Anna center's security hike is questioned

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

A security buildup is under way at Anna Mental Health Center, but no one knows how far it will go.

Three guards have been hired, giving the center a security staff of eight. An empty house at the facility's entrance may be converted into a security checkpoint, said Ron Bittle, director of the center.

However, in spite of public demands, authorities doubt that the facility will be fenced because the state mental health code says patients must be kept in the least restrictive environment.

The public has clamored for stepped up security at the facility since the fatal stabbing on Aug. 9 of an Anna minister. Petitions with 3,000 signatures call for better security, more guards and a fence at the facility.

Extensive changes at the Anna facility may take changes in the state mental health code in order to protect patients' rights. An official with the Illinois Department of Mental Health and Disabilities said there may be a conflict between the public's concern of being protected and the law.

Gov. James R. Thompson said Friday there would soon be a re-evaluation of security at Anna. Hearings concerning the matter are scheduled for later this month at the request of Sen. Gene Johns, D-59th District.

Johns has criticized the closing of the A.L. Bowen Developmental Center in Harrisburg because retarded children are in the same Anna facility with violent adults.

However, authorities claim the murder on Aug. 9 is an isolated case — the first murder committed by a patient in over 20 years. During that period, about 25,000 persons have resided at the facility.

Explosive causes squad car damage

A large firecracker exploded on the hood of a campus police squad car early Monday morning, causing minor damage to the car.

According to Sgt. Drake of the SIU-C Security, at 1:31 a.m., a police dispatcher and another officer heard a loud explosion in the parking lot by the police station. They ran to the location and found a cloud of smoke around the car.

The firecracker, which had been placed in front of the speaker on top of the car, was probably large, like a M-80, Drake said.

The hood was dented and the speaker damaged, he said.

The car was parked at the south end of the parking lot, next to Building D in Washington Square, Drake said.

The incident will be investigated, he said.

Prison scare

Shots fired in Marion escape attempt

By Greg Drezdzon
Staff Writer

Heavily armed federal, state and local officers searched woods and fields around the Marion Federal Penitentiary Tuesday for persons who fired high-powered rifles at guard towers in an attempt to help inmates escape.

Rifle shots hit three guard towers about 8:30 a.m. in what officers said was a well-planned break-out attempt.

Prison guards seized six inmates as the inmates ran for a prison fence. None escaped.

Between two and four persons fired several rounds of high-power ammunition at the guard towers and some of the bullets broke the half-inch thick bullet-proof glass, said Williamson County Sheriff D.T. McCluskey.

According to Illinois State Police who helped search the area, guards in the towers returned the fire, but the assailants were in a wooded area and were hidden. The guard towers are about 30 feet high.

Williamson County deputies assisting in the search said none of the guards in the towers were injured.

When the gunfire took place, prisoners were in the yard exercising. The prison, located six miles south of Marion in the Crab Orchard Wildlife Refuge between Illinois 148 and Interstate 57, has 371 inmates.

"It is evident that someone from the outside tried to get some of the prisoners out," said McCluskey.

In addition to the prison guards, Illinois State Police, Williamson County Police, Marion City Police, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and U.S. Federal Marshalls were helping in the search.

According to an unidentified Williamson County deputy sheriff, about 30 to 40 law enforcement officials searched the woods in the prison area and stood guard on bridges and roads. The shots at the guard towers came from the east side of the prison where woods and a hill provided cover for the gunmen.

Around 10:30 a.m., the Illinois State Police called in an airplane to help search teams on the ground. Because of the fog and limited visibility, however, the plane had to wait two hours before taking off from Carbondale.

All through the day, the weather hampered visibility. At times light rain fell and at other times heavy fog covered the area.

State Police troopers wearing flak jackets and armed with shotguns stood watch along a three-mile stretch of Interstate 57 where woods are close to the roadway.

A K-9 unit from the state Police district near Maryville was called in to help search teams. The specially-trained police dog was used to sniff out nitrates from expended shells. Several casings — the number was not disclosed — were found in woods east of the prison.

Prison personnel in the search reported that FBI agents had found what were described as "sight markings" — to help the gunmen aim at the towers — on trees in the woods just outside the prison.

About 2 p.m., FBI agents found several rounds of live ammunition, a jacket, a glove, a knife and two walkie-talkies, apparently left behind by the persons who attacked the guard towers.

According to Marion

Detective H.L. Pulley, one of the walkie-talkies had been shot eight times and the other nine times in an effort to destroy them.

"Whoever planned this thing really planned it well," he said.

A fence located about 200 feet from Interstate 57 and about six miles south of Marion was also found cut, prison personnel reported.

The search continued Tuesday evening. No one had been taken into custody. Prison officials were reported to have been in a meeting all day and could not be reached for comment.

The six inmates seized at the prison fence were placed in detention, the Associated Press reported.

Teacher's strike continuing; negotiations still stalemated

By The Associated Press

Talks aimed at breaking the longest-running teachers' strike in Illinois were scheduled late Tuesday, but in only two of the five other districts forced to cancel classes for the day was a negotiating session planned anytime this week.

The six districts still involved in strike actions affect some 49,000 Illinois youngsters and 2,900 teachers.

Teachers and the school board of District 15, encompassing the northwest Chicago suburbs of Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Hoffman Estates, will meet with a federal mediator at 7 p.m. in hopes of breaking the stalemate that has kept some 10,500 students and 550 teachers out of school since Aug. 30.

The two sides have met each of the last two days and while money remains the major issue, questions about longevity, insurance and reprisals for the strike are still clouding a tentative agreement, said teachers' union spokesman George Sherman.

"Everything we get offered towards a settlement is accompanied by a threat," said Sherman. "The latest thing was a clause that would allow teachers to leave the union at any time."

The district has said it would consider replacing striking teachers if an agreement was not reached Tuesday.

"They may even be sending notice of firing to non-tenured teachers while we meet tonight," added Sherman.

Talks were scheduled by federal mediators for Thursday in downstate Wood River, where some 50 teachers and 980 students are idled by a walkout, and in Wheaton-Warrenville Unit District 200, where a job action by 600 teachers have kept 10,000 students in Chicago's far western suburbs out of classes since Wednesday.

No negotiating sessions were set in three other districts, including East St. Louis District 189. Schools are open in the district, but officials said only a handful of the more than 1,300 teachers and about 20,000 students have been reporting to classes.

A stalemate remained between representatives of District 230 serving the southwest Chicago suburbs of Palos Hills, Tinley Park and Orland Park and the union representing some 323 striking teachers, said Dorothy Curran, president of the district's teachers association.

"At this point we have exhausted our resources for settlement," she said Tuesday. "Now the burden of responsibility for this strike is on the board."

Sticking points in the talks have been salary and insurance benefits. About 6,100 students have been kept from class by the strike, which began Wednesday.

A Monday meeting between teachers and board representatives in West Chicago District 94 continued past its midnight deadline, but no agreement was reached and no further bargaining sessions have been scheduled. The district has 1,400 students and 90 teachers.

News Roundup

Man arrested in ritual murder case

NEW YORK (AP) — Police captured one man after a car chase and searched for two others Tuesday in the ritual murder of a Florida nutrition professor. Authorities said they had issued "numerous" warrants and considered the case "solved."

A man tentatively identified as Gary McNichol, 21, was arrested with the stolen car and credit cards of Professor Howard Appledorf, who was murdered over the weekend in his condominium near the University of Florida campus at Gainesville.

Police were searching for two companions with whom McNichol was drinking at an East Side bar frequented by homosexuals. Police said one of the men had a record as a prostitute and a transvestite, and speculated the men might be disguised as women.

The men left the bar after McNichol jumped in the car and led police cars on a chase through Manhattan at speeds up to 100 mph.

McNichol is believed to be one of three men Florida authorities have been seeking in the slaying according to Detective Capt. James Power.

Arab leaders seek peace strategy

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — Arab leaders conferred in strict secrecy Tuesday at a summit meeting convened to define a possible Arab peace strategy in the Middle East for the first time since the creation of the state of Israel.

The summit was formally opened Monday by the host and chairman, Morocco's King Hassan II, with a warning to the leaders to allow no premature information leaks out of the closely guarded conference center.

Official Moroccan sources said the kings, emirs and presidents remained locked in intensive debate until after 3 a.m. Tuesday morning and resumed their talks seven hours later.

The sources gave no indication of the subjects discussed, but pointed out that the Israeli invasion of Lebanon and its aftermath took top place on the published summit agenda.

Lebanon has asked the summit to demand that all foreign forces — "Israeli, Palestinian and Syrian" — should evacuate all Lebanese territory without delay.

'Look-alike' drugs banned in Illinois

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — "Look-alike" drugs — stimulants made to look like amphetamines sold illegally on the street — are banned from Illinois under legislation signed Tuesday by Gov. James R. Thompson.

The non prescription, caffeine-based substances have been linked by authorities to several deaths in the state past 18 months.

The measure, backed by Attorney General Tyrone C. Fahner, would ban the manufacture, advertising, possession and distribution of a non-controlled substance represented as a government-regulated substance.

"The misrepresentation of drugs presents a danger that poses serious health hazards and cause reactions that the user is unprepared for," Thompson said in a statement.

Officials say look-alikes are dangerous because people may take too many pills not realizing the danger of a caffeine overdose, or may overdose on real amphetamines, thinking they were the phony kind.

And, authorities say the fake pills draw young people into use of drugs.

"If we properly enforce this law, we will not only end the look-alike trade in Illinois, but we will save countless lives of young people who are lured into the drug culture by this previously legal enterprise," Fahner said in a statement.

Conviction under the new law, which takes effect immediately, could result in up to five years in prison and a $20,000 fine. Possession of look-alikes could carry a 29-day jail term on conviction of a second offense.

The bill was sponsored by Reps. Frank Watson, R-Greenville, Michael Getty, D-Dalton and Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago.

Poster placement concerns University

By Andrew Herrmann
Staff Writer

The SIU-C campus has become a forum for a variety of posters, placards and torn sheets of paper which espouse the beliefs and opinions of campus interest groups. But now, some University administrators believe the situation is getting out of hand.

For the most part, University officials agree that persons and groups have the right to express their opinion — but not on light poles, fences and building fronts.

One problem with policing the posting of messages is that there are no set guidelines to follow, said Clarence Daugherty, vice president for campus services. But an understanding about poster policy exists, he said.

"In the past, the posters were given to the Student Development office to be checked for content before they could be put up," he said. "But it got to be a hassle, so we developed an understanding that posters could only be placed on bulletin boards."

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, said he was uncertain about the regulations concerning poster placement.

"I really can't think of any policies we have," he said. "We work very hard to protect freedom of speech on campus. We have to appeal to people not to do this sort of thing."

Swinburne said the Physical Plant was responsible for the removal of the posters. A Student Affairs spokesperson said anyone caught putting up posters could be charged with defacing University property.

Kenneth Peterson, dean of library affairs, is particularly angry over the posting of messages on exterior Morris Library walls. A few weeks ago, he said, he discovered some posters glued to the front and rear entrances of the building.

"We had a similar problem earlier in the month," he said. "I referred the matter to the Office of Student Affairs. I don't believe any group ever took responsibility, but someone finally came and scraped them off," Peterson said.

Posters and messages should be placed on designated bulletin boards inside University buildings, but not on the outer facings, Swinburne said.

"There are bulletin boards in every building," he said. "Putting the posters outside is such an obnoxious, destructive thing. It's unsightly."

City to stress bicycle safety, laws

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Bicycle safety will continue to be stressed by Carbondale Police and disregarded bicycle laws will be focused on, according to Police Chief Ed Hogan.

There were 33 bicycle accidents in the city in 1981. Twenty-eight people were injured and one died, according to police.

"The dangers of severe personal injury in pedestrian-bicycle or bicycle-automobile accidents are staggering," Hogan said. "Carelessly disregarding the rights of others is irresponsible. Abuses like that, whether by pedestrians, bicyclists or drivers, cannot be allowed."

He said common bicycle violations include riding on sidewalks, disobeying stop signs or lights and riding the wrong way on one-way streets.

A bicycle moving violation is treated the same as an automobile moving violation, said police, and is subject to the same fines.

The SIU-C Security Police have given 433 tickets to bicyclists since Aug. 23, said Marilyn Hogan, campus parking manager, and most have been for illegal parking on campus.

A Carbondale ordinance requires that bicycles be registered at the SIU-C Parking Office or the Carbondale Police Department.

The fine on campus for a parking violation or for not having a bicycle registered is $3 and an on-campus moving violation is $5, said Ms. Hogan.

She stressed that bicycle owners who have not registered their bikes do so immediately.

Saluki athletics has its problems, too

It seems you cannot pick up a newspaper or listen to a sports report these days without hearing about one school or another involved in some athletics scandal. Forged transcripts. Illegal recruiting. Big bucks under the table to college athletes.

So far, nothing of the sort has been reported at SIU-C. However this does not mean that the men's and women's athletics departments are free of problems.

What follows are some of those problems, the administration's proposed solutions, and some questions about the solutions themselves.

First of all, the department is in trouble financially.

Someone has come up with the idea of hiring a special athletics fund-raiser to help head-off budget deficits.

The questions raised by this proposal are many. Why is a special fund-raiser needed now since Stanley McAnally was recently hired as a vice president to do the very same thing? Who needs another non-teacher at a place already ridden with them? And most of all, if this proposal goes through, why should the new fund-raiser be paid an incentive — that's part of the proposal — on top of a salary to "encourage him to meet the goal?" Should extra incentive be needed to encourage someone to do their job?

Another problem is the low graduation rate of athletes.

Granted, 82 percent for female athletes and 61 percent for males, is above the national level, but that still not high enough. Academics should always be put before athletics. SIU-C should not be satisfied with merely being "above the average" in graduation rates for either athletes or non-athletes.

The Civil Service Employees Council recently raised the question of why the Athletics Department's academic counseling position has not and will not be filled.

Looking at the graduation rates, one would wonder how such a position could be eliminated. It is, however, conceivable that the position should be eliminated.

Counseling services are already provided for all students in their individual academic units. Why should athletes receive special counseling?

The largest problem of all, however, is the Athletics departments' concept of their relationship to the rest of the university.

Athletics operates with what can be termed a "bunker mentality." They seem to operate in a world all their own, as if the university exists first for athletics. That's not healthy for either athletics or academics and it can lead to the kind of scandals that so far have not touched SIU-C and must not be allowed to.

New research office just public relations

Charles Hindersman, new director of SIU-C's Office of Regional Research and Service, was quoted in a local newspaper as being unclear about the lack of response by local people to his office: I don't think we've got people coming forward yet telling us about their needs ... I don't really know why. It's a possibility people may feel we can't help them."

I would offer a more plausible explanation: The people of this area are skeptical that the SIU-C administration means what they say — and with good reason.

Is not the Office of Regional Research and Service — a grand-sounding title — simply a major public relations endeavor by the administration to shore up badly eroded ties with local politicos and influential persons in state government?

Is it not the case that it is SIU-C that needs the help?

The actions of this office to date have consisted of numerous speeches by high-ranking SIU-C administrators to local government officials, seeking to persuade them that SIU-C is doing a lot of local service work which, for some reason, is going unappreciated.

One might observe that if you must continually explain to someone how much help you're giving them, then maybe you're not giving them the help that they need.

The key issue involved here is commitment: Is SIU-C going to live up to its mandate to help Southern Illinois develop its rich human and natural potential, or is it going to settle for being the state university in Southern Illinois?

The people of Southern Illinois could live with either alternative. But they deserve an honest answer, one way or the other. Terry Alliband, former Assistant Professor, Social and Community Services.

Where is this Palestine? Depends on who you ask.

A small dam of words burst last Sunday (Aug. 29) and the wave that washed over the Arab-Israeli dispute rinsed a large rock that lies in the path of peace. Careful words from a king and crafty words from a Palestinian Liberation Organization operative revealed deep Arab disagreement even about what the word "Palestine" designates.

On ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" Bassam Abu Shareef of the PLO said "an" aim of the PLO is establishment of a state on "part of" — on "any" part of Palestine. A state on the West Bank and Gaza would be "satisfactory."

Question: "Does this mean that the PLO can accept the simultaneous existence of Israel as a Jewish state?"

Shareef: "This is the PLO program. It was very clear, and although many people decided not to read it carefully because they don't want to read it carefully, we now read it to you carefully."

Oh? What "PLO program"? Not the Palestine National Charter adopted in 1968, the first point of which is that Palestine is an "indivisible" part of the Arab world, and the second point of which is: "Palestine, with the borders it had during the British Mandate, is an indivisible territorial unit."

Shareef's statement, another example of PLO "moderation" for American media, refers to the PLO's 10-point program adopted in 1974. It held that "any" liberation of Palestine is but a step toward the destruction of Israel (point four) and — note well — the overthrow of the Jordanian regime (point five). When Shareef was asked if the PLO's argument about title to the West Bank is not "as much with Jordan as it is with Israel," he said: "Well, who told you that we differentiate greatly between Begin and Hussein?" There, suddenly, the mask of moderation slipped, the dishonesty was revealed.

Shareef was immediately followed on ABC by Hussein. He was asked about recent statements by Israel's foreign and defense ministers (Shamir and Sharon) that Jordan is a Palestinian state. Before considering his answer, consider this:

The first modern use of the word "Palestine" to designate a specific territory was for the territory mandated to Britain when the Ottoman empire collapsed in 1918. The League of Nations' mandate designated land on both sides of the Jordan River — all that is now Israel and Jordan — as Palestine. Later, Britain separated Transjordan (now Jordan), restricting the name "Palestine" to the West Bank and what is now Israel. But remember what Hussein never forgets: the PLO charter endorsed the original, inclusive definition of Palestine.

Responding to Israeli statements that Jordan is Palestinian, ethnically (65-70 percent) and geographically, Hussein said, obliquely: Jordan has given "a chance to feel at home" to "Palestinians awaiting a resolution of their problem, on their legitimate soil." By "Palestinian soil," he means everything west of the Jordan River. He spoke on Sunday of "Palestinian soil under occupation by Israel, and (sic) the West Bank, Arab Jerusalem and Gaza."

So "Palestinian soil" includes more than territories occupied by Israel in 1967. Unlike the PLO, Hussein says (or seems to) that there is no Palestinian soil east of the Jordan River. Like the PLO, he says (or seems to) that all soil west of the Jordan is Palestinian.

For 19 years (1948-67) Jordan controlled the West Bank that Hussein now calls "Palestinian soil," but made no move to offer it up to what Hussein now calls "legitimate Palestinian Arab rights." On ABC Hussein called it "inaccurate" to say Jordan annexed the West Bank more than 30 years ago. He said, "It was an Arab effort to save what could be saved of Palestine" after the 1948 war. But no Arab nation supported Jordan's annexation. The United States never recognized it. Only two nations — Britain and Pakistan — did. Ironically Israel sort of did, de facto, after 1967, by using Jordanian currency, applying Jordanian law, and maintaining Jordanian education and civic practices.

Hussein's subtlety, even artistry, was on view Sunday. In September, 1970, his army killed many times more PLO members than Sharon's army killed in Lebanon. Last Sunday, when an ABC correspondent said "the Palestinians" were expelled from Jordan in 1970, Hussein deftly, almost unnoticed, rejected the equation of the PLO and "the Palestinians." He simply said: "Not many left Jordan in 1970. A very few did so ..." That is true. Most Palestinians are still there, in Palestine.

Viewpoints: The Middle East

U.S. is prime target for Arab propaganda

One of the most plainly self-contradictory claims in all anti-Zionist writing in the American media is the allegation that the media is controlled by "international Zionism." The latest reincarnation of this charge appeared on the editorial page of the Daily Egyptian, Aug. 24, 1982. Presumably, the author, Khalid M. Suleiman, suffered no such repression.

Mr. Suleiman made some specific charges which need to be refuted. He alleges that American Jewish citizens are evading tax payments when they contribute money to social welfare programs in Israel. This is an allegation of criminal behavior: If he has evidence of this he should report it immediately to the Internal Revenue Service. Otherwise, his charges should be recognized for what they are — smears and propaganda.

American Jewish dollars that flow to Israel, and that are but a tiny fraction of the American dollars flowing to the Arab oil-producing countries every day to buy fuel at confiscatory prices, are all voluntarily spent, from the donators' own resources, and support, exclusively, non-military projects such as health services, urban renewal and land reclamation. All health services funded by these contributions, for example, are delivered on a non-sectarian basis.

Mr. Suleiman also ignores PLO terror in the region, which has taken the lives of many more Arabs than Jews. When PLO terror has been directed at Jewish targets, it has always, invariably, been directed at civilian targets alone.

Mr. Suleiman also charged that the "Zionists" (the term is not used descriptively or categorically, but as a derisive slander) as in "Reds," "pinkies," "fellow travelers," "terrorists," and "fascists") have slaughtered women and children in the region. He is presumably referring, at the least, to the latest war in Lebanon, a war that the PLO initiated as long ago as 1975 by supporting insurrectionist forces inside Lebanon. But even the Israeli fighting in that ongoing war had clear military and strategic objectives, and it was not the Israeli army that put armed PLO units, heavy weapons emplacements and anti-aircraft guns in the middle of populated refugee camps or Lebanese towns. It was the PLO that did this.

We also read that "international Zionism" has the power and the will to dictate its wishes on Congress, the president ... and the implementation of foreign policy." If we substitute "Saudi Arabia" for "international Zionism" and remember the AWACS deal last year, we might make some sense of this remark. But the overwhelming majority of senators and representatives in Washington are not Jewish, they have no substantial Jewish voting blocs in their constituencies and they support Israel as the Middle East's only democracy (albeit an imperfect democracy), the region's only reliable friend of America.

A war is on today for American public opinion. As the largest democracy in the world, and the only superpower with influence both in Israel and in many Arab capitals, the United States is a prize much sought after by Arab writers and propagandists. These writers could win that war since most fair-minded Americans will support the tenets of self-determination for Palestinians and the return of Palestinian refugees to their homes, farms and villages

Abraham Aamidor
Graduate Student, Journalism

Nothing new in Israel's actions

Israeli and Jewish propagandists in the United States, along with a substantial number of born-again Christians who believe the road to heaven is impossible without a special Israeli pass, are castigating the American media for having been "unfair" to Prime Minister Menachem Begin and his Defense Minister Ariel Sharon. American charges that Begin's bloody actions in Lebanon constitute an abandonment of the original Zionist sense of "justice" and "magnanimity" have infuriated the top echelon of the military establishment in Tel Aviv. These charges, the Israelis argue, are groundless and unfounded.

Well, this time I feel obliged to agree with the Israelis. The charges are indeed groundless and unfounded. In the light of the Zionist Jewish history and traditions, one can safely conclude that Begin's actions in Lebanon neither constitute a deviation from Jewish morality nor are they uncharacteristic of Jewish history and traditions.

The slaughter of innocents is nothing new to the Jews. Judging by their own Talmudic accounts of how they conquered Palestine after their release from Egyptian slavery, they firmly believed that they had divine sanctions for their genocidal campaigns against non-Jewish indigenous populations.

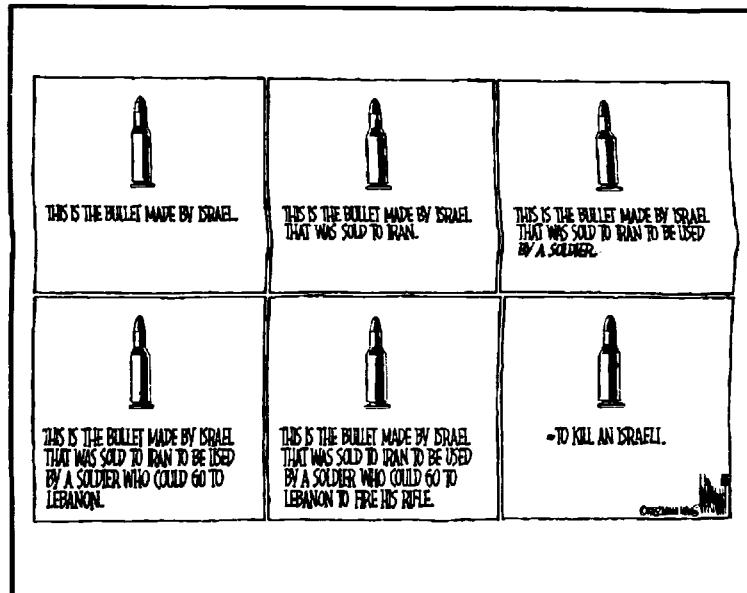

Apparently, this belief is still in vogue among Israeli leaders, for one can almost hear Begin replacing the names of the earlier peoples destroyed by the Jews with words like "PLO," Palestinians, terrorists" and so on.

As will be seen, Begin's actions are not inconsistent with the Jewish scriptures. We read in the scriptures: "And we captured all his (Sihon, King of Heshbon) cities at the time and utterly destroyed every city, men, women and children; we left none remaining ... we smote him until no survivor was left to him. (Deuteronomy 2:34; 3:3). We also read: "We utterly destroyed all in the city (Jericho) both men and women, with the edge of the sword ... when Israel had finished slaughtering all of the inhabitants of Ai (not until) the very last had fallen by the sword." (Joshua 6:21; 8:24).

These highly and glorified Jewish traditions have been remarkably revived and continued by people like Begin and Sharon. The Israeli newspaper Haaretz reported on June 11 that the Israeli-backed Hadad's forces "had passed from house to house in the villages which were conquered by the Israeli army and exterminated the last nests of terrorists." In a letter to the English weekly "The Economist," which appeared on July 11, Israeli Shahak, a prominent Israeli lawyer and intellectual, put it more bluntly: "The killing of Palestinians in Lebanon, especially males, has begun and is being carried on. There is very little doubt that many of the Palestinians who were 'arrested' or 'disappeared' will not be seen again and their very existence will be denied."

Abdul Qadir Tash, Graduate Student, Journalism.

Israel punishes many in pursuit of a few

The article written by Barbara Rakley in the DE of Aug. 4 under the title "Arab States Are Responsible for Creating refugee Problem" is of those ludicrous and unconvincing arguments to put justification into Menachem Begin's grand design for greater Israeli expansionism through military might and unwarranted destruction of lives and properties of not only the Palestinians but also the neighboring Arab countries.

The present-day State of Israel came into existence in 1948. Prior to that time, the geographical area now being occupied by Israel was a territory known as Palestine, composed of 93 Arab populations and a small Jewish population. Significant conflicts did not erupt between the two groups until 1917 when the Balfour Declaration was made by the British government. It is unfortunate that while this declaration for the partition of Palestine and the follow-up mandate protected the rights of the minority Jews — due to strong influence of Jewish cabinet ministers and other officials in the British government — it was insensitive and discriminatory to the rights and interests of the original Palestinian owners of the land. In the first place, it is pertinent to note from the speech of Jamal el-Husseini, chairman of the Palestine Arab Delegation, delivered to the UN General Assembly's Committee on Palestine (Sept. 29, 1947) that "Great Britain, however, has never owned Palestine to dispose of it. It occupied Palestine in the name of the allies (fighting the Ottoman empire) with whom the Arabs were associated," (Vital Speeches, NY Oct. 15, 1947). For the Jews then to claim the establishment of the State of Israel by virtue of the British-made Balfour Declaration and the subsequent UN Partition Plan of 1947 or any other biblically historical sentiment is null and void and of no broad-based international law validity.

In the denunciation of the British partition plan before the UN, Jamal el-Husseini said, "No one could seriously suppose that the establishment of a national home for a people (the Israelis) on top of the national home of another people (the Palestinians) could be achieved without undermining their rights and interests."

Not to believe in this assertion in the case of the displaced Palestinian refugees is tantamount to losing all sense of justice and fairness inside Israel. But Arab writers can lose their propagandist war, too, with such offensive, unsubstantiated and biased charges as we saw in Mr. Suleiman's commentary.

The creation of Israel from the concept of "giving the country without a people to the people without a country" had been, has always been, and will continue to be a deprivation of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people to their forcibly usurped homeland and interests. It is a pity indeed that about four million Palestinians continue to live in tents and camps in extreme human poverty and degradation by the action of the UN which succumbed to the influence and deception of British and Jewish manipulators.

As if the punishment of land deprivation was not enough, Menachem Begin embarked on a senseless and brutal military drive into Lebanon, maiming, killing and destroying innocent lives and properties. I am surprised and sickened by people who think that Begin has the right, in his efforts to protect a stolen nation, to destroy all those skyscrapers, hospitals, embassies and residential suburbs with cluster bombs, in his attempt to drive the PLO out of Lebanon and into the sea.

Instructor's love for guitar overflows

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

"If you want to really master something to its utmost, it takes a full dedication," said a man who has dedicated his life to the guitar.

Joseph Breznikar, guitar instructor in the School of Music, feels his instrument, the classical guitar, is enjoying a world wide renaissance.

And he's just completed an album called "The Contemporary Classical Guitar: Music from Two Continents."

Many of the pieces on the album were written by today's top composers, some who have only recently begun to compose for the solo guitar, Breznikar said.

Ned Rorem, Pulitzer Prize winner and one of America's leading composers of lyric songs, is an example. "Suite for Guitar," the second song on the album, was given its world premiere by Breznikar on July 25, 1980, and was then commissioned by the Musical Arts Association, according to album liner notes by Thomas Heck.

James Marshall, also an American composer, wrote "Consonne" for Breznikar and then dedicated it to him. This was the first guitar piece written by Marshall, whose major work has been in bassoon, Breznikar said.

"Dos Momentos Animicos" is another piece on the album written for and dedicated to Breznikar, after he had performed a world premiere of another of Guido Santorsola's pieces in April 1979.

Santorsola currently resides in Uruguay and "is a distinguished composer, conductor and teacher who has composed many important works for the classical guitar," according to Heck's liner notes.

But the composer that seems the most personally connected to Breznikar is Abel Carlevaro, who also lives in Uruguay. It is the "Carlevaro technique" that Breznikar says he uses in his own classroom instruction.

Guitar students who were here in the summer had a chance to study with both Carlevaro and Breznikar in a workshop held at SIU-C in June. It was a success, according to Breznikar.

"I feel very fortunate to have so many composers who've written excellent new pieces for me," he said.

But Breznikar didn't start out from birth giving world premieres.

Breznikar had to think hard to remember just how long he's been playing the guitar.

"My parents bought me my first guitar when I was five," he said, finally. "and I've been playing it ever since."

One day Breznikar decided he wanted to play a piece that wasn't created to be performed on his instrument. So he worked with it until he could recreate the sound on his guitar.

Album Review

The contemporary classical guitar: music from two continents certain for him or her than for someone who is wholly dedicated to one's art, he added.

"My desire for my students is that they emerge with more than just a degree, but also with a skill that they can employ."

Breznikar said there currently are 20 music students specializing in the guitar. He finds the number encouraging.

"There's such a positive working feeling in the School of Music right now," he said. "I like being part of it. Things are constantly improving."

Breznikar cited as his most major influence, Andres Segovia, "the grandfather of the renaissance period of guitar."

"Segovia is not only a composer, but someone who also got established composers, who had not yet written for the guitar, to do so," Breznikar said. "This, plus his transcriptional endeavors, have greatly enlarged the repertoire of the solo guitar and made it more interesting to listen to."

Breznikar added that Segovia was the dominant innovator of the first half of this century and that Julian Bream, an English guitarist, followed Segovia's path. Breznikar credits Bream as also being "one of the greatest performers on the classical guitar of our time."

He said both performers are still living, with Segovia in his 90s, and Bream in his 50s. Breznikar sees himself following the same tradition as Segovia and Bream. "I'm just now beginning to get noticed," he said.

An indication of just how much notice Breznikar is receiving could be interpreted from the fact that the same composer has written for both Segovia and Bremzinkar.

"Santorsola wrote his first two guitar pieces for Segovia at the same time he wrote the two for me," Breznikar said, softly, being sure not to place too much weight on this. He smiled.

McLeod fair is Saturday

Music, mime and merriment will be plentiful on the south lawn of the Communications Building Saturday as the SIU-C Theater and Music Departments provide a colorful introduction to their fall season activities.

The outdoor fair, sponsored by the McLeod Theater Playhouse, will be held from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Admission to the fair is free.

Activities for the fair include live music, food, exhibitions of stage combat and make-up application, comedy, mime, juggling, free drawings, season ticket sales for McLeod Theater shows and guided tours of McLeod Theater and facilities. An added highlight of the fair will be the Theater Department's annual costume wardrobe sale on the lawn.

In the event of rain, the fair will be held in the south wing of the Communications Building.

Shryock ticket deadline is Friday

Friday is the deadline for season ticket orders for the 1981-82 Celebrity Series at Shryock Auditorium. The season includes Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance" and the Tony Award-winning drama, "Children of a Lesser God."

Tickets for the nine shows come in packages ranging in cost from $56 to $71.

The shows have been divided into two groups. Group I consists of "Lotte Goslar's Pan-tomime Circus," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Tintypes," "The Royal Winnipeg Ballet," "The 1940s Radio Hour" and "Children of a Lesser God."

Group II is made up of

William Windom in "Thurber II," "Eastman Brass Ensemble" and "Mumenschanz."

In the Grand Series, theatergoers may choose all six in Group I and receive all three in Group II free.

In the Choice Series, they may choose any four in Group I and receive any two in Group II free.

In the Sampler Series, they may choose any four in Group I and receive any one in Group II free.

However, all choices from both groups must be tickets in the same price range. The choices must be all in section A, section B or section C.

Christianity in modern society subject of 10-part film series

Michele Inman
Staff Writer

Christianity holds the answer for modern man, according to Francis Schaeffer, Christian theologian and philosopher. This belief will be presented in detail in the film series, "How Should We Then Live?", sponsored by Christians Unlimited and Student Action for Christ, weekly from Sept. 2 through Nov. 4, in the Student Center's Ohio and Illinois rooms.

Schaeffer appears as a narrator in the films.

The first film, "The Roman Age," was shown on Sept. 2. "The Middle Ages," dealing with the fall of the Roman Empire, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Thursday Sept. 9.

In all, 10, 30-minute film episodes will be shown dealing with the major eras of history of western civilization from the Roman age to the present.

Schaeffer analyzes the strengths and weaknesses of historical periods and demonstrates how the gospel of Jesus can help meet the needs of society today. Donald Wooters, director of Christian Campus ministries, said,

"Basically, he's looking at history to see why Rome declined or why any civilization declines."

For example, Wooters said, Schaeffer believes that a sufficient reference point or criterion for morals or ethics determining clearly what is right or wrong in a society, as opposed to relativism, which does not point out what is right or wrong, is mandatory to preserve order in society.

Schaeffer believes that general apathy and lawlessness also contribute to chaos in society which may lead to the society becoming a totalitarian state.

Schaeffer, who has been called a missionary to the intellectuals by Time magazine, also examines each historical period, including the Renaissance, the Reformation, the Revolutionary age and the Scientific age, to discuss what ideas were common in each era and how the gospel met the needs of society at the time. Wooters said.

"There's a lot of artwork in the films that emphasize what kinds of ideas and what kind of quality was being reflected in the culture at a given point of time," Wooters said.

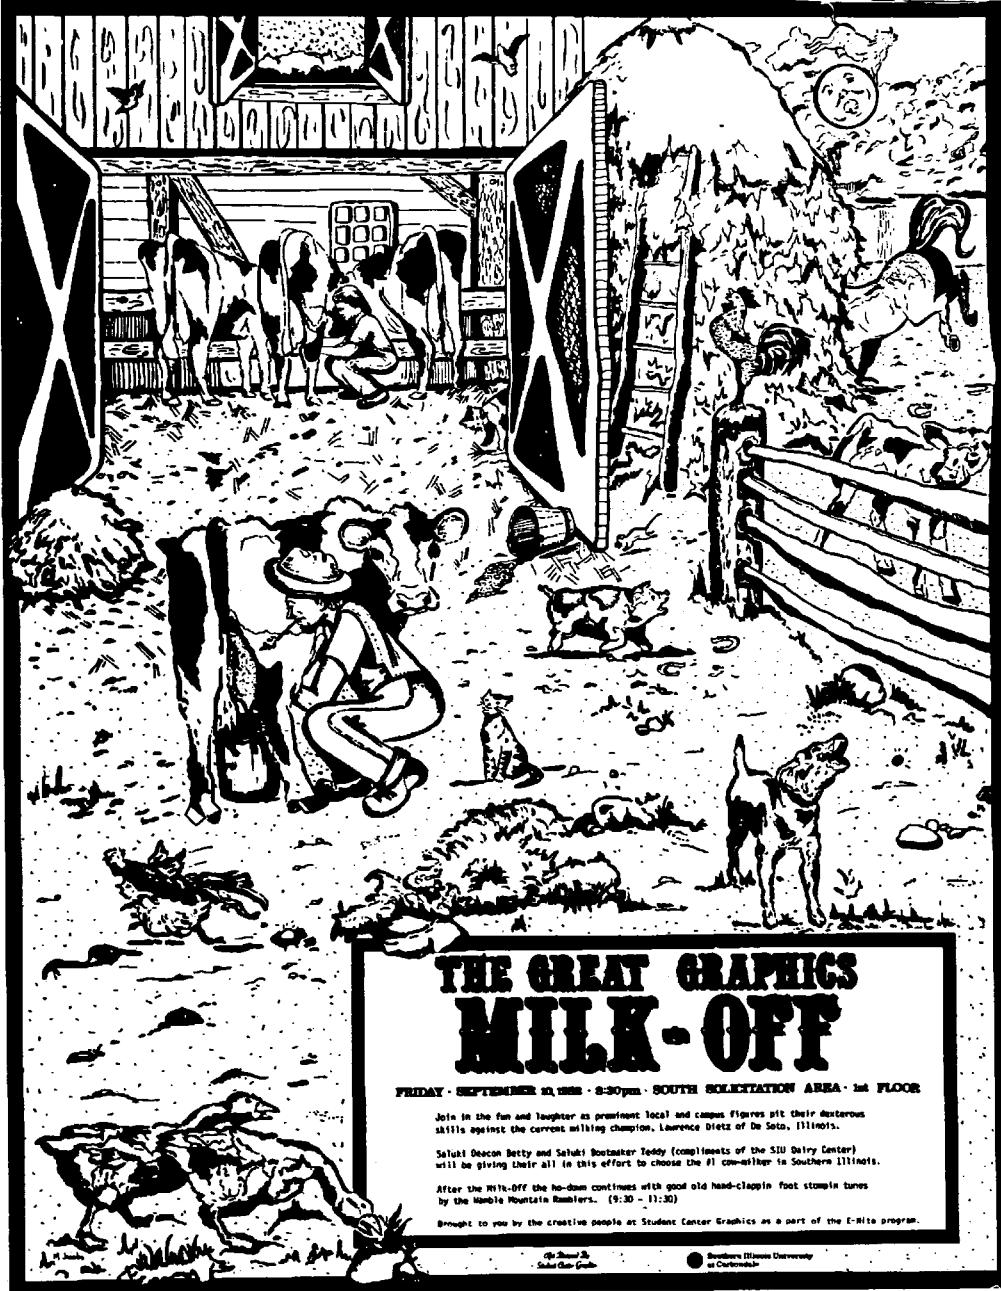

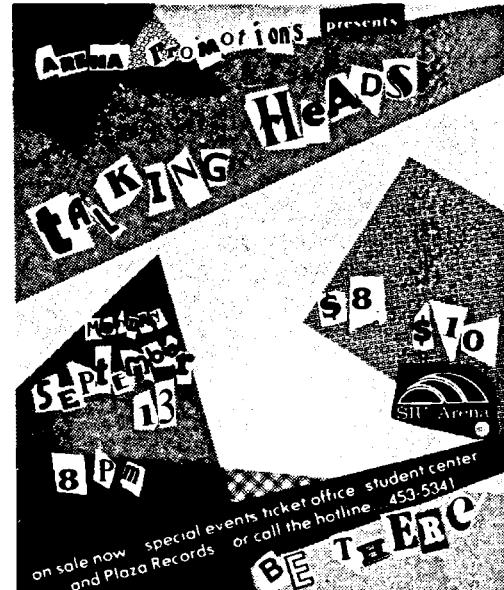

The third film in the series, "The Renaissance," will be shown Sept. 15. "The Reformation" will be shown Sept. 23 and "The Revolutionary Age," Sept. 29. Episode six, which deals with "The Scientific Age," will be on Oct. 7 and "The Age of Nonreason" will be shown Oct. 13.

"The Age of Fragmentation" reviews the current fragmented state of art, music, poetry and motion pictures as expressions of man's dilemma, and will be shown on Oct. 21. "The Age of Personal Peace and Affluence," Oct. 28, is a look at the youths of the 60's and the 70's. The last film, "Final Choices," Nov. 4, is the history of the last two decades and concludes that man's only hope is a return to truth revealed in Christ through the scriptures. All films will be shown at 7:30 p.m.

"Finally he is saying that Jesus Christ is the absolute reference point for truth and ethics and government as well as meaning for the individual life," Wooters said. "This is reflected historically. Early Christians saw him as lord of the universe. And today the Christians' view is the same."

Schaeffer, whose home is in the Swiss Alps, is the founder of L'Abri Christian study centers in Europe and North America, which expose many individuals to Biblical Christianity. Schaeffer, is an author of 15 books, including "The God Who Is There" and "True Spirituality."

Musclemen to flex for title, trophies

By Mary Pries
Staff Writer

Body-builders from all over Illinois will display their muscles in competition for the title of Mr. Novice Southern Illinois at 7 p.m. Saturday in Marion Civic Center.

The competition is open to anyone from Illinois who has never won an overall or a first place award in the past. "This contest is for novices and after a body-builder wins a novice contest he goes on to the next more advanced contest," said Stacy Hosman, promoter of the event.

"The contest has cost myself and Drew Watson, the co-promoter, $2000. We have broken even right now advance ticket sales at $5 each," said Hosman. "More tickets will be sold at the door for $6. The cost of the trophies was covered by the $11 entry fee."

Hosman said a novice contest tends to include athletes who are not big body-builders. However, at a long prejudging in the morning when the athlete does relaxed poses, mandatory poses and an individual posing routine, the judges will have a chance to pick the body-builders to watch closely that evening.

Jeff Harrison, 22, a competitor from Carbondale who placed third in the Collegiate Body-Building Contest last year, said the prejudging tells the judges who is better. "They organize the contest around that to try to make the show look as nice as possible."

Hosman said the body-builders will compete in three different height divisions. Trophies will be given to the top five in 5 feet 7 inches and under, 5 feet 7 inches to 5 feet 10 inches, and 5 feet 10 inches and up.

An overall trophy will be given to one of the three who win first in their division, he said.

Harrison said, "Every athlete must compete at night or he can not be in the contest again. In the evening, each age division will come on stage together and do whatever the judges have planned or ask to see."

There are 13 mandatory poses at four quarter turns that are usually done. Then each athlete does his individual posing for not more than one and a half minutes, he said.

The athletes will be judged on symmetry, muscularity, definition, presentation of posing and personality, Harrison said.

Hosman said, "To choose the overall winner, the top three from each division will have a pose down. Each athlete will show his best poses with all three men standing side by side."

In preparing for the contest, the body-builder must prepare mentally and change his training and diet, he said. Long dieting of high protein and low carbohydrates will cause the energy system to burn the fat storage. This will help the muscle cuts to show, he said.

"The contest itself is harder than a workout because of the strain on you to prepare for it," said Harrison. "It will change my whole way of life to get ready."

Each athlete has his own way of training for the event, Harrison said. Some use supersets, some use forced rep and some use high intensity training. "You really know what is good for it," he said.

Action Packed Politics is theme for voters' membership drive

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

The League of Women Voters is looking for more than a few good members.

The league, hoping to fill out its dwindling ranks, set a 10 percent membership goal -- or nearly 12,000 more members -- as part of Action Packed Politics, the largest membership campaign embarked on by the league.

The campaign starts Saturday. The main thrust ends Oct. 9, but recruitment will continue until Dec. 1, said Lisa Popov, membership chair of the Carbondale league.

She said the Carbondale league hopes to increase enrollment by 28 percent, making total membership 100.

The league, despite its name, is no longer an all-women's organization. Popov said three of the 78 Carbondale members are men. Carbondale Mayor Hans Fisher, once having signed the roll Saturday at the league's candidate's meeting, will become the first recruit of the drive and the fourth man in the local group.

Reflecting national trends, the Carbondale league, which once boasted between 175 and 200 members, has seen a continual decline in its ranks since the late 1960s.

To assess the problem and seek a solution, questionnaires were distributed to local members. The league has shortened its meetings and dished out smaller jobs to members to entice more persons to join or present members to remain.

Muriel Haywood, local president for 2½ years, said the league in Carbondale meets twice monthly. Members no longer had the time for three monthly meetings.

"I think it's that everyone has so much to do," Popov said. "Many women work now. By the time you get done with everything else, there's very little time left."

Haywood said the league does not delve into issues as much as it would like to, or once did. The number of study groups has also decreased.

"I don't think we deal with as many local issues as we used to," she said. "We still do our voter services."

Popov said if the membership drive is successful, a larger league could be expected to enter into a wider range of issues. It has already studied the courts, justice system and toxic waste.

Having the Oct. 5 gubernatorial debate, one of four between Gov. James R. Thompson and Adlai Stevenson, fall into the league's lap would benefit the local membership drive, she said.

The local group also is planning a candidates meeting Sept. 11 featuring U.S. Rep. Paul Simon and Pete Prineas to be held at the Carbondale Holiday Inn.

Students are invited to attend. Members and guests may either bring their own lunch or buy food in the cafeteria.

The Women's Caucus generally holds meetings once a month on Wednesdays at noon, including a variety of programs and speakers.

Women's Caucus begins meetings

The Women's Caucus will host its first luncheon meeting of the semester Wednesday from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the Student Center's Corinth and Troy Rooms.

Their guest speaker will be Stanley McAnalley, new vice president for university relations and development.

McAnalley will speak on "Five in Five," the plans for raising $5,000,000 for SU-C in five years, focusing on the efforts women may make. He will answer questions from the floor.

Center sponsors workshop on women's alcohol use, abuse

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

The Prevention Resource Center wants women to realize they can say no to alcohol. It is sponsoring a workshop entitled "Focus on Women: Substance Abuse Prevention" from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday in Ballroom C.

Drinking among women is prevalent. Eighty-five percent of college women and 60 percent of adult women drink regularly, according to Fran Chastain, special projects coordinator for the PRC.

The statistics for women who abuse alcohol are rising at a proportionately higher rate than those for men, she said.

The focus of the free workshop is prevention, Chastain said. It won't deal with addiction as much as with "alcohol use and abuse."

The workshop will examine the problem of drinking in the morning and focus on prevention strategies in the afternoon, Chastain said.

PRC works through community programs aimed at the prevention of alcohol and substance abuse. According to their newsletter, this seminar is designed "to combine PRC resources with local community involvement."

Chastain, a graduate student in human development, will speak at the seminar.

The use of over-the-counter and prescription drugs in conjunction with alcohol will also be discussed. Chastain says the two are used together quite frequently.

"Women see their doctor with complaints of depression, anxiety or insomnia, and what does the doctor prescribe so often?" she asked.

Often the doctor's answer is valium or some other numbing drug, she said, which often leads to more of the same problems, especially when combined with alcohol.

The seminar and project are funded by the Illinois Department of Mental Health and Development Disabilities, Division of Alcoholism.

Once crippled pianist, Fleisher, will return to symphony playing

By Larry Rosenthal
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Seventeen years after a mysterious affliction crippled his right hand, pianist Leon Fleisher is rehearsing for a dramatic two-handed return to concert performing, which won him world renown.

Using both hands to play in public for the first time since 1965, he will play unaccompanied and with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra at the Sept. 16 opening of Baltimore's $22 million symphony hall, before thousands of people who paid at least $250 each.

"I'm looking forward to it with great pleasure," he said in a telephone interview. "It's going to be an exciting evening."

Fleisher, 54, spent years searching for a cure, even trying shock treatment and hypnosis. He became depressed and acted like an "ogre" to people around him. He learned piano works for the left hand and took up conducting, but he didn't give up hope.

In 1977, explaining that he didn't want to become a full-time specialist in works for the left hand, Fleisher said: "I'm quite certain that sooner or later I'm going to be playing with two hands again. It'll happen. I really think it will." Fleisher underwent physiotherapy and psychotherapy in unsuccessful efforts to cure the ailment. Then in January 1981 he underwent an operation at Massachusetts General to correct a new and not necessarily related problem called carpal tunnel syndrome.

Before surgery, it was almost impossible for Fleisher to even hold a baton, hospital spokesman Martin Bander said. His little and ring fingers tended to clench.

After the operation, the clenching returned, but to a much lesser degree, Bander said. It was then that physical therapy began.

His doctors were the first to see him play again with two hands, a hospital spokesman said. He performed for them at a hospital chapel.

At the opening of the 2,467-seat Joseph Meyerhoff Symphony Hall, named for the philanthropist who contributed $10 million to it, Fleisher will perform Franck's Symphonic Variations and an unaccompanied nocturne. The event will be taped by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Robots will star in machine show

CHICAGO (AP) — Robots programmed to perform back-breaking or monotonous jobs and completely automated factories will be among the exhibits featured at the 1982 International Machine Tool Show.

The show, running from Sept. 8 through Sept. 17, is being touted as the largest industrial trade show ever held in the Western Hemisphere and will have displays from more than 1,200 exhibitors from the United States and 31 nations.

The exhibits will include metalworking tools, materials, accessories, controls and parts weighing a total of more than 16,000 tons and valued at more than $250 million.

The show, called "A World of Productive Ideas," emphasizes the role machine tools play around the world. Products such as giant girders and tiny computer chips are produced by machine tools or machines built with the tools.

The show will feature automated plants where every step in producing sophisticated metal parts is performed by machines.

There also will be exhibits of computer-run robots that perform tasks that are too hazardous, strenuous or boring for humans.

In addition to the displays, a series of weekday technical conferences will be held on subjects such as computer-aided machine design, automated machining systems and the use of robots.

The geological and geographical causes of earthquakes are explained in Krause's exhibit.

Faner exhibit shows earthquakes

By Kelly Reed
Student Writer

A University Museum exhibit, "From the Center of the Earth: Earthquakes and Volcanoes," which will be shown through Sept. 26 at Faner Hall will provide an introduction to an area of controversy among many scientists.

Curator of history for the University Museum, Bonnie Krause said, "This exhibit is important, because we are living in an earthquake area. It gives some general background information on earthquakes and shows how they can be predicted."

The display, which Krause began planning nine months ago, features the New Madrid and Mount St. Helens earthquakes. Geological and geographical causes of the two catastrophes are explained in the exhibit.

Krause noted that the U.S. Geological Survey in Virginia predicts a "moderate" earthquake will occur in the Southern Illinois area within 20 years. She added that one week prior to the exhibit opening, there was an earthquake in Metropolis.

A seismometer, an instrument which measures ground movements, a sample of some readings taken of recent earthquakes in Tennessee, and geological samples of volcanic rock and ash will be included in the exhibit.

A list of preventative construction suggestions and guidelines to follow during an earthquake will be posted in the exhibit area.

Explanations about the New Madrid earthquake of 1811 will be featured in the exhibit. The incident resulted in a movement of the earth which forced the Mississippi River out of its banks, created cracks in the earth and sulphur and sand spots to develop. The temors from the quake were detected from the Great Plains to the East Coast. New Madrid.

Missouri was the central location of the earthquake.

Krause said, "The New Madrid earthquake was a highly destructive one, considering there wasn't much in the area in 1811."

According to a report prepared for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, an earthquake on the New Madrid fault could result in thousands of deaths and up to $1 billion in damages.

A shifting of the fault, which covers Southern Illinois, Eastern Missouri, Western Kentucky, Western Tennessee and angles into Central Arkansas and is approximately 60 miles wide, would also block half of the national grain shipments and would disrupt 40 percent of the nation's gas and oil lines.

The topic of earthquakes and volcanoes will be discussed by staff members of the Geology and Geography Departments on Sept. 22, at 3:30 p.m. in the Museum Auditorium.

Chamber rents spaces for bazaar

Booth rental spaces for the 12th annual Carbondale Yard Sale and Auction went on sale Tuesday, according to the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce. The event is scheduled for Oct. 1 at the SIU Area parking lot.

Spaces are available for $18 and $24, depending on location. Each booth is equivalent in size to one parking space.

Space can be obtained through contacting the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, 105 S. University Ave., 349-2146. The deadline for renting space is noon, Sept. 30. Attendance at the yard sale is usually 10,000.

The yard sale will be held from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., with the auction beginning at 10 a.m. In case of rain, the sale and auction will be held the following day, Oct. 3.

Bulls to throw weight around in School of Agriculture test

By William Jason Yong
Staff Writer

In an effort to improve the beef cattle industry in Southern Illinois, the SIU-C School of Agriculture is sponsoring a bull performance test.

The eighth annual test, sponsored by the Animal Industries Department at the School of Agriculture, will be conducted at the bull test station, University farms, according to Harold Dee Woody, program supervisor.

"The objective of the program is to aid the improvement of the beef cattle industry in Southern Illinois," Woody said.

The objective, he said, can be achieved by evaluation of the ability of the bulls to gain weight rapidly through measuring the amount of feed required to produce one pound of weight gain, and by providing an opportunity for cattle breeders to purchase superior performance-tested bulls for use in their breeding herds.

Woody said that last year, the program attracted about 400 people from Missouri, Kentucky and Illinois. He expects about the same number of people to participate this year.

This year, Sept. 15 is the deadline for enrolling bulls in

Solar energy plan to be discussed

Solar energy options for domestic water heating will be explored at a free workshop scheduled Sept. 16 and 18 at the Carbondale Community Center, 607 E. College.

Jeff Graeff, instructor and designer with the Shawnee Solar Development Corp., will speak on solar development Corp., will energy through using solar methods and conservation measures. His talk is to deal with the advantages and disadvantages of different types of domestic water-heating systems.

The two sessions will begin at 7 p.m. on the 16th and 9 a.m. on the 18th.

At a second program to be scheduled later, participants will receive instruction in how to build cost-effective solar hot water systems.

The programs are sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, Shawnee Solar Project, the Other Utility of the City of Carbondale and the State Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Persons interested in the workshops may contact Hugh Muldoon, Shawnee Solar Project coordinator, at 457-8172.

the test.

The fall testing program will begin Oct. 21 at the bull station, Woody said. The actual test, which will last for 140 days, starts Nov. 4 and 5 with an average of two weights carried out on two consecutive days, he said.

A $125 testing fee per bull will be charged for labor and maintenance of the facilities, he said. In addition, consigners will be charged for feed fed to their bulls at actual cost, he added.

Woody said that the bulls will be placed in pens measuring 27 feet by 104 feet. Six pens are available to handle 72 bulls per test period, he said.

The bulls will be individually fed using the Calan Broadbent Feeding System and weighed every 28 days, he said.

The system is more commonly referred to as Individual Feeding Doors, said Woody, associate professor in animal industries. The doors operate automatically to enable the bulls to reach out and eat the feed, he said.

A magnetic chain is placed around each bull's neck and the doors will slide open whenever the bull puts its head on the door. Each magnetic chain has a different combination, Woody said.

The bulls are fed daily by students employed at the SIU Beef Center, he said.

The bull performance test, he said, was established in 1974 by the Animal Industries Department and the Illinois Livestock Association.

Trophies will be awarded to high performing bulls of each breed. Seven breeds will be tested, Woody said: angus, chianina, charolais, simmental, limousin, maine anjou and polled hereford.

A bull auction will be held within two weeks after the test period's conclusion.

In 1980, about 50 bulls were auctioned, netting $1,320, Woody said. Last year, the auction attracted 55 bulls and netted $1,230, he added.

Watch out for this 90-pounder, she can pack a powerful punch

By Jack Wallace
Student Writer

For Takako Oshima, doing what she wants has made her a gifted and respected martial arts practitioner.

"I was the youngest in the family and I was expected to be a boy," says Takako, a 22-year-old graduate student in linguistics. "I think I can do anything I want."

Although it's becoming common for women to study martial arts in Japan, Takako's parents still express concern, she says. "They don't agree with the idea," she said. "They don't want me to get injured."

Takako, who is 5 feet tall and weighs about 90 pounds, studies the martial art method known as "aikido," which was founded and developed by Master Morihei Ueshiba in Japan.

Aikido, as a self-defense art, teaches that effective self-defense is possible without serious injury to the aggressor.

Before college, Takako studied kendo - a form of Japanese martial arts involving swordsmanship. "I became more interested in martial arts during my freshman year at Osaka Women's University," she said.

"In Japan, my teacher, master, was a man. It was all women at the university, and sometimes we practiced with a 'brother' university," Takako said.

Takako said Japanese men respect female Japanese martial artists. "Japanese men don't mind being taught by a woman. If a girl has a higher martial arts degree than a man, naturally the girl teaches the man."

Atsuyuki Naka, vice-president of the SIUC Kendo Club, supports the idea of women studying martial arts. "A woman usually has less physical power than a man, but she can develop strong mental power through the practice of martial arts, making her better able to deal with an unexpected situation," he said.

Takako never expected to teach aikido in the United States, but an unexpected series of events led to an invitation to teach a class at the Student Recreation Center.

Elliot Freeman, 26, head instructor for the University Martial Arts Club, was told by a professor that a Japanese student, who was a black belt in aikido, would be staying at her home.

Freeman asked Takako to teach aikido. The class meets at noon every Saturday in the martial arts room of the Rec Center.

Freeman is now one of Takako's students. Takako to make a second grade black belt soon.

"From being in aikido for seven years, and looking at aikido myself, I think she has some of the strongest fundamental techniques I have seen," said Freeman.

Guido Bernstein, University Martial Arts Club instructor who is a black belt in Tae Kwon Do, says that Takako "communicates well with her students and is very well organized."

The founder of aikido was, in Takako's words, "small, and old and skinny." "I just think that aikido is different from other forms of martial arts because you don't have to be big," she said.

One position required in aikido involves sitting with the knees out and the feet folded

Teen released on charity bond charged with strangling four

CHICAGO (AP) — An alleged teen-age rapist released from jail on a bond that Catholic Charities helped post has been charged with strangling a mother and her three children while he was free, court records show.

The organization put up $500 of a $1,500 cash bond, the necessary 10 percent of a $15,000 bond set for James Ealy, 17, that sent him back to his South Side Chicago Housing project, according to records.

On Aug. 16, neighbors found the bodies of Kristina Parker, 33, her children, Mary Anne, 15, and Cora, 12; and Mary Anne's son Jonatae, 3, in the family's apartment in the South Side UTA project. Police said each had been strangled and the 3-year-old boy had been sexually molested.

Charity spokeswoman Dolores Dorman acknowledged over the weekend that the charity had put up part of a bond for Ealy through a program in which the organization provides such money for minorities meeting certain criteria.

Ealy, who had been charged in March with raping a woman in the housing project, was charged with the slayings. He reportedly told police he was angered when Cora called him "wino" and "red eye" because of an eye infection.

Ealy was freed on bond in June. Catholic Charities' role in providing part of it surfaced in a recent court hearing at which Circuit Judge Roger Kiley revoked the rape bond after Ealy's arrest on murder charges.

Dorman said the posting of such bonds is a "normal process" when a client meets criteria set by the charity's bond program.

One of the stipulations, she said, is that a suspect has no previous record, is a member of a minority group, and that the suspect's family put up some part of the bond.

In Ealy's case, his family apparently raised $1,000 in cash, with the charity putting up the other $500, officials said.

Dorman said the organization's bond program was instituted in 1970 with the idea of helping minorities who often "were picked up and arrested because they happen to be in the vicinity" of a crime. She said such people also occasionally faced problems of "misidentification."

Charity spokeswoman Dolores Dorman said the posting of such bonds is a "normal process" when a client meets criteria set by the charity's bond program.

Money leaders trying to avoid crisis

TORONTO (AP) — Faced with perilous financial strains, which Canada's prime minister called the worst since World War II, economic leaders from 146 nations grappled with the problem of how to avert an international lending crisis.

"The conditions we face today are worse than any since our beginnings," Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said Monday to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, institutions created in the years following World War II.

"These hard times, and these perceptions of looming crises, are generating fear in the minds of some of our people," Trudeau said in an opening address to a sea of gray- and blue-suited finance ministers and central bankers attending the four-day conference of the two institutions.

Trudeau's remarks underscored the anxiety officials are expressing about the global recession and the tens of billions of dollars in debt that private banks are unable to collect from troubled developing countries such as Mexico.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said the United States "will probably be a little more upbeat than the rest of the world as far as saying we think the world economy can recover more quickly than, perhaps, some people think."

"We also feel that although the situation is disturbing and is grave, it can be handled as far as the international banking arrangements are concerned," he told reporters.

As the delegates listened to speeches in a hotel ballroom, about 50 demonstrators protested outside, bearing signs that read: "Bankers Starve Third World Babies!" and "Bankers Are Crooks!"

Developing countries hold more than $500 billion in loans from private banks and other foreign sources. Mexico, the largest borrower, is working out emergency arrangements with its lenders because it has been unable to make $10 billion in payments due this year on its $80 billion debt.

Poland, another big borrower, is unable to meet its payments, and bankers fear other major debtors such as Argentina and Brazil will go the same route.

As a result, most of the debate here has focused on whether the IMF has sufficient lending resources to control the situation until economic times improve, presumably in the next year or so.

back under. "This is very difficult for some Americans," Takako said.

Americans seem to be very good at forward rolling, and she finds this somewhat surprising. "In Japan it would take three months or so to get used to forward rolling, but they can do it from the start."

Once she arrived in the United States, learning to speak fluent English came easily for Takako.

In Japan, everyone has to study English in junior high school. "It's written English, so it's different from spoken," she said.

She started learning to speak it while attending Osaka Women's University. "It's really Americanized in Japan. We studied both American and British literature. Fortunately, I had many American friends, so it didn't take long to learn spoken English."

Takako expects to be in Carbondale about two more years. She says she feels at home.

"There are many Japanese things here in terms of food, people and so forth. Many people are interested in Japanese and the Japanese language."

United Way drive seeks $115,000, kicks off Sept. 23

Carbondale United Way will be seeking $115,000 to assist 18 community service organizations when it formally kicks off its fundraising campaign on Thursday, Sept. 23.

As in previous years an 8 a.m. breakfast at the Student Center followed by a kick-off at McAndrew Stadium is scheduled for the beginning of the campus and city drive.

On Sept. 21 training for the drive's coordinators and unit representatives will be held in the Old Main Room from 8 to 10 a.m.

SIU's goal for the drive is $41,000 according to Marian Davis, who is in charge of the SIU-C collection effort.

Indian students to elect officers, show two films

The Indian Student Association will show two films and hold its annual elections at 5 p.m. Saturday in Student Center Ballroom A.

Namak Halal (Loyal) stars Amitabh Bachchan, Smita Patil and Sashi Kapoor. Bibi O-Bibi (Oh, My Wife) stars Sanjilo Kumah, Redhin Kapoor and Punham Dhillon. Admission to the films is $1.

Elections will be held during the intermission between the films. Any Indian students interested in being nominees for the election need to contact President Malay Acharya at 549-4170 by 6 p.m. Friday and need to be present for the election.

Federal lawmen question Cullotta
on 128 murders

CHICAGO (AP) — An informant considered by law enforcement officials as the best inside source on the workings of the Chicago crime syndicate has been questioned about 128 unsolved murders in and around the city, the Chicago Tribune reported today.

Frank Cullotta, being held in protective custody by the federal government in an undisclosed location on the West Coast, was interviewed last week by investigators from the Cook County state's attorney's office, the newspaper said. The investigators got permission from the U.S. Justice Department to conduct the interview.

Cullotta already had been interviewed by the department's Organized Crime Strike Force unit from Chicago, the FBI and the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. It was detectives from Las Vegas who persuaded the 45-year-old Cullotta to become a government informant last April, the newspaper said.

The strike force unit and state's attorney's office reportedly have agreed to share Cullotta's information, with the federal agency planning to prosecute potential crimes such as racketeering, truck hijacking and the shipping of stolen goods, while the local agency tracks down leads in the murder cases.

Some of the 128 murder cases compiled by the state's attorney's office go back 20 years, the newspaper said. Cullotta has named alleged killers and given the crimes' motives in 18 cases, authorities said.

Enjoying that last summer swing

Myron Russell, 10, of Carbondale enjoys his day. The weather provided a beautiful day for his off from school by having a swinging Labor Day. Evergreen Park picnic.

Phone rate plan hearing is tonight

A public hearing on Usage Sensitive Service will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Murphysboro Community Center, 17 N. 14th St.

Proposed by the General Telephone Co. to be initiated in Murphysboro, USS is a system where customers are billed for each local call placed, instead of a uniform monthly charge.

The Southern Counties Action Movement and the Murphysboro City Council have both gone on record opposing the proposal, at least until it is studied further by state agencies.

GTE representatives have said the system is more fair than using a standard monthly rate, because each customer would be billed for actual calls made.

Chicken chosen more, but beef slumps

By Warren E. Leary
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chicken is carving out a bigger place on the table and steak is becoming less common as costs and health concerns cause a noticeable shift in the American diet, a consumer group said Monday.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, in a report drawn largely from government statistics, said Americans' eating habits have changed markedly in recent years.

Between 1976 and 1981, annual consumption of beef fell by 19 pounds, or more than 19 percent, to 78.8 pounds per person, the center said.

At the same time, poultry consumption jumped 10.6 pounds, or more than 20 percent, to 62.8 pounds per person.

Rising prices and declining production were partially responsible for beef's falling out of favor, said the center, but it attributed some of the drop to peoples' concern about the health effects of eating fatty meats.

However, about half the beef decline was made up by increased consumption of pork, the group said. The average American ate 63 pounds of pork in 1981, up by 10 pounds, or 19 percent, from 1976.

Poultry, notably chicken, is leaner and cheaper than red meats and this accounts for its increasing popularity, said the center. Pork is also cheaper than beef.

The report was an update to a more extensive examination of American eating habits since 1970 that the center, a non-profit group funded by membership donations and foundation grants, published in 1978. It drew most of the figures from the U.S. Agriculture Department, interspersed with data from other federal agencies and industry.

Michael Jacobson and Mary Colburn, from the center, compiled the figures.

Coffee consumption dropped 18 percent since 1976, with consumption falling from 800 six-ounce cups to 567 annually.

But consumption of soft drinks, which contain lots of sugar or artificial sweeteners, shot up 25 percent in six years. Americans now drink 412 12-ounce sodas each year, or slightly more than one a day, up from 329 six years ago.

Other changes noted over the last six years included a 5 percent decrease in the amount of fresh or frozen fish eaten, but a 14.3 percent jump in consumption of canned fish, mostly tuna.

Former World War II enemies to reunite, take submarine tour

By Brenda H. Ingerson
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Thirty-eight years after American sailors captured a German submarine with 60 men aboard, the former enemies are about to become friends" in a face-to-face meeting here.

At least 12 of the 60 Germans who were aboard the captured U-505 will attend. For most, it will be their first opportunity to "fraternize" with the men responsible for the demise of their vessel, said Jim Sanders, who was a flight deck officer aboard the USS Guadalcanal.

Sanders said Tuesday that though the Americans weren't permitted to talk to the captured German sailors, the four-day reunion which begins Thursday won't be the first communication between victor and vanquished.

Hans Gobeler, a mate in the sub's "commanding room," began corresponding with Sanders by letter some time ago, letters which show "they were glad they were saved," Sanders said.

Sanders, 63, said he watched on June 4, 1944, when American planes opened fire on the sub after it was spotted on sonar by his aircraft carrier's destroyer escort off the African coast.

Stricken by depth charges, the sub surfaced and "was going out of control in a half circle, its rudder jammed," Sanders said. "The Germans did the smartest thing they could do — they got off the sub and into the water as fast as they could. It saved their lives. As soon as we could see no one was manning the deck gun, the shooting stopped."

Years later, Gobeler wrote Sanders. "He said they were lucky to be alive," Sanders said. "By 1944, the U-boats were getting picked off — and every time they came into port, they saw the attrition.

"I saw them coming aboard. Their general air was one of relief, and some of them were smiling. They were loyal to their ship — but they saw the handwriting on the wall, too," said Sanders, now an attorney in Paterson, N.J.

Sanders recalled, "I never saw any malice (between captured and captors) then, and I think that's a good sign. I want this reunion to help toward peace."

"We want these Germans to feel at home. This is not national policy, of course, but it's very important they feel comfortable. I am an optimist. I think we can avoid war again."

Sanders and other sailors sat at night outside the captured Germans' quarters aboard ship and listened to them sing. "They were pretty darned handy at singing as a group. Hitler taught them to sing in the Hitler Youth, you know, and we'd send in requests. A lot of them handled English pretty well, but otherwise we didn't talk much," he said.

The German officers and family members, including Mrs. Karla Lange, widow of the submarine's captain, Cmdr. Harald Lange, will be feted at a Thursday night dinner by some 65 naval veterans and relatives of the USS Guadalcanal Task Group.

Friday, the Germans will tour the captured U-505, which has been displayed at the Museum of Science and Industry here since 1954, pause for a luncheon and then lay a wreath honoring war dead at the eternal flame in the Daley Center Plaza, a museum spokesman said.

"We want these Germans to feel at home. This is not national policy, of course, but it's very important they feel comfortable. I am an optimist. I think we can avoid war again."

Bettenhausen gains victory at DuQuoin dirt track race

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Gary Bettenhausen set a new track record in his one-lap qualifying heat and went on to win the 100-mile dirt car race Monday at Du Quoin.

His qualifying time of 32.408 broke Tom Bigelow's time of 32.594 set in 1976. Sheldon Kinser also went under Bigelow's time, but after Bettenhausen set the new mark.

Steve Chasse, who had the fourth fastest qualifying time, finished second, followed by Bobby Olivero of Lakewood, Calif., Bill Englehart of Madison, Wisc., and Ricky Hood of Memphis.

Bettenhausen went into the race in the pole position, but quickly lost that place as Kinser moved up to take the lead in two laps. Bettenhausen dropped as far as third during the race, but regained and kept the lead after his two top competitors, Kinser and Rich Vogler, dropped out.

Although Bettenhausen was the winner of the race, it was Vogler who earned much of the crowd's appreciation.

Vogler had trouble throughout the day, stopping often during the practice run to have his crew work on the car. He worked on the car until just before getting into position for his two laps of qualifying. His fast time, 33.819, did not earn him an automatic spot since it was not in the top 20. He was in the second set of 20 that could qualify by being in the top four of a 12-lap semi-final. (The field was to be composed of the 24 drivers, but Tom Bigelow made it 25 after being added as the promoters' option.)

Vogler's car continued to be worked on up until the start of the semi. Once there, however, it looked as though Vogler, last year's winner, was back on the track.

He won the semi and was able to compete in the final. Though he started from back in the field, Vogler began to capture everyone's attention as he moved from 21st to 8th in just six laps.

The Indianapolis driver continued his spurt; he was fourth after 10 laps, and by the 30th, he was in front.

That lead, however, and the feeling of many in the crowd and pit area that no one was going to catch him, didn't last long as Vogler shredded a tire on turn two of the 37th lap.

Kinser, who was then in second place, had hit the wall coming off that turn and apparently came in contact with Vogler's tire, though Vogler said he did not feel anyone hit him. Kinser was shook up but uninjured.

With Vogler and Kinser both out, third-place Bettenhausen found himself back in front. He stayed there for the remainder of the race without any serious challenge to his spot. Bettenhausen held a 3-second lead over Chasse after the 60th lap and increased it to 8.5 by the 85th.

Bettenhausen said it helped to have Kinser and Vogler out of the race.

"The way Rich was running, I couldn't have caught up," he said, "though I don't think he could have maintained that pace. His tires were smoking."

The 25-driver field that started the race had dropped down to 14 by the end. No serious injuries occurred, though the yellow flag appeared several times and there was one red-light situation in lap 84 after fuel spilled on the track when George Snider came high off turn two and rolled over.

During the red-light, all cars are pulled off the track and crews can do anything to the car except add oil. Most drivers geared up for the final 16 laps by changing tires and making other adjustments, but Bettenhausen said his crew made no changes.

The last 12 laps seemed anti-climatic after the yellow came out in 88 and remained until 91, only to come out again for 95-97. Bettenhausen by then had the race, but a battle for 2nd, 3rd and 4th was settled at the end.

Former Cardinal 3rd baseman dies

By Paul Nowell
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ken Boyer battled cancer with the same hard-nosed enthusiasm that he brought to baseball, his former St. Louis Cardinal teammates said Tuesday.

Boyer died Tuesday morning at the age of 51.

"He was a real battler, not a showman like some players today," said former Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst. "Kenny said yesterday that he believed he could come back from this. He went down fighting."

Boyer, who managed the Cardinals for two seasons, was considered the Cards' greatest third baseman.

He played more than 2,000 games in his 15-year playing career, which included stints with three other teams. He was a lifetime .287 hitter, a seven-time All-Star, and five times the Gold Glove Winner for third basemen.

August A. Busch Jr.,

president of the Cardinals, said Tuesday: "Ken Boyer gave the Cardinals and the baseball fans of St. Louis many great moments to remember, and we will remember him with admiration and respect."

Bing Devine, who was general manager of the Cardinals during Boyer's years with the club, said Boyer never complained about his ailment.

"He never complained about his illness or sat around wondering 'Why me?'" Devine said. "That's the type of player he was. He went about his job and never complained."

Schoendienst called Boyer a "hard-nosed player who made 'em look easy in the field. He didn't get the recognition he deserved until 1964. But to see him in failing health, after he was such a big and strong player, was tough to handle."

Funeral services will be held Thursday in Ballwin, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis, and burial will be on Friday in Purcell, Mo.

Boyer was born in Liberty,

Mo., but spent most of his life in Alba, Mo., near Joplin. He was first signed by the Cardinals to a major league contract in 1949.

His brother Clete played with the New York Yankees, and is currently the third base coach with the Oakland Athletics. Another brother, Clyde, pitched with the Cardinals and Kansas City Athletics in the '50s, and now is pitching coach for the Kansas City Royals.

In 1964, Boyer was the National League's Most Valuable Player. The Cardinals won the World Series in seven games over the New York Yankees that year with the help of a Boyer grand slam home run.

Boyer hit .300 or better five times for St. Louis and cracked 255 of his 282 career home runs for the club.

He had 1,141 career RBI, including 1,001 for St. Louis. His 33 home runs in 1960 were the most ever by a St. Louis third baseman.

deflections and raised his career sack total to 20.

"He was making tackles all the way across the field," said Dempsey.

After working all spring and summer on pass drops, a new stance, new techniques, different reads and a weightlifting program, Harper made the conversion without a hitch. After Saturday's game he said that at times he had felt lost, and had made a few mental mistakes, but a look at the films Monday made him feel better.

"I didn't do as badly as I thought I did," he said. Western Illinois did its best to confuse him-reaching into the playbook for everything that would look confusing to a new linebacker—but the Saluki defensive leader wasn't fooled often.

One thing the Leathernecks didn't do was attack Harper head-on. Sooner or later, says Dempsey, somebody will try it, at least to test him. Dempsey didn't sound that worried about the prospect though. And listening to Harper chuckling over a particularly vicious tackle of a scrambling Brad Blakey Saturday, one gets the impression that he looks forward to it also.

The winning difference is in the fan's hands

It had to happen sometime.

Last weekend, three SIU-C teams picked up four victories and a fourth took third place in a field of 13.

The football Salukis pounded Western Illinois 38-7, the field hockey team beat a tough Purdue squad 2-1, the volleyball team squeaked past a talented Kentucky team and overwhelmed Illinois and the women's golf squad finished a very respectable third at the Purdue Classic.

NOW IT MAY be a little too early in the year to get excited, but if the first weekend of competition is indicative of the year ahead, Saluki fans better hang on to their seats this fall.

Last year, the football Salukis were tabbed as the dogs of the year by a national publication, but SIU-C proved that magazine should stick to its skin photos. This year, no one is making fun of the Salukis. In fact, SIU-C has gained respect on the gridiron, and no one is laughing when Coach Rey Dempsey talks about contending for the 1-AA title.

SIU-C USED TO be a national power in field hockey. While still considered one of the top teams in the Midwest, the Salukis could manage only 12-10-2 records the past two seasons. This year, as many teams trimmed field hockey from their already trimmed athletics budgets, Coach Julie Illner went out and picked up top-notch recruits to bolster her experience-laden squad.

The volleyball team hopes to break into the Top 20 this year. After the Kentucky match, it appeared that the aim was maybe a bit high. But after the Illinois match, it is evident that the team is talented. With young potential yet to be tapped, the aim at the Top 20 may be a bit conservative.

The third-place finish for the women's golf team was a fine accomplishment as well. Coach Mary Beth McGinn picked up Lisa Kartheiser from Ball State after the Cardinals abandoned their golf program, and the transfer student's seventh place finish was the Saluki's best.

AND THERE IS optimism in the other fall semester sports as well.

Women's tennis Coach Judy Auld had another bonus recruiting year. Last year, her top three recruits, Alessandra Molinari, Heidi Eastman and Amanda Allen paced the Salukis to their best season ever. With the addition of more top-notch talent, this year looks even better.

Year in and year out, SIU-C has always fielded a strong men's cross country team. Even with a new coach, Bill Cornell, this year should be no exception.

The women's cross country team has youth going for it. Although lack of experience may hurt the Salukis early in the season, Coach Claudia Blackman believes her young harriers will be fine runners by the end of the year.

Once the laughing stock of collegiate basketball, SIU-C now has gained some respect. Coach Allen Van Winkle has cashed in on his stock of junior college transfers to bring immediate results, and backed up the investment with some fine recruits.

ON THE WOMEN'S side of the court, Coach Cindy Scott has upgraded the schedule to include national powers. Assistant Coach Julie Beck has brought in mounds of talent, both in the forms of transfers and recruits.

Both men's and women's swimming and gymnastics have been considered national powers. Both of these sports are rich in All-Americans. While graduations and injuries leave some questions, Bob Steele, Tim Hill, Bill Meade and Herb Vogel always come up with great talent and strong seasons.

There are approximately 23,000 to 24,000 students enrolled at SIU-C this fall. Now, of course, not all of them are sports fans, but quite a few are.

There were about that many students at SIU-C last fall, too. And a big number of them were sports fans. The problem was that they didn't let anyone know about it.

NOT ONE ATHLETIC event was sold out last year.

No, the Drake football game filled about 14,500 of McAndrew Stadium's 17,000 seats.

No, the Tulsa basketball game filled about 8,000 of the Arena's 10,014 seats.

And the largest draw for the women, the UCLA basketball game, brought 750 fans to the Arena.

THE STUDENTS OF SIU-C pay a $30 athletics fee each semester. Of course the monetary support is needed and appreciated by both men's and women's athletics, but fan support is needed as well.

ADMITTEDLY, MANY SIU-C teams have been less than great, even less than mediocre. Every year there is a hype for fans to go out and support the Salukis. And almost every year the students turn their noses to the athletics teams to go occupy the bars on the strip.

SIU-C is not a UCLA, or Penn State, or Notre Dame or USC when it comes to national powers.

But the athletes who perform in the maroon and white are representing all of the students at SIU-C, so maybe the mediocrity of the past athletic teams is a reflection of the apathetic attitude of the students.

SO GO OUT to a football game and have some fun. Go to Davies Gym and watch a volleyball or basketball game. Go to the Arena and build the atmosphere that should surround an athletic event. Go to the Recreation Center and watch some of the best teams in the United States compete.

If you see a victory, you'll go home happy.

If you see a loss, though, remember that it is not whether the game is won or lost, but how it is played.

If home is where the heart is, then John Harper will move his heart to his new position for the Salukis—linebacker. Harper had 12 tackles Saturday night against Western.

New home fits Harper

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

The first thing Granville Butler wanted to do when reporters approached him in the Saluki locker room Saturday night was the praise the Lord.

"I always said if I ever got interviewed that I would thank the Lord," said the senior linebacker after SIU-C's 38-7 rout of Western Illinois in Macomb.

Then Butler praised fellow linebacker John Harper in almost equally reverent tones.

"I never played along-side a man like him," said Butler, with more than a trace of awe in his voice.

It was deserved. Playing in his first game ever at linebacker, Harper outshone everyone on a defense that intercepted seven passes and limited Western to just 12 yards rushing.

He had seven solo tackles, five assists, one tipped ball, and put fear into three Western quarterbacks while playing defensive end in passing situations. Harper graded at 86 efficiency according to the Saluki coaches, tops on the team, and was one of three defensive and six team award winners.

"He looked good out there," understated Saluki coach Rey Dempsey. "He can intimidate people."

Before this year Harper had never played a down at linebacker. He was a defensive end and a good one, good enough to be named first team end on the Missouri Valley All-Conference team.

Then, this spring, the Saluki coaches came to him and said that as of then he was a linebacker.

"It wasn't a suggestion type thing," remembered Harper. "I never really did think I'd get switched to linebacker. That thought never crossed my mind."

It didn't take long for Harper to see the possibilities that linebacking offered.

"It's a great challenge," he said.

At 6-3 and 234 pounds, Harper is a natural linebacker, and would be switched to that position if he plays professionally. But Dempsey said that wasn't the reason for the switch. The Saluki coach just got tired of watching teams run most of their running plays in the safe direction—that is, away from his best player.

Yet Harper was still second on the team last year with 111 tackles, with 54 solo efforts. He also caused four fumbles, recovered three, had five the end of the first half, when Western had changed quarterbacks and quickly moved into Saluki territory. Taylor picked off a pass at the one-yard line to preserve SIU-C's 17-7 lead. Then in the third quarter he stepped in front of another Pence pass, tipped it in the air, grabbed it and streaked 72 yards for a touchdown that helped seal the Leathernecks' fate.

"Terry truly is a great corner back and he keeps getting better," said SIU-C coach Rey Dempsey. "He has gotten to the point now where he seldom gets beat."

Taylor was one of six Salukis named as team award winners by the Saluki coaching staff.

The others were defensive tackle Ken Foster, linebacker John Harper, quarterback Rick Johnson, running back Derrick Taylor and tight end Pierre Pugh.

Saluki cornerback Terry Taylor was named Missouri Valley Conference defensive player of the week Tuesday for his play in SIU-C's 38-7 victory over Western Illinois Saturday night in Macomb.

Taylor had two of the Salukis' team record seven interceptions and returned one of them for a touchdown.

His first interception came at
