Cosmonauts land unharmed

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet-Afghan cosmonaut team landed safely early Wednesday after two earlier attempts were aborted in a daylong space drama triggered by problems with the spaceship's control system, Radio Moscow said.

The radio said the cosmonauts landed at 4:45 a.m. in Central Asia time where the Baikonur cosmodrome is located, as applause breaking out at Mission Control was broadcast.

"The long awaited moment is here," the report said. "They have been transferred into Russian hands."

The Russian-language broadcast did not give the cosmonauts' condition.

In Washington, President Reagan received word of the cosmonauts' safe landing from the National Security Council, a spokesman said.

A correspondent from the Soviet news agency Tass, interviewed by United Press International, confirmed the Moscow Radio broadcast.

The landing ended a space drama in which the Soviet cosmonauts Vladimir Lyakhov and the first Afghan in space, Abdul Ahad Mohamad, were left orbiting after two attempts to descend for a landing were aborted because of computer problems.

The government newspaper Izvestia had termed the situation aboard the Soyuz TM-5 spacecraft "serious," saying the two cosmonauts had no food on board and only enough air in the Soyuz life support system for two days.

"It really is an extraordinary situation," the newspaper said of the two abortive re-entry attempts. "This is happening for the first time in the history of space exploration."

"Nobody could have guessed that the spacecraft's control systems would go out of order shortly before the landing," said Radio Moscow in an English-language broadcast to North America.

Re-entry problems have long plagued the Soviet manned space program and the deaths of at least four cosmonauts have been linked to re-entry

Streets lose lights at night

The streets of campus were left in the dark Tuesday night.

A generator went out and electricians came to get the street lights back on, a Physical Plant worker said.

Steve Banks, a student worker at the Physical Plant, said the lights went out at about 7:45 p.m. and workers left then to uncover the problem.

Buildings kept power and the residence halls were not affected, according to reports.

Banks said Physical Plant employees were looking into the problem.

Lt. Andrew Smith of University Security said, "We have not experienced any problems whatsoever."

Foot patrols were increased, but no reports of theft or burglaries, were received, Smith said.

Transit service reported no increase in service because of the dark streets.

'Homes for homeless' law nears

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

Legislation that would get homeless people in Southern Illinois into good houses is close to becoming law.

"We have homeless and hungry people in our midst, and we want to do something about it," Congressman Kenneth Gray, co-sponsor of the bill, said during a press conference Tuesday.

Under the bill, houses foreclosed by the Farmers Home Administration will be set aside and leased to any non-profit or charitable organization or church at the cost of one dollar per year.

The organization that purchases the house will then take over sponsorship.

The organization will screen applicants and place needy families into the house.

The sponsor will be responsible for the maintenance of the property.

"We want to make sure there is not one single person living in substandard housing" in Southern Illinois, he said.

Recent figures distributed by the Farm Home Administration show about a hundred houses sitting vacant in Southern Illinois.

"It's really criminal for these houses to sit vacant," Gray said.

The houses were vacated after the residents decided to move on. He said the administration is working very hard to keep people in their homes.

Blood drive seeking 1,100 pints

A blood drive seeking to get 1,100 pints of blood donations starts today in the Student Center after a liver transplant drained the American Red Cross of a record-breaking 1,300 blood products, which are components of about 500 pints of blood.

A call from the American Red Cross to replenish dwindling Southern Illinois blood supplies can be answered Wednesday and Thursday in Student Center Ballroom D and the International Lounge, Vivian Ugent.

The post-Labor Day blood drive will take donations from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. both days, and appointments can be made for quicker service at an appointment desk on the first floor of the Student Center or by calling Personnel Services Tuesday through Thursday, Ugent said.

The drive will be sponsored by the Annuitants and the Joint Benefits Committee, who will provide a majority of the volunteer staff.

Those who give blood must be 17 or older, weigh more than 110 pounds and have an 8-week interval between donations.

Donations can also be given at the St. Francis Xavier Church from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. Friday, Ugent said.

Protesters challenge candidates

By United Press International

Democrat Michael Dukakis and Republican George Bush made progress Tuesday toward arranging two debates that could help decide the election, but on the campaign trail both men were heckled by hostile crowds in the worst receptions they have received all year.

The Massachusetts governor, campaigning near Chicago, ran into shouting anti-abortion protesters who yelled "you're a baby killer" and forced him to delay his remarks, while the vice president was booed and called a "union buster" by ironworkers in Portland, Ore.

Meanwhile, the Dukakis camp agreed to Bush's demand that the two can-

The largest Pell Grant allowance has increased but the number of students eligible for it has decreased.

The neediest students are getting more money, but the moderately needy are getting a lot less than before.

Students who used to qualify for aid may not meet the new requirements and may not get as much aid as they used to because of changes in the federal formula used to determine aid eligibility, Janet Finnerty, of Student Work and Financial Assistance, said.

The Congressional Methodology Act of 1986, which created a new eligibility formula, went into effect in the 1988-89 school year, she said.

Dependent students are being hurt because the new formula assumes freshmen can contribute $700 toward their educational expenses and those older than freshmen can contribute $900, Finnerty said.

That is in addition to the previous assumption that students can use 70 percent of their base income from the previous year for education, she said.

Students are expected to contribute more and therefore qualify for less aid, she said.

Under the act, Congress, instead of the financial aid and education agencies themselves, determines the eligibility formula, she said.

The Congressional Methodology formula is used to determine eligibility for the Pell Grant and other federal financial aid programs and is also used by the state to determine eligibility for state programs, Finnerty said.

The act is designed to be valid through 1991, but minor revisions will be possible, she said. The act will be re-evaluated now that it is in effect and students are complaining, she said.

Gus says the Methodology Act is methodically a pain.

Prime minister promises not to give up West Bank

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, kicking off the right-wing Likud Party's fall election campaign, said Tuesday that Israel will not give up the West Bank and Gaza Strip and promised to crush the Palestinian uprising. "The Likud will carry on massive settlements of Judea and Samaria (the West Bank) and Gaza until everyone can see that we are here to stay," Shamir told more than 3,000 cheering supporters.

Economic disorder brings danger of famine

DHAKA, Bangladesh (UPI) — Government officials and international aid experts fear there is a serious danger of famine in Bangladesh because devastating floods have disrupted the distribution of supplies, sources said Tuesday. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the famine threat loomed because of the massive disorder in Bangladesh's economy and transportation system.

Greece reopens military base talks with U.S.

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — The government announced Tuesday it will hold a new round of negotiations next month with the United States over the future of American military bases on Greek soil. The announcement came one day after the suspension of the latest round of talks, during which Greece officially notified the United States of its intention to close the Hellenikon Air Base at Athens airport.

British mail paralyzed by weeklong strike

LONDON (UPI) — About 80 million pieces of mail awaited handling in Britain Tuesday as a weeklong strike by tens of thousands of postal workers brought international and local mail delivery service to a virtual halt. No end was in sight to the first mail strike in more than a decade, which started as a 24-hour walkout Aug. 31.

Government union gets first black president

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Sturdivant, the first black to lead a major AFL-CIO union, said Tuesday his election to head the American Federation of Government Employees is a sign the labor movement is changing and that "America works." Sturdivant recently engineered a close upset victory by ousting Kenneth Blaylock, longtime president of the federation, the nation's biggest union for federal employees.

Civil rights chief steps down as top adviser

WASHINGTON (UPI) — William Bradford Reynolds, the Justice Department's controversial civil rights chief, will no longer play a dual role as top adviser to the attorney general, department spokesmen said Tuesday. Reynolds, who will remain as head of the civil rights division, late last week moved out his office at department headquarters where he worked as "counselor" to Edwin Meese, who left office as attorney general Aug. 12.

Center for Disease Control ducks criticism

ATLANTA (UPI) — The national Centers for Disease Control denied Tuesday accusations in an independent appraisal that it tried to hide criticism of its efforts to fight AIDS among blacks and Hispanics. The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported the CDC deleted all criticism of its minority AIDS program from an independent appraisal before the report was released at a national conference.

$500,000 allegedly lost in fraudulent gold schemes

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — At least 38 Illinoisans allegedly have been swindled out of more than $500,000 by con artists involved in various gold schemes, state officials said Tuesday and they estimated hundreds more may have been bilked out of millions of dollars. Illinois investigators from the Secretary of State's office have joined with officials from the North American Securities Administrators Association in investigating the so-called dirt-pile scam which they call the fastest growing investor fraud scheme in the nation.

Long's ideas mark 'Golden Age' for J-School

By Miguel Aliba
Staff Writer

Howard Rusk Long represented in large part the progressive era marked by the development of the School of Journalism and the blooming of the Daily Egyptian into a serious community newspaper.

It is unfortunate that journalism students of today do not recognize the name of the man who brought the School of Journalism to the top 10 in the country. Without him, much of what is taken for granted by students today, this newspaper included, may never have been.

Long, who died Aug. 30, stood more than six feet tall, and weighed 175 pounds. He often was described as being impatient with slow progress, a man of action and ideas.

He played an active role in the University when it was under the expansion-oriented mind of the late President Delyte Morris, who raised the University to a major institution.

Long, who played down his own role, is quoted as saying, "It has been my luck to be here during the Golden Age of SIU-C."

It was not until the fall of 1953 that Long arrived at SIU-C. He became the first chairman of the journalism department, a position he held until 1970.

Back then, the school had about eight teachers and 50 students. The Egyptian, then a student lab newspaper, was produced bi-weekly and the School of Journalism was not accredited. The school's accreditation became his top priority.

Long used what he had learned from Walter Williams, credited with forming the first journalism school at the University of Missouri, about structuring a successful journalism program. In his campaign for accreditation, he wanted a department that was more than just vocational training. He hand picked faculty members from other areas to augment his staff. He deemed it appropriate that students should receive a rounded liberal arts background.

Long's work paid off in 1960, when three sequences were accredited under the journalism major.

But right along side his accomplishments at the University is the impact he had on his colleagues and the people around him.

"Dr. Long was a mover at a time when SIU-C administration officials were also movers," George Brown, retired professor of journalism, said. "He developed ideas and gave them to others to implement. He got one idea, assigned it to someone else and then moved to the next idea."

That may well have been the reason for his success here and abroad. The constant motivation that kept Long reaching goals and elevating expectations is evident in both his administrative and journalistic life.

Manion Rice, retired associate professor in journalism, smiled as he reflected on what Frank Luther Mott, who helped found the first journalism school at the University of Missouri, said to Long, "H.R., you have far too active a mind for the academic world."

Long was diverse in his likes. "Here was a man who spent six days in Europe and in those six days, he saw six operas," Rice said. "But he also loved Missouri football. While on that European trip, he wanted to stay on top of what was happening. He said, 'Manion, I'll fire you if you don't get every Mizouo clipping while I'm away.'"

Long, who helped restructure the Daily Egyptian into a daily newspaper, also served as its fiscal officer. He often would come to the defense of the student paper, a strong advocate of the free press.

In one of his many Daily Egyptian editorials, he wrote, "At one time or another, the Daily Egyptian has been in conflict with nearly every group on campus and in the community with nearly every administrator in the University." Continuing, he wrote, "It becomes apparent that the people most bitter in their denunciation of the Daily Egyptian are those who have tried and failed to control the Daily Egyptian. And there we have it...the real issue of any medium of communication, is who is in control."

Bill Harmon, managing editor of the Daily Egyptian for 14 years said, "Dr. Long was a practical man. He had a strong commitment to the independent newspaper, always saying that there wasn't a story that couldn't be printed if you had the facts."

But Long also had his critics. At one point, the journalism faculty accused him of allotting himself nearly a full page to reply to what he considered inaccuracies about him published in other newspapers. This arose from a controversy surrounding press freedom, the use of editorial space, where nine Daily Egyptian news staff writers had to buy space in the newspaper to express their views. They were refused space on the editorial page, according to the letter, because the editorial was critical of the University administration.

Others would point to Long's distance between himself and the students, and his numerous visits abroad. Members of faculty committee considered him high handed in his direction of the school.

Long retired in 1974 from the University after having served 21 years in one capacity or another.

Director acting like best friend of unions

THE WOULD-BE unions at the University missed the boat. Despite advertising, direct-mail campaigns, free barbecues and countless news releases, Robert Roubos has outdone them all.

While we have not reached a decision on collective bargaining, the director of the School of Music probably has done more to attract union followers than all the organizing efforts combined. Never mind that Roubos and the University won a federal suit filed by William Hammond after he was denied tenure in the School of Music. The way Roubos and the University treated Hammond illustrates a need for change.

ROUBOS SAYS Hammond was denied tenure because he did not meet the school's criteria. Information made public during the course of the federal trial calls some of that criteria into question.

For instance, although "collegiality" is not mentioned in the list of School of Music criteria for tenure, the University freely admits collegiality was, and should be an issue in granting tenure.

Several definitions of collegiality have surfaced during the fray. We believe we can add another one: Being a good ol' boy or girl.

COLLEGIALLY ASIDE, Roubos' about-face in his assessment of Hammond's fitness as a teacher is even more distressing. According to documents filed with the federal court, Hammond sounded like, in Roubos' estimation, the kind of faculty member the University is afraid of losing to higher-salaried jobs.

Hammond is a noted performer. He performed a solo recital at Carnegie Hall, at least the musical equivalent of playing pro football in Busch Memorial Stadium.

Even Roubos lauded some of Hammond's public service work, but gave him black marks because "his collegial relationships with the music faculty and secretarial staff were less than satisfactory." Hammond failed to attend the final five meetings of the college's fine arts advisory committee in the Spring of 1986 and refused to play at an Artrain reception. Roubos changed his mind about Hammond after Hammond voted against a plan to dissolve the Department of Cinema and Photography.

The federal magistrate wrote in his decision in favor of Roubos, that it was obvious Roubos' vote to deny tenure was motivated in part by Hammond's vote in the cinema and photography issue. Roubos did not have an adverse effect on the tenure vote because Roubos was only one of 12 who voted to deny tenure.

A SMEAR CAMPAIGN helped bring Hammond down. Four music faculty submitted sworn statements that music faculty actively lobbied against tenure for Hammond and that there were several false rumors concerning Hammond being spread among faculty during those days his tenure was being reviewed. Clearly, Hammond was not one of the "good ol' faculty."

The Hammond case is hardly a description of an atmosphere where academic freedom thrives. Since so much weight is given to collegiality in determining who will stay and who will go, it doesn't sound like a collegial atmosphere either.

Hammond was not given the opportunity to defend charges made against him by another faculty member at the Promotion and Tenure Committee meeting. Hammond's peers on the Judicial Review Board were not collegial enough to give him a hearing on the tenure issue. The Board of Trustees decided it would not hear an appeal of Hammond's grievance.

WHILE THE COURT ruled in favor of Roubos and the University, it noted that Hammond had a right to a hearing even though the court did not have jurisdiction to order the hearing. It appears that Hammond, if he cares enough about SIU-C, will have to go to yet another court if his colleagues are to ever hear his side of the story. That's too bad. Imagine a University on one hand committing itself to free discussion and on the other denying a noteworthy faculty member such a discussion.

After hearing union activists harp endlessly about the University's legal expenditures, we can't wait until they get hold of this one. Thanks a lot, Dr. Roubos

Article ignored fact that SIU-C won suit over issue of tenure

Responsible journalism requires accurate reporting of the facts. Unfortunately, this did not happen in the story regarding the Hammond tenure case which appeared in a recent issue of the paper.

First, the writer stated that "The Director of the School of Music retaliated against former faculty member William Hammond by denying him tenure." Since I could neither give nor deny him tenure, this is an inaccurate statement.

Note that according to University policy (Faculty Handbook, 1987), "Primary responsibility for evaluation of the academic qualifications of candidates for tenure rests with the faculty."

The facts are that I was one of 12 music faculty who voted against tenure for Hammond in a 12-3 vote.

The School of Music promotion and tenure committee voted three against and two for tenure. The College of Communications and Fine Arts promotion and tenure committee voted unanimously, 6-0, against tenure. All 26 votes were made by faculty.

What (Federal Magistrate Phillip M.) Frazier did say, was, that in his opinion, Hammond had a contractual right to a hearing and that "the power to actually do that lies within the Illinois Court of Claims."

Furthermore, this decision was upheld by faculty on the Judicial Review Board as well as administrators.

Second, the title of the story, "Magistrate rules Hammond has right to hearing," is not accurate. What (Federal Magistrate Phillip M.) Frazier did say, was, that in his opinion, Hammond had a contractual right to a hearing and that "the power to actually do that lies within the Illinois Court of Claims."

It would, therefore, be up to this court to decide whether or not he had a contractual right to a hearing.

Third, any statements which Professor (Darrell) Dunham may have made should have been quoted in the article. Dunham purportedly said that "Roubos broke the law because his vote to deny Hammond tenure was in part a violation of civil statutes." Nowhere in the 31-page report of the Federal Magistrate can this statement be found or could this conclusion be reached.

Statements I made in an interview with the reporter were not included in the story. They included Frazier's finding that "the court finds in favor of the defendants and against plaintiff on all claims."

It must be understood, that in spite of press reports and statements made by union officials and other interested parties, the University won the case. — Robert Roubos, director, School of Music.

Decision shows need for union

The Hammond case has been "decided" and is anyone surprised that the "decision" went against the faculty member? Here's how it works.

We have a "Faculty Handbook" and assorted other "procedures," all of which are binding on faculty.

But, when it gets to court, the court decides that these procedures have no legal standing when it involves administrative misdeeds. Or, just as often, "it's an internal matter which the courts will not rule on, so the decision (against faculty) stands."

This is a system of justice? It may sound great to Deans, Presidents, Chancellors, etc.

What can we do about it? As a start, we need a Collective Bargaining contract — this at least gives us a chance at justice and the support of an organization which has something like the clout of the union of administrators, politicians, and judges who are in collusion to keep us without an effective voice in our own fates.

SIU faculty don't blow your chance, which may come this Fall if the three years of stalling by the SIU system is at last at an end. — M. Lionel Bender, professor, Department of Anthropology.

Former student remembers Long

Howard Rusk Long, who died Aug. 29, was not familiar to most of your readers, because he was of another era at SIU.

Because of that, his towering personality — equal to battles with Delyte Morris — and his accomplishments in building a journalism department amidst the byzantine workings of a booming University probably can't be fully appreciated today.

I don't know the atmosphere on campus today, so I am not sure that it will seem remarkable to today's students and faculty that I have very clear memories of H.R. shouting into a telephone from his tiny Egyptian office in a Quonset hut, standing up to a very angry University vice president and thus allowing me, a green undergraduate reporter, to do my job without interference from the administration.

Twenty years after graduating, I do know that a man who combines real vision and drive with compassion for others is rare enough in any walk of life, and H.R. was one of those men. It is not stretching facts to say that the newspaper this appears in and the program it is connected with are very much H.R.'s creations. More importantly, there are hundreds and hundreds of journalists and teachers who are better professionals and better people because of what he did at SIU. — John W. Eppelheimer, Class of 1968.

Prof's unclear view on clear-cutting shows ignorance of forestry issues

I returned from a conference devoted to filing suit against the National Forest Service to find a very misleading letter to the Daily Egyptian editor from Clark Ashby. I would like to comment on professor Ashby's numerous assertions and accusations. For the sake of clarity, I will address his letter paragraph by paragraph.

Paragraph 1: Quoting Ashby: "The message that people now living in the Pomona area want to keep that part of the Shawnee National Forest for their private backyard was loud and clear." Quite the contrary is true. The Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, (RACE), is composed of people from all over the state of Illinois, not just Pomona. RACE has proposed that Cave Valley be set aside as a protected area with foot trails so that everyone can enjoy the area. This idea was first proposed by University professor Dr. William George in 1971 and was supported by Edward Henschel, then District Ranger, as well as Fritz Winter, then NFS biologist.

Research funded by NFS in 1978 recommended expanding the proposed avian sanctuary to include the entire Cedar Creek drainage district. Cave Valley comprises the eastern part of the district; the western part has been clear-cut. RACE is trying to save the area that is left, which has been described by George as "one of the richest breeding avifaunas in the midwestern prairie region...."

Paragraph 2: Quoting Ashby: "Some of the most beautiful woods I know were deserts 30 or more years ago." I am extending a personal request to Ashby to take me and interested SIU-C students to a 30-year-old clear-cut that compares with Cave Valley or any other old growth forest. I am also extending an invitation to anyone interested in visiting the Forest Service's Cedar Creek Demonstration Project. It is a 22-year-old clear-cut that you can't even see through, much less walk through. Contact me at the General Store and I will arrange a trip to this and other clear-cut areas.

It is obvious that Ashby has no understanding of the economics of the timber industry.

Paragraph 3: Quoting Ashby: "Contrary to the article, the greatest diversity...is not found in old-growth, deep woods." In Cave Valley, we have old-growth woods merging with bottomland and 40 to 100 foot bluffs with two meandering creeks down the middle. This results in an ecological diversity unequalled in the state of Illinois and perhaps the U.S. This area also supports a significant growth of giant cane which the Swainson's warbler uses for nesting. The Swainson's warbler is state endangered and being considered for federal listing — RACE never stated otherwise.

Paragraph 4: Ashby's assertion that wilderness areas "were selected on the basis of an extensive and intensive inventory by trained professionals" is at the heart of our differences. Professionals with the Illinois Department of Conservation, the Illinois Natural History Survey, the National Forest Service, the Sierra Club, the Audubon Society and SIU-C have called for Cave Valley to be set aside. The Forest Service has responded by issuing orders to clear-cut Cave Valley. I will further suggest that "students from third world countries" who have named their "forests stripped" would understand exactly why RACE is opposed to stripping Cave Valley.

Paragraph 5 is so ridiculous I find it difficult to respond. It is obvious that Ashby has no understanding of the economics of the timber industry. I must add that we owe Thompson Woods to the foresight of Delyte Morris, not to the railroad or clear-cutting.

Paragraph 6: The folks who want to lock up Cave Valley are in the Forest Service, not RACE. When the Forest Service has finished with the clear-cuts, they block the ingress roads with iron gates to keep the public out. RACE proposes constructing foot trails between the Pomona Natural Bridge and Cave Valley to assist the public in their efforts to enjoy the area. Additionally, it is the "responsible people in the Illinois Department of Conservation and the Illinois Natural History Survey" who have repeatedly told the Forest Service to save Cave Valley.

Ashby's last paragraph is most revealing. I cannot imagine how the students at SIU-C, and the Daily Egyptian in particular, can sit by and allow Ashby to make such derogatory remarks about the D.E.'s heretofore excellent coverage of this controversial issue. I am particularly concerned that Richard Nunez, editorial page editor, would support Ashby's accusations without having researched the subject. He has not talked with anyone at RACE. I have invited him to peruse my documents, but he is currently "too busy." Surely, the D.E. has higher ideals than this.

In closing, I would like to invite anyone interested in Cave Valley and the Shawnee National Forest in general, to come to Pomona and find out for themselves what is really happening in our forests. You too, Ashby. — Joseph M. Glisson, RACE.

Botany prof a 'babe in the woods'

I was somewhat chagrined to read Clark Ashby's letter attacking efforts to preserve the Cave Valley section of the Shawnee National Forest. Particularly surprising is that Ashby focuses his attack solely on the notion that the Swainson's warbler alone may not be disturbed if clear-cutting is allowed there. One wonders if he is even aware that people from his own department have studied the area and found rare and endangered species of plants to proliferate. A recent letter to the Forest Service from Dr. Robert Mohlenbrock states that this area may be critical to the survival of at least 13 plants.

The diversity of the area is not limited to plants. Other state and federally endangered species which have been found in the area include, the motis sodalis, the Cooper's hawk, the red-shouldered hawk, and the lynx rufus — a bobcat.

Ashby's lack of understanding for Forest Service practice and economic reality is simply bewildering. Between 1973 and 1983, the Forest Service lost roughly $1.3 billion dollars in subsidizing its timber sales. While Ashby's concern for the homeless is certainly commendable, he does not seem to realize that much of the timber cut in this country is simply sold abroad at prices that fall far below the costs of production.

One wonders, in reading Ashby's letter, if he has ever actually seen the blighted spectre of clear-cut patches in a national forest.

One wonders, in reading Ashby's letter, if he has ever actually seen the blighted spectre of clear-cut patches in a national forest. The ecological consequences of clear-cutting are perhaps as unsettling as aesthetic considerations. Soil erosion and the consequent disturbances to fish, wildlife and water have been recognized for decades.

There is simply nothing "natural" about clear-cutting, and Ashby's analogy to gardening is simply untenable.

While the focus of this letter is not to defend the Daily Egyptian, perhaps it should be noted in passing that Ashby's letter evidences no great understanding of botany. While the Daily Egyptian may blunder along in reporting things from time to time, it is hardly to be cited as a graphic example of "yellow journalism" — giving effect to a deliberate policy of disregarding accuracy to increase newspaper sales.

Ashby's uninformed proselytizing was simply uncalled for. While he is entitled to his opinions, they should not be viewed as serious scholarship. It's really somewhat remarkable, in fact, that as the quality and diversity of our natural environment continues to deteriorate and decline, someone with a Ph.D. in Botany would even attempt such a blind utilitarian analysis. — Bob Felix, school of law.

didates limit themselves to two debates with each other and one between their running mates.

Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas, traveling with the Massachusetts governor, told reporters that the progress was made during a telephone conversation with James Baker, head of the Bush effort.

Bush spokesman Mark Goodin said the two men would continue their discussions Wednesday. "Mr. Baker simply said that he felt that a little progress was made," Goodin noted Tuesday.

Brontas added, however, that the dates and the formats for the confrontations were not set. The Dukakis camp wants the final debate close to Election Day, while Bush strategists would prefer that there be more time between the potentially pivotal event and the election.

Prosecutor opens in Nitz murder trial

MARION (UPI) — Williamson County State's Attorney Charles Garnati Tuesday described murder trial defendant Richard Nitz as a "homosexual-hater" who allegedly beat Michael Miley with a baseball bat, then shot him in the head and decapitated the body to hide ballistic evidence.

Garnati told a jury of 10 men and two women in his opening statement that: "You're going to see that Michael Miley was a homosexual, and you're going to see that Richard Nitz was, and is, an obsessive homosexual-hater."

Garnati said Nitz, 36, beat the 23-year-old Miley, a Murphysboro resident, with a baseball bat, later shot him in the head, cut off the head to hide ballistic evidence, concealed the body in the trunk of Miley's car and attempted to burn the car. Garnati contended Miley was slain near Crab Orchard Lake April 6 and that his body was taken to a remote area of Union County.

The prosecutor said Nitz's estranged wife, Rita, 29, who also is charged with murder, helped her husband put Miley's body in the trunk of Miley's car and that she drove the car to Grassy Bottoms in Williamson County while her husband drove their car to the place where Nitz allegedly shot Miley in the head and then decapitated him.

Garnati said authorities found items described as matching ones belonging to Miley in the Nitzes trailer home and claimed that Richard Nitz used credit cards belonging to Miley to buy clothing, shoes and two large stereo speakers

WSIU gets matching grants to replace worn equipment

WSIU and WSIU-TV has won two matching grants totaling $47,975 to help replace worn out equipment, Lee D. O'Brien, director of the University's Broadcasting Service, said.

O'Brien said the grants are from the National Telecommunication Information Administration, a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce, and SIU-C is required to match both grants dollar-for-dollar.

"Listeners will hear a cleaner sound and will enjoy a more reliable transmission once the new equipment is operating."

Rehearsal for shuttle to begin on Thursday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The crew of the shuttle Discovery flew to Florida Tuesday for a dress-rehearsal countdown Thursday, one of the last major steps before launch on the first post-Challenger flight in just three weeks or so.

"It's really hard to believe, at least by the calendar, that we could be less than three weeks from launch," shuttle skipper Frederick Hauck told reporters after climbing out of his sleek T-38 jet. "But we are, we're ready. I don't know about you, but we're really excited. We're going to have a good time."

Hauck and his four crewmates, all shuttle flight veterans, arrived at the Kennedy Space Center around 2:15 p.m. EDT after a flight from Houston aboard three T-38s. Before landing at the spaceport's shuttle runway, the astronauts swooped over launch pad 39B where Discovery stands waiting for blastoff.

Weather permitting, Hauck and co-pilot Richard Covey were scheduled to practice landing procedures late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

and to purchase a microwave link to extend from the campus studios to the FM station's transmitter near Tamaroa.

O'Brien said the equipment will improve radio reception.

"Listeners will hear a cleaner sound and will enjoy a more reliable transmission once the new equipment is operating," O'Brien said.

He said it will take about a year to buy, install, and start up the transmitter. Other additions could be working in about six months.

L.A. gangs take no holiday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gang members wounded three people in two shootings early Tuesday in the wake of a holiday weekend in which a police officer and at least three other people were killed by gangs.

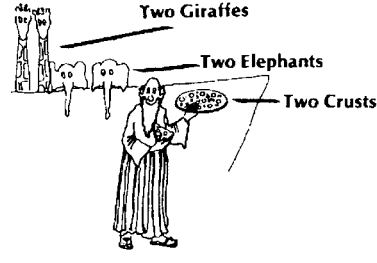

In other developments, state Attorney General John Van de Kamp was to release the state's "Annual Report on Organized Crime in California."

In the latest violence, police Sgt. Robert Bloomer said one man was critically wounded and a woman suffered gunshot wounds.

Both victims were taken to Martin Luther King Jr.-Drew Medical Center, Bloomer said.

Banquet honors retiring University employees

By University News Service

The University honored 102 employees who are retiring or have retired during the 1987-88 year at a banquet on Aug. 24 in the Student Center ballrooms.

President and Mrs. John C. Guyon were hosts for the annual event, which honors retiring faculty, administrative-professional staff members and civil service employees.

Retirees are:

James E. Aaron, Carbondale, a professor of health education, with 31 years of service. Aaron, an expert on driving safety, heads SIU-C's Safety Center. He joined the faculty in 1957 as a lecturer and has been a full professor since 1973. He was appointed by former U.S. President Richard M. Nixon to the National Highway Safety Advisory Committee in 1970. Aaron holds a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Illinois (1950 and 1951) and a doctoral degree from New York University (1960). He is a native of Eldorado.

Joyce Atwood, Camillus, N.Y., a senior editor at the SIU-C Press, with nine years of service. Atwood retired Dec. 31, 1987. In 1985 she won a Fulbright-Hays Visiting Lectureship and taught in Malaysia. She was graduated from the University of Oklahoma, and has held academic publishing jobs at the Naval Institute Press, Annapolis; the East-West Center Press, Honolulu; and the University of Tennessee Press, Knoxville.

Steven Barwick, Carbondale, professor of music, with 33 years of service. Barwick, a pianist, is known for recovering and preserving "The Franco Codex of the Cathedral of Mexico," a foundation of polyphonic choral music written in the 1580s. The work was published in modern form by the SIU Press in the mid '60s. Barwick, a native of Lincoln, Neb., earned a bachelor's degree at Coe (Iowa) College (1942), a master's degree at Eastman School of Music (1943) and a doctorate from Harvard University (1949). Before he came to SIU-C in 1955 he taught at Blue Mountain

George C. Brown

(Miss.) College, Western Kentucky State College and the University of Pittsburgh.

George C. Brown, Carbondale, professor of journalism, with 32 years of service. Brown came to SIU-C as an assistant professor of journalism in 1956 and also taught printing in what is now the College of Technical Careers. He served as business manager of the Daily Egyptian in the 1960s and worked in the now defunct department of printing and photography from 1965 to 1968. He has been director and assistant director of the School of Journalism and director of journalism graduate studies. Brown headed SIU-C's University Honors Program from 1979 to 1985. The Arkansas City, Kan., native holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the

Ikua Chou

Kansas State Teachers College and doctorate from SIU-C. Before coming to SIU-C, Brown co-owned and managed the Solomon (Kan.) Valley Tribune from 1944 to 1947 and taught printing at Tuisa Central High School from 1948 to 1955.

Mary Louise Brown, Carbondale, academic adviser with the Center for Basic Skills, with 23 years of service. Brown served as an academic adviser in the College of Education when she first joined the SIU-C staff. She holds a bachelor's degree from Northeast Missouri State University (1940), and is a charter member of the National Academic Advising Association. She retired April 30.

Ikua Chou, Murphysboro, professor of political science, with 24 years of service. Chou earned an undergraduate degree in China and three advanced degrees from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. An expert on Chinese and Soviet studies, Chou came to SIU-C in 1964 as a visiting professor of political science. He was on the faculty at the College of William and Mary from 1949 to 1964 and taught a summer institute at George Washington University from 1956 to 1960. Last year he was awarded a grant from the U.S. Information Agency to teach international relations at Northeast Normal University in China. He retired May 31.

James M. Crowner, Carbondale, professor of special education with 22 years of service. Crowner spent much of his career finding ways to help emotionally disturbed children. During the 1970s, he directed an institute in Toluca, Mexico, which aided handicapped children. He also set up a special education institute in Malta in 1972. Before he arrived at SIU-C, he organized special education programs at Michigan State University and the University of Arizona. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Detroit (1948), and master's and doctoral degrees from Michigan State University (1954 and 1960). He retired May 31.

Country FAIR Supports SIU Athletics..

The Blue Bell Story

Blue Bell, the flower, grew wild and a promotion around the origins of the Blue Bell Pastry, which the brand was first introduced by the Company's founder, Louis Nappier, in the early 1930s. Walter G. Cook and Vernon A. Cook in 1932 on Campus Hill northwest of Philadelphia. The area was formed by the grapes that are still being used to make the wine through the area. Blue Bell has grown to be the most famous and the Company's trademark. The original German family recipe. Blue Bell has grown to be a leading brand of wieners, sliced frankfurters, sausages, buns and hot dogs in business and southern states.

Stop by Country Fair this week and purchase a package or two of Blue Bell all meat wieners. Country Fair will donate the purchases of all the Blue Bell hot dogs to the Athletic Department at SIU (up to $500.00). Help support Jim Hart's quest to acquire money to support the "Dogs" of SIU.

Russian film book translated

Eisenstein essays contain artistic concerns, insight

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

"Nonindifferent Nature," by Sergei Eisenstein, a Russian film maker known for his works "Potemkin" and "Ivan the Terrible," is an extensive collection of ideas on the film industry.

The book is translated by Herbert Marshall, founder and director of the University's Center for Soviet and East European Studies. He studied under Eisenstein at the Higher State Institute of Cinematography in Moscow, where he graduated in 1935.

Book Review

Marshall translated the book from Eisenstein's own lectures and discussions with his students.

In a foreword to the book, Marshall explains that Eisenstein's essays were unusual and complex, and his ability to write in four different languages made translation difficult, even for someone familiar with his native Russia.

The book, published by Cambridge University Press, contains many of Eisenstein's ideas on the structure of film and provides insight into his mind.

The essays were written during and shortly after World War II and show his mature way of thinking about film. They also disclose the artistic concerns he had during the last part of his life.

Among other aspects of cinematography, Eisenstein touches on landscape, lighting, camera angle, color, and gesture. The illustrations provided in the book are many of Eisenstein's own sketches and diagrams.

The book itself is highly intellectual, but it is simplified by Marshall's understanding of Eisenstein.

Despite his superb job of translation, Marshall still manages to convey what he calls "Eisenstein's cinematic style."

Museum looking for guides

Interest in art and children prompts resident to volunteer

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

A long-term interest in art and working with children led one Carbondale resident to volunteer as a University Museum guide.

Through new museum exhibits, Lois Carrier, who has been a museum guide for 12 years, said her interest in art has grown.

"Whenever the museum has a new exhibit, we (guides) learn through training sessions," Carrier said. "Through more extensive sessions in the fall we review the purpose and mission of the museum and how to approach groups."

Carrier usually is called on to guide one or two tours a month.

"People who have been with the museum longer give more tours," Carrier said.

Although people of all ages

Museum guide says her interest in art has grown because of new exhibits tour the museum, Carrier said she most enjoys guiding children.

"Children are not only experiencing a museum for the first time but also the University," she said. "They don't have the prejudices that older people have of art."

Fossils and historical dioramas are favorite displays of children, Carrier said.

For the past eight years several children also have been museum guides.

This year six eighth-graders from the gifted class at Lincoln Junior High School, 501 S. Washington St., Carbondale, have volunteered as guides.

"The students make an important contribution to the museum," Carrier said. "They are children who are very verbal and learn easily because there isn't very much time to spend training them."

The museum is looking for volunteers, Geraldine Kelly, educator, said.

"This is a very mobile community," Carrier said. "We've had scores of wonderful people as guides, but they've had to leave."

The museum welcomes anyone who wants to be a guide, Kelly said. Volunteers go through an orientation session on Sept. 21, Oct. 5, Oct. 12 and Oct. 19.

Classes are from 9:30 a.m. to noon in the Museum Auditorium, in the north end of Fanner Hall. Individuals interested in volunteering can contact Kelly at 453-5388.

MacFlash
Sept. 7, 1988 - Carbondale, IL. Apple Computer, Inc. is pleased to announce to full-time students, faculty, and administrative personnel of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale the opportunity to purchase all products from the popular Macintosh family of Apple computers. This program provides for greatly reduced educational pricing, an innovative student loan program, and complete local support. For further details contact the SIU-C Tech Support Center / Wham (453-4361) or Computer Corner / University Mall (529-5000).

MacFest
Come see the Macintosh family of computers on Sept. 12th
Ballroom B - Student Center 9AM to 5PM

Get your hands on a Macintosh before your hands are full.

Homework has a nasty way of piling up, doesn't it? One day, you feel on top of it all—the next, you're behind on your notes, your research, your term paper.

Our advice: Get in front of a Macintosh® computer.

True, it may not turn a lifelong procrastinator into an overachiever. But it will make an enormous difference in how quickly you can write, rewrite, and print your assignments.

Not only will a Macintosh change the way you look at homework, it'll change the way your homework looks—with an endless variety of type styles, and graphics that'll make your professors think you bribed a friend in art school.

And as for all those classroom scribbles, research notes, and assorted scraps of paper that litter your desk, we give you HyperCard®—an amazing new program that provides an easy way to store, organize, and cross-reference each and every bit of information. (HyperCard is included free with every Macintosh.)

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh today.

Before your homework slips completely through your fingers.

The power to be your best.™

'Most Wanted' nabbed

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Acting on a tip from a viewer of the television show "America's Most Wanted," police Tuesday arrested a murderer who escaped from Arkansas's maximum-security prison in July.

Police spokesman Sgt. C.F. Adams said James Ray Renton, 50, was arrested without incident shortly after 3 a.m. while he slept at the Salvation Army.

Adams said five officers were dispatched to the Salvation Army after police got an anonymous tip about midnight from someone who had seen a dramatization Sunday night of Renton's case on "America's Most Wanted."

The Fox Network show recreates cases of the nation's most wanted criminals.

"Somebody had seen the TV show, recognized him and called us," Adams said.

Police searched the dimly lit Salvation Army barracks until they found a man whose tattoos matched those of Renton, said Adams.

"They surrounded his cot, tapped him on the shoulder and woke him up," he said. "When they saw the tattoos, they knew for sure he was their man."

Renton was convicted in 1979 and sentenced to life in prison without parole for the slaying of a Springdale, Ark. policeman. He had managed to elude officers since his escape July 11 with three other inmates.

Police found in Renton's gear a sawed-off .12-gauge.

Wildfires threaten 3 towns

By United Press International

Firefighters feared Tuesday resurgent winds up to 40 mph would push flames or sparks from vast Yellowstone National Park wildfires over protective "back-burn" areas and torch three small tourist towns in Montana as well as a campground in Idaho.

The National Weather Service said the wind was expected to kick up in the late afternoon causing a critical problem in the war against the 61,300-acre Storm Creek fire at the northeastern end of Yellowstone.

Back-burn buffer zones, covering 45-square miles, were created by controlled burning and bulldozing to protect evacuated Silver Gate, Cooke City and West Yellowstone in Montana.

A team of 150 to 200 firefighters with eight bulldozers was deployed as a wall of defense for the Island Park Recreation Area in Idaho's Targhee National Forest. Campsites in the area were evacuated during the weekend when they became threatened by the North Fork fire in Yellowstone across the border in Wyoming.

More than 50 brush and forest fires have ravaged Yellowstone since the start of summer. Less than 10 remain out of control. There were 9,600 firefighters deployed at the trouble spots.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center in Idaho reported that 39 fires had charred 1.23 million acres in Wyoming, Montana, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, California, Utah and Nevada.

"All the fires were quite still last night, none of them made any big runs or jumps—not a one," Don Jackson, a BIF spokesman, said. "The inversions and weather picture is changing right now, and the weather is a factor."

Quadriplegic gets $60 million

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Housing Authority and Westinghouse Tuesday agreed to pay nearly $60 million damages to a young girl who was left a quadriplegic and unable to speak as a result of a knife attack in a project elevator.

JoLynette Banks, 16, was 10-years-old when she was attacked on Feb. 11, 1982, in an elevator of the now-shuttered Washington Park Homes. Her attacker escaped and never was captured.

The assailant used the emergency button to stop the elevator, Banks' attorney, Todd A. Smith, said Tuesday. The emergency buzzer did not sound and "about two months before this happened the CHA pulled the security" from the project, he said.

JoLynette lay bleeding in the elevator from 6:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. The massive blood loss caused brain damage, including loss of speech, Smith said.

The attacker fled through the ceiling of the elevator.

"This child has sustained the most devastating injury one can suffer."

Five canoeists sucked under barge

UTICA (UPI) — Authorities say it is a miracle that two Chicago women and their three children managed to escape injury when their canoe was runover by a loaded barge on the Illinois Waterway near Starved Rock State park.

Gloria Hernandez and her son, Chris, 8, were canoeing with Rosemary Arias and her children, Angelina, 8, and Anthony, 6, when their canoe was struck by a barge Monday.

Mark Walczyski, a Department of Conservation officer at Starved Rock, said the women are "inexperienced canoeists and paddled into the path of the barge" while attempting to return to the boat ramp at Starved Rock.

The barge, loaded with crude oil and being pushed downstream by the towboat Gloria G., hit the canoe and the five occupants were pitched into the river and sucked under the barge.

All five canoeists were wearing life jackets, authorities said. They passed under the barge and surfaced safely at its side, where they were pulled from the water by Robert Bothwell of Palos Park, who was boating nearby.

"They were not injured, so we brought them to the office at Starved Rock to warm up and change clothes," Walczyski said.

"Then they were on their way," he said.

Sangamon president begins medical leave

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Sangamon State University President Durward Long has begun a 60-day medical leave for evaluation and treatment of alcohol abuse and extreme fatigue.

The announcement of Long's leave came late Monday in a press release. Long already had left town and was unavailable for comment.

Long's decision to seek treatment follows allegations that he drunkenly fondled a student last month during a university-sponsored pig roast, a kickoff to the opening of the fall semester.

But system officials said those allegations have nothing to do with Long's request for a leave.

University officials said Long has been contemplating treatment for some time, but delayed taking a leave because he put university concerns first. Those concerns, they said, included a salary settlement with teachers, reworking the university's budget.

Advice To The Drug Worn

by Dr. Buzz
A weekly column answering alcohol and drug questions.

Dearest Dr. Buzz, (when will I ever meet you?)
I notice that one of your previous responses, to "Cracklin", that you said smoking cocaine can cause severe respiratory problems such as congestion, black sputum, chronic coughing and sore throat. This made me think. While I've never done crack and don't know anyone who does, I have several friends who "lace" their joints (marijuana) with cocaine. I used to do it myself...when I smoked a lot of pot. How serious will the above symptoms get? Can they occur immediately or do they have to build up over chronic use? Is smoking cocaine as addictive as snorting it? Is smoking cocaine like smoking crack?

"Mar!juana again"

Dear Mary Jane:

Smoking anything is harmful to your health but the effects of any amount or type of smoke is a result of an interaction between your unique body, your current state of health, and your frequency of use. Folks who smoke for the high effects of both pot and cocaine inhale deeply and hold the smoke in longer than with cigarettes, therefore increasing the amount of residue left in the lungs and subjecting the lung tissue to heated toxic gases for a longer period of time. When crack or freebase cocaine is smoked it is heated up to a high temperature and the vapors are taken into the lungs. Depending on the condition of your lungs you can get a sore throat quickly along with associated congestion, which is part of your body's efforts to cleanse itself. Cocaine is a crystalline substance that has lots of very sharp microscopic edges that irritate and damage your mucous membranes. Smoking cocaine in a freebase form is extremely addictive and some people have reported feeling that they were hooked on it after just a few times, even in just a few weeks time period. Simply lacing cocaine in it's common powder form into marijuana joints is not as addictive as smoking crack but in response to your question about what I think about a person occasionally smoking a cocaine-laced joint 3-4 times a year, I say that you're jeopardizing yourself and your future by trying to play a risky game safely. Often people begin doing a drug experimentally because they feel they can control it. Once they lose their reservations about the drug and feel that it's a "safe" drug for them, it is common for some individuals to move on to experiment with other methods of use that may present greater potential for trouble.

If you have questions about alcohol or drugs - send them to Dr. Buzz c/o the Wellness Center or call 536-4441. Look for your answer in Dr. Buzz's column.

Rhino mating unsuccessful

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — When it comes to romance, Marvin is more of a rhino than a Romeo.

Marvin, on loan from a Tennessee zoo, was brought to the Baton Rouge Zoo to breed with the rhinos, Wagasa and Hatari, but Marvin and Wagasa didn't hit it off very well.

"It was like a demolition derby," said Linda Sanders, a zoo veterinary technician. "What with the sounds of them hitting the gates, the thunder when he ran and her squealing, you could hear them all over the zoo. It was the most incredible thing any of us had ever seen."

Both rhinos came out of the meeting without their horns.

Sanders says all parties are recovering from last Wednesday's amorous battle, and Marvin will be allowed to try again with Wagasa or her zoomate, Hatari.

Marvin apparently was a little more interested in mating than Wagasa was, Sanders said.

"With rhinos, the male is rough with the females during breeding," Sanders said.

"Marvin had amour on his mind. I guess she didn't."

"He picked her up with his horn. I thought he was going to gore her."

The two rhinos began sparring, butting each other with their two-and-a-half ton bodies, and during the fracas, Wagasa had her horn snapped off.

"It looks a lot worse than it is," Sanders said. "She's (Wagasa) mostly pretty sore."

To prevent Marvin from again hurting Wagasa or Hatari, zoo officials cut off his horns.

Elton John selling glasses, jewelry

LONDON (UPI) — Rock star Elton John, cleaning up his cluttered house and image, put his $6 million collection of glitz and glamour on the auction block Tuesday.

The first of a four-day, 2,000-item garage sale featured the flamboyant stage costumes John, 41, says he is "too old" to wear, among them a silver-sequined Statue of Liberty.

Bidding was running well ahead of the $5.1 million predicted, auctioneers said. For example, a blue-denim cushion embroidered with "Man Across the Water" had an estimated value of $170 but drew more than $5,000.

John, who is in the United States preparing for a tour, said he decided to sell his collection "basically because my house was so crowded."

"It was so claustrophobic, it just had to stop," said the singer-pianist who lives in Windsor, England.

A Wurlitzer jukebox fetched nearly $30,000 and an English boot manufacturer paid $20,000 for the 5-foot-tall fiberglass boots he wore in the movie "Tommy." Personalized car license plates garnered $4,000.

There were 100 pairs of his trademark spectacles, including glasses trimmed with feathers and in the shape of lips and a grand piano.

A pair of spectacles festooned with musical notes garnered nearly $6,000.

His jewelry collection, which one critic described as mixing the tastes of "a conservative duchess and a mid-30s flapper," also was offered.

High blood pressure is serious business.

That's one way of looking at it. Another way is to ignore it and hope it goes away. Or tell yourself it's hopeless. And that's called playing with fire. Because there's one thing we know for certain: And that is that high blood pressure can usually be controlled. By following your doctor's advice. By exercising regularly to control weight. By eating the right foods. By cutting down on salt in your diet. And by sticking to your prescribed medication. Because if you don't take it seriously today, it could take you by surprise tomorrow.

Professor beats hero of fifty years to set record

Shea will defend titles next month at championships

By John Welbrey
Staff Writer

Some fifty years ago Ed Shea, now 73 and a professor emeritus in physical education, was a member of the Springfield (Mass.) College swim team. Like most athletes, he had a sports hero. Shea's happened to be Albert Vanderweghe.

Vanderweghe was the captain of the Princeton University team and the first person in the world to break the one-minute mark in the 100-meter backstroke. He also was the captain of the 1936 U.S. Olympic team that competed in Berlin.

Last week, Shea defeated his hero at the U.S. National Masters Swimming Championships at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

"We swam side by side. He led all the way until the last length, and I caught him," Shea said.

Bystanders were astounded by the finish, Shea said. He had not been expected to defeat the former Olympian.

Shea not only beat his hero, but set a world record in the 200-meter backstroke with a time of 3:18.03 for the 70 to 74 age group.

Shea took second in the 100 backstroke in 1:31.00 and second in the 800 freestyle in 3:46.32.

Shea has been serious about his swimming ever since he took up the sport in high school.

to strengthen his back, which had been injured while doing the high jump.

Shea also holds three world titles in the 50-, 100- and 200-meter long course events. He won the titles two years ago in Tokyo, Japan. Shea said he had never experienced anything like it. At the event, he swam against champions from all over the world.

"I stood there flanked by the men who swam in the 1936 Olympics, the great German champion, the Japanese champion, Australian, English and French," Shea said.

"They were all back 50 years later. It made it so different. Just a fantastic moment."

Shea won the races (by only a few tenths of a second in many cases) with German champion Hanne Schwarz always threatening. Schwarz was Germany's champion swimmer who competed in both the 1932 and 1936 Olympics.

"Oh they were close, and the German was the best of the bunch," Shea said.

Shea said he won't be competing against Schwartz in October when he travels to Brisbane, Australia, to defend his titles at the 1988 World Masters Swimming Championships. Schwartz will move up to the next age bracket while Shea remains in the same age group.

The Masters Championships are held every two years at a different host nation. Shea said about 4,000 swimmers from all over the world will be at the event. Nearly 40 will compete in the 70 to 74 range.

Shea also holds three other world records in the 50-, (39:72) 100- (1:28.56) and 200-meter (3:15.22) backstrokes on the short course.

At his home, many of Shea's awards are mounted on the walls or sitting on tables. He jokes that he has others around the house, but doesn't display awards that aren't first-place.

Shea has had other honors along the way. He was a New England Intercollegiate champion and NCAA finalist in 1941.

In 1948, he was an associate coach for the U.S. Olympic swimming team that competed in London. And before coming to SIU-C, he was the swimming coach at Emory University in Atlanta.

Shea may be a natural, but with a sport that takes as much conditioning and endurance as swimming does, he can't afford to rely on natural ability alone. He works out six days a week at the Student Recreation Center pool from 6 to about 8 a.m., swimming 2,500 to 3,000 meters a day. He also attributes much of his success to the Saluki Masters Swimming Club because of the opportunity he has had to practice with them.

"You've got to remember, it's not how many (meters), it's how you do it," Shea said.

Shea admits that slowing is a natural part of life, but said his times are as good as they were two years ago.

"I'll swim until I can't go any longer, but we can't control that," Shea solemnly answered.

Two more former Saluki athletes to join the elite at Seoul Olympics

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

On the surface it appears 1984 was a record-breaking year for the SIU-C men's track team. Fourteen athletes qualified for All-American status in various indoor and outdoor events, and two athletes from that star-studded field are headed for the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, this year.

Elvis Forde, an indoors 500-meter All-American and a member of SIU-C's 4 X 400-meter relay team, will run in the 1988 Games for Barbados. He will compete in the 400-meter dash and on the 4 X 400-meter relay team.

Accompanying Forde will be former teammate Eddie Wedderburn, a 3,000-meter steeplechase All-American in 1984. Wedderburn will compete in that same event for Great Britain.

These two add to the still-growing list of athletes who have qualified for the Olympics this year from SIU-C.

1976 was probably one of the best years in SIU-C track and field history, said Lew Hartzog, who was in his last year as track and field coach and athletics director in 1984.

"In 1976, we had five athletes qualify for the Olympics," Hartzog said.

"I don't think a lot of people have a very good idea of the rich tradition SIU has in track and field."

Hartzog said he would be hard-pressed to find a year where the Salukis didn't have at least one athlete attain All-American status.

"Dating back to 1961, I can't think of a year where this did not occur. It would be very unusual," he said.

Hartzog was responsible for hiring Bill Cornell, men's cross country coach in 1984. Cornell was coaching at Murry State at the time and brought both Wedderburn and Forde with him.

"You might say we planned it that way," Cornell said.

Another athlete from the 1984 SIU-C track team, Michael Franks, a 400-meter specialist and member of the 4 X 400 meter relay team, was also expected to qualify for the Olympics. A summer injury kept Franks from doing so.

"He suffered a hamstring injury midway through the summer," Hartzog said.

"Even so he would have had to run a perfect race in order to beat out the intense competition at 400-meters."

Linemen seek motivation through team's unity

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Together. For the Salukis' offensive line, the word carries as much an impact as their 260-pound plus frames can deliver.

Junior center Bob Grammer said togetherness is something the linemen can cling to as they search for a reputation.

"We've been working here for four weeks banging heads together," Grammer said. "It's kind of something we can hang on to."

Mentally, the offensive lineman must give his all on every play of a drive, lineman coach Rod Sherrill said.

"Each play is an individual victory or defeat," he said. "If your opponent stuffs you, you have to come out after him on the next play. If you nail him you can't rest on your laurels.

"A great drive might be 10 plays and we strive to whip our opponent eight out of those 10 times. The way to determine if you've done your job is if the opposing player makes the tackle, then you didn't do your job."

Senior right guard Pete Jansons said after an initial collision between the offense and defense, hand position is important in blocking.

"If you don't use your hands, the guy can slide off. The objective is to get the guy as far off the line of scrimmage as possible," he said.

When the final gun goes off and the stats are tallied, the offensive linemen don't share in the spotlight. Jansons said their reward comes during the game.

"Getting a good lick on a guy is as good as any touchdown," he said. "If you get off the ball well then it helps keep the (opposing defender) off the ball."

Senior Rob Mason, the starting right tackle, said another way of being rewarded on the field is if a lineman can double his duty by taking out two opponents.

Nina Brackins, left, and Teri Noble make a joint effort to block a Murray State spike during the first game of Tuesday night's match at Davies Gymnasium.

"I want to be able to block more than one defender on a play," he said. "With the wishbone we are being taught to take out a defender and then get up and block another one."

Junior left tackle Tim Schiller said being in the midst of battle on the line of scrimmage doesn't feel as bad during the game.

"There is a lot more motivation to hit people during a game," he said. "The Adrenalin is really flowing and you don't worry about (getting hit)."

Job security serves as a good motivator, Jansons said. "The last stop is the offensive line," he said. "The next stop is not being on the team."

Grammer said the Salukis are not always the brunt of the hitting as it may seem. "We do our share of dishing out some too," he said.

Watching the defense and deciphering their setup is very important, Grammer said.

"If one guy moves on the defensive line it can change the entire block scheme."

For the linemen right now, the biggest hurdle is internal, Jansons said.

"Our biggest problem right now is we are stopping ourselves," he said. "The coaches are not going to let that go on any longer, though."

Mason said a reputation of being hard hitters is one of the line's objectives.

"This year, every time we hit someone we want to let them know where the hit came from," Mason said.

Spikers roll past Racers

By David Gallianetti

If women's volleyball coach Debbie Hunter thinks her team has trouble putting points on the scoreboard early, she need not worry. The Salukis have shown they can add plenty later in the match.

Hunter's squad rolled off the last eight points of the second game and the final 12 in the third game to defeat Murray State 15-6, 15-7, 15-3 at Davies Gym on Tuesday night.

"We have had slow start tendencies the last three times out," Hunter said. "I hope it doesn't develop into a real trend. It doesn't make for the best of comfort."

Despite Hunter's concerns, the Salukis dominated the match with 34 kills to Murray State's 13.

"I'm still a little concerned with our hitting performance," Hunter said. "We didn't have quite the ball control I thought we should have had. That may be the reason our hitting game isn't coming around."

The Salukis had a 267 hitting percentage on the evening. A hitting percentage of 300 is considered above average.

The Racers managed only eight team assists and one block.

Hunter said the Racers' statistics aren't surprising, considering they are a young team. Murray State's roster is comprised of six freshmen and four sophomores.

"They have some good young athletes, but they are really hurting in the size factor," Hunter said. "The program has really improved, though, under (second-year head coach) Oscar Segovia."

Segovia said he was pleased with his team's play.

"With hardly any experience, I thought we performed well considering we were under such pressure here," Segovia said.

"We couldn't take advantage," he added. "We just don't understand momentum."

Lori Simpson led the Salukis with eight kills while Beth Winsnet and Teri Noble both added six. Nina Brackins had five for the Salukis, which move to 2-0 with the victory.

Senior setter Sue Sinclair had 18 of the team's total 28 assists.

LPGA Tour down to wire after King's victory at Rail

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The LPGA Tour goes west this week with a new multiple winner in Betsy King and a neck-and-neck race for top money honors.

King won the $250,000 Rail Charity Classic for the third time in four years while Nancy Lopez came within a stroke of overtaking leading money-winner Sherrill Turner, who did not play.

Victims: TV poor, putting. Lopez 6, King 32nd in the Springfield event. Her winnings of $1,650 increased her year's total to $312,104, only $26 behind Turner.

Lopez is entered in this week's Cellular One-Ping Classic at Portland, Ore. She won last year's championship by a shot over Kelly Leadbetter.

King, Player of the Year in 1984 and the tour's second-leading money winner each of the past two seasons, has played erratic golf in 1984.

Daugherty on pro links once again

By John Walblay
Staff Writer

Diane Daugherty, women's golf coach, has to dedicate a lot of time to her position at the University, but this weekend she took time to return to her former job as a professional golfer.

Daugherty played in the LPGA Rail Charity Classic Saturday and Sunday in Springfield.

Prior to becoming the women's golf coach three years ago, Daugherty played professional golf. She played for two years but knee surgery prevented her from making the tour.

"I really think I would have made the LPGA if it had not been for my knees," Daugherty said.

Although she does not get enough time to devote to her own game because of coaching and a commitment as assistant golf pro at the Jackson Country Club, Daugherty's scores support her bid as a potential pro.

On the first round, Daugherty said she had only one bad hole, No. 14, that cost her a triple-bogey. She ended the round with a 78.

In the second round, Daugherty shot a 76, but failed to qualify for the final round.
