attempts to Mayor David Keene.

Fleerlage said he told Howard G. Cartwright, chairman of the liquor commission, he felt that his office should have all of the background information on the alleged bribe attempts and on any connection they may have with state liquor laws.

"Cartwright said he would have a member of the commission call me and set up a possible meeting," Fleerlage said. As of Friday afternoon, Fleerlage had not received any further word from the commission's office.

Jackson County States Attorney Richard Richman said that he will present all of the information concerning alleged bribe attempts to the grand jury Oct. 10.

Shoplifting effects outlined to continue through October

By Mary Frazer

"Just for fun" is the response voiced most often by youngsters as they face the judge on shoplifting charges. A panel of three men met with students Thursday in Lentz Hall to discuss the causes and effects of shoplifting among young persons. Members of the panel were moderator Fd Rosen, Carbondale merchant, Ed Helton, director of the Jackson County Service Bureau and Peyton H. Kuncce, circuit judge.

The purpose of the seminar, as expressed by the speakers, was to create an awareness of the seriousness and consequences of shoplifting. In return, it was their hope to decrease shoplifting, especially among young adults.

A campaign to stamp out shoplifting conducted in Champaign resulted in a 70 per cent decrease in theft.

Rosen astonished his listeners by saying shoplifting today costs $4 billion a year, and that unless the public is educated in this area, it will continue to skyrocket.

"The big tragedy is the effect shoplifting will have on one's future," Helton said. "A person's police record will always be available for public examination."

Judge Kuncce, addressing the audience in terms of personal experiences with shoplifters, said parents and family suffer as much as the youngsters.

Speaking in behalf of the laws and law enforcers, Kuncce said laws are made to protect persons, property and the right to enjoy freedoms.

The speakers urged young persons to become aware of their laws and to abide by them. They asked them to think seriously at the time about taking something for nothing and paying for it later by fine and imprisonment.

Student Senate: common ground

Student government has long been an issue of debate, much of it criticism by students and much of it justified. SIU's Student Senate has been no exception.

There is an interesting dichotomy of charges, one centering on the belief of the more moderate-minded populace that student government is a haven for the "hippie" element and violent dissidents.

On the other end of the spectrum are charges by the more outspoken "activists" that student government is, at best, ineffectual.

Both charges contain some measure of justified criticism, but both have been the stumbling blocks to any positive action in the past.

This year there has been preliminary indication that the two elements may, for the first time in memory, meet on common ground.

In Tuesday's Daily Egyptian, Student Body President Sam Panayotovich and Senate Chairman Pete Rozzell outlined their views in an attempt to present the overall picture of campus politics '68.

Both indicated that they hope to moderate the retort of the dissident factions, while involving the larger student body in its government.

Neither is apparently willing to ignore any faction for the sake of immediate gains and both expressed themselves with sobering responsibility.

While no one can predict what will happen this year, with the spectre of last year's disruptions still visible, it can be said of the new student government leaders that at least they appear to recognize a responsibility to all students.

If student government is to be successful, a large measure of its success will depend on how well the ruling hierarchy can channel both sides to common goals, responsibly.

Court outlines student rights

By Gus Lumpe

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat)

A student is not necessarily entitled to be represented by an attorney in disciplinary proceedings.

Neither is he entitled to a public hearing as part of the proceedings.

A student also is not necessarily entitled to confrontation and cross examination of witnesses against him, or to be warned about self-incrimination.

The four judges of the U.S. District Court for Western Missouri in a document issued last week outlined "standards of procedure and substance in review of student discipline in tax-supported institutions of higher learning."

They said there is no "general requirement" to apply any of the features of federal criminal jurisprudence to student discipline cases.

The order by Judges William Becker, John W. Oliver, William R. Collinson and Elmo B. Hunter had been anxiously awaited by college and university officials in the state.

It was prompted by two cases before the court in Kansas City in which students sought reversal of disciplinary actions by their schools, and by similar cases in many other jurisdictions.

Expecting more similar cases, the Kansas City judges felt enunciation of standards to be observed in disciplinary proceedings would be helpful to the courses as well as to students and schools.

Some college and university officials had feared such a decree from the court would amount to "judicial meddling" in the affairs of higher educational institutions.

The judges said "the courts should exercise caution when imperturbed to intervene in the important processes and functions of education.

"A court should never intervene in the processes of education without understanding the nature of education," they added.

"It is imperative that educational institutions not be limited in the performance of their lawful missions by unwarranted judicial interference," they said.

"Only where the erroneous and unwise actions in the field of education deprive students of federally protected rights or privileges does a federal court have power to intervene in the educational process," the judges said.

The court said an "analogy of student discipline to criminal proceedings against adults and juveniles is not sound."

To impose on the academic community "the intricate, time consuming, sophisticated procedures, rules and safeguards of criminal law would frustrate the institution's teaching mission, the judges said.

Speaking throughout only about tax-supported institutions, the judges said attendance is voluntary. By enrolling, a student binds himself to academic and behavioral standards set up by his school as "reasonably relevant to the lawful missions, processes and functions of the institution."

Only in severe cases of student discipline for alleged misconduct, resulting in expulsion or long-term suspension, are the institutions obligated to give the student "minimal procedural requirements of due process of law."

These minimal requirements as outlined by the judges entitle the student to adequate notice in writing of the specific charges and of the nature of the evidence against him and an opportunity for a fair hearing. Also, a disciplinary action must be based on substantial evidence.

The judges noted that institutions and interested organizations currently are devising and recommending procedures and policies in student discipline based on standards which in many instances exceed the requirement of due process.

Public Forum

The Daily Egyptian encourages free discussion of current issues through editorials and letters. Editorials are written by members of the student news staff and by students enrolled in journalism courses and represent opinions of the author only. Readers are invited to express their opinions in letters, which must be signed with name, address and telephone number, preferably typewritten, and be no longer than 250 words. Letter writers should respect the generally accepted standards of good taste and are urged to make their points in terms of issues rather than personalities. Acceptance for publication will depend upon the limitations of space and the timeliness and relevance of the material. It is the responsibility of the Daily Egyptian to determine content of the opinion pages. Other material on pages four and five includes editorials and articles reprinted from other newspapers, syndicated columns and articles, and interpretive or opinion articles authored locally.

By Whit Bush

At midnight on August 20, the Russians took a page from the manual of Hitler's panzer legions and executed a lightning blitzkrieg upon the people of Czechoslovakia. Sweeping inward from every point of the compass with clanking T-78 tanks the troops quickly consolidated their invasion.

Strewn behind them in the wake of their trespass they left leaflets which read:

"CZECHOSLOVAK BROTHERS - Counter-revolutionary forces, hostile to the Czechoslovak people, with the support of the Imperialist center, have developed a furious attack against the Socialist order in that they proceeded too fast in effecting reforms.

"The Czechoslovak people have been threatened; the imperialists who have already once sold Czechoslovakia to Hitler, wish to raise in your nation a Capitalist regime; to return the factories and plants to the Czechoslovakian bourgeoisie, to wrest Czechoslovakia from the Socialist camp, and to leave her defenseless before the face of her most bitter enemy—the West-German Revanchists.

"You—our brothers in blood, in class, and in spirit, have come into misfortune. And when a brother is in trouble, one must rush to help him. For us, the Soviet People, there is nothing dearer than the strong and unshakeable friendship of the Soviet and Czechoslovak peoples.

"In the name of this friendship and in the cause of Socialism, we are giving you the hand of brotherly help."

A witness to the invasion was Joseph Kupcek, head of the Russian section in the Department of Foreign Languages at SIU. He was conducting a tour of 25 SIU Russian-study students in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia when the military transgression took place.

Kupcek says the first indication he had of the invasion was the sound of heavy vehicles in the street below his hotel window around midnight amid cries of, "The Russians are coming, the Russians are coming."

"I couldn't believe it, for the moment the enormity and seriousness of the situation evaded me. Then my mind began to function and I began to realize what the Czechs and Slovaks would now suffer for trying to effect a true democratic government in their country."

Russian leaflet

Kupcek holds Russian leaflet which says, "Czechoslovakian Brothers: at the cost of enormous sacrifices in May 1945 we helped free you from Facism. The friendship of our people has been strengthened by our mutual bloodshed. We are here to help you."

Confrontation

"Why did you come?" a Slovak woman asks invading Russian soldier on a street in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia. The Russian did not reply. (Photo by Joseph Kupcek).

Russians steal tactics from Hitler's divisions too felt a need to ask why had they come.

"I walked across the street to a Russian officer who was obviously in charge of our sector of Bratislava and asked him in Russian why had they invaded Czechoslovakia.

"He did not for one moment suspect I was an American and replied, 'We came here to fight the counter-revolutionary forces in Czechoslovakia and to reorient your people. We ask you to join us.'"

Professor Samuel P. Huntington of Harvard University said in a recent issue of Newsweek: "Soviet foreign policy has clear goals; they have a formulated ideology and guiding doctrines. The current situation in Czechoslovakia only confirms this."

Kupcek concurs in this and says, "There can be no doubt the Russians' aim is to change other countries to their ideology and to maintain that change through force if necessary."

Although Kupcek favored and supported the liberalization of the political climate in Czechoslovakia, he did feel that possibly they proceeded too fast in effecting reforms. "They went too far, too fast," he explained. "Reforms were being made on three levels: internal, economic, and international. The last being the most dangerous—their eyes were turning to the West."

Kupcek is optimistic on the survival of the country and his projected analysis reflects it.

"Czechoslovakia has not made the mistake of trying armed resistance which would stand no chance of success. If the Czechoslovak people would have failed in their efforts to achieve a negotiated settlement, it's very likely they would have continued to resist.

"In Czechoslovakia today there are all the ingredients of successful nonviolent resistance: a united people, a strong injection of Western ideals of freedom, a courage born of intense national tradition, a quite extraordinary degree of restraint and calm in the face of crisis and a desperate determination not to allow themselves to be pushed back into their former subservience."

There is some irony in the fact that on October 28, 1968, the 50th anniversary of the formation of Czechoslovakia will take place and the occasion will be marked by the proclamation of the country as federation. With this formal act the Czech and Slovak peoples will become officially united. "The people of Czechoslovakia told us they felt 'new-born' under the liberalizing influence of the Dubcek government," Kupcek said, "and they told us when we left their stricken country 'to take our pictures and tell America what has happened here.' And we have done that," he concluded.

Slide lecture starts exhibit

A slide lecture by a representative of the Art Institute of Chicago will inaugurate the first exhibit of the 1968-69 season at SIU's Mitchell Gallery, to run Oct. 2-31, according to Evert Johnson, curator.

The first exhibition will be a selection of 46 items of German expressionist prints and drawings, selected from the Art Institute's collection. Dennis Adrian, an assistant curator at the Institute, will give the gallery lecture Oct. 2 at 8 p.m. in the Home Economics Building auditorium. Refreshments will be served.

The works reflect the "tendency on the part of north European artists toward emotional introspection" rather than the external analysis of nature," Johnson explained. "The expressionists used linear distortion and strong, symbolic color to exploit the mystic, sometimes macabre and usually highly charged idea of the nature of 'the inner man.'"

Visiting hours at Mitchell Gallery are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Scholarship winners

An estimated 250 scholarship winners arriving at SIU have received invitations to attend a picnic from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday at Dome 6 on Lake-on-the-Campus. The event is sponsored by Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary scholastic groups for women and men students, respectively. Students averaging 4.5 or better in grades during their freshman year are invited into membership.

A design consultant since 1962, Baldwin has taught at San Francisco State College, the San Francisco Art Institute and the California College of Arts and Crafts. He has also served as designer or researcher on product development for a number of industrial concerns.

Anderson says internationalism needed at SIU

John O. Anderson, new dean of International Services at SIU, says a main objective of his division is to make international activities an important enrichment element in academic life.

"Of course," said Anderson, "many activities have been in progress for years, with our international students and faculty people who have worked in other countries going into Communities to meet with groups, but we must pay particular attention to turning these resources inward to strengthen the University itself."

Anderson said "we live in a multi-racial and multi-cultural kind of world" and that men must learn to relate to this. "If they don't we're in serious trouble," he said. Anderson succeeds William J. McKeefery as dean. McKeefery is the new dean of higher education.

Anderson said the 900 students from foreign countries on the Carbondale campus and the large number of faculty people who have served or are serving in overseas positions create a real potential for enrichment of both curriculum and special program activities at the University.

The development of the kind of program that will make their experiences available, he said, would constitute an important educational resource not only for those in the University's academic community but also in the area the University serves. A University program of this kind, he emphasized, adds another dimension that is critical in the world today and one that SIU students have a right to expect.

"We obviously live in a time of rapid change and graduates of universities such as ours, are now going into the employment markets that pay a premium for individuals with international knowhow," Anderson said. "Anything we can do to make use of these international resources will strengthen our programs and make it possible to turn out graduates better prepared to meet the world of today."

Anderson was chief of party of SIU's educational team in Nepal for two years, from 1966 to 1968. He was born in Tremonton, Utah, and came to SIU in 1950, the year he obtained his Ph.D. degree in speech and hearing pathology at Ohio State University. At SIU he has served as associate dean of the Graduate School, where he directed the Office of Research and Projects, and was University director of the SIU Communications Media Services at the time he was chosen to head SIU's Nepal project.

Professor John King returns from Vietnam

John E. King, chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Foundations at SIU, spent five weeks in South Vietnam helping educators with plans to establish a stronger university system.

King, who left Aug. 13 on the mission for the U.S. Agency for International Development, met with the minister of education, rectors of the three state and two private universities, and other educators in seminars held at Nha Trang, and spent time in Saigon and other points in the Asiatic nation.

King said the seminar dwelt on the role of the Vietnamese universities-- the reforms needed, and administrative patterns and statutes required for an adequate university system. At present there is no legalized university system, he said. Sometimes there is just an extension of the Hanoi system, put into effect by professors who were among the two million persons who left North Vietnam when the country was partitioned in 1954.

King said he worked and will continue to work on development of a set of statutes that could make a continuing university system possible. At present, he explained, the university system operates through a set of official directives which originate from the chief of state, minister of education or other high sources.

He said the Vietnamese are interested in developing a centralized registration system, the concept of a board of governors, and student personnel services in their colleges. They also are interested in modifying curricula to meet manpower needs of the country and to help the country adapt more quickly to modern technology.

King said the country needs to develop more literature through its own creativity and translations, as very few book titles are in the Vietnamese language.

Kamey, Steven Parker, Pam Pollak and Charles Robertson comprise the Southern Dancers under the direction of W. Grant Gray, professor of dance and theater.

Purchasing for SIU long, involved job

Such items as flying squirrels and a revolving stage may be just what SIU needs. But who takes care of such requests?

Don Ward, purchasing officer for the Carbondale campus, said these are only a couple of the requisitions which are handled by the Purchasing Department.

Ward said, "The purpose of this department is to aid directly or indirectly and assist institutional and research programs and also student affairs."

Ward, 1958 graduate of SIU, said the department has the responsibility toward buying all necessities for SIU except textbooks and construction materials. The purchasing of textbooks is done by the library under state law and construction materials are purchased through the Architect's Office.

According to Ward, approximately 35,000 purchase orders are processed in the department each year. He noted that all are not filled by the department, but that nearly 1,600 purchase orders are requisitioned each month by the various purchasing agents.

The purchasing agents Ward referred to are eight members of his staff who buy for the University. Ward said two teams help make, direct, process and oversee purchase orders. The men are split into two groups: two assistants work with him, and three other men work under each assistant.

One group handles purchases for the maintenance needs at SIU. These include invoices which deal with physical or structural needs, supplies, renovation, services or removal requests. The other team, he said, handles purchases for instructional and student-affairs purposes, supplies, food and furniture.

"Each of these eight buyers handles some 300 or more purchase orders each month," Ward said.

Ward noted that there is a lengthy process in the completion of a request for some part or item. He added that the campus departments often help out by keeping track of what they need and seeing that it is delivered in good condition and within a short time.

Once an item has been delivered Ward said, the department must check on its invoice accuracy. Any mistakes made must be corrected and then distribute the commodity where it is needed. He identified the various destinations as purchasing department, central-receiving, general store, or surplus property.

Ward noted that some of these divisions may have what items are needed because these divisions often buy large quantities at a lower price. He commented that the many items are bought to alleviate yearly expenses and to avoid long delays which may result due to delivery.

The budget, Ward explained, is divided into different areas. One area is salaries. This expenditure takes up half of the money appropriated to the purchasing department. Of the money that remains, most is spent on the needs of the different departments on campus.

Ward pointed out the purchasing department is essential for the upkeep and welfare of the campus. "From the rental of computers to the buying of paper clips, the department functions as a professional business with personal responsibilities which must be attended to," he said.

University Center hub of campus even during breaks

Although most parts of a campus are usually deserted between terms, the University Center building at SIU stays busy even during break periods.

This hub of activity becomes the site of seminars, institutes, schools, and meetings between terms.

The break at the end of the summer quarter is especially busy—for the past eight years the building's meeting rooms have been used for the two-week Illinois Banker's school. The 150 men attending stay in a campus residence hall and eat in the University Center cafeteria.

Other groups using the facilities during the break include the Illinois Department of Public Health, the Little Egypt Dental Research Group, and a meeting of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

Both student and outside groups can use the University Center facilities, but outside groups must be sponsoring their program in conjunction with the University.

In addition to programs, building maintenance is a major project during the breaks. A full janitorial staff works to shampoo carpets, wash windows, and perform other cleaning jobs which can't be done during the quarter.

Recreational facilities such as the game room and bowling alley are closed during the break but the bookstore is kept open to serve persons working on campus.

Museum display

These implements of living during pioneer days in the nation's history are on display in the "Serendipity Room" at the SIU museum. Visiting hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays.

Four local programs set for WSIU (FM)

Four new locally produced programs will be heard on WSIU(FM) Radio (91.9 mc) beginning Sept. 30.

Mondays from 2 to 3 p.m., "Southern Illinois Calling" will give area residents an opportunity to air their opinions on important topics of the day via telephone with host Charles Lynch of the SIU Broadcasting Service.

A lecture series, "American Government," will be heard twice weekly on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 2 to 2:50 beginning Oct. 1. Stephen Wasby, assistant professor of government at the University, will be featured.

On Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 8, "Voices of Black America" will seek to explore the feelings and attitudes of Negroes toward the society in which they live. Each week the program host and producer, John H. Holmes, will conduct an interview with a special guest. Holmes, himself a Black American and a veteran of combat in Vietnam, is assistant to the director of the SIU Radio Tape Network.

Rounding out the week's schedule of new programs will be a novel offering on Friday afternoons called "Keep the Devil Singing," a story-line show with folk music. The writer and main character in the script is John Gardner, guitarist - singer-novelist-medievalist and SIU associate professor of English.

Gardner plays the role of the Devil in a series of tongue-in-cheek scripts whose central character, "Elias Jones," delays being hauled off to the Nether Regions by tricking the Devil into telling him the history of the folk song.

Gardner will be assisted by Brent Locke Riley, writer of children's literature and collector and singer of folk songs, by the noted Irish poet Thomas Kinsella, and by anthropologist Peter Munch.

Greek groups here to stay

From all indications, fraternities and sororities at SIU serve their purpose and are here to stay.

President Delye W. Morris, in his message to new students, contended, "the Greek letter organizations are only as worthwhile as their members make them, and their values and judgments will be indelibly written into the organization's record of achievement."

Others at SIU agree. The Commission of Social Fraternities and Sororities, an investigatory group started in the spring of 1966 to evaluate the Greek letter system, found a number of positive factors in favor of their functions. The report states, "the Greek system does make many contributions, and over the course of the past several years there has been noticeable improvement in several areas such as scholarship, social behavior, and the number of students interested in joining."

Further support comes from the Faculty Council. In its report last January, that group acknowledged, "even though only six percent of the SIU student body is associated with the Greek system, many activities supported by the University could not be successfully continued without the assistance of the fraternities and sororities."

Chapters have strengthened themselves in the areas of leadership, discipline, and civic responsibility. According to Kenneth E. Varcoe, acting Coordinator of Student Affairs, there are several areas in which the fraternity or sorority student gains experience where the typical student does not. "Greek members are getting judicial and executive experience as members of chapter judicial boards, student government, and the Pan-Hellenic Council and Interfraternity Council."

One obvious limitation to chapter membership is size. The Commission Reports that 900 students attended rushes last year, but only 300 were invited for membership. The report also calls attention to the fact that student enrollment was up nearly 2,000 during this period, limiting opportunities for joining organizations. The Student Government conducted a poll last spring and the result was a two-to-one margin in favor of more Greek societies.

Since 1960, chapter houses have attempted to make a name for themselves. Delta Chi, Phi Sigma Kappa, Sigma Pi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, and Theta Xi fraternities gained living units that year, as did the Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Zeta, Sigma Kappa and Sigma Sigma Sororities.

Three years later, Alpha Phi Alpha, Kappa Alpha Psi, and Phi Kappa Tau fraternities, along with the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, moved into separate residence halls on Greek Row.

The most recent addition is I.E.A.C., the Little Egypt Agricultural Co-operative, which was introduced on a conditional basis last year.

Each group has its own system of initiation. The first is rushing, where first-year students are invited to chapter houses for meals, teas, parties, or smokers. Accepted rushees are extended a bid, or invitation to join, which they may accept or reject.

An initial probationary period follows. This period stresses participation, reward and punishment duties, and scholastic achievement. Because the prospective student is pledged to join, this period is called pledging.

Before the pledge becomes an active member, an initiation process takes place, wherein new members are admitted to the organization.

Once active, the new member is expected to follow the guidelines set down by each unit and is expected to do whatever he can to keep himself physically strong, mentally alert, and morally directed.

Of the 132 professional and honorary organizations at SIU, the 14 social fraternities and sororities under investigation by the President's Commission have shown that they provide many positive contributions in service, responsibility, leadership, and scholastic achievement.

Irish meet Boilermakers today

Two years ago Michigan State and Notre Dame met on the gridiron in a game billed as the biggest collegiate contest of the century. Irish Coach Ara Parseghian, instead of throwing the ball in the final moments of play in a gamble for the touchdown, elected to stick to the ground and play for the tie. The final score was 10-10.

This afternoon Notre Dame returns to the national spotlight as the Fighting Irish take on Purdue at South Bend, Ind., in a game beginning at 1 p.m.

The Spartan-Irish game was to determine the top collegiate team in the country and although the season is only one game old for the two teams the contest this afternoon is also promoted as seeking out this year's top team.

The United Press International, voicing the opinions of the nation's coaches, says Notre Dame deserves the top spot while the Associated Press, representing football writers, is going with Purdue.

The Irish will be out to revenge last season's 28-21 defeat at the hands of the Boilermakers, but Leroy Keyes, Purdue halfback partly responsible for the final score, is back and running better than ever.

In last year's game Keyes recovered an Irish fumble and ran 95 yards for a touchdown. The All American who does the 100 in 9.8, is a top candidate for the Heisman Trophy, an award for which he placed third in last season's balloting.

Keyes, a prime example of versatility, also punts, catches passes and kicks besides running. He will also play defense today and his assignment will be Notre Dame's own Heisman Trophy candidate, end Jim Seymour.

It is Seymour that the Irish hope will offset the Remarkable Mr. Keyes. Seymour, who stands 6-4 and has outstanding speed, has excelled in his last two seasons as quarterback Terry Hanratty's top receiver.

If defense determines the outcome of the game as most experts have observed, Purdue must be considered a slight favorite.

Since last Monday experts have said at one time or another that either "the big play," a "strong defense" or "Leroy Keyes" will be the deciding factor in the contest.

Runners compete in invitational

Hoping to improve on a 1-1 record, the SIU cross country team will venture to the Owensboro Cross Country Invitational at Owensboro, Ky. today.

The meet, which is sponsored by the Owensboro High School, will feature the University of Indiana, Murray State, Eastern Kentucky, and Western Kentucky. The inter-collegiate action will be followed by a high school meet.

Coach Lew Hartzog plans to take the regular six men: Gerry Hinton, Glenn Blackstone, Bill Bakentzos, John Hohm, Melvin Hohman, and Glen Ujiye.

Ujiye, who placed sixth against Illinois with a time of 20:46, has a bad cold and may not be able to run.

"We need all the boys in good condition," Hartzog said. "Ujiye didn't practice Thursday and if he feels bad he won't be able to run up to par if he is able to run at all."

Striving for a third win in a row will be Hinton, who thus far in the season has posted first place wins against Illinois and Miami of Ohio.

Another member of the squad, Hohman, will be trying to improve his placing in meets. Hohman, who placed eighth against Miami with a 22:34 time, made a marked improvement with a third place against Illinois. His time was 20:19.

Hartzog's six runners will face some outstanding running talent. Indiana, last year's Big Ten cross country champs, will return with all eight lettermen. Eastern Kentucky and its cohort Western Kentucky placed one-two in the Ohio Valley Conference last season.

"Indiana will be a real tough team to beat," Hartzog added. "Not only did they take the Big Ten last year, but they placed fifth in NCAA competition. This year they stand a good chance of winning it."

This will be the first year that Southern has competed in the Invitational. Even though Indiana won the Big Ten in 1967, they lost first place honors to Eastern Kentucky, who captured the Invitational title last year.

"All in all, it should be a very exciting meet," Hartzog said. "We all will be fighting for that first place honor and I think the boys will get a real workout."
