Inflation cited as cause for tuition hike

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

USG president plans to approve Brown's plan

The SIU Board of Trustees meet on campus today and are scheduled to receive a proposal from Chancellor James Brown to increase undergraduate tuition at the University by 3.5 percent for the fall of 1995.

Brown said with rising inflation in the state of Illinois it will be necessary to raise the tuition proportionately with inflation.

"The money (for tuition) we were asking for last year won't buy as much this year," Brown said. "We are following IBHE (Illinois Board of Higher Education) policy to increase the tuition rate based on inflation."

Some Board members who met with SIUC Undergraduate Student Government (USG) and Graduate and Professional Student Council (GPSC) representatives, said they support the proposal for an increase.

Mark Kochan, SIUC student trustee, said the tuition increase is a reasonable request because it merely reflects the changing inflation rate. He said the University is still more affordable than most other state universities, even with the increase.

"It is basically keeping with the objectives of the IBHE," Kochan said. "We are still lower in tuition cost than Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University and the University of Illinois. In the way of affordability, SIUC is still very competitive."

Molly D'Esposito, Board member and chairperson of the Board's finance committee, said the increase is a reasonable amount to be expected of students given the current and future economy of the state.

Edwin Sawyer, USG president, announced last week before the USG senate that he does not plan to oppose the proposed increase.

Some USG senators, such as David Erikson, senator from Thompson Point, said Sawyer was premature with his decision not to oppose the increase because the senate has had no opportunity to vote on the issue and students have not been asked how they feel regarding the proposal.

Representatives say document inadequate

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

SIUC's focus and priorities statements, documents which help the Illinois Board of Higher Education determine the University's budget request for fiscal year 1996, were delivered Wednesday to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Student representatives of the board say the document does not adequately reflect what the University's mission should be and has various spelling errors.

Monty Peerbhai, IBHE Student Advisory Council alternate representative, said one of the poorly written areas of the document is a goal concerning increasing minority participation at SIUC.

The goals state a need to "build a minority faculty presence in disciplines in which the minority student enrollment continues to increase."

Peerbhai, who is also a representative from sociology to the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said the document should express a need to increase the number of minority faculty members in all academic areas and not just areas where minority student enrollment is increasing.

Numbers show global interest

By Connie Fritsche

Despite being ranked behind the University of Illinois in the number of international students attending classes on campus, SIUC can still boast a greater percentage of foreign students who attend the University, according to a recent article in The Chronicle of Higher Education.

SIUC was ranked twelfth in international student enrollment for the 1992-93 school year while U of I-Champaign-Urbana ranked 9th.

However, the total percentage of international students at SIUC is higher at 11.1 percent while the central Illinois college had an 8.6 percent international enrollment.

The Michigan Institute of Technology ranked highest in percentage of international students at 22.1 percent.

Colleen Kerley of SIUC admissions and records said the total enrollment of international students for Fall 1993 was 2,193. The enrollment for Spring '94 was 2,092.

She said the drop in enrollment

College students get caught in credit card trap

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

It seems everyone is offering students credit cards lately, delivering free food, drinks, T-shirts or even concert tickets just for applying. But local economic professionals say such offers should be approached with caution.

Steve Schauwecker, vice president of Carbondale's First National Bank and Trust Company, said credit card companies target college students to get them hooked early on credit card spending.

"They are willing to take the risk that you won't pay," Schauwecker said. "They don't care about you personally. They are thinking of the salary you will be making five or 10 years from now, and they want to get in on it now."

Connie Armstrong, an SIUC assistant professor in consumer economics, said a major problem students face is using cards to the limit early and then spending the rest of their college career paying off the debt.

"Set a spending limit early," Armstrong said. "Pay off the card every month so you don't pay interest."

Armstrong said students also should consider limiting the number of credit cards they have. "I have seen students with as many as 25 cards," she said. "Try to hold it down to one bank card, one phone card and one gas card."

Bob Klimt, director of marketing for Consumer Credit Counseling Service, said students who use credit cards in college are likely to continue to use them later in life.

"The companies want to get you used to using the cards early," Klimt said. "I still have my first Amoco card I got in college 20 years ago."

Schauwecker said habits are also a factor in how people use their cards.

"People who establish poor payment habits find those habits hard to break later in life," he said.

Poor payment habits lead to bad credit, which can become a big problem for CHINA RESPONDING TO FINANCIAL CONCERNS — BEIJING — A year since the government clamped economic controls on China's runaway economy, inflation is almost as strong as ever. Additionally, citizens are concerned about corruption and rising unemployment as a result of the government's program of economic reforms. In response, Beijing's leaders have been backing off their ambitious plans to revamp China's economy.

CUBANS TAKING STEPS TOWARD CAPITALISM — HAVANA — Amid increasing political turmoil, Cuba is experimenting with limited forms of capitalism to resuscitate a decrepit economy. As Castro's regime embraces foreign investment in tourism and other forms of capitalism that were once denounced, average Cubans are also taking small steps toward independence. Increasingly, they voice dissatisfaction with Cuba's dismal economy, while at the same time operating clandestine businesses to improve their own lives.

U.N. COMBATS CULTURAL FIXATION ON SONS — GOVINDPUR, India — As the U.N. conference on population and development meets in Cairo to work out an action plan to stabilize world population, it is up against the entrenched cultural fixation on sons in India and many other Third World countries. Indian families depend on sons to work the fields, to support the family if parents cannot and to support aging parents. The Hindu faith also teaches that to reach heaven, one must be created by a son. Responding to population problems, some Indian states are experimenting with incentives to persuade families to have only two children, even if the first two offspring are girls.

POLISH POLICE START NATIONWIDE MANHUNT — WARSAW, Poland — Police launched a nationwide manhunt Wednesday for Sylwester Augustynek, a 50-year-old burglar and thief who has threatened to blow up Krakow. Augustynek, who has used the moniker "Gummi Bear" in telephone calls and letters, allegedly planted a bomb last Thursday at the bus terminal near the city's 13th-century Old Town, one of the most popular tourist destinations in Poland. Although the bomb did not explode, anti-terrorist squads later detonated it, hollowing a crater the size of an automobile.

STUDY RANKS U.S. ECONOMY FIRST IN WORLD — WASHINGTON — Pushed by a buoyant economy, the United States has climbed to the top of a list of the world's most competitive economies, displacing Japan for the first time since 1985, according to a comprehensive international study by the Geneva-based World Economic Forum. The report notes the three leading industrialized democracies are losing ground to the dynamic economies of East Asia and Latin America. Singapore placed second in the ranking, Japan fell to third from first place, tiny Hong Kong placed fourth and Germany was fifth.

CLINTON REDUCING VACANT JUDICIAL SPOTS — WASHINGTON — When the Senate comes back next week, it will find the Clinton administration in a position to do what many thought couldn't be done: reduce the huge number of federal judicial vacancies to a manageable level. When the Senate left town last month, there were 86 vacant federal judgeships, not all that many fewer than the 113 openings when George Bush left the presidency. But there are 40 nominations in the Senate now. Seven have been approved by the Judiciary Committee and are awaiting floor action. Another seven nominees have had hearings and are awaiting a committee vote to get to the floor.

PRESIDENT RECONSIDERS CRITICISM OF RADIO — Two months after slamming much of talk radio as "a constant, unremitting drumbat of negativism and cynicism" — and criticized Rush Limbaugh in particular — President Clinton appears to have reconsidered the angry tone of his remarks. Referring to the "bad feelings" that resulted from his widely reported comments on St. Louis' KMOX-AM, Clinton said in an interview to be published by Talkers Magazine, a trade publication covering the talk radio format, that he regrets the way his words have been interpreted.

Former administrator values family time

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

After serving his country, his state and his community, former SIUC director of external affairs, Clyde Choate has decided to settle for some quality family time.

Choate received top military awards during World War II, moved on to become one of the state's top political leaders, helping to expand SIUC along the way and finally joining the University's staff in 1977.

Choate retired from SIUC in February after giving more to the University than most students could possibly be aware of.

"I consider myself exceedingly lucky to spend any part of my professional career to work with someone like Clyde Choate," Jack Dyer, executive director for university relations said.

Choate, born June 28, 1920 in West Frankfort, enlisted in the U.S. Army after high school graduation and served 31 months in the European Theater of Operations during World War II.

Rising to the rank of sergeant, Choate participated in five amphibious assault landings, including North Africa, Sicily, Salerno, Anzio beachhead, southern France and Germany.

Choate was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for bravery in action at Anzio beachhead. He also received the Silver Star and Purple Heart.

His contributions to the war earned him the Congressional Medal of Honor and began a 32-year career in the Illinois General Assembly, "without a close election," Choate said.

Dyer said working with Choate has been an education.

"He took part in five sea invasions during World War I," Dyer said. "The odds of surviving one is astronomical, the odds of surviving five is unbelievable."

Dyer said Choate's Medal of Honor is the nation's highest military decoration.

While serving as a staff sergeant with the U.S. Army during World War II in France, Clyde Choate defeated an attacking enemy infantry and Mark IV tank. He received a Congressional Citation for his efforts, which explained the event:

"...He returned to the burning destroyer to search for comrades possibly trapped in the vehicle risking instant death in an explosion which was imminent and braving enemy fire which ripped his jacket and tore the helmet from his head.

Completing the search and seeing the tank and its supporting infantry overrunning our infantry in their shallow foxholes, he secured a bazooka and ran after the tank, dodging from tree to tree and passing through the enemy's loose skirmish line. He fired a rocket from a distance of 20 yards, immobilizing the tank but leaving it able to spray the area with cannon and machinegun fire. Running back to our infantry through vicious fire, he secured another rocket, and, advancing against a hail of machinegun and small-arms fire reached a position 10 yards from the tank. His second shot shattered the turret. With his pistol he killed 2 of the crew as they emerged from the tank; and then running to the crippled Mark IV while enemy infantry sniped at him, he dropped a grenade inside the tank and completed its destruction. With their armor gone, the enemy infantry became disorganized and was driven back. S/Sgt. Choate's great daring in assaulting an enemy tank singlehanded, his determination to follow the vehicle after it had passed his position, and his skill and crushing thoroughness in the attack prevented the enemy from capturing a battalion command post and turned a probable defeat into a tactical success."

(Choate) would be introduced first and on a military base, the highest ranking general would salute him," Dyer said.

During his 15 consecutive terms in the House of Representatives, he was chief sponsor of 319 bills. A total of 156 were approved by both houses of the General Assembly and signed into law by the seven Governors throughout his tenure. "After the Army I wanted to become a lawyer, so I went to

Japanese students to welcome visiting parents

By Katie Morrissey
Staff Reporter

A group of parents from Japan will soon get a taste of Chicago and Springfield and the type of lives their SIUC children are developing here in Carbondale.

The 27 parents and other relatives will be in the area from Sept. 10 to 19. Kathy Bury, of the Japan coordination office, said the parents of these Japanese students will be shown a variety of things while here.

"They will be given mini-tours of Chicago and Springfield, but most of their attentions will be focused on their children," she said.

Yoshio Fujitoka, a junior in history from Hiroshima, said he is looking forward to his parents' visit.

He said it will be good for his parents to see the town he lives in because when he calls, they most often talk about grades, Yoshio's program of study and other related issues.

"It will be good to show my parents where I live," Fujioka said. Kengo Kaji, a junior in geography from Nagoya, said he is happy the parents are coming in a group because the language barrier will not be a problem for them.

"I am glad they don't have to talk only to American people," Kaji said. Kaji said he feels American women particularly are unfriendly to internationals on campus.

"The men seem less difficult. I think, even for the Asian women," Kaji said.

Hiromi Kaneko, junior with a double major in biological science and economics from Tochigi, said she is looking forward to shopping and eating with her mother and aunt when they arrive from Japan.

"They will like Tokyo Restaurant," Kaneko said.

The food will be similar to that which Kaneko's mother and aunt are accustomed. She said she hopes her visitors will feel at home in her new hometown.

Kaneko said when she first arrived in Carbondale she was sad and felt isolated because she did not know the language very well.

She said there were cultural differences she had heard about but

Mass transit service still planned for SIUC

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS ARE ONCE AGAIN AT work in an attempt to put together a co-sponsored bus system for Carbondale. Student enthusiasm for the idea of having an alternate way of getting around town has always been high. So, the question that remains is "will Carbondale finally get a mass transit system this time around?"

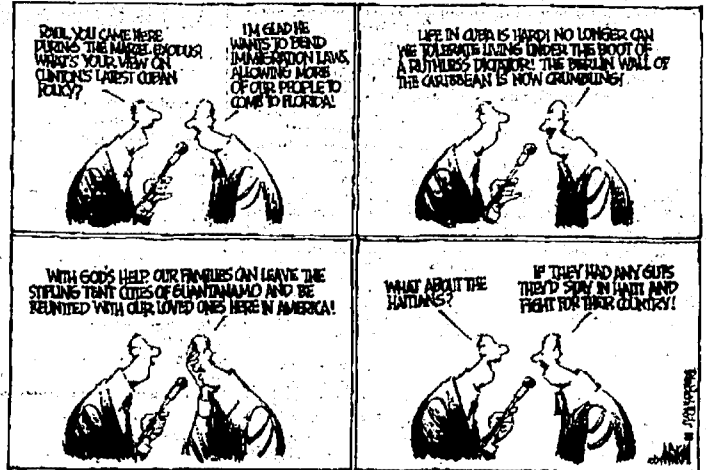

The search in earnest for a mass transit system began in 1989 when a consulting firm was hired to perform a feasibility study. School administrators wanted to determine the best system to serve the needs of the students. The resulting study came up with a six-phase plan from initial study to implementation.

Part of the problem stems from how much money SIUC has to spend and what kind of mass transit can be instituted for the funds available. In April '93, student government leaders and school administrators initiated a referendum on the question of whether students would be willing to support such a system. The results of the referendum, which drew the highest turnout in 10 years, were that nearly 75 percent of voters were in favor of a $20 fee increase to support a system. The increase has not been enacted yet, but could be passed by the SIUC Board of Trustees at the upcoming March meeting. Initial projections had the revenue produced by the higher fees at about $1.2 million, but the most recent calculations put it closer to $750,000. SIUC officials estimate that another $250,000 will be needed to get the currently proposed system, with possible modifications, up and running.

A possible source for the additional money is federal funds from the Illinois Department of Transportation. SIUC is ineligible to receive such funds, but the city of Carbondale can. Enter a new wrinkle in the search for mass transit. As a result, the proposed routes for the system must be re-examined if they are to serve the entire city and not just the students. City and University officials are in the preliminary process of discussing possible changes to broaden the scope of the system.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS NEED TO RECOGNIZE, first and foremost, that students want a mass transit system in Carbondale. But, it also needs to be remembered that with 75 percent of the necessary funds coming out of student pockets, the services provided need to reflect this. The idea of contributing to the city as a whole by opening the system to non-students is not without merit, but the primary focus of the system must be to serve the students.

Current plans, if the fee increase is passed by the Board (which it is expected to), could have a bus system running by fall of '95. If, however, the efforts to create a joint system with the city fail, the administration should give the students the best mass transit system $750,000 can buy.

Cheap Trick's concert was impressive

Where is the law written that a group of musicians has to sound like their albums from the early 1980's. I clearly saw and heard Cheap Trick's concert from the tenth row and was greatly impressed. Aleksandra Macys, "most (people) quickly sat down as the band could not perform well enough to get the people involved." From what I saw, two thousand people not only stood up and cheered as loud as they could but throughout the show. People did not need to bring pillows with them during Cheap Trick.

I believe that Ms. Macy was more upset by not getting a guitar pick and decided to write a one sided article about the band. If anyone thought that Loverboy out played and sounded better than Cheap Trick, they need to get a new set of glasses and get the wax out their ears.

Giant weedeater creates parking lots

During my occasional early morning runs along the campus lakeside I have noticed what appears to be the work of a giant weedeater, having gutted its way right smack through the wooded area alongside the wooded trail in a clearcut swath. I am disheartened as to why the administration would compromise campus beauty in a vain attempt to appease the clamor of a few student drivers who are unwilling to make the necessary arrangements to park in the arena lots (to which, oddly enough, this future lot is adjacent) or get to school earlier before more lots fill up or best still, not use a car.
There are far too many students with cars, more than the university could provide parking spaces for short of turning the entire campus into concrete. With this in mind, anyone with a basic understanding of supply and demand knows that creating more lots is not going to solve the so-called parking problem. All it is going to do is encourage students with cars to drive them to class and encourage people without cars to get them, offsetting any gains in parking. We are then right back to square one with short-sighted people like Steve Underwood screaming for more parking lots, a university trying to make them happy and a lot of paved over trees.

Steve Underwood's claim to a "right" to park on campus because he bought a parking sticker is puerile. Nobody held a gun to his head and forced him to buy one and this campus should not bulldoze because he did. Many students attend SIU in part because of its beauty. We do not wish to see this campus turned into a concrete jungle because of unwillingness among some student drivers to change their habits or see that their demands for parking convenience is unattainable.

On or off-campus, rape is an epidemic

On Thursday, August 25th, the D.E. printed statistics about rape which included the following information: 1 in 4 women are raped while in college; only 1 in 20 college rapes are reported; and 9 SIUC on-campus were reported in 1993. In Friday, August 26th's D.E., Bob Brady called these statistics "damned lies." He asserted that if the first two rape statistics were true, the number of reported SIUC rapes would be 27.8 per year. We would like to note that the 9 on-campus rapes reported do not include the number of reported rapes of SIUC students that are committed off-campus in Carbondale. The 9-campus also do not include the rapes that are committed on SIUC students while the students are out of town during breaks. According to a nationwide study involving thousands of college students, 86 percent of rapes occurred off-campus. Adding the off-campus rape reports to the 9 on-campus reports would total, a number closer to (or above) national statistics. In support of this argument, note that the Women's Center received 35 reports of SIUC rapes during 1993. Lastly, we would like to point to point out that the exact statistics are not important. What is important is the fact that rapes are still being committed. As far as we are concerned, the 9 reported on-campus rapes committed upon SIUC students are 9 rapes too many! The fact that the number of rapes committed per year at SIUC is more likely in the hundreds (remember: 1 in 20 rapes is reported), shows that rape, and sexual violence in general, is a largely unchecked epidemic that needs to be stopped. Despite efforts to curb these crimes, women on this campus are still not safe. Instead of arguing about statistics, we believe we should be working together to try to solve this far-too-widespread problem.

—Leslie Strategier, campus safety representative, Rape Action Committee, Women's Center

Abraham Lincoln Law School, but a friend told me I should run for state representative, so I did," Choate said.

Choate held leadership positions the last 18 years in the House, including minority leader, majority leader and minority and majority whip.

He was chief sponsor of the bill creating the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and the State Board of Economic Development.

SIUC has benefited greatly from much of the legislation Choate helped to pass.

He was chief sponsor of many of SIUC's appropriation bills and sponsored numerous pieces of legislation dealing with developmental aspects of the University such as the creation of the SIUC police force in 1957, providing for engineering instruction at SIUC in 1961, which was the beginning of the Engineering Department and financing educational television at SIUC in the early 1960's.

"And my wife (Maonna) was at home taking care of my two wonderful daughters (Libby and Kim)," Choate said.

"My children grew up seeing me on weekends. I was not nearly as involved in their lives as I would have liked to be."

Dyer said even while Choate worked for SIUC he spent most of his time in Springfield, pushing for bills which would be beneficial to the University.

Choate said in 1977 he was thoroughly burnt out with the General Assembly.

He ran for re-election and walked off.

"That way nobody could say I left because I was afraid of defeat, we won overwhelmingly and then I quit," he said.

Within three days, SIUC came calling, asking Choate to join its ranks.

Choate said his retirement from SIUC was the result of another burn out, but he will continue to serve the University part time.

He plans to make up for the time he has missed with his family and travel with his wife.

His five year old grandson now dominates their time.

students very quickly, Klimt said.

"Students with poor credit history can have trouble getting student loans," he said. "If you can't handle a $500 credit card limit, banks are less likely to trust you with their money."

"Someone looking for an off-campus apartment may also have their credit checked, so a poor credit record may be the deciding factor in where you live. In Illinois, a poor credit report remains on your record for seven years, and anyone can get a copy of your credit history."

Armstrong said employers do credit checks as well, and are less likely to hire someone with a poor record.

Despite their disadvantages, Klimt said credit cards can be useful if they are used carefully.

"A credit card can help you get started at the beginning of the school year — if you have the means to pay it off later, such as a job, or an agreement with your parents," he said.

Students having problems paying off cards, student loans, or bills can call the Consumer Credit Counseling Service, a non-profit organization funded by businesses to work out consumer debt. The services' toll-free number is 1-800-966-3328. Sessions are free and confidential.

but was still unprepared for until she experienced them, and which she hoped will not be too hard for her relatives to adjust to.

"Americans talk about all kinds of things and Japanese people don't talk about everything so much," Kaneko said.

Kaji said there are some things he refuses to discuss with Americans because the American perspective, to him, is usually argumentative.

"I don't like talking about international trade because I think it is unfair that Americans say Japanese are cheating them, and I think it is untrue," Kaji said.

He said Japanese people will generally also be reluctant to talk about policies of government or historical events like World War II. Kaji said he hopes the Americans will not be compelled to talk with his father about these issues when he visits.

Fujioka was not reluctant to talk about WWII and growing up in Hiroshima, but expected his father's reactions to Americans asking about life in Hiroshima after the American bombing, would not be well received.

"He maybe has opinions I don't have because he lived through things I did not," Fujioka said.

Kaji said he hopes his father will enjoy seeing the riverboat casino in Metropolis because there are no casinos in Japan.

Kaneko said her mother and aunt will get to see the dorm she lives in, her room where she spends much of her time studying, the surrounding neighborhood and campus and the people she has met in America.

"I have lots of new friends to introduce them to who they will like to meet," she said.

"The way the document is written, it seems to show a racial bias," Peerbhai said. "I don't think a racial bias was intended, but the manner in which it is written certainly seems to incriminate the writer."

Jenny Rubin, the SIUC voting IBHE-SAC representative, said IBHE-SAC disagreed with the minority faculty goal because it does not call for improvement of all academic programs at the University.

"We (SIUC) have a need for all departments to have an increase in minority faculty representation," Rubin said. "The priority statement should discuss all areas."

Kyle Perkins, associate vice president for academic affairs — planning who drafted the focus and priorities statement, said the goal may not cover as many areas as need to be covered. He said it is just a starting point for improvement of minority student and faculty participation at SIUC.

"They (Peerbhai and Rubin) have a goal to which I agree and the entire administration agrees — to build a minority faculty presence in all areas," Perkins said. "We (the administration) are just trying to deal with issues concerning minority students and faculty one at a time."

Perkins said the focus and priorities statements are a part of the Resource Allocation Management Program document, which is delivered to IBHE every year, making the University accountable for its expenditures and requesting money to fund new programs.

Peerbhai said the SIUC priorities and focus statements also contain spelling errors and unclear wording that are embarrassing to the University.

"I am disappointed that out of all focus statements and priorities statements (for state universities) SIUC's is the only one with typos and spelling errors," Peerbhai said. "All of the other IBHE-SAC representatives from other state schools have noticed this and are talking about it."

Peerbhai pointed out errors in the document, including lines in the minority participation goals and in the goals to improve graduate education and research.

Some of the errors are: "Promote the retention and graduation of minorities in disciplines where they are significantly underrepresented," and "Continue to prioritize graduate programs in a manner that reflects both adequate support levels and non-duplicative complementarity with the academic and research programs of the other major universities of the state."

Reproductive study compares horses, women

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

An SIUC study of mares and fillies could provide answers to the cause of reproductive problems in middle-aged women, according to researchers in the University's department of animal science.

Sheryl King, associate professor of animal science, said the University's equine science program is requesting donations of mares and fillies between the ages of two to 10 and 20 years old or older for a study to begin next spring.

King said other horses also may be accepted for donation.

"I wouldn't reject a horse out of hand just because of age," she said. "I'd have to know about their history."

The purpose of the study is to "determine what changes in their reproductive system occur over the years to make them less fertile," King said. "We're basically looking for the two age extremes."

King said the results of the study could have implications for humans.

"The horse looks like (it) is going to be a very good model for the human," she said. "We're hoping to be able to draw correlations to humans."

Dr. Elaine Carnevale, a veterinarian with the department, said fertility of mares, as with human females, decreases as they get older.

Carnevale said the problem may be due to undetected spontaneous abortions of genetically defective foals during the first 10 days of pregnancy.

"They're probably getting pregnant, but we never see the pregnancy," she said.

Genetic disorders common among the offspring of middle-aged humans, such as Down syndrome, do not appear to be a problem among older mares, because defective foals often are miscarried, Carnevale said.

"We usually don't see that a foal is born (among older mares) that we could say is abnormal," she said. "But we do see a higher rate of spontaneous abortion."

King said there appears to be no correlation between the birth of abnormal foals and the age of mares during pregnancy.

The program was having trouble getting enough younger horses for the study, Carnevale said.

"We need a certain number of young and old animals so we can look at statistical differences," she said.

Most of the research would take place in spring because horses do not get pregnant during the winter, King said.

However, she said the study will not involve impregnating the horses, but will examine and compare eggs non-surgically removed from young female horses with eggs from older horses.

King stressed the horses would be treated humanely and would be allowed to pasture for most of the day.

"A lot of the horses we get are retired racehorses who've seen nothing but four walls all their lives," she said. "I would swear they think they're in horse heaven."

People interested in donating horses to the program can call King at 453-1771.

King said riding soundness, breed and pedigree of the horses are not important, and all donations are tax deductible.

Bus driver bill could expand indepth checks

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

Lawmakers, school bus contractors and school administrators agree criminal background checks for bus drivers using fingerprinting is a good idea, but some wonder why it does not extend to all school employees.

Ed Jackson, operations manager of Marion's Mayflower Contract Services, an area school bus contractor, said if the criminal background checks will make school children safer, then they should not be limited to only bus drivers.

"They (Illinois) don't fingerprint custodians, school teachers, cooks or playground workers," Jackson said. "If they are concerned about children's safety then everyone working at schools should be fingerprinted."

The bill, requiring more thorough background checks, was proposed by Secretary of State George Ryan and was recently signed into law by Gov. Jim Edgar.

Ryan said he decided to change the current method for criminal background checks when he found out the checks were not being done.

"Every parent has the right to believe their child is in the safest hands," he said. "I believe it's government's function to make sure it happens."

John Williams, business manager for Carbondale Elementary Schools District 95, said all school employees and bus drivers are subjected to the same criminal background checks.

The Illinois State Police form requires applicants to answer questions regarding their criminal record. The forms are then processed for a cost of $6.

Jackson said the $48 state charge for the background checks, beginning July 1, will be passed on to the school districts.

"Since the law only applies to new drivers, we shouldn't see an increase of more than a $1,000 per year," he said.

Jackson said the fingerprinting will not only cost the school district more, but will also be more expensive for the secretary of state's office since they will have to equip fingerprinting facilities.

Kim St. Aubin, spokesperson for Ryan, said she is unsure of how many fingerprinting facilities there will be, but it will be less than the number of driver license facilities.

Aubin said the fingerprinting system is superior to the current system of background checks.

"As it is now, you fill out an application and say no to any crimes that would exclude you from being a driver and you're approved," she said.

The fingerprinting system will allow the state police and the FBI to check the applicant for a criminal record, Aubin said.

Williams said if the fingerprinting method of background checks proves to be effective the state might need to look at extending this check to other school employees.

Edgar's press office said that there is no legislation under consideration to extend the fingerprinting to other school employees.

State Comptroller Dawn Clark Niesch's press office said she is in agreement with this legislation.

said Ryan should have passed this legislation sooner.

Claude Walker, spokesperson for State Treasurer Patrick Quinn's press office, said if this legislation would have been passed sooner some of these tragedies could have been avoided

BOT meets student groups

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

Members of the two SIUC student government bodies welcomed the SIUC Board of Trustees and administrators to the campus Wednesday with a reception and many questions about current University issues.

The reception, hosted by the Graduate and Professional Student Council, with officials from the Undergraduate Student Government attending, was organized to give student leaders a chance to speak informally with the individuals who run the University, student government officials said.

Patrick Smith, GPSC president, said the reception, which was organized to welcome Board members who will meet today at SIUC, was one of the only chances student government members will have to speak face-to-face with administrators and board members.

"One of the biggest problems (at SIUC) is that students never have a chance to speak directly to the people that are in charge of the University," Smith said.

"It's easy to lose sight of the bottom line when there is no direct communication."

Members of the Undergraduate Student Government, including Chris Ballard, senator from University Park, spoke to Board members about issues that concern students

Ballard spoke with A.D. VanMeier, Board chairman, about a new University housing rule forbidding students from having visitors from outside of their residence halls during Halloween weekend this fall.

Andrew Ensor, USG commissioner on housing, tuition and fees, spoke with board member Molly D'Esposito about student opposition to the SIUC administration's proposed athletic fee increase which was presented to the Board at their July meeting.

Ensor said the students voiced their disapproval for any athletic fee hike by voting against a proposed $40 increase in a USG-sponsored referendum last spring.

Mark Kochan, SIUC student trustee, said the Board was pleased to take part in the reception and speak directly to student leaders of the University.

Kochan said board members and students may not always agree, but it is good for them to communicate.

Kochan, however, said there will be no official action taken by the Board on the proposed tuition increase until later meetings.

Also on the Board agenda for approval is the SIUC operating budget request for fiscal year 1996.

The SIUC administration is asking for about $269 million from the Illinois General Assembly for the Universities 1996 budget.

The SIUC Board of Trustees will meet at 10:30 a.m. in the Student Center Ballroom D. The meeting is open to the public.

Colorful combat boots battle to fashion forefront

Tan work boots have become an on-campus fashion rocket with demand of the durable boots outstripping supplies.

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

As boots stomped their way onto campus last year they came running to the fashion forefront in black combats, but this year they have changed their colors to yellow and have women snatching them up by the dozens.

These above-the-ankle work boots and shoes are the trendy item for fall footwear, according to some Carbondale shoe store because they look cool," he said. "Whatever gets your motor, I guess."

Ken Drew, assistant manager at Barker's Shoes in University Mall said women are buying the boots because the rugged look is hot this year.

"Women like the masculine look, yet feminine look the boots provide," he said.

Drew said the store received more women's boots this year and sold out of the Candie's brand already.

Lisa Keith, sales employee at Payless Shoe Source at University Mall, said the boots and shoes have been so popular, women have been buying men's and young boy's because the women's have sold out.

She said the store will get a shipment of shoes in at the end of September, but does not know if any more boots will be included.

"All the college kids want these boots," she said. "They're a lot cheaper than Dr. Martens."

Jessica Zaragoza, a junior in anthropology and business administration from Joliet, said the typical women's shoes have never been her style.

"I've never liked girly shoes," she said. "So when they came out I had to get them—I have two mustard pairs and a black pair."

Zaragoza said the boots are comfortable and nice for walking around campus because they keep the feet warm in the winter.

Janice Threw, a clothing and textiles lecturer in the department of workforce education and development, attributed the boot trend to the revitalization of the 1940s styles.

She said shoes were "clunkier" in the 1940s and the stacked heel and squared-off toe are coming back in as the fashion cycle turns.

The shoes most likely will be worn in a casual setting, like at the University because of their comfort, she said.

Black combat boots were popular on campus in the past few years, but students probably wanted something a little more colorful in their wardrobe, she said.

"You can only wear black so long and have so many pairs of black shoes," Threw said. "After a while you need some color on your feet."

is a University-wide trend due to graduation and dropouts. Figures show that while overall enrollment has varied in the past five years, international student enrollment has steadily increased.

Lisa Hitt, research project specialist with International and Economic Development at Anthony Hall, said part of the reason for such a high international population is due to the University's reputation for coddling international students through the many services offered. This includes International Programs and Services (IPS) and the numerous student organizations for foreign students.

The Center for English as a Second Language (CESL) also helps to bring in international students. Hitt said many students come to SIUC first to gain language skills through the CESL program before transferring to other universities. She said another advantage is that SIUC offers housing areas for international students.

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, International Student Council president from Malaysia, said many students choose SIUC because it is well-known among students overseas.

He said part of the reason he chose SIUC and the reason many international students choose SIUC is because of the efficiency of admissions and records. Many times, international students choose a university from those that respond first because they do not actually know much about the universities they apply for, he said.

Carla Coppi, assistant director of IPS, said that while many international graduate students get scholarships and grants, most undergraduates are privately funded by either family or organizations at home.

Coppi said that SIUC has only scratched the surface as far as international students are concerned.

"International students are very valuable to the university and we want to keep expanding our international population for a number of reasons," she said.

Coppi said the cultural diversity international students bring to the university is foremost among these reasons.

Students from 107 countries attend SIUC.

employees and SIUC students.

Curt Decker, a junior in zoology from Marion, said he got his first pair of work boots last year when he worked for the Shelbyville Corps of Engineers.

Since he has worked for the corps for two years, they have bought him a light-weight pair and a thick, insulated pair he will wear around campus in the winter, Decker said.

"I had to have mine for work, but now my sister is buying them

Store offers students world views

By Benjamin Golshahr
Staff reporter

Underground magazines, international newspapers and CD-ROMs all are available now at a new store owned and operated by former SIUC students.

Michael Buila, an SIUC graduate from Cobden, and Sigurd Utgaard, a former SIUC student from Carbondale, opened Rosetta News, 210 W. Freeman, last week.

The store probably will have more than 750 periodical titles and a wide selection of books on the shelves by next week, its owners say.

In addition to standard magazines such as Newsweek and Rolling Stone, some international newspapers will be available, Utgaard said. The proprietors are encouraging international students to suggest foreign periodical titles they want Rosetta to carry.

"We want to work with the international student community and provide them with news from home," Utgaard said.

Buila said this fall the store will carry an assortment of material on CD-ROM format.

Cassandra Davis, a sophomore in art from Carbondale, said she likes the fact that the store carries "zines," which are small underground magazines.

"I like this place — it's about time someone's doing something like this," she said.

Buila said Rosetta will carry about 15-30 zine titles, including one dedicated to dishwashing as a profession.

Utgaard said the store also will have an array of academic journals, which differ from magazines in the kind of information they provide.

Utgaard said faculty at SIUC's English department are compiling a list of contemporary authors and poets, which Rosetta will carry later. The store also may carry underground and Beat authors and poets.

Buila said Rosetta will carry magazines from both the reactionary right and the radical left.

"You'll see the Rush Limbaugh Newsletter placed next to Flush Rush," Buila said.

Where puns fly: ESPN's anchors gel, raise hell

The Baltimore Sun

There's a reason why it appears from time to time that ESPN's Dan Patrick and Keith Olbermann are talking right past you on the 11 p.m. "SportsCenter."

They are. Quite frankly, there are infrequent moments where a reference from a production meeting or a conversation will creep into Olbermann's or Patrick's copy and into your living room, and either you'll get it and, and either you'll get it or you won't.

Even if you don't get that joke, just wait awhile, for there'll be another one coming right around the bend shortly.

"One night, I had just gotten tired of sportscasters referring to someone who was having a good night as being 'on fire,'" said

Patrick-Olbermann duo keeps sports fans tuned to program

Patrick. "I asked a cameraman what the phrase was in Spanish, and he said 'en fuego.' From there, I started using it, and you can actually hear Keith keeping count now every time I say it."

Patrick and his "tag-team" partner Olbermann are the blend of the wild and wonderful: Patrick, 37, serves as the coolly efficient voice of sanity on the hourlong program, and Olbermann, 35, is the tastefully wacky joker.

"I still view him as the weird guy in the basement with a chemistry set," said Patrick. "I don't want to go down there to see what he's doing, but I know he's up to something."

When apprised of his partner's comments, Olbermann retorted,

"Oh, yeah, well Dan has some of those chemistry-set qualities too. I've heard all those analogies about me being the mad scientist. I've even been compared to Peter Finch's character in 'Network.' I've heard worse."

Probably not from loyal viewers, who have kept a pretty close eye on Patrick and Olbermann since they were teamed in March 1992. Though Olbermann briefly escaped to help launch ESPN2, their teaming has worked because viewers genuinely like them and sense they like each other.

"We are interchangeable and we work well together," said Olbermann. "I think there's a mutual feeling between us that 'I'll do anything I can to make this

Marie, who got stuck with the Marge Schott-like character right down to the dog, won't be stuck with this as the last entry on her acting resume.

Was anyone else frightened by ABC shillmeister Brent Musberger's gleeful announcement the other night that the network will carry five Notre Dame road games this season, including another national appearance against Southern California in November?

That means that 11 Fighting Irish games will be on either NBC or ABC this season. Notre Dame might very well be America's college team, but do we, the viewing public, really need freshman quarterback god Ron Powlus shoved down our throats every week?

Probably not.

Silver Bullets put holes in notion of baseball as male-only sport

The Sporting News

Why we want what we want often a mystery created by forces not so much known as felt. Why would a girl 8 years old walk into Fenway Park and on seeing the field say to her mother and father, "I want to be a professional baseball player"? She carried a glove that day in 1979. And on a summery day in 1994, another time, she talked about walking to Fenway's right-field bleachers where she sat behind the bullpen, maybe 10 rows up.

Julie Croteau isn't sure why she said what she said. But she remembers the words and remembers this: Her parents didn't tell her that girls can't be baseball players, and it would be a while before she learned, with some pain, that what she wanted was something she couldn't have.

Throughout her childhood she had played in leagues that accommodated boys and girls. Then one day she noticed an odd thing. "The girls started disappearing," she says. In time, Croteau was the only girl who wanted to play for her high school team in Manassas, Va.

Each spring she went to tryouts and each spring, when the cut list was posted, she found her name there. "Each year I really, truly, in my heart believed they would see I could play," she says. Her senior year she was a 5-foot-8, 130-pound first baseman who knew the game. That spring she found it "unbelievable" that she had been cut again.

She then decided she hadn't been cut because she wasn't good enough; she'd been cut because she was a girl. Julie Croteau called her parents that day and said, "I don't want them to get away with it."

So the family filed a discrimination suit — in vain. "The judge said a woman had no con-situtional right to play baseball," Julie Croteau says.

Well, time passes. Things happen. That was 1988. This is 1994. If that judge could only see Julie Croteau now ...

She is a professional baseball player, one of 20 women who are the Colorado Silver Bullets, the first women's team to compete only against men.

This summer the Silver Bullets played 44 games in 3½ months on a 25,000-mile trip through 27 states and Canada. They played against low-classification pros and recreational league amateurs. Mostly they lost.

The Silver Bullets won five of their next 20 games, but the numbers mean little. What's important is the team's existence as a symbol of possibilities. Even more important, the Silver Bullets moved beyond symbolism to real athleticism. These women can play the game.

Ardis as fuel for the victory as the senior carried 18 times for career-high 123 yards.

WIU will try and carry the momentum into Kalamazoo, Mich. this Saturday for a match-up with Western Michigan.

SIUC was unable to hold on to a 17-14 halftime lead against Tennessee-Martin as the Dawgs dropped their home opener 35-26.

Saluki sophomore tailback Melvin Dukes rushed for 104 yards, but was unable to display as much offensive firepower as UT-M quarterback Charles "Doc"

Gamble.

Gamble tossed a school record five touchdown passes for the Pacers and found a different receiver with each scoring strike.

"The attitude was there, the effort was there, they (UT-M) just hit us with a few big plays," SIUC linebacker Tommy Anderson said. "We proved we're going to be a good team when we iron out the wrinkles. We're going to be back."

The only idle team in the Gateway was Southwest Missouri State, who hosts North Texas this Saturday.

Smith and Skillman both qualified for the tournament, which gives Daugherty one of her strongest freshman classes on record.

"I don't like putting pressure on them by saying they are the best class I ever had, but it is the first time when the freshmen have made an impact this early.

Daugherty said Smith has been standing out during practice and should have a strong season.

"Jamie (Smith) had a great summer and was a very pleasant surprise," she said.

Junior Kristen Oglesby is also expected to also contend for the team as Skillman beat her by one stroke in 65 holes to qualify for this weekend's tournament.

"I expect Kristen to contribute, which just adds to the depth of the team," Daugherty said.

Time to settle running short in ball strike

The Baltimore Sun

Representatives of the striking Major League Baseball Players Association spoke by conference call with management negotiator Richard Ravitch and a small group of owners Monday, but the clock continues to count down to ownership's Friday deadline to save the rest of the season.

It seems likely that there will be a formal bargaining session between now and then, but nothing has yet been scheduled. The union was represented by associate general counsel Gene Orza, assistant general counsel Lauren Rich, union consultant Steve Fehr and several other MLBPA officials.

Though nothing encouraging came out of the discussion, the unannounced negotiating session confirmed that both sides still are working behind the scenes in an attempt to find some common ground on which to build a settlement.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Gateway openers yield mixed results

Division I Iowa State fumbles to Northern Iowa

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

The Gateway Football Conference flexed its muscle from Louisiana to Ohio in its first weekend of play, but was only able to muster up two wins in six showdowns with non-conference opponents.

Division I-AA national powerhouse Northern Iowa turned in the strongest showing of the seven Gateway foes as the Panthers knocked-off Division I Iowa State of the Big Eight Conference, 28-14.

The Northern Iowa victory marks its second win over the Cyclones in the past three years and Panther senior linebacker Andre Allen said anyone who takes UNI lightly has another thing coming.

"This victory was even better than last time ('92) and they (Iowa State) should have been prepared," he said. "I still don't think they respect us. If a I-AA team beat me twice, I would have a lot of respect. Just because we're not in the Big Eight, doesn't mean we can't play."

Northern Iowa is currently ranked No. 8 in the nation, but head coach Terry Allen said he thinks the Iowa State victory will earn his team even more respect.

"The players wanted to prove that two years ago was no fluke," he said. "We are going to turn a lot of Division I-AA heads with this win."

Indiana State also did battle with a Division I opponent in Toledo and nearly came up with an upset win of its own.

The Sycamores rallied behind quarterback Tom Cerasani, who completed 15-28 passes for 158 yards and two touchdowns, but INSU still came up short, 20-17.

Freshman free safety Robert High racked up 10 tackles for the Sycamores in his first collegiate appearance.

Illinois State took on one of the more established Division I-AA teams in the country as the Redbirds traveled to Lake Charles, La. for a game with No. 4 McNeese State.

ILSU turned the ball over five times on the afternoon and headed back from the bayou 24-17 losers.

"I'm disappointed we turned the ball over so much," Illinois State head coach Jim Heacock said. "Against a team like McNeese State, you have to play error-free. Unfortunately, we did the opposite of that."

The Redbirds open up their home season on Saturday when Division III Washburn visits Normal. ILSU is ranked No. 22 in the country.

Eastern Illinois went to the Bluegrass State for its opener against Murray State and got stomped by the Thoroughbreds, 31-15.

The Panthers attempted to use Northern Illinois quarterback transfer Ron Reichert to spark the team off the bench after starting QB Pete Mauch threw three interceptions.

Reichert came on and completed 10 passes for the Panthers for 134 yards, but it was too little, too late as EIU dropped to 0-1.

Western Illinois kicked the season off with a bang by routing Iowa Wesleyan 42-0 in Macomb.

The Leathernecks used three touchdowns from halfback Tim

Golf team ready for season

Coach Daugherty says talented players will make difference

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

As the women's golf team gets ready to tee up for its first competition, spirits are high as the squad returns a lot of talent and gains immediate impact from two recruits.

The Salukis will begin their season this weekend at Illinois State with the 34th annual Redbird Golf Classic.

The tournament will have 17 schools participating including the Universities of Illinois, Missouri and Notre Dame.

Head Coach Diane Daugherty said the first event is always exciting, especially with this team.

"We will be nervous, but our expectations are high and we feel like we are ready for this tournament," she said.

She also said this year's team is one of the strongest in her nine-year tenure.

"This team has performed really well in practice and has a lot of talent from top to bottom," Daugherty said. "I think this will be my best team since I have been here."

The Salukis will be trying to build on last year's second-place finish behind Tulsa. SIUC's five-person team going to Illinois State will be led by two fifth-year seniors, Lieschen Eller and Laura Stefanich.

Eller had a team-best 79.8 stroke average on the squad placing her sixth in the Missouri Valley Conference last year. Stefanich finished third on the Salukis a year ago with an 84.2 average.

Daugherty said the seniors have really worked hard since they have been at SIUC and will help the younger golfers improve.

"Both of them have really matured into outstanding golfers and great leaders," she said. "They have come such a long way to get to the level that they are at now and both are academic All-Americans."

The two seniors will be joined in the tournament by sophomore Molly Hudgins and freshman Stacy Skillman and Janie Smith.

Daugherty said Hudgins really impressed her with her work ethic and competitive spirit.

"Hudgins qualified for almost every tournament and is one of the hardest workers on the team," Daugherty said. "We are looking for good things from her this year and see her have consistent

Volleyball club tryouts scheduled

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

The Student Recreation Center will be the site this Sunday for over 100 potential spikers hoping to earn a spot on one of the three SIUC club volleyball men's teams.

Although a large number of players are expected, Mike Mandis, volleyball club member and player coordinator, said they only expect to take on 25 to 30 new members.

"We have enough quality players this year, but we're still looking to fill a couple of holes," he said.

Those spots include back row specialty players, but Mandis says one thing the team does not need is hitters.

"We have a lot of hitters, but it wouldn't hurt to have a few good setters," he said. "We would like to have great all-around players, but there aren't a whole lot of them out there."

Mandis also said that just because all three of this year's teams will be in the most competitive club division, it does not mean that they are only looking for superstars.

"We'll determine who we take on potential as well as skill," he said. "If someone shows a lot of athletic ability, we'll take them and try to make them into a solid volleyball player."

This season, the volleyball club teams will face heavy competition from the University of Illinois and club teams not sponsored by universities.

"In the A division, there are teams sponsored by companies like Pepsi, and they are allowed to play college club teams like ours," Mandis said. "Those teams, especially those from the Chicago area, are always tough."

Tryouts for the volleyball club will be held on Sunday, Sept. 11 at 4 p.m. in courts five and six of the Recreation Center. Additional tryouts may be needed depending upon the number of players that attend Sunday.
