Students honored for scholastics

ACHIEVEMENT:

Freshman says reception will help him keep up the good work.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Honors Day gives high-achieving students such as Crystal Smith a day in the spotlight, which is something she rarely enjoys.

"I don't do any sports or participate in different activities," Smith, a senior in biological sciences from Glenwood, said. "I concentrate more on my grades, and Honors Day gives me something to look forward to."

As parents and friends looked on at individual ceremonies, 1,810 students with grade point averages of 3.5 or higher were recognized Sunday by their respective colleges and programs during the SIUC Scholastic Honors Day Convocation.

Some students with GPAs of 3.0 or higher receiving scholarships and awards also were honored.

For SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs, Honors Day is one of the most gratifying events on the SIUC campus.

"We usually only hear about students who don't do well, so Honors Day is a chance for parents and faculty to come together and celebrate because a student has done well," he said. "It's probably the second happiest time on campus, with the first being commencement."

"Honors Day is a positive reflection on the students and the school, and it demonstrates to students that if they do well in their studies, there are benefits and rewards for them."

As Herbert Wallace, a freshman in pre-major advisement from East

St. Louis, dined at the reception with his family, he noted how Honors Day will give him an added incentive to excel.

"It's nice to get some type of recognition for doing well in school," he said. "If you get recognized, it gives you something to strive for."

And as Smith received a scholarship and an SIUC Honor Student award at the College of Science's honor ceremony, her boyfriend, Ali Anekwe, applauded her

Dissection of frogs might stop

ANIMAL RIGHTS:

Pending bill would give classes other options.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC undergraduates who object to performing animal dissections in class should have more access to alternatives such as computer simulation, according to an anti-vivisection society.

Mary Margaret Cunniff, the National Anti-Vivisection Society executive director, said an Illinois bill passed by the Senate last month is a step forward for science instruction because it promotes using computer simulation.

"The software available is fantastic," she said. "Studies have shown that students who learn on the alternatives learn better. We want students to be responsible for the body of knowledge, but we do not want them to be punished for not wanting to harm an animal."

Senate Bill 271, which passed the Illinois Senate in March, states that the Illinois Board of Education would have to provide school districts and universities with the names, addresses and contact personnel of agencies that offer instructional materials as alternatives to dissection.

The bill is scheduled to be considered by the Illinois House when it reconvenes Wednesday.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said the bill is a good idea, but he does not oppose animal dissection.

"We've been dissecting animals for years, and I don't think it's been too disturbing to a lot of people," he said. "Sure, it's a little gross, but it's a learning experience."

James Fuller, a sophomore in journalism from Chicago enrolled in a core curriculum science course, said students who do not believe in dissection should be respected.

"I don't think you need to use live animals," he said. "With the type of technology we have today, life-like models and computer programs, it's virtually the same as hands-on experience with an actual animal."

William Muhlach, Zoology Department chairman, said although very few students at SIUC have asked for alternatives to dissection, the department already provides some alternatives in core curriculum courses.

Students who do not want to dissect animals in laboratory classes are given extra text materials to provide the necessary information.

Muhlach said students who do not want to view dissected animals for tests can arrange to take a special exam using models or

The Allyn Building usually is just another location on campus, but on Sunday and Monday, it was converted into a multi-faceted art gallery for art and design students to display their work.

The School of Art and Design's Rickert-Ziebold Award Trust Competition, which awards excellent seniors in art, selected 16 qualified applicants to be part of the annual competition for $20,000 in awards.

On Monday, four students were declared the winners, each receiving $5,000.

One of the award recipients is Erika Fitzgerald, a senior in fiber arts from Oak Park.

"I'm really interested in corsetry, and I make the fabric myself," she said.

"The actual making of the fabric and silk screens and printing could take 12 to 15 hours, and the sewing could take another 10 to 12 hours. It's really labor-intensive work."

Fitzgerald and the other applicants submitted slides of their work, and the judging for the applicants began in March. The finished products were put

Halloween policy may change

OPEN DIALOGUE: University officials say they hope to work closely with new councilmen.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

The new Carbondale City Council could change policies the city instituted, at the recommendation of a task force, to end the Halloween street party.

The 1995 Mayoral/Presidential Task Force on Halloween recommended raising the bar-entry age to 21 year-round and closing the University and the bars on South Illinois Avenue during Halloween weekends until 1999.

It also recommended banning the sale and transportation of beer kegs during Halloween weekends until 1999.

City Manager Jeff Doherty was on the task force and supported its recommendations, which the City Council adopted.

"The task force recommendations are the adopted policy of the city right now," he said. "If that changes in part or in total, by the city, then that action would have to be taken by the City Council as a whole."

Councilman-elect Larry Briggs plans to suggest an ordinance lowering the bar-entry age to 19 when he is sworn in May 6.

Briggs and Councilman-elect John Budstick, who also will be sworn in May 6, support a 19-year-old bar-entry age, and re-elected Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan has said she would consider it.

"There will probably be a lot of discussion. There will probably be a lot of arguments. There will probably be a lot of anger," said Briggs, an associate professor of art and design. "I think it boils down to who has the votes."

Briggs also favors a controlled Halloween celebration.

The task force's report states that raising the bar-entry age would help bring an end to the Halloween street party.

The University had several representatives on the task force that recommended the city's policies on Halloween.

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said the two new council members have shared their opinions with him on the city's Halloween policies.

"We do have what appears to be differing opinions," he said.

However, Beggs said the administration will work with the City Council and students on any proposals.

"The University position is, we will cooperate with and participate in discussions in terms of whatever changes are proposed," he said.

Beggs said if city government wants to change its approach, it could ask the University to become involved.

"Whether that's a task force or whether that's (public) hearings, whatever it may be," he said.

James Tweedy, vice chancellor for Administration, said he will listen to the new council members' suggested changes to the city's policies.

"Obviously, they must have some plan as to how they're going to do it," said Tweedy, a member of the 1995 task force who supported its recommendations.

Briggs said there can be a positive working relationship between the city and University, even if the council reverses one of the task force's recommendations.

"If the votes are there, and I think they are, the bar-entry age will be lowered, hopefully."

IT'S ALL FUN AND GAMES: College of Agriculture event brings departments together.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Battling it out in activities including a hot-dog eating contest and bobbing for apples on Thursday, about 40 faculty members and students of the College of Agriculture found the Ag Olympics a way to unwind.

"It's a way for us to relax after studying and doing projects all semester," Chris Clemons, the Agriculture Student Advisory Council president, said.

Gathering at the Metabolism and Physiology Research Labs for the third year, seven teams including the Dean's Office, Alpha Gamma Rho, Collegiate Future Farmers of America and Block-n-Bridle competed for plaques and certificates. The activities included a timed bobbing-for-apples race, tug-of-war and a hot-dog eating contest.

While contestants ran back and forth with their mouths full of chopped hot dogs, Clemons looked on, hoping no accidents would occur.

"Just don't throw up, that's all I'm asking," he said to his participants. "Don't throw up, please."

ON PATROL: A Carbondale police officer dispels myths about ticket quotas, race.

JOHN LE CHIEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As Carbondale Police officer Heather Morton calls in a traffic stop she is about to make, she prepares for the task at hand. Morton approaches the car with caution, as she does with every stop, and asks the driver for license and registration.

Seconds earlier, Morton witnessed the car run a red light. She cites the driver for running a red light, but the incident becomes more alarming when she discovers that the 16-year-old driver has a small child lying down in the back seat.

"There's a little kid in the back of that car, and she totally blew that light," Morton said.

While this traffic stop may seem routine, Morton said she, and every other police officer, approaches each stop with extreme caution.

"Even though we have a bright light shining on the car, there still exists some anxiety," she said. "If I pull over an old man or woman driving a Mercedes, I can feel a little more sure that they won't threaten me."

The night of April 5 was just another

Saturday night for college students at SIUC, and, likewise, it also was just another night patrolling the streets of Carbondale for Morton.

She attributes the amount of action on an average night to the weather, but she is never too sure of what to expect. Saturday's weather is warm, and people are out socializing, providing a potentially busy night.

"If the weather is not good, people tend to stay home," she said. "Then we get more domestic calls. People who are stuck at home get into disagreements."

Child protection ordinance triggers controversy

The bayside city of San Mateo, Calif. enacted the Child Protection Ordinance, the first law in the nation ordering every volunteer who supervises children to submit to a criminal background check.

The law — which took effect last month — requires nonprofit groups from the Pop Warner Football League to the YMCA to fingerprint all coaches, tutors and mentors who look after one or more children without another adult present.

"It sends a message to perpetrators," said Beth Salazar, executive director of the Peninsula Family YMCA, "that they will need to go somewhere else to get a kid to abuse."

Critics of the law, however, say it sets a distrustful tone that insults and demeans good-hearted volunteers.

Taking a stand

Sexual assault prevention more than month-long media event

LAST WEDNESDAY MORNING, AN SIUC student reported that a man approached her from behind while she was walking on campus, pulled her dress up over her head and pulled her close. The woman escaped but so did the suspect. A campus safety alert was issued Thursday.

At 8:30 a.m. March 23, an SIUC student was watching television in her living room when a man walked in and attempted to rape her. She, too, was able to fight him off. The suspect remains at large.

THE WOMEN'S CENTER QUOTES U.S. Justice Department figures indicating that "every single minute of every day, more than one woman is raped in America." Other sources set that number higher or lower but whether a woman is raped every minute, every hour or every year is irrelevant. What is relevant is that women are not safe. Nor are children.

Donations are pouring in from all over the country help the family of a 9-year-old Chicago girl who was abducted, raped, battered and left for dead in her Cabrini Green apartment building Jan. 9. The child now known "Girl X" survived, but whether she ever walks or tal again on her own remains to be seen.

Horrifying as the "Girl X" case is, it does send out a ray of hope. According to an article in Sunday's Chicago Tribune, leaders of the gang whose letters were scrawled on the little girl's body were so disgusted by the attack that they ordered members to find the attacker.

It is somehow reassuring to think that even gangsters — whom we fear and reproach for their criminal acts — have, at their most basic level, an inherent sense of decency and morality that prevents them from committing certain crimes.

IF A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL ORGANIZATION can take a stand against sexual assault, surely we who consider ourselves "moral, upstanding citizens" can follow their lead.

During April, which is Sexual Assault Awareness Month, we are reminded of the importance of protecting ourselves and each other from those sick individuals who take pleasure in preying on the defenseless and the unsuspecting. It is up to us to do all we can to fight rape — just this month, but every minute of our lives.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

You have rights

- Know your sexual desires and limits well enough to communicate these clearly
- Be direct and firm with him if he is pressuring you sexually. Say "NO" like you mean it, using a firm tone of voice and matching body language.
- Pay attention to what is happening around you. If you feel threatened, don't be embarrassed about "making waves," asking for help or leaving.
- Avoid high-risk use of alcohol and drugs. In situations of acquaintance rape, 70 percent of the women had used alcohol.
- Have a buddy system wherever you go; make sure a friend is with you.
- When traveling after dark around campus, either by yourself or in small groups, use Women's Transit or the Brightway Path.
- If you are sexually assaulted, know that it was not your fault. The person who committed the assault is to blame.

If you think you've been raped, call 549-3351 or 1-800-334-2094 for assistance.

Richard Helstern

Guest Column

Richard is a Carbondale resident and former professor of architecture and design. Guest Column appears every Tuesday and Thursday. Richard's opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

Building blocks: Work of architect revolutionary

On an April Thursday afternoon in 1972 — now 25 years ago — Richard Nickel sadly headed back to work at the Chicago Stock Exchange Building where he had been working for some time just ahead of the demolition crews.

He had worked to mobilize efforts to save this building, one of architect Louis Sullivan's very finest, from demolition. When this failed, he had worked to provide some record of the building for the world.

But on this Thursday afternoon, the floor gave way beneath him and he fell to his death.

"Louis Sullivan et al Through the Lens of Richard Nickel," currently on exhibit at the University Museum, features the American building forms developed in Chicago that changed the world of architecture forever.

In their use of glass and steel, they represent the first new idea in architecture since the Middle Ages.

The material in this exhibit is the result of Nickel's pioneering efforts to call our attention to the seminal work of Chicago architects through his beautiful photographs and the fragments he rescued from condemned buildings at the height of urban renewal efforts.

Nickel's work, which began as an assignment in his college photography class in 1952, led to the first legislation in the United States to protect architectural landmarks.

Louis Sullivan, the focus of the exhibit, has been described as the father of the skyscraper and America's second most famous architect ... America's most famous architect, Frank Lloyd Wright, was Sullivan's pupil.

Sullivan is in a league with Emerson, Thoreau and Whitman; men whose minds and ideas contributed greatly to American culture.

His writings, "Kindergarten Chats" and "The Autobiography of An Idea," were important contributions to American ideas.

His ideas revolutionized modern architecture worldwide.

Sullivan developed an original American architecture that responded to changes in American life at a time when everyone else was merely copying dead European styles.

Sullivan believed that true style was not something applied from the outside, but the result of a new way of thinking — an organic unfolding of a building's essence.

His unique system of ornament carried this idea into every detail of his buildings.

Sullivan called this new approach "organic."

His ideas formed the basis of the work of Frank Lloyd Wright and began the new tradition in American architecture which continues to this day.

These are important lessons for Americans today when mainstream architecture has once again become merely an appliqué of past clichés onto our contemporary environment.

Many architects no longer know how to design an original work and are instead doing what is fashionable (and profitable).

From the early 1950s until his tragic death in 1972, Richard Nickel stood against our throw-away society and, armed with camera and hard hat, rescued some of the world's greatest landmarks of environmental design.

His photographs themselves are vivid landmarks in the history of photography.

This vision of lost America at the University Museum should be seen by all who value the great achievements of American culture.

USG might give extra funds to flood victims, not RSOs

CHARITABLE ACT:

USG senators hope to help out area, local residents.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Undergraduate Student Government may donate $1,000 to Ohio River flood victims instead of giving additional money to Registered Student Organizations.

"Last semester, we didn't give out much money to RSOs because there were not as many groups requesting funding," Anthony Buie, USG Finance Committee chairman, said.

Buie's proposal to aid flood victims will be on USG's agenda at its Wednesday meeting.

Buie said his proposal, if approved, will allow USG to give no more than $1,000 to charity to help victims of flooding that occurred last month along the Ohio River in Southern Illinois, Indiana and Kentucky.

"Some people have relatives who have been hit by the flood," Buie said. "We want to show we care about people in this area."

"It's not going to change any-

Buie said there are no other USG proposals to spend the extra money.

"This is the first one I know of," he said. "Maybe other senators will propose how to spend the money after they see this proposal."

"If anyone comes up with a better idea of how to spend it, I'll support it."

James Miller, Society of Geologists and Mining Engineers president, approves of Buie's proposal, despite USG's decision last month to give his club $50 this semester.

"I think it's a good idea to help," Miller, a senior in mining engineering from Grand Chain, said. "We applied for money recently and we didn't get very much, but I think flood victims need more help than we do."

Flooding along the Ohio River in March damaged homes in Pope, Hardin, Alexander, Pulaski, Gallatin and Massac counties.

The counties were declared federal disaster areas.

one's lives, but it can help." USG funds RSOs with money from the Student Activity Fee, which is $1.56 per semester hour per student.

Although Buie proposes giving some of USG's extra money to flood victims, he said SIUC student organizations will not be neglected.

That's not true. I could go a year without writing a ticket."

And some people are surprised to see that cops are just like them, especially when at a restaurant.

"Some people are surprised to see us eating, and we just say, 'Hey, we're humans too,'" Morton said.

Morton said police officers often are subject to stereotypes.

"People will also joke about cops who drink coffee and eat doughnuts. When you work a long shift, you need coffee. We (Carbondale cops) only drink coffee because there are no doughnut shops in town," she said, jokingly, with a smile.

Morton said another common misconception of the public is that officers know everything about the law. Even though police are well informed of the law, Morton said an officer is never able to answer every question posed by citizens.

"As an officer, you never know everything, and when you think you do, something happens," she said.

"When I was on my first night on the job I was saying to myself, 'What do I do?' or 'Where's that at?'" she said.

As Morton drives through a predominantly African-American neighborhood on Carbondale's northeast side, the conversation shifts to police relations with minority populations. She wants to dispel the myth that police are racist people with a badge and a gun.

"Our job is to deal with people who commit crimes, not to harass someone because of their color," she said.

Shortly after driving through the neighborhood, she approaches a stop sign, and a van pulls up next to Morton's car. The occupants of the vehicle inform her that there is a domestic dispute taking place in front of Veach Short Stop, 1123 E. Walnut St.

Upon arrival, Morton talks to the employee of the gas station. Another officer pulls up, with the man involved in the dispute in the back of officer's car. Morton and the officer investigate the incident by going to the apartment of the woman in the dispute.

The front door to the woman's apartment is open, but she is not there. The other officer then gives the man a ride home.

For now, there is nothing else that can be done concerning this dispute. The man in the back of the police car said that the dispute was the result of tempers that clashed, and that it was not a physical altercation.

Just prior to Morton's break at 11 p.m., a report comes in that a person is trying to enter an apartment at Lewis Park, 800 E. Grand Ave. Morton and a couple other officers who happen to be near the area convene in the parking lot.

The person suspected of the forced entry is nowhere to be found. A couple of doors down, however, there is a small party going on. The front door is open, and people can be seen drinking inside.

It is not Morton's assignment on this night to look for parties that are getting out of hand. Following her one-hour break, she progresses on to patrol her district until the early hours of the morning. Saturday was just another day in the books.

"It's cold, I tell you," he said. "I just wanted to win."

The bobbing-for-apples contest was the event that was deceiving to the eyes of College of Agriculture Assistant Dean Julia Weistein. With her hands behind her back and face hung over in the tub of cold water, she took 80 seconds of spitting and failed attempts before sinking her teeth into one of the floating apples. "I thought I could get it, but I couldn't," she said. "It was harder than I thought."

For Weistein, a Dean's Office team member, it was all in fun and was a way to bring agriculture students and faculty together.

"This is one of the best ways to get students and faculty of Ag, who are in separate departments, to come together," she said. "We're trying to build interdepartmental teamwork."

PATROL

"It's up in the air. Sometimes it will be slow for a while, then we'll get slammed with reports."

But Morton's love of being a police officer outweighs seeing on daily basis the domestic disputes and careless traffic violations.

"I love being a cop. I can't think of doing anything else," Morton said. "It's great being alone in a patrol car. It's just you; nobody's looking over your shoulder. I couldn't stand having someone always looking over my shoulder."

Even though Morton said being a police officer is enjoyable, she realizes it is still a job. Like everyone else, Morton has a family and a home to return to after her shift ends at 3 a.m.

"It's a job," she said. "I have a mortgage and a daughter I have to think about."

Morton has been a Carbondale Police officer for 3 1/2 years. Originally from Downers Grove, she came to Carbondale to attend SIUC. She graduated with a bachelor's degree in administration of justice in 1993.

Morton said people do not always understand the purpose of a police officer. In fact, Morton said she was "scared to death" of the police growing up.

"People have misconceptions about the police," she said. "We don't have quotas for pulling people over. Some people actually believe we get a cut of the tickets we write."

raced to eat four hot dogs to win the event, thankful they were not raw.

"That's a lot of hot dogs," Ridgley said. "The first two went down kind of smooth, but the last were kind of slow."

"I really expected to get last in this one."

In the hot-dog eating contest, four members of each team raced from one end of the arena to the other, choking themselves with one more hot dog for each team member. The first member raced to eat one, the second eating two and so on.

For Mark Undesser, a freshman in animal science from Yorkville and a Block-n-Bridle member, stuffing hot dogs in his mouth was not as easy as it looked.

"They were easy to stuff in my mouth, but they ain't too easy to swallow," Undesser said.

Teams were judged based on appearance, originality and timing. In each event, teams were awarded 75 points for first place, 50 points for second place and 25 points for third place.

Although the Collegiate FFA came out on top with 275 points, the competitive efforts of Block-n-Bridle could not be overlooked as they snatched second place with 225 points after winning the hot-dog eating and bobbing-for-apples contests.

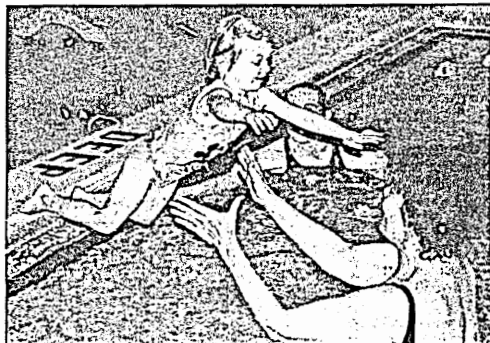

Brian Taylor, Block-n-Bridle representative, won first place, taking 1.8 seconds to bob into the cold water for his apple.

Youth swim program encourages parents to participate

Like a miniature Greg Louganis, toddler Kyle Murphy stands poised to jump into the raised arms of his grandmother, who is wading in Pulliam Hall Pool below him.

"You're going to jump on three, okay?" she says.

Kyle laughs and nods.

"Get ready," she says.

"One...two...three!"

The four-year-old still is standing at the edge of the pool. His grandmother, Carbondale resident Henrietta Murphy, tries again.

"One...two...three! Jump!"

Kyle jumps into the pool, splashing his grandmother with water. The two begin to laugh as they bob in the water among rubber duckies.

"I don't mind getting wet," Murphy says, wiping the water from her eyes. "It's a lot better than chasing him around the mall."

The two are participating in the Youth Swim Program sponsored on Saturdays through SIUC's Aquatics program.

Craig Duncan, a graduate assistant in the program, said Youth Swim provides children, as young as 6 months old, with basic swimming skills.

"We're not trying to say that kids are going to come out of here Olympic gold medalist swimmers," he said. "We just try to fine-tune their swimming skills as they move up the ladder of programs we offer that are based on their age and comfort level in the pool."

"You won't be able to teach a younger child a swimming stroke, but you will be able to teach the child how to kick its feet, some water safety awareness and how to deal with water and be more comfortable around it."

Murphy and her grandson participate in Youth Swim's Parent-Tot program, which uses direct parent interaction in the pool with children along with instructors. She says her family incorporates water-related activities in its recreation and wants Kyle to be comfortable around water.

"It's something I feel he (Kyle) should do," she says. "My husband wants to take him fishing this summer, so I want to get him exposed to the water."

Murphy's daughter, SIUC alumna Patty Horn, and granddaughter, 3-year-old Fallon Horn, are nearby in the pool. While the elder Horn squats along the pool's edge, the younger one is splashing and shrieking in the shallow water. Horn says the Youth Swim session is the highlight of young Fallon's week.

"She loves the water," Horn says as she gazes at her daughter playing in the pool. "As you can see, she's not afraid of it like Mommy is."

In a larger pool nearby, 4-year-old Alan Wood climbs up to a diving board, preparing to jump into deeper water where an instructor treads water and waits for him below.

"I like to jump in the water," Alan says. "I'm not afraid."

His mother Dorina Wood, a senior in criminal justice from Royalton, says Alan's fearlessness of the water is just what prompted her to register him for beginner's instruction in the Youth Swim Program.

"He's never been afraid of the water. Once he grabbed my T-shirt and jumped into a pool because he thought the T-shirt would make him float," she says.

"And there he was just walking along the bottom of the pool. I said to myself, 'I've got to get this kid some swimming lessons.'"

New city attorney ready to take on Carbondale

SMITH

HARD WORKER: Former assistant city attorney appreciates diversity of new position.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

M. Paige Smith, who was promoted to Carbondale's city attorney last month, says she learned about the human aspects of the law from her father, who also is an attorney.

"From him, I learned more about helping people and solving problems," she said. "I realize some things aren't purely legal. Some people just need to feel like they're being heard, like someone's concerned and has sympathy for their problems."

She worked with her father, Jerry Smith, a general-practice attorney in Du Quoin, before she became assistant city attorney in 1995.

Jerry Smith said he enjoyed having his daughter work with him.

"I hated to lose her, but I couldn't afford her," he said. "She got successful too quick."

Paige Smith, a 1994 SIU School of Law graduate who received an SIUC degree in administration of justice in 1991, replaces Sharon Hammer, who left the city in February to enter private practice in Chicago.

Jerry Smith said his daughter advanced to the city attorney position fairly quickly.

"I was concerned, when the position came up, that her age might be a deterrent, but Paige is very talented and a very hard worker," he said.

Smith said her experience as assistant city attorney was a more important factor in her promotion than the number of years she has been out of school.

City Manager Jeff Doherty selected Smith from a field of 13 candidates.

"I have a lot of confidence in Paige," he said. "I think she'll do an outstanding job."

A new assistant city attorney has not been chosen.

The city attorney advises the city's department heads, the City Council, the Cable Commission and the Liquor Control Commission, and also prepares new ordinances and other legal documents.

Smith said municipal law stays interesting because she constantly researches new topics.

"Sometimes it's good, sometimes it's bad," she said.

"Sometimes I wish I'd have an issue come up again so I'd know what to expect."

That diversity, along with working with the public, is what Smith enjoys about her job.

"You want a job you love instead of working 40 hours a week, waiting for the clock to tick to five so you can go home," she said.

"I think I've found that position."

the competition.

"We almost always have more than one winner," she said. "Most often there are several winners. Last year we had four (winners), and the year before that it was six."

Flint said the precision needed for the work can keep her worried about damaging the art.

"When I throw pots, (on the wheel) I can nick it or it can not make it through the trimming or crack during the firing," she said. "But I don't mind, because everything you do that's worth doing has a struggle."

Flint entered 17 pieces into the competition, and she said each one is unique.

"Sometime you get beautiful surprises when working with art," she said.

Terril Johnson, a recipient of the award, is going to relax after graduation by using the competition money for a vacation.

"I'm going to Europe," said Johnson, a senior in industrial design from Carbondale. "I'm going to take a break before looking for a job."

The judging for the competition was Monday.

Other winners of the competition were Todd Douglas Chapman, a senior in sculpture from Belvidere, and Michael John Hofer, a senior in blacksmithing from Mt. Prospect.

ing students important individual recognition.

"Each college recognizes its honor students individually, so it's more personal than graduation," he said.

"It's nice to have people you know witness your scholastic accomplishments."

Likewise, honoree Douglas Wright, a sophomore in aviation from Watseka, found Honors Day to be a convenient way for those who may be handing him his degree to know about his academic achievements.

"Honors Day is a huge networking event, and it's important to get to know who the people are in your college," he said.

information.

"In response to the bill, we are looking into providing computer simulation," Muhlach said. "We're looking at computer CDs that will take people through the dissections."

Although alternatives are acceptable for core curriculum courses, they are not acceptable in classes required to receive a degree in any of the life sciences.

"It is part of the discipline," Murlach said. "At some point there are things you have to accept with career choices. Dissections are the best and most effective way to teach."

Cunniff said the bill will not cost the state money, because organizations such as hers provide free materials.

The bill would save schools money because alternative methods of dissection are renewable, unlike live specimens, she said.

Cunniff's organization already loans 3-D models to students who want an alternative to animal dissections for free.

SIUC employee recognized for public service

ALL IN A DAY'S WORK: Administrative clerk spends three hours a day volunteering.

TAMEKA L. HIGGS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Eight-hour workdays and long hours of public service, which sometimes leave Catherine "Kitty" Mabus with a short six hours of sleep, beats relaxing in her Murphysboro home all day.

Mabus directs two church choirs, helps with youth ministry programs, participates in telethons, is a Jackson County Alumni Association board member and belongs to the Carbondale Business and Professional Women's Club.

She also works full time as an SIUC administrative clerk for the Foreign Languages and Literature Department and is pursuing a master's degree in music.

"I figure I might as well put my excess energy towards helping someone else," she said.

And it was all that excess energy that led to Mabus becoming the 18th recipient of the Lindell W.

Sturgis Memorial Service Award Endowment in March.

Mabus was in disbelief when she read the letter informing her that she was the recipient of the award because she did not expect to be recognized for her public service commitments.

"This is like a pat on the head that says you're doing something good and going in the right direction," Mabus said.

The Sturgis Award was established in 1979 in honor of Lindell W. Sturgis, a former Board of Trustees member, to recognize an SIUC employee who does public service outside of job duties annually. Winners receive a plaque and $500.

Mabus spends at least three hours each day volunteering and especially enjoys helping individuals. She most enjoys Christmas caroling, which she has done for 20 years, and serenading the elderly on Christmas. Her desire to help others comes from the influence of her family and friends.

She said since she was a child, her family always has been involved in community service. Last Thanksgiving,

Mabus volunteered her mother and father to accompany her to the Carbondale Newman Center, 715 S. Washington St., where they served dinner to those who had no family or dinner.

"My family has always been with lots of things they've done, but none are as substantial as someone with one activity of greater importance," he said.

Dyer said Mabus was chosen for the award because she has given

"We're going to do things if we get awards or not," Mabus said. "Somebody has to do it."

Mabus said people who wrote nomination letters to the Board of Trustees for the award were her mentors and colleagues, including Linda Benz, whom she has worked with at SIUC for several years.

Benz, Institutional Research and Studies project coordinator, said Mabus' years of public service activities show that people are a major part of her life.

"She's one with progressive leadership and attends to the professional responsibility," she said.

Benz, who received the 1994 Sturgis Award, said she and Mabus are friends because they both share the same philosophy.

"We both like working with people," she said. "I guess we share the Christian philosophy of helping others."

Working with people is important, Mabus said, and it has become a priority for her.

"I've decided that I have to make decisions and priorities in my life," she said.

"People are important, and you're lucky if you can spend time with them."

active in the church and the community," she said. "It's always been important to my family."

Jack Dyer, University Relations director and chairman of the Sturgis Award committee, said the committee chooses a person who has a significant amount of quality and quantity public service commitments.

Each year there are as many as 50 nominations for the award. Most nominees deserve the award, Dyer said, but only one can receive it.

"Sometimes we have one (nomi-back to the community in the form of public service.

She does not isolate herself from the community outside of the University.

"She's been working with the community to make it a better place," he said.

Mabus said public servants do not see their work as being intense. She believes in helping the community, and even if she did not receive the award, she still would continue public service activities.

JUMBLE

THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME by Noel Arnold and Mike Anglin

Unscramble these four jumbles one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

Word puzzle grid with jumbles: CAUTE, IMREC, HAPUNG, TEAQUE. Includes an answer line and a note about the answer.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer. As suggested by the above cartoon.

Yesterday's Jumbles: DURLY DRAMA ARTERY HORROR. Answer: Hanging wash in the backyard can result in this - "DIRTY" HUMOR.

Agassi puts U.S. in semifinals

DAVIS CUP: American star overcomes 2-0 Dutch lead to earn right to face Australian team.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif.—With his uncanny sense of timing, Andre Agassi constructed the most dramatic scenario in which he might succeed. With the U.S. Davis Cup team holding a 2-1 lead over the Netherlands, winning Sunday's first singles match would secure the victory for the United States.

As a player, he seems to require internal drama to provoke himself. When it doesn't exist, Agassi finds a way to create it. Falling behind two sets to none in a Davis Cup match is as provocative as it gets.

Always an instinctive and emotional player, Agassi thrived under the weight of the patriotic pressure. For only the second time in his career, Agassi rallied from a 2-0 deficit to win a five-set match, and, with a flourish, clinched the victory for the U.S. team.

Agassi defeated Jan Siemerink, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, and extended his Davis Cup winning streak to 15.

Jonathan Stark subbed for a suddenly-injured Jim Courier in the meaningless remaining singles match. Stark got his first Davis Cup win by defeating Sjeng Schalken, 6-4, 6-0.

By a 4-1 score, the United States advances to the semifinals against Australia, which defeated the Czech Republic, 5-0. The matches will be played in the United States on Sept. 19-21, and are expected to be played on the East Coast on slow hardcourts, possibly clay.

The last time the two nations played in the Davis Cup was in 1993, when Australia defeated the United States, 4-1, in the first round.

The Australians will bring their best available team, which means Mark Philippoussis and Patrick Rafter if the match is on hardcourt. The Australians have the world's best doubles team, Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde.

The makeup of the U.S. team is unknown. If U.S. captain Tom Gullikson had access to the best U.S. players, his team would be nearly invincible. However, when it comes time to commit to the Davis Cup, Gullikson is looking at a shallow talent pool.

Michael Chang, No. 3, is not likely to play and No. 1 Pete Sampras has not yet made himself available for the Davis Cup. The next American in the rankings, Todd Martin, is recovering from surgery.

Courier and Agassi are likely to make up the singles team. The doubles team, always a problem, is unknown.

several team members.

Ryan Zastro, a junior in history from Tinley Park, said the tournament was a big success.

"It was really a great tournament," Zastro said. "There was some great work done by our offices to make this better than ever."

While the tournament organizers labeled the event an overall success, poor weather conditions affected the tournament's outcome. Heavy rains Friday and Saturday soaked the fields, leading to smaller crowds and poor field conditions.

Liza Rosetti, a graduate student in animal science from Springfield and women's team member, said the tournament would have been more successful without the bad weather.

"The conditions were really bad," Rosetti said. "Overall, it went really well, but the rains and cold temperatures kind of put a damper on it for everyone."

While the tournament did not draw as many fans as expected, organizing the large tournament did not fall on the campus' Intramural Sports program.

McPeak said the SIUC rugby teams have been responsible for organizing the tournament since its inception seven years ago.

"We do everything ourselves each year," McPeak said. "We do all of the organizing and planning, and it's something we've done for a while. Each year, we watch how the older guys plan it, and it gets passed down the next year."

While organizing such a large tournament is not an easy task, Rosetti said the teams were able to organize the tournament in several ways.

"We kind of spread it by word of mouth," Rosetti said. "We sent out some invitations to some teams, but a lot of the teams already knew about the tournament from other tournaments where we were promoting it."

Although the weather was a factor in the tournament's success, McPeak expects next year's tournament to be more successful.

"We had a good tournament but the weather put a damper on it," McPeak said. "It's something we want to get bigger and better every year."

knew the kind of number I could shoot. I was pleased with the way I played."

Women's golf coach Diane Daugherty was not at all surprised with Hudgins overcoming the conditions to place second.

"(Hudgins) works so doggone hard," she said. "It wasn't a surprise because she has been playing so well. She is very capable. It wasn't a luck run, that's just the caliber of player she is."

SIUC finished in seventh place in the 17-team field, a finish that pleased Daugherty.

"The competition was very tough with all the Big 10 (conference) schools there," Daugherty said. "We really hadn't talked about a place, we just wanted to play well. I thought a top-10 finish would have been outstanding."

Junior Jami Smith said the Salukis handled the pressures of the tough competition and weather conditions very well.

"The conditions were tough because it was really windy," she said. "There were schools that are going to the NCAA championships, so I thought we competed well. I think each tournament is giving us more experience, and we are handling the pressure."

Even with the tough competition the Salukis faced, Daugherty said the team had one goal in mind.

"We are just trying to shoot scores that can compete with teams in (the Missouri Valley Conference)," she said.

The MVC championship meet is April 21-23 in Springfield, Mo., but until then, the Salukis will travel to Athens, Ga., for the Liz Murphy Invitational against the nation's best.

"This week we travel to Georgia and play a lot of Southeastern Conference schools," Daugherty said. "They are the toughest schools in the nation. The team's confidence is up going into Georgia, so we just want to have a respectable finish."

With the team's confidence or the rise, Hudgins knows the Salukis can carry it with them into the Valley championships.

"We are looking to have a good competition next week (in Georgia)," she said. "And we want that confidence to carry over into conference."

Robinson popping up all over

MEDIA BLITZ:

From cereal boxes to toys, Jackie Robinson is this year's hot property.

WASHINGTON POST

Jackie Robinson was never one to shy from the commercial side of celebrity. The first black man to play major league baseball was also the first black in a Wheaties ad. Robinson endorsed hats, bread, even Chesterfield cigarettes — despite the fact that he didn't smoke.

So the onslaught of Robinson paraphernalia surrounding this year's 50th anniversary of his debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers is "totally in keeping with Jack's attitude," says Arnold Rampersad, the Princeton University English professor whose new biography of Robinson is due out in July.

"There's no doubt Jack Robinson was a commercial being and an entrepreneur," Rampersad adds.

But nothing Robinson experienced could compare to the torrent of products now pouring onto the market. Sports marketers say that 25 years after his death, Robinson could be this year's top-drawing sports figure.

Since February, Robinson has been on the cover not only of Wheaties, but also of Honey Frosted Wheaties and Crispy Wheaties 'n Raisins — the first time one person has been on all three boxes.

"It's the first time we ever had anybody on the box who was dead," says Greg Zimprich, spokesman for General Mills Inc., which makes the cereal. Wheaties is aimed at men in their 20s to 40s, and Zimprich said the audience for the Robinson box "skews a little bit older, but it's been one of our more popular boxes."

McDonald's Corp. put Robinson on its tray liners. Coca-Cola put out Robinson commemorative bottles. The Dodgers great comes back to life in TV ads for Apple computers and Nike sneakers. And the U.S. Mint is selling gold coins with Robinson's face on one side and an engraving of his sliding home on the obverse — the first time a U.S. gold coin has featured the likeness of a black person.

There are Robinson baseball computer games, keychains, T-shirts, jerseys, miniature bats, gold and silver ingots, medallions, mugs, plaques, posters, pins and figures shaped from every conceivable material.

Hasbro Inc. is putting out 12-inch plastic Robinsons ($29.99) and 4-inch versions ($19.99) showing Robinson paired with Hank Aaron or Larry Doby, the first black to play in the American League.

"When we've done the Jackie Robinson figures before, they sold quite well — without the current attention he's getting," says Bill Hartglass, team leader for Hasbro's Starting Lineup brand. "He's a compelling figure, not just for the older collectors who remember him, but for kids who are learning about him now."

For fans looking for something a little more upscale than a plastic figurine, Frank Walsh offers Robinson in 24-karat gold. Walsh's Authentic Images company in San Diego is making 1,947 copies of a solid gold trading card showing Robinson on Opening Day at Ebbets Field. The cards, available only at Dodger Stadium and direct from the maker, sell for $150 each.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS:

Bruins miss playoffs snapping longest streak in professional sports.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

BOSTON — In a city where landmarks and traditions endure for generations, the Boston Bruins have been one of many constants.

There's Fenway Park with its Green Monster. Faneuil Hall. The Old North Church. The North End, with its aromatic Italian bakeries. And the Bruins, propelled by a blue-collar work ethic, selling out the Boston Garden as they chase the Stanley Cup. The world might go crazy, but these things never changed.

Fenway Park still stands, although there is talk of replacing it Faneuil Hall thrives as a market, the Old North Church is a tourist attraction and a stroll through the North End is still like visiting an Italian village. But the Bruins have missed the playoffs for the first time in 30 years, ending the longest playoff streak in professional sports.

Once, Bruin tickets were rare commodities. This season, thousands of seats are empty every game in the glitzy new FleetCenter. Fans won't pay a league-high average of $52.58 to see a team that, with a 25-44-9 record might break the franchise record of 47 losses, set in 1961-62.

The Bruins' faint hopes were quashed Thursday when they were eliminated from the Eastern Conference race. But they knew weeks ago another significant streak was over: For the first time since 1966-67 — Bobby Orr's rookie season and the last season they missed the playoffs — they will finish below .500.

"For the playoff streak to keep going is one thing. To stay at .500 is another. Ending that streak is almost worse," said Mike O'Connell, the Bruins' assistant general manager. "It's alarming to see so many empty seats, but this place has 5,000 seats more than the Garden did.... It's definitely a concern of ours and something we're going to have to stay on top of and make sure that we get competitive, because right now we're not competitive."

"I was so excited about coming here because the Bruins are an original six team and it always seemed that they made the playoffs. You don't want to be on the first team that didn't make it after so many years," said forward Jeff Odgers, who was acquired from San Jose last summer for defenseman Al Iafrate.

Lemieux retiring this year

Pittsburgh Penguins superstar Mario Lemieux has announced he will retire at the end of this year's playoffs. Lemieux made the announcement Saturday night at the annual Danper Dan banquet at the Pittsburgh Hilton. The 31-year-old, a five-time NHL scoring champion, has been hampered by a bad back and a bout with cancer in his career. He leads the NHL with 117 points on 49 goals and has 68 assists this season.

Lemieux led the Penguins to the Stanley Cup title in 1991 and 1992, but prior to this season, he missed 221 regular-season games and eight playoff contests because of injury. That does not include the 48 regular-season games and 12 playoff contests the Penguins played in the lockout-shortened 1995 season, when Lemieux took a medical leave of absence.

He won the Hart Trophy as the NHL's Most Valuable Player three times, including last season when he paced the league in goals and assists. Lemieux has won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup playoffs in 1991 and 1992.

In January 1993, it was announced Lemieux had Hodgkin's disease. He missed 20 games while receiving radiation treatment, but he still went on to win his fourth scoring title, collecting 160 points in just 60 games.

Lemieux's best season came in 1988-89 when he established career highs in goals (85), assists (114) and points (199). The goal total is fourth best in league history.

Hill leads league this week

Detroit Pistons forward Grant Hill has been selected as Player of the Week by the NBA. Hill nearly averaged a triple-double in three road contests, as Detroit went 2-1 last week.

Hill averaged 29.3 points, 13.7 rebounds and 9.3 assists per game over the span. He also shot 59 percent from the field and 74 percent from the free-throw line.

The third-year pro scored a career-high 35 points with 18 rebounds while handing out six assists in the Pistons' 100-82 romp over Dallas Tuesday. The next night against San Antonio, Hill added 31 points with 11 boards and 10 assists in a 99-92 victory. He finished the week with 22 points, 12 rebounds and 12 assists in a 103-89 loss to Atlanta Friday.

MUDDY DAWGS:
Despite a rain-soaked field, SIUC's rugby teams place highly in tournament.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Covered in mud from head to toe, the Saluki men's and women's rugby teams walked off the field Sunday exhausted but proud.

The SIUC men's and women's rugby teams each overcame sloppy field conditions and solid competition to finish in the top three of the seventh-annual All Fools tournament at the Sport Playfields

Sunday.

With 26 teams participating, including 18 men's teams and eight women's teams, in the Midwest's largest collegiate rugby tournament Saturday and Sunday, the Saluki men finished second and the Saluki women finished third.

The men, who entered the tournament as the defending champions, finished second after a 17-15 loss to King's College, whose players drove 15 hours from Canada, in the championship game Sunday.

For Andy McPeak, a junior in political science from St. Charles, the rains made playing a challenge.

"The ball was always covered in mud out there," McPeak said. "It was hard to get any footing, and the ball was like a bar of soap."

The women finished third Sunday with a 7-0 victory over Northern Illinois University in seven overtimes. The women earned a 35-0 win over Western Illinois University and a 15-0 win over Eastern Illinois University, while falling to Truman State University 15-0 Saturday. The University of Illinois won the women's title.

In a tournament that also included teams from Illinois State University, Iowa State University and Northwestern University, the Salukis' solid finishes were encouraging to

BEATING NO. 1: SIUC surprises all with a win over No. 1 rated Redbirds in first match of conference season.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC women's tennis team upset Illinois State University in Normal Friday to win its first conference match of the season.

The Salukis defeated Illinois State 5-1 to shock the Redbirds after ISU was picked to finish in the top three earlier in the season by the coaches of the Missouri Valley Conference.

Junior Helen Johnson said the team showed a lot of character by beating such a tough opponent.

"We were the underdogs heading into the match," she said. "It just shows how we have progressed by beating such a good team."

After defeating Illinois State 5-1, the Salukis' next match was against Drake University Saturday. The Salukis were defeated 6-2 and lost many close matches.

Women's coach Judy Auld said all it took was one point to change the matches around.

"You can't really pinpoint one area," she said. "We just got beat, and they had the breaks at the right time. Maybe if we play them again the ball will bounce our way."

Sunday, the Salukis concluded their weekend by losing to Indiana State 5-1. Wind was a major factor in the match, as gusts reached 30 mph at times.

Junior Molly Card said there were no excuses for the team's loss, but she said the wind caused balls to fly different than usual.

"We don't use excuses, but I think the wind definitely affected the way the ball went," she said. "I think our matches might have been closer had there not been so much wind."

Auld said playing in a wind like the one the team experienced Sunday is more of a survival than a match.

"When you play in wind of that nature, anything could happen, and you have to just be lucky to get the breaks," she said.

Johnson said the weekend helped the Salukis ascertain how the competition is going to be for the upcoming conference season.

"These were all good matches to play," she said. "It can only help us build more confidence as the season progresses."

Up next for the Salukis will be home matches this weekend against the University of Evansville, defending conference champion Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State University.

The matches mark the only time this season when SIUC will be at home.

DONNA COITER

Senior golfer Molly Hudgins overcame the challenges of abnormal playing conditions including gusting winds and heavy rain to finish second Sunday at the Indiana Invitational in Bloomington, Ind., Sunday.

"(The conditions) were definitely tough," Hudgins said. "The wind is always tough to play in, and on top of that for it to be wet was worse. And the five-hour rain delay takes you out of your mind set."

Hudgins finished with a 5-over-par 153 in the field of 90 participants.
