Simon delegates in great demand

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer
and UPI

The scramble is on for Sen. Paul Simon's delegates.

The Rev. Charles Koen of Cairo urged Simon to end rather than suspend his bid for the presidency at a press conference in Cairo Thursday.

If Simon completely bowed out, Koen said, the Rev. Jesse Jackson would receive 60 instead of 13 Illinois at-large delegates and would pass Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis in both delegate and popular votes.

But a local delegate for Simon to the National Democratic Convention said Thursday that she probably will support Dukakis at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta this July.

Barbara Brown, a Simon delegate from Jackson County, said if Simon doesn't suggest who his delegates should vote for that she is not comfortable with Dukakis' can-didancy. "Dukakis has much of the same agenda as Simon and a sound record in Massachusetts," Brown, who is a political science professor, said. "But he could suggest who he would like for us to support. The voters trusted him so I'd be likely to follow."

Simon suspended his presidential campaign Thursday. By dangling his candidacy, he held onto his 169.5 national delegates in hopes of influencing the party when a nominee is chosen.

"I have no illusions the nomination will come my way," Simon said.

Comparing a race for the presidency to an ice-cold shower, Simon said, "It is a great one-time experience, but I have no yearning for a repeat performance."

If Simon had withdrawn, 47 more at-large delegates from Illinois would have gone to Jackson, who

Black American program will have full-time faculty members beginning of fall semester, Seymour Bryson, the College of Humanities said Thursday. Bryson told a group of 15 students in a forum at the Student Center will "personally play an active role in the BAS program and take over the new faculty's work."

ver, Luke Tripp, former BAS dean, said he and other faculty members have tried to work the system for five years but have been unsuccessful in getting their

He also attacked the committee that removed two BAS courses from the general education curriculum in 1985. A "lily white group of faculty members were appointed to prune down the number of general education courses," Tripp said.

While students continue to study the history of a broad range of societies and cultures, the now-defunct General Education Curriculum Council thought "black ancestors were unworthy of studying," Tripp said.

Tripp said President John C. Guyon has the power to add courses.

Bryson said if he had been dean in 1984, the two BAS courses would not have been eliminated from the general education curriculum.

He read a letter from Mary Davidson, director of the School of Social Work, which stated that she wanted to work with Tripp to finalize plans to reinstate the general education courses.

Tripp did not respond to the letter and made no attempt to work with Davidson, Bryson said.

Former faculty members have tried to work within the system for five years, but have been unsuccessful at getting their goals met.

But Tripp said he was not on the University payroll when he received the letter last summer, so he did not feel compelled to work on the proposal.

Tripp also played a tape recording of a conversation between him and Bryson that Tripp said was made in 1987 when he approached Bryson about reinstating the courses.

Striking a more conciliatory tone, Bryson said he and Tripp agree that a BAS program is needed on the campus, but they disagree on the route to take to reinstate the general education courses and the number of full-time faculty members the program needs.

Alzheimer's puts retirement on hold

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

After more than 30 years of teaching, Herbert and Elizabeth Portz were looking forward to a travel-filled retirement.

But their plans were stymied when Elizabeth was stricken with Alzheimer's disease.

Elizabeth has been suffering for three years from the incurable disease that causes the brain to degenerate. The disease affects 2.5 million Americans. One of its first symptoms is memory loss.

"Our children first noticed something was wrong with her immediate memory," Herbert Portz, an emeritus professor in plant and soil science, said. "She would repeat the same thing over and over. Our children pushed for us to seek medical advice."

The children noticed her memory loss because they weren't with her on a daily basis, he said.

"Her casual conversation is great though. If you come up and meet her and don't know anything is wrong, you won't even suspect a problem," he said.

Elizabeth was diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease after completing two psychological exams, including both written and oral evaluations.

Alzheimer's is a neurological disease that degenerates the nerve endings of the outer layer, or cortex, of the brain.

The disease has four stages. In the early stages, victims experience memory loss, personality changes and impaired learning and judgment. As the disease progresses, victims may become unable to communicate or control bodily functions.

For the past year, Elizabeth has been participating as a research patient at the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield.

She underwent seven intravenous injections of physostigmine, a drug that is supposed to enhance the formation of acetylcholine, the chemical that transmits messages from one brain cell to another. Alzheimer's patients have been found to have very low levels of the acetylcholine.

"It (the drug) was supposed to improve her memory, but there was no effect," Herbert Portz said.

Because of the Christmas holiday season, one of Elizabeth's treatments was delayed. Herbert said the delay may have made her "loss of memory greater than any gain" induced by the drug treatments.

During the treatment, Elizabeth's memory was tested with a short set of tests. She was shown three or four words such as mouse, cat, dog.

"We sat and talked for a couple of minutes and I asked her what the words were. She didn't remember," Herbert said.

Higher doses of physostigmine made Elizabeth sick. But Herbert said that although he is

Soviets, Afghans consent to troop withdrawal, treaty

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and Afghan President Najibullah said Thursday all obstacles have been cleared to the signing of a peace treaty to end the war in Afghanistan and for withdrawal of Soviet troops beginning May 15. However, U.S. officials said an agreement on a Soviet troop withdrawal must include a mutual superpower arrangement to reduce or eliminate outside arms.

Nicaragua calls on OAS to intervene

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Nicaraguan government, saying it opposes U.S. humanitarian aid to Contra rebels until they withdraw into cease-fire zones, asked Thursday for the intervention of the Organization of the American States in the dispute. The statements came as government and rebel representatives met for another round of negotiations to decide issues relating to the cease-fire zones where the Contras are to withdraw during the current 60-day truce.

Thousands mourn death of Israeli teenager

QARNE SHOMERON, Israeli-occupied West Bank (UPI) — More than 4,000 mourners, some shouting "revenge," gathered Thursday for the burial of a 14-year-old Israeli girl killed during a clash with Arab villagers as new reports cast doubt on the original account of how she died. After the funeral, Israel Radio reported army investigators said a bullet, not a rock as they had originally reported, may have caused the girl's death in the West Bank village of Beita.

Meese presents multinational anti-drug plan

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese presented leaders in Colombia, the biggest cocaine-producing nation, with a multinational plan Thursday to fight drug trafficking in Latin America. U.S. officials have declined to discuss the plan publicly. Details of Meese's five-nation, eight-day Latin American trip were kept secret until the last minute for security reasons, officials said.

Officials: Delvalle will hang on to presidency

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — President-in-hiding Eric Arturo Delvalle, despite new pressures from Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, has passed the word to the United States he intends to hang on as head of Panama's government, White House officials said Thursday. Chief of Staff Howard Baker and National Security Adviser Colin Powell denied reports Delvalle was considering leaving his hideout and giving up his role in trying to wrest control of Panama from Noriega.

Libyan diplomat links terrorism to Gadhafi

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A diplomat at Libya's mission to the United Nations said Thursday he has been a secret member of the anti-Gadhafi resistance and accused the Libyan regime of plotting the assassination of the presidents of France and Egypt. Salem Saity, 29, who said he had been chief of the mission's communications and classified information section since 1986, recited a laundry list of terrorist activities for which he said Moammar Gadhafi's government was responsible.

Stockbroker kills Merrill Lynch executive

BOSTON (UPI) — A disgruntled Merrill Lynch stockbroker shot and killed a vice president of the brokerage firm Thursday inside the executive's downtown office, police said. Merrill Lynch Regional Vice President George Cook, 56, of Weston, was shot in the chest and left arm and later died at Massachusetts General Hospital, hospital officials said.

Democrats to resist lobbyists in platform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top Democratic officials said Thursday they will resist writing a 1988 platform of lobbyist "wish lists" and draft a brief but progressive statement with the aim of expanding the party's base. Democrats have been criticized for creating platforms to appeal to special interest groups and their particular legislative interests. Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk and Michigan Gov. James Blanchard said they do not want the platform to duck the tough issues but at the same time, the document will not single out controversial or divisive issues such as abortion.

Panelists verbally melee on unions

Members agree employees must take active role

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

Filtering through differing views at a forum on collective bargaining for University employees Thursday night came the agreement from opposing panelists that active participation by faculty members is crucial in the unionization decision.

Thomas Britton, vice chancellor for administration and one of four panelists, said the vote on unionization, which the panelists hoped would take place this fall, is "one of the most important decisions for many years," and "one that will affect all." He said that while the administration will not participate in the faculty debate on the issue, "it does encourage the greatest participation" of members.

"Collective bargaining is neither inevitable or desirable," Britton said.

Unionization centralizes decision-making and does not guarantee an increase in benefits, he said. Britton added that it may bring an adversarial atmosphere to administration-faculty relations.

Bill Eppley, executive director of University Professionals of SIU, the local chapter of the Illinois Federation of Teachers, said that if a faculty member does not vote, it is a vote against collective action on campus.

"If you are a faculty staff member, how in control of your economic destiny are you?" he asked, adding that unions may increase faculty benefits because the administration and "state legislators listen to the kind of clout that (unions) have."

Gary Kolb, president of the Illinois Education Association, claimed that the administration has become top-heavy and insensitive to faculty concerns.

"The system is incapable of lobbying," he said. "Each year we fail further behind" in budgetary allocations.

Gola Waters, a representative from Faculty for Free Choice, a campus group opposed to unionization,

"Collective bargaining is neither inevitable or desirable."

—Thomas Britton

argued that the adversarial tradition of unionization will be counter-productive to faculty professionalism.

The forum at the Lesar Law Building presented Britton and Waters as the opposition to faculty unionization. Eppley and Kolb advocated collective bargaining.

The forum was sponsored by the Emeritus College and was chaired by Lewis E. Hahn, emeritus professor of philosophy.

Quake center to stay put

The Board of Directors of the Marion-based United States Earthquake Consortium decided Wednesday to keep its offices in Marion.

CUSEC's Board of Directors was worried that the organization would lose its identity if it were moved to a college campus, John Sexton, author of the University's proposal to bring the consortium offices here, said Thursday.

In addition to SIU-C, the consortium's board considered relocation bids from Southeast Missouri State University, the University of Louisville, the University of Arkansas at Little Rock, Memphis State University and Fulton County, Ky.

Sexton, an associate professor of geology, said he was not disappointed by the board's decision.

The University's proposal called for keeping CUSEC's offices in Marion until April 1989, when the consortium's contract with the Federal Emergency Management Agency expires.

Police Blotter

A Carbondale man received a broken nose and facial injuries when three men pushed his face into a window at Old Town Liquors, 514 S. Illinois Ave., Thursday morning, Carbondale police said.

Nasar A. Alkhader, 24, of 1007 E. Park St., was treated and released at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale following the incident, police said.

Alkhader was standing in front of the American Tap with an open beer when he was told to leave by an employee. As Alkhader was leaving, he began to argue with three unknown "king-sized guys" who dragged him into the alley next to the liquor store, Carbondale Police Officer Art Wright said.

The men then smashed Alkhader's head into the window of the store, police said.

Police said they have no suspects.

A Harrisburg woman was robbed of her purse near the JC Penney store at University Mall Wednesday night, Carbondale police said.

A man approached Margaret Miller, 42, from behind and pulled the purse, which contained $100, from her arm. The man, described as black, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighing about 220 pounds, fled north on foot, police said.

He was wearing a short, dark-blue jacket and dark pants and shoes.

A similar purse-snatching occurred outside the store on March 24.

A Carbondale man charged with battering his wife was taken to the Jackson County jail Thursday morning by University Police, according to police reports.

Dennis P. Makhudu, 37, of 128 Southern Hills, was arrested after police received a report from his wife, Yvonne Makhudu, 35, of the same address, who called police from a laundry, police said.

Makhudu could not post $100 bond and remained at the jail, police said.

Police said Yvonne Makhudu had been struck in the face but received no major injuries.

A stereo valued at $500 was stolen from the car of University student Sean R. Peache, 18, of 600 W. Mill St. The car was parked at a lot at 504 S. Wall St. Thursday morning, Carbondale police said.

Ditch 'Big Ditch'; find better option

NOW THAT THE City Council has shown good judgment in deciding to look at alternative options to the proposed $67 million railroad relocation project, let's hope it has as much sense in choosing another option.

The federal government has made about $5.7 million available to the city, which must be used to reduce conflicts between trains and automobile traffic in Carbondale. The city is looking into the possibility of building either an overpass or an underpass for one or more of Carbondale's busiest railroad crossings. According to the city, more than 70 percent of the traffic that crosses the railroad tracks in Carbondale crosses at Grand Avenue, Main Street or Walnut Street.

WHILE AN OVERPASS or underpass at one of these three streets may help move traffic around and through Carbondale a bit more quickly, the impact on downtown would be disastrous. To begin with, if the overpass on Pleasant Hill Road is any indication, a bridge or tunnel would have to be much longer than two city blocks and would create havoc with traffic on other streets in the area.

Also, the businesses around the site undoubtedly would suffer. Instead of being on level with the traffic that passes in front of businesses, many would be either below the overpass or above the underpass, which would greatly decrease the access to many establishments.

In addition, an overpass or underpass in the middle of the downtown area would be more of an eyesore than any vacant lot or dilapidated building ever could be. Basically, an overpass or underpass in the downtown area would be a bad idea.

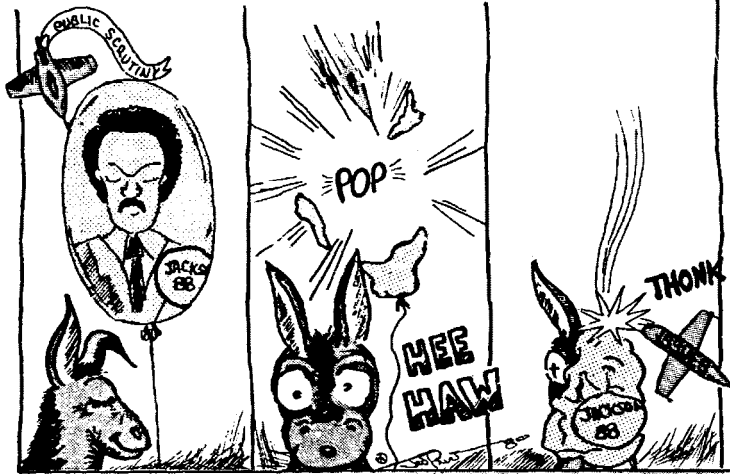

THE ONLY PLACE in Carbondale where a bridge or tunnel could be built without greatly disrupting the lives of numerous residents and the prosperity of many businesses would be on the north side of town — away from the business district and highly populated areas. But this would be nothing but a waste of money considering there already is a rural overpass on Pleasant Hill Road on the south. This also would do nothing to help traffic in the downtown area.

Perhaps the city could fix and widen smaller streets that cross the railroad tracks and make the crossings smoother to encourage more people to use them instead of the more heavily traveled roads. This would have the dual benefits of easing the crush of traffic in the three major crossings and of encouraging new business developments downtown where the roads often are so bumpy they may actually hurt a store's business.

IF THE CITY decides it is not feasible to build an overpass or an underpass downtown and chooses not to improve other crossings, it should simply give the money back to the federal government and get on with other business. It seems hard to justify giving back money when there are so many local programs that separately need it, but this money is for easing traffic at railroad crossings and may not be used for other purposes. It would be a responsible move for the city to give the money back if it realizes the funds can't be used effectively here.

'Jesus freaks' beat Easter Bunny, preach about holiday's meaning

I just thought I'd sit down and write all you faithful readers a letter about my Easter experience. Have any of you ever seen the Easter Bunny carry a cross and be beaten by a crowd of Jesus freaks who have nothing better to do since Jimmy Swaggart left the pulpit?

Well, I saw this before my very own eyes early Friday evening at the American Tap. I looked around to see if everyone else saw this or if I was already past my limit.

Imagine this: the cute, fuzzy, little Easter Bunny we all grew up with being beaten by a bunch of jerks, who I don't think knew any of us at the Tap. Yet they were passing judgement on me and everyone else in the place.

According to these self-appointed preachers, everyone at the Tap had lost the true meaning of Easter. They said that we thought all Easter was about was the Easter Bunny, egg hunts and candy. (It was then that we knew our annual meeting of the Ignorant Easter Bunny Lovers was busted.) I thought I was in a Far Side cartoon.

It has always been my impression that Easter celebrated Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection from the dead.

The Easter Bunny, as we all have long since learned, is really Mom and Dad. They hide the eggs and give out candy, so that little kids who are too young to understand the real meaning of Easter know that it is a special day.

I think this crowd of Christians targeted the wrong people, and the fact that they even pulled this stunt makes me question their interpretation of religion. I think that if there is a God, he would tell his followers to be cool and make friends. Telling everyone at the Tap that they are going to hell is not what I would call a step in the right direction.

I wonder if the parents of these Jesus freaks would approve of their sons and daughters putting on this public display of idiocy. Incidentally, I found out that the beaten bunny was really a 'Jesus freak in disguise. I was relieved. I can't wait until Christmas, when they tie Santa to the Amtrak and beat the reindeer senseless. — Douglas DeBarger, aviation technologies

Parking stickers a requirement before you can be a legal visitor

I very much doubt that this letter will be printed, because this country has a problem with those who question authority even though we rant on and on about freedom of expression.

But I have to make clear my feelings towards our wonderful men in blue who so dauntlessly protect us from ourselves and runaway bicycles fiends, even if no one will read it.

The other day I got a parking ticket. Big deal, huh, everybody does sooner or later. Well, it just so happens that I was neatly located on campus in a "visitors" space, and there was money in the meter even when I came out to see that yellow bit of worthless authority stuck to my windshield.

Being very confused and frustrated as to why I received such a blessing from my protectors, I took my query to the Campus Cop Hideout and found, to my dismay, that in order to be considered a "visitor" on this fine campus of ours, one must have a campus sticker on their car.

Now, I ask you: who made up such an idiotic law? Who sat down and passed this bit of bureaucratic crap? Were they drunk or just having a laugh at our expense? Perhaps the University isn't taking enough of my money as it is, and they feel that they have the right to suck a little more dough from my pocket to give to the football team.

If my life is being governed by lawmakers as idiotic and as petty as that, then I hold no respect for them or for those who enforce such laws. Until my leaders stop playing with the citizens' money and intellects, I will not stop complaining. So forgive me when I oink at you or salute you with my third finger held aloft...It's just my way of thanking you for a job well done. — Scott Hill, sophomore, cinematography

Sanders hits the high road

Dean leads battle to raise taxes

By Rosary M. Dalba
Staff Writer

The homemade computer sign on his closet-size office at the Illinois Board of Higher Education reads Adviser-Consultant. A lone black hanger decorates the bare yellow walls. His filing cabinet, a black briefcase, overflows with paper.

The inauspicious surroundings seem an unlikely place to find Keith Sanders, Dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts. Sanders, who served as the University's lobbyist from 1980 to 1983, is spending long days in Springfield as a lobbyist once again. He is orchestrating a statewide effort to get legislators to pass a tax increase for higher education before June 30.

Looking for a way to raise support for a tax increase, a brainstorming session among government relations officers from the four state university systems and from community colleges late last fall led straight to Sanders' door.

"We started talking about the effort we needed," said Ross Hodel, IBHE deputy director of public services, "and we said, 'Why don't we get Keith Sanders from SIU to advise and consult for us.'"

Hodel said the idea was passed on to the heads of the systems and they agreed.

Sanders, who laughingly refers to himself as a "Dean on loan," said the decision to lead the fight for higher education was not his.

"It's a volunteer effort in the Army sense of volunteer," said Sanders. "Although I find it interesting and certainly worthwhile, it wasn't something I chose to do."

"The job was described to me by President (John) Guyon," he continued, "and I was asked if I would be willing to do it."

After discussing the move with his wife, Sanders said, "We decided it was something I ought to do."

Although he has only been in Springfield two months, Sanders has thrown himself into the rigorous demands of coordinating a massive campaign to educate the public and state legislators on the need for increased funding for higher education. He is confident about the effort he and others are making to gain support for the tax increase.

"Higher education has never worked as well with secondary and elementary education as right now," said Sanders, adding he is grateful for the strong leadership the university systems heads are providing.

But the real battle, he said, will be translating popular support into legislative support. Although polls have shown that Illinois residents support a tax increase for education, Sanders said convincing legislators to raise taxes during an election year is a "very difficult task. We're not very confident of the estimates of legislative support for a tax increase."

"The victory will be won at the grass roots level rather than here in Springfield," he continued. "Thousands of letters have already been written to legislators, it will take thousands more."

As chairperson of the statewide coordinating committee, he begins each workday at 5 a.m. Sanders said he tries to spend the first few hours of each day "looking at the big picture, trying to think ahead — plan, review what we have done in the recent past — and put things in context."

He usually gets to his office between 8 and 8:30 a.m. to work on "immediate things." Sanders, who is operating with a volunteer staff of personnel from state universities, community colleges and elementary and secondary schools, must handle everything from offering advice and devising strategy to writing thank you letters. He also puts press kits together and maintains close communications with governing boards hoped he would be. Sanders is keeping a close eye on his home turf. He translates his concern for the jeoparded higher education faces in Illinois into tangible worries about his own University.

Dean of the CCFCA since 1983, Sanders has had to deal with budget cuts four out of the last five years. He worries about retaining faculty and attracting quality replacements when there is no money for pay raises.

According to a fact sheet prepared by his committee, the buying power of public university salaries in this state decreased by more than 5 percent between 1971 and 1987.

So why did he leave his comfortable home, family, and unfinished projects in the CCFCA to spend 50 to 60 hour work weeks in Springfield?

Sanders, who received a bachelor's and master's degree with double majors in Speech and Psychology from SIU-C, said he is a product of this system.

"I'm paying back some of what I've got," he said. "Working at SIU has always held a special significance to me. So what I'm doing is an extension of my values and commitments I have had for a long time."

"It's exciting," he continued. "I'm glad I'm doing it — it's necessary and worthwhile. But I'll be glad when it's over."

and university presidents statewide.

"We haven't done the best job in presenting the issue to the public," Sanders said. "We have to improve... I think we are improving."

Sanders' job is made more difficult by the fact that no new state dollars are being expended for this campaign. The committee has developed concepts for a television campaign but has yet to find the private funds to finance the project. Even the rent on Sanders' Springfield apartment is being paid by a private individual who supports the committee's efforts.

Although he said he's not missed in Carbondale nearly as much as he Keith Sanders has seen the future "big picture" of higher education in Illinois and it isn't pretty.

"Some schools will literally go out of business unless they get help," said Sanders, chairman of the statewide campaign for increased funding for education. "There will be teacher layoffs at the elementary level, increases in deficit budgets and reductions in spending for maintenance and library supplies. Whole programs in secondary and elementary schools will be eliminated."

At the university level, the consequences could be even more devastating.

"The budget proposal for higher ed this year, he said, "is the smallest budget in buying power that we have had in 18 years."

Sanders is leading a task force of volunteers that is encouraging groups and people across the state to visit, write and call their legislators on behalf of increased funding for education. Raising public awareness to the plight of education in Illinois is another job for the lobbyist-turned-dean-turned-lobbyist.

According to a report by the Illinois Bureau of Higher Education:

—Illinois ranks 44th in per capita spending on higher education.

—Illinois is tied for last (with West Virginia) in terms of percentage increase in state tax appropriations for higher education over the last 10 years.

—Although Illinois residents have the fifth highest average personal income in the country, the state ranks 41st in new state funding for higher education in the last 10 years.

—Illinois is one of only four states that reduced state tax appropriations for higher education between fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

—All of the state's universities lagged 4 percent behind the national average in faculty salaries last year.

Higher education officials worry that the state's universities may soon fall victim to a so-called "brain drain." Faculty at Illinois public universities has decreased by 5.2

percent between 1971 and 1987, Sanders said.

A recent IBHE study indicated that faculty salaries at state universities not only have lost ground to inflation, but also in comparison with salaries at similar institutions in other states.

The study further uncovered a steady decline in the competitiveness of faculty salaries since 1975. Illinois' salaries at all faculty ranks actually stood at 101 percent of the median for comparable salaries at all state systems in the United States in 1975, but that dropped to 96.6 percent of the median in 1986 and to 96.1 percent by 1987.

According to the board report: "Leading states, with which Illinois is often compared in terms of economic indicators, support salaries at higher levels than Illinois. California's public university salaries are 9.1 percent above the median, Massachusetts' salaries are 12.5 percent above and New York's are 14.5 percent above the median."

Save Education

Illinois students will be big losers if tax increase fails in Legislature

Among neighboring states, Illinois ranks behind Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Missouri and Minnesota, when comparing all-rank faculty salaries as a percentage of the national median.

"And we wonder why some of our best faculty take jobs in other states," Sanders said.

A tuition increase is not the answer to the growing financial crisis in higher education, he added. Students at public universities in Illinois are paying 36.6 percent of their instructional cost, the highest percentage in 15 years.

"Some people just say raise tuition," he said. "In the process we are beginning to deny people educational opportunities and increasing the debt some students take with them."

"Students and parents are paying their share of the load," Sanders continued. "Students are now paying more than people in the leadership of higher education believe they should be paying."

Some legislators have argued that setting new priorities for the state budget, not a tax increase, is the solution to the education funding dilemma. Sanders disagreed.

"That isn't true. Every state agency, ranging from those who try to look after battered children to the

Audit criticizes governor's staff

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A state audit report released today criticized Gov. James R. Thompson's office for reporting employees' use of automobiles as commutes in 1985 and 1986.

The report by Auditor General Robert Cronson said that use of state automobiles had not been reported under Internal Revenue Code regulations. The state is subject to federal and state taxes and security taxes.

The fiscal 1987, which runs through June 1987, the governor's office had no way of determining actual auto use common for seven employees, the report said.

Officials in the governor's office devised such a system in the year and a half to apply all applicable employment use of state vehicles for 1987.

The audit also criticized the governor's office for alleged inadequate personnel policies and procedures that include no documentation to support pay raises, promotions and demotions.

The audit by Auditor General Robert Cronson said that 49 out of 50 personnel files examined during the audit did not contain job applications or resumes, and the office did not have written job descriptions for work positions.

Cronson said such documentation is not required, but is needed to ensure proper use of state funds.

In response to the audit, the governor's office said it would write job descriptions for all office employees, develop forms to justify salary changes and require all new employees to submit job applications or resumes.

—An audit of the state Public Health Department reported the agency granted license renewals to 190 maternity hospitals, 57 of which were not in compliance with agency standards for perinatal care.

The audit said the issuance of the licenses violated the Hospital Licensing Act.

The works improve bond system

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Plans to sell at least $1 billion worth of tax-qualified savings bonds in the summer, but officials say they hope to get the bugs out of the program first.

Officials first sold the bonds in the primary market as a way to help afford rising interest rates. Demand for the bonds was so high that supply was limited to $47 million, and asked for $270 million.

Officials of the Backus Trust Authority, which runs the program, say the program is working better than expected.

The programs officials said, was of availability in the state.

There were a lot of problems unserved in and suburban areas, Sen. Aldo Olympia Fields, of the bond program, together, an official at National Bank the bond sale's underwriter, said the problem, and some of those who didn't know of the program officials didn't want to expect.

For next time is to get more information to banks and brokerage firms so that they accept an order or to another bank or firm," Gallagher from the government bureau said they will sell $90 million more sometime in August.

Officials also suggested ways to attract more money into the program by allowing other investors to pool their money in field investments that eventually be transferred to college savings

The current program does not provide funds for individuals with older children. Angelis said that is a problem which also needs to be addressed, but the board did not make any formal commendations.

Emeritus faculty must get OK to supervise

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

Emeritus faculty members will not be considered regular members of the graduate school faculty for purposes of supervising students' theses and dissertations.

The graduate council passed a resolution Thursday stating that emeritus faculty must be recommended by a graduate program for regular membership in the graduate faculty. They also may be approved by the graduate dean to direct theses or dissertations.

Emeritus professors also must be recommended to direct each particular thesis or dissertation by the graduate program.

Emeritus professors are professors who retired with honor. The resolution includes theses or dissertations assigned to emeritus professors prior to their retirement and newly assigned students.

John Yopp, dean of the graduate school, said that in appointing emeritus faculty to these positions, he would consider whether a professor functions at the graduate faculty level.

Jerry Handler, professor of anthropology, said it is "degrading that they (emeritus faculty) have to come back and ask for certification." Emeritus professors should hold the same status they held before becoming emeritus, he said.

In other business the graduate council voted to:

—Periodically review the quality and effectiveness of training for graduate teaching assistants through additional questions in the departmental review process.

—Recommend that the graduate school, in conjunction with the Learning Resources Services and the College of Education, offer optional University-wide training for teaching assistants to supplement the training provided by each department.

—Charge graduate students in programs associated with the School of Medicine at Springfield the same medical fees as medical students, who are treated at the Springfield facility. They also would be exempt from the recreation center fee since they would not have access to it.

—Support a proposal for a master's program in food and nutrition. The curriculum would include community nutrition, which prepares students to take the examination for national registration as a dietician; and nutrition science, which prepares students for research positions in food and nutrition or further study in advanced graduate degree programs in food and nutrition.

The program would meet the needs of students with a bachelor's degree in home economics, food and nutrition or other health related fields; students who are registered dietitians and have worked in a hospital setting, but are not trained to cope with patients who are not confined to bed and community dietetics; and students interested in preparing for doctorate or laboratory research positions in nutrition.

Equipment required for the program includes laboratory equipment, a stove, a refrigerator, a blood and urine analyzer, a computer, instructional materials, nutrition assessment measuring instruments, dietary analysis tool kits, money for the purchase of journals and travel funds.

The estimated cost of implementing the program is $146,400.

Department of Conservation to education, are unfunded," Sanders said. "But even if they weren't, it is very difficult to get rid of governmental agencies in order to fund other agencies.

"So those that want to reprioritize are proceeding on some false premises," Sanders continued. "The money is not there to reprioritize."

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, has been on the record for over a year favoring a "moderate" tax increase for education in general.

"I think the education community and other branches of government are making a good case for a tax increase," said Dunn. "Even though I'm up for re-election, I don't think I'll get into any trouble voting for an increase."

Although Dunn said there is enough support in the Senate to pass an increase, the House leaders do not support one.

"I think the support for a tax increase is building," he said. "I think we'll get one before June 30."

Rep. Wayne Gorforth, R-Nashville, said he supports a tax increase for education. However, he doesn't believe the House leadership supports a tax increase.

"Right now I don't think the average person on the street wants a tax increase," he said.

A member of the House appropriations committee, Gorforth said if there is no tax increase, "We will look at the governor's budget. There will be money taken from other programs for education."

For Sanders, however, there are no easy solutions.

"It's a massive problem," he said, "and it can't be fixed by tinkering with the state budget."

Bennett seeks Catholic support

NEW YORK (UPI) — Education Secretary William Bennett, making a new pitch for tuition tax credits for private schools, urged Catholic school officials Thursday to take in poor students and then seek recompense from state and local governments.

His proposal before the National Catholic Education Association's annual convention drew sharp criticism from public education groups, who called it unconstitutional and a "back-door attempt" to pursue President Reagan's plan for tuition-tax credits or vouchers for private schools.

Bennett blamed Catholic school officials for the administration's failure to win the tax credits, which allow parents who send their children to parochial schools to deduct part of the tuition from their income tax.

"We needed political support, political courage, but we didn't have it," he said in response to a question from a Catholic school official who said he had voted for Ronald Reagan in 1980 because of his stand on tax credits but had not seen much action.

"The support was mixed from those who would benefit," Bennett said, his criticism greeted by generally warm applause.

Fulbright scholars to experience S. Illinois

By Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writer

Trips throughout Southern Illinois, lectures and meetings with community leaders are some of the events planned for foreign Fulbright scholars during Fulbright Honors Week, April 11 to 17.

The week was proclaimed by Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and celebrates the 40th anniversary of the Fulbright. About 40 Fulbright scholars are studying at the University this year.

Established in 1946, the Fulbright program is the United States' international educational and cultural exchange program. Fulbright scholars are professors, graduate students, administrators and researchers who are given grants to study, teach, lecture and conduct research abroad.

"In addition to being an important exchange of ideas, it also fosters mutual understanding in world peace," David Brussell, SIU-C foreign student advisor with International Programs and Services, said.

Events planned for the week include a Carbondale Rotary Club luncheon and a weekend at Touch of Nature that includes a dinner and mixer for Fulbright scholars visiting the University from abroad and University faculty and staff who have participated in the Fulbright program. Visits to archaeological and historical sites, natural areas, mines and museums also are planned.

The celebration is being funded by a cooperative grant from the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the United States Information Agency and the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs.

High-flying fun, excitement to fill the sky at Airshow 88

By Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writer

Airplanes performing aerobatic maneuvers such as loops, rolls and stalls will be one of the features at Airshow 88.

The show, featuring military and civilian air planes, will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Southern Illinois Airport.

The gates open at 10 a.m. for fly-ins, David Settergren, airshow chairman, said. During this time, privately owned airplanes will land at the airport for the show. Other planes will be on display at the airport.

"The airshow is being held to acquaint the general public with the aviation community," both civilian and military," Settergren said.

The show, sponsored by the SIU-C Rotor and Wing Association of America, will start with skydiving. Parachuters will be circled by a plane as they come down, Suttergren said. Afterwards, planes, some of which will be radio-controlled, will perform aerobatic maneuvers.

Aircraft from different eras will be display throughout the day. Civilian aircraft will include experimental, antique, warbirds (fighter planes) and home-built planes.

The planes will include the Pitts S-1, Laser, Super Decathlon, T-6 Texan and O (T-6). Military planes will include the Black Hawk, T-2 Buckeye and C-13 Hercules. Home-built planes will include the Long E-Z, Q2, Falkwolf replica and Glasair.

There will be free transportation from the Student Center to the airshow. A bus will leave for the airshow every hour, starting at 10 a.m., and return every half hour.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for students and free for children under 12.

In the case of rain, the airshow will be held April 10.

Forum to focus on disabled

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Protection and Advocacy Inc. will hold an open forum on the service and advocacy needs of disabled people from 1 to 3:30 p.m. Saturday at Prime Time Restaurant and Lounge.

The forum is a series of 10-minute talks by people with interests in the rights of disabled people, Linda Austin, attorney at the Protection and Advocacy Carbondale office, said.

"It's an open board meeting that is meant to inform everyone of changes needed in different areas of protection and services," Austin said. "It guides the board on determining future policy and direction of the organization."

Protection and Advocacy promotes the legal and human rights of people with physical and mental disabilities.

The Carbondale office serves the 34 Southern Illinois counties.

Jeff Plesko, from the Guardianship and Advocacy Commission, will speak on people who are committed involuntarily to mental health hospitals or agencies.

Jodi Jones, from the Southern Illinois Center for Independent Living, will speak on telecommunications needs of the hearing-impaired.

A University student, Earl Czajkowski, will speak on the needs of disabled students.

The rights of the disabled in prisons will be discussed by Mary Barnhill. Barnhill has a personal interest in the subject, but Austin said she didn't know why.

Other speakers at the forum will represent Developmental Disabilities Services and Rehabilitation of St. Clair County and Vocational Education from the Anna shelter-workshop for disabled people.

Brief case histories of other disability issues will be presented by Austin and William Asa also of the Carbondale office.

"We (Protection and Advocacy Inc.) investigate complaints and give legal assistance for people who meet qualifications," Austin said. "But a lot of people don't understand the minimum qualifications."

People who meet minimum requirements for the office's services must have a developmental disability that struck them before age 22. The disabilities must have a severe or chronic effect on the person's everyday life, Austin said.

The person also must meet three limitations of mobility in areas including language, self-care, learning, and self-sufficiency, she said.

The office can only help people, who meet the qualifications, if their problems are connected with their disability, Austin said.

"We have handled cases involving discrimination, abuse and neglect and violations of civil rights," Austin said.

The office also helps patients in mental hospitals, she said. But it can only help patients while they are a resident of a care facility or up to 90 days after they leave the facility.

"We've helped people who were beaten or attacked by staff members or have been denied rights that everyone else in the facility has," Austin said.

Conference on materials to be held

SIU-C Materials Technology Center and the Division of Continuing Education will sponsor the Fifth Annual Materials Technology Conference April 14 and 15 in the Student Center Auditorium.

The Conference will promote a closer liaison between research, education and industry interested in carbonaceous materials.

A registration fee of $100 will be required. For conference information, call Margaret Genisio at 536-7525 and for registration information, call Barbara Emil at 536-7751.

Workshops, talks held on human resource issues

The College of Human Resources is sponsoring a conference for human service practitioners and consumers on major social issues of the times.

The conference, "Shifting Federal Responsibility; Implications for Human Services," will be held April 11 through 13 in the Student Center.

The conference is open to the public and admission is free.

Panel rejects interest rate limit

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — An Illinois Senate panel recommended Thursday that proposals to limit the maximum interest rates for consumer credit cards be rejected.

The Senate Subcommittee on Credit Card Interest Rates report concluded that capping interest rates would be detrimental to consumers, banks and the credit industry.

"This issue demanded a serious and thoughtful approach before any legislation was acted on," said Sen. Greg Zito, D-Melrose Park, chairman of the subcommittee and of the Senate Finance Committee. "What appeared to be a good idea when we began our research nearly a year ago has turned out to prove detrimental to consumers and to the credit industry."

The panel based its conclusions on testimony from representatives of banking, retail and consumer groups at public hearings in Chicago, Carbondale, Belleville and Moline.

The subcommittee said competition in the marketplace and informed consumer selection of credit cards was the best way to control rates.

Fox is the only thing that shines in otherwise pitiful 'Bright Lights'

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Michael J. Fox is the only reason to see "Bright Lights, Big City."

Fox makes a startling debut as a serious, dramatic actor, but that talent is wasted in a movie that plummets pathetically toward a pitiful ending.

Adapted from Jay McInerney's successful novel of the same name, "Brights Lights, Big City" suffers from a plot that does not lend itself well to the movie screen.

Fox's Jamie is a frustrated young writer who, after having been left by his wife Amanda (Pheobe Cates), turns to drugs and the seamy night life of New York City.

Goaded on by his wife's desertion, his mother's painful death of cancer a year earlier, a boring job as a fact checker for a prestigious New York magazine and the urgings of his best friend, a shallow playboy played by Kiefer

Film Review

Sutherland, Jamie willingly tumbles headlong toward rock bottom.

Fox does a fine job of keeping viewers interested in an otherwise pitiless young man. Fox depicts Jamie's despair with such silent intensity that he seems ready to break down and collapse in almost every scene.

Still traumatized by his mother's death, Jamie identifies with the story of a "coma baby" in the New York Post, the city's sensationalist tabloid. The baby's mother is expected to die and so is the baby she is carrying.

In one scene, Jamie dreams about the mother and child in the hospital. The mother is dead and when he pulls away her bed sheets, he is able to see into the mother's womb and talk to the baby. Jamie urges the baby to come out, but the baby, speaking in Jamie's voice, says he is too comfortable and wants to remain where he is.

This scene is meant to parallel another of Jamie's dreams, in which he is at his mother's bedside as she is dying. His mother, played by Dianne Wiest, tells Jamie of the difficulty she had of giving birth to him.

Though intense and highly fascinating, "Bright Lights, Big City" offers no resolution to its plot. Jamie's only revelation comes from a cocaine-induced nose bleed. He celebrates the insight by buying a fresh-baked loaf of bread and eating it at the edge of the Hudson River.

The movie does not fail in all aspects, but the viewer is left wondering whether Jamie has realized what he must do or is merely kidding himself that he is able to change. He gives no basis for the viewer to believe in either possibility.

Corea, Hancock to tour for homeless

By United Press International

Jazz greats Chick Corea and Herbie Hancock take their fusion bands on the road beginning June 1 for a 23-city combined concert tour to raise money for America's homeless, the musicians said Thursday.

It is the first time the two piano-synthesizer aces have toured together since 1978, when they made a tour featuring duets on acoustical piano.

This time out, Hancock will perform with his Headhunters band and saxophonist Michael Brecker as special guest artist. Corea will perform with his four-man Elektric Band. The tour will open June 1 in Seattle and wind up July 1 in Tampa, Fla.

At a news conference and brief performance Thursday at the Henry Street Settlement, a New York City shelter organization, Corea and Hancock estimated the tour will raise at least $150,000 for local homeless-aid organizations.

"In addition to making music for people, we can also throw some energy toward helping people out," Corea said. "And it may set a nice precedent. Generally, when individuals and large groups take some of the energy they have and channel it toward a cause, it results in a beneficial attitude."

Under tour guidelines, local facilities and organizations selected by the National Coalition for the Homeless will receive $1 from each ticket sold. In addition, the coalition will staff information booths at each concert.

The Philip Morris Cos., whose Benson & Hedges cigarette subsidiary is sponsoring the tour, said it will contribute $100,000 to the coalition for its rental assistance program.

"Homelessness in America is a national disgrace. Corporate America must play a role in ending it. We appreciate the Philip Morris Cos.' decision to join that effort," said Robert M. Hayes, counsel to the National Coalition for the Homeless.

Corea said each concert will feature some "jamming" by the two leaders, probably during the encore phase.

The Headhunters include drummer Charlie Drayton and two Miles Davis band veterans, bassist Darryl Jones and percussionist Steve Thornton.

The tour itinerary is June 1, Seattle; June 2, Portland, Ore.; June 4, San Diego; June 5, Santa Barbara, Calif.; June 6, Phoenix; June 8, Los Angeles; June 10, Orange County, Calif.; June 11, Berkeley, Calif.; June 13, Denver; June 15, Tulsa, Okla.; June 16, Memphis; June 17, Chicago; June 18, Detroit; June 19, Columbus, Ohio; June 20, Cleveland; June 21, Indianapolis; June 22, Dayton, Ohio; June 24, New York; June 25, Mansfield, Mass.; June 27, Devon, Pa.; June 28, Columbia, Md.; June 30, Atlanta; July 1, Tampa, Fla.

finished second in the Illinois primary March 15.

Frank Watkins, Jackson's national campaign director, said Simon's holding of his delegates was "obviously a stop-Jackson" move.

"Simon had his chance and lost," Watkins said. "Jackson and Dukakis — one of them is going to be the nominee. What is his point, other than to stop Jackson?"

Simon said that he's uncertain if suspending his campaign instead of ending it will be perceived by Jackson as "a stop Jackson effort."

In New York, Jackson himself said Simon should have followed the lead of Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, who withdrew from the race March 28 and released his delegates.

"I would hope Mr. Simon would likewise leave the race honorably and leave behind no technicalities," Jackson said. Bernice Covilli, a Simon delegate from West Frankfort, said Simon made the right choice to keep his delegates.

"He always said he would go all the way to Atlanta and that's what he's going to do," Covilli said. "I'm not leaning toward anybody but Paul Simon until I get to Atlanta."

Simon, a first-term senator from Makanda was greeted by two minutes of applause, whistles and whoops from supporters when he arrived at a Senate hearing room for his news conference.

"I want to have an impact on who the party nominates," Simon said. "I'm just leaving all my options open."

Simon, who said he will meet with his delegates after the last primaries June 7, won only the Illinois primary. He finished second in the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses and skipped the 16 Super Tuesday contests March 8 because of lack of money. He had hoped Tuesday's Wisconsin primary would make him a serious contender, but he finished last with only 5 percent of the vote.

"I think we'll see Dukakis move into the front. Jackson saw his hayday with Michigan," Brown said.

"I'm not negative toward the Jackson campaign because I agree an awful lot in some of his issues," Brown added. "But his lack of experience and lack of sound judgement on a host of policy matters makes me question his electability."

Jackson is facing press scrutiny for the first time in the race, Brown said, and people are going to have a hard time choosing him when they know a little more about him.

during congressional hearings — protected by limited grants of immunity from prosecution — contributed to the criminal charges brought by independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh.

Defendants John M. Poindexter, Oliver L. North and Albert Hakim move that the court enter an order dismissing the indictment on the ground that defendants were compelled under grants of statutory immunity to provide testimony and other information over an assertion of their Fifth Amendment rights," the court document said, "and that such testimony and other information has been and will be used against them in many ways in this prosecution."

The fourth defendant named in the indictment, retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, lodged his own challenge in a separate filing, asking that it be thrown out because Walsh "deliberately refused to inform the grand jury about immunized testimony of Lt. Col. North and Admiral Poindexter that directly exculpates General Secord."

Secord, who testified before Congress without immunity, previously had asked a federal judge and appeals court to block his indictment on those same grounds. He was turned down.

The challenge has been long expected by Walsh, who took stringent precautions to insulate his staff from the testimony and who placed packages of information under court seal for months to help prove he derived his information independent of any such testimony.

The three men charged, however, that the prohibited information had a far reach, including to the grand jury, potential jurors and witnesses, and even to Walsh's staff through witnesses that heard it. Laying the blame largely with Congress, they also charged that it affected the prosecutor's actions, including his decisions on what to present to the grand jury and whether to issue subpoenas.

Downtown area topic of retreat

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

The City Council wants advice on how city-owned land in downtown Carbondale should be used — now.

The Council is sponsoring a free retreat from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday at Touch of Nature.

The workshop is intended to bring together people from throughout the community to discuss the future of downtown Carbondale and to start creating plans for its revitalization.

Councilman Richard Morris said the workshop is designed to get people — Carbondale residents, University students and city officials — involved in the planning process.

"In order to get any project downtown to go, we need community support," Morris said. "This is just one way to get community involvement."

People who are interested in attending the retreat should either contact Don Monty at City Hall at 549-5302 or any organizations sponsoring the event.

The workshop is sponsored by the Carbondale Downtown Revitalization Committee, the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, the University, the Undergraduate Student Organization, the Central Carbondale Historic Area Association, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the City of Carbondale.

A free lunch will be provided for those who register.

"frustrated" by the negative results, the research is what matters.

"I don't think the treatments will help my wife, but she's willing to do it if it can help others," Portz said.

Elizabeth, 71, is believed to be in the second stage of the disease, is beginning a new seven-month treatment. Herbert said he doesn't know what drug doctors are using this time.

During the past year, the Portzes have become members of an Alzheimer's support group and the Southern Illinois Chapter of the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association.

"I'd like to be out doing a lot more consulting with people on the disease, but I have to be with my wife," Herbert said. "I'm restricted to the telephone or written correspondence."

The support group helps the Portzes anticipate the next stages of the disease. "You see something odd and realize that others are going through the same experiences," Herbert said.

More than 111,000 Illinois residents have Alzheimer's disease, Charlotte Cook, a coordinator at the Egyptian Area Agency on Aging Inc., said.

Southern Illinois has three support groups for Alzheimer's patients or those who care for them, Cook said. The primary purpose of the groups is to be an information source about the disease.

The federal government spends $40 billion annually on research on the disease and how it affects victims, Cook said.

"Under national organizations we can get more support groups and money for research," Cook said.

The severity of the disease differs with each patient, Cook said. The disease can last from 15 to 20 years.

Eventually most patients must be cared for in nursing homes, Cook said. Professional care becomes necessary when a victim's behavior becomes violent or a layperson cannot handle the physical deterioration of the person, Cook said.

Herbert Portz hopes to keep caring for his wife at home.

He is looking for a couple willing to assist in his wife's care and maintenance of the 14 acres of property where they live.

"My wife gets fairly stubborn and I have to be a little more insistent," Herbert said.

He said he now cooks most of the meals and has to help Elizabeth get dressed. But there are some urges that she has to deal with, he added.

"She wants to drive and she says she's going to, but she thinks about it and turns around and says she's not going to," he said.

Traveling is something the Portzes enjoyed.

"We consider ourselves world travelers," Herbert said. "Been all over — Pakistan, Rome, China."

They still are planning trips but not as extensive, he said. They want to visit their children, whom Herbert said are "spread out all over the place in Wisconsin, Arizona and Boston."

"Our friends and neighbors are catching up with us. They've gone to Australia and other places. It makes us a little envious."

Newspaper to produce TV program

BOSTON (UPI) — The Christian Science Monitor will launch a nightly half-hour television show beginning in September anchored by veteran TV newsmen John Hart, the newspaper announced Thursday.

"Monitor NewsWorld," will be based at Monitor TV studios in Boston and will feature live nightly satellite reports by Monitor correspondents in London, Tokyo and Washington.

Former State Department spokesman Hodding Carter will serve as special Washington correspondent.

The Monitor said it expects to soon announce a distribution agreement. The show will be delivered through a major cable program service or through individual TV stations, officials said.

"Americans are more aware today than ever before of the impact of world events on their lives," said Monitor publisher John H. Hoagland Jr.

Pat Degnan sings "It's Still A Pain to Me," at WCIL.

Student's hobby gets a few laughs

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

A University student's hobby in parody is receiving more than a passing laugh. Pat Degnan's humorous songs have caught the attention of a Chicago radio station, and recently, a Carbondale radio station. Degnan's latest song has been played on WCIL-FM. The song, "It's Still A Pain To Me," states his view of the campus parking situation and is set to the tune of Billy Joel's "It's Still Rock 'n' Roll to Me."

The song is about the hard time many students have finding on-campus parking spaces.

"I wrote the song in five minutes," Degnan said. "We recorded it at CIL, but the director said the singing was too close to the original so we did it again. That's why I scream in parts."

"It's mostly all in humor, but I hope the song will make the University give the situation more thought," Degnan, a senior in business management, said. "I hope some kind of change will come about."

Degnan met WCIL disc jockey Steve "Stevie J." Farkas through a mutual friend, Farkas said. Two weeks ago Degnan mentioned his song ideas to Farkas, who arranged for Degnan to record a song in the station's recording studio.

"Because of production the song didn't turn out that great the first time we recorded it," Farkas said. Farkas and Degnan made changes in the song and Farkas played the song for the station's program director, Tony Waitkus.

"Tony is open to any idea as long as he hears it first," Farkas said. "He thought the song was creative and funny and he said we could play it once."

Most stations will play song parodies at least once for fun, Farkas said.

But the fact that Degnan's song focused on a campus situation that everyone can relate to, not just students, helped it get on the air, Farkas said.

"The song was something funny — comic relief," he said. "The (University) administration might have even gotten a kick out of it."

"I'm always hearing feedback, and the response was totally positive," he added.

Only about 15 to 20 percent of the station's listeners are students, Farkas said.

He said he was surprised by the positive response from students listening at South East Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Mo., who identify with the song because of their own parking problems.

Degnan said he plans to record more songs at the station. He is working on a song about AIDS to the tune of "Yesterday" by the Beatles.

"The song is going to be funny, but I want it to be informative too," he said.

Degnan said he has been writing parodies for about a year. One of his songs dealt with the Gary Hart-Donna Rice incident. The song was to the music of "What I Like About You" by the Romantics.

"It's spontaneous," Degnan said. "If I try to sit down and write a song, they don't turn out very good."

Degnan has written and recorded five songs. The Chicago station WLUP FM 98 has played some of them.

Degnan doesn't know how much airplay his songs get in Chicago. But he said: "Friends say they hear the songs. They more or less hear my name or a few have said they recognize my voice."

The Chicago station is where Degnan listened to the shock radio artist Dr. Demento and disc jockey John "Johnny B." Brandmeier, both of whom inspired his hobby.

In Chicago, Degnan records his songs at Bayou Studio. The studio charges about $10.95 per cassette, he said. There is no copyright to the music he uses. "Companies just put it out," Degnan said.

"I hope my hobby continues to grow," Degnan said. "But it is just a hobby."

Friends have asked him to entertain them with his hobby at parties and also to record messages for their answering machines.

"I come up with a lot of little phrases at home that I use," he said.

Degnan said his hobby is more than relaxing. "It stretches my imagination. Just to see what I can do," he said.

Club sails with free boat rides

By Antoinette Hayes

After years of struggling, the Southern Illinois Collegiate Sailing Club will get its feet wet once again when it sponsors Free Sail Day at Crab Orchard Lake Saturday.

The club will offer free sailboat rides to the public from noon until sunset, John Powell, club secretary, said. He said the club has 16 boats available for the free rides.

Marea Wilgen, club commodore, said the club experienced rough waters when the government discontinued management of the land the boats occupy in spring 1985.

Under the government's supervision, the club leased the land for $1 each year,

The club will offer free sailboat rides to the public from noon until sunset Saturday.

Wilgen said. Under current management, the club has to pay $225 per boat per year.

Wilgen said that although the club is still having financial problems, it is working on several ways to raise money.

Dan Morris, social chairman of the club, said the club is hoping to improve its equipment and competitive team. He said the club has recruited talented freshmen and newcomers.

The sailing club also is in the process of recruiting new members, Powell said. The membership fee is $20 per semester for students and $30 for non-students. The fee includes lessons for inexperienced members. Boats are available to members with a license during daylight hours.

Money aids high schoolers

Project Choice to give money to urge graduation

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Ewing Kauffman, founder of Marion Laboratories Inc. and co-owner of the Kansas City Royals, unveiled a scholarship program today that will initially benefit about 300 students at the inner-city high school from which he graduated.

Kauffman announced Project Choice to the eighth-grade class at Westport Junior High School as an incentive for the students to attend and graduate from Westport High School.

Project Choice is being offered to the current class so they will have four years to prepare for their future, he said.

KAUFFMAN IS chairman of the board of Marion Laboratories and founder of the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation.

Under the program, the Kauffman Foundation will pay expenses for qualified students, such as tuition, books, fees, and reasonable room and board at a vocational or technical school in the Kansas City area, a college or university in Missouri or, at the Foundation's option, another institution of higher learning in the United States.

IN RETURN, participating students must agree to graduate from high school in the Kansas City School District, regularly attend classes, actively participate in Project Choice at-school assistance programs, avoid parenthood, and avoid alcohol and drug use.

The goal of Project Choice, described as an innovative program designed for the education of youths with academic and financial disadvantages, is to allow the students the opportunity to become productive in society, Kauffman said.

The initial Kauffman

Foundation offer to approximately 300 Kansas City students is said by its sponsor to represent one of the largest such scholarship programs in the nation in terms of scope and opportunity.

ESTIMATES ON costs associated with the program were unavailable but a spokesman pointed out that costs would vary depending on what schools the students chose to attend.

Westport High School was chosen for the program because of the varied socioeconomic make-up of the student body, according to organizers of the announcement. A major objective of Project Choice is to provide meaningful assistance and direction to deserving students who would otherwise be unable to meet the financial demands of post-secondary education.

Marion Laboratories will provide executive and technical support for Project Choice, which will be directed by Thomas Rhone, a former principal of Wyandotte High School in Kansas City, Kan.

AN ENROLLMENT ceremony for those participating students and their parents is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday in the auditorium of Westport High School.

Kentucky dropouts are fewer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Dropout-prevention programs in Kentucky's 178 local school districts increased from 84 to 153 over the past two years, while the number of students who quit before graduating dropped from 12,900 to 9,600.

That success, which brought the state's high school graduation rate close to the national average, was being shared Thursday and Friday in Louisville, where 300 teachers, administrators and citizens gathered for the Kentucky Department of Education's annual dropout prevention conference.

Education Department Director David Jackson attributed the lower dropout rate to concerted efforts by local school districts, businesses, community agencies and individuals throughout the state.

The U.S. Department of Education's latest statistical report shows a national graduation rate of 71.5 percent in 1986, the last year for which complete figures are available.

Kentucky needs only 1,200 more graduates annually — about 5 per high school — to reach the national average, department figures show.

"We still have too many students dropping out of school, but the programs are making a real difference," Jackson said. "If we continue to increase our efforts, we can expect even greater success in the future. Reaching or exceeding the national graduation rate is within the realm of possibility now."

The conference features school-business partnerships and other techniques used in Kentucky and other states to reduce dropouts significantly in local schools.

Street violence continues rise, police intensify gang crackdown

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A crackdown on violent street gangs intensified Thursday as police collared more than 200 suspects and began booking them in the field, freeing officers to concentrate on arrests rather than paperwork.

Despite the crackdown in south-central Los Angeles, gang violence resumed late Wednesday when a man was shot and critically wounded outside a house on the east side by four gang members who opened fire from a passing car, Sgt. David Lewis said.

More than 85 people have been killed in gang-related violence this year in Los Angeles County. Gang-related slayings reached a record 205 in 1987, police said.

In a series of sweeps aimed at suppressing the surge in gang mayhem, police target neighborhoods known to have heavy concentration of gangs and go in with search warrants to make arrests at suspected drug scenes.

Police also stop and interrogate anyone they suspect is a gang member, basing their assumptions on their dress or their use of gang hand signs.

A number of the some 210 arrested Wednesday night were taken to a mobile police booking station set up at the Memorial Coliseum, Detective Verne King said. It was the first time police have employed the mobile system in a gang sweep. In the past, the system, which cuts booking time by half and frees officers to return to the field, has been used during crackdowns on drunken drivers.

It was not immediately known how many of those arrested were actually booked in the field.

While investigators said the gunmen Wednesday night were believed to be gang members, Lewis would not say whether the victim, identified as Marty Larez, 24, was also a member of a gang. Larez was taken in critical condition with a single gunshot wound.

In a five-hour period beginning at 10 p.m. Wednesday, a special task force of about 260 officers who arrested 128 gang members and 82 others.

King said the sweep, concentrated in neighborhoods surrounding the University of Southern California and south to the Los Angeles Harbor area, included arrests for drug sales and possession of narcotics, driving under the influence, weapons and curfew violations.

Thursday's anti-gang operation brought to about 1,100 the number of suspected gang members arrested since the sweeps began Feb. 26.

Semen tests inconclusive for Dotson

By United Press International

Convicted rapist Gary Dotson lost one battle and another was declared a draw in his fight for exoneration Thursday as the Illinois Supreme Court denied his request for a new trial and genetic fingerprint tests on semen-stained panties belonging to his victim were revealed to be inconclusive.

The sophisticated DNA tests were performed in London on semen samples from panties worn by Cathleen Crowell Webb on the night she claimed she was raped by Dotson. Webb later recanted her charges, and Dotson claimed the tests would prove he was innocent of the rape charge.

Alec Jeffreys, the developer of the tests, reported that while a specimen of DNA was extracted from the clothing, "it was too degraded for analysis."

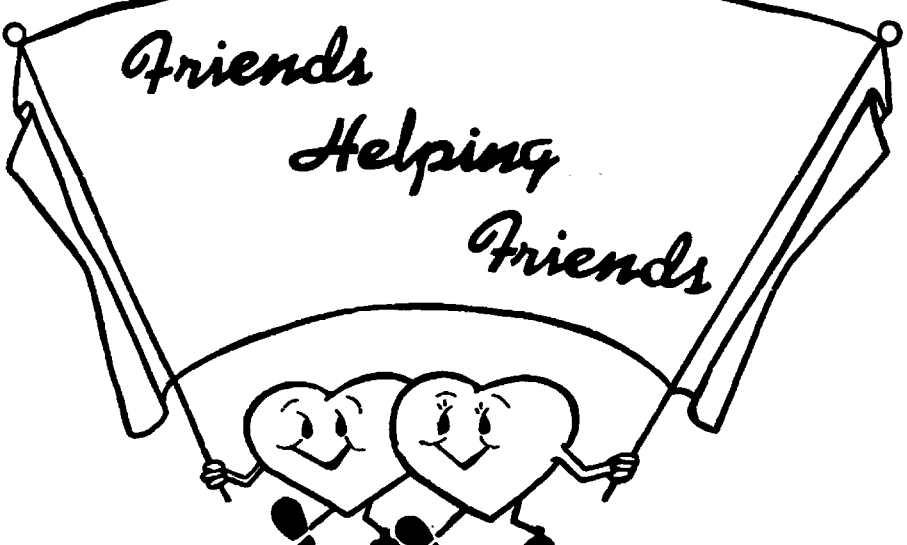

The degradation probably resulted from the panties being stored at room temperature from 1977 to 1985 rather than necessary colder temperatures, he said.

"We gave it our best shot but we can't tell one way or the other," Gov. James Thompson said. "That means that the Dotson case falls back on the trial, the evidence produced at the trial (and) the evidence produced at the clemency hearing. The evidence produced at the trial and the clemency hearing was, in my judgment, overwhelming."

The Supreme Court refused Thursday to hear Dotson's request for a new trial based on Webb's recantation. In papers filed with the court, Dotson's lawyers called Webb's original testimony "a monstrous hoax" that was sufficient evidence to vacate the conviction and grant a new trial.

The DNA tests were ordered after Thompson and the Cook County State's Attorney's office supported Dotson's request for the tests.

Jury acquits supremacists of sedition charges

Jury takes four days to give verdict

FORTSMITH, Ark. (UPI) — An all-white jury Thursday acquitted 13 alleged white supremacists of charges of seditious conspiracy and plotting to kill federal officials after a trial in which sedition charges were used for the first time against an extremist right-wing group.

The jury deliberated for more than 20 hours over four days before returning its decision in the eight-week trial to U.S. District Court Judge Morris S. Arnold.

Nine of the 13 were tried for seditious conspiracy. One of them and four others were tried for plotting to kill a federal judge and an FBI agent, and two of the 13 were tried for interstate transportation of stolen money.

Seditious conspiracy carries a maximum 20-year prison sentence and $20,000 fine. Conspiracy to assassinate federal officials is punishable by up to life in prison, and transporting stolen money across state lines carries a maximum 10-year prison term and $10,000 fine.

The prosecution contended the conspiracy to overthrow the government and replace it with a white nation in the Pacific northwest was hatched during the Aryan Nations Congress in 1983 in Hayden Lake, Idaho.

Prosecutors said the conspiracy was financed through robberies and counterfeiting and was to be carried out by bombings, destruction of utilities, poisoning of public water supplies and killings of federal officials and minorities.

"Plots that are made in hell do not have angels for partners," U.S. Attorney J. Michael Fitzhugh said during the trial. "The pillars of the community were not talking about overthrowing the government."

One of the government's key witnesses in the trial was James Ellison, former leader of The Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, a religious-paramilitary group based in north Arkansas. Ellison is serving a 20-year prison term on a racketeering conviction stemming from a government raid on the CSA compound in 1985, that led to seizure of illegal guns and cyanide.

Authorities raided the 224-acre site, located on a peninsula jutting into Bull Shoals Lake near the Missouri border, as part of an investigation into a spate of criminal activities linked to the slaying in 1983 of fugitive tax protester Gordon Kahl.

Kahl, who was wanted in connection with the slaying of "Plots that are made in hell do not have angels for partners. The pillars of the community were not talking about overthrowing the government."

—J. Michael Fitzhugh

two deputy U.S. marshals in North Dakota, was killed in a shootout with police in a concrete bunker-type house near Smithville, Ark.

The defendants sought to discredit Ellison, saying he concocted the conspiracy story in hopes of a making deal with the government to get his sentence reduced.

Ellison had testified that a pawnshop owner had been killed because "he was an evil man, a Jew, and he just needed to die."

He also told of receiving a 30-gallon drum of cyanide from one of the defendants, who he said told him, "You might need it sometime. It will kill a lot of people."

Prosecutors contended the cyanide was to be used to poison public water supplies in an effort to cause widespread disruption of municipal services and fear among citizens as part of the plan to overthrow the government.

Louis Ray Beam Jr., 41, of Houston, one of the defendants who served as his own attorney, had branded federal attorneys "governmental hucksters of conspiracy snake oil."

Beam said the government was indulging in "the McCarthyism of the '80s."

UK official 'regrets' racial statement

VERSAILLES, Ky. (UPI) — Former Gov. A.B. "Happy" Chandler apologized Thursday for using a racial slur during a University of Kentucky trustees meeting, but some football players at the school pledged not to play until he resigns and team practice was suspended.

Chandler, 89, made his apology during a news conference at his home Thursday, but pointed to his decision as baseball commissioner to allow Jackie Robinson to become the first black in the major leagues as proof he is not a racist.

"I regret it more than anything," Chandler said of his comments made during a committee meeting of the UK Board of Trustees. "I can say I have not qualified in my lifetime as a racist and the record will show that."

Chandler said Tuesday during a discussion of university investments in South Africa. "You know, Zimbabwe is all nigger now. There aren't any whites."

Chandler said he would not submit to calls for his resignation as a university trustee until Gov. Wallace Wilkinson asked for it. Wilkinson, who named Chandler to the post, declined comment on the controversy, but Chandler said the governor told him he would never ask for his resignation.

Two black seniors on the university football team, Chris Chenault and Dave Johnson, said after a team meeting in Lexington that the squad would not practice until Chandler resigned, but that was later modified to a one-day suspension of practice and the wearing of black armbands.

However, Chenault and Johnson said they would refuse to play in the Blue-White game April 23, the annual spring public scrimmage, or during the regular fall season if Chandler remained on the board.

"We feel we cannot play for a team what will allow such bias," Chenault said following a team meeting. "We can't deal with racism on our campus."

Jay Dortch, a white player and spring drills captain, said it was undecided whether all the players would join in the refusal to play.

"It's a team effort and it will be 100 percent," Dortch said. "If that's what we will agree on, then we'll do it together."

Coach Jerry Claiborne said he was behind his players, but did not feel he could call for Chandler's resignation.

"I'm not making the statement Happy shouldn't be on the board. I am not a judge," Claiborne said. "What he said, I don't agree with it, and I don't really think he meant it. It was embarrassing to our university and to our squad."

Chandler said that is what is now a racial slur was a term used consistently when he was growing up in Henderson County in western Kentucky.

Students stage protest on apartheid

WELLESLEY, Mass. (UPI) — About 300 Wellesley College students built a shantytown and staged a one-day hunger strike Thursday to protest the school's $24 million investment in companies doing business in South Africa.

The students built a pair of shanties on the lawn in front of the chapel at the all-female liberal arts college and planned to demonstrate in front of the College Club, where the school's trustees were to meet, students said.

"The students are for divestment, the faculty is for divestment, the staff is for divestment," said sophomore Brenda Nath Sankaranerayanan, 19, a native of India. "It's just the trustees that don't get the message."

As of December 1987, the college had $24 million in investments in companies doing business in South Africa, or about 9 percent of the school's total endowment of $272 million, Wellesley College spokeswoman Ann O'Sullivan said.

The school's South African portfolio was at $46 million, or 15 percent of the school's total $297 million endowment, a year ago, but the value of the holdings were reduced after the Oct. 19, 1987, stock market plunge, she said.

Scientists find clue in AIDS

BOSTON (UPI) — Scientists have discovered a key step necessary for the AIDS virus to infect cells, apparently offering a new target for drugs aimed at reducing infectiousness of the deadly virus, a report said Thursday.

The virus apparently must snip short a protein on its outer shell in order to fuse with a cell it seeks to infect, the researchers reported in the journal Cell.

Although much more research is needed, the discovery suggests drugs that interfere with the snipping step could block the virus's ability to infect cell and destroy victims' immune systems, the researchers said.

"We've identified a crucial step necessary for viral infectivity to occur," said Dr. Mike McCune of the Stanford University School of Medicine, who led the research.

"We now have two leads on further research that could lead to drugs that might inhibit infectivity," McCune said in a telephone interview.

Researchers are searching for the enzyme that acts as the chemical scissors to cut the protein, McCune said. If they can find it, and develop an inhibitor for it, they could block the ability of the virus to infect cells, he said.

Another possible strategy is to develop substances that adhere to the "sticky" end of the protein exposed after the cutting, he said. They have already determined the structure of this "sticky" end, he said.

Neither approach would rid the virus from the body of an infected person. But it could limit the spread of the virus among cells, allowing people to live with the infection, he said.

The acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus, known as HIV, or human immunodeficiency virus, infects and kills cells in the immune system, fatally destroying the body's ability to fight infection.

The researchers made the discovery by altering the genetic coding in the AIDS virus responsible for cutting the protein, which protrudes from the outer membrane of the virus like a spike sticking out of a ball.

Worst flu epidemic since '84 hits nation

ATLANTA (UPI) — Deaths from influenza and pneumonia in 1988 indicate the nation is undergoing its worst flu epidemic since 1984, statistics issued by the national Centers for Disease Control showed Thursday.

The CDC said the influenza outbreak at its peak accounted for 7 percent of all deaths reported by 121 of the nation's major cities. The respiratory disease was still above epidemic levels as of the week ended April 2, the CDC said.

Four years ago, during the 1984-85 flu season, the percentage of flu and pneumonia deaths compared to all deaths slightly exceeded 7 percent.

For the week ended April 2, the CDC reported 861 deaths due to pneumonia and flu in 121 cities. When the epidemic peaked in early March, the number of flu deaths totaled 991.

The CDC said the percentage of deaths attributed to pneumonia and influenza is calculated each week and compared with total deaths that would be expected in the absence of an influenza epidemic.

The influenza outbreak, starting late in the winter compared with other years, reached epidemic levels during the week ended February 20.

Flu death ratios along with physician office visits are used by the CDC to estimate the impact of influenza activity. When the epidemic began to peak, the CDC's "sentinel" physicians reported an average of 8.1 percent of their

When the epidemic began to peak, the CDC's "sentinel" physicians reported an average of 8.1 percent of their patients had an influenza-like illness, compared with the overall seasonal average of 4.8 percent.

The CDC said the flu outbreaks this winter and spring have been characterized by the appearance of three different flu viruses, with the predominant virus, A-H3N2, splitting into four variants.

A flu vaccine available at physicians' offices offers some protection against the three circulating viruses, although the degree of protection may have been compromised by new variants only slightly inhibited by the current vaccine. Annual flu vaccinations are recommended for people over 65 and those with chronic illnesses because they are particularly vulnerable to serious illness and death from the respiratory ailment.

People are born to be shy

Chemical reaction in human body affects shyness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Shyness apparently is an in-born trait that emerges in response to stress, but can be overcome with practice, researchers from Harvard and Yale reported Thursday.

Children who show signs of shyness as early as age 2 have different biochemical reactions to unexpected change or newness compared to outgoing children, indicating their nervous systems are more sensitive to novel events, the scientists reported.

Exposure to stress early on in life — fighting with a brother or sister, for example — apparently acts as a trigger to bring out shy behavior, the researchers wrote in the journal Science.

But being born with a tendency to shyness does not mean a youngster will behave shyly later on.

"The child begins life with a slight bias," said Jerome Kagan, a professor of psychology at Harvard University.

"As with any disease where there's a slight genetic contribution, like diabetes or cancer, just because you have the tendency doesn't mean you'll get it (the disease). It doesn't mean you'll become a shy child."

Nor is it bad to be shy, Kagan said. He gave the example of a shy child who dislikes large groups of people, who comes from an intellectual family and spends time studying instead of partying — becoming class valedictorian.

Shyness is not a fixed quality, either, he said. In the study, 40 percent of children who were shy in early years overcame their inhibitions by age 10.

The researchers drew their conclusions from a study of 28 shy and 30 extroverted children. They were chosen at either 21 or 31 months of age as either consistently shy, quiet, timid or sociable, talkative and spontaneous when exposed to unfamiliar people or procedures in laboratory settings.

Both groups were observed at various points over the years, with the last observation occurring when they were 7 and a half years old. By then, dropouts had brought the group down to a total of 41 participants.

The participants were tested in a laboratory play situation involving unfamiliar children of the same age and sex, and individual testing sessions with an unfamiliar female examiner.

The team noticed the following characteristics:

The researchers pointed out their study was based on children specially selected because of extreme behavior, and that many children fall somewhere in between.

He said parents can help shy children by not blaming them for their behavior, not assuming the children can easily conquer shyness and gradually coax the child into more outgoing behavior.

Journal defends decision to publish mercy-killing article

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bitter division in the medical community emerged in the pages of the Journal of the American Medical Association Thursday over the journal's publication of a column by a young doctor who admitted to a mercy killing.

Despite the furor, which took up 10 pages, journal editor Dr. George Lundberg stood by the journal's publication of a column Jan. 8 in which a gynecology resident admitted to giving a patient a possibly fatal dose of morphine.

"I believed it was time for the euthanasia debate to be held on the pages of a peer-reviewed medical journal. Such discussions should not be confined to whispers in doctors' dressing rooms and hallways," Lundberg said in an editorial.

The article, titled "It's Over, Debbie," was a first-person account by a sleepy, overworked resident of how he — or she — gave the morphine to a young woman in the final, painful stages of incurable cancer and who had said, "Let's get this over with."

To date the journal has received 235 letters, making "Debbie" one of the most provocative articles ever printed, ranking with an editorial opposing boxing and an article speculating on the medical causes of Jesus's death.

Of these letters, about 111 supported JAMA's decision to publish the piece, and 124 opposed it. But doctors — who wrote two-thirds of the letters — and non-doctors were sharply divided, with just 30 percent of doctors supporting the publication decision that 80 percent of non-doctors endorsed, an AMA spokesman said.

Along with Lundberg's editorial were two commentaries from guest authors and 18 letters about the controversial article.

Many of these expressed dismay that the journal had published the article or that it had not included an editorial condemning the physician.

"I believed it was time for the euthanasia debate to be held on the pages of a peer-reviewed medical journal."

—George Lundberg

A commentary by four physicians said the journal should turn over all information on the case to legal authorities and hospital officials.

"Much more is at stake than punishing an offender. The very soul of medicine is on trial," wrote the four doctors in "Doctors Must Not Kill."

"The conduct of the physician is inexcusable. But the conduct of the editor of JAMA is incomprehensible. By publishing this report, he knowingly publicizes a felony and shields the felon," the four doctors wrote.

"Decent folk do not deliberately stir discussion of outrageous practices," they said.

In another commentary, Kenneth Vaux of the department of ethics in medicine at the University of Illinois in Chicago, said the circumstances surrounding Debbie's death — when the resident was sleepy, angry, did not know the patient and did not consult with her primary physician — made "the whole process from beginning to end ... morally unacceptable."

But Vaux said there is a place for voluntary euthanasia and said the 20 milligrams of morphine given to Debbie was "scarcely a murderous dose." He said the pain killer may have hastened her death, but was not the only cause.

Other letter-writers praised the doctor for ending a hopeless woman's agony, and the courage of the editor for publishing the article.

Baseball: Weekend victory could be 'key of the season'

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The baseball team opens its conference season with a four-game weekend series against Illinois State in Bloomington Saturday and Sunday.

Coach Itchy Jones has called the series the "key of the season."

The Salukis, 16-10, will have to improve upon their early season play if they are to make a liar out of "Baseball America," which picked the Salukis as fifth in the conference. A lack of clutch hitting and inconsistent pitching has plagued the team after a successful spring trip.

BRADLEY COACH DEWEY Kalmher, whose Braves begin at home against Creighton, agrees with Jones that this weekend's opening games are crucial.

"It's important to get off to a good start in the league because there are so many good teams," he said.

The following is a capsule of how the Valley teams have fared so far this season in order of their ranking at the end of the 1987 season:

— WICHITA STATE (16-4) — The Shockers are ranked 10th in the nation by "Baseball America."

David Haas, the winningest pitcher in the NCAA last year at 15-2, has won five of six decisions.

The Shockers return their entire starting infield, including second baseman Mark Standiford, who is hitting .402 with 16 doubles and 30 RBIs. Catcher Eric Wedge has already belted 6 homers.

— BRADLEY (12-7) — Three of the top four hitters and the MVC Pitcher of the Year, Paul DeJaynes, are gone from last year's team, which won a school record 41 games.

Infielder Brad Tilly (6 HRs) and outfielder Eric Kuhlman (5 HRs) add punch to an inconsistent offense, which is batting .309.

Pitcher Mike Boyan (3-0) leads the Braves pitching staff, which has a 4.38 ERA.

— INDIANA STATE (16-6) — The team, which won the Valley's post-season tournament three of the last five years, returns three starters to the lineup, two starting pitchers and its ace reliever.

Second baseman Mitch Hannahs (.426), center fielder Bob Zeihen (.300) and first baseman Jeff Buell (.418, 3 HRs) are back, and with right fielder Chad McDonald (.300, 5 HRs, 24 RBIs), lead the Sycamores' offensive attack.

Veteran pitchers Kurt Olson (3-0, 2.48 ERA) and Chris Schaefer (4-2, 4.42 ERA) anchor the starting rotation.

— SIU-C (15-10) — The Salukis are finding out just how much they miss first baseman Jim Limperis.

He was the team's top run producer with 57 RBIs last season. While the Salukis' .346 batting average leads the Valley, no one on the team has stepped forward and consistently delivered in the clutch.

Pitchers Lee Meyer, Larry Beattie and David Henley continue to be plagued by injuries, while ace Dale Kisten (3-4) has struggled. Rich Campbell (3-1) has picked up some of the slack.

The Salukis' .968 fielding percentage is tops in the league.

— CREIGHTON (20-7) — The Blue Jays are exciting to watch. So far, their explosive offense has overcome their defensive lapses and poor pitching.

They are averaging more than 10 runs a game but have a 4.60 ERA. Their defense, which has committed 53 errors, has turned only eight double plays and is last in the Valley with a .938 fielding percentage.

Infielder Oneri Fleita leads the Valley with 18 doubles and a .494 batting average.

The Blue Jays lead the league in home runs (27) and runs (256).

— ILLINOIS STATE (9-4-1) — The Redbirds have not yet been seriously tested this season. Seven of their wins have been against Valparaiso, Grandview and Marietta.

Illinois State is feeling the effects of losing four outfielders, who combined for 118 RBIs last season, and two starting infielders. The Redbirds' .299 batting average ranks last in the conference.

Catcher Don King (.406), Dave Wyss (.378) and Ray Ledinsky (.368) are the bright spots in an otherwise sluggish offense.

Men's golf drives for second title

By Steven Welsh
Staff Writer

The men's golf team will try to capture its second straight title at the Bradley Invitational Saturday and Sunday in Pekin.

The Salukis, who scored a first place finish at the SIU-E Invitational last weekend, will face serious competition for the title at Bradley, according to Coach Lew Hartzog. Hartzog said the toughest competition will come from Illinois State, Iowa, Iowa State and Northern Iowa.

"It's a tough field, but there's no reason we shouldn't be in the thick of it," Hartzog said. "I'll be disappointed if we're not."

Bradley, Drake, Eastern Illinois, Millikan, Minnesota, SIU-E and Western Illinois also will compete in the tournament.

"The kids are ready," Hartzog said. "Last week was the first time since I've been golf coach that the team played better on the second day than on the first. That's a good sign."

The team will take five golfers to the 54-hole tournament.

Hartzog said he hasn't decided on the fourth and fifth members of the squad, adding that he'll choose between Bobby Pavelonis, Britt Pavelonis and Tom Neuman.

"It'll probably be Bobby in the fourth spot and either Britt or Tom in the fifth spot," Hartzog said.

The Salukis also will have the added obstacle of competing on a tough course — the Lick Creek Golf Course in Pekin.

"It's a beautiful course and it's real tough," said Hartzog.

Women's golf team aims for 3rd at Mizzou tourney

The women's golf team is hoping for a top-three finish at the Mizzou Invitational Tournament this weekend in Columbia, Mo.

The team's toughest competition in the nine-team field will come from defending Gateway Conference champion Wichita State.

"There's no reason we can't beat Wichita State," Coach Diane Daugherty said. "I'm think we can finish in the top three."

Daugherty is also expecting strong showings from Purdue and Missouri.

"Purdue won just about every tournament we were in during the fall, and Missouri won the (Snowbird Classic) tournament in Florida," Daugherty said.

The Salukis will take five golfers to the tournament. Lisa Johnson and Tina Kozlowski qualified by finishing in the top ten at the Snowbird Classic.

The rest of the team had to take part in a 54-hole qualifying round. Lisa Meritt and Vicki Higginson qualified for the number three and four spots, respectively.

Jennifer Sayles won the fifth spot on a sudden-death hole. She will be making her first trip of the season with the team.

Conspicuous in her absence is Julie Shumaker, who has a Gateway Conference-leading 80.9 average. Shumaker lost the sudden-death hole to Sayles.

Men's tennis brings wins into weekened home action

By Jeff Griesser
Staff Writer

After playing 23 dual matches on the road, the men's tennis team is finally playing at home.

The Salukis, 11-12, take a four-game winning streak into this weekend's action against Bradley, Notre Dame, and Louisville.

"Louisville beat us last time we played them," Coach Dick LeFevre said. "I don't know that much about them this season."

The Salukis lost to Notre Dame 7-2 earlier this season, but the home meeting with the Fighting Irish could be a different story, LeFevre said.

"The match with Notre Dame will be the one to watch," he said. "They beat us up there, but that was indoors and it was our first weekend of the spring."

The Salukis will be throwing a different lineup at the Irish this time around. Jose Demeterco, 8-3 since joining the team in mid-March, is playing at the No. 2 spot. His insertion into the top six has moved everyone else down a notch, which should make it easier for them to win,

MVC honors sophomore Maule

Mickey Maule was named Missouri Valley Conference player of the week for his efforts in Murray, Ky., April 2-3.

Maule, a sophomore from Aledo, had singles victories over Southwest Missouri State, Middle Tennessee, and Murray State. He also teamed with Fabiano Ramos to win two doubles matches.

Maule, a left-hander, plays at No. 3 singles and No. 1 doubles. He has won 20 of 23 singles matches this spring and his overall record, including fall matches, is 29-9.

Coach Dick LeFevre said: "He's just a consistently good player."

Mickey Maule

LeFevre said.

Three Salukis went undefeated last weekend. Demeterco, Mickey Maule, and Fabiano Ramos each swept three singles matches in Murray, Ky. Maule, at No. 3 singles for the Salukis, has a 20-3 record for the spring.

SIU-C plays Bradley at 9 a.m. Saturday morning. The match with Notre Dame is scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday, but the actual starting time could depend on when earlier matches are completed. On Sunday, SIU-C will face Louisville at 2 p.m.

Robbins holds third place in SEMOtion relays meet

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

Saluki Carmen Robbins is on a record-setting pace in the heptathlon after the first day of competition at the SEMOtion relays in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

She is in third place with a score of 2,844 points after four events. The school record is 4,908. Robbins will compete in the three remaining events today.

Robbins ran a personal best 14.7 in the 100-meter hurdles and jumped a personal best 4 feet 11 inches in the high jump. She finished the 200-meter dash in 25.5 and threw the shot put 33-5/8.

The rest of the women's team and the men's team will join Robbins in competition today and Saturday. About 40 teams will compete.

"It will be a good competitive atmosphere if you combine all the teams," women's coach Don DeNoon said.

The meet has seven relays, which will let the teams show their overall depth, DeNoon said.

"It seems that we could finish in the top three in every one," he said. "We have some depth to really work with."

DeNoon said the women's team has several potential qualifiers for the NCAA national meet, including triple jumper Christiana Philippou. Philippou set the school record in the event at the Saluki Open in Cape Girardeau March 26.

"We have several athletes that have the capability to qualify for nationals," DeNoon said. "I'm not sure the facilities are conducive to NCAA qualifying."

Potential qualifiers among the men in the field events include indoor qualifier Brian Bradley in the long jump, Shane Weber in the pole vault and Leonard Vance in the triple jump, Cornell said.

Hopefuls in the track events are indoor qualifier Bret Garrett in the 800-meter run and Erick Pegues and Kevin Steele in the 400.

All-American Ron Harter already has qualified for the NCAAs in the discus.

Body builders competition set for Shryock

The 1988 Mr. & Ms. Illinois Collegiate Physique Championships will be held Saturday at Shryock Auditorium.

About 50 body builders from across the state will compete in the event, which is being sponsored by the SIU-C Weightlifting Club. There will be two men's classes and one women's class.

There also will be two guest posers at the event. Lief Tiahart, an SIU-C alumni who is Mr. Mid America and Mr. Continental USA, will be on hand as well as Liz Karp, Amateur Grand Prix and Body Building Expo champion.

Prejudging will be at 10:30 a.m. and the finals will be at 7 p.m. Tickets are $3 for the prejudging and $6 for the finals and are available at the Student Center.

Bats lift Salukis over SEMO, 15-3

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

Slump. What slump?
After struggling to put hits together against Evansville, the Salukis pounded out 17 of them and beat Southeast Missouri State, 15-3, Thursday at Cape Girardeau, Mo.
A seven-run fourth inning gave the Salukis a 9-0 lead and busted open the game.

Ten different Saluki hitters got hits.
Pitcher Chad Metten (1-1) earned the victory by shutting out SEMO in his five innings of work. He struck out five while allowing two hits and three walks.
The Salukis jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning. Chuck Verschoore led off the game with a bunt single and moved to second on a wild pitch by pitcher Kirby Brewer. After Rick Damico grounded out, Joe Hall drove in Verschoore with a ground out to the second baseman.

There were two big blows in the fateful fourth inning when the Salukis scored seven runs on five hits. With two outs, Damico drove in two runs with his second home run of the season. Following a Hall walk, Chuck Locke drilled a line-drive homer to left. It was his fourth of the year.

Saluki pitcher Robert Hass entered the game in the sixth but did not retire any of the four batters he faced. Dale Meyer took the mound and allowed two hits in three innings. Rick Shipley entered in the ninth and finished the game for the Salukis who improved to 16-10.

Brewer (2-2) was the losing pitcher as SEMO dropped to 12-12.
Hall was three for five and knocked in three runs. Locke also had three RBIs. Damico, Locke, Ricke Gaebel, Doug Shields and John Hostetler all had two hits.

Sox beat Angels

CHICAGO (UPI) — An interference call against Wally Joyner ended an Angel ninth-inning rally and gave the Chicago White Sox a 2-1 victory Thursday.
Joyner was called for interfering with Chicago shortstop Ozzie Guillen at second base after Guillen forced Joyner for the second out on a ground ball by Brian Downing. Guillen, leaping to make a throw, fell after making contact with Joyner.
The Angels had scored its only run before the controversial play. Tony Armas and Chili Davis hit back-to-back doubles against Chicago starter Dave LaPoint, 1-0, before reliever Bill Long walked Joyner.
LaPoint struck out seven and walked one in 8 1/3 innings, giving up all five hits.
Guillen scored the decisive run as Schofield broke a streak of 43 errorless games with a fielding error.

Swimmers go to finals

The men's swimming team qualified one relay team for the finals in the first day of the NCAA championships in Indianapolis.

The 400-yard medley team of Scott Roberts, Harri Garmendia, Lee Carry and Kevin Nagy qualified for the consolation finals with a time of 3 minutes 18.89 seconds. It was the 15th fastest time.

If the relay team finishes the finals without false starts or injury, it will receive an All-America honorable mention.

In individual events, Garmendia finished 25th in the 200-yard individual medley with a personal best 1:50.29, the second fastest time in SIU-C history.
In the 50-yard freestyle, Roberts finished 25th in a personal best 20.38. Jeff Goelz placed 38th in 20.62 and Kevin Nagy was 41st in 20.64.
The championships will continue today and Saturday.

Coach Rick Rhoades consults running back Mike Dopud at the first spring practice Thursday afternoon.

Football players sport new attitude

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

More than 100 anxious football players showed up for practice Thursday with two things: helmets and positive attitudes.
They worked for 2 1/2 hours in the first spring practice session under new coach Rick Rhoades. Looking through the masks of their helmets, they got a glimpse of the changes that are in store.
"Well, we survived," Coach Rick Rhoades said. "I thought we had a really good practice. We're obviously not where we want to be, but we're a rebuilding team."
The players are fired up. "Defensively, practice went real well, junior defensive tackle Brad Crouse said. "We've been looking for someone to give us leadership and these coaches have come in and given us just that. Coach Rhoades knows exactly what's going on at all times, he has a plan and he sticks to it. The spirit is really good on this team. Our chins are raised now," he said.

Shannon Ferbrache, a junior defensive lineman, said, "We're learning a lot right now. We're walking through things and putting in a new offense and defense."
"I've never seen a group of coaches so excited about coaching a group of young kids," he said.
Rhoades said earlier in the week that the process of getting his team where he wanted it to be would take time. The practice didn't go quite as slow paced as Rhoades had originally planned, however.
"We did a lot of stuff on the run," he said. "We probably went a little faster than we thought we would."
Junior quarterback Kevin Brown was not at practice on Thursday and indications are that he has quit the team because of the wishbone offense installed by Rhoades.
"I haven't talked with Kevin," Rhoades said.
Brown was not available for comment Thursday.

Softball team up against Bradley, Western

The softball team once again is in the midst of a competitive Gateway Conference schedule.
The Salukis, after doubleheader losses to Eastern Illinois, meet Bradley at 3 p.m. today in Peoria and Western Illinois at 1 p.m. Saturday in Macomb.
"It's not going to get easier," Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said. "It's always been that way. There is no one we can look past and catch our breath against."

SIU-C has a 15-10 overall record, losing three of the last four games, although the team batting average has fallen only two points to .276 since last week.
But Brechtelsbauer is worried that her offense has dropped off, especially without designated hitter Shannon Taylor in the lineup. Taylor has a broken finger and can be used only as a pinch runner.
"We definitely miss Shannon's bat in the lineup," Brechtelsbauer said. "We need to see her on a regular basis."

Bradley's team batting average is identical to the Salukis', putting them in a tie for second in the Gateway rankings. The Lady Braves are 11-6 overall, winning seven of the last eight games.
"Apparently they're on a tear right now," Brechtelsbauer said. "We know they've got some tough pitching."
Lady Braves' pitcher Glenda Nelson has an 0.82 earned run average, the third best in the conference. She has 37 strike outs in 60 innings pitched.

Western Illinois is a much better team than its 9-11 record indicates, Brechtelsbauer said.
"In the one game I've seen them play, they were making mistakes they won't be making against us," Brechtelsbauer said. "They hit and run with power. They may be the most explosive team in the conference."
The Westerwinds' Kari McGaw has a .400 average, third in the conference behind Southwest Missouri's Laura Scafield (.415).

Women's tennis team no match for flu, injuries

By Jeff Grieser

A sudden rash of illness and injury has sidelined the women's tennis team from an important weekend of conference action.
"In 13 years of coaching I've never seen this happen," Coach Judy Auld said. She is unsure if the Salukis will be forced to forfeit all of the matches.
Seven of the nine team members are suffering from either the flu or tendonitis. Ellen Moellering and Dana Cherebetiu have the flu and Julie Burgess just got over it.

Beth Boardman still has an injured foot, which she hurt during the team's spring trip in Hilton Head, S.C. Maria Coch is suffering from turf toe, a type of tendonitis, and Sue Steuby also has been bothered by tendonitis in her shoulder.
SIU-C was to play Gateway Conference foes Eastern Illinois on Thursday, Western Illinois today, and Illinois State and Bradley on Saturday. The conference matches determine the seedings for the conference tournament.

"If we're as good as I think we are it doesn't matter where we're seeded," Auld said. "It's more a matter of pride. What we've got to realize now is that we've had a good season and everyone is playing well, even in some of our losses. We have to make sure that the players don't get down mentally because of this."

Missy Jeffrey and Michele Toye were the only players to practice on Thursday. The others will wait until Monday to practice again.
"The only thing that's going to cure us is complete rest," Auld said.
SIU-C plays Southwest Missouri State, Drake, Wichita State and Northern Iowa next weekend, the final weekend of action before the conference tournament.
