Board to vote on parking expansion

By Katie Morrison
Administration Reporter

The SIU Board of Trustees next week will vote on expanding and resurfacing of three campus parking lots in an effort to provide more parking.

According to a board agenda, lots proposed for renovation are: Lot 19, behind and east of the Personnel Office; Lot 39, south of the Biological Sciences Building and west of the Agriculture Building and Lot 63, east of the School of Law.

If approved, the construction is slated to be finished by August 1994.

Merilyn Hogan, SIUC coordinator of parking and traffic, said there are not enough parking spaces on campus to accommodate students and faculty.

Hogan said officials have not yet determined which spaces will be red or blue, but there is more of a demand for red.

"Most of the spaces will probably be red," she said.

During the 1992-93 school year, 12,060 stickers were sold to students and 2,879 to faculty.

Vice President for Administration James Tweedy said the project, estimated at $413,000 with funds coming from parking decal sales and parking fines, will add 302 spaces.

Tweedy said parking needs to be adjusted to accommodate the new Biological Sciences Building before construction is finished at the end of this year.

Tweedy said Lot 19 will add 32 spaces, Lot 39 will add 241 and Lot 63 will add 70.

The estimated cost of each space, including the placing of parking-lot lighting, is about $1,000 — which is reasonable, Tweedy said.

Last spring, the University added 186 spaces — costing $282,871.

Holocaust advertisement stirs campus opinion

Committee stands by ideology; paper evaluates oversight

By Jamie Madigan
Special Assignment Reporter

A paid advertisement published Thursday in the Daily Egyptian denying the existence of gas chambers during the Holocaust has caused objections on campus.

The Committee for Open Debate on the Holocaust from California paid for the advertisement, titled "A Revisionist Challenge to the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum."

Text of the advertisement states there is no evidence gas chambers were ever built or used by the Germans in World War II.

Cathy Hagler, Daily Egyptian business manager, said controversial advertisements normally go before a committee of students from the newspaper for evaluation.

"Because of an oversight, that didn't happen (this time)," she said.

Daily Egyptian policy states the newspaper will not knowingly accept an advertisement which "encourages discrimination against any individual or group on basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, religion, national origin, or disability."

Hagler said the committee met Thursday to evaluate the advertisement, and the majority ruled to allow it to run again if it were submitted.

The Daily Egyptian has accepted ads from the group in the past.

Numerous phone calls were received in reaction to the advertisement, and Hagler said she took 10 herself in the first hour she worked. The total number of phone calls was not known.

Revisionist committee Director

Bradley Smith, author of the advertisement, said he does not believe the existence of the gas chambers can be proven. In the advertisement, he invites people to submit solid evidence.

Smith said he would require one of two types of proof to be convinced of its existence.

"Generally speaking, I would accept war-time generation documents or physical remains," he said in a phone interview Thursday.

Smith said people have a duty to question the existence of these gas chambers.

"There's a moral issue involved," he said. "The museum implies an

Teamsters strike continues to disable trucking industry

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—A strike by at least 75,000 Teamsters drivers and dock workers kept 22 trucking companies shut down a second day Thursday, and no new negotiations were scheduled to try to end the deadlock.

The Teamsters, torn recently by bitter internal feuding on other union issues, maintained a unified front on the strike, keeping all of the trucking companies' facilities closed from coast to coast.

In a move that could enable as many as 13,000 of the strikers to return to work, however, union leaders are expected to decide Friday whether to negotiate interim agreements with 17 of the smaller trucking companies.

Those companies — many of them financially troubled — were freed Wednesday by Trucking Management Inc., the negotiating arm for the 22 employees, to cut deals that would keep them operating.

They would be obligated, however, to accept whatever new master freight contract eventually is reached with the Teamsters by the five other companies: Yellow Freight Systems, Consolidated Freightways, Roadway Express, Churchill Truck Lines and ABE Freight System.

With no negotiations taking place for a second consecutive day, the Teamsters and TMI resorted to tossing barbs at each other.

TMI spokesman Sam Wang said the Teamsters "still refuse to discuss the key elements of our proposals," including the trucking companies' bid to add lower-paid, part-time workers and to take away the union's right to strike over unresolved grievances.

Women warriors needed for future

Asian-American psychologist Reiko True encounters stereotypes about her culture daily, and says she would like to see a new image popularized: that of a woman warrior.

True spoke Thursday in Faneer Hall to about 25 people about problems facing Asian Americans.

Asian-American women often are viewed as subservient wives, hard-working professionals, sex objects or mean-spirited dragon ladies, she said. None of these perceptions necessarily are accurate.

Much diversity exists among Asian Americans and the needs of this segment of the population sometimes are different than that of Caucasians, True said.

While working in a mental health clinic in California, True noticed that officials not only were failing to address the unique needs of Asian Americans, but they did not even seem aware a problem existed.

Cultural differences in attitudes toward disciplining children led to confrontations between social workers and parents. Higher rates of colon cancer in Asian-American females were ignored by doctors. The language barrier and the lack of bilingual health professionals, social workers and psychologists in the region contributed to the problem, she said.

U.S. DIPLOMAT GETS COLD SHOULDER IN INDIA — NEW DELHI, India — Deputy Secretary of State Strobe Talbott opened talks Thursday on his first overseas trip as America's No. 2 diplomat, but India and Pakistan gave a frigid welcome to proposals he carried for reducing the danger of nuclear war between them. Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, citing national honor, said she could never agree to constrain her country's "peaceful nuclear program," if India weren't made to do the same. In New Delhi, where Talbott met with India's foreign and finance ministers, government officials all but ruled out any two-country arrangement with Pakistan for an end to fissile materials production or verification inspections.

BOSNIAN CEASE FIRE BREAKING DOWN — SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Angered by Western indifference to the biggest Serb rebel offensive in months, the Muslim-led government refused Thursday to discuss a proposed U.N. cease-fire with its enemies while they continued attacking the threatened eastern enclave of Gorazde. But the Bosnian government did announce a 24-hour unilateral cease-fire as a "good will gesture," according to local media; U.N. sources cautioned that a lasting truce would only come out of negotiations between the two sides' military leaders.

7 ISRAELIS KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE BOMBING — JERUSALEM — A car packed with high explosives, propane gas and nails driven by a Palestinian suicide bomber exploded near a commuter bus Wednesday as it stopped for students in northern Israel, killing at least seven Israelis as well as the car's driver and injuring 45 others. Israeli police said Hamas, a radical Palestinian fundamentalist group, claimed responsibility for Wednesday's explosion, which sent pieces of the bus, car and their occupants flying dozens of yards in the sleepy blue-collar town of Afula.

CHARGES DROPPED AGAINST FORMER NAZI — BONN, Germany — Prosecutors Thursday dropped a criminal investigation of Franz Schoenhuber, a former Waffen-SS officer and radical right leader who had publicly blamed Jewish leaders for a rise in anti-Semitism in Germany. The public prosecutor's office in Landslut, in the southern state of Bavaria, said Schoenhuber's verbal attack on leaders of the Central Council of Jews, Ignatz Bubis and Michel Friedman, was directed at two public figures and could not be interpreted as a general incitement to race hatred—a crime in Germany.

HOUSE MEMBERS EXPECTED TO RETIRE — WASHINGTON — Rep. J. Roy Rowland, D-Ga., one of two physicians in Congress and a leader in the House on health issues, Thursday announced he would retire at year's end to return to private life. The announcement from Rowland, 68, raised to 43 the number of House members retiring or leaving to seek higher office. The voluntary departures have kept close to the 1992 pace, when redistricting and the House Bank scandal contributed to a postwar record 65 lawmakers leaving. As of April 9, 1992, 47 House members had decided to quit. Twenty-five Democrats and 18 Republicans have announced they will not seek re-election this year.

SOLDIERS STILL USED IN MEDICAL TESTING — THE BALTIMORE SUN — Today, the Army's infectious disease research institute in Frederick, Md., is still using soldiers to test new vaccines for malaria, hepatitis dengue fever and other exotic diseases. But the human testing program is subject to greater review than its predecessor of 20 years ago. Since 1975, there have been about 120 medical research projects with a need for an estimated 2,520 volunteers.

English Day honors work of local standouts example of the United States' obsession with money dominating values.

Before 1960, teams played 154 games a year, so records set during that time, such as Babe Ruth's 60 out-of-the-park home runs in a single season, are more impressive to baseball fans than subsequent players' accomplishments, Tietz said.

In 1960, team owners decided to extend baseball season to include 162 games to make more money, but the value of players' achievements was lessened by the expansion because records set after the 154th game are not valid in fans' minds, Tietz said.

"It (baseball) was a source of shared values (before 1960)," he said.

The owners of the game didn't know that the value of the game was consistency.

"They thought it was about money. You can't buy value."

After Tietz's keynote address, SIUC English department Chairman Richard Peterson and other department officials presented awards to University and local high-school students for excellence in English.

SIUC English professor Beth Lordan said the event began in 1990 as a way to honor high-school students and instructors who succeed in English and encourage them to continue in the field.

Author remembered for works

A poet, who by today's standards might be difficult for some to read, was the topic of a lecture given Thursday as part of English Day.

Barbara Hardy, a professor emerita from the Royal Holloway College at the University of London who has written numerous works about nineteenth century British fiction, delivered her views of D.H. Lawrence's poetry last night.

Hardy was the guest speaker at the 14th Harry T. Moore Memorial Lecture.

Moore was an SIUC faculty member who devoted his time to the study of D.H. Lawrence.

"He (D.H. Lawrence) was by no means politically correct — in some (ways) he was deplorably sexist and deplorably racist," she said.

Hardy discussed the theme of thresholds and how they relate to both human existence and to Lawrence's work.

learned about oral health and its importance. The focus this year was "Oral Health for a Healthy Life."

Students began their journey through oral health by stepping into a grant mouth located at the Ballroom Entrance.

Students then learned about how cavities form and what different types of foods, especially sweets, can do to teeth.

Cindy Grisham, a senior in dental hygiene from Raleigh, and Shari Doyle, a senior in dental hygiene from Zeigler, showed students how plaque and sugar form acid on teeth. Acid breaks down tooth enamel, and therefore, the tooth.

"It's okay to eat some sweets as long as you brush afterwards," Grisham told the children.

Brushing techniques were the focus of the next station where children sang songs about the importance of brushing.

"Exercise your gums" was the focus of the next station, where children learned about different flossing techniques.

Children then were taught how to receive extra protection from fluoride and were given a fluoride treatment.

Edyta Janczak, a senior in dental hygiene from Cairo, told students fluoride can be found in water, toothpaste and other polishing agents.

Janczak and Johnson also told students that when they go to the dentist, the fluoride treatment they receive may be in a different form, such as a gel, but whether a liquid

The biggest challenge of a student worker is doing the job of a professional, but meeting that goal makes the job rewarding, says Stephanie Lemmons, the 1994 SIUC Student Employee of the Year.

Lemmons, a senior in radio/television from Salem, was recognized for her work in broadcasting services Thursday at a reception in the Student Center video lounge that honored 43 nominated student workers.

Donna Williams, coordinator for the fifth annual student employee ceremony, said Lemmons, who was awarded a plaque and $200 scholarship, Finalists' supervisors commended their employees for their diligence and dedication. All nominees received a certificate and letter of congratulations from SIUC.

Text rental, good idea complicated process

A 20-YEAR-OLD DEBATE WAS REHASHED THIS week by USG Senators John Shull and Jami Bathon. The two proposed SIUC reincorporate a book rental system that would presumably save students money.

As proposed, the rental system would allow students to pay a set fee each semester for their books and then return them at the semester's end with an option to buy the texts. Students would pay an amount, which would be determined later, for each semester hour registered for as part of their regular fees.

The proposal is a good idea, but needs to address several problems and be implemented gradually into selected academic programs as a way of easing the University into the new system.

UNTIL 1975 STUDENTS RENTED BOOKS FROM the University. That year the system was changed under faculty pressure because of several problems caused by book rental. Those problems have not changed.

First, there would be a turnover rate of about two to three years for each text. Each textbook, after it has been chosen for a particular course, would have to be used for at least two or three years before it could be replaced with an updated version. This could have implications for the quality of education offered by SIUC if instructors are forced to use out-of-date texts.

Shull and Bathon proposed a system of subsidized pamphlets, where updates to texts would be offered in pamphlet form, to remedy this problem.

Another problem is the restraints that would be imposed upon instructors. Because the system would require specific texts be mandated to a course, instructors would not have the liberty of choosing which texts best suit their teaching agenda and style. Again, this may affect education quality by limiting the diversity of material available to students.

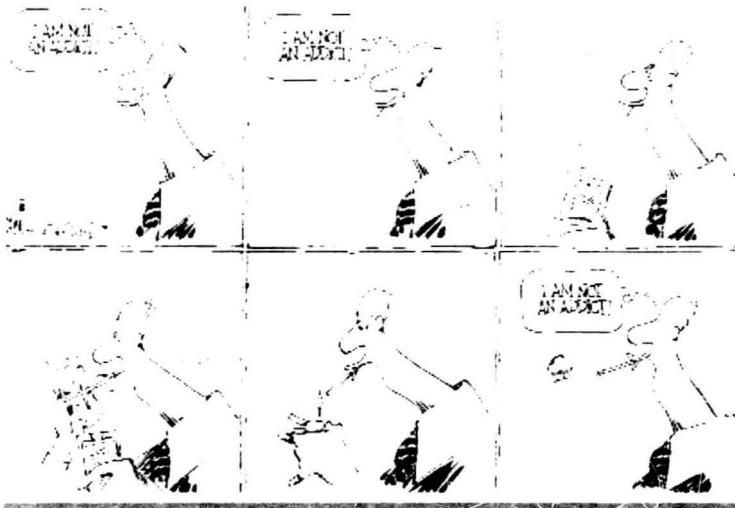

The final price students would pay may not be considerably cheaper. It is possible the books chosen for a class would be augmented with ancillary materials that would not be included in the fee. The materials would be available at book stores and printing companies outside of the university system and would significantly add to the rental fee.

These problems will require attention if the rental system is to be effective.

TO LESSEN THE IMPACT OF SUCH A CHANGE and to monitor its effects, the program must be implemented gradually.

Certain academic programs, ones traditionally not augmented with new information very often, should be the first to try the rental system. If the transition takes place smoothly, it can then be applied to other programs.

WITH THE COST OF HIGHER EDUCATION increasing, any reasonable program to save students money is good. But, such an extensive change in the operation of the University must be made carefully and can not jeopardize the schools quality of education.

SIUC's motorcycle safety class invaluable, risks not worth injury

Viewpoint
Dean Weaver
Special Assignment
Reporter

It was a cold October night on a desolate, two-lane highway. The engine screamed between my legs, hesitating only long enough for a flick of the shift lever.

As the front tire thined with the pavement, the yellow line swung left.

A hard lean on the bars, but not enough to bring the bike on through the corner. The bottomless ditch approached. Thoughts raced through my head as I began to slide.

"Would anyone find me? What would they say to my girlfriends, my parents? Why was this happening to me?" I prayed for survival.

"Are you all right out there?" A woman's voice shouted in the distance.

I crawled out of the ditch, knees shaking hard from adrenaline.

"Sure, no problem," I replied.

I glanced down and discovered the machine that seconds before had been underneath me was now buried in a pile of gravel and mud five feet below me.

It was that night when I made up my mind to enroll in the Illinois Cycle Rider Safety Training Program at SIUC this spring.

The free program certified by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, with any luck, could teach me how to avoid a similar mistake in the future.

I know what most riders think, it will not happen to me because I know what I am doing.

Before my headlight beam shone into a group of trees on that sharp curve, I thought I never would have to deal with the harsh reality of a wreck.

I thought I was riding the motorcycle within my abilities. I already had passed an Motorcycle Safety Foundation certified course three years earlier.

I thought the thousand miles on my bike had been enough to familiarize myself with the machine.

I was wrong.

I easily could have lost my life for making one mistake.

I was lucky.

My helmet, leather jacket and boots, along with my jeans, saved the gravel from removing my skin as it did the bike's paint.

But what happens when the road removes more than skin? What happens to the girlfriends and parents of those not so lucky?

Until this sobering ride, I never realized the importance of motorcycle education. The course I completed last weekend was 20 hours well spent.

The instructors were enthusiastic and truly cared about teaching future riders how to reduce their risk of injury.

The course allowed me to practice proper cornering techniques, along with swerving and braking while on a motorcycle.

The instructors offered suggestions to me and other students to help us improve our skills.

Riding skills exercise No. 21 is selecting a safe entry speed and then accelerating through a corner.

It is much easier learning on a driving range surrounded by instructors than teaching yourself late one night on a country road.

If I would have looked through the curve, I might have saved myself many repair costs.

"I easily could have lost my life for making one mistake"

—Dean Weaver

Hands-on training, combined with classroom instruction, could hone the skills of even the most experienced rider.

For those who are experienced, shorter experienced rider courses are offered.

I encourage motorcyclists to take time out before they ride to think about the risk they are taking.

A few hours of training and wearing the proper riding gear could save lives.

Before you ride, ask yourself if you are willing to sacrifice everything you have worked for and everything you wish for, just for one joyride.

northeast corner of the Arena 92.

Other improvements last year included resurfacing a parking lot at Southern Hills apartments and reshaping part of the Arena and Grand Avenue/South Washington lots.

Twedy said repairing, expanding and resurfacing campus parking lots are his priorities in the last two years and the University tries to make improvements each year.

The SIUC Physical Plant determines which lots are best for expansion and which need resurfacing, Twedy said.

"Usually the Physical Plant comes up with more than we can fund, so we have to narrow it down," he said.

However, limited space to expand proposes a problem, Twedy said.

"The general consensus for most people is they hate to see green areas go for parking," he said.

"The next step is to go up, but parking structures are more expensive to construct and there is also problems with security."

"My initial reaction is that it's patently false," he said.

"The Nazis kept records of concentration camps — it's well documented. There's no rebuttal that's possible — talk to the people that survived the Holocaust."

Gross, an SIUC law professor, said it is difficult to get into the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C., because there always are many visitors.

"Obviously the purpose (of the museum) is to commemorate the people who died," he said.

"There's a danger — we don't want to repeat (the Holocaust.) What if the advertisement does is rub salt in the wounds and helps to foster Anti-Semitism."

Donald Detwiler, professor of history specializing in World War II, said researchers and historians have documented the Holocaust more than any other event.

He is the co-author of an 18-volume study of the Holocaust and said one volume addresses the existence of the extermination camps.

Brad Striegel, a senior in Administration of Justice, said he disagrees with the advertisement.

"I'm a history minor and a World War II buff," he said.

"I know it happened. I've seen pictures and I have relatives (who were in the war.) The Jews were gassed — that's the truth."

President John C. Guyon.

Jean Paratore, associate vice president for Student Affairs, said student workers are the people who make a difference in the perception that others have of the University.

Lemmons said she was shocked she had received the award.

Lemmons' supervisor, Jay Pearce, news and public affairs director for Broadcasting Services, said he would like to have five employees like Lemmons.

Lemmons works for WSIU-TV as a producer, reporter and anchor. She also volunteers to proof anchor and report for the SIU Report on WSIU-TV once a week.

Lemmons also serves as president of the SIUC chapter of Illinois Student News Broadcasting Association, the most active chapter in the state, Pearce said.

Lemmons generally reports city government news for the morning edition of WSIU-FM. Pearce said she is an excellent mentor for student volunteers in the broadcasting service and maintains a 4.0 grade-point average.

Beyond her work, Lemmons volunteers her free time to helping with a horseback-riding program in Saline County, a program designed to encourage individuals with disabilities.

with families," she said. "Not many people had cars, so everyone shopped at the neighborhood groceries."

Former SIUC student Mary Smith has worked at the store for 40 years. She started working there as a student, helping the butcher wrap meat and now she does bookkeeping for Spries.

"When I first started, we had lots and lots of customers, many who worked on the railroads," she said. "As time went by, though, the bigger chains came into town, the railroad wasn't being worked on as much, and fewer customers came in, so we had to downsize."

Spries said she still bumps into customers who have shopped at the store for 59 years, but these occasions are becoming less frequent.

"We've been here a long time," she said. "Many of our regular customers over the years are no longer with us."

Spries said she still gets enough customers to stay in business.

"We do real good still kids from the school and the college come in all the time," she said.

Music has environmental message

By Stephanie Moletti
Environmental Reporter

Musician Jack Kaufmann gets his message across by featuring popular tunes and original compositions with the underlying theme of protecting the environment.

Kaufmann will perform his music/multi-media presentation with a waste-deduction twist at 7 p.m. tonight in the Library Auditorium in the basement of Morris Library. The presentation is free and open to the public.

Kaufmann challenges the audience to "think globally and act locally." He uses his voice, combined with guitar, percussion and keyboard skills, to unveil various environmental topics. He will discuss endangered species, rainforests and peace with the global environment.

"My whole point is to motivate and inspire the audience," Kaufmann said. "There's a lot of good information out there that comes in boring lectures. So I have my music with a message."

Kaufmann, 36, has performed for schools, conferences and conventions for the past four or five years. He always has wanted to do music and his environmental concerns began in the '70s when the topic became more publicized.

Last summer, he recorded his first ecospiritual album, "Sign of the Times." The album has nine tunes all devoted to stewardship, Kaufmann said.

The album is available for $10 at environmental conscious stores. Copies also will be available after the performance tonight.

Kaufmann said people need to look at conservation as something that outlives themselves.

He said he teaches the "common sense stuff" and does not identify himself with either the extreme left or ultra right of politics.

"Being an environmentalist, I get a lot of stereotypes," he said. "I'm not the bleeding heart liberal, but I'm certainly not the extreme right. I'm a conservative environmentalist when it comes to conservation."

Kaufmann said groups need to combine powers and look at the world together.

"This is a process and it doesn't just happen overnight," Kaufmann said.

Kathy O'Rourke, a member of the health education honorary, Eta Sigma Gamma, said Kaufmann symbolizes the link between health and environment.

"Health is not just the absence of disease, it's your surroundings and emotions as well," O'Rourke said.

Kaufmann received his bachelor's and master's degrees in environmental health and health education at Illinois State University, where he taught Man and Environment.

He also served as a faculty member of the National Wildlife Federation's Conservation Summits and is the former manager of Operation Recycle, a community recycling center in Bloomington.

Film's humor stirs conflict

By Kyle J. Chapman
Entertainment Reporter

"The Wedding Banquet" is a cinematic tale of one man's most unusual conflict with his traditional Chinese heritage and his desire to come reveal his homosexuality.

The collision of contemporary San Francisco and traditional Chinese culture is bound to be funny, moving and filled with contemporary problems facing U.S. society, according to one SIUC theater student.

The film is based on the true story of a man who is a friend of the film's director Ang Lee.

Kevin Mace, a graduate student in theater, said the film was an interesting look at the gay world and how different people fit into it.

"I think it's a very positive portrayal of Chinese Americans. It's a very funny portrayal of the gay world as well," Mace said. "The film is about a traditional Chinese family and the oldest son is in conflict with that through his homosexuality."

Wang Tung, star of the film, is a successful real-estate entrepreneur who has attained wealth, health and a long-term relationship with an American man. Although far from home, Tung is living the life he always has wanted.

The only thing standing between Tung and true happiness is the pressure from his parents, who do not know that he is homosexual. They want him to marry a Taiwanese girl and start a family.

Simon's solution to his problem makes for an unusually funny and moving film, according to two SIUC students.

Mace said the film's director did a good job of mixing the contradictions of traditional Chinese culture the contemporary U.S. society.

The film was nominated for a 1993 Academy Award in the category of Best Foreign Film.

SIUC student Amy Brown, a senior in theater, said overall the film gives new insight into a different culture.

The film will play at 7 and 9:30 p.m. tonight and Saturday in the Student Center Auditorium. Admission is $1.

license pays an annual license fee. $8 of this goes directly to the Illinois motorcycle rider program," he said.

The newsletter showed that Illinois leads the other states in revenue for the program with a $1.6 million budget.

Ashner said that more riders should take the course and see what they are paying for when they pay for their license.

"The Illinois Department of Transportation gives us enough funding to teach 36 students during each of the 28 classes for beginners, more people could be benefiting from this course," Ashner said.

Starkey said they have a wide range of people experienced and inexperienced take the beginning class for many reasons.

"Our classes include people who have never ridden, people who do not want to take the Secretary of State's test, people who have wrecked and people who want insurance discounts," Starkey said.

Ashner said that in addition to the 20 hour Motorcycle Ride: Course - Riding and Street Skills, there will also be three Experienced Rider Courses for riders who own their own motorcycle and have at least one year or 1,000 miles experience.

Driving strategies offered by course

By Aleksandra Macys
Special Assignment Reporter

Roll, roll, roll, keep your back straight, keep your head and eyes up, lean, press, stop, regroup — these sound like the commands of a drill sergeant, but are the commands motorcycle rider instructors shout at students who take the free motorcycler course offered at SIUC.

Many people choose to ride motorcycles instead of driving a car for reasons such as good fuel mileage and easy parking access, but instructors teach students motorcycles also are more vulnerable and safety is an important consideration.

The Southern Illinois Cycle Rider Safety Training Program offered at SIUC, the regional headquarters, teaches beginners and experienced riders about different aspects of motorcycle riding — from selecting a motorcycle to applying street strategies.

Through classroom and hands-on experience, instructors also teach students about motorcycle controls and their uses as well as basic riding skills such as turning, shifting and stopping.

The 20-hour course begins with classroom instruction about safety — students are taught why they should wear protective gear such as helmets.

Films and discussions about safety and its importance are presented. Eight hours of the course is spent in the classroom and 12 hours on the range, located across from the campus beach.

Students are then taught about motorcycles in general, from different types to the primary motorcycle controls. Most course time is spent on motorcycles so students get a true feeling of what it is like to ride one.

Ken Taylor, a senior in electrical engineering technology from Dwight, has been a course instructor since Mar. 1993. He said he loves riding and teaching and hopes he can save lives by sharing his knowledge.

"Knowledge is no good if you don't share it," he said.

Taylor began riding motorcycles in 1988 when he was stationed with the U.S. Navy in Bermuda. He said people are much more aware of motorcyclists there because they are the major form of transportation.

Taylor began teaching the course because he said he wanted to give solutions instead of criticizing — it makes the course rewarding despite long hours and working weekends, he said. He said the biggest disadvantage was less riding time on his Honda Nighthawk.

He said the course is an excellent start, but like any skill, people need to practice.

"Anything else we could teach in the class would just build on the skills we teach," he said.

Instructor Scott Haas, who graduated from SIUC in 1993, has taught the course since 1992. He said the course prepares beginning and experienced riders for street situations.

"Overall, the course teaches the basics of

Commitment to safety motorcycle rider's key

By Dean Weaver
Special Assignment Reporter

SIUC could be considered one of the birth places of motorcycle-rider education.

Twenty-five years later a lot has changed, but educators' commitment to safety has not.

Eddie (Skip) Starkey, assistant coordinator for the Southern Illinois Cycle Rider Safety Training Program, said Larry Lindauer, former SIUC professor of health education, developed his own curriculum to teach students how to operate a motorcycle safely.

Starkey said Lindauer was a pioneer in cycle safety, and his efforts helped to develop the first nationally recognized teaching curriculum.

The course originally was taught in the Arena parking lot in 1969, but by the early 1970s SIUC had the largest motorcycle range in Illinois.

Michael Ashner, coordinator of the SIUC rider program, said it is this range that allows the SIUC regional training center to train so many students.

Ashner said 1,600 to 1,700 students are trained by SIUC every year and while other driving ranges allow a maximum of 12 students, SIUC's can train 36 at one time.

SIUC's program has been certified by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation since it began in 1973, but did not always strictly adhere to the foundations teaching format, Starkey said.

The foundation is a national non-profit organization whose purpose is to improve the safety of motorcyclists through rider education.

Ashner said when SIUC began motorcycle training there was no nationally recognized organization like the foundation and the only instructor was Lindauer.

Today SIUC is one of four regional centers in the state for rider education. The Southern Illinois region encompasses 44 counties with 15 sites for rider education.

Starkey said the region included 49 foundation-certified instructors, but 30 to 40 percent of students take the class on campus.

Ashner said Lindauer's early contributions helped Illinois get in at the ground level of motorcycle training, and today the state is recognized as a leader in the nation in motorcycle safety education.

A 1994 foundation newsletter said there are 42 states that have foundation-certified programs, but many are not funded by the state. In fact, Illinois is the only state that offers the MSF certified courses for free.

Ashner said the cost for the 20-hour course in some states exceeds $100, but in Illinois all riders pay for the course through the motorcycle-license registration fee.

"Every person who has a motorcycle riding. "Everyone learns something different in the course," Haas said. For example, an experienced rider may learn how to brake more effectively."

Wade Fosky from Anna said he learned how to more effectively take a curve and how to brake while in a curve.

He said he recommends the course to novice and experienced riders.

Haas said he enjoys passing along the enjoyment of motorcycle riding, but does not like working in the heat, cold and rain.

He said he personally benefits by teaching the course because it helps him keep up with his riding skills.

"Every time I teach, I practice my skills," he said.

Both Taylor and Haas said they follow what they teach by wearing helmets and other safety gear such as over-the-ankle footwear, long pants and gloves.

If an instructor is caught not wearing protective gear, certification to teach the course can be taken away.

Taylor said most wore protective gear before they became instructors.

Instructors are taught how to teach the course by taking HED 446, offered in the spring semester at SIUC.

Program coordinators teach sections of the program as they will be presented to MRC students.

The students in the class then teach the different sections to each other.

Since the class is offered in the spring, it begins with indoor sections and moves to the range sections with warmer weather.

The course and instructors are certified by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, whose goal is to improve the safety of motorcyclists on the nation's streets and highways.

The foundation is a non-profit organization that has programs in rider education, licensing improvement, public information and statistics.

According to the foundation, over 90 percent of the motorcycle riders involved in accidents were self-taught or learned from family and friends.

Goreville resident Curtis Craig said he took the class because he wanted to learn how to operate a motorcycle safely.

"I wanted to know what to do in an emergency," he said.

Craig said the class was informative and helpful and the instructors were excellent.

Francesca Murrura, a graduate student in Math from southern Italy, said the instructors were good and she took the class for fun. She said the class began slow, but picked up towards the end.

Taylor said the course is a good way for people to find out if motorcycling is something they would like to pursue.

People who want to get their motorcycle license must pass a knowledge and skills test.

Those who do not pass will not receive a course completion card.

Patrick Wallace from Metropolis took the course, but failed to pass the skills test. He said he was disappointed, but learned a lot.

"I wish I would have passed the class, but considering I've never ridden a motorcycle, I'm not surprised that I didn't," he said.

Teo Mestas from Johnston City was involved in an accident while taking the course, the result of which was a possible torn ligament in his knee.

He said he still recommends the course to people and has not changed his thoughts about motorcycling.

Instructors said those who pass the course and want to purchase a motorcycle should carefully consider what type of bike they buy.

They suggest people shop around to find something that fits their size and needs.

"When you decide to buy a bike, think about the size. It's probably not a good idea to get a sport bike with 1,000 cc's for your first bike," Haas said.

People interested in more information about the course can call 1-800-642-9589 or 453-2877.

"When you get ranked 22 out of 290-some teams in the country, you have to be pleased with that kind of recognition," Cornell said. "This poll is based on how well you would do if it was just your school against another school just on a one-on-one basis."

In the women's final poll, there were three MVC teams ranked in the Top 25 - Illinois State at 16, Indiana State right behind the Redbirds at 19 and the Salukis just about closing out the poll at 24.

Women's head coach Don DeNoon said he is pleased with the way the MVC has had a sudden impact on the track and field world.

"Our conference is really starting to gain a lot of notoriety," DeNoon said. "The conference is getting known better by having a lot of national qualifiers."

Coach DeNoon also added that he felt the Salukis could have been ranked higher, but he doesn't use the rankings as a way to judge his team.

"I thought we would be ranked higher because of the way we run our meets," DeNoon said. "By having every event filled, we have the advantage of scoring in every event. Some teams compete strictly on individual performance."

The teams ranked in the upper-ten of the Coaches Poll are teams that got the recruiting needed to win national championships. DeNoon added that when recruiting an athlete over the phone and he says that he is the coach at Southern Illinois University they aren't exactly sure where SIUC is, as opposed to a school like LSU or USC or some other three letter school, where the student is more familiar with the institution they are dealing with.

not scoring in double-digits, he was busy racking up 118 assists, giving him 369 for his career to tie with former Saluki Kai Nurnberger as the No. 2 all-time assist leader.

And speaking of leaders, Timmons broke his way into the top 15 players in the nation ranking 14th with a 60 percent field goal percentage.

Timmons picked up his offensive strength from the 50.6 percentage he had last year when he averaged 8.8 points a game as a sophomore. He averaged 8.7 as a freshman.

This season Timmons averaged 14.7 points a game.

Who is joining the likes of Timmons in the top 15? - only final four MVP Corliss Williamson and Illinois star Dean Thomas, to name a couple.

The Salukis topped all of their opponents this season in field goal percentage (.488/.433), 3-point field goal percentage (.357/.316), free throw percentage (.678/.655) and total points average (79.0/70.9).

Their field goal percentage and total points percentage has steadily gone up in the past three seasons, giving the indication that the team is moving that way as well.

Head coach Rich Herrin has been leading the long climb up since he took over the Salukis for the 1985-86 season when the team went 8-20 - a far cry from today's mark of 23-7, giving them three consecutive 20-game win seasons and a total of five in the last six.

The Salukis now have two NCAA appearances under their belt since SIUC's last previous trip in 1976. The only thing they have yet to accomplish is a win at the Big Dance.

The way things look to date, that achievement might not be too far away.

Southwest Missouri State at Carbondale

Offense continues, Dawgs win 7-1

By Grant Deady
Sports Reporter

If the Saluki baseball team read a sign before every game that said 'Welcome to the Bluegrass State,' SIUC may not lose another contest this season.

The Dawgs continued their dominance of our neighbors to the south Thursday by traveling to Kentucky and knocking off Murray State, 7-1. The victory comes on the heels of Tuesday's triumph in Lexington, Ky., over the UK Wildcats, 15-14.

SIUC (15-11) wasted no time

46th batter hit by pitch breaks SIUC record against the Racers and jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the top of the first inning.

The rally began with two outs and nobody on base when Dan Esplin reached first on an error by MSU's shortstop.

Pete Schlosser and Clint Smothers followed Esplin by both getting beamed to load the bases for Saluki catcher Dave Taylor.

Taylor came through with a two RBI single to right that was misplayed by the Racers left fielder and allowed Smothers to score also, putting the Dawgs up 3-0.

Jason Smith then capped off the inning when he singled to center, scoring Taylor to increase SIUC's lead to 4-0. Murray struck back with its only run of the game in the bottom of the first when Saluki starter Jason Kline walked in a run with the bases loaded.

SIUC's offense got back on track in the third when Esplin bunt singled to lead off the inning.

Schlosser then collected an RBI triple off the fence to score Esplin and was knocked in himself off an infield grounder by Smothers giving the Salukis a 6-1 edge.

SIUC added an insurance run in the seventh when Esplin made his way around the bases after being hit by a pitch and scored on a single by Smothers.

Kline (4-1) ended up going the distance for the Salukis, yielding just seven hits and two walks, while striking out five.

"Kline did a great job keeping Murray's hitters off stride," Saluki head coach Sam Riegleman said. "He continues to be a solid pitcher for us."

The Dawgs were able to break a school record during Thursday's game when the 46th batter of the season was hit by a pitch. The old record of 45 was set last season in 51 games, but this seasons' squad managed to shatter it after just 26 contests this spring.

SIUC will now head back into Missouri Valley Conference action as Southwest Missouri State plays host to the Dawgs in a three game series beginning Saturday.

Track teams grab Top 25 poll ranking

By James J. Fares
Sports Reporter

Arkansas had to win a national title to gain respect from the rest of the country for its work at the Final Four. But recognition in the NCAA track and field circle comes without having to plow through a 64-team tournament.

The SIUC men's and women's track and field teams are one up on the Razorbacks as the two teams did not need to endure quite that much in order to gain respect.

Both teams have been voted in the top 25 of the USTCA/T&FN Division I Coaches Dual Poll.

In the men's final poll, the Salukis ranked out at No. 22 behind Missouri Valley Conference rival Indiana State, who topped out at eighteen.

With the works of the three musketeers, Garth Akal, Cameron Wright and Brian Miller (red-shirted for outdoor season) performing up to their respective capabilities, the Salukis are a sure bet to move up in the rankings and in the conference.

Men's head coach Bill Cornell said it is quite an accomplishment for the Salukis and might even be a real confidence booster for the team.

Salukis extend win streak, down SEMO, 6-3, 10-5

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

After two days of rain and two reschedulings the SIUC softball team finally took on Southeast Missouri State.

It was worth the wait for the Salukis as they downed SEMO 6-3 and 10-5 to extend their winning streak to nine games.

In the first game of the twinbill, the Salukis used a five-run first inning to hold off the Otahkians.

Jami Koss started things with a single and Jenny Klotz followed by reaching on an error. Becky Lis and Jamie Schutteck each hit a fielder's choice before Christine Knotts ripped an rbi single to score Klotz. Right-fielder Mario Pecoraro followed with the big hit, a three-run triple. Pecoraro would close out the scoring by trotting home on a wild pitch.

With two outs in the fifth, the Salukis loaded the bases as Schutteck and Pecoraro hit back-to-back singles and Mandy Miller walked. Andrea Pierson proceeded to get beamed in the helmet to force in Schutteck with the Salukis' sixth run. Schutteck went the distance to push her record to 6-2.

In game two, the Salukis could not get the key hits as they stranded nine runners in the first five innings. They were awakened when the Otahkians erased the Salukis 4-2 lead with a three-run sixth climaxed by Jodi Smith's triple.

With their winning streak on the line, the Salukis came alive in the bottom of the sixth with a six run frame. Lis singled sharply to left and Wilson reached when the Otahkians left-fielder dropped her fly ball. A wild pitch moved the runners up and Schutteck followed with a two-run single to recapture the lead for the Salukis for good.

Tania Meier picked up the win in relief of Buffy Blust to push her record to 6-3.

The Salukis begin their pursuit of a MVC crown today with a doubleheader versus No. 21 Illinois State at 3 p.m. On Saturday, the Salukis continue the pursuit with two contests with Bradley at noon. All games are at SIUC.

Teamwork, hot shooting led to Salukis' success

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Reporter

Saluki basketball fans have had the opportunity to watch their team go to the Big Dance for two consecutive years now, taking part in the madness that only 64 teams get to experience.

Watching the Dawgs repeat as Missouri Valley Conference champions was just one of the signs indicating that this team is improving with each passing year and better things are to come.

At the end of this year's season (not including the first-round NCAA game) the Salukis became one of the Top-20 shooting teams in the nation, ranking 17th in the nation with a field goal percentage of 49.1.

Analysis

Other teams that joined the Salukis in this category include Duke, North Carolina, Arizona and Michigan.

The Salukis scoring power was inevitable with five starters on the floor who can score consistently and often. One man was not the key this season as scoring in double figures became the standard for the starting five.

Junior Paul Lusk led the way, scoring in double digits in 26 games; joining him was junior Marcus Timmons with 25, sophomore Chris Carr with 23, senior Mirko Pavlovic with 21 and senior Chris Lowery with 17.

All five Saluki starters scored in double digits seven times this season for a new Saluki basketball record and there were only four times this season when less than three starters scored in double-digits.

At the point when Lowery was
