Kids playing during teachers dispute

Two young roller skaters whizzed down the sidewalk in front of Springmore Elementary School Thursday afternoon, stopped, sat on the grass and adjusted their roller skates. Kim Ambrose, 109 S. Poplar, would have entered fifth grade Thursday.

"Now I just skate all day long," Kim said. "But Wednesday, I had to wash my hair. And I'm mad because I had to wash it for nothing."

Her friend, Anna Staubert, 107 S. Maple, said, "I'm not really worried. The board won't give the teachers what they want. The teachers go on strike. The parents don't like it. It happens every year."

The girls were watching the two young teachers stationed at the school, 609 N. Springer, carry picket signs. One marched silently up and down the empty sidewalk. The other sat in a folding lounge chair, signs in hand, radio blaring, half-listening to a news program as a steady stream of bikes, cars, and motorcycles passed down the street.

City savs is a towing ordinance unconstitutional

The Roster, 708 W. Sycamore, walked past the pickets without paying much attention to them.

The kids were "going to the store," to buy themselves early afternoon treats. Brad, who is ready to enter fourth grade at Thomas School, said, "I miss school. I like summer vacations, but they're kind of long. They get kind of boring. I haven't done anything for the last two weeks. I'm anxious to get started."

His sister, Pam, who is ready to enter sixth grade, echoed his sentiments, but for a slightly different reason.

"I'm worried about making the days we miss up in summer school. Right now I'm just sitting around and watching time fly."

Inside the school, an empty silence permeated the hallway. The long silent halls were waxed and shiny. The classrooms were orderly, clean and empty. The rooms were dark.

Two boys biked past. They circled the building, stopped, leaned their bikes against a side wall, peeked through a door window and seeing no one opened the door and entered the dimly lit halls.

"We're looking for the teachers," one said. Hollister and the towing teachers had gone. But the dispute between teachers and the board remained unresolved.

Resident sues city over towing policy

Two students untangle their bicycles and brush themselves off after riding in front of Morris Library Thursday. Overcrowded sidewalks often make walking or riding a dangerous activity on campus. Although some bicycle paths do exist on campus, most are too narrow to handle the heavy traffic. The path network is also extremely small, making sidewalk riding a must.

A Carbondale resident is suing the City of Carbondale in a case involving a towing ordinance which her attorney says is "unauthorized by law and unconstitutional."

The ordinance states that any vehicle which is parked on a city street for more than 72 hours is subject to towing. Also involved is a procedure which requires the person whose car is towed to pay storage, towing and fines in advance of trial in order to obtain the return of the vehicle.

Susanne Brown, of 609 W. Elm Street, asks for financial compensation for the seventeen days she was deprived of her car. She said, "I would never have known that I could get my car back if I hadn't gotten a lawyer."

"I would never have known that I could get my car back if I hadn't gotten a lawyer," Brown said. "I would never have known that I could get my car back if I hadn't gotten a lawyer."

Brown returned home on July 17 to find her car had been towed by police despite objections of her neighbor.

The neighborhood, John O'Brien, of 609 W. Elm Street, said he had been told by the police officer involved that the car was abandoned and would be towed.

When contacted by the Daily Egyptian, Phil Gilbert, assistant city attorney, explained that the decision of whether or not to tow a vehicle was "pretty much up to the officer's discretion."

But Linda MacLachlan, Brown's attorney, says there should be an advance notification before towing. According to O'Brien, such a notification was not attempted.

"There was a 'license applied for' sticker in the window that gave her address," O'Brien said, "but the cop didn't bother to contact anyone at the house."

O'Brien also said the officer refused to stop the towing when O'Brien attempted to intervene.

"I told him I didn't have the money at the time and I wouldn't have until Aug. 1," she said. "They told me 'pay it or else.'"

"The city offered us a deal," said MacLachlan, "that they'd pick up the towing charges and drop the ticket if the car was still in the lot. We didn't have the money for the storage charge."

But when MacLachlan approached Brown on the matter, Brown declined. "I wanted to fight it because I thought they were wrong," she explained, "and I also still didn't have the money to pay for the storage."

Brown contacted the police two days later to learn how to regain her car. "I told them I didn't have the money at the time and I wouldn't have until Aug. 1," she said. "They told me 'pay it or else.'"

U.S., China split; Taiwan still issue as talks conclude

PEKING (AP) - Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance ended his talks with Chinese leaders Thursday, indicating that while they remain divided over Taiwan and the United States as he summarized his visit for reporters after a last-minute meeting with party Chairman Hua Kuo feng.

"The Chinese position on a number of the matters relating to Taiwan has been a major obstacle to an exchange of embassies between Washington and Peking."

"The Chinese position on a number of the matters relating to Taiwan has been a major obstacle to an exchange of embassies between Washington and Peking," Vance said. "I think it would be best if I let it there."

He called the talks "very useful" and said, "I think we made some progress. If we can't agree on principle, there is no question about that."

But he also hinted that Peking is now more aware of the political pressures on President Carter not to break with Taiwan.

"We are both more understanding and thus the Chinese may have a better grasp of the problems of normalization," Vance said.

Vance goes next to Tokyo to briefly Japanese leaders Friday on his China talks. He is also sending his assistant secretary for Far East affairs, Richard Holbrooke, to the regular meetings of South Korean and Taiwanese officials.

Although U.S. officials will not say so publicly, Carter's China policy is complicated by the fact that he needs the support of Asian and Latin American countries to win approval of a new treaty giving up control of the Panama Canal.

New Haven Center, Inc., is a non-profit organization which operates the nursing home. The non-profit group was incorporated according to the Illinois Secretary of State.

The president of the bank, Ernest Miller, could not be reached for comment.

The director of the nursing home Bill R. Colp, was out of town Thursday. A story also said that if the federal government succeeds with its suit, a judge can order U.S. marines to evict the nursing home pending its sale at a federal court.

Henderson told Lance. "The only thing the court would ever be appointed to someone to collect (the money owed)."

Colp has blamed the center's problems on a teaching study which was conducted by the FHA. The study determined, according to Colp, that the center was in a financial crisis. It was later found, that not enough children who moved from the center to the state could be placed in the 228-bed center.

Lance may have foreclosed on the New Haven.

Colp has said the center then began operations as a nursing home, but that the FHA has found a reason for the nursing home's plight is lack of patients.

Lancos also said there were very few FHA-insured nursing homes that was an unusual trouble.

"Our experience has been very disappointing," he said. The attorneys for the defendants in the case have filed a motion in Danville's federal district court to dismiss the case on the grounds that some items in the government's suit are incorrect.

Clowns, music entertain students

The Student Center became a circus of activity Wednesday night as the Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) sponsored an open house in conjunction with the Student Center. The first floor hall of the Student Center was a delight to the senses with a clown, a juggler, a magician and a troubadour singer traveling back and forth a midst the scent of popcorn, cotton candy, french fries, sodas and other gastronomical delights. Bicarbonate was probably in order for many after it was all over.

Musical entertainment featured the space sounds of jazz-rock band Kamaro in the Big Muddy Room, that played to a large, peanut munching, pizza-chewing crowd which became rowdy and loud when the polished bluegrass of Ragged But Right followed. A carpet of peanut shells had many crunching their feet to the beat.

New and returning students found that the Student Center has a lot to offer in the way of fun and games. Free bowling, billiards, bingo and a trivia contest to quiz wizards were offered.

At the end of the night, satisfied people crunched, stomped, chewed and clapped their way right out of the doors and the Student Center, so worse for the three-hour trample treatment was officially broken in for another long school year.

"I have nothing up my sleeve," he says. But the crowd remains suspicious of the dapper stranger with the nimble fingers who holds their attention.

Mike Walker, a junior in Physical Education, tries to "beat the house" by using the two card method of playing favored by veterans of bingo games.
After 100 years, black rights still floundering

By Pam Bailey

It is almost 100 years since the passage of the 15th Amendment, the law that finally allowed black Americans to vote. The law was a temporary measure, a way to stop the spread of violence and the erosion of civil rights. It was a law that was passed in the face of overwhelming resistance, a law that was not perfect, but it was a law that was necessary to protect the rights of black Americans.

The 15th Amendment was a hard-won victory for black Americans. It was a victory that was fought for by countless men and women, who risked their lives to ensure that the law was passed. It was a victory that was celebrated by black Americans, who were finally able to exercise their right to vote. It was a victory that was celebrated by the entire country, who were now able to move forward together.

The 15th Amendment was a landmark for black Americans. It was a law that was passed in the face of overwhelming resistance, a law that was not perfect, but it was a law that was necessary to protect the rights of black Americans.

Goodguys, Badguys play the Balance of Terror game

By Arthur Verma

Once upon a time, in the Beautiful Green Valley where the wildflowers grew, it seemed as though everyone was living peacefully together. But then something changed. The Goodguys and the Badguys were at odds with each other, and the Valley was no longer a place of peace.

The Goodguys had each other's back, they were a hearty bunch of medieval knights who eked out a living in the wilderness, while the Badguys were a bunch of nasty bandits who would stop at nothing to get what they wanted. The Goodguys were the good guys, the ones who tried to do the right thing, while the Badguys were the bad guys, the ones who pursued their own interests at the expense of others.

The Goodguys and the Badguys fought each other, but they also had to be careful not to get too far from the Valley, for that was where the Wildflowers grew. The wildflowers were a special plant, and whoever found them could turn the tide of battle.

The Goodguys had their own special plant, the wildflowers, which they used to make their productions. The Badguys had a different plant, a sort of poisonous weed, which they used to make their productions. The Goodguys and the Badguys were at odds with each other, but they also had to be careful not to get too far from the Valley, for that was where the Wildflowers grew.

The Goodguys and the Badguys played the Balance of Terror game, a game that they had to play in order to survive. The game was a difficult one, and it was one that the Goodguys and the Badguys had to play with care. The game was one that tested their wits and their courage, and it was one that required them to be careful not to get too far from the Valley, for that was where the Wildflowers grew.
It's Women's Equality Day

Susan B. Anthony: "Failure is impossible"

By Linda Thompson
Aspen Journalism Editor

Today is the 57th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution granting women the right to vote. President Carter has proclaimed August 26, Women's Equality Day. And the Women’s Center of Carbondale is celebrating that historic event on campus with a rededication of Susan B. Anthony Hall, named in honor of that tireless suffragist.

On such a day, it is appropriate that we pause to reflect why it is that although the probable wouldn’t approve of such goings on. On her last birthday, Anthony appeared before Congress and listened to endless speeches in her honor. Always one to forthrightly speak her mind, she interrupted the talking by asking, “When will we pass something besides extended congratulations?” I would rather have President Ford promise to do nothing against the amendment to the Constitution to give women suffrage than to praise me endlessly.”

But alas, the Amendment did not come often to the fiery Quaker. Critics were hurled at her from all sides. She had devoted her life to changing. Clergymen denounced her, politicians disparaged her, and her face redoubled her in editorials and cartoons. She was portrayed as a lanky, testy spinster, clutching a finger about her shoulders, shouting invectives against marriage, males and society.

Yet she never yielded her position in it squarely. “Caution, careful people always consider that their rights are secure; the social standards never can bring about reform,” she said. “Those who are really in earnest must be willing to be anything and endure anything in the world's existing state and publicly, and privately, in season and out, avow their sympathies with despised ideas and bear the consequences.”

Publicly and privately, in season and out, Anthony and others—Elizabeth Stanton, Amelia Bloomer, Lucretia Mott and Lucy Stone among them—fought for the rights of women. To get the word made in effect out of the Constitution, they conducted, according to Carrie Chapman Catt in “Woman Suffrage and Politics,” 75 campaigns of referenda to male voters: 480 campaigns to urge legislators to submit suffrage amendments to voters; 47 campaigns to induce state constitutional conventions to write woman suffrage into state constitutions; 277 campaigns to persuade state party conventions to include woman suffrage planks; 39 campaigns to urge presidential party conventions to adopt woman suffrage planks in party platform; and 19 campaigns with 10 successive Congresses.

And although Susan B. Anthony did not live to see women’s suffrage, much was accomplished in her lifetime. By 1960, women’s suffrage became co-educational; the number of women teachers rose from 25 per cent to 80 per cent; women entered the field of dentistry; there were the given rights to take their cases before the Supreme Court, to own and control their own property, to sue and be sued, and to share in the guardianship of their children.

Hundreds of men and women gave the account of those political and public acts that secure the vote for the women. This is worth noting today when the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, first introduced into Congress in 1923, seems stalled and, some say, doomed. Just as the battle for women’s rights did not begin with the suffragettes (Anne Hutchinson organized women’s groups in Boston as early as 1834), neither did it end with the passage of the 19th Amendment 57 years ago today. The primary goals of the women’s rights movement in society in which women have control over their own lives, and where people are judged in human terms rather than arbitrarily defined roles based on sex.

Not only are the goals today similar—even the opposition to those goals remains basically un-hanged. Critics of the early suffragette movement threatened that if women were given the vote the American family would disintegrate. Much has been argued and is used today by opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment. When Margaret Sanger, a pioneer in contraception knowledge, distributed birth control information in the 1920s, she was accused of advocating racial suicide. Women’s rights to abortion are called murderers by some.

Much has been accomplished; much remains to be done. Before her death earlier this year, Alice Paul used stood before the white House steps as a protest that women were denied the vote. “Every woman,” she had said, “has a right to be as she pleases. And I want the women to have their rights as men have theirs, a woman’s vote. I want to insist that their right to vote is not an object to be achieved by political and social forces, but by the individual.”

Anthony trial: Was it a crime for a citizen to vote?

"Well, I have been and gone and done it!"

With those words, Susan B. Anthony announced to her friend Eliza Wheaton that she had broken the law in the Nov. 5, 1927, presidential election in her hometown of Rockland, N.Y. Anthony was 60 years old and had to pass before women would win the right to vote. For her action, Anthony was arrested and charged with violating a section of the poll tax law, because she “must have known when she did it she was a woman.” In celebration of their trial followed, Judge Hunt refused to allow Anthony to testify in her own defense. At the end of the trial, the judge ruled that the 14th Amendment did not apply, and rejected her appeal for a trial by jury. In his opinion, he said, "the stormy suffragette quiet during her trial, the judge made the mistake of addressing the court, and any statutory rule to make before sentence was passed.

According to a transcript of the trial reprinted in "Women's Equality Day," Judge Papachristou, the courtroom scene went this way: "Has the prisoner anything to say why sentence shall not be pronounced?"

MSS ANTHONY—Yes, your honor. I have many things to say: for in your ordered verdict of guilty, you have trampled upon the freedom of all of our government. My natural rights, my civil rights, my political rights, my judicial rights, are all alike ignored. I am degraded from the status of a citizen. That is the高压. I am not guilty of voting as an individual, but all of my sex, are, by your honorable verdict, doomed to political subjection under this so-called law.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court cannot listen to a rehearing of arguments that counsel has already consumed three hours in presenting. MSS ANTHONY—May it please your honor, I am not again going to make the same statement that I have already made, that the reasons why sentence cannot, in justice, be pronounced. May it please your honor, I am not guilty of voting as an individual, but all of my sex, are, by your honorable verdict, doomed to political subjection under this so-called law.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court cannot listen to a rehearing of arguments that counsel has already consumed three hours in presenting.

MSS ANTHONY—But your honor will not deny me this the only poor privilege of protest against that hand-hauled outrage upon my citizen's rights. May it please the court to remember that since the day of my arrest last November, that is the first time that either myself or any person of my disfranchised class has been allowed a word of defense before judge or jury— May it please your honor, I am not again going to make the same statement that I have already made, that the reasons why sentence cannot, in justice, be pronounced. May it please your honor, I am not guilty of voting as an individual, but all of my sex, are, by your honorable verdict, doomed to political subjection under this so-called law.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court cannot listen to a rehearing of arguments that counsel has already consumed three hours in presenting.

JUDGE HUNT—The prisoner must sit down— the Court cannot allow it.

MSS ANTHONY—The Court cannot allow it.

MSS ANTHONY—All my prosecutors, from the 8th ward corner grocer politicians, who entered the complaint, to the United States District Attorney, which offered the information, the District Attorney. District Judge, your honor on the bench, not one in my peer, but each and all are my political sovereigns, and had your honor submitted my case to the jury, as was clearly your duty, even then I should have been just cause for protest, for not one of those men was my peer; but native, foreign born, white, black, educated or ignorant, awake or asleep, sober or drunk, each and every man of them was my political superior. Hence, I was not my peer. Even, under such circumstances, a commuter of England, tried before a jury of Lords, would have far less cause to complain than those I am to do, tried before a jury of men. Even my counsel, the Hon. Henry R. Selden, who has argued my cause so ably, so earnestly, so unanswerably before your honor, is my political sovereign. Precisely as no disfranchised person is entitled to sit upon a jury, and no woman is entitled to the franchise, so, none but a regularly admitted lawyer is allowed to practice in the courts, and no woman can gain admission to the bar—hence, jury, judge, counsel, must all be superior class.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court is pleased— the prisoner has been tried according to the established forms of law. Miss Anthony—Yes, your honor, but by forms of law all made by men, administered by men, in favor of men, and against my honor’s ordered verdict of guilt, against a United States citizen for the crime of voting, only because that citizen was a woman and not a man... As the slaves who got their freedom must do, and as it is now done, through the usual forms of law, previously so now women, to get a, what is often given them, the right to be mistreated, and tax taken mine, and mean to take it at every possible opportunity.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court orders the prisoner to sit down. It will not allow another word.

MSS ANTHONY—Then I am not to sit before your honor for a broad and liberal interpretation of the Constitution and its recent amendments, that should declare all United States citizens under its protecting aegis—that should declare equality of rights the natural guarantees all women born or naturalized in the United States. But failing to get this justice—failing, even, to get a trial by jury of my peers—I ask leniency at your hands—but rather the full rigors of the law.

JUDGE HUNT—The Court must insist—

MSS ANTHONY—May it please your honor. I am not again going to make the same statement that I have already made, that the reasons why sentence cannot, in justice, be pronounced. May it please your honor, I am not guilty of voting as an individual, but all of my sex, are, by your honorable verdict, doomed to political subjection under this so-called law.

JUDGE HUNT—The prisoner will stand up.

MSS ANTHONY—May it please your honor. I am not again going to make the same statement that I have already made, that the reasons why sentence cannot, in justice, be pronounced. May it please your honor, I shall never pay a dollar of your unjust penalty. All the stock in trade I possess is a $15,000 debt, incurred by my publishing a paper—The Revolution—four years ago, the sole object of which was to educate all women to know that they do not become your man-made, unjust, unconstitutional forms of law. That is the only bond I have. I shall never deny them the right of representation in the government; and I shall work on with might and main to pay every dollar of the penalty I am to pay, in order to go to this unjust claim. And I shall earnestly and persistently ask for the practical recognition of the old revolutionary maxim that "Resistance is tyranny is obedience to God.”

Computer short courses offered

Academic Computing Services is offering 18 short courses this fall. "These courses are intended to aid present or potential computer users in increasing their knowledge about how to use the computer for various purposes," says William Wright, assistant professor in computing science.

According to Wright, the courses are designed to be a compromise between the completely individualistic approach of studying technical manuals or textbooks, and the very guided approach of a formal credit course. Courses such as "Introduction to Computing Facilities," and "Keyboarding" will begin and end on the same night. "These are not continuing programs. They meet for one day and require no fee," Wright said. Some programs, such as "Introduction to FORTRAN programming," requires that the student meet 16 hours during the semester. None of the programs offer any credit. Wright said, but "they provide a perspective and strong foundation to facilitate profitable further experience and study on an individual basis."

Snoopy and Baron here for air show

Snoopy and the Red Baron will fight it out again in the skies over Southern Illinois Saturday and Sunday (Sept. 17 and 18) at Southern Illinois Airport's 1977 Fall Air Show.

This year's show will feature performances by the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels precision flight team, skydiving by the Army's Golden Knights parachute team, stunt flyers and a fly-by of vintage fighter aircraft from the Experimental Aircraft Association. World War II flying ace Gregory "Pappy" Boyington will be a special guest at the two-day event.

The show will start at 2:30 p.m. Sept. 17. Snoopy and the Red Baron will pilot doughboys and tri-winged Folker craft through a 'real-life' version of their periodic comic strip dogfight, all done by radio control. Admission to the air show will be $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

FBI files show alleged burglary of Law Guild

WASHINGTON, AP—The FBI has disclosed the National Lawyers Guild and may have burglarized a student group's offices in Washington and New Haven, Conn., in the late 1940's and early 1950's, according to newly disclosed FBI files.

The guild is a national organization of lawyers and legal workers, which was founded in 1937 to work for civil rights and civil liberties. It was attacked as a communist-front organization during the "Red scare" era of the 1950s.

The guild recently filed a $7 million dollar damage suit accusing the FBI and other government agencies of illegal harassment and suppression of legitimate guild activities.

In the course of the lawsuit, the FBI was required to provide the guild with 3,000 pages of bureau files on the organization and its members.

Guild officials said in a written statement they have analyzed the files and found "ample evidence of the bureau's early campaign to silence criticism" from the guild.

The documents show that the FBI tapped telephones in the guild's national office in Washington in 1947 to 1951. The guild has since moved the national office to New York.

An FBI memo Nov. 5, 1947, to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, then the FBI director, described a conversation between two officials about the theft. "This information was obtained from the technical surveillance which is maintained on the office of Martin Popper, vice president of the National Lawyers Guild." The memo said "a complete transcript of the conversation" was being sent to Hoover.

The guild and the National Emergency Civil Liberties Foundation, Inc., which represents the guild in the lawsuit, contend that the wiretaps were illegal.

Under present law and court decisions, such wiretaps conducted without judicial warrants would be illegal. But the law on wiretaps in that era was considerably different.

The guild and the foundation said the documents show that FBI agents in 1947 apparently broke into the Yale Law School office of Prof. Thomas J. Emerson, then the guild president, to obtain an article Emerson was writing for the Yale Law Journal.

Emerson wrote the New Haven FBI office on June 14, 1948. "It is desired that you discretely attempt to ascertain if Professor Emerson is preparing some article or treatise discussing Hoover's recent congressional testimony.

The New Haven agent reported a month later that an FBI agent at Yale has been unable to ascertain Emerson's plans.

But on Sept. 22, 1948, the New Haven office sent FBI headquarters a photograph of a article prepared by Professor Emerson.

Hospital stays shorter when individual foots bill

EDWARDSVILLE (AP) — People who pay their own hospital bills tend to stay in hospitals less time than those in government-supported facilities, say two professors who studied data for a textbook on hospital costs.

Paul Sultan of Edwardsville and Harry Enos of Collinsville, faculty members of the Southern Illinois University Edwardsville School of Business here, have completed a textbook called "The Sociology of Health Care."

They say a researcher who studied hospital stay patterns of 9,000 patients served by 32 short-term hospitals found that patients who paid directly for services had the shortest stays and the smallest bills.

But those in hospitals supported by the government were confronted by the longest stays and the largest bills.

The educators feel that Americans fill hospitals because they think it is close to being without cost since the bill is paid either by an insurance company or the government.

"It is not impossible, for example, that a modest number of consumers may view hospitalization not so much as medical intervention but as a means of retreating from the pressures of everyday life," said Sultan.

"A short-term escape from problems through hospitalization in VIP facilities might be somewhat more expensive than American Plan vacation retreats at an area hotel. But the inhibitions of cost line much of their force if an insurance company pays 92 per cent of your hotel bill."

The authors claim that the most important reason for high costs of hospitalization is the rapid growth of third-party payments, which accounts for 86 per cent of reimbursement for hospital and related expenses.

"The government has undertaken an investigation of the role physicians play in Blue Cross and Blue Shield programs," said Enos.

"This reflects a concern that their presence on policy boards ensures a somewhat casual attitude about the increase of charges for hospital-related medical services."

The teachers say the dedication of hospitals, doctors and patients to quality care is another cost. They say the emphasis on cure, not costs, means that there is no limit on the kind of medical technology used on patients.

The professors say that although physicians may be sensitive to how much money a patient has, there is evidence that how much a hospital is used is directly related to whether the patient or an insurance company pays the bill.

Attention Students registering for Fall '77

Three new interdisciplinary courses will be offered in Fall '77. Each course will deal with value problems that arise in the practice of the professions and careers that base themselves upon 1) biological sciences, e.g., nursing, forestry; 2) communication arts, e.g., TV, journalism and 3) the social sciences, e.g., corrections, rehabilitation.

They are:

LAC 310 Values in the living world. Coordinator: Bengston and Hutch.

LAC 311 Values in the communication arts. Coordinator: Lawson.

LAC 312 Applied values in society. Coordinator: Appleby.

The courses have been developed by teams of people from the humanities, the relevant disciplines, and practitioners of these disciplines. The courses will proceed by study of actual cases chosen to illustrate the kinds of value decisions workers have to make, beginning with personal choices, and moving on to decisions that involve wider and wider circles of people: communities, the professions, or the nation.

Heavy use of cinema, slides, case-presentation by workers in the field, and the site-visits will help insure the relevance of the subjects treated to the real decisions students will confront in their futures. Term projects will be the c- of work asked of students.

Each course will meet twice a week, Tues.-Thurs., and one evening a week for films, site-visits, etc.

The courses are intended for the non-humanities students, do not presuppose prior work in the humanities, and are not designed to lead to a major in the humanities.

The courses are being offered under a project funded in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

It's the beginning of a new semester ... This time you're going to do it right. This time it's a 4.0, or maybe a 3.5. This time you'll keep up with the readings.

And the way to keep up is to buy your own textbooks.

They're always there when you need them, not just when a friend or the library can loan them to you.

Student injured on cycle

An SIU student was injured on a bicycle on campus.

Brian Flynn, a junior in pre law, was injured at 10:31 a.m. Thursday when he lost control of the bicycle. He was taken to Carbondale Memorial Hospital after being taken there by ambulance.

Flynn's motorcycle rolled and slid about 75 feet before it came to rest on a curb in the parking lot. He was injured, but he was later listed in satisfactory condition Wednesday afternoon in the hospital. His motorcycle was estimated to be worth $1,800.

Flynn was transferred to the SIU infirmary.

Thieves ransack apartments

Various items worth approximately $1,000 were reported stolen Wednesday in two separate burglaries at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

Robert W. Hurst, a graduate student in art, and John H. Bender, a senior in psychology, reported the apartment at 714 S. Lake Bridge Road was entered and items valued at about $300 removed.

Police said that Flynn acceleration too quickly as he left the parking area in the parking lot south of the Communications Building and lost control.

Flynn's motorcycle was taken by ambulance to Carbondale Memorial Hospital after it went out of control.

The police said that Flynn was transferred to the SIU infirmary.

Woman injured on bicycle

An SIU student lost control of her bicycle Wednesday and was taken to Carbondale Memorial Hospital where she was treated and released, the police said.

"We appreciate your business!"
Crisis intervention service seeks volunteers for telephone counseling

By Rick Gabbe
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Network is a 24-hour crisis-intervention telephone service that not only reaches out to the community with emergency services but is also seeking help for delivering the counseling services.

"Because we are helping us, we are here to help these ISU students," Barb Fipok, supervisor of Network counseling said.

Network, which needs about 60 volunteers to run the 67 counselors, counsels persons with problems like drug abuse, and other social problems in Jackson County. The first full training session runs Aug. 29 through Sept. 2. After the first week of training has been completed, the volunteer receives two on-the-job training sessions. Each volunteer is usually scheduled for one 4-hour shift every week to answer emergency calls.

The training session, which is held at the Wesley Foundation, 816 S. Illinois, will help teach a volunteer communication, counseling, and interviewing skills, and how to assess the severity of problems.

"Volunteers handle a vast majority of emergencies, both mild and severe," Genie Jacobs, coordinator of emergency services at the Network, said.

Both Fipok and Jacobs said that a 70 percent of the calls to Network come from students.

One doesn't have to be a crisis situation before someone calls," Fipok said, adding that 40 percent of the calls to Network come from students.

Both Fipok and Jacobs said that a volunteer feels kind of self-satisfaction after he or she has done a good job in peer-counseling.

Besides self-satisfaction, the volunteer receives a learning experience, personal growth, social interaction, and an awareness of community resources, Jacobs and Fipok said.

Network's crisis line is 549-2954.

Library gains Grant collection

The scrapbooks and family letters of President Ulysses S. Grant's sole surviving grandson have been given to Morris Library.

Chapman Grant, 90, of Easton,
Conn., presented his collection of about 68 family letters and 15 scrapbooks to Morris Library, which holds the largest collection of Grant family documents, letters and memorabilia outside the Library of Congress and the national archives.

Among the donations are a scrapbook containing drawings, watercolors and visual puzzles by Jessie Root Grant, the fourth child of Ulysses and Julia Dent Grant and father of Chapman, and a letter written by Ulysses S. Grant to Jesse expressing the President's displeasure with a project proposed by St. Louis engineer James L. Eads.

The letter criticizes a shipbuilding railroad ferry proposed by Eads as an alternative to the eventual Panama Canal, according to John Y. Simon, history professor, editor of "The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant." Simon said the entire donation will become part of Morris Library's Special Collections section, and will be made available to researchers and others interested in the Grant family.

Murphysboro gets $541,000 federal grant

A federal grant of $541,000 has been awarded to Murphysboro to finance a major surface drainage project in the city, Mayor Michael Bowers said Thursday.

Bowers said he was notified Tuesday that the U.S. Economic Development Administration (EDA) had approved funds for the project, which will alleviate drainage problems in residential areas on the southwest and west sides of the city.

Murphysboro had first applied for the EDA funds in June. A computer error had reduced the city's fund request to $153,000, Bowers said, but the error was soon corrected and the original request was granted.

Bowers said that engineering and planning work on the project is almost complete, and that construction bids will be awarded in about 90 days.

Bowers also said that the progress of construction work on the project, scheduled to begin this winter, will depend on weather conditions at the time.

"We hope to begin construction as soon as possible," Bowers said. "But if we have a winter like the one we just had, we won't be able to get much work done."

Cow's production utterly fantastic

VIENNA, Ohio (AP) — A 12-year-old Holstein cow named Patsy Bar Pontiac has taken ambled off with the champion butterfat title.

Her owners, Herman and Henry Gebke, who farm near here, reported Patsy produced 4,580 pounds of milk and 2,110 pounds of butterfat in 311 days—about five times the production of an average cow.

Patsy's mom held two national butterfat records and her grandma held the national title for 13 years.

The Carbondale Church of Christ publicly announces that our building is now open for worship, meetings, etc. in our city. We are located at 1671 E. Garden Ave., Carbondale. Daytime (8:00-5:00) and evening hours (7:00-9:00) are available. For more information call 618-549-3211.
Giant City State Park is beginning its 13th year of free weekend programs for resource education and entertainment.

The program will kick-off at 10 a.m. Saturday with a wildlife sign hike on Indian Creek Scenic Trail. The hike will last approximately one hour and persons are asked to meet at the trail. Maps of the trail can be found at the Visitor Center. Merriman said that birders should wear long pants and reasonably sturdy hiking shoes. He said the protective clothing should be worn because there is poison ivy on the trail.

Candlemaking will start at 2 p.m. at the Visitor Center. Supplies are provided by the park. The program will last for about one-half hour and serves as an example of pioneer life. Endangered wildlife of Southern Illinois will be the topic of the 8 p.m. Saturday campfire program. Those interested in listening to the talk are asked to meet at the Visitor Center Amphitheater.

Aside from the weekend programs, Giant City State Park offers special programming by reservation. Merriman said grade school groups can make arrangements for candlemaking, hikes and a live snake program. For other groups, the park can arrange programs according to the park's expertise and what the group desires. For reservations, the phone number is 569-6111. The center is open for calls from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

A husband-and-wife team of scientists at SIU has developed a method to use an exotic chemical reaction to detect early stages of hormonally treatable breast cancer.

Working with a team of researchers from the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation at La Jolla, Calif., Carl Y. Meyers, chemistry professor, and his wife, Vera, a post-doctoral fellow in organic chemistry, have found a way to use a process called "fluorescence polarization" developed by one of the program's mentors to detect small increases in estrogen (a male sex hormone) binding sites in mammary tissues. These increases signal the presence of breast cancer cells dependent on estrogen for growth.

Elpers sponsors studio open house

Elpers, SIU's radio and television production company, is having an open house for Elpers members and all people interested in television and radio production. The Open House will be at 8 p.m. Friday, in the Communications Building's studio 2.

Elpers is an organization that gives its members hours to use broadcasting equipment and how to prepare for broadcast on WIUI-FM and WSIU-TV. Elpers provides unique opportunities for students to learn, to gain valuable experience in broadcasting.

A Telpera production, directed and produced by Pong-Young Ko, entitled "Street Kids: At Work," will aired on WSIU-TV channel 8 as a 10 p.m. Thursday September 8th. Ko is a musical composition of a Chicago rock band going through a recording session for a song they wrote.

The fluorescence polarization process was developed by Walter B. Andisbacher, a biochemist who leads the B group biophysical chemistry group. Meyers and his wife came up with a way to attach the fluorescent compounds to estrogen molecules without seriously inhibiting the normal biological binding activities of the hormone.

What makes this work to detect early stages of breast cancer is the fact that levels of estrogen binding proteins are often elevated in malignant tissue, Meyers says. When the estrogen is "labeled" with the fluorescent material, even a slight increase above normal levels "sticks out like a neon sign" when tissues are viewed through a research instrument called a fluorescence microscope, he said. They think the new scheme for detecting early stages of breast cancer could be developed into a reliable method for mass screening that would cut the expense and complications of current screening techniques. Meyers says that fluorescent labeling is also more sensitive than what is now used.

Mrs. Meyers, who received her Ph.D. from SIU in 1976 under her husband's direction, recently was awarded a $5,000 fellowship by the University Research Foundation of La Jolla to continue her work in this area and to extend her investigations into the fluorescent labeling of estrogen-related compounds.

She will present a paper on her theory at the national meeting of the American Chemical Society later this month in Chicago.

Drinking age would be made 21 if temperance group had way

By T. Lee Hughes Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union urged Thursday that state laws ought to raise their legal drinking age to 21.

In spite of citizen opposition, many states lowered the drinking age to satisfy proponents and gain re-election votes," said Edith Stanley in a prepared address at the group's third annual convention.

She said that more than 8,000 young people are killed annually nationwide in drunk driving accidents.

"Yet legislators are afraid and have taken no action to pass bills that would again raise the drinking age to 21," she said.

Illinois, where the WCTU has its headquarters, lowered its legal drinking age for wine and beer from 21 to 18 in 1921. Fifty-eight per cent of 1,015 registered Illinois voters surveyed said they felt the drinking age should be returned to 21, a poll published in March by Gannett News Service showed.

But a bill to raise the drinking age failed by one vote this spring in the Illinois Senate.

The WCTU was formed in 1874, as an outgrowth of local women's temperance crusades that saw bands of women marching on saloons, singing prayers, and asking saloonkeepers to stop serving liquor.

The organization also adopted broader goals, fighting against legalized red-light districts, for women a right to vote and for red to stop traffic.

And Mrs. Stanley, WCTU public relations counsel, said it was unfair, for instance, that women march and sing in taverns and that such events occur at year's five-day convention.

"I don't know whether they'll never reach the point of singing in bars again," said Mrs. Stanley. "I think that the philosophy has changed.

Mrs. Stanley said the WCTU has a national membership of about 250,000 and that 600 delegates and visitors were expected at the convention.

She said the WCTU still hopes public sentiment eventually will favor a return to national prohibition as it existed during the 1920's and early 1930's.

"But we feel that there are other things that we must do in the meantime," she said.

That includes fighting for "Local option" laws allowing communities to outlaw liquor, seeking restrictions on the liquor industry, and promoting education programs stressing the dangers of alcohol, she said.

In recent years the WCTU has placed increased emphasis on the dangers of drugs such as marijuana and cocaine, and strongly opposes efforts to decriminalize use of either, she said.

But she said the WCTU still feels "that alcohol is our No. 1 enemy. It's been the No. 1 drug problem.

Mrs. Stanley feels that WCTU members are sometimes inaccurately portrayed by the news media and she reverses it.

"In many ways we have tried to do a bunch of old ladies that wear brown shoes and this type of thing," she said. "And the truth of it is that we have, very qualified people in our organization.

Disease-carrying mosquitoes, ticks found in Southern Illinois

By Chris Menach
Staff writer

The mosquito that bites you may be a vector of a virus responsible for St. Louis Encephalitis cases in human.

Last year there were 19 reported St. Louis Encephalitis cases in Illinois. The Illinois Department of Public Health said the disease is not at epidemic proportions and only three have been reported in Illinois. Two of them have been in Jackson County.

The other case was reported in LaSalle County in central Illinois. In Jackson County, a 9-year-old girl and a 30-year-old man contracted the disease. Charlotte Cook, a resident of Jackson County, said the disease was not confirmed in the area but the person did not return.

Not all mosquitoes are transmitters of disease or even of potential carriers. The disease causing potential of mosquitoes is based on the habitat they are found in. The Culicoida species may be carried by the virus from the bird to the blood of humans, other birds and the mosquito's own habitat.

Jackson said the disease is contagious by a human from the Culicoida species. The symptoms occur in five to 10 days. The symptoms include high fever and headaches and the person usually requires hospitalization.

Jacks said there is no cure for the disease. The young people with this disease are not immune to it. The young person may be susceptible because their body is not strong enough to fight the disease and that these people are usually outside more often than the other age groups. Since there is no cure, Jackson said the person is hospitalized and given medication to ease the discomfort.

The viral activity may cause blood to be drained and the blood to be lowered in the more severe cases, though, there may be residual effects such as mental or motor impairment.

Jackson said the prevention can be done by getting the virus at a high rate but it cannot be transmitted from human to human. She said the best barrier against viral infection is prevention.

The best way to get a mosquito abatement program is in cooperation with the city government. It is authorized by state law to control the growth of weeds. According to a public notice issued by the city, the maximum height of weeds and grass is 6 inches. The control of weed and grass growth can eliminate hiding places for adult mosquitoes.

The program, funded through a mosquito abatement tax levied on carbonated homeowners also contains area residents. Mosquitoes generally remain in a radius of one mile from the place of their birth so homeowners can take the necessary precautions to eliminate potential breeding sites. Water which has remained for over one week, birdhouse, cluttered rain gutters and down spouts and uncovered trash cans become breeding sites for mosquitoes.

To eliminate the breeding sites, homeowners should clean gutters and downspouts, keep lawns trimmed, empty and clean bird baths, properly dispose of trash, remove overhanging vegetation from streams and ditches and properly dispose of all sewage or other waste.

When outside the individual can further safeguard himself by applying insect repellent to exposed skin and clothing. The Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever is the name of the disease that can be transmitted to humans during the first time or the southern Illinois area in a year. O'Neil said. Jackson said the disease can be transmitted through the mouth of the tick or through the mouth of the tick. The disease is characterized by a sudden onset of symptoms such as chills and fever, headache, blood spots on the hands and wrists and a rash on the hands and wrists. The disease is definitely a fever to humans.

Miners fight over walkout in Appalachia

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) - Nine weeks after stubborn miners began striking coal mines throughout Appalachia, at least 38,000 miners stayed on the job Thursday as workers fought among themselves over whether to end the walkout.

Much of the trouble was in West Virginia, where police broke up a mine on Wednesday night. "It's brother against brother," said Talmadge Dean of Elkhorn Pa., a member of a group seeking to end the strike, "not against the strike, but against the rules which gradually appears on the disease. There are two cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever reported in Jackson County this year.

The best prevention is to avoid tick infested areas. Jackson said. Ticks can usually be found on pathways of vegetation which is traveled by potential victims of their bloodstream. If an area cannot be avoided, persons should wear clothing that are covered with long pants and sleeves with high boots and socks worn outside the trousers. The insect repellent can be applied to exposed skin and clothing.

If a tick is found on a person, despite precautions, the tick should be removed with forceps. The tick can be used to stimulate the disease in the person. The tick should be removed with forceps. The tick can be used to stimulate the disease in the person.

Educators could face lawsuits for poor teaching of students

CHICAGO (AP) - If Johnny can't read, the parents may fault the teacher with a malpractice suit instead of a nasty note, an educator warned.

William G. Sch tablet, former president of the National Education Association, said parents may increasingly view their children's poor teachers as their former poor teachers of their school. Parents may increasingly view their children's poor teachers as statistically not the fault of the teacher.

"For every suit filed against the teacher for malpractice, the teacher can file a counterclaim against the parent for malpractice," he said.

Stipulation disagrees. "The fact that there are poor parents doesn't excuse poor teachers," he said.

"Children are the victims of poor parents, but they don't have to have to stuck with poor teachers," he said. "The malpractice trend may be noticeable now but it will gain numbers because the conditions are ripe, educators say.

Parents have lost one such suit, but another is pending in New York.

"The numbers are not significant now, but more parents are increasing several lawsuits as a way of redressing their grievances. And of making money," said Roger Newell, an education law specialist for the American Federation of Teachers.

He said consumer-orientation prompts parents to consider a lawsuit when they suspect their children are not getting adequate education.

"You want to get what you pay for," Newell said in a telephone interview at his office in Washington. "You can't go back for a refund on education, but you can sue for damages," Newell said.

He added that parents' lawsuits have been so far unsuccessful in court.

"One judge in a pending case cautioned his colleagues on the bench not to rule on education-oriented issues because there are so many variables involved," he said.

Since it is an important science, there are no specific standards on what's good or bad education, Newell said.

Among the cases now worrying teachers is one by the parents of a Long Island, N.Y. student who has graduated from his high school but has not the elementary school level.

Workers set own hours using 'flextime' system

By Scott Ellis
Staff Writer

Most SIU civil service workers will be able to keep setting their own working hours this fall under an experimental 'flextime' system introduced this summer.

Under the flextime program, office employees and other civil service workers are allowed to arrange their working hours around the standard eight-hour weekday so long as they turn in 40 hours a week, according to Robert Gentry, vice president for financial affairs.

Gentry said SIU is the first university to use the flextime system, which was developed by a German economic 10 years ago and is now used in Europe and industrial plants. It will be continued here through Jan. 13, 1978, Gentry said. "To see if it works as well during the academic year as it did for the summer."

Gentry said a late summer survey of administrative and civil service workers showed overwhelming employee approval of flextime.

" Seventy-two per cent of the people surveyed thought it was great and voted for it to continue," Gentry said.

"In some cases it may mean earlier starting times, like 6-2 p.m., shorter lunch breaks and earlier quitting times. Others come to work later and go home well into the evening hours, and some build up enough hours early in the week so they can take Friday afternoon off," he said.

He added, however, that there are limits to the program because all offices must be open and able to provide full service during the regular workday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"Flextime in the Bursar's Office doesn't work too well because of the heavy service requirements during the workday," he pointed out.

Michael Norrin, University police training officer, said 90 per cent of Security Office personnel aren't able to go on flextime.

"Police officers have patrol hours and duties that must be performed at certain times, and we simply can't go on the system because of that," he explained.

"Employees can arrange their hours as long as they're on the job, but when Gentry called "core hours" 8:30 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 3:30 p.m. on weekdays and 8:30 to noon on Friday.

"These core hours are certain hours when everyone is expected to be at work," he said.

Karathe club meeting planned

An organizational meeting of the SIU Interfraternity Karate Club, a new club on campus, will be held 7:30 p.m. Monday, in Activity Room A, breaking open the Student Center.

The club is based on the concepts of an Okinawan-Japanese word meaning "one heart, one mind and stresses discipline in varied aspects of a person's life-mental, social, and moral physical.

Dunning says he will work closely with EAP but has no plan of joining

By Scott Ellis
Staff Writer

Although he plans to work closely with the Illinois Action Party (EAP), leaders and agrees with many EAP policies, Sam Dunning, newly-elected Student Senate President Pro-tum, said Thursday he would not work to bring plans to join the EAP.

Richard J. Archer, a member from University Park, said "I'm closely aligned with the EAP, which is organized as an independent, but I was elected as an independent, and I'm still an independent. I've voted for an elected senate pro-tum Wednesday Dunning said he would work closely with the EAP, student body president, and Sue Bell, vice president both EAP members.

Dunning added that he can do a better job representing University Park as pro-tum than he did last semester, as chairman of the EAP's Campus Internal Affairs (CIA) committee.

"Most of last semester, my post distracted from being able to represent University Park," he said. "I was able to participate in activities, like meeting with House Council. But I had not been chair of CIA, I would have done better.

Dunning also said a lot of his time was spent trying to remove the Truman student organization from campus. "I view my new role as that of a coordinator," helping Sue and Donna in initiating senate business." He said "I'll have more discretion in deciding what parts and aspects of senate business I'll participate in."

However Dunning said, "I want to make initiative on my own and get the senate to take an active role in solving problems and affairs. I won't be the senate to do things in the past." Existing he agrees with most of EAP's positions. Dunning said he was against a proposed health service fee increase. "Based on information I have at this time, I am opposed to it. Dunning said he was against a proposal health service fee increase. Based on information I have at this time, I am opposed to it."

Unlike the late Mayor Richard J. Archer, who was sometimes called the "boss" of the machine, has prestige extended for beyond that title.

It was Archer who, in fashioning his 1968 state ticket, elevated to the national scene two men no one knew that a number of party professionals scoffed openly that Paul Douglas or the U.S. Senate and Adlai E. Stevenson for governor of Illinois. Both won in upset, along with Harry S. Truman. Unlike his father, towering Alderman Matthews "Pat" Bower, who died Saturday."

Women's tennis team has depth

By Bed Vandergrucht
Staff Writer

The women's tennis team's first match is scheduled Tuesday at 3 p.m. at Eastern Kentucky, but that is not the only match on Coach Judy Auld's mind these days. The state tournament, which is slated Oct. 7-8 at Western Illinois, is already of concern to Auld as she prepared her team for the fall season.

Auld's team is coming off a successful season in which they finished second in the state tournament. The team has a good chance to improve on that performance this year, and Auld says she expects the team to perform well.

Some of the team's top performers are seniors including Sue Briggs, Sue Cisney, and Jeanne De Pauw. Other members of the team include juniors Anna Auld, Marsha Bladen, and Joe Cipollardi. The team has a strong core of returning players, and Auld believes this will help them achieve their goals this season.

Baseball Salukis start fall practice

The SIU baseball team will begin practice for the fall season on Friday, October 7th. The team will practice from 2:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Baseball Field on the campus of Illinois College.

The Salukis are looking to build on the success of last season and are excited to get back on the field. Head Coach Mike Huggins is optimistic about the team's prospects and is confident that they can achieve their goals.

IM volleyball club to meet Monday

The SIU intramural volleyball club will hold its first meeting on Monday, October 10th, at 7:00 p.m. in Room 136 of the Student Recreation Building. This meeting provides an opportunity for interested students to learn more about the club and to register for the fall season.

The club offers recreational volleyball to students who want to improve their skills. This year's team is looking to make a strong showing and is committed to providing a fun and competitive environment for its members.

IM department enacts rule changes

By Jim Wimmer

and Gary White

Jean Paratore, who was appointed coordinator of the combined intramural department this summer has enacted several new rule changes that will affect participants that fall.

Paratore said eligibility rules of both men's and women's intramurals will be the same to avoid confusion for students.

One major change is the eligibility of former intercollegiate athletes in their respective specialties.

Previously, if an athlete had lettered in an intercollegiate sport, he would have to wait one year before participating intramurally.

Paratore said the feels such athletes should not be denied the opportunity to participate in sports they enjoy competing in.

She said such "varsity" athletes would be allowed to play in Division A and only one "varsity" athlete would be allowed on each team.

Paratore said that in tennis, badminton and racquetball such athletes would have to play in A divisions, while in wrestling, swimming and track & field such athletes would be limited to one a team.

"Covering has come into our programs with the addition of several new co-recre sports," Paratore said. "They range from indoor-water polo to golf. The intramural swimming and diving and track championships will have the same rules competing against each other but men and women are on the same teams and their points will go toward a over compehionship.

Women's floor hockey and 12-inch softball have also been added.

"Other changes made are the allowance of faculty and student members to compete in intramurals if they have an IRSC Use Card," said Paratore. "Most intramural sports activities will be divided into two separate program—Division A and Division B. Division B is for extremely competitive teams, and Division A is suited for players who are recreationally competitive.

Paratore's assistant is Joyce Creavey who was the assistant coordinator of women's intramurals and women's' swimming coach. She is responsible for publicity of intramural sports programs. Jim Maloney is the new coordinator of recreational sports.

Larry Schaake, former men's intramural and recreational sports coordinator is now coordinator of the combined intramural and recreational departments.

Dempsey: Passing game will be better

By Jim Mizzman
Sports Editor

The 1977 Saluki football team should feature an improved passing game over last season, says head coach Roy Dempsey.

"Whoever plays at quarterback this year will complete about 30 passes more than last season with a 50 percent completion average," Dempsey said. In 1976, SIU completed 61-140 passes for a 44 percent average.

Dempsey said Friday's 3-15-5 intra­planar scrimmage would be one of the team's final tests before SIU's Sept. 3 opener against New Mexico State at Last Crusade, Ill.

He said Bob Collins, a 5-10, 180-pound sophomore from Chicago, completed 18 passes for 221 yards in 1976. Collins threw four touchdown passes en route to 36 completions last year.

"The team knows we have two No. 1 quarterbacks," he said. "He has been more consistent and he's in command. He's a fine field general and the other players respect him and have confidence in his ability."

He said Evans also will play well if called upon, and said Evans is "more relaxed and composed at the end of last year."

Two freshmen—John Cernak and Gerald Carr—are quarterbacks of the future.

"John is our No. 3 man now and he has played well against the No. 1 and No. 2 men during the spring," Dempsey said. "He's a left-handed junior from Chicago and Carr played high school football in Davidson."

Dempsey said the quarterbacks will be "primarily to run the West Coast." All three potential starters—Kevin Evans, Bob Collins and Warren—played a great deal in 1976.

Warren, a 6-5, 240-pound transfer from Indiana, led the team with 112 passes at tight end last year to lead the nation in passing yardage. From University, City., Mo., nabbed 11 catches and Short, a wingback, nine in 1976.

Quarterback John Cernak (ball), a freshman from Mt. Carmel, went back to pass in Thursday's Saluki practice. The 6-4, 210-pounder is challenging Bob Collins, Reggie Evans and Gerald Carr for the starting spot at quarterback this year.

He said the Salukis' Depth Chart will be composed as follows: Major, a starter in 1976 at wingback, and Roger Rea, a backup tight end both will be "definitely" all­lined year with knee injuries. Greg Warren, the starting tight end, has also been slowed by a minor knee injury, but has returned to practice.

"Greg's gotta be good for us," Dempsey said. "House is an excellent receiver who can really catch the ball and blocks well. Short runs well, has good balance and can catch the ball."

Dempsey said backup players are

Salukis' Reburn takes eighth place in state tourney

Saluki Jim Reburn after shooting a one-under-par 71 in the final round of the 47th annual Illinois Amateur golf championship at Rockford.

He finished in the tournament with a four-round total of 296.

"I talked to Jim on the phone afterward and he's just exhausted," SIU Golf Coach Jim Barret said. Jim was on the No. 7 hole and after that, things were going just fine."

Dempsey said Jim was "more concerned about our passing game over the last season."

You to experts catches completions last year.骰es, grades up in order to last season."

The education process the NCAA completed from touchdowns. Jim "Iw Grant, said the athletics department."

During Donald Corin's tenure as athletics director, athletes who were placed on probation were either ineligible and also lost his scholarship. You to experts catches completions last year."

The Valley Ten requirements for hours passed are also more stringent than the Valley's. A freshman must pass a minimum of 24 hours, but a minimum of 77 hours must be passed after that. Big Ten Information Officer Jim Dewey says the more stringent policy by saying, "we also want to make sure our athletes are making honest progress toward a degree. A person can take 24 hours of basketball weaving and remain eligible. The courses that a student takes must count toward a degree in his major area of study." Dewey notes requirements show that the average person graduate from college in 4 years. The Big Ten guidelines on GPA and hours passed are based on that figure. He says schools such as Purdue, Indiana and Michigan State have guidelines for eligibility that are more stringent than the Big Ten rules.

Dewey says coaches in the Big Ten often complain that the academic policies hurt them in recruiting. But he notes that the Big Ten rules have a positive effect on recruiting. "A student-athlete who is genuinely interested in his education can see from our academic standards that he must get degrees," Dewey says. "There is a reason why athletics and academics cannot be combined. What do you do in this business for?"

Eligibility requirements at SIU have remained in effect since 1971. During Donald Corin's tenure as athletics director, athletes who were placed on probation were either ineligible and also lost his scholarship. You to experts catches completions last year."

This is no longer the case. A person once ineligible due to a grade problem is still eligible for competition if Valley guidelines concerning hours passed are met.

Study hard, future college athletes may be genuinely concerned about your grades in basketball weaving still open?"
