SIU may drop lawsuit against 104

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU is considering dropping the class action lawsuit against the 104 employees terminated in December. SIU President Hiram Lesar said Friday.

While no decision has been made, Lesar said, "We're trying to find some legal way to ameliorate their condition."

Several plans for bypassing the lawsuit are before the administration.

Lesar said, but he declined to go into detail. He did confirm that one plan involves making lump-sum salary payments to teachers to effect a one-year notice of dismissal.

The money would come from funds included in this year's budget, Lesar said. The School of Medicine, he said, does have some unspent salary funds, but "we're involved in negotiations on that and I shouldn't comment further."

"Money could come from positions that we didn't permit to be filled" when further budget cutbacks by Gov. Dan Walker were anticipated, Lesar said. Starting in December, SIU enacted "somehat of a freeze" on filling teaching vacancies, he explained, and the unclaimed salaries are now available.

Lesar also mentioned SIU's discretionary power in shifting around two per cent of the internal budget as a way to gain funds. There are several sources of the "local money," he said, and all are being explored.

No decision to drop the suit has been made, Lesar stressed, and withdrawing it is "only one of the things we're talking about." But he said the declaratory judgment action "didn't work out the way its planners thought," despite its being "legally sound and well-motivated."

While those decisions are being made, Lesar pointed out seven or eight of the tenured faculty who were fired have been hired in other SIU departments. He added a number of the faculty with continuing appointments have also been relocated within SIU.

"We're still working on placing people in other departments," Lesar said. "We just can't put back those jobs (terminated positions)."

Lesar said he did not anticipate a blanket rehiring of all the original 28 tenured faculty who were dismissed.

The task of picking up the pieces and making the University run after the 104 terminations and the resignation of former president David R. Derge is not easy, Lesar admitted. He said his goal is to try to achieve a "better feeling" on the campus.

"My position is to do the best we can from where we start...it doesn't make much difference how we got here," Lesar explained.

The account-by-account review of SIU's budget ordered by Lesar after Derge's resignation should be done in time for the April 12 Board of Trustees meeting, Lesar said. He added he hopes to have some form of proposal dealing with the 104 prepared for the trustees.

Lesar said his "get-acquainted" meeting Thursday with Cameron West, executive director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE), was "pleasant enough."

"He is sympathetic with our problems. He thinks we have a mission and is willing to support new programs which are clearly appropriate," Lesar reported. While SIU's ultimate educational mission is still uncertain, Lesar said West holds SIU's "area service" programs as important.

Definition of SIU's goals may be some time in coming, and Lesar said the biggest factor affecting the 1974-75 budget will be student enrollment.

"The indications are if enrollment next year is like this year's, we'll get a cut. That's all there is to it...a cut in the base," Lesar said. Optimism about future budgeting isn't out of the question, Lesar continued, but he said West "made it pretty clear that enrollment will determine further budget appropriations."

Lesar said he has asked campus representative groups to submit statements of their desires regarding SIU's long-term goals and mission. He said an administrative committee will cull through the suggestions looking for "supportable and valid" ideas.

A summary statement will then go to the board, Lesar said, adding it should be ready by July 1. The board will take the statements from SIU-C and SIU-E and form an overall mission and development plan for submission to the IBHE.

In another matter, Lesar denied he had plans to water down constituency representation at board meetings. But he said the board staff is considering the possibility of reducing the present seven-member panel of representatives to a three-person panel similar to that of SIU-E.

"We didn't initiate it...the board raised the question of variation of representation at the meetings," Lesar said. He said he believed several trustees had first opened queries about the two dissimilar representative panels.

The board staff, Lesar believed, is investigating the question, but no specific proposal has been made.

Board candidates focus on communications gap

By John Russell
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Lack of communication is the major problem facing the Carbondale Elementary School Board, according to candidates vying for two seats on the board.

The District 95 election will be held April 13. Neither Dr. Fred Nolen nor Charles Richardson will be seeking reelection.

Nolen served as a board member for nine years and Richardson for three years.

Candidates for the two three-year positions are Mrs. Duane Lanchester of 1001 Glenview Dr., Charles Reno of 1023 W. Willow, David Rosenthal of 2013 Norwood Dr. and Lawrence Weisman of 1711 Sunset Dr.

Mrs. Lanchester is a 40-year-old housewife with a master's degree in education. She has three children in the second, fourth and sixth grades.

An eight-year resident of Carbondale, she also ran for the board in last spring's election.

Mrs. Lanchester said a lack of communication resulted in the confusion involving the recent mathematics program controversy in the schools. She said she felt many people were making decisions based on emotion rather than reason.

Teachers should be more involved in curriculum programs, Mrs. Lanchester said, and more weight should be given to the opinions of teachers.

She said citizens should work to improve the public school system rather than seeking out an alternative school.

Reno is the area distributor for the metropolitan newspapers from Chicago and St. Louis. He is 30 years old and has two children, one six years old and one 10.

He said the school board is currently made up of professional persons and feels he would represent the laymen in the community, bringing a different outlook to the board.

Reno said the board, teachers and parents must work together to develop the best education possible for all students. The lifetime Carbondale resident said persons seeking an alternative school were displaying a "sour grapes" attitude because of the board's decision on the new mathematics program.

Rosenthal, 33, is a partner in a local certified public accountant firm. He has two children, ages 7 and 8, both students at Thomas School.

Communication also was cited by Rosenthal as being a major problem for the school board. He said the board has an obligation to fully explain issues and

Board says crop failure hit area hard

By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Peach and apple crop destruction has created a definite disaster in Southern Illinois, the Jackson County Department of Agriculture Emergency Board decided Friday afternoon.

Bob Frank, Jackson County extension advisor, said the procedure for getting Southern Illinois declared a disaster area, so that area growers may receive federal relief, is "going through the bureaucracy channels right now."

Frank said the board's decision was that the problem is a serious one because last year's crop loss complicates the matter. For the second consecutive year bad weather has caused Southern Illinois fruit growers many financial strains, he added.

"The only thing available is they may be able to get a five per cent interest loan from the FHA (Farm and Home Administration) to maintain their maintenance costs whether fruits are growing or not," Frank said.

He said, depending on the number of farmers applying for the loans, either the state or federal government would decide.

Tim Renn, assistant press secretary to Gov. Dan Walker, said Friday the process is in the works but that it was something that cannot happen overnight.

Renn said a request is made by local

School chief says people pushed to limit on paying education taxes

By Carl Flowers
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction said Friday the people of Illinois face the dilemma of desiring better education of students in the public schools with no increase in taxes.

Speaking at a noon luncheon at the Student Center, as part of the second annual conference on "Innovations and Issues in Education," Michael Bakalis said citizens are beginning to question themselves on the issue of continuing finance for the public schools.

"They have been pushed to the limit," Bakalis said.

He said the public will no longer continue to support the schools, as in the past, without asking questions, and the educators must now take the responsibility.

"Educators have the responsibility of looking at the situation and asking themselves, 'How can we improve the quality of education with no increase in cost?'"

Bakalis, former professor of history at Northern Illinois University, said the shortages are burgeoning in natural resources but the American people still desire abundance. "We are living in a shrinking environment," he said.

He said the American character can be understood if we understand the abundance of the American people.

Beginning in 1945, Bakalis said, a "boom" period was seen in education in this country. With the increases in enrollment in schools followed by an increase in the number of teachers, the cost of education grew at a very fast pace.

"When demands are met, new and greater demands are made," he said.

Bakalis said teachers as well as school patrons have the idea that the state is

"some magical entity which can generate revenue," and added, "you are the state."

First, Bakalis said, teachers must prepare young men and women for the year 2,000 so they will be able to adjust to a world of constant change. Secondly, pupils should be taught basic skills so they will leave school feeling "worthwhile."

"If this is not accomplished," he said, "the education system will not have succeeded and will have been a disservice to the people."

These goals can become realities, Bakalis said, "if we stop excusing ourselves for not doing them."

Bakalis' appearance was part of a two-day conference intended to familiarize educational administrators, teachers, counselors and interested citizens with the innovations and issues in education today.

Carbondale City Council to hear report on financial situation Monday

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

It's going to be a tight year money-wise for Carbondale this year.

That's what City Manager Carrol Fry will report to the City Council at a special meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the University City cafeteria.

Fry will submit to the council the general fund operating budget for the 1974-75 fiscal year and proposed expenditures on capital improvements.

The general fund section of the operating budget is $2,265,752, a figure that Fry said "does not reflect a maintenance of the level of services that we have enjoyed during 1973-74."

The budget is less than a five per cent increase over last year's budget. Fry said the problem is that costs have grown about 10 per cent. "Hence, we are on a collision course! Something will need to give."

Fry cautioned the council to watch funding of city services carefully this upcoming fiscal year. He reported that the general fund will only meet the costs of those services authorized by the city's revised code or by other formal council action.

This means that there is little room for the city to provide any extra services or programs with the new budget, Fry said.

The new budget reflects what Fry predicted when he said last year, "The coming fiscal year, 1973-74, will probably be the last year that Carbondale's citizens can expect the present level of services."

Fry attributed the tight budget to three causes. The first is the elimination of $105,000 in manpower funds for city employe salaries and wages.

Another reason is the "absorption by the general fund of certain Model Cities programs, urban renewal and other funded programs funded by grants," Fry said.

Fry said this absorption has caused an imbalance in the budget at a time when there is not enough revenue to cover increased costs of inflation and salary increases.

The third reason cited by Fry is the static economy with "no reasonable prospect of current revenues rising beyond projected levels."

The 1974-75 fiscal year will be the first year in a five-year capital improvements program which includes construction projects throughout the city.

Fry has proposed allocating $4,226,932 for capital improvements, down from the $4,399,483 figure projected last year.

Fry predicted that 1974-75 will "emphasize greater planning engineering and planning detail on projects, which should be reflected in 1975-76 by more accurate construction estimates."

Street construction projects and the downtown improvement project are being pushed back, Fry said. He emphasized that there must be greater reliance on revenue-sharing funds if the street construction projects are to be carried out.

Fry cited a lag in public building construction and the uncertainty of further federal assistance as major factors in the cutback of funds for capital improvements in the coming fiscal year.

Candidates cite problems to keep parents informed on matters affecting their children.

Rosenthal said he has worked in auditing schools in the past. A resident of Carbondale for five years, he said the time has come for people to work together to better the educational system. He said there is too much polarization in the community and an alternative school would only add to the polarization.

Weisman, an assistant professor in the Department of Occupational Education at SIU, He has four children, aged 14, 12, 10 and 8.

Weisman said he moved to Carbondale 2½ years ago "with the intention of becoming involved in the community."

Misunderstandings between the board and parents is the biggest problem facing the district, Weisman said. He also cited the mathematics issue as an example of faulty communication.

Weisman said his work on the college and high school levels has shown him the interdependence between schools, and he feels his experience will help him carry out the board's work.

Nixon will not accept donations

WASHINGTON (AP)—Any money donated to President Nixon to help pay his $465,000 income tax debt will be returned a White House spokesman said Friday.

The comment came as various campaigns were launched around the country to send money to the President.

The White House said it has received more than a dozen telephone offers to help the President.

The weather: Mostly sunny, warmer

Saturday: Mostly sunny and warmer with the high temperature in the upper 50s to lower 60s. Precipitation probabilities will be 25 per cent. The wind will be from the SW at 8 to 15 mph. The relative humidity will be 75 per cent.

Saturday night: Fair and cool with a low temperature in the upper 30s to 40s. The probability for precipitation will be increasing to 30 per cent by tonight.

Sunday: Partly cloudy and continued warm with a high around 63 degrees. Friday's high on campus 41 degrees, 1 p.m., low 32 degrees, 5 a.m.

Bakalis claims funds for 104 were available

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Michael J. Bakalis, superintendent of public instruction, said Friday he has "no doubt" SIU could have found enough money in December to retain the tenured faculty who were terminated.

The necessary budget money was "definitely there," Bakalis said, echoing his comments last week to an Illinois Federation of Teachers convention. "Those tenured could be kept on, without any question."

While Bakalis said he thought the Board of Trustees did what it considered necessary by terminating 104 employes, he added the action was a mistake.

"Dick (Haney) and I have gone over that budget carefully," Bakalis said, explaining at least $500,000 was available for tenured faculty salaries. Haney, SIU trustee, is Bakalis' ex officio representative to the board.

Haney said he saw no reason to change his original opinion that about the salary monies being available. While "my figures don't come anywhere close" to the oft-quoted total of $1.4 million in extra money, Haney said SIU-C has a definite surplus of budget funds.

Haney's budget study will be presented to the Board of Trustees April 12, he said. Declining to comment on the specifics of the report, Haney said to "just wait and see."

Bakalis said he was not actively seeking the SIU presidency, but he admitted interest in the job if he is not retained as superintendent of public instruction after January, 1975.

"I've had no formal or informal contact about the job," Bakalis said, adding he had not applied for the post. "My first hope is to stay on where I am."

However, Bakalis said he is "confident I could do a good job" as SIU president.

The presidential search, Bakalis said, should be open to faculty, student and administrators alike. He stressed the importance of student voice in selecting a new SIU head.

chapters of the FHA to the governor for a study of damages. After the request, county people are contacted and eventually federal officials.

Illinois House Minority Leader Clyde Choate, of Anna, asked Walker last week to declare Southern Illinois a disaster area.

Recent cold weather accompanied by some snow has destroyed most of the peach and apple crops in the Southern Illinois area, orchard owners contacted Friday said. All said they did not plan on taking any precautions to combat the cold weather and frost for Friday night.

The Southern Illinois Airport Weather Bureau reported that the low for Friday night would be about 35 degrees.

Mrs. Ray Grammer of Route 4, Carbondale, said Grammer's Orchards were not taking any precautions. Mrs. Grammer said other precautions had been used previously but did not help.

She said the peach crop was definitely not commercially and she could not estimate how much of the apple crop could be saved. The FHA called the orchard Friday morning for a damage estimate, she said.

Mrs. Dan McGuire, of McGuire Orchards in Makanda, said no precautions would be used by that orchard.

She could not estimate the damages to date, but did say they were extensive from both last year and so far this year.

Harvey Hartline Jr., who owns and operates a farm-nursery near Makanda, said he had not been contacted by FHA officials and did not plan on taking precautions.

"It's kind of hard to do when you don't have too many (crops) left to worry about," Hartline said.

Hartline said his orchard lost almost all its peaches but the apples had been leased over to McGuire's.

Precautions that have been used to combat the cold weather's effect on crops include burning tires, helicopters circling above the crops to "keep the air stirred up" and underground gas lines, he added.

Parents study choices

Alternative school sought

By John Russell
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

At least 20 Carbondale couples have expressed interest in starting an alternative school for Carbondale elementary school children.

One of the parents involved in the search for an alternative to the public school system, Mrs. Charles Matthews, said the parents have begun investigating state laws, accreditation, financing and other areas of question in the establishment of a new school. The group first met last Sunday to explore the idea of an alternative school. Mrs. Matthews said they are now at the inquiry stage, exploring the problems a new school would face.

Mrs. Matthews and another interested parent, Mrs. Richard Millman, said the school district's dropping of the Comprehensive School Mathematics Program (CSMP) was the "last straw," and brought about the desire to seek an alternative program.

At its March 14 meeting, the school board adopted a traditional mathematics program for the 1974-75 school year which would eliminate the voluntary CSMP currently used in the schools.

CSMP, a division of the Central Midwestern Regional Educational Laboratory (CEMREL), is an innovative educational program being used experimentally in schools throughout the nation, according to Bart Kaufman, CEMREL director in Carbondale.

Mrs. Millman said the parents would like to initiate a school using CEMREL-Like programs. Kaufman said CEMREL is interested in the alternative school concept, and would advise the group on the structure the school should take.

CEMREL offers more advanced, comprehensive programs than the current system, Mrs. Matthews said. She said the school district rejects innovative ideas, objecting to "any kind of program outside of the three 'R's.'"

She pointed out that CEMREL had okayed the district's initiation of CEMREL's aesthetic education programs last year, but the board refused.

Besides the CSMP and aesthetic education courses, CEMREL also offers a language arts program. Kaufman said CSMP is being used in more than 200 schools throughout the nation and the aesthetic education program in more than 1,000 schools.

He said no schools are currently operating totally with CEMREL programs.

For CEMREL to become involved in the alternative school, Kaufman said, students of varying ability, social and economic backgrounds would have to be admitted.

Mrs. Millman said parents interested in the school felt scholarships could be established for underprivileged children. She said the tuition of other students would partially defray the cost of those students who could not normally afford the tuition price.

Kaufman said CEMREL would not become involved in "a high-class private school." He said the National Institute of Education would probably be interested in an alternative school, and government funding could possibly be obtained.

The 20 interested couples have about 40 children who would be willing to attend an alternative school, Mrs. Millman said. Kaufman said between 40 and 50 students would be needed for CEMREL to become involved in the alternative school.

One or two full-time teachers would be needed for this number of students, Kaufman said. He said CEMREL would donate mathematics instruction at no charge to the school and would provide material and services in the aesthetic education and language arts programs.

He said persons connected with SIU may be willing to volunteer their services and parents could act as administrators for the school.

Another meeting for persons interested in the alternative school will be held at 1 p.m. Sunday in the CEMREL headquarters at the University City complex.

Inmate raps solitary confinement

By Dennis Montgomery
Associated Press Writer

MARION, (AP)—An federal prison inmate told a civil rights committee Friday that solitary confinement cells "are holes" where men are left to languish until they go mad.

Michael Cassidy, 31, a convicted bank robber from Chicago, told the Illinois State Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights he saw "men bark like dogs and chew on books in there."

Seldom are the cells visited by staff psychologists, he charged.

Cassidy said men in the units are sometimes deprived of clothing, medical care, even toilet paper.

Some prisoners said they have been confined in the cells for urging reforms. Joseph H. Brown of New York City said the cells are used to "silence reform-minded individuals."

He said such individuals are accused of vague charges and put in disciplinary cells "lest they create awareness for reform in the minds of fellow prisoners."

Brown was one of 19 inmates of the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion who testified Friday at hearings investigating operation of the institution that replaced Alcatraz as a federal maximum security prison.

Another inmate defended the cells, called control units. Paul Owens, 31, of Harrisburg, Pa., said: "I have seen inmates that have been beaten and raped by fellow inmates, not by the guards. All of the trouble I've ever seen in this institution is by other inmates. If it wasn't for the control unit, this place would be in anarchy."

Other prisoners charged that even outside the disciplinary cells they have been denied proper medical care, religious freedom, psychiatric help, reasonable access to lawyers and legal materials, adequate educational opportunities and safe working conditions.

Citizens unite to repair tornado-torn Decatur

DECATUR, Ill. (AP)—About 450 central Illinois neighbors, including bearded Mennonites laboring in blue coveralls and black-brimmed hats, helped the tornado-torn West Side of Decatur Friday paste together its lives and property.

The buzz of chain saws drowned out most conversation as workers kept busy in 30-degree temperatures made more chilly by a brisk wind. The workers, volunteers, brought 65 trucks and plenty of muscle.

Those driven from the 155 homes damaged by Wednesday's tornado found neighbors who provided places to stay and food to eat. Local restaurants donated dozens of donuts and hundreds of sandwiches and coffee to feed the workers.

"I've had more offers of help and free meals than I could possibly accept," said Everett Mitchell, 39, a Caterpillar Tractor Co. plant manager. He stood in the rubble of what used to be his $30,000 ranch-style home.

As he talked, workers from communities 20 miles away carried him a piece of his green carpet, a broken piece of furniture or a muddied curtain.

"No, just throw it away. And don't worry about those cabinets. The kitchen floor could tilt if you tried to get in there. It's not worth getting somebody hurt to salvage a cabinet or two," he said.

Mitchell's wife and two of his three children escaped injury as the tornado cut through the West Side, killing one person in Decatur.

Another person was killed in a twist in Champaign.

Damage to the Decatur area was estimated at about $2 million and a state official said the estimate was $5 million statewide.

Letters

More about the language

To the Daily Egyptian:

I feel called upon to reply to Donald Ayers' letter concerning (ostensibly) the liberties the Daily Egyptian has been taking with the language. I too sometimes flinch at such contortions as "center around" (an impossibility) and "refer back" (a redundancy), but I find the student newspaper no more guilty in this than the local daily newspaper in Carbondale which is supposedly put out by professionals. But Mr. Ayers is really not talking about purism in language. What he actually objects to is the use of "person" instead of "man", and he is simply justifying linguistically a prejudice that he doesn't want to admit intellectually.

He says "ombudperson" is an example of "casual adoption of expressions which are mere replacements for perfectly good existing terms." I would ask, good for whom? The male ego, obviously. Women suffer from the built-in assumptions society has about their abilities, which language as a cultural tool reflects. "Chairman," "ombudsman," "mankind," and any use of "men" to refer collectively to people are demeaning to women in exactly the same way that measuring the worth of blacks by the degree of white blood in their veins is. The inference in using such words is clearly that for a woman to be effective she must assume the characteristics of a man. And it is not casual, nor do I believe it is reversible, whether the Egyptian takes Mr. Ayers' advice or not. Even Dr. Spock has revised his baby care books to avoid the use of the pronoun "his" when referring to a child whose sex is unknown or irrelevant.

In a way, I feel sorry for Mr. Ayers who apparently has not yet discovered that he is a "person first—something that he shares with the entire population of the world—and a "man" only by an accident of chromosomes.

Athlete protests views in Croessman editorial

To the Daily Egyptian:

In reference to Mr. John H. Croessman's editorial of April 2, I suggest to Mr. Croessman that if he wants to continue to write editorials, he should do some research before he once again opens his mouth and puts his feet into it. After having reread the editorial, I do not understand the point that Mr. Croessman is trying to make. I discern two asinine arguments in the editorial. Either Mr. Croessman does not think that out-of-state students should be allowed to attend SIU, or a coach should not recruit anyone unless the athlete comes from the school's "own backyard." Mr. Croessman leads the reader to believe that all 43 members of the SIU track team have a "full ride"—that is, the athlete gets his tuition, fees, books, room, board and $15 a month paid by the Athletic Department. That is far from true. If that were the case, the budget for the track team itself would be as large as the budget is now for the entire Athletic Department.

If Mr. Croessman had been intelligent enough to research his facts, he would have found that the NCAA says nothing about the fact that an athlete must "show progress" in his schoolwork to maintain his scholarship. The NCAA states that a school must abide by the rules of the school itself and of any conference that a school is a member in order for an athlete to remain eligible for athletic competition. SIU holds that an athlete must maintain a 3.0 GPA to remain eligible for competition. Not many schools other than SIU have a rule as strict as that in regards to athletes and there are fewer schools that enforce this rule. True, "an athletic coach seldom knocks a runner out of the lineup" because of the simple fact that an athlete works to maintain at least a 3.0 GPA to remain eligible. In effect, the athletes are, as you state, "scholars."

Towards the end of the article, it is inferred that the only reason that I am at SIU is to participate in track. Mr. Croessman, again, if you had taken any time to research, you would find you are sadly mistaken. You do not mention me by name but by home town, Newport, R.I. Is there some reason you don't want anyone to know who you are talking about. The only ones you mention by name are Phil Robins and Obed Gardiner. Are you afraid that if you mention names you will be proven wrong, as you are certainly wrong in my case. You are right when you say that I "didn't hear about SIU on the radio." But in my case that is precisely why I am here. I came to SIU to major in Radio-Television and when I enrolled, I had little or no intention of going out for track. As a matter of fact, I did not contact Coach Hartzog until almost a month after the rest of the team began practicing. And although I am on scholarship now (my tuition and fees), I was on the team for two years without any type of scholarship. I probably would still be out on my own had it not been for extenuating circumstances that force me into a state of extreme financial need.

Academically, you can't beat the SIU R-T Department and the overall academic standards of most of the SIU departments. I cannot speak for the other athletes on the track team, but I would be here at SIU whether I was out for track or not.

Next time you make a semi-intelligent attempt at an editorial, Mr. Croessman, do some research so you won't end up with both feet in your mouth.

Neat trick if it works

A $442,000-suggestion enabling the University to bypass its lawsuit against the 104 terminated faculty members was unveiled Tuesday by Keith Leasure, vice president for academic affairs.

The option amounts to a plan to buy off the tenured faculty members and save the University the problem of proving the existence of a state of "financial exigency"—one justification for firing tenured teachers.

It also buys SIU the additional six months' notice needed before laying off a tenured faculty member and defuses much of the legal grounds for contesting the terminations.

According to provisions of the Board of Trustees Statutes and Bylaws, tenured teachers are guaranteed one year's pay should they be dismissed by the University. By offering to pay the faculty members an additional six months' salary following the lay-offs in June, the University will be meeting the one year's notice requirement and therefore can skip the potentially embarrassing court suit to prove SIU suffers from financial hardships.

The University hasn't yet revealed where the $442,000 to pay the faculty members will come from. But more importantly, no SIU administrator has explained why nothing was said of money in December, when the terminated teachers received their pink slips.

Having a half-million dollars available to pay the teachers will put the University on shaky grounds in its suit. But if the teachers jump at the bait—as many facing termination reasonably may do—the University will be off the hook.

But what about the state officials in Springfield who also have a say in SIU's finances? Will they reject the University's gambit as a legitimate offer and instead take it as a if-you-can't-beat-them-then-buy-them move?

Taxpayers and state legislators both will resent using state funds to pay for the University's easy way out. Since SIU in the past has had problems justifying the number of faculty members on its payroll, paying teachers not to teach only will weaken its position.

A university that comes up short in December only to find an unused $442,000 four months later may have a hard time convincing anyone of its "financial exigency" problems.

Regret

To the Daily Egyptian:

I would like to publicly announce my sadness and regret at the resignation of David R. Derge. The demagogic headhunters at SIU were out to get him even before he arrived here over two years ago. I guess now SIU will become a paragon of academic virtue and Carbondale will have nothing but good weather since that wicked man has stepped down.

Paying Mr. Thieu's bill

Mr. Nixon's request to boost our military aid to South Vietnam is currently before the Armed Services Committees of the House and Senate, as part of a 6.2 billion dollars supplementary defense appropriation. But an amendment offered by Senators Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and James B. Pearson of Kansas would block the increased military aid for Saigon. We hope it is adopted.

As we said editorially last Jan. 27 on the first anniversary of the peace accords that have worked so badly, a Marshall Plan is needed for Indochina—all of it. That is the only way to turn a tide that is now moving only toward greater hostilities.

And in that connection, Vice President Gerald Ford recently showed some good sense on the subject when he was asked what the U.S. should do if the North Vietnamese army launched a big attack like that of 1972.

He replied that it was speculative, but "no one in my position should start discussing military supplies and military measures and matters of that sort. The (peace) accords are there, and they would give us a legal loophole." And at another point he said there were 11 signatories and we should "go back to that document and utilize the good offices of all the signatories."

It is long past for the U.S. to get over the notion that it has a responsibility to act alone, by either diplomatic or military means, in Southeast Asia. Surely we have learned our lesson. From now on our slogan should be: Millions for peace and reconstruction, but not one cent for more military aid to the modern Barbary pirates.

In one way the Defense Department, it seems, is just like the rest of us. It cannot live within its budget. It has requested an additional $474,000,000 emergency increase in its military aid to South Vietnam, over and above the 1.6 billion dollars unfortunately approved by Congress last year.

Otherwise, says the Defense Department, the South Vietnamese will have to curtail sharply their military operations next month. We think that is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Let us explain why. In the first year after the signing of the Vietnam peace accords, more than 55,000 Vietnamese soldiers and civilians were killed, a death toll greater than that of all the U.S. servicemen killed in Vietnam during the preceding 10 years.

The Saigon government has a standing army of 1,000,000 men and the third largest air force in the whole world, all or most of it paid for last year by more than 1.5 billion dollars in new U.S. funds coughed up by American taxpayers. And this huge force still cannot subdue some 200,000 North Vietnamese and Liberation Front troops in their constantly growing areas.

There are at least a half million refugees in South Vietnam and between 50,000 and 200,000 political prisoners. For the refugees, Saigon gave only $92,000 last year, spent all of it for staff operations, and then cut this to only $30,000 for fiscal 1974. In the same period U.S. refugee relief came to $93,000,000, a small fraction of the 1.5 billion dollars for military and economic aid. And corruption is rampant at every level of the relief program.

South Vietnam's President Thieu, whom President Nixon once called one of the four or five best political leaders in the world, is now living up to his 1969 threat to "bill" the U.S. for any future troop withdrawals.

"All right, dear President Nixon," he said on Sept. 28 of that year, "you can withdraw. Give me a number. I will give you a bill." Now Mr. Nixon wants Congress to pay that bill.

Nor is the situation made easier by such statements as that made last Nov. 30 by Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger that the State Department was studying a resumption of our bombing in the event of a new Communist offensive. He did assure that in that event, Congress would be consulted.

But in this he was only following the law. Three times during 1973, Congress voted, and even overrode President Nixon's veto, to block any direct military involvement in Indochina unless Congress authorized it.

Mini-prisons

A healthy-minded person is one who has learned to get along with himself. Like Noah in the play, The Green Pastures, he says, "I ain't very much, but I see all I got."

On the other hand, the sick-minded person is drowned in self-hatred. Displeased with himself, he may go so far as to take his own life.

Learning to accept the mini-prisons in which we live is a part of growing up. Yes, I said "little prisons," for all of us are boxed in by such prisons as age, sex, heredity and nationality. These we can not change.

nor break loose from. (True, you might falsify your age, but you're still the prisoner of your years!)

Equally important is learning to accept others. "Live and let live" is the way it is commonly expressed, although such a lackadaisical attitude borders on over-simplification.

Here's how Paul Tournier put it:

Accepting one's life means also accepting the sin of others which causes us suffering, accepting their nerves, their reactions, their enthusiasms, and even the talents and qualities by means of which they outshine us.

"I can't stand you" or "you get on my nerves" or "stay out of my hair" is how we tell others we don't accept them.

But the hurt is ours. True, I may wound other people when I let them know I can't stand them. But I'm really confessing a greater miserableness on my own part.

The next time someone makes you nervous or jealous, tell yourself that accepting other people is the first step in accepting yourself. For the man who constantly fusses with his neighbor eventually winds up fussing with himself.

Bob Hastings

Campus under fire

The International Council on the Future of the University is composed of distinguished American and European scholars concerned about political pressures and outright coercion that threaten to debase higher education. Such apprehension is clearly justified by the shocking experience of some European campuses where radical extremists have virtually banished academic as well as political freedom. In American universities, too, subtle and overt pressures have often limited free debate.

Hope for overcoming such pressures might be greater, however, if the council's recent international conference at City University had not steered away from asking why anti-intellectual and coercive forces have met with so little internal resistance within so many of the Western world's universities. The beleaguered scholars' anger over New Left totalitarianism is warranted, but their defensive response is deficient in analysis of the causes of an alienation that allowed a handful of disciplined revolutionaries to take over entire academic departments and even universities.

There can be no quarrel with the council's goal of blocking take-overs and of liberating universities or departments which have already either been captured by coercive minorities or paralyzed by one-man, one-vote procedures in which the janitor's and the president's votes cancel each other out. All these efforts, however, will ultimately come to naught unless faculty members and administrators, here and abroad, are more self-critical about the universities' mission and particularly about the manner in which they deliver the fruits of their scholarship to students. Expansion of educational opportunity needs to be matched by concern for educational quality. But those who rally to the support of the universities cannot afford to let their dissatisfaction over present trends suggest satisfaction with the way things used to be.

Engineers to hold meeting

At the request of Carbondale Mayor Neal Eckert, T.R. Peterson, district engineer, St. Louis District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, will conduct a public meeting concerning a flood control project for northeast Carbondale.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. April 30 at the University City Municipal Complex, 607 E. College. In a written announcement of the meeting, Peterson said the Corps "is studying a possible project to prevent flooding in the vicinity of Model City Neighborhood of Carbondale."

The proposed improvements, enlarging existing channels and building new culverts, will be presented at the meeting. "These improvements, on Glades Creek and in Attucks Park," Peterson said, "are even more important now that storm sewers are under construction in the Model Cities Neighborhood."

If, after the meeting, the Corps conducts the flood prevention project there will be no cost to the city, according to Eckert.

Individuals, groups and agencies are invited to attend or be represented at the meeting. "Everyone will be given an opportunity to express his views," Peterson said. "Statements should be supported by factual information insofar as practicable. Photos and charts are particularly welcome."

Peterson said important facts and statements should be submitted in writing. "Written statements may be handed to the chairman at the meeting," he said, "or may be mailed beforehand to our office."

Savings bonds sold

Jackson County sales of series E and H United States Savings Bonds amounted to $126,273 in February, according to Raymond H. Dey, Carbondale, volunteer county chairman of the savings bond committee.

Jackson County residents purchased $122,773 in series E bonds and $3,500 in series H bonds. Bond sales state-wide amounted to $40,568,306 according to William B. Johnson, state chairman of the Illinois volunteer committee. This is 1.6 per cent below last February and represents 7.2 per cent of national sale of $567,000,000.

CIPS seeks boost in electricity rates

Central Illinois Public Service Co. has applied to the Illinois Commerce Commission for general rate increases of about 9 per cent for electric rates and 8 per cent for natural gas service.

CIPS president K.E. Bowen had announced Feb. 27 that the utility would seek the increases which would result in approximately $15 million in additional annual revenues.

The company's last application for electric and gas rate increases was on April 17, 1972. It was the first request in 19 years for an increase in electric rates and 20 years for gas rates.

Illinois Commerce Commission granted an 11.7 per cent increase in electric rates and 10.2 per cent in gas rates, about 70 per cent of the total amount requested, in March 1973.

"Our application for rate increases two years ago was the first in almost two decades," Bowen said. "Because we were granted only about 70 per cent of our total request, and with the continuing rapid escalation in our cost of doing business, we now find it imperative to seek additional increases."

If the Illinois Commerce Commission grants the rate increase electric customers would have an increase of approximately $1.40 per month and gas space heating customers bills would increase about $1.20 per month, based on a $15 bill, according to Samuel Poe, CIPS public relations manager.

Now that CIPS has made the request for a rate increase, the Illinois Commerce Commission will conduct public hearings through which the company's operations will be examined by members of the commission's staff and then reviewed by the commissioners themselves before a decision is made.

The procedure will require about a year.

Comedy auditions slated for Monday

Auditions will be conducted for the play "The Anniversary" from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday in the Communications Building lounge.

"The Anniversary" is a comedy about a woman whose possessiveness is destructive to all that associate with her, including her three sons and their wives.

There are six lead roles in the play, three women and three men. A thorough reading of the play is necessary to audition. Scripts may be secured in the Theater Department office.

Rehearsals will begin on April 22.

"The Anniversary" is being directed by Kathy Hollis, a graduate student in theater.

Park district approves plan for swimming pool

The Carbondale Park District Board approved the sale of $320,000 in revenue bonds to help finance a swimming pool at a special meeting Thursday night.

The board also approved the plans and specifications for the pool.

The bonds will be supplemented by a $259,400 grant from Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to build the 50-meter L-shaped pool.

Robert Coatney, park district director, said the bonds would not involve any tax dollars. The bonds will be paid back solely from the revenue of the pool.

The $320,000 and the grant money covers the total package, Coatney said. This includes the actual construction, purchase of land, parking lots and landscaping.

The proposed site for the center is along Almond Street between Rigdon and Kennicott Streets.

The plans for the swimming pool are minus the ice skating rink which was originally planned last fall. The $1 million ice skating rink-swimming pool complex was to be partly financed by general obligation bonds.

The bonds would have been partially paid back by tax money. Voters defeated the proposal at a referendum Nov. 10.

Coatney said the pool and bath house will be built close to what was planned last fall. An ice skating rink could easily be added on later, he said.

Construction of the pool is scheduled to begin sometime at the end of summer.

Walkathon seeks many walkers, sponsors

By David Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Promoters of the Archway School walkathon hope to attract 2,500 walkers April 22 to raise funds for a new building.

"We want as many walkers and sponsors as possible," Mardee

Thomas, general coordinator of the walkathon said.

Archway, a special school for multiple handicapped children, is presently located on the grounds of the Styrest Nursing Home, Tower Rd.

The school has grown from about 20 to 53 students and sponsors of the non-profit organization feel that the new building is necessary to continue to offer adequate education services to children with learning or behavior problems.

April's walkathon is among the first fund-raising events scheduled to garner funds for a new facility.

No specific plans have been made for the building yet.

"It's kind of hard to think about buying land and so forth when you don't have two cents to your name," Ms. Thomas said.

A route involving 25 kilometers, about 15.6 miles, has been mapped out between Carbondale and Murphysboro for the walkathon. It starts and ends at the Jackson County YMCA.

Registration of walkers will begin at 7 a.m. at the YMCA with the walk beginning at 8 o'clock.

Persons who wish to walk in the event should pick up sponsor booklets and solicit sponsors for their effort.

In Murphysboro sponsor booklets may be picked up at Charlie's Market, Pauline's Fashions and Gifts, Green's IGA and Lyle's Sports Center. Carbondale pick-up points are Bleyer's Sport Mart, Bleyer's Westown, Squire Shop Ltd., Carr's Mens' Shop, J.C. Penney's and Jackson County YMCA. Booklets may also be picked up on campus at the Instructional Materials Center or at Archway school.

Walkers will solicit sponsors for the walk who will agree to pay the walker a set amount per kilometer walked. After the walkathon, the participants will go back to the sponsor with verification of the distance he walked, collect the money and turn it over to the building fund.

Ms. Thomas noted that the sponsor booklets have 20 pages for signing sponsors and walkers should try to get as many sponsors as they can.

Each walker will carry a ribbon during the walkathon. At each kilometer ROTC members will be stationed to punch the ribbon and verify that the walker has walked that kilometer.

Promoters have gotten cooperation from the Murphysboro and Carbondale Police Departments for patrolling the walk. The Jackson County Sheriff's office will have two cruisers out to patrol traffic when the walkers move onto Route 13.

Two jeep cruisers from the Jackson County Civil Defense and a van will cruise the route to pick up walkers who may not be able to finish the walk.

"Anybody can walk," Ms. Thomas said. "There is no age limit. We need as many walkers and sponsors as possible."

Persons who wish to sponsor a walk, but have not been contacted by April 22 should call Archway school, 549-4442.

William Allaben, Jean Brown, and Robert Maher from the Endocrinologic Pharmacology Research Laboratory in the Department of Physiology, and Rexford Gill from the Department of Animal Industries attended the Third Annual Training Course on Radioimmunoassay, which was sponsored by the Endocrine Society at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota in March.

The program consisted of morning lectures and afternoon problem-solving workshop sessions which were designed to acquaint interested scientists with practically oriented theories and principles for development, validation, and trouble shooting of radioimmunoassays.

Radioimmunoassay is rapidly becoming a very sensitive assay technique useful for measuring extremely low levels of steroids, polypeptides, and glycoproteins that are present in biological fluids.

"Meet the Candidates" set at CCHS

Candidates for Carbondale high school and elementary school boards will be available for questions at a "Meet Your Candidates" forum Monday night in the Lincoln Junior High school.

Candidates for high school district No. 165 will be on hand from 7 to 8 p.m., and elementary district No. 95 candidates will be available from 8:15 to 9:15 p.m.

All citizens are invited to attend and ask questions. The forum is sponsored by the Carbondale PTA Council.

IRS adds hours

Internal Revenue Service offices will be open additional hours from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Saturday and Saturday April 13 to provide additional help to taxpayers preparing their Federal income tax returns, according to Leon C. Green IRS District Director for central and southern Illinois.

On Monday, April 15, the deadline for filing income tax returns, all IRS offices will be open to 9 p.m.

"If your questions are too complicated to handle by phone and you can't visit an IRS office during the week, you can visit your IRS office on these dates," Green said.

The toll-free telephone number to call for assistance is 800-252-2921. This service is available all year.

Easter play set

The Missionary Society of the Rockhill Missionary Baptist Church is presenting "The Eyes of Faith" at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, April 14 at the church, 219 E. Monroe, Carbondale.

"The Eyes of Faith" is an Easter play which will involve 10 main characters played by local members of the church, according to Claudette Simon producer-director.

The play includes a pantomime scene in which the main characters and several extras depict the passover, she said.

$73,546 for construction of the center, Manley said.

Construction should "start within the next 15 days, weather permitting," he said.

Better Built offered the low bid earlier this month when the board accepted bids for the project.

The amount of the contract will be paid with funds received through the sale of bonds totaling $96,000.

The park board sold bonds totaling $96,000 at its February 21 meeting. Revenue from the bonds is to be used to build the new center and make improvements at Riverside and other parks.

October 6 is the tentative completion date for the new facility which will allow the board to vacate the present rented recreation building at 17 N. 14th St.

The new center will provide facilities for indoor sports, such as basketball and volleyball, which the present facility lacks. It will be located west of the YMCA pool in Riverside Park.

Snafu halts color telecasts

By Dave Ambrose
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A faulty control unit module stopped Carbondale cable television station, Channel 7, from going color last week, Ed Thompson program director said.

To make the change, the local station purchased about $65,000 worth of equipment from the International Video Corporation. Major equipment such as cameras, projectors and control units were delivered promptly, Thompson said.

"However, they were rather delinquent in getting accessory equipment here," he said.

He explained that video tape, connecting cables and so forth did not arrive until late last week.

The major equipment was already in place and the accessories were used to set up for production. It was then that the faulty module was discovered.

Once the module arrives "all we have to do is plug it in and start color production," Thompson said.

Channel 7 has telecast in black and white since July 1971.

Channel 7 has done about $400 worth of remodeling in the studio "out of concession for the new equipment," Thompson said. Some of the walls have been removed and the rooms sound proofed better and repainted.

"We had this obnoxious beige wall that didn't make any difference in black and white," Thompson said, "but had to be repainted for color."

Aside from the obvious advantages of color production, Thompson said the new system will give the station a better signal.

"People will be able to see and hear us better," he said.

Thompson also noted that the new

Japanese art film to be presented

A film on restoration of Japanese art will be shown at 4:30 p.m., Monday, in the Morris Library Auditorium.

The film, "The Art of the Hyogushi," was done at the Freer Gallery, Smithsonian Institute, and touches on the subjects of art, printing and conservation.

Morris Library is sponsoring the film. Admission is free and open to the public.

equipment would allow Channel 7 to telecast films and slides directly. "Before we had to project them on a white wall and videotape from that," Thompson said.

Under the new color system all local programs originating in the Channel 7 studio at Murdale Shopping Center will be in color.

The old black and white video-cameras will be used for location work, such as filming city council meetings, Thompson said.

"Everything that originates inside the building will be in color," Thompson said. "Everything outside the studio will still be in black and white."

The station presently runs about 35 hours a week of locally originating programs which includes eight programs.

"One year ago Channel 7 was running three local programs, so that's a jump of about five programs and we're planning more," Thompson said.

The biggest problem with new programming, Thompson said, is limited "budget and time."

"We have a lot of retraining to be done."

Thompson said he and production director, Bill Zeh, "pretty well know it (color production) coming from SIU," but some of the other members of the staff, particularly in production, will have to be retrained.

Once color production begins Channel 7 may move "a couple of local programs to the Marion cable station so they can have local origination."

The Marion station presently carries no local programs.

Angel Flight rush scheduled

Angel Flight rush is scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center Activities Room C.

Members of Angel Flight serve as ushers at Arena events, as university hostesses, as co-sponsors in blood drives, in nursing homes and other community projects.

Angel Flight is the coed branch of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC).

Spring activities include the campus blood drive, April 16 through 19; Archway walk-a-thon, April 27-28 and Special Olympics, May 10.

Sally Francis, junior in special education, was installed Monday night as flight commander for 1974-75.

Other officers installed are Linda Fisher, executive officer; Marilu Vargas, administration officer; and Melanie James, comptroller; Vicki English, pledge trainer; Jackie Clark, information officer; Eva Lin, historian; and Janice Tucker, operations officer.

Viewpoints vary on city's inception

By Marion W. Mitchell

To be perfectly accurate and to the point, Carbondale was founded in November 1852 by Daniel Harmon Brush. To say this and no more, however, implies that prior to that where the city now stands. Not so. It was this writer's good fortune several years ago, to acquire a copy of the memoirs of a James Green, Green, writing about 1894, described what life was like in Southern Illinois in the early 1800s.

Green's narrative is of particular interest to those concerned with the history of Carbondale and the career of its founder as the paths of Green and Brush frequently crossed.

Brush's book, "Growing Up With Southern Illinois," presents a far different viewpoint from that of Green. Brush was what passed for Jackson County aristocracy. Green was a typical representative of the common man. In this series of articles, your writer will attempt to draw specific attention to these men when their lives touch each upon the other.

Another group of reminiscences will appear upon occasion in the latter part of this series. Those of Mrs. Mae McIntosh—a lifelong resident of Carbondale who passed away nearly two years ago at about 80 years of age. To this writer's knowledge, neither Green's nor McIntosh's remembrances have heretofore appeared in print.

James Green's parents, Larken and Sally Green, came into the Illinois country in the spring of 1804. They had both come from around Philadelphia. After leaving Philadelphia, they lived for a short time near the upper reaches of the Ohio River. From there, they voyaged by flatboat to the eastern door of the Illinois Country. Fort Massac. After disembarking at the fort, they planned to travel across country to a Spanish village just north of Cape Girardeau, Louisiana (Missouri).

The journey through the Southern Illinois wilderness was much too dangerous to attempt alone, so the Greens waited until a party of Indians came ashore at Fort Massac. The Indians also made plans to undertake the same trip. After Larken Green managed to acquire some gunpowder and lead (from soldiers stationed at the fort and by the dark of the moon) for the Indians, they agreed to take Mr. and Mrs. Green with them.

After a trek of several days, the Indians and the Greens camped on a hill about where the Baptist Church of Makanda now stands. As the Mississippi River was much too high for them to cross, they decided to stay in this general area. A short time later, they moved north along Drury Creek. The Indians established a permanent village near what is now the southeast part of Carbondale. It is this writer's conjecture that the village was on a small knoll in the southwest corner of the South Wall and East Park streets intersection—just a short distance to the east of Neely Hall on the SIU campus.

wild meet than they needed."
—Green

The Greens moved a couple of miles farther west and built a log cabin near what is now the corner of South Oakland and West Cahutaqua streets. In that cabin, the four Green children were born. William in 1810, Logan in 1812, James in 1816 and Harriet in 1820.

During those early days, Larken Green supplemented his income from farming by making an annual trip back to Fort Massac. Green and a couple of Indians would take four ponies loaded with furs, skins, and medicinal roots to the fort to sell. One the way to Massac, they would go by way of the Salines at Equality and pick up a load of salt to sell. Green received a small percentage of the income from the Indians' furs for handling their transactions with the fur traders at the fort. On the way back home, they would again go by the Salines and bring another load of salt back to their neighbors.

After the War of 1812, Fort Massac was de-activated and the commercial center of eastern Illinois shifted to Shawneetown.

About 1816, Larken heard of a village some 15 miles to the west named Brownsville. It appeared to be an up-and-coming community and Green decided to move his family there. Loading their possessions on travois-like contraptions tied behind their horses, the Green family set out for Brownsville, the new county seat of a new county—Jackson.

Historian to write weekly DE column

By John Russell
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Marion Mitchell, Southern Illinois historian, will be writing a column on the history of Carbondale for the Daily Egyptian Town-Gown Edition, starting in today's paper.

Mitchell has been a Carbondale resident for 20 years, and was awarded bachelor and master of science in education degrees, concentrating in history, from SIU.

He taught history at Lincoln Junior High School for six years and an SIU President's Scholars course on the history and culture of Southern Illinois for two quarters. This spring he is teaching a course on Southern Illinois at John A. Logan College in Carterville.

Mitchell is one of the founders of the Jackson County Historical Society. He is also one of the founders of an organization that he calls "the best muzzle loading rifle club in the state"—the Jackson County Anti-Horse and Mule Thief Association. Mitchell said the organization tries to re-live, re-act and re-construct the history of Southern Illinois.

Muzzle Loading Rifle Association, have also published Mitchell's articles.

He has written a tourist history of Fort Massac, and has contributed articles to the "It Happened in Southern Illinois" column printed in many area newspapers.

Marion W. Mitchell

Mitchell said he became interested in area history about 15 years ago. At that time he was a close friend of John Allen, head of the Illinois State Historical Society, author of several books on Southern Illinois, and director of the SIU Museum.

Mitchell's wife Polly and his daughters Susan, 13, and Sarah, 7, also are involved with history as a hobby. Susan is trying to become a member of a Girl Scout archaeological dig this summer. Mrs. Mitchell runs Polly's Antiques and gives lectures on antiques and handicrafts to women's clubs.

Brunch scheduled

SIU Womens' Club's Spring Brunch will be held at 9:30 a.m., Wednesday, in the Student Center Ballrooms A, B and C.

Speaker at the affair will be Susan Vogel, architectural historian. Her topic will be "Historical Architecture in Carbondale and Southern Illinois."

Reservations for the brunch are due by Monday and can be made by sending a check for $2.50 to Mrs. Lawrence Intravia, 201 Hewitt St., Carbondale or Mrs. Jerome Lorenz, Route 5, Carbondale.

"The Indians discovered that a great many otter lived around the creek and their hides were worth more money than any other skins in America. Besides that, they found a little gold in the (creek gravel) near the bluffs. There were wild roots to make into medicine, and they sold for a lot of money. Ginseng, red puccoon, yellow puccoon, and mayapple grew by the thousands, and the swamps to the south were full of calamus root. To the Indians, they had found their Heaven, with more

Eckert loses bid for board files

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The former members of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners have refused Mayor Neal Eckert's request that board files, records and books be turned over to the new board members.

Eckert made the request with an April 8 answering deadline after the new board members asked the City Council to take the necessary legal steps to obtain the data.

Eckert suggested that he first write a letter to the former board requesting the material. The council did authorize the city to take legal action if the material was not handed over.

Eckert was out of town Friday and Elwyn Zimmerman, former board chairman, informed Eckert Friday by letter that the board's attorney, Carl Runge, told City Attorney John Womick that "the most appropriate way to secure these records under the circumstances would be with a court order."

Zimmerman also included in his letter that Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Peyton Kunce had indicated Thursday that the matter could be resolved by the new members going to court.

Kunce made the statement during a hearing on a motion by the city that a suit be dismissed asking for judgment on the validity of a city ordinance. The ordinance transfers the administrative functions of the board to the city manager.

The former board members, Zimmerman, Rosemary Hawkes and Bob Turley, contested the city ordinance on the grounds that it conflicted with state statutes.

The former members filed for the judgment Feb. 14. They were dismissed by the city council Feb. 18 for refusing to comply with the ordinance.

Judge Kunce also allowed Thursday Mike Maurizio and other members of the Carbondale Police Department to join in the suit with the former board members.

The policemen joined the suit to determine whether the city ordinance jeopardizes the pension fund benefits of the policemen.

In his refusal to hand over the records, Zimmerman attacked moves by the city to stop the judgment suit.

"It thus appears that it is the city's intention to harass us through legal maneuvers and delays rather than to work toward resolving the question as expeditiously as possible through the courts," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman said the city has tried to dismiss the suit for a judgment "based on several minor technicalities which have no direct bearing on the issue."

GSC defeats measure to quit conference

By Gary Houy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A recommendation urging SIU to withdraw from the Academic Affairs Conference of Midwestern Universities (AACMU) was defeated by the Graduate Council Friday.

The recommendation, which favored withdrawal "as soon as practical," was offered by the council's Educational Policies Committee headed by Marvin Johnson.

Johnson cited a "lack of interest" in the conference and "no accurate account of benefits" from the AACMU as the major reasons for recommending SIU's withdrawal.

The committee estimated that SIU spends about $13,000 per year in its participation with four other universities in Indiana and Illinois involved in the AACMU.

Harold Walker, executive director of the AACMU, said the conference was "the first consortium to develop an administrative program for women and minorities. We've been a catalytic organization in bringing minority groups together," he said.

In working with the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the AACMU has been "an initiator between voluntary non-titulars and statutory ones," Walker said. "But we have not done as much in graduate education as we would like."

"You are the strongest institution in the AACMU," Walker said. "You are leading from strength. But the only way to have leadership is to have relationships with other institutions."

George Brown, council member, said the main problem was a "lack of communication" between the AACMU and the University.

After an hour-long debate on the recommendation, the council voted 17-5 against withdrawal.

Council chairman Phil Davis said SIU Acting President Hiram Lesar had "made no decision for the vice-president of research position, but would inform the Graduate Council and discuss any decision he does make."

Thomas Mitchell, acting dean of the Graduate School, announced that Jack Graham, professor of higher education, has "accepted a position as half-time dean of the Graduate School subject to approval by the Board of Trustees."

A recommendation from the council's research committee that "the texts of pending research projects, funded research projects and terminated projects be confidential unless permission to release the information is given by the principal investigator" was passed unanimously by the council.

A report of the Ad Hoc Committee to Study Report on Guidelines Functions of the Board of Trustees of SIU was also approved. The report recommended that "the Board, with appropriate involvement of all constituencies, make a clear determination on the question of a system structure, a structure which manifestly reflects the needs of the System and not the persons occupying its chief offices."

A change in tuition charges for SIU in 1974-75 received the endorsement of the council. Under the semester schedule, a resident carrying 12 hours or more will pay $214 each semester. The schedule, a "result of the recommendations of a committee of deans and other administrative officials," will be presented to the Board of Trustees Friday.

The council approved the nomination of nine people to be considered for the Presidential Search and Advisory Committee. The nine are: Patricia Carrell, associate professor of linguistics; Robert Davis, professor of cinema and photography; Jon Booker, assistant professor of accountancy; William O'Brien, associate professor of recreation; Donald Tindall, associate professor of botany; James Evers, associate professor of engineering, mechanics and materials; Alfred Lit, professor of psychology; Brockman Schumacher, associate professor of the rehabilitation institute and Ali Moslemi, professor of forestry.

Willis Malone, chairman of the search committee, will select two people from the list of nominees for the committee to represent the graduate faculty.

Project for disadvantaged

By Jeff Jouett

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Through rock-climbing, backpacking, canoeing and caving in Southern Illinois, disadvantaged youths from all over the state may learn to better cope with man-made obstacles found in the inner-city.

"Project Wingspread," an outdoor adventure-and-learning program for underprivileged youngsters, will begin a three-month test run in mid-April. The "Wilderness Phase" of the project will originate at SIU's Touch of Nature Environmental Center (formerly the Outdoor Lab) near Little Grassy Lake.

"We will provide a total living experience for the kids," Hank Schafermeyer, program director of the Wilderness Phase said Friday. "We'll be using recreation, the challenge and stress of camping, in a therapeutic way," he said.

Seventy-two teenage boys from all over the state, will be enrolled in the initial program, according to a communique from State Senator Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale. If Project Wingspread proves successful it will be re-evaluated for fiscal year 1975, Buzbee said.

Project Wingspread is sponsored by the Phillips Research Foundation at Naperville and funded under a $89,712 contract with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

"Wingspread should help kids find out more about themselves and their calling by testing themselves in a natural environment in stressful and challenging situations," Schafermeyer said.

"Kids will learn more about themselves and their capabilities so that when they go back home their everyday problems will seem less formidable," he said.

A Northern Illinois base will handle the introductory phase of Project Wingspread, Schafermeyer said. From there, 24 teenagers will report each month to the SIU Touch of Nature Environmental Center for the Wilderness Phase. Students will be divided into three groups of eight for camping and outdoor activities.

Schafermeyer added.

The project was originated by Don Walters, who is now the overall project director, Schafermeyer said.

While Project Wingspread is the biggest and longest contract for an outdoor youth program yet, it is not the first such project undertaken by the Touch of Nature Environmental Center, Schafermeyer said.

"Program-wise, we have been doing some of the same things for five years now," he said.

Volunteers needed

Red Cross conducting new membership drive

By Charlotte Jones
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Jackson County chapter of the American Red Cross is conducting a membership drive to aid in the water safety, blood, disaster, first aid and swim programs sponsored by the world-wide service organization.

The board of directors voted to accept members into the chapter who donate at least $1. The donations will be used to defray expenses on the blood program. Frank Gumm, Jackson County volunteer executive said.

Although some money from the United Fund, each chapter relies on local contributions to cover some expenses, Gumm said.

Members are eligible to vote in the annual board of director's election and will receive a membership card.

Gumm said more than $300,000 has been spent in Jackson County in the last 20 years by the American Red Cross to help cover damage costs resulting from tornadoes and floods.

Gumm said volunteers especially were needed for work in the blood program to register donors, work in the canteen and take telephone calls. Professional volunteers also are needed, especially nurses, to take blood pressure and tests, he said.

"The national organization supplies some nurses but we have to recruit at least 12 locally to help in the blood drives," Gumm said.

A 1,000 units supply of blood was made available to Carbondale last year because of the city's participation in the program, he said.

Aid to servicemen is another service provided by the Red Cross. "About 10 requests are made of this chapter each week to help servicemen. We help with personal problems like notifying a wife her husband is in the hospital or we often recommend emergency leaves for servicemen," Gumm said.

"This week about eight people called to get help in reaching their families to see if they were safe after the tornadoes, Gumm said.

The Jackson County chapter also is helping locate citizens who qualify for supplemental security income through the Social Security Administration.

The Jackson County chapter hasn't conducted a fund drive in years, Gumm said. Last year $3,982 was spent in the county and this year an estimated $6,700 is needed for Red Cross expenses here, he said.

Donations can be mailed to the American Red Cross, 504 W. Mill St., Carbondale. Contributions are tax deductible.

Math field day set

Budding high school mathematicians will take over the SIU Arena Saturday for problem-solving abilities tests.

A mass competitive examination will highlight the 17th Annual Mathematics Field Day which is expected to draw approximately 800 area high school students and 100 high school mathematics teachers to Carbondale.

The multiple-choice exam will be given from 10 a.m. until noon and results will be computer-graded and announced at 2 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium.

Two four-year SIU scholarships will be awarded to the junior and senior scoring highest on the test. Certificates of award will be presented to winning individuals and teams from 2 to 3 p.m. at Shryock Auditorium.

According to John Hooker, chairman of the Mathematics Field Day, 60 area high schools have entered the competition.

The program for teachers will include a coffee hour beginning at 9 a.m. in Neckers B300, followed by talks by David Kammler and Melvyn Nathanson, assistant professor in mathematics.

Black Unity Day rally

Workshops and a rally are included on the agenda for the fifth annual Black Solidarity Day to be held in Cairo Saturday.

The day, sponsored by the Black United Front, is under the direction of the Rev. Charles Koen, founder of the organization.

The workshops, according to Koen, will examine progress that has been made in advancing opportunities for the city's black population during what he described as the "longest continuous struggle in the history of the country."

Among those expected for the rally are the Rev. Chavis Wilmington, the Rev. Bill Land and Imari Ovadele, president of the Republic of New Africa (RNA).

The workshops, according to Pam Mallory, secretary and public relations officer for the United Front, will begin at 10 a.m. and the rally will follow at 1 p.m.

Buses, provided by the Black Together Organization (BTO), will leave from Neely Hall in University Park at noon Saturday. For more information contact Ervin Lollar at 453-4668.

Salukis sweep doubleheader

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The SIU baseball team shivered its way through two wins Friday, beating the Kentucky Wesleyan Panthers, 11-3 and 5-4 at Abe Martin Field.

Ron Hodges, 3-1, picked up the win in the opener for SIU as Jim Cocasio's three-run homer capped a five-run fourth inning to lead the SIU offense.

A strong, chilly wind was blowing out to center field Friday, carrying with it four home runs in the fourth inning when third baseman Greg Higgins dropped a right-center field homerun in front of the scoreboard. Hodges struck out five and walked one to nail down the Salukis' 11th win of the season.

In game two, Rob Klass had his strike out pitch working for SIU, as the Salukis came from behind to edge the Panthers. Trailing 2-0 and later, 4-2, SIU rallied to take the lead in the fifth inning.

Claude Crockett led off the inning with a single for SIU. Then Saluki catcher Frank Hunsacker drilled a long line drive into the trees in deep left center to tie the game.

Walks to Howie Mitchell, Jim Bokelmann and Bert Newman loaded the bases with two out. Jim Locasio slapped a hard grounder in the hole, and although the Panther infielder tracked down the ball, Mitchell scored easily from third to give the Salukis the lead.

Klass was relieved by lefthander Robin Derry in the seventh and final inning of the game. Derry struck out the side to complete the sweep. Klass struck out nine in six innings of work for SIU posting his fourth win against no defeats.

A two-run homer by Higgins, his second of the day, accounted for the Panther's third and fourth runs in the fifth inning.

The Salukis, 12-5, travel to St. Louis Sunday for a 1 p.m. doubleheader. They will be at Murray St., Wednesday and return to Abe Martin Field, Thursday, April 11 for a doubleheader against Aurora starting at 1 p.m.

Track, tennis squads competing on the road

SIU's track and tennis teams will be competing on the road this Saturday as the netters will travel to Memphis State, and the tracksters are entered in the John Jacobs Invitational at Norman, Okla.

Nine teams are entered in the Jacobs meet, with SIU favored in the 880 and mile relays.

Coach Dick LeFevre's tennis team is presently 7-5 after 12 matches in 11 days. The Tigers of Memphis State are 14-2 on the year, paced by sophomore Phil Chamberlain.

Women's varsity tennis team to open season

The SIU women's varsity tennis team opens its season on the road against Murray State at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Meg Putnam, Debbie Harris, Joan Lugosi, Sharon Smoski, Linda Levine, Jan Amedio, Jane Hamilton, Trish Kehoe and Robin Nelson are slated to see action. Putnam, Harris, Levine and Amedio are returnees from last year's team.

'Tag Day' fund-raising drive begins

Saturday, the residents of Carbondale and the surrounding area will be asked to help support the Special Olympics for the mentally retarded as Tag Day, an annual fund-raising drive, gets underway.

The event will encompass 37 Southern Illinois counties with local volunteer, civic and teen groups collecting at major traffic intersections, grocery stores and businesses.

The SIU Athletic Association is scheduled to solicit in Carbondale: the Boy's Club in DuQuoin; the Catholic Youth Organization and the Knights of Columbus in Marion; the 4-H Club in Mt. Vernon and the Delta Tau sorority in Anna.

"The majority of the funds for the Special Olympics are used to cover judging and transportation expenses incurred by the groups coming to Carbondale and for those who advance to the state meet in Chicago," Ed Chismar, president of the Special Olympics said.

The Special Olympics are scheduled for May 10 and are sponsored by the Special Olympians, Inc. and the SIU Recreation Department on the regional level. The Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation sponsors the Special Olympics on the national level.

Derby hopefuls to race today

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Sports Writer

The calvary charge for starting berths in "anybody's race—the 100th Kentucky Derby May 4—continues Saturday with 25 Derby eligibles entered in the Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct and the Arkansas Derby at Oaklawn Park.

With still no solid Derby favorite established in a year that has seen a different winner in almost every major Derby prep, owners of 14 Derby eligibles entered their charges Friday for the Gotham. It drew a total of 18 3-year-olds and will be split in two $40,000-added divisions.

Eleven Derby hopefuls were among the 17 3-year-olds entered Thursday for the $100,000-added Arkansas Derby.

Among those with Derby dreams entered in the one-mile Gotham were Max Gluck's Protagonist, 1973 2-year-old champion; Edgell Farm's Noble Michael, winner of the Swift; Robert B. Cohen's Hudson County, first in the Bay Shore.

Softball registration will begin Monday

Registration for boys' baseball and girls' softball will be accepted by the Carbondale Park District Monday through Saturday of next week.

Robert Coatney, park district director, said any registration along with the $5 fee should be turned into the park district office at 206 W. Elm.

Office hours are from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. on weekdays and from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday.

The age limit for boys is from 7 to 16 years-old. Girls must be from 9 through 15.
