University gets 10-year accreditation

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer
and University News Service

SIU-C was tagged as a good university that keeps getting better in a report from the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools that continues SIU-C's accreditation for 10 years.

President John C. Guyon said he was pleased with the report because it shows SIU-C is on the right course.

"We're very pleased with this outcome, which indicates the quality and strength of our programs," Guyon said. "The North Central Association is, in my opinion, one of the strongest of the accrediting agencies. To have them certify to the world that we do indeed have high-quality programs is doubly valuable."

Guyon said the good report shows the University is maturing.

The team evaluated SIU-C's academic programs, including those on military bases and in Nakajo, Japan. Team members interviewed students, staff, faculty, governing group representatives and administrators.

The 10-year accreditation is the maximum possible for an evaluation. University programs have achieved continuous accreditation since 1913.

The accreditation team, headed by Rudolph W. Schulz, dean of advanced studies at the University of Iowa, said SIU-C had an "unusually diverse" educational program; "dedicated, caring, effective faculty"; and high-quality student services.

The team's report also gave the University high marks for its physical setting "conducive to thought and reflection" and "determination to retain an emphasis on undergraduate education even as the institution's orientation toward research and graduate education increases."

However, the report did note that financial strains could threaten the University's future ability to func-

Minority program receives $400,000

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

The Illinois Board of Higher Education allocated $400,000 for the Illinois minority graduate incentive program, which is based at SIU-C, at its meeting Wednesday in Macomb.

The program, under the direction of Irene H. Johnson, provides a stipend to minority students who have been accepted into a post-graduate program at an Illinois public or private institution. It is designed to increase minority representation in areas where they are underrepresented, specifically the sciences.

"Many times the sciences are made to look like they are too difficult to learn for the majority of students," Johnson, who once served as a science consultant in Washington D.C. elementary schools, said. "You can imagine how they look to minority students."

Though the allocation is slightly less than last year's, Johnson said the program has made some improvements.

"The stipends increased from $10,000 to $12,500 this year," Johnson said. "It is slightly less money than last year but we've had a few people complete their three years of eligibility."

The program stipulates that the recipient pays back the money by serving in either a teaching or non-teaching capacity at an Illinois institution of higher learning for the same number of years that they received funding.

"It avoids having to take out another loan," Johnson, who has been director of the program since last March, said.

Johnson said more could be done on the elementary level to increase the number of minority students entering the science fields.

"We definitely could do more to emphasize the sciences at that level. If you look at the elementary curriculum you can see it is not being stressed," she said.

Joseph Watkins, a graduate student in psychology, also said training on the lower levels needs to be improved.

"Teachers need to stress the value of the more difficult science

Illinois, Soviet Union explore farm deal

Soviet Union may look to Illinois for its farm product needs

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Illinois has farm machinery for sale. The Soviet Union needs Illinois products. Together the two countries might make a deal.

SIU-C College of Agriculture Dean James Tweedy is joining a team of agribusiness representatives to travel to the Soviet Union Sept. 8 to discuss Illinois agriculture products, for the first time, in an attempt to persuade the Soviet Union to buy Illinois farm products.

"This trip may be more important to the people of Illinois than the Soviet Union," Tweedy said.

Illinois Department of Agriculture Director Larry Wieries said the trip is an effort to place Illinois companies in the same room with potential buyers of Illinois products.

"The best thing we can hope for is that some of these companies will get contracts," Wieries said.

He added that the excellent timing with the opening of the Soviet economy could translate into millions of dollars for Illinois.

The eight-day trip is being organized by the Chicago based Mid-America Committee for International Business and Government Cooperation. Mid-America promotes American products in foreign markets.

Tweedy will be joined by representatives of the colleges of agriculture from SIU-C, the University of Illinois and Western Illinois University. Sen. Jerry Joyce, D-Reddick, Sen. John Maitland, R-Bloomington, Rep. Gordon Ropp,

Drug war gets local support

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Members of the Carbondale community have mixed reactions over President George Bush's $7.9 billion war against drugs.

Bush announced Tuesday his nationwide strategy to fight narcotics that included a $2 billion plan to help rid South America of cocaine lords.

During his speech, Bush said drugs are "the quicksand of our entire society. All Americans must pull together."

Robert Harris, director of University Security Police, said he agrees with Bush and fully supports his new plan.

"I think it's high time for this country to seriously crack down on drugs," Harris said. "This plan is something we've needed for a long, long time."

Harris said he was pleased the plan would include aid to South American countries.

"Some countries are so poor they can't control the drug pushers," Harris said. "The money set aside for foreign aid is definitely a plus."

Barb Fijolek, coordinator of the alcohol and drug program for the Wellness Center, said she was extremely pleased with the drug plan because there would be a 25 percent increase in funding for drug education and treatment.

Fijolek said she works with University students who have been referred to the Wellness Center for substance control problems and students who come in on their own free will.

Jerry Molumby, coordinator for the Adapt program, a Carbondale treatment center that deals with drug abusers, said he is glad the "federal government is taking an active leadership role in addressing

GPSC passes resolution opposing parking lot

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council passed a resolution to oppose the building of a parking lot in Stehr Field, but not without some debate.

In its meeting Wednesday night, the GPSC discussed the resolution, which was written by GPSC's executive board.

The resolution states to oppose the Stehr Field parking lot because alternatives to the construction have not been investigated, alternative space for the physical education department has not been arranged for and the field is a memorial to Jean Stehr.

Stehr was a physical education department faculty member and women's field hockey coach for many years.

The field has been used for physical education and intramurals in the past.

The Parking Commission recently passed the proposal to build two lots, at Stehr Field and behind the Recreation Center.

Trudy Hale, GPSC president, said the Stehr Field lot also had the potential to be an "eyesore."

Some council members objected to the resolution because they felt it was negative to all prospects for new parking lots and didn't offer any solutions to the problem.

The possibility of building parking garages on existing lots rather than new lots was discussed briefly by the council.

However, an executive board member said that these objections were not new and had been discussed over the summer. Parking garages were found to be too expensive and would require tearing up existing lots to build the necessary supports.

The proposal was not found to be exclusive of other parking lots.

Iraqi weapon plant explodes, search continues for bodies

LONDON (UPI) — A violent explosion in a secret Iraqi defense plant near Baghdad killed an estimated 700 people last month, a British newspaper reported Wednesday. The report could not be immediately confirmed. The Independent said the accident occurred Aug. 17 in a plant thought to have been used to develop advanced missile technology near Al Hillah, 40 miles south Baghdad. The blaze at the military complex took fire fighting aircraft nearly a week to douse, diplomats and Middle East sources told the newspaper. Sources told the "Independent" that the blast killed 700 people.

Two U.S. journalists wounded in Colombia

BOGATA, Columbia (UPI) — Ten people, including two U.S. journalists were wounded in a series of bombings and arson attacks in Medellin, headquarters of one of the cocaine cartels waging war against the government, police said Wednesday. Details of the attacks came after Colombia's acting justice minister said the only way to curb drug traffickers is to stop drug abuse in the United States. Reporter Bernadette Pardo, 35, and cameraman Carlos Corrales, 31, of the U.S.-based Spanish-language news network Univision were wounded in the bombing of a restaurant La Bella Epoca Tuesday night, police said.

Solidarity, Communists argue for control

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki has almost completed talks on the composition of his Cabinet with the biggest remaining squabble over who will control the Foreign Ministry Solidarity and Communist Party's sources said Wednesday. In a key victory, Solidarity will take over control of the mass media from the Communists who had retained a virtual monopoly on all printed matter until explosion of underground literature after the rise of Solidarity in 1980. Solidarity Sec. Krzysztof Kozlowski, deputy editor of an independent Catholic weekly, was expected to direct information policy.

Ortega urges friends to support Panama

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega accused the United States Wednesday of pressure and interference in Central America and called on non-aligned nations to voice their support for Panama. Wearing his green military attire, Ortega said "Washington keeps on with pursuing the policy of interference and pressure" in Central American countries including Nicaragua, where it supports the Contra rebels.

In addition, Wallace said, the number of Hispanic students is up 23 percent.

Blood drive organizer marks 20th year

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

When Vivian Ugent talks to reporters she talks about an urgent need for blood. But what about her needs? Judging by the way she does her job, her only need is to make sure there is enough blood for other people.

Ugent, 49, marks her 20th year of service with the Red Cross this year. She is the blood drive coordinator for most of Southern Illinois. She gets paid for what she is doing, but it hasn't always been that way. She began her work with the Red Cross blood drives in 1969. For over 15 years she donated her time, garnering a 15-year Red Cross volunteer pin as a result. In 1985 Ugent was named the blood services consultant for 11 Southern Illinois counties.

"It's a seven-day, all-day job," Christine Rice, a long time friend and neighbor of Ugent, said. "She is up early in the morning calling people, getting them to make advance appointments to give blood," Rice said.

To call Ugent a workaholic would be an understatement, Rice said. "I don't think anyone realizes the full scope of what she does."

"She works above and beyond her job description," Rice said. "She doesn't really have to do that but she wants to."

And when Ugent talks to people, including reporters, she tells them there is a dire need for blood. She lets everyone know that their blood is important.

"She is always calling and talking to people," Rice said. "She is a great PR person. She's persistent, but pleasant about it."

"I've used blood myself, so I know how important giving blood is," Rice said.

But even with Ugent's busy schedule, she still finds time to be with her family and friends, Rice said. "She genuinely likes to be with people ... she always finds time to be with her neighbors."

Ugent's husband of 27 years, Donald, says his wife's work is "not particularly upsetting" to the family. But then maybe the whole family has a lifestyle to match his matriarch's.

The two Ugent daughters, Lisa and Amy, are graduate students in radio-television at SIUC and at the University of Illinois respectively. The Ugent's son, Tomathon, is a senior at Carbondale Community High School. Donald Ugent is a professor of botany at the University.

"(Vivian) keeps busy all the time," Mr. Ugent said. "She has a certain amount of dedication, a certain amount of drive. She is absolutely dedicated to the cause."

Besides her Red Cross work, Ugent has also been active in the Carbondale chapter of the League of Women Voters, of which she is a past president, the Girl Scouts and the United Way. From 1978 to 1985 she was the director of the Carbondale United Way.

Some of her awards include the 1984 Outstanding Volunteer Award for the Missouri-Illinois Regional Blood Service and a Distinguished Service Award for Jackson County in 1981.

"We're very proud of her," Mr. Ugent said.

The Carbondale blood drive continues through Friday. It will be held through today in the Student Center Ballrooms and moves to St. Francis Xavier Church, corner of East Walnut and South Poplar streets Friday.

Blood drive surpasses first day goal

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The 350-pint goal set for Wednesday's blood drive in the Student Center was exceeded, but not by much, Vivian Ugent, blood drive coordinator, said.

Ugent said 352 pints of blood were collected yesterday.

Jane Crichton, co-chairman of the SIUC Annuitants Association, said, "We've had a tremendous turnout for a worthy cause."

The blood drive will continue today from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom D. Ugent said she expects to meet today's goal of 450 pints because people usually wait for the last day on campus to give blood.

She did, however, say the Red Cross needs as many pints of blood as possible.

"It is very important that a large number of people come out," Ugent said.

She also said many people give blood for the free food they receive after. The Post Labor Day Blood Drive began Tuesday at the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, where the goal of 55 pints was exceeded by two pints.

The final day of the drive will be Friday from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. at St. Xavier Church.

Fraternities organize to ban hazing action

WE WOULD like to take this opportunity to applaud the action of three national fraternities in their fight against hazing. Of these fraternities, which include Kappa Delta Rho, Zeta Beta Tau and Tau Kappa Epsilon, the only one that has a chapter at SIU-C are the TKEs. So we commend the action and encourage other fraternities to follow the lead.

The Tau Kappa Epsilon International Fraternity has voted to replace harmful "pledging" in all its chapters with a leadership development program by fall of 1991. The traditional form of pledging includes activities such as memorizing the greek alphabet or other facts about the fraternity's history. Unfortunately, another aspect that is often associated with pledging is "hazing."

Hazing, as defined by Craig Jackson, graduate assistant for Greek Affairs, is separating new members by making them feel "beneath the old members." Often this was thought to bring about loyalty, Jim Hartigan, SIU-C's TKE chapter president, said, however that was not the case. Loyalty by association is one thing, but loyalty brought about by harassing, intimidating and possible physical abuse is another.

THE FRATERNITY system is one that thrives on the idea of brotherhood. However hazing, as the Fraternity Executive Association states, is a dangerous form of intimidation and mockery of the whole concept of fraternal love.

Facts that have also been supplied by the Association show that during the past decade more than 40 students have died in hazing-related tragedies and students continue to be crippled and injured every year by ill-conceived and illegal hazing in a variety of student organizations. Is this something that occurs in an organization that is said to provide a family oriented environment and filled with opportunities that one may not otherwise experience? Of course, it should not be. Therefore we urge other national fraternities to show the true pride they have in their organizations and stop hazing at all levels.

At SIU-C, although the TKE fraternal system is the only one abolishing hazing on a national level, there is a resolution that was passed in September of 1983. This resolution banned all types of hazing on the campus. If hazing does occur — and there have been a few incidents — a formal hearing is held with the Inter-Greek Council and the Office of Student Development. This type of leadership and initiative is an aspect of the University's greek system which should be highly commended.

ALTHOUGH HAZING is still evident in some systems, a new or perhaps improved phase is taking over. Throughout, the greek systems have stressed leadership to their new recruits and used the organization to teach members to be responsible and able. With the new founded rush to denounce hazing, leadership programs have been formed. For example, instead of a pledge drive, new TKE recruits will be initiated immediately and will have all the rights and privileges of full membership. New and old members will participate in a membership development program which includes three levels of educational achievement. Video tapes have even been made by a TKE, former President Ronald Reagan. These tapes deal with leadership and personal development, academic achievement, fraternity history and other aspects of the system.

The greek system is an alternative for students. One that offers a variety of friends, responsibilities, achievements and ways to make the best of one's college career. A person who chooses the "greek path" should not have to worry about being physically or mentally abused. With initiatives to end this abuse, hopefully fraternities who do practice some form of hazing will realize that it is not a way to show loyalty, and it is not a sign of fraternal love.

Alcoholics in America shouldn't stop others from being able to consume

I have looked at the arguments and the comments on the alcohol problem and the happy hour law. I have read Steven Estes letter condemning alcohol, and all those who drink it. I have one thing to say: I don't need someone telling me when I may drink or not.

Let's face it, people who become alcoholics have a serious disease. Those who become alcoholics, are a burden on friends, family and society. These people do need help, they have to admit their problems: Laws cannot change a persons behavior. Instead of instituting laws to set up treatment facilities, or provide better care for these poor souls, the state of Illinois decides to curb everyone's drinking habits.

The argument of "If it cost more, they'll buy less," doesn't work. An alcoholic will pay anything to get that drink, he will do everything to get that drink. He may even resort to crime. Take a look at what has happened to cocaine.

Mc Estes says that half of the vandalism in University Housing is caused by alcohol. What about the other half? I am to assume that they were caused by other students?

I believe we have a bigger problem if students are intentionally causing the problem. I also believe that if people would look down on vandalism, that we could rid ourselves of at least half of the problems.

You say that one-tenth of all people who drink, become alcoholics. That means there are 99 percent of the population who do drink, don't become alcoholics.

That means the behavior or the perceived behavior of the few, determines the drinking habits of a state? No, that is not fair to the ones who are responsible drinkers or to the bar owners.

The bar owners have gotten the worse end of the deal. The state is telling them who they may serve their produce. If the owner wants to move a certain product quickly, he may want to lower the prices a bit, for a certain length of time.

But now with this law, he will not be able to do that. In fact, they'll be forced to do all day specials, thus encouraging drinking all night long.

It looks like prohibition is on the ugly march again in Illinois. Now that Halloween is outlawed (yeah right) soon we will have right-wing radicals knocking at the ole' bar door with axes.

Heck, I look forward to it. My great-grandmother was a moonshiner, I'd be proud to carry on the family tradition. —Mike Lukash, senior in visual communications.

Big Jim's OK of happy hour bill a lame move

Jim Thompson, only weeks after he declared that he will not be running for another term as governor, has already started "lame ducking."

Last Thursday, he signed legislation which outlaws all forms of happy hour drink specials. He claims that the reason for this law is to help cut down on drunk driving by those who rush to the cheapened liquor. This may sound like a good idea on paper, but the actual results will probably differ from those expected.

When drinkers won't be able to get their two-for-one margaritas, what will they do? They'll DRIVE to Missouri, Wisconsin, or other states bordering Illinois that do not have anti-happy hour laws. Bars just outside Illinois will pounce on the idea.

Instead of being able to walk to an in-state bar for a $1.50 pitcher, drinkers will have to drive, and drunk driving fatalities will increase.

Thompson obviously is trying to get as much legislation, no matter how lame, on the books before he leaves office to do who knows what. This law will complete Jim's trilogy of moronic moves. One being his giving away of hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars to keep the White Sox, a team even Chicagoans don't care about. He should also be congratulated for giving Sears-Roebuck millions in tax breaks to keep them in Illinois. Now, they are laying off hundreds of employees in Illinois (the jobs we paid them to keep). Good strategy, Jim.

It's too bad that he isn't going to run for governor again because it would be so much fun voting him out of office. — William Tauber, senior in aviation, and Richard Palmer, senior in English.

Morris Library is for studying, not socializing

What a night at Morris Library! I can't understand it, but some people go there with such an uncontrollable urge to talk!

I go to Morris Library to get away from all the noise and distractions at my home only to be surrounded by people who bring the noise with them.

I was amazed to see two guys walk in and start up a conversation with their friend who was sitting at the table next to me. One guy was saying he couldn't believe he was actually at the library. So his friend takes out a quarter and they do a flip of the coin to see if he should stay or go.

Unfortunately, he stayed. Then he sits down and tells his friend that he doesn't really feel like studying because he'd had a few beers before coming.

My question is why even go to the library at all? All he did was distract and irritate the people — like me — who were there for a reason — to study!

Now, I can understand a brief conversation with someone to break up the monotony of studying, but when you disrupt and anger other people you've gone too far.

What Morris Library needs is a lounge. Some place to go for a study break. A room for conversation and relaxation, a place with phones and pop machines.

I like to count on Morris Library as a place I can go to when I need quiet, and I need to get my homework done. The way it's been lately, I'm better off just staying at home.

At least there I know my roommates respect the fact that I need some time to get things done, and I do the same for them.

Some changes definitely need to happen to Morris Library or it will turn into a place for social gatherings rather than a place to study. — Toni Reed, senior in foreign language and international trade.

Governor OKs interest rate drop on SIU-C revenue bonds

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The SIU Board of Trustees can now issue revenue bonds at interest rates below the face value of the bond because of legislation signed by Gov. James R. Thompson.

"This (the legislation) will enable us (the University) to sell bonds through underwriters or brokers at other than par. It will make the process easier and less costly to the University," Stuart Robeson, assistant treasurer in the chancellor's office, said.

Public Act 86-517 went into effect immediately after Thompson signed the bill into law on Friday.

Robeson said the board uses bonds mainly for building projects. Revenue bonds are issued in exchange for a monetary investment, in the same way that U.S. Treasury bonds are, with the investor receiving the initial amount of money back, plus whatever interest the bond has earned.

However, with revenue bonds, the investor is paid not with tax money, but from the revenue of the project, Paul Sorgen, finance director for the city of Carbondale, said. "In the case (of the building) of the Student Center, students paid an activity fee for it and the investors were paid out of the profits of that, instead of tax monies," he said.

The act was co-sponsored by Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, and Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin. It amends the Southern Illinois University Act, allowing the board to issue bonds at such rate of interest as authorized by the state.

Dunn said the act was a matter of "routine housekeeping" that no one got around to "that will make the University more competitive economically." He also noted the University was the last state university in Illinois to be granted such power.

"This will allow us (the University) the power to issue revenue bonds at whatever interest rate is approved by the state. It gives us yet another tool to expand with. It puts us on the same footing as U of I and the other state universities, who've had this power for years," Dunn said.

Richmond said the measure enables the board's financial actions to reflect market trends more.

"What we've added is the word 'variable,' the ability to move up and down with the market, instead of being in a fixed interest rate. This gives (the University) the flexibility to better manipulate the bonds, to use the market more to the University's advantage," Richmond said.

Robeson said the board has used revenue bonds to raise funds for building projects such as the Student Center, the addition to the Student Recreation Center and the resurfacing of McAndrew Stadium's track.

Robeson said, with the approval of the legislation, the funding of such building projects will be greatly facilitated.

"The board has already given project approval to develop a program for a new family out-patient clinic at Springfield (where the University's School of Medicine is located) through the act," he said.

and dealing with America's drug problem."

Molmby commended the government for realizing that America's drug problem is not exclusively in America.

"I'm pleased the government is going to crack down on the drugs that are coming into our country," Molmby said.

Since the government is working hard to fight drugs, parents also must join in the fight, Molmby said.

"Parents can have a very positive influence on their children," Molmby said. "They must set a good example for their children right from the beginning. That's good prevention."

Jean Paratore, associate vice president for student affairs, said drugs "were a very crucial problem on university and college campuses" and she said she supported Bush's plan completely.

Paratore said the office of student affairs deals with University student who are having problems with drugs.

She said she refers many students to the Wellness Center for treatment.

Tuan Raphael, a sophomore in hotel and restaurant management, said he supports the legalization of marijuana, but also feels that cocaine use and use of other hard drugs is a problem that definitely needs to be eliminated in America.

Jennifer Felder, a junior in mechanical engineering, said it was about time the government decided to do something about drugs.

"I've watched some of my friends run their lives because of drugs," Felder said. "I hope things will someday change. This plan seems like a step in the right direction."

Erika Grach, a freshman in accounting, said the plan sounded like a good idea, but people will always be able to get drugs.

"I don't think it (the plan) will do any good because people are going to find a way to get drugs if that's what they want," Grach said.

Terry Fisher, a freshman in photo technology, said he hopes the plan will be specific about punishments for drug pushers.

"I think the death penalty might be a good idea," Fisher said.

tion.

"If recent shortfalls in state funding persist, the quality of SIU-C's educational programs can be expected to diminish significantly over the next several years," the report said. "It is incumbent upon the Illinois General Assembly to assist SIU-C by providing it with additional resources to prevent irreparable damage to the quality of SIU-C's educational programs."

The team recommended that the University:

- improve communication between faculty and administration,

- develop campus computing services,
- expand the power plant to permit building of new or expanded facilities,

- increase numbers of women and minorities in faculty positions,
- add women to upper administration levels,

- establish specific affirmative action goals and
- increase emphasis on interdisciplinary approaches to research and graduate instruction.

The report said the evaluation team unanimously recommended reaccreditation.

"Institutional strengths substantially outweigh institutional limitations," it said. "Past challenges have been met with energy and ingenuity. The process of strategic planning on which it now embarks promises to enable it to approach its future with confidence and vitality."

The University will be re-evaluated for accreditation again in 1998-1999.

courses instead of letting students take the easier ones," Watkins, who is starting his first year on the IMGIP, said.

"There needs to be other types of support systems for minority students," Watkins said. "Financial support helps the student concentrate more on their studies, but there are other areas that need improvement."

Johnson said another way the IMGIP helps minority students is by providing funds to prospective employers who hire them.

"Many times employers lack the necessary funds to set up additional laboratories for new researchers. IMGIP provided $15,000 to these employers for that reason.

There are 17 students state-wide, including three at SIU-C, participating in the program.

Nine Illinois agribusiness firms also will accompany the group.

"The potential for a trip like this is tremendous," Richmond, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said. "The Soviet Union needs the products Illinois is peddling," he said.

Richmond added that the trip itself is significant because five to ten years ago U.S. relations with the Soviet Union would have prevented it.

Career Day honors 2 companies

University News Service

Two companies that regularly recruit graduates of SIU-C will be honored as part of Career Day activities Tuesday, Sept. 19.

Career Day '89 will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Student Center ballrooms at SIU-C. The event gives student job-seekers and potential employers the chance to look each other over.

Patricia A. Bassett, director of the University's Placement Center, will present appreciation plaques to representatives of May Co. of St. Louis and Caterpillar Inc. of Peoria at 9 a.m.

The companies have consistently recruited SIU-C graduates and supported the Placement Center.

May Co., parent organization of Famous Barr department stores and Venture stores, has hired about 25 SIU-C graduates since 1983.

It recently donated $2,500 to the Placement Center to help computerize its student recruitment procedures.

Caterpillar Inc. has hired 90

SIU-C graduates since the mid-70's, 30 of them in the past 18 months, according to Michael C. Murray, professional placement counselor.

The company has contributed $500 to $1,000 a year following gift from Walgreen's Co., which contributes $2,000 yearly to the Center.

Liberal arts discusses idea on improving writing skills

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

"Writing Across the Curriculum" and the addition of new academic units were among the main items on the agenda at the College of Liberal Arts Council's monthly meeting Tuesday night at the Student Center.

The meeting, headed by chairperson Glenn Gilbert of the linguistics department, discussed the "Writing Across the Curriculum" initiative, which was proposed to the council last year by John Jackson, dean of Liberal Arts.

Jackson said the initiative proposes stricter writing requirements for liberal arts majors.

Gilbert, who advised referring the matter to the Academic Policy Committee, said, "This is essentially a proposal to improve writing skills. It has budgetary and academic consequences."

Also discussed was a proposal for a required second year of foreign language for liberal arts students. The council voted to refer the initiative to the Teaching and Learning Committee for further discussion.

Gilbert proposed that the council's operating paper be amended to provide for the addition of Administration of Justice and Black American Studies to the college.

"Now with Administration of Justice and Black American Studies we'll have problems with apportionment. Right now they don't have any representation on the council," he said.

The market merit salary plan was referred back to the Budget Committee, where it originated last year.

Jackson said the plan is an attempt to combat the college's loss of faculty members to higher-paying schools. It would allow the dean's office to hold back about one percent of the new state salary increases and "target (the funds) to some of the most market-driven departments," Jackson said.

The council also addressed the fifth-year review of the dean, making plans for the formation of a review committee made up of five tenured faculty members, an undergraduate student and a graduate student.

Local supporters get the word out on Halloween

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Tell all your friends: there will be no drinking on the streets this Halloween and the police will be strict about enforcing underage drinking laws.

The focus of Wednesday's Halloween Core Committee meeting was on informing as many people as possible about the new regulations on Halloween weekend.

Jack Dyer, a member of the committee, said he plans to announce the new regulations to as much of the Midwest as his budget will permit.

Dyer said he already has received the support of two local radio stations, WCIL (101.5 FM) and WOOZ (100 FM), and service organizations such as the Kiwanis Club and the Lions.

In addition, Dyer said he plans to distribute nearly 200,000 flyers about Halloween around Carbondale and has sent information to campus presidents in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kentucky.

Dyer said, despite all this, he is certain many of the people who come to Carbondale over Halloween still won't know about the new rules, like no public consumption of alcohol on the streets and no closure of the streets.

Sam McVay, director of Student

Health Services, agreed that informing out-of-town visitors about the Halloween regulations should be a major concern of the committee. He said University President John C. Guyon has taken a firm position on the limiting of the celebration.

"I do not think SIU-C students will cause a problem this year," McVay said.

Jeff Doherty, a member of the Carbondale City Council and the core committee, said the City Council voted 5-0 Tuesday night to accept the ordinance that will limit Halloween activities this year. Doherty said the council was "solidly behind the subject."

SIU-C Arena marks 25th year with revisions in ticket sales

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

What do Hank Williams Jr. and Big Bird have in common?

Wrong! They're both taking part in the 25th anniversary season of the SIU-C Arena.

Michelle Suarez, promotion director of the Arena, said the Hank Williams Jr.-Waylon Jennings concert and the Sesame Street Live performances are only two of the acts that will be appearing during the 1989-90 season.

Other features that will add to the silver anniversary will be easier access to tickets and more emphasis on different stage organization, Suarez said.

Suarez said Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers is a strong possibility for a fall concert and rock acts like the Eurythmics, Jethro Tull and Bob Dylan are touring later this year, but the Arena's schedule hasn't been finalized.

"Rock shows traditionally do well here," she said.

She said many people complain that no big acts come to the Arena anymore, but the reasons for that are beyond her control. Suarez said when the Arena was built 25 years ago it was one of the biggest buildings of its kind in the area and attracted extremely popular acts. Suarez said the arena will discontinue using lotteries for line positions, returning to a "first come, first served" approach for ticket sales. Tickets will be available in a number of different locations and each will sell floor seating and seats in the risers.

Tickets for shows will go on sale simultaneously at the Arena, the ticket office on the second floor of the Student Center, Record Bar and Disc Jockey in the University Mall and at Country Fair.

Williams and Jennings to play at SIU-C

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

If you're in the SIU-C Arena parking lot Saturday morning, expect to see some Confederate flag sleeping bags.

"First come, first served" tickets to the Oct. 5 Hank Williams Jr.-Waylon Jennings concert go on sale at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Tickets will also go on sale on the second floor of the Student Center, Record Bar and Disc Jockey in the University Mall and Country Fair Saturday morning.

Michelle Suarez, promotions director for the Arena, said the performers have played at SIU-C in the past and have always had a good turnout.

In addition to this, Suarez said that if ticket sales exceed 90% of the seats available, the concert will probably be picked up by cable networks for national broadcast. About 20 cable systems have expressed interest in showing the concert as a pay-per-view if all goes well, and even more may get involved by the time of the concert, she said.

The television cameras will eliminate some of the seating space, but there will still be about 9,500 seats available for the show.

"It is possible that a lack of parental involvement in the child's activities is an underlying problem that becomes more pronounced."

'Latchkey' kids at high risk for drug abuse, study says

WASHINGTON (UPI)—"Latchkey kids," children who regularly care for themselves after school, are more likely to abuse marijuana, alcohol and tobacco, stated a study Wednesday.

The research, appearing in the journal Pediatrics, also noted the number of children left on their own is expected to increase in the future as the number of working mothers and single-parent families increases.

The problem, it warned, crosses all social, ethnic and economic lines — affecting children in single and dual parent homes and those in poor, middle class and affluent households. Even grades, athletic and extra-curricular activities seemed to make no difference.

Publication of the work follows President Bush's address Tuesday on drug abuse in which he encouraged families, their friends and neighbors, to protect children against the scourge sweeping the nation.

The researchers, from the University of Southern California at Los Angeles Medical School and University of Illinois School of Public Health, reported the youngsters appeared to be "manifesting a desire to display their sense of maturity and independence."

"It is possible that a lack of parental involvement in the child's activities is an underlying problem that becomes more pronounced."

Visit to front-line aid station begins Bush's war on drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush visited a front-line aid station in the war on drugs Wednesday and defended his new anti-drug strategy against Democratic complaints that it is neither big nor bold enough to win the fight.

"My response is that they're wrong," Bush said of his skeptics. "If people would stop just criticizing for partisan reasons and get behind the program, then, if there's anything additional we can be doing, let's do it. But this isn't any time for partisanship."

Bush kicked off a campaign to sell his $7.9 billion anti-drug strategy with a visit to D.C. General Hospital, where he witnessed firsthand the efforts under way across the country to deal with the babies of drug-abusing mothers.

Told that a full 20 percent of the 1,900 babies born at the hospital in the drug-ravaged District of Columbia last year showed signs of exposure to drugs, he dug in his heels against the criticism of his plan and said, "You see these babies and you want to try harder."

Democrats are saying much the same thing, however in calling for more federal resources for prevention, treatment, education and enforcement than proposed in Bush's nationally televised anti-drug speech Tuesday night.

"The president's plan is not tough enough, bold enough, or imaginative enough to meet the crisis at hand," Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said in the official Democratic response to Bush's address.

"What we need is another D-day, not another Vietnam," Biden said, "not a limited war, fought on the cheap, destined for stalemate and human tragedy."

Bush maintained Wednesday in the hospital nursery for boarder babies — those abandoned by their mothers, most of whom are drug abusers — that his proposal is "a good, comprehensive program."

"We're trying," he said, "and we've got lots to learn, all of us. But let's try this and then build on it."

Later, he asserted to a group of out-of-town reporters that there was "little substantive criticism of his plan," only disagreement about how to fund it and where to allocate additional federal dollars.

Bush visited only the pediatric section of D.C. General, a public hospital that handles victims of drug abuse and drug-related violence daily. He tended at one point to a crying 4-month-old boy, lifting the child from a crib and being rewarded with a broad grin.

"He just needs a little attention," Bush said.

Bush critics: Proposal failing 'political hoax'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush's new anti-drug crusade is a "full-fledged political hoax" using methods that have failed before and will fail again and only make crime and violence worse, a panel of critics charged Wednesday.

"This policy is a scandal," said Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "It is a full-fledged political hoax. Everything in it has been tried before — not once, not twice, but five times, 10 times."

Instead, Glasser and a panel of representatives from other drug reform, criminal justice and civil liberties groups suggested a better anti-crime approach would be legalization, regulation and use prevention — much as alcohol and cigarettes are controlled.

"While having differing tactical perspectives, the critics agreed in conveyed by the president is doomed to fail," said Eric Sterling, a former lawyer for House Judiciary Committee and now president of the Criminal Justice Policy Foundation.

"The war on drugs was born in panic," Sterling said. "If we panic, we shall sink."

Generally, the Bush-Bennett approach was assailed for its emphasis on law enforcement at the expense of prevention and education. In the $7.9 billion plan for the 1991 budget year detailed Tuesday, "spending on prisons, prosecution and enforcement outweighs spending for drug abuse treatment by a ratio of almost 7-to-1," Sterling said.

Neal Sonnett, president of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, was equally harsh. "A more apt name for this proposal might be the William Bennett Prison Builders Full Employment Act" he said.

During the Reagan administration, Sonnett said, "We more than tripled the dollars thrown at interdiction and enforcement efforts."

Psychiatrist testifies Bakker competent of standing trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A psychiatrist testified Wednesday that embattled evangelist Jim Bakker suffered a panic attack last week but is not crazy and is competent to stand trial on criminal fraud and conspiracy charges.

U.S. District Judge Robert Potter ordered Bakker's trial to resume at 2 p.m. Wednesday. The PTL founder had a cold and sat slumped in his chair his head cradled in his right hand, for most of the 2-hour competency hearing.

Dr. Sally Johnson, the chief psychiatrist at the Federal Correctional Institution in Butner N.C., said Bakker did not fake the panic attack he experienced last week.

She said he has been under extreme anxiety but the anxiety is a rational response to his predicament.

And in any case, Johnson said, Bakker was correct last Wednesday when he described reporters outside the federal courthouse as a pack of animals bent on his destruction.

"When he was leaving the courthouse," Johnson said, "he saw the media with their cameras and equipment as large animals with antennae. But he maintained contact with who they were."

"He was seeing something that was actually there. He did not lose sight that they were actually the press but he was very frightened by the number of people in the crowd."

Johnson testified that Bakker was above average in intelligence, but he also has a passive personality, meaning it is easy for other people to manipulate him, and has a touch of narcissism.

She said the panic attack that sent him to Bumer for competency testing was triggered by the fact that as he heard former PTL vice president Steve Nelson testify against him last week.

When Nelson collapsed on the witness stand minutes later, Bakker thought Nelson had died and blamed himself, she said.

'Army of God' admits to abortion clinic blaze

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A group calling itself "The Army of God" has claimed responsibility for Wednesday's fire at a building housing an abortion clinic, which caused an estimated $5,000 damage, authorities said.

A woman claiming to represent the group telephoned at least two television stations, saying they had set the 4:30 a.m. fire and threatening more incidents.

Deputy Fire Chief John Harpur said police did not know if such a group actually existed or if the woman was genuinely involved with the incident.

"There are always people that take advantage of situations like this to get their message across," Harpur said. "These religious people are dangerous. I tell you."

The woman threatened more incidents if abortions did not stop at the Allegheny Reproductive Services clinic, Harpur said.

Harpur said they had no suspects in the arson.

The clinic's entrance was not firebombed, but someone did pour a flammable liquid, probably gasoline, outside the entrance and set it on fire, Harpur said.

No one was injured. However, the fire damaged the first-floor outside entrance and an inside lobby just inside the door Harpur said.

Exxon worker makes big catch, refuses big prize

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — An Exxon oil spill worker who caught the biggest fish in the Homer halibut derby turned down the $10,000 prize and withdrew from the contest to avoid trouble.

Dorothy Porter's 118 1/2 314-pound halibut was an easy winner, but the Railway, N.J., woman who was working for Exxon on the Alaska oil spill did not accept.

Homer Chamber officials and a co-workers suggested Porter withdraw because she felt awkward being an Exxon employee walking away with the grand prize in a town hard hit by the disastrous oil spill.

Student tells of adventure as Vietnamese refugee

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Hung Vu was 15 years old when he was confronted with joining the same army that was responsible for his father's death.

Rather than join the communist army, Vu fled Vietnam and began his long journey to the United States.

Vu, a photography major at SIUC, remembers the events that led to his escape. The 10 month journey that led him through Vietnam, Malaysia and the Philippines finally landed him in the United States in 1982.

Vu's journey began in a small village about 50 miles west of Saigon.

His father was an employee of the Republic of Vietnam government and his job was maintaining the security of villages in that area, Vu said. "My father was often the target of assassination attempts by the Viet Cong, but he escaped somehow."

Ironically, it was a road mine that killed his father and the driver of their jeep. Vu was three then. It was 1958.

"My father died with a cracked skull, but the driver, he was not so lucky," Vu said. "He was kind of blown up and he was not really recognizable."

Soon after his father's death, Vu's mother took his sister and him to live with their maternal grandmother, as was the custom, he said. It was with his grandmother in Saigon that he lived until he escaped in 1981.

Vu said his mother had actually engineered his escape.

"She was worried that the communist army would come and take me because I would soon have been old enough to serve in the army and she feared that she would never see me again if they took me," he explained. Those who served in the army often fight in Cambodia and never return, he said.

Vu's mother found a family that was planning to escape on their boat and she asked them how much money they wanted for taking Vu with them. They didn't ask for much and two months later they notified Vu that it was time.

"It was Sunday," Vu said, "and I was working for a family when my mother called me home and told me that I was to leave that day."

The boat to be used for the escape was on the Saigon River which flows through the middle of Saigon.

Vu was one of the first to board the boat. He said he recognized people he knew and this relieved him because "sometimes they (escaping refugees) will take your money and just throw you into the water."

Vu said he is not sure how many people were on the boat because they kept loading people until there was no room left.

"We met a family that lived on the river that helped us get food and directed us down river," he said. The family was paid for their kindness and their promise to not turn the refugees in with money and jewelry from the people on the boat.

The refugees reached the ocean before dawn. It took five days and nights to reach Malaysia, Vu said.

Vu had to stay at the camp for six months because he had brought no identification with him, only money. The Malaysian officials had to verify who he was, he said.

Vu said while he was at Pulau Bidong he stayed with friends that had also escaped to Malaysia but on a different boat. Vu then flew from the capital of Malaysia to the Philippines. From there he flew to Seattle, where he found out he was given a place to stay by the Catholic Social Service in Peoria.

Vu lived in Peoria for two months and visited a foster family every weekend until he moved in with them. He lived with Michael and Debbie Cox of Broadlands, Ill., for three years and attended high school there.

China state employees to bail out economy

BEDING (UPI) — China plans to require all workers in state-run workplaces to purchase government bonds in an effort to boost faltering state revenues that also is likely to heighten public discontent, Chinese and Western sources said Wednesday.

With the national economy in crisis, the government has found itself strapped for cash. Tax revenues and profits at state-run enterprises are down and local authorities and citizens have been holding onto more cash to sidestep a credit crunch.

The government announcement, in a circular by the State Council, China's Cabinet dictates that 1.2 billion yuan ($300 million) must be raised nationwide by the end of this year.

According to the Chinese sources, that amounts to each worker involved being paid one month's salary in the form of government-issued bonds between now and the end of the year.

The federal bonds mature in three years with annuity rates tied to cost-of-living indexes. But with inflation in urban areas currently more than 25 percent many workers see the bonds as an unwelcome burden.

China's more than 250 million workers, most of whom are employed in state-run businesses, factories and other organizations, earn an average of $400 annually. The country's approximately 800 million farmers are not affected.

U.S. pulls last diplomats from Beirut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Wednesday it decided to evacuate the last 30 American diplomats from Beirut because of fear they would be taken hostage or killed by Lebanese Christians.

The diplomats were taken to Cyprus in a swift airlift by three American helicopters just after daybreak.

The evacuation marks the first time since World War II that there has not been U.S. representation in the Lebanese capital, which has been torn by a civil war since 1975.

The former U.S. Embassy building was bombed in 1983, with the loss of 21 lives, and the U.S. Marine barracks at Beirut's airport was bombed in October.

The evacuation followed a weekend of rising tensions as more than 1,000 followers of Lebanese army commander Michel Aoun demonstrated in front of the embassy complex and destroyed an American automobile in what appeared to be the beginning of a blockade.

The U.S. Embassy, on a tree-lined street, was a virtual fortress. But the State Department decided it could not be defended from an angry mob without protection from the Christian-dominated Lebanese armed forces.

There also were Christian threats to shoot down the daily helicopter supply flights.

Baseball cards a hot item

By Babe Waxpak
Scripps Howard News Service

With the value of baseball cards going up and up, the potential for thievery is on the rise. I've already heard of a couple of instances where collections were targeted by burglars.

A high school student in California had an estimated $1,200 in baseball cards ripped off from his school locker. Among the 20 stolen cards were Hank Aaron, Willie Mays, Johnny Bench and Ernie Banks.

In the other case, a man was the victim. Burglars reportedly broke into a private storage facility and made off with thousands of dollars worth of baseball cards.

So, treat your cards like you treat your wallet.

Dear Babe: What is the rarest Mickey Mantle card? Excluding his '52 rookie card? What is its value? — Paul Lyons.

It's pretty common knowledge in collecting circles that Mantle's 1952 Topps cards is one of the most valuable ever. A near-mint card may bring $6,500. The next most valuable Mantle card is the 1951 Bowman No. 253, with a value up to $5,000.

One of my favorite Mantle cards is the 1964 Topps No. 50. It shows a right-handed-batting Mantle intensely concentrating on the pitcher and it gives evidence of his large, powerful build. The card is valued at up to $200.

Dear Babe: Has there ever been a card with a handicapped player on it? — Dale Comer.

Yes, there have been cards of handicapped players. But it's hard for me to call any player who makes the big leagues handicapped. Topping the list is California Angels rookie pitcher Jim Abbott born without a right hand.

Another is Mordecai "Three Finger" Brown, who pitched with several teams from 1903-1916, compiling a 208-111 record. His nickname is a good clue to his handicap. Brown appeared on some of the old tobacco cards.

Another famous handicapped player was Pete Gray, who played in 1945 with the St. Louis Browns. Gray did not have a right arm. I haven't been able to confirm if Gray ever appeared on a baseball card.

Dear Babe: Has there ever been a baseball card with a female player, coach or manager? — Rachel Comer.

Because there has never been a female in major league baseball, I'd have to say no female has ever been the subject of a baseball card. Women did play baseball, in the All-American League, which existed in the Midwest from 1943 to 1954. Though I don't know of any baseball cards made of women in that league, there is a remote possibility some exist. If anyone knows, send me a letter.

Dear Babe: Why do they count Roger Clemens' 1985 card as his rookie card when his real rookie card is an '84 Fleer update? — Matt Coughlin.

A card such as the 1984 Fleer update of Clemens is considered an extended rookie card because it was not produced as a part of Fleer's regular issue set that year. Because Clemens first appeared in a regular issue set in 1985, those are considered his true rookie cards.

The Beckett Baseball Card Monthly determines that. It sets the standards.

Many cards fall into this category. Another example is Kevin Mitchell, whose extended rookie cards appeared in the 1986 Topps traded, Fleer update and Donruss rookies sets. But Mitchell's 1987 cards in Topps, Donruss and Fleer are considered his rookie cards.

(Ask Babe Waxpak is a feature of The Record Searchlight in Redding, Calif. If you have baseball card questions, send them to Babe Waxpak, Scripps Howard sports, 1110 Vermont Ave. NW, Suite 610, Washington, D.C. 20005.)

Chris Evert's career is over, but her legacy will burn on

NEW YORK — It is noon, and the pony-tailed heroine is hitting tennis balls on the middle of three outside courts warming up her game while warming the crowd.

Some want more. Some recognize husband Andy Mill and ask for an autograph. Or a picture. Or both. Smile, please, Andy. One smitten soul holds a sign, saying "Chrissie: What America Stands For. God Bless U." You think that's bad? Drawn on his white T-shirt was "Chris 4-Ever."

As she leaves the practice court Evert is greeted by applause and then by a swarm of those seeking one last autograph. Sign, please Chrissie, and then she heads out, her loyalists following her like graduates of the Sam Donaldson correspondents course.

Certainly, it is the scene of Chris Evert's final day of tennis that is most worth remembering. A U.S. Open that was supposed to be her retirement bash would be crashed hours later by Zina Garrison, and by reality the fairy tale curtailed before the happy ending — or at least before a dramatic one.

How enchanting it would have been if Evert had won this tournament before living happily ever after with her Prince Charming and a few children to be named later. How touching it would have been if Evert had even reached the final before falling to reigning queen Steffi Graf. How fitting it would have been if Evert had just survived one more match to renew her rivalry one last time with Martina Navratilova.

How disappointing that Evert left with a flat performance, one indicative of why she is retiring in the first place — an inability to stay mentally sharp from match to match. It might not be a Hollywood finish it was more like a shuffle off to Buffalo. It was life. It was Rocky getting knocked out early by Apollo Creed. No wonder Garrison said she felt a little like a villain. "But," she said, "at least I'll be remembered."

Perhaps But Chris Evert Lloyd Mill will be, no matter how she exited. That is why the legions here have been doing a Velcro number to her everywhere she has gone. Say what you want about Billie Jean King and Navratilova and all the rest but Chris Evert is responsible for the popularity of women's tennis. She made it attractive as she is the girl who was prom-queen cute, enticing a whole new interest in the game.

This isn't about sexism, it isn't about sex appeal. It's about charisma. Chris Evert was not just a brilliant tennis player. She was a personality. She seemed such a contradiction on the court, a soft face wearing a stainless steel look, daring you to decide which Evert was real. She was every girl's dream, every boy's dream date, everybody's business. Who will be her beau this time? Jimmy Connors? Burt Reynolds? Jack Ford? Did anyone care so much about women's tennis before her? Will anyone care so much after her?

Without Chris Evert, women's tennis would have been Navratilova — a robotic Goliath image. With Chris Evert, Navratilova provides the consummate adversary, a David. Without Chris Evert, women's tennis might as well be women's golf. With Chris Evert women's tennis mattered. Evert did for women's tennis what Connors, John McEnroe and Bjorn Borg did for men's tennis, taking the game from the rich and making like Robin Hood to the poor.

So explains the scene surrounding Evert's practice Tuesday. So explains the Is-That-All-There-Is feeling surrounding Evert's 7-6, 6-2 loss in the quarterfinals Tuesday.

Where was the emotion? The drama? The satisfaction? Evert was off even in leading 5-2 in the first set. And she took the crowd out of the match by winning only three games after that. It's not so much that Garrison was too good, just that Evert was not as good as age 34.

The farewell was no fonder after the match. Evert was unemotional in her final news conference as a touring player. Two days earlier, she had been so effective against Monica Seles, and now this? "I was thinking I'd be relieved when the tournament was over for me," she said, "but after you lose a match like today, I'm not really relieved."

Char Warring, the all-time women's basketball scoring leader, goes up for two in a game against Wichita State. Warring played at SIU-C from 1980-84 and scored 1530 points, 561 in 1983.

Mitchell out of Giants' lineup

The San Francisco Giants are confident of life after Kevin Mitchell. Even the temporary loss of the probable N.L. Most Valuable Player has not been a major source of consternation.

"Just because Mitch is out of the lineup, we're not going to go out there and fold," said Matt Williams, who has taken over the cleanup spot. "We are still very confident we can win without him."

Mitchell's sore left wrist is worse. After vowing a return to the lineup Tuesday, he took six swings in batting practice and walked off the field. He may need a few days of rest.

The Giants could have used a little extra offense Tuesday night, losing 6-5 to the Reds in Cincinnati to end a five-game winning streak. The loss cut the Giants' lead to six games over San Diego and Houston in the N.L. West.

Mitchell is listed as day to day, and the Giants are hopeful he will be back soon. Mitchell began worrying Tuesday.

"I couldn't do it" Mitchell said after he walked off the field. "The bat was dragging and it didn't feel right. I felt pain, like it was broke or something. I just can't do it. It's almost like I'm scared to swing hard."

Char Warring remembered for her hustle

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Char Warring, a member of the SIU-C Saluki women's basketball team from 1980-84, will see her hard work pay off Saturday as one of six athletes inducted for the SIU-C Sports Hall of Fame.

Warring is the all-time leading scorer in SIU-C women's basketball. The 6-2 center from Chicago combined talent and hard work to become one of SIU-C's best ever, according to women's head coach Cindy Scott.

"A lot of players have the talent to really be successful but you can't get them to go after it real hard," Scott said. "Along with being a very talented player, Char hustled on the court and worked hard."

The former Saluki star set nine school records. Warring's 1530 career points remains tops for SIU-C and her single season mark of 561 in 1983 is a school record. As a junior, Warring's 17.5 points and 8.4 rebounds per game led the Salukis. She also led SIU-C as a senior with 17 points and 8.3 rebounds per game.

Despite the productive numbers Warring had during her career, Scott said the star was never satisfied with her efforts.

"Char was really hard on herself," Scott said. "She was never satisfied. Char always worked hard to get better and better."

Warring's career field goal percentage of .594 (602-1014) is a school mark, she ranks third all-time in rebounding with 907 and blocks with 79.

"Char could help a team in so many ways," Scott said. "I've never had a player who scrapped harder than Char on the floor. She was a keen competitor who always came through for us in a big way."

Baseball's Giamatti buried in Yale cemetery

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI)—Baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti was buried in a private ceremony Wednesday under heavy security in an 18th century cemetery on the grounds of Yale University.

Giamatti, a former president of the Ivy League school and baseball's National League, was buried in Grove Street Cemetery after a private funeral. Most past Yale presidents are buried at the cemetery on the school's downtown campus.

Security was extremely tight, with city and Yale police backed up by a private security company to patrol the walled cemetery.

Scouler and von Jouanne, a pair of four-time All Americans, swam here from 1980-84. As a freshman, von Jouanne posted 29 victories and set 11 school records and earned All America honors in four events.

Robins is remembered as one of Coach Lew Hartzog's all-time greats in track and field. The Nassau, Bahamas native won the 1976 NCAA championship in the triple jump with a performance of 55-5 1/2 feet, a mark that still stands as a school record.

Dave Steib's name is well-known to fans of major league baseball. He has been one of the strongest American League pitchers in the 1980s, garnering such awards as The Sporting News American League Pitcher of the Year in 1982 and starting the 1984 All Star Game.

Warring was a Saluki deserving of her last name; she was one of the scrappiest women's basketball players in SIU-C history, according to Coach Cindy Scott.

It is uncertain right now but the main thing is getting her back healthy again so she can play."

Gallagher is a freshman signee from O'Fallon. Gallagher was to team up with junior Michelle Jeffrey in the No. 2 doubles position. Auld will have to rearrange the plans somewhat.

The No. 1 position will be filled by Beth Boardman. Boardman, a senior, comes into the season listed sixth on the all-time career wins list with 84. Boardman is also listed third on the career winning percentage in singles with a mark of .700 (84-36).

"Beth has been hitting the ball well in practice," Auld said.

Boardman will team up with sophomore Lori Edwards to form the No. 1 position for the Salukis in doubles competition as well.

Michelle Jeffrey will compete in the No. 2 position in this weekend's tourney. "Michelle is getting sharper with her game," Auld said. "She seems to really have a good feel for the ball," Jeffrey is a junior.

Wendy Varnum, one of Auld's recruits out of Colorado, will be in the No. 3 position this weekend. "Wendy is hitting the ball good," Auld said. "I hope she keeps carrying that into game situations."

Rounding out the Saluki lineup will be junior Michele Toye in the No. 4 spot and Edwards at No. 5. Edwards just started hitting the ball Tuesday and is trying to recover from a leg injury, Auld says.

"It was a painful strain on the side of her knee," Auld said. "Lori will play this weekend but I don't know how much strength she will have. We want her to be strong for the conference matches." Toye is playing well right now, Auld says.

Nancy Mullins, a walk-on team member from Rantoul, will see some action in place of Gallagher. Auld says she would like to move Mullins to the No. 7 singles position.

"I will have to wait and see what happens, but I might move Nancy to the No. 7 position so she can play competition equal to her," Auld said. "I want her to get some good matches in."

Behind Boardman and Edwards in the No. 1 doubles position will be Toye and Varnum in the No. 3 position. Gallagher and Jefferies were slated at No. 2, but Gallagher's sickness cancelled those plans.

"I have been pleased with everyone in practice and I think the early morning conditioning will help," Auld said. "The players that have been able to play have been consistent."

Auld offered some of her coaching philosophy to her team going into the season. "The thing I thrive on is consistency," Auld said.

Football team anxious for Western

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Not a single member of the 1989 Saluki football team has ever been a part of a winning effort against the Western Illinois Leathernecks, last years Gateway Conference Champions, and entering Saturday's game, the Salukis again will be the underdog.

The game will be the conference opener for both teams with the Salukis entering the contest with a record of 0-1 while WIU comes in at 1-0. The Salukis lost their opener to the University of Nevada-Reno 41-3 while WIU beat Arkansas-Monticello 24-10.

The last time the Salukis beat Western was during the 1983 season when the Salukis opened up their national championship season by trouncing the Leathernecks 38-6.

Junior quarterback Fred Gibson said the losing streak is in the front of everyone's minds.

"It's a big goal for us to beat Western," Gibson said. "Both teams always play hard and when that happens you don't know what's going to happen.

"Western has been the most frustrating team I've played," Gibson said. "This year we have a good chance."

WIU will be without the services of its all-time leading passer, Paul Singer, to the delight of the Saluki defenders.

"I'm extremely happy Paul

Singer graduated," senior defensive tackle Shannon Ferbrache said.

Junior linebacker Kevin Kilgallon said the Salukis won't miss Singer but WIU will.

"Singer was a smart character," Kilgallon said. "They won't be the same team without him."

Though the Salukis have a five game losing streak against WIU, they have not been dominated by the Leathernecks.

Last season the Salukis came within a foot of the Leatherneck goal line with the score 17-13 in favor of WIU when time ran out. During the losing streak, WIU has averaged a six point margin of victory.

"It seems like we play them (WIU) tough for three quarters but end up losing in the end," senior Bob Grammer, the Saluki center, said.

Ferbrache said this game will not be like the past.

"This year we have more confidence that we can win in the fourth (quarter)," Ferbrache said. "We all have to play with aggression and play heads up."

"This (WIU) is a team that knows how to put it together in the fourth quarter and win," Ferbrache said. "And that's definitely something were trying to do around here."

Kilgallon said the team has been working hard preparing for WIU. "We want to break their streak,"

Kilgallon said. "We are doing everything we can to come up with a successful Saturday afternoon."

Head Coach Bob Smith said the Salukis have had two of their best practices of the year since losing to Nevada-Reno and are concentrating on fundamentals.

Working on scoring once inside the opponent's territory has been strongly emphasized during this week's practice, Smith said.

The Salukis recorded 20 first downs against UNR while holding the ball for 38:13. The Salukis compiled 268 yards in offense on 71 plays, yet only scored 3 points.

Grammer said the Salukis have been able to move the ball, but have stuttered because of a lack of concentration on the part of the offense.

Smith said more emphasis has been placed on scoring inside the "red zone," the territory inside the opponent's 20-yard line.

"We feel we've got to come out of there with points, a touchdown or at least a field goal," Smith said.

Smith said he takes full responsibility for the teams performance in the second half of the UNR game in which the Wolf Pack scored on its first five possessions.

"We were not concentrating mentally and I am taking full responsibility for that," Smith said. "The assistant coaches did a good job of preparing the players. It's my job to make sure it's important to play a full four quarters."

Men's basketball schedule features Billiken rematch

The 1989-90 SIU-C men's basketball schedule is finalized and includes a three-game trip to Hawaii and a nationally-televised game against St. Louis University, the team that eliminated the Salukis in the first round of the 1989 NIT Tournament.

Head coach Rich Herrin is entering his fifth year and his team is coming off of a 20-16 record last season.

"We're excited about the schedule," Herrin said. "Scheduling is almost as difficult as winning in the Valley. We believe we've put together an excellent non-conference schedule and we appreciate all the consideration the conference office has given us in scheduling TV games and combination road games."

The Salukis' trip to Hawaii will include games against Chaminade University (Honolulu), the University of Hawaii (Honolulu) and the University of Hawaii-Hilo (Hilo, HI).

Herrin said the trip is something he is really looking forward to. "It's going to be a nice trip," Herrin said. "It will be a great recruiting tool. Our guys had a great time last year in Puerto Rico."

In addition to the regular seven games against MVC opponents during the second half of the season, the Salukis' card will feature an early-season rematch against the St. Louis University Billikens.

The SIU-C women's tennis team will open its season in the five-team Indiana Invitational this weekend.

The other four teams in the tourney include Northern Illinois, Purdue, Indiana and Miami. The tourney runs Friday through Sunday. The Salukis could be put to the test early against some tough competition in this tourney, says head coach Judy Auld.

"This is always a good tune-up meet for the players because they meet some tough competition," Auld said. "They play a lot of tennis during that three-day period and it's really a good experience for them."

Auld says the Salukis might meet its toughest competition of the season in this Indiana Invitational. The Invitational is headed by defending Big 10 champion Indiana. Indiana is traditionally ranked in the top ten.

There are no team scores in the Indiana Invitational; it is strictly individual. SIU-C has ran into some bad luck recently.

The Salukis will be without the services of freshman Lori Gallagher for an uncertain period of time. Gallagher was slated in the No. 6 position in singles and No. 2 doubles.

"Lori has been sick for a while," Auld said. "Her sta-

As the chief recruiter during that time Iubelt signed some of SIU-C's all-time great basketball stars, including Walt "Clyde" Frazier, Mike Glenn, Dick Garrett
