City OKs ban on trailer add-ons

By Wm. Bryan DeVasher
Staff Writer

A new ordinance aimed at eliminating mobile home additions, or "add-ons," has been passed by the Carbondale City Council.

Under the new ordinance, mobile homes in the R1 zones of the city must contain at least 800 square feet of floor space. All new mobile homes in the R1 areas must be at least 14 feet wide.

The only additions allowed under the ordinance passed Monday are "tip-outs," or additions manufactured as part of the home.

Many "add-ons," according to a report by City Planner Linda Gladson presented to the council at its Aug. 7 meeting, are nothing more than "additions that look and function as screened or unheated, semi-enclosed porches rather than living space."

Gladson also pointed out in her report that the only mobile homes requiring additions were the smaller 10-and-12-foot-wide homes. Gladson reported that many of these older homes do not meet federal building standards and by only allowing new 14-foot-wide mobile homes in R1 zones compliance with federal standards would be ensured.

Mayor Helen Westberg presented a proposal to the council asking the city to investigate building a new mobile home subdivision to make property available to mobile home owners who may not otherwise be able to purchase property.

According to Don Monty, director of community development, cost would be the only prohibitive factor in the development of a new mobile home subdivision.

"If you had to put in all new streets, sewer lines, etc., then the cost may be too expensive for some mobile home owners," Monty said.

In an attempt to reduce costs, the city may encourage some owners of empty lots on the northeast and northwest side of the city to seek zoning changes in order to construct the new mobile home subdivision. This would help reduce costs, Monty said, because the lots are currently served by streets and sewer lines.

A compromise measure submitted to the council requiring mobile and conventional homes to contain at least 750 square feet of floor space failed.

The amended ordinance, calling for the 800 square feet floor space requirement, passed the council unanimously.

Council refuses to grant liquor license for festival

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

The Bluegrass Festival to be held at Evergreen Park Sept. 21 is expected to be declared a City Fair at the Sept. 9 Carbondale City Council meeting on the recommendation of the Carbondale Local Liquor Control Commission.

If the council declares the festival a city fair, public consumption of alcohol would be legal.

The commission voted Monday night to refuse the Carbondale Park District's request that a Class C liquor license be granted for the event. Carbondale City Council members also comprise the Local Liquor Control Board.

Commissioner John Yow supported the event but said that the city should not permit the sale of alcohol in public parks because it "downgrades the purpose of the park."

CARBONDALE POLICE Chief Ed Hogan said that based on the city's limited experience in declaring City Fairs for similar events, public consumption of alcohol at those events have not presented any serious problems.

Hogan went on to say that the Bluegrass Festival "is a City Fair Day-type of event" and that a liquor license might be worth a try.

He said that past problems at such events were mostly parking related, citing inadequate parking facilities at the event for the crowds generated at such festivals.

The commission voted to approve J.P.W. Enterprises, Inc. request to expand the yet to be opened Southern Liquor Mart at 603 South Illinois Avenue. James P. Winfree, owner of Southern Liquor Mart, and Harvey Woods were present as petitioners. Woods stated for the record that he is not the architect of record for the liquor store.

IN A special Local Liquor Control Commission hearing held prior to Monday night's city council meeting, testimony was heard on four cases of alleged liquor code violations.

Russell Branch, owner of Palm Tavern, Inc., 222 North Wright Street, pled guilty to one charge that the tavern served alcohol after hours on July 28, 1985. He did point out that this act was committed without his prior knowledge.

Branch pled not guilty to a second charge that he made a false statement on a liquor license application filed April 19, 1985. The commission scheduled a hearing on this matter for a later date, either Sept. 9 or Sept. 16.

GERALDINE HOWARD, doing business as the YMCC Club, 110 East Oak Street, is charged with admitting the public after 2:15 a.m. on Aug. 10, 1985 and serving alcohol to those admitted.

On a second charge, Howard is charged with issuing a false

Nigerian army ousts ruler in bloodless coup

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (UPI) — The Nigerian army toppled military ruler Gen. Mohammed Buhari in an apparently bloodless coup Tuesday, charging that his 20-month regime had failed to end corruption and improve the rich nation's battered economy.

The army later installed Maj. Gen. Ibrahim Babangida, the chief of army staff, as the new president.

The coup was the sixth in black Africa's most populous and richest nation since its independence from Britain in 1960. No violence was reported in the takeover.

In a 14-minute address broadcast on Lagos radio, Babangida accused Buhari of being "too rigid and uncompromising in his attitude to issues of national significance.

"The principles of discussions, consultation and cooperation, which should have guided the decision-making process of the Supreme Military Council and the Federal Executive Council were disregarded soon after the government settled down in 1984," Babangida said.

Babangida said journalists arrested under Buhari's regime would be immediately freed because his new government wished to "uphold fundamental human rights.

New copyright policy to include software

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw approved a new SIU-C policy on patents and copyrights, the first to specifically include computer software.

The policy, signed by Shaw on Aug. 9, took two years to write, said Barbara C. Hansen, graduate school dean and author of the document. It replaces the original policy which was written about 25 years ago.

Hansen said the new policy was written because the "University is interested in commercializing potentially patentable materials produced by its faculty."

Shaw commented on the policy, saying it is "essential" because it encourages faculty entrepreneurship. He said it also "is a way to be sure that all interested parties are treated fairly up front."

Under the policy, any patentable invention, product, process or discovery developed by an SIU-C employee "belongs to the University and shall be used and controlled in ways that will produce the greatest benefit to the University and to the public."

The policy covers all copyrightable materials, computer software and other computer technology. These materials include, but are not limited to, textbooks, musical compositions and visual art, tests and other measurement devices.

Hansen explained that technically, computer software can be marketed or developed and patented in the same way that inventions are. But because software is a written medium, it can also be copyrighted.

Salvadorans charge 3 men with slaying of Americans

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran security forces aided by American investigators seized three men allegedly responsible for a sidewalk massacre in June in which four U.S. Marines were slain, authorities said Tuesday. Leftist guerrillas dressed in army uniform opened fire on a crowded cafe June 19, killing the Marines, two American businessmen and six Latin Americans. A group calling itself The Central American Revolutionary Workers Party claimed responsibility for the ambush.

Anti-apartheid leader jailed on eve of march

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Police arrested prominent dissident Rev. Allan Boesak at a roadblock Tuesday on the eve of an illegal march he vowed to lead to the prison where black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela is jailed. Boesak is a major figure in protests against the white-minority government's apartheid policy of racial segregation. Police said he was being held under a section of the Internal Security Act that allows for almost indefinite detention without trial and without access to lawyers or family.

State Department protests arrest of dissident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Tuesday the United States has formally protested the arrest of South African religious leader Allan Boesak, detained in the white minority government's sweeping state of emergency. At the same time, leaders of the 3.1 million-member Presbyterian Church (USA) and three Lutheran bodies with more than 5 million members urged President Reagan to seek the release of the Rev. Boesak.

Pentagon scraps 'Sergeant York' project

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After pumping $1.8 billion into the project, the Pentagon junked the "Sergeant York" anti-aircraft weapon Tuesday, with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger saying it doesn't work and is too expensive. The death knell for the controversial Division Air Defense weapons came after 11 years' work on a new way to knock down Soviet aircraft threatening U.S. ground troops. The first unit was delivered in May 1984, but the weapon never lived up to expectations. The Army is presently using a 20mm Gatling gun, the shoulder-fired Stinger missile and the Chaparral rocket, fired from a tracked vehicle, to protect ground troops from aerial attack.

Ethiopia reports dramatic drop in death rate

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — An Ethiopian official reported "marked improvement" Tuesday in Ethiopia's fight against starvation and said the nation's death rate has fallen dramatically. Until recently, Ethiopia, with 8 million people starving, has been on top of the list of some 20 African nations most severely affected by drought. Sudan now heads the list. But the government is not dismantling any of the 50 camps and 400 food distribution centers because it foresees no significant change in the number of people that will need aid in 1986.

Extensive cracking found in aircraft engines

LONDON (UPI) — A number of jetliners with engines similar to one that blew up during a deadly accident last week were ordered grounded Tuesday night after authorities found "extensive cracking" in some of them. The Civil Aviation Authority ordered "urgent checks" on the American-made Pratt and Whitney JT8D engines after discovering the cracks. The JT8D, the most widely used jet engine in the world, is used on the Boeing 737, the Boeing 727 and the McDonnell-Douglas DC-9.

Shuttle launched, crew deploys satellites

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Discovery rocketed into orbit ahead of an advancing squall Tuesday and its crew later launched two satellites, one on an emergency basis, in the first double deployment in one day from a space shuttle. The twin satellite launchings added to the drama of a mission already considered one of the most ambitious shuttle flights yet undertaken because of a daring spacewalk satellite salvage attempt planned for Labor Day weekend. Discovery got off to a smooth start after launch director Robert Sieck won a gamble that there would be a break in the weather at launch time.

"Established Service You Can Depend On"

Civil service reps question basis for pay raises

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

If merit increases in salary can be administered to civil service employees according to an accurate definition of "meritorious service," SIU-C civil service range representatives would like to know that definition — so as to avoid future "inequities."

This was the message conveyed by the University's Civil Service Range Employees Committee during an informal question-and-answer session Monday with SIU-C Vice President for Financial Affairs Charles Hendersman and William Capie, University executive director of personnel services and labor relations.

Paramount to the merit increase issue was a request by the range representatives for "equality through normal attrition of civil service funds instead of through state funds," said Barbara Humphrey, range committee member.

"The University has no workable plan for civil service members to establish merit," said David Saunders, committee chairman. "Civil service employees may resist merit until that plan is established."

Merit increases became a concern among civil service range workers after the University administration devised the 1986 SIU-C fiscal year salary increases, amounting to roughly 8 percent for range people, plus administrative and professional staff. President Albert Somit suggested, prior to the final draft of the salary plan this spring, that roughly 2 percent be pulled out of both employment categories for meritorious reallocation to those University servants so deserving.

But no endorsement of the president's suggestion came from the range employees — agents of the civil service contracted specifically to the University and not through an outside union — and the range employees have kept the University administration abreast of their dissatisfaction since that time.

"There has been lots of criticism toward Personnel about how to administer merit," Capie said. "The proposal was the president's idea, and I still think the action was sound financial procedure."

However, Capie stressed that using a simple performance appraisal would not work as a definitive merit determinant, in that an appraisal "is not the same as merit, although they must meet at some point." Capie could not be specific as to where the distinction lies.

Hendersman noted that some people in range employment were tabbed for nearly 4 percent merit increments, delimited by documentation in some campus departments as to why that person was getting additional reward.

"But that means someone else is getting less than the 2 percent they have coming," Saunders pointed out.

Hendersman nodded his head in agreement and said, "This is why we need an accurate scale from which to determine merit."

Humphrey noted attrition as a possible solution to keeping the full 8 percent salary increase intact while still being able to comply with the president's merit request. Through attrition, the wages of those non-returning civil service employees, already earmarked for the succeeding fiscal year, would be redesignated for either the merit component or as a tag onto the planned salary increase.

SIU-C undergoes annual state financial audit

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Economy of function is a subject of chief concern with the managers of SIU-C's financial affairs at this time of year, when the University undergoes its annual financial review by the state.

"It's a matter of procedure," said Walter Rehwald, assistant to the SIU System financial officer. "Each year the state's auditor general looks at our finances to see how things are going. It's the nature of all large agencies in Illinois."

DESPITE THE connotations surrounding the word "audit," this disclosure examination is not based on "unreported income" or "business deductions" found too late for the Internal Revenue Service to record.

"The University prepares a series of financial statements for each department, which are sent to Springfield," explained Robert Cronson, Illinois auditor general. "Then the auditor's office sends a reply that might include an 'attestation.'"

An attestation is a form that asks the University financial officers to supply more information for further verification of funds utilized in a certain department or other smaller financial concern. Should the state's auditor still question the use of some funds, a review will be organized to address the dollar discrepancy.

"IF NOTHING is questioned, all the University has to do is get ready for next year's review," Cronson said.

"Next year's review" will actually be a combination of two audits — one for finances, and another "compliance" examination, administered by the state only every other year.

"The compliance audit determines whether everything is done as it should be, as a means of upgrading performance," Rehwald explained.

NOTWITHSTANDING THE effort on the part of the entire University financial network to comply with the audits, the University controller is the man to whom the campus administration must direct questions of an "audit" nature.

"And even then I don't have much to say. The state sends down a couple of professional auditors to spend some time examining the books. I can't encourage them and I can't stop them," said SIU-C Controller Jeffery Holder. "The state auditor sends them here, and the state auditor is directed by state statute to do so."

WHETHER THE news is good or bad for the University, Cronson must report his findings to the Illinois General Assembly during its next session, with a little help from the legislature's audit committee, a 12-member assemblage of congressmen from both the Illinois House and Senate.

Response from the lawmakers to this report "may or may not play an important role in how much money the University gets the next fiscal year," Cronson said.

Holder expects the state's accountants to walk into his office sometime in the early spring. This year the audit began in February and will reach completion, according to Cronson, "whenever it gets done," although the last of the paperwork cannot go beyond the following December.

"The completion date and time frame of the audit depends on the condition of an agency's records," said Cronson.

Disgusting scene hurts free speech

CARBONDALE RECEIVED A surprise attack last week. At least, that's how Jed Smock, a Bible-thumping, hair-raising, name-calling preacher termed his visit to SIU-C. Smock had a lot to say while he was here. But maybe the most important message was one he never intended - and maybe it had nothing to do with the Bible.

It had to do with free speech. While Smock exercised his method of "confrontational exhortation" to make students "repent and believe!" he was continually harassed by people throwing rocks and shouting obscenities. He was even sprayed with shaving cream several times.

There is no doubt that many people find Smock's messages ridiculous. He condemns as sinful everything from rock 'n' roll to women in shorts. His social visions, many people think, are laughable.

SMOCK AND HIS COHORTS believe in their message, otherwise, they wouldn't travel to speak on college campuses in every state except Alaska nine months a year.

The point is, everyone has the right to express an opinion. Smock chooses college campuses because their policies allow him more freedom to express his views — and that's how it should be.

While in Carbondale, he chose the Free Forum area on campus in which to speak. But the hooligan behavior of some spectators mocked the very name and idea of the Free Forum. Free speech — one of the world's most treasured freedoms — was trampled by people comparable to book burners and Nazis.

The First Amendment protecting free speech is not just a base for American law; it is a fundamental right for all free peoples. In the United States, free speech is protected by the Constitution. But free speech also means having the right to express opinions without the fear of being harassed by disrespectful and immature people who don't know what civility means.

First Amendment rights should protect everyone with a message — no matter how extreme. Even Jed Smock.

Falwell lacks morals

The so-called leader of the Moral Majority Rev. Jerry Falwell, apparently has few if any morals. As a Christian and American, I must say that it saddens me to watch a man who calls himself a member of the clergy voice support for what is obviously the world's most racist and oppressive government. It is enough to cause me to wonder if Mr. Falwell is badly misinformed, totally unaware of the facts, if he is simply taking this position due to some financial incentive or if he is simply a racist and closet bigot himself.

Apartheid denies basic civil and human rights to the part of South Africa's population who can trace their roots for hundreds of years into its history. The government openly admits that blacks are denied the right to vote. The government's laws stipulate that blacks cannot own land (except in nontillable areas the government deems appropriate). The medical, educational and other social services provided for blacks, Indians and "coloreds" (people of mixed races) are not only separate from those services provided to the whites but also vastly inferior. Whites have first choice where employment is concerned and they also receive vastly superior salaries for doing the same work.

Consider the wages of miners in South Africa. If a white miner were to earn $100 per week for swinging a pick, a black miner would receive approximately $20 per week for doing the very same work.

The facts undeniably point out the injustice, callousness and immorality of the position taken by the South African government. So what is it that Mr. Falwell is doing? For one thing it seems that he is making himself appear foolish to his counterparts in South Africa. The church leaders who met with President Botha recently made it clear that Falwell did not know what was going on in South Africa.

It is a pity that someone with as many followers as Falwell should take such a misguided stance. Perhaps one day we will all learn that the gates to heaven have one entrance for all races, creeds and colors, as do the gates of hell. — William B. Talley, doctoral candidate, rehabilitation.

Jed's return brings back memories from years past

EARLY LAST WEEK I heard two words which brought a smile to my face and curiosity to my mind: "Jed's back."

If you weren't one of the people in the crowd which gathered in the Free Forum area to watch — and I mean watch — George Edward "Jed" Smock and his counterpart Jim Gilles preach their message of salvation, you've at least read about it.

I found out about Jed and Jim last year, quite by accident. I was pedaling back to my abode in Neely Hall after Monday morning classes when Jim, who was preaching in the Free Forum area, accused me of listening to "devil worshipping rock 'n roll" on my Walkman.

That comment sowed the seeds of a good confrontation.

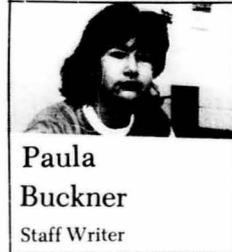

We argued for two hours on many things, especially my attire — sweats and a t-shirt. He called me everything from a silly, wicked woman to a homosexual.

The crowd grew by leaps and bounds and I have to admit, I really enjoyed starting something. I mean, it was my first day at SIU-C and I made the D.E. What a trip!

WELL, when I heard that Jed was in town last week, I looked forward to meeting him. He wasn't here last year and I figured that I'd catch his act on my way home for lunch.

I got to the Free Forum area and sure enough a crowd was watching and listening to Jim tell his story about getting saved at a Van Halen concert, or as he called it "a Vaaaaann Haaa-lennn con-cerrrrttt..."

He got a dose of Edge gel and soon after retired the sidewalk to Jed, Jed started in on how all us college students are on our way to hell, and that all we think about is sex, drugs, alcohol and rock 'n roll.

Jed lost about half his audience when a friend of mine, Dave Miller, burst through the crowd to tell them, not to listen to Jed. Dave told them that he would be nearby if anyone really wanted to hear about Jesus Christ. Jed called Dave a wimp.

JED ALSO got the Edge from a few guys in the group. It got to be a bit much because, well, it really wasn't very nice to keep spraying shaving cream all over poor of Jed. I laughed, though, when Jed booted one guy in the rump for trying to put the stuff in his back pocket.

I never made it to lunch. I had been arguing with Jed and somewhere about 2:45 p.m., I walked away saying, "Good luck Jed, I've got to go back to work."

I left feeling sad, because it seemed that Brother Jed and Brother Jim — who accuse men of homosexuality and call women brazen hussies if they wear shorts — were really trying to create a scene instead of telling people about salvation. At one point I told Jed that it was preachers like him who give Christianity a bad name. He said, "Christianity has always had a bad name," referring to the way early Christians were mocked, beaten and even killed when they preached in public.

JED SAYS in his book, "Who Will Rise Up?" that if he and his counterparts receive the same type of treatment, they are doing the right thing. To each his own, I guess.

Anyway, I related my account of Jed's performance more than once that evening. As I was going to bed, I thought that maybe I didn't give Jed much chance to preach and perhaps get a few people saved.

So I figured that I'd get to the Free Forum in the next day or two, stand on the outskirts of the crowd and simply take notes. I had even started reading his book. Interesting stuff. I have to say.

On Friday I got to the Free Forum about 1 p.m. I went with high hopes of perhaps even inviting Jed to dinner. I understand that he does talk like a normal human being when someone is interested in what he has to say.

But Jed never showed up. And I felt badly because I really wanted to hear what he would say without my butting in every two seconds.

Another opportunity down the drain.

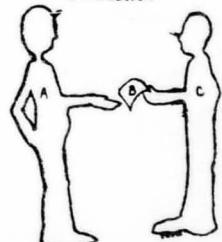

Who knows? If what Jed says in his book is true, I should have a chance to redeem myself in a week or two when his wife, Sister Cindy, comes to reap the harvest.

Coalition forms to give disabled legislative voice

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

Disabled people soon should have an effective advocate for their rights, a group that will not be a lobby group, but will educate the general public to the needs of the disabled.

The group will actually be a coalition of existing disabled rights groups from around the state, says Carol Potter, disabled persons advocate for the attorney general's office in Carbondale and also the president-elect of the Partnership for Progressive Approaches to Disability Issues.

"The Illinois Coalition of Citizens With Disabilities will actually be a kind of network linking all the disabled rights groups like the Partnership and independent living center boards into an effective advocate of disabled rights," Potter said.

POTTER SAID the group was spawned from a conference sponsored by the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services, the Illinois Disability Rights Conference, held June 4, 1985 in Springfield, Illinois.

"The conference was organized to get as many people together as possible in Springfield to discuss disabled rights," she said. "The purpose was not to form a new advocacy group but to form a coalition of existing groups."

"The whole thing really started coming together on the last day of the conference. People grouped together in seven or eight regions and elected delegates from each region as representatives to future coalition conferences."

POTTER SAID that the new coalition is not specifically a lobby group, but will also use its influence to educate people, both disabled and able bodied, to the needs of the disabled.

The elected delegates then got together July 13 to formulate bylaws for the coalition, she said. Potter was the Partnership's elected delegate to the coalition, representing 12 counties in Southern Illinois.

"We pulled together the bylaws from the Northern Illinois Disability Rights and Community Action Coalition in Rockford, Illinois and the bylaws from the Coalition of Texans with Disabilities into a framework governing the new coalition."

BOTH GROUPS had contained in their bylaws a rule stating that 51 percent of the people making policy decisions had to be disabled. This led to a great deal of controversy at their July meeting, Potter said.

"Parents of people with disabilities who couldn't speak for themselves, such as mentally disabled persons with a physical handicap, wanted to be included in the 51 percent rule, even though they themselves were not disabled."

Other disabled delegates felt this violated the 51 percent rule, she said. Potter reported to the Partnership in July that she and other delegates felt that the parents of these severely disabled persons should be part of the 49 percent able-bodied representatives to the coalition.

THE PARTNERSHIP agreed in principle with this position, and sent a letter to Kendal Kerns, one of the coalition's organizers, stating a need to formulate a compromise proposal dealing with this issue.

The letter stated the Partnership's commitment to addressing the needs of the disabled in Southern Illinois, especially support of the Independent Living movement for the disabled, and their support for the idea of a state-wide coalition advocating disabled rights.

Potter has said she has formulated a "feasible compromise" that would eliminate the need for the 51 percent rule.

"I FEEL that the disabled are strong enough to control the coalition without such a rule," she said. "The 51 percent rule could have limited the coalition elections in some areas by requiring that 51 percent of the people on the board be disabled."

Potter said that if a certain amount of delegates elected from some regions were disabled that would leave only able-bodied delegates from other areas to be elected, possibly angering the disabled in those areas and certainly restricting the elections in those areas.

She said that the compromise will benefit everyone involved with the coalition.

"WHEN YOU are talking about a coalition of organizations such as the Partnership, the 51 percent rule doesn't work as a practical representation of the membership. There's nothing to say that disabled persons won't control the coalition's governing board anyway, so maybe it's time the disabled stopped hiding behind the 51 percent rule."

The 51 percent rule stems from the passage of the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as amended in 1978, which was designed to get disabled persons involved with policy making in groups representing their interests, she said.

"In the past, when a disabled person went to a rehabilitation counselor for advice on finding a job, that counselor would be able-bodied and may not wholly understand the needs of that person."

THE FEDERAL Rehabilitation Act stated that at least 51 percent of these counselors had to be a disabled person," Potter said. "This really started the ball rolling as far as disabled rights are concerned."

"The social unrest of the late 1960s and early 1970s gave disabled rights a real shove forward, as it helped other groups such as women and blacks," she said.

The Partnership, if and when it becomes a part of the coalition, which it currently is not, will lobby as part of the coalition for the passage of the Environmental Barriers Act, which will be a new accessibility law calling for greater access to public and private areas for the disabled.

Commission delays county jail decision

The Jackson County Building Commission has postponed a decision regarding the selection of an architectural firm to design plans for the proposed Jackson County Jail.

The commission decided Monday to delay action until proposals submitted by various architectural firms are studied further.

After discussing the proposals for nearly an hour in closed session, board members were not prepared to choose a particular firm.

"No decision has been made," said William Schwartz, attorney for the commission.

Schwartz said there were some questions raised by board members regarding comparison of the various firms that submitted proposals.

Schwartz also said none of the firms had been "ruled out" and that the firms would be contacted within several days to clarify the board's questions.

statement on a liquor license application filed on or about April 30, 1985. The application stated that no one would operate the establishment except the owner or the business manager.

Howard pled not guilty to both counts, and the commission scheduled a later hearing date for either Sept. 9 or Sept. 16.

In a third case, Papatlal Patel, president of Bleu Flambe, Inc., is charged with issuing a false statement on a liquor license application filed April 14, 1985 as to who would actually be operating the tavern. The statement said that business would be conducted by a manager, agent or business partner.

ON A second charge, Bleu Flambe, Inc. is accused of allowing an employee to leave the establishment after hours Aug. 12, 1985 in possession of open liquor.

In yet a third charge, Bleu Flambe is accused of selling alcohol after hours Aug. 12, 1985 at 5:10 a.m. In a letter to the liquor commission from his attorney, Patel pled not guilty to all three charges. The commission has scheduled a later hearing date, possibly Sept. 9 or Sept. 16 to further review this case.

THE FINAL hearing saw J.P.W. Enterprises doing business as the American Tap being charged with allowing an employee to leave the premises Aug. 17, 1985 at about 12:56 a.m. in possession of open alcohol.

By Martin Folan
Entertainment Editor

An outstanding artistic exhibit of experimentation in photography has opened in Mitchell Gallery at Faner Hall.

Technique and content are the key elements of the 35 photos chosen for display by a jury at the Illinois State Museum. The selection includes a variety of color negative photos, dye color transfer prints, Polaroid prints, hand-colored silver gelatin prints and gum bichromate prints.

An unusual photograph by Lloyd DeGrane, of Calumet City, titled "Flamingo Throne Chair," presents a brightly colored lawn chair enthroned by a flock of flamingos.

DEGRANE'S HAND-COLORED silver gelatin print with sewn and woven elements produces a three-dimensional effect.

Gail Kaplan, of Chicago, used three-part images in his print, "Solid Light Series." Sunlight shining through a window creates a window frame image.

wine glass, a Walgreen's prescription bottle, cups, a baby bottle and an open book showing a baby's face.

KEVIN MOONEY, of Chicago, applied a vivid array of color to his color print, titled "Lifeguard Series: McKinley Park Pool."

Three young, smiling women dressed in bright red swimsuits are shown standing in the clear water of a swimming pool at dusk. Lights behind the pool are reflect sparkles on the water.

Russell Phillips, of Chicago, also used an assortment of colors in his dye transfer color print of the Hindsdale Theater lobby and snack bar.

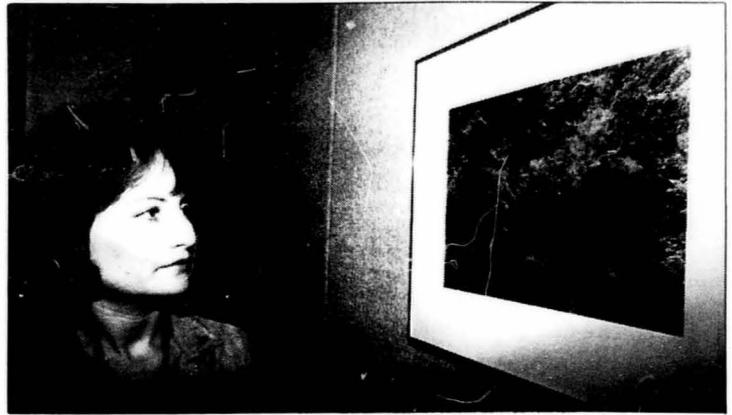

Phillips' incorporation of light into the picture draws attention to reds, yellows, whites and light greens. The lobby of the theater is vacant, leaving nothing to the eye but the emphatic colors.

KATHRYN PAUL, assistant professor of cinema and photography at SIU-C, photographed the back half of a bighorn sheep standing among hundreds of trees at Custer State Park in South Dakota, for her silver print.

A stroll through Mitchell Gallery will reveal exceptional photographic artistry in Illinois.

The exhibit will be on display through Sept. 23.

The gallery is open 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

Number of Americans in poverty declines

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There were 1.8 million fewer Americans living in poverty in 1984, the first big improvement in nine years, but the total remained far more than when President Reagan took office, the government said Tuesday.

The Census Bureau's annual report on poverty showed that 33.7 million people — 14.4 percent of the American population — were below the official poverty line in 1984, a major reduction from the 15.3 percent of 1983.

The biggest reason for the improvement was the low inflation rate, bureau officials said, which allowed poor people to catch up slightly with the rest of the country as it enjoyed a 3.3 percent increase in family income last year.

The White House quickly claimed the improvement was a result of Reagan-endorsed tax cuts and anti-inflation measures that influenced the economic recovery, not higher welfare benefits prescribed by laws put in place by previous administrations. In Santa Barbara, Calif., Reagan said: "I believe these numbers are further proof that the greatest enemy of poverty is the free enterprise system."

But Reagan added, "The success of 1984 does not mean that the battle against poverty in this country is over. It does mean that America, after a difficult decade, is once again headed in the right direction."

The improvement is "a triumph for Reagan policies, a triumph for Reagan philosophy," Buchanan said.

Two Dawn redwood trees, brought to SIU-C in the '50s, near the Student Center.

'Fossil' trees alive and well on campus after 30 years

By Norm Heikens
Staff Writer

There are "fossils" living on the SIU-C campus.

Standing between the Student Center and the James W. Neekers Building are trees that 44 years ago were thought to be extinct. The dawn redwood, which was previously known only through fossil imprints, was discovered in China in 1941 and brought to SIU-C in the early 1950s.

The trees, related to the redwood and sequoia trees that grow in California, will eventually reach the height of 100 feet, said Bob Mohlenbrock of the SIU-C botany department.

THE DAWN redwood is one of two rare species on campus.

The yellowwood, a tree native to Illinois, is found in only two spots in the state, one of which is near Davies Gymnasium. It grows from 20 to 30-foot-tall and flowers in white clusters in the spring.

The yellowwood, along with the dawn redwood, a conifer that has the peculiar habit of shedding its short, needle-like leaves in the fall, are two of more than 80 species of trees on the SIU-C campus, said David Ketzner, a graduate student in taxonomy.

MANY OF the trees that grace the campus are ornamental, like the dawn redwood, but most are native. Various strains of oak and maple are among the most common, Ketzner said.

It was a dream of past SIU-C president, Delyte Morris, to make the campus famous for its trees.

The late Dr. William Marberry, an SIU-C horticulturalist, was responsible for carrying out both the planning and planting.

"He liked any kind of exotic tree, particularly something from the orient," Mohlenbrock said.

MARBERRY RELIED on numerous contacts around the world to find the species he wanted, Mohlenbrock said.

Occasionally, a tree is planted in memory of a faculty member or student. A plaque is placed at the base of the tree that chronicles the deceased's name, title or accomplishment of the deceased, said Clarence, "Doc" Dougherty, vice president for Campus Services, who oversees grounds work and tree planting.

At the northeast corner of the Communications Building stands a Churchhill oak, actually an English oak, that was brought to SIU-C in 1969. The tree came from Blenheim Palace in Oxfordshire, where Winston Churchill was born.

AN SIU-C policy is to plant two trees for every one that is cut down or destroyed, said Dougherty.

It's part of an effort by Dougherty to make SIU-C a beautiful campus. "We're awfully proud of the campus and the trees have a lot to do with that," he said.

Thompson Woods has been left mostly in its natural state since SIU-C's acquisition in 1940 of the 10.42-acre plot at a cost of $6,373. Recently, efforts have been made to rid the woods of Japanese honeysuckle, a vine that chokes out new tree growth.

ASIDE FROM occasional trimming or spraying of some species, little is done to most trees because most are hardy natives, said Ketzner.

Working 40-hour weeks helped put Alabama on top

By Larry G. Geiler
Student Writer

Most people dread having to work weekends, but not the country-western group Alabama, which has been known to put in a 40-hour week — the title of the group's most recent album — and then some.

The group's busy schedule includes touring, recording and personal appearances, all of which demands hard work and requires occasional overtime.

But the hard work and persistence eventually leads to success for the group.

Alabama has six multi-platinum albums, released 17 consecutive No. 1 singles and earned countless music honors.

ONE WOULD think with all of that behind the group, its members could slow down a bit.

Not Alabama. Its members have picked up the pace, performing more than 150 concerts a year. During the summer, they even find time to play the state fair circuit.

In an interview, Randy Owen, lead singer of the group, said that working hard and remaining accessible to the people that made the group popular is one of the reasons why the group continues to be successful.

"I like our audiences because they're different. There's a lot of energy and love that comes from them," he said. "If you've got a really tremendous audience, that reacts to every single note that you play, then you're going to be a whole lot better."

BASS GUITARIST Teddy Gentry, agreeing with Owen, said that the crowds reactions can make it seem as though they're performing a song for the first time.

"If the people that you're playing for are getting into it, it's a whole new song because you're entertaining them," Gentry said. "Each crowd makes a song. If you had to go out there and play the same songs to an empty house, it would become old and boring."

Both Gentry and Owen explained their success as something they don't take for granted.

"I know I feel I'm still fightin' for it, and the awards just make us work harder at doing the best that we can do, on stage and in the studio," Owen said.

GENTRY ADDED, "If you want to be number one, you're going to have to work at it. You can't just sit around and say, 'We're number one this year, and we're going to be number one again next year.' We're going to have to work harder at it."

The group is looking at several projects that will bring them into new markets. Among them is a foreign tour, planned for next year, and several new videos.

Owen said that the video medium was a very necessary step to take.

"Video is just another creative outlet. It's hard work like anything else that's worth it. But it's all a part of a never-ending process of wanting to be bigger and go farther."

TOURING AND a tight recording schedule has left them with little time in which to compose, according to Owen. Critics of the group say that there should be more original material on future albums.

The group's next release, "Alabama Christmas," includes nine new holiday songs.

"Thistlehair-the Christmas Bear" and two compositions by the group, "Santa Claus I Still Believe in You," and "Christmas in Dixie," are cuts which have been confirmed. It is scheduled to be in the stores before Thanksgiving.

Another album, a greatest hits collection, has also been recorded for release shortly afterward. Owen said that this project recorded "live" will also include new material. It is likely that the album will contain several songs about the South.

"WHEN YOU write, you have to write the way that you feel. And trying to write songs that match into what we try to record is pretty hard to do sometimes," Owen continued.

"We wouldn't sing about something that we didn't believe in. Every song that we sing has to be real."

Health Advocate program helps students help selves

By Elizabeth Cochran
Staff Writer

In sync with the fitness movement of the 1980s, the Wellness Center's Health Advocate Program promotes fitness of the total person.

"Staying fit is more than running around the lake, and doing Jane Fonda," said Pat Fabiano, coordinator. She says that in order to have good health, one must be physically, emotionally and spiritually healthy.

The program, conducted by 35 student advocates, began last August and is one of about 100 in the nation, Fabiano said.

The advocates, from a variety of majors, took a three credit training course last spring. They are guided by six counselors from the Wellness Center in spreading the wellness on the SIU-C campus.

ALL OF the advocates have a positive attitude about themselves, Fabiano said. "Here is a group of people who seem to be committed to giving and sharing with other people," she said of them.

She said college students often devote their time to studies, and put their health on hold. But she firmly believes that if a fitness program is not started in college, it will be continually postponed.

Fabiano said college students usually get their health information from friends. "We use that peer network, but train the advocates to have accurate information," she said.

BEFORE THE Health Advocate was begun, Wellness Center counselors provided some information about how to be healthy, but now many more people will be reached, Fabiano said.

Some of the advocates will work in satellite wellness centers that will open Sept. 3, and the others will work on the speaker's bureau that will start Sept. 16.

The satellite wellness centers, offering a variety of health services and information, will open in Trueblood, Lentz and Grinnell Halls.

These centers will be places where "students can go to pick up a bandage, take their temperature, and gain access to literature concerning health matters," Fabiano said.

A LOT of services for physical, emotional and spiritual health are available on campus, Fabiano said. The advocates have been trained to be aware of these services, so they can guide students to them.

The advocates can help students decide when homesickness becomes depression, when normal anxiety becomes abnormal, or when a sore throat and cold hangs on too long and when help should be sought, Fabiano said.

Advocates in the speaker's bureau will give workshops on stress management, nutrition, alcohol, birth control, sexual myths, proper nutrition and other important health topics for students.

Fabiano said that the bureau has not advertised yet, but has already had several requests for speakers.

JACKIE HOSEK, an advocate in the speaker's bureau, said "We are not treating the sick, but promoting wellness — We want to prevent health problems."

Sam McVay, administrative director of the Health Service, came up with the health advocate idea and hired Pat Fabiano for the job last October.

"She is a superstar," McVay said. "She is creative and a tireless worker."

Fabiano has a master's degree in education psychology and a master's in rehabilitation counseling.

During 10 years as a therapist, she became interested in health when she realized that "just talking to people about problems in an office didn't seem to encompass total health," she said.

The health advocate program is new so "everything isn't perfect," Fabiano said, but "our motto is progress not perfection."

In October, recruitment will begin for next year's advocates. Anyone interested in becoming involved with the program can reach Pat Fabiano at the Wellness Center at 536-4441.

2. Cards are drawn randomly by Arena staff—one card per person.
3. Persons receiving a card must occupy their position in line prior to the commencement of actual ticket sales, or they will be placed at the end of the line.

NOTE: Being first in line for a reservation card will not assure you of being first in line for a ticket.

Psychology prof visits to instruct geography class

Sims, a psychologist, who has for many years collaborated with geographers in research into the relationship between man and the physical world, will teach two courses for two credit hours beginning Sept. 3.

Geography 406 will focus on the interaction between man and the environments, and Geography 521 will examine the social and psychological theories of Freud, Durkheim, Marx and Maslow as they relate to man and environment relations.

Interested students should contact David Arey or Barbara Pearson of the Geography Department at 536-3375 for further details.

Soil-free growing brings year-round harvest

By Rodney Sanford
Staff Writer

Picking vegetables from a backyard garden is a pastime associated with spring and summer in Southern Illinois.

However, bountiful harvests of tomatoes, cucumbers and other vegetables can be reaped in the middle of January by using a soil-free growing system called hydroponics.

John Preece, plant and soil science professor in the School of Agriculture, said hydroponics is already in extensive use in Europe where farm land is scarce. Therefore greenhouse-grown vegetables are popular.

Plant roots grow in what is called a nutrient film system. This consists of plastic sleeves and rubber hoses in which nutrient-rich water passes through compliments of pumps submerged in a small tank.

The white vegetable roots, which can reach 3-5 feet, grow in the sleeves and follow the water flow.

Preece said some of the less mechanical models are ideal for home use, but industrial versions contain computer regulators for water speed, percentage of nutrients and acidity content. Cost depends on the size of the system, Preece said.

Lettuce and spinach top the list of crops best suited for hydroponics, Preece said, because they grow well under indoor light. He has just harvested a batch of cucumbers. Another harvest will follow in about six weeks.

"The economics of growing fruit hydroponically is questionable," Preece said. "But woody plants and flowers thrive as well as vegetables in the soilless culture."

The "real beauty" of the hydroponic system is that the time between harvesting and planting subsequent crops is shorter than if growing in soil, he said.

"In soil or gravel beds, the medium has to be sterilized between crops," Preece said. "If you use chemicals for that, you can wait weeks before you start again. Even with steam you have to wait for the material to cool."

With a soil-free water culture, Preece said the plastic sleeves are replaced and the hoses are cleaned with bleach to alleviate disease. Not much cleaning is needed because there is no soil.

Preece said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have expressed interest in the hydroponic system as a means to grow food in space.

Health Assessment Center helps prevent and treat ails

By Jim McBride
Staff Writer

Students suffering from minor ailments don't always have to go to the University Health Service. Information regarding various personal and physical problems is available at the Student Health Assessment Center.

The center, located at the south end of the Student Center, is basically designed to give students self-help health related information.

"The idea is to educate people on how to care for themselves," said Christine Berkowitz, practical nurse and family nurse practitioner for the center.

Students can learn basic facts concerning the prevention and treatment of various illnesses by obtaining one of the many free pamphlets provided by the center. Information pamphlets regarding various methods of birth control are also available.

Another self-help service provided by the center is the cold self-care center.

The cold self-care center allows students to check their temperature, check their throats for symptoms associated with colds and when necessary ask to have throat culture taken. The cold self-care center also provides students with a take-home cold symptom assessment chart to help determine the severity of the illness.

Berkowitz says that the most common problems students

Faculty, students in School of Art win local awards

The 11th Southern Illinois Artists Open Competition and Exhibition was held earlier this month at Mitchell Museum in Mount Vernon.

Cynthia Small, of Edwards, a graduate student, and Harris Deller, associate professor of art, finished second and third respectively in "Best of Show."

The "Best of Media in Drawing" honor went to Michael J. Gould of Carbondale.

Laurie R. Hodge, of Murphysboro, a master's degree graduate, won the Juror Merit Award.

Honorable mentions went to Mark C. Fessler, a graduate student from Hermitage, Tenn., and Robert L. Paulson, associate professor of art.

bring to her office are colds, rashes, minor injuries and stress-related problems.

If an illness or problem merits additional medical attention Berkowitz will refer the person to either the University Health Service or the Counseling Center. Occasionally some serious problems are brought to Berkowitz's attention.

"I've had people come in for treatment of a cold and tell me that they were raped the night before," said Berkowitz. She says that students often come to her with personal problems, and she's always willing to listen.

"I get it all," she said. "Nothing shocks me."

In spite of some of the problems that Berkowitz sees in her job she still enjoys working with students.

"I enjoy working in a university atmosphere," she added.

ONE OF THE OLDEST WAYS TO BECOME AN ARMY OFFICER IS STILL ONE OF THE BEST.

The Army Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) is more than a college program. It's a tradition.

For 163 years, ROTC has been training people to do a job that's also a tradition. The job of an Army officer.

In 1819, Captain Alden Partridge, a former superintendent at West Point, started what we know today as Army ROTC.

He felt our country needed more "citizen soldiers." So he established the first private school to offer military instruction.

It didn't take long for his idea to spread.

By the turn of the century, 105 colleges and universities across the country were offering military instruction on their campuses.

Today, with Army ROTC available at over 1,400 colleges and universities, the program is stronger than ever.

And last year alone, over 70,000 students participated.

Some were interested in the leadership and management training. Others enrolled on full-tuition scholarships. And the financial assistance—up to $1,000 a year during the last two years of ROTC—attracted still others.

But all of them had one thing in common: the desire to begin their future as Army officers.

Why don't you do the same? You'll graduate to a position of real responsibility. Exercise leadership and management skills. Build a secure future for yourself. And enjoy the travel, adventure and prestige of being a second lieutenant in today's Army.

Army ROTC. It's as much of a tradition as the job it trains you for. Find out how to enroll today.

For more information, contact the Army ROTC Professor of Military Science on your campus.

Hansen to be U of Maryland vice chancellor

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Graduate School Dean Barbara C. Hansen only took her personal staff that she was leaving SIU-C for a position at the University of Maryland on the day before she left for Europe two weeks ago.

Hansen will relinquish her duties as SIU-C dean and associate vice president for academic affairs and research by Jan. 1, 1987. The exact date of departure depends on the transfer of laboratory materials, she said.

Hansen said she presumed that no announcement would be made "until the Maryland Board of Trustees had released a formal announcement," which should be made sometime this week.

Barbara Hansen

HANSEN SAID UM officials verbally offered her the position in early July and followed it up with a formal offer "shortly afterward." She formally accepted the position the morning of Aug. 16, the day she left for a conference in London.

Hansen will take on the job as UM vice chancellor for graduate study and research, which includes research administration and development, faculty development in areas of research, a major internal research and instrumentation program, graduate admissions and new program development.

AS VICE chancellor, Hansen will oversee the central UM campus — which contains all professional schools — and UM in Baltimore County — which covers undergraduate and non-professional curricula. She said the position also allows for lab space, a small amount of time to continue her research on obesity and appetite regulation, and for national activities based in the Washington, D.C., area.

Hansen is president of the National Association for the Study of Obesity and the committee chairperson of the International Association for the Study of Obesity. She also serves on numerous committees, including the Executive Committee of Graduate Deans and Research Administrators.

SHE WILL continue to hold a tenure in physiology and psychology when she leaves SIU-C.

During her three-year tenure here, several programs have been implemented, including a doctoral degree program in engineering science and the $235,000 Minority Graduate Incentive Program appropriated by the Illinois Board of Higher Education in July.

Plane carrying Samantha Smith way off course before it crashed

AUBURN, Maine (UPI) — The plane that carried Samantha Smith and seven others to their deaths was several hundred yards off course when it clipped the top of some trees, plowed into a gully and exploded short of the runway, federal investigators said Tuesday.

The aircraft would have been forced into an extremely tight turn to get back on course and line up with the runway at Auburn-Lewiston Municipal Airport, said Patrick Bursley, chief investigator from the National Transportation Safety Board.

"IF YOU were to extend the center line of the runway up to where we are, the site of the wreckage is several hundred yards to the right of that center line," Bursley said.

The Bar Harbor Airlines Beechcraft 99 crashed Sunday night on a flight from Boston, killing all eight people on board including Smith and her father.

The plane apparently lost both wingtips when it clipped off the top of some pine trees and narrowly missed a house before slamming into a wooded area about 10 p.m.

SERVICES FOR Smith, 13, and Arthur Smith, 45, were planned for 1 p.m. Wednesday at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Augusta. Loudspeakers will be set up on the lawn to accommodate the expected overflow crowd of mourners.

Among those expected to attend was actor Robert Wagner, who was starring with Smith in a new ABC television series called "Lime Street." Smith and her father were en route home to Manchester, Maine, from a filming session in London.

SMITH ACHIEVED instant fame two years ago when she wrote a letter to Soviet leader Yuri Andropov, expressing fears about nuclear war. She accepted his invitation to visit the Soviet Union and her trip was highly publicized.

In the Soviet Union Tuesday, leader Mikhail Gorbachev sent his condolences to Jane Smith, mother of Smith and widow of Arthur Smith.

"Everyone in the Soviet Union who has known Samantha Smith will remember forever the image of the American girl who, like millions of Soviet young men and women, dreamt about peace, and about friendship between the peoples of the United States and the Soviet Union," Gorbachev said in a telegram to her mother.

"A SMALL person with a bold heart, in her 12 years she already understood what many grown Americans do not want to or cannot understand," said Komsomolska Pravda, the organ of the Communist youth organization.

Bursley said investigators had determined the aircraft's engines were running when the plane crashed, although it was impossible to tell how much power the engines were producing.

In spite of the preliminary findings, Bursley said it would probably take several months to determine the cause of the crash.

UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS OFFICER PROGRAMS

Thanks SIU-Carbondale students for your continued support of our officer programs. The 1985 graduates Greg Watson (Pilot, Administration of Justice), Steve Littig (Pilot, Engineering), John Schmitt (Aviation Maintenance, Mechanical Engineering Technology), Martin Burns (Pilot, Marketing), and Chris Steele (Aviation Maintenance, Aviation Technology) are now new Lieutenants of Marines with starting salaries of over $21,300. Additionally, undergraduates Bill Benson (Freshman, Engineering), William Martin (Junior, Aviation Technology), and Bernie Meyer (Junior, Electronic Management) completed Officer Candidate School (OCS) this summer which entitles them to become Lieutenants of Marines upon graduation from college.

We've commissioned twenty-three (23) SIU-C graduates as officers of Marines in the past three years, as we consider SIU-C students well qualified for our programs.

For those ready to inquire about our undergraduate officer program, stop by the Student Center on 27, 28 or 29 August. We know from experience the leadership skills gained from being an officer of Marines can lead you right to the top. Ask Vice President Swinbourne or former State Senator Buzzbee, both former Marine Corps officers.

You're Important to Us.

Class digs ancient Woodland Indian culture

By Mary Lung
Staff Writer

At the archaeological field school offered by SIU-C this summer, not just the students were learning. Bill Andrefsky, a professor of anthropology at SIU-C, was learning too.

Andrefsky and his students spent the summer excavating the Dillinger Site, an area about four miles north of Carbondale on the banks of the Big Muddy River.

At an archaeological field school, students learn proper techniques for mapping, excavating, taking samples and cleaning and cataloging artifacts.

The Dillinger Site taught the students all of the above techniques, as well as much new information about an ancient Late Woodland Indian culture from about a thousand years ago. The information about the late Woodland Indians was also new to Andrefsky.

"The Late Woodland Period is extremely interesting," said

Andrefsky, "because it was the transition period between the small, hunting and gathering societies with small-scale agriculture and the large, very complex agricultural societies of the Mississippian Period."

The large, complex societies of the Mississippian Period are the same societies that built the Cahokia Mounds near St. Louis.

Andrefsky said the Dillinger Site is extremely interesting because it is typical of Late Woodland culture for all of Southern Illinois. The site was first tested in 1939, when no modern techniques such as flotation sampling or carbon-14 dating were available. All other sites of the same period in Southern Illinois are compared with this one.

"We did not find some of the features we had hoped to find, such as house structures or burials," said Andrefsky, "but we did find many large, circular storage pits, about five feet deep and a meter and a half in diameter."

The storage pits were used for grain storage or smoking meat and then as refuse pits, he said.

The field school also found many classic Dillinger type ceramics, both in the open air and in storage pits and what looks to be a blade industry associated with arrow points.

A blade industry occurs when flakes are struck off a nodule and used as cutting tools and a bifacial technology results when stone tools are chipped on both sides. Tools chipped in such a manner are often used as arrow points, Andrefsky said.

The people living at the site, said Andrefsky, were consuming white tail deer, turtle, garfish, birds, small mammals, rodents, different types of seed crops and nuts. The laboratory class now processing the samples and artifacts from the summer are hoping to find evidence of maize, an early corn variety.

The site is very promising, with much to offer, said Andrefsky, and is very convenient to SIU-C.

SIU-C's Center For Archaeological Investigations is hoping to start an ongoing research program at the site which would draw outside specialists to the University and attract outside funding, he said. Such research would be beneficial to both CAI and for the documentation of the prehistory of the region, he said.

The problem with such a convenient site, said Andrefsky, is that it is very attractive to local amateur archaeologists. The site is owned by Martha Dillinger of Carbondale and is on private property.

"Some of the site is in a plowed field," said Andrefsky, "but unfortunately people will go into the area where the rest of the site is located and dig around looking for goodies."

Looting archaeological sites is not condoned by any professionals and the Center For Archaeological Investigations has been instrumental in pushing through legislation punishing looters of state and federal archaeological sites, Andrefsky said.

Students interested in taking the course don't necessarily have to have experience in anthropology or archaeology, said Andrefsky.

"Before the course begins we offer a week of orientation into local archaeology and culture history, archaeology techniques and anything else we think might be needed during the course," he said.

"It is easier to understand the prehistoric social culture that was, from material culture that is found if a student has some background in either anthropology or archaeology, but three of our students this summer had none and they managed to adapt very well," Andrefsky said.

Presley's klicker sharpens mind, improves memory

By Alice Schallert
Staff Writer

When Wayman Presley was a boy, he liked to drag a stick across the picket fence in his yard.

As the stick rattled over the pickets, Wayman counted. Just a couple of hills over, a friend of his was doing the same thing—faster and faster. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, one...

"We were trying to outdo each other in 'ciphering' contests at school," said Presley. "We were sharpening our minds like sharpening a dull knife with a file."

The Klickerstick, a miniature picket fence, was developed by Presley to help school children all over Southern Illinois sharpen their minds too.

The long orange plastic Klickerstick resembles a ruler with slits cut in it. The object of this unusual learning aid is to drag a piece of stiff plastic across the slits and count mentally, checking accuracy on the numbers printed on the stick.

Working with U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, Presley has introduced his invention throughout Southern Illinois and at a meeting in Paducah, Kentucky as well as having Simon present the Klickerstick to the National Education Institute in Washington, D.C. Presley's goal is "to improve education which is at such a low ebb in the United States right now," he said.

Six hundred elementary school children were tested with the Klickerstick for accuracy, which reportedly helped their overall learning, math skills, motivation in the classroom and attitude.

Many of the children write to Presley to tell him of their success. From the immense pile of letters on his desk, one can pick out statements such as: "It helped me write better!" or "I usually get A's and B's. This time I got straight A's! I think the Klicker really helped me."

According to Presley, the Klicker can help anyone of any age to increase his powers of concentration and logic and to develop an enquiring, creative mind, just as he said it helped him as a young boy.

Jack Snowman of SIU-C's Educational Psychology Department said the use of the Klickerstick might be educationally helpful.

"It wouldn't surprise me

logically that the use of the Klickerstick would transfer to another task," he said.

Some of the methods currently used in educational psychology to improve comprehension and memory include notetaking, outlining and summarizing of passages read by students. Some other memory devices are first letters of words or sentences, peg words in a reading passage, or key words used in the study of foreign languages.

The children using the Klicker "graduate" when they can count the number of stitches that an electric sewing machine lays down in a certain period of time. When Presley took a small electric sewing machine around to 380 students who had been using the Klicker for some time, he said he found that 126 of them could actually count the number of stitches.

When they reach that goal, Presley presents them with a certificate stating that they are now better prepared to do anything they want to do throughout their lives. Presley's goal is to put his learning aid in every classroom in Southern Illinois.

The Klickerstick is available to anyone in the United States, costing $4 if it is mailed, $3 if it is picked up out at Presley Tours, or $2 each if they are sold in bulk of 100 or more.

Presley grew up in Southern Illinois and was a mail carrier for 17 years until he retired to start his multi-million dollar travel service, Presley Tours, in Makanda.

By the way, Presley's "ciphering" opponent from grade school is Everette Ballard, winner of the American Success Award and multi-millionaire now retired in Park Ridge, Ill.

And it all started over a picket fence.

Students don't recognize potential crime, police say

By Justus Weathersby Jr.
Staff Writer

Personal property thefts at SIU-C can be significantly reduced, says Nelson Ferry, community relations officer.

About 434 personal property thefts, valued at $55,446, have been reported to SIU-C police during the first six months of 1985.

Ferry said people fail to recognize the potential for crimes, such as theft or burglary. He said people should learn to anticipate trouble to avoid becoming victims and should be aware of what's going on around them.

Ferry said that 45 commissioned officers, three divisions and a five-man investigation division exercise control for the safety and well-being of the campus 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

"The bulk of the officers are in the patrol division. In order to do a more effective job, we need citizen participation," Ferry said.

Ferry said he initiated a University Watch Program in February which aims to reduce crime through "building awareness and responsibility" throughout the campus.

"If people become actively involved 'they're going to give us the opportunity to effectively control those incidents,' he said.

Ferry said students should "pick up the phone and call" if they see someone in a residence hall who doesn't belong there.

Ferry said students who say "Oh, I don't want to bother the police" should not worry.

"We want those calls. We want to be bothered if someone suspects a crime may be committed," he said.

With voluntary participation the program may help reduce burglary, theft, vandalism and ultimately decrease sexual assaults on women through heightened awareness, he said.

"The key is for people to remove the opportunity for crime. I just can't emphasize that enough," Ferry said.

Students sometimes fail to lock their residence hall rooms, carry unnecessary valuables and too much money into the Recreational Center and often fail to safeguard their backpacks by carelessly leaving them around, Ferry said.

Valuables were stolen from a student's room while he slept because he failed to lock the room, he said.

Ferry also advised that students mark their clothing with a permanent laundry marker to later identify stolen items if they are recovered.

He said students may walk away from their backpacks at various locations on campus, even though they contain expensive textbooks and other valuables. Ferry said this lack in securing personal belongings creates a potential for theft.

"You just have to anticipate a problem. If you take away the opportunity, you take away the crime," he said.

Ferry said calls are received at 453-2381.

United Nations simulation gives students world scope

By Wm. Bryan DeVasher
Staff Writer

Students interested in world politics can satisfy their curiosity by participating in the SIU-C United Nations Simulation Association.

Students may learn about current events and how the United Nations functions by representing various countries and debating topics given to them by the UNSA for a simulation of the U.N. General Assembly, tentatively scheduled for the first week of April.

"Organizational meetings are held during the fall semester in preparation for the simulation in the spring," John Rutledge, committee coordinator, said.

Rutledge said about 30 to 50 students participate in the various stages of the simulation. Some help organize the association and research topics while others wait until the spring and participate only in the simulation.

General Roger Provart, UNSA Secretary, said approximately 160 students are needed to properly represent most of the major countries of the world.

"Our goal is to have 40 nations represented," Provart said. "One of the problems with the association is getting enough people involved to do so."

Rutledge and Provart stress that the UNSA does not appeal exclusively to political science majors. Students in all majors are encouraged to participate. "We have people from social work to engineering," Rutledge said. "The most predominant majors involved with the association are liberal arts majors."

The association also advocates the involvement of more international students, Rutledge said.

"Five to 10 international students usually participate," he said. "But we would like to have more participate because the University has such a large international student population."

Students interested in the association are encouraged to attend an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 29, in the Iroquois Room of the Student Center.

Security officers recruited for academy

By Justus Weathersby Jr.
Staff Writer

Three SIU-C Police officers presently enrolled at the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement Academy are due to return to SIU-C in September upon completion of a 10-week basic training program.

Todd D. Sigler, 24, David J. Jennings, 26, and Kevin C. Jans, 31, began training at the academy July 7.

Nelson Ferry, SIU-C Police training coordinator, said that 45 officers were recruited statewide to attend the academy and they elected Sigler as class president.

Ferry said Sigler graduated from SIU-C in 1983 in Administration of Justice and was hired as a student-officer that same year. He subsequently became a full-time University officer in 1985, Ferry said.

Ferry said Sigler is currently working on a graduate degree in public administration with a specialty in city management.

Ferry said the training at the academy is a requirement for officers within the first six months of duty. The officers are taught basic self-defense to criminal law.

"It's a very extensive" training program, he said.

Physicians favor right to abortion survey indicates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most obstetricians and gynecologists are as much in favor of allowing abortion under certain circumstances as they were before the procedure was legalized 12 years ago, according to a survey released Tuesday.

In a survey of 1,300 obstetricians and gynecologists, 84 percent said abortion should be an option, while 13 percent said it should never be performed. Three percent did not respond.

A survey taken in 1971, two years before abortion was legalized, showed 83 percent believed abortion should be available and 17 percent were against abortion.

The survey was commissioned by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, an organization of 25,000 physicians who provide health care to women.

"I think there has been a belief that perhaps the attitude of physicians might have become more conservative," said Dr. Warren Pearse, executive director of the college.

The survey was conducted in April and May.

The following guidelines have been drafted by a committee comprised of representatives of student organizations, University departments, and the USO and GPSC. These guidelines will be in effect during the Fall of 1985. Please read them carefully. Your cooperation in planning for a safe and enjoyable football season will be appreciated.

Bruce R. Swinburne

GUIDELINES REGARDING ALCOHOL POLICY / FOOTBALL GAMES

The University Alcohol Policy prohibits all possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus unless an exception is specifically authorized. As done by many colleges and universities for football games, the University has permitted what is known as "tailgate" activities in designated areas, intended to give persons attending football games the opportunity to arrive early, park and have their own food and beverages (including alcoholic beverages if they wish) prior to the game. Since these events are permitted through exception to the University Alcohol Policy, the following guidelines have been formulated and will be in effect for your health and safety throughout the football season:

- Possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages within the intent described above will be permitted only during the period from three hours prior to the kickoff up to fifteen minutes prior to game time on Saturdays of home football games and during the half-time of those games in the following areas:
 - Parking Lot 13, directly west of the stadium;
 - Lot 13A, southwest of the stadium;
 - Lots 10A and 10B, north of the stadium;
 - Lots 53 and 43, near the Physical Plant;
 - The Free Forum Area (individual servings only).

Consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus other than at the times and locations specified is prohibited by the University Alcohol Policy, unless specifically authorized.

- The above limited exception applies only to those persons of legal drinking age (21 years of age or older). Underage possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages in any public place is illegal. Violators will be subject to prosecution.
- The sale or delivery of alcoholic beverages, direct or indirect, is strictly prohibited. (Sale of other items are permitted only if approved in advance and meet the other requirements of the University Policy on Solicitation.)
- It is recommended that containers be limited to individual servings, but kegs will be permitted, except in the Free Forum Area, subject to provisions of number one above. Only individual servings will be permitted in the Free Forum Area.
- For safety reasons, the use of non-glass containers is encouraged for all beverages.

'Operation Golden Flow' tests for Naval drug abuse

By Susan Engbring
Staff Writer

"At ease," said the skipper of the Naval reserve unit to 80 sailors standing at attention.

"Today we will take a test — one I hope you have all studied for. Petty Officer Durrant will give you details and directions."

Roger Durrant, Petty Officer 1st Class in charge of the Navy Alcohol and Substance Abuse Program at the Memphis Naval Air Station, informed the sailors they would participate in the Navy's urinalysis screening test, commonly known as "Operation Golden Flow."

THOSE TAKING the test proceeded two at a time to the restrooms, where they were watched by medical personnel as they deposited urine samples into small bottles marked with their names, ranks and social security numbers. The samples were then taken to the base hospital to be tested for alcohol levels and controlled drugs.

The test, like hundreds of others being conducted on U.S. Navy bases worldwide, is part of the Navy's effort to detect and eradicate drug use and alcohol abuse. The Navy initiated large-scale urinalysis screening of troops in 1982 after experiencing record-high instances of drug-related accidents and lost man-hours the previous year.

THE SCREENING tests are being conducted in "full sweeps" of entire units as described above and in ongoing "random sweeps" based on social security numbers. No one in the Navy is exempt from urinalysis screening, regardless of rank, sex or age, whether on active duty or in the reserves.

Durrant said that "basically all controlled substances" on the federal narcotics list are detectable through current urinalysis testing procedures.

PRESCRIPT ON DRUGS are acceptable provided a person has a valid medical complaint and a doctor's prescription.

Some drugs are harder to detect than others. Those that are water-soluble are flushed through the body within a few days, whereas fat-soluble drugs can be detected in the body for as many as 30 days.

Although the Navy's medical department continually seeks cheaper and more effective means of drug detection, Durrant described the present system as "extremely effective." He said the program functions mainly as a "deterrent," and although many people use drugs whether they are legal or not, they will "think twice before lighting up a joint because they know they will be caught."

RESIN FROM marijuana, one of the cheapest and most widely used drugs by Navy personnel, is fat-soluble and remains in the body for long periods of time; therefore, detection of this particular drug has been highly successful.

THE CONSEQUENCES of a positive urinalysis test can be severe for Navy personnel, but they "depend on the individual," Durrant said. Officers and higher-ranking enlisted personnel face immediate separation from military service. Enlisted personnel up to the rank of Petty Officer 1st Class may remain in the Navy, provided they have demonstrated "exceptional potential" and have a past record of good conduct and performance.

However, those who do remain on active duty are confronted with possible demotion of rank, fines and extra duty. Those not qualified for continued service are discharged under other-than-honorable conditions and leave the Navy with a record of drug use.

PERSONNEL IDENTIFIED as drug users or alcohol abusers are sent to Navy Alcohol and Substance Abuse educational classes and often undergo six months of rehabilitation and psychiatric guidance.

The Navy maintains that the program saves money, man-hours and lives within the boundaries of the law; however, it has not been without opposition from some personnel being tested.

ONE COMPLAINT is the method by which they are tested. Many do not appreciate being observed and forced to produce urine samples. While that may be a valid personal complaint, many have been caught with vials of urine, purchased at high prices from people whose urine was free from drugs. Many illegal businesses selling "clean" urine have been discovered in and around several military bases.

Others have complained that the screening is too personal and that the Navy should not be able to extract bodily fluids from its service members. But the Supreme Court has ruled that it is legal to do so.

UPON ENLISTING in the Navy, recruits sign a contract stating they will not use drugs or abuse alcohol and the Supreme Court has ruled the Navy can enforce compliance with the contract.

On the other hand, most Navy personnel say the program is both useful and necessary.

Greenpeace calls French bombing report insulting

LONDON (UPI) — Greenpeace Tuesday criticized as "an insult" a report that cleared the French government of involvement in the bomb blast that killed one man and sank the environmental group's flagship in New Zealand last month.

The London-based organization called the report "an insult to public intelligence and world opinion" and said it was an apparent effort to whitewash government involvement in the bombing.

An investigator appointed by the French government said Monday he found no evidence of official French involvement in the bombing of the Greenpeace flagship Rainbow Warrior in Auckland, New Zealand.

But the 29-page report said a man and a woman charged with murder and arson in the July 10 attack were French intelligence officers.

The bombing killed a photographer and sank the anti-nuclear group's ship, which was scheduled to lead a flotilla to try to block French nuclear testing at Mururoa atoll in the South Pacific next month.

The environmental organization said French President Francois Mitterrand had "instructed this inquiry by calling for justice at the highest level," but it said the report "is not justice, but justification." The report "is a clear signal that France believes that murder, arson and we can now add deceit are justifiable methods of defending the nuclear weapons testing program in the Pacific," Greenpeace said.

"The report is an insult to our membership, an insult to the people of New Zealand, an insult to the family of (the dead man) ... and an insult to public intelligence and world opinion," a spokesman said.

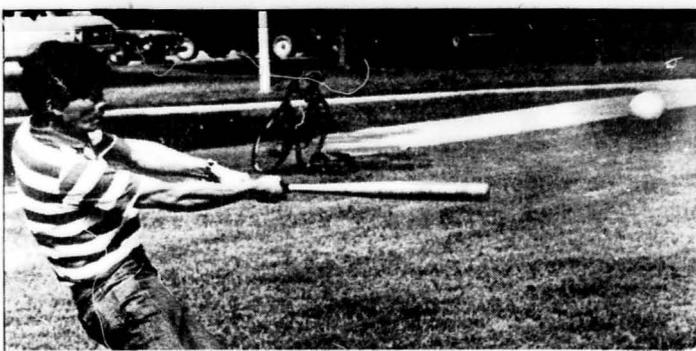

Greenpeace also criticized the British government for not commenting on the matter, even though the Rainbow Warrior was a British-registered ship.

A spokesman for the British Foreign Office said Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe would probably discuss the bombing at a previously scheduled private meeting Wednesday in Paris with his French counterpart.

The spokesman said there was no official reaction from Britain because the bombing took place in New Zealand.

But a spokesman for the opposition Labor Party called on Britain to conduct its own investigation.

Spokesman John Prescott called the French report "ridiculous" and said Britain "has a responsibility to conduct our own investigation because it was a British-registered ship."

Night Stalker may have penchant for Japanese cars, officials say

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The so-called Night Stalker, suspected of 14 killings and two dozen other brutal attacks throughout California, may have a penchant for stealing Japanese cars, authorities said Tuesday.

"He's been stealing cars," Cmdr. Frank Jordan of the San Francisco Police Department said, adding that the use of stolen Datsuns and Toyotas "seems to be part of his method of operation."

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy Mike Ford would not comment directly on Jordan's theory about the killer's use of stolen cars.

Ford did note that officers are looking for a 1976 orange Toyota station wagon — California license 482-RTS — that was stolen in Chinatown Saturday night and reportedly seen in suburban Orange County near the scene of the Stalker's latest attack.

Bill Carns, 29, who recently moved to California from North Dakota, was shot several times in the head as he slept early Sunday in his home in Mission Viejo. His wife was raped. Carns was listed in critical condition Tuesday in a local hospital.

The attack was the first linked to the Night Stalker, since a man was shot to death and his wife wounded in San Francisco the previous weekend. He is so named because he usually sneaks into darkened homes through unlocked doors or windows.

Los Angeles police, meanwhile, released a new color sketch of the suspect — still portraying a slim, curly-haired man with stained gapped teeth in his 20s or 30s, but now showing him wearing a black baseball cap.

"It is the same (sketch) except that he has a black baseball cap on and he parts his hair on either side of his head," Lt. Dan Cook said.

He said several victims and other witnesses had said the man was wearing such a cap during the attacks, but would not elaborate.

Although authorities have been reluctant to discuss details that link the attacks, several similarities have been disclosed — most notably his general method of sneaking into a darkened home while the victims sleep, then trying to kill the man and sexually assault the woman.

"We consider him cold-blooded and extremely dangerous," Sheriff's Deputy John Broussard said.

"Most of his entries were between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m., and if there's a husband he immediately attacks the man and tries to put him out of commission."

Judge prohibits Klan from highway march

ATLANTA (UPI) — A federal judge refused Tuesday to allow the Ku Klux Klan to march down a highway to its annual cross burning ceremony in Stone Mountain and told organizers to either walk beside the road or go by car.

U.S. District Judge Robert Hall rejected arguments that the Saturday march down one lane of Memorial Drive was the constitutional right of Klansmen.

"It's obvious the march can take place," said Hall. "But I'm not going to let you march in the street. You have two alternatives — you can march on the side of the road or by motorcade."

Dave Holland, a Klan official from Redan, Ga., said he considered appealing the ruling. "But I've just talked to another attorney and he doesn't think we have anything to appeal so we're going to abide by the judge's decision."

DeKalb County Attorney Wade Watson told the judge the Klan has not been denied a march permit.

James R. Venable, a Klan official, told the judge the group "is not out to obstruct traffic" and claimed that refusing to allow the Klansmen to march down the highway "would be a violation of our right of freedom of speech, our right of freedom of expression."

Babcock dominates national gymnastics meet

By Steve Merritt

Brian Babcock

Brian Babcock, former SIU-C gymnastics star, is back on campus after a summer equally as busy as his former coach and new boss, men's gymnastics coach Bill Meade. Babcock went to the National Sports Festival in Baton Rouge, La., as the top-seeded gymnast in the nation and left the meet leaving no one doubting his gymnastics skills.

Babcock won a record-tying seven medals at the festival, equaling a mark set by Scott Johnson of Nebraska, a 1984 Olympic Gold Medalist and close friend of Babcock's.

Babcock won a Silver Medal for team competition and the Gold Medal for all-around performance. In individual performances, he won Gold Medals in the pommel horse, parallel bars and horizontal bar, as well as Bronze Medals in the floor exercise and the still ring competition.

All in all, Babcock walked away with four golds, a silver and two bronze medals, a haul which he is definitely proud of.

Held in non-Olympic years and sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee, the festivals are intended to increase public awareness of amateur sports and to help identify future Olympic hopefuls. More than 3,800 athletes from across the nation competed in over 34 sports at this year's festival.

After the sports fest, Babcock attended a training camp for members of the U.S. National Team, which was held Aug. 12 to 18 in Colorado Springs. He is now back on the SIU-C campus as a student and assistant coach, which gives him a chance to finish his graduate work in biomechanics.

Although eligible for this year's World University Games in Kobe, Japan, Babcock elected not to go so he could catch up on his studies and training.

When asked if he planned on competing in the 1988 Olympics, Babcock replied that it was a decision that would depend on his body.

"It's really kind of up to my body," Babcock said. "I've had so many injuries in the past that it's really hard to say right now. But it is a definite goal of mine to be on the team when they arrive in Seoul for the '88 Olympics."

Babcock said that although he is the No. 1 gymnast in the country, he will have to prove himself again later this fall in the trials for the World Championship Games.

Twenty-four members of the national team will be competing for eight spots on the World Games team. The trial competition will be held in Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 26 to 28. Qualifiers will then travel to Montreal in November for the World Games.

"I really like training here on the SIU-C campus," Babcock said. "Coaching wise, it's where I want to be."

"When a school is as good to you as SIU-C has been to me, it gets kind of hard to leave. We have a real quality program and one of the best coaches in the nation in Bill Meade."

Meade returns from travels to backlog of work

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

It's been a busy summer for SIU-C gymnastics coach Bill Meade, and returning to his desk this week didn't help lessen his workload any.

"Boy, it sure is tough coming back to a desk you haven't seen for a couple of weeks," said Meade, looking at a desk cluttered with a month's backlog of paperwork.

In less than a month, Meade traveled from Baton Rouge, La., to Colorado Springs to North Carolina, the latter of which was a one-week vacation.

Meade traveled to the National Sports Festival in Baton Rouge earlier this month to watch former Saluki gymnastics standout Brian Babcock and current Saluki David Lutterman.

After watching Babcock win the sports fest, Meade was off to Colorado Springs to assist 15 other coaches in a training camp for the U.S. National Gymnastics Team. Babcock and Lutterman attended the training session as members of the national team, which they qualified for by placing among the top 24 finishers at the national qualifying meet in Jacksonville, Fla., earlier this summer.

After getting back to the campus of SIU-C, Meade faced the annual problem of organization. He said that schedules, practice times and personnel are always among the top priorities when returning to a new academic year.

"Coming back is always the roughest part," Meade said. "You have to get reacquainted with everything before you can operate smoothly. Plus, you have new names and faces to get accustomed to."

Summing up his roster for the new season, Meade thinks he will have a "pretty good team."

After losing 13 members from last year's squad, it would seem that Meade would be concerned about a lack of depth. Meade, however, is taking quite the opposite approach.

"We'll have a real strong team, with a lot of depth," said Meade.

Meade is optimistic about the futures of three freshmen team members, who he hopes will develop into gymnasts with the durability and determination of prize pupil

Babcock. The new athletes are Brent Reed from Highland High School in Anderson, Ind., Marcus Mulholland from Plano Senior High School in Plano, Texas and Tony Zamodio from Barrington,

Youngblood to leave Rams' line

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Jack Youngblood, one of the premier defensive ends in NFL history and the heart of the Los Angeles Rams for the last 14 years, announced his retirement Tuesday.

At an emotional news conference at the Rams' training camp, Youngblood, who played two games with a broken leg in the 1979 playoffs and whose threshold of pain was termed "unchartable" by a team trainer, said he was not able to come back from a severe back injury sustained last season.

"I've had to make some decisions before in my life, but never has one come as tough as this one," Youngblood said. "Football has been my life here in Los Angeles for the last 14 years, and I honestly thought and prayed and turned over every stone I could to make it possible to be the Jack Youngblood you remember from last year."

"But it just wouldn't happen. Therefore, I have to retire."

Youngblood, 35, was the Rams' first-round draft pick in 1971 out of Florida. He began a streak as a rookie that was to continue until last last season, playing in 201 consecutive games, the most in Rams' history, and making 184 career starts.

Last season, on Nov. 25 against Tampa Bay, he sustained a severe injury to his sciatic nerve. Despite the pain, he played the following week, but was then forced to miss a game against Houston on Dec. 9.

Field hockey team expects strong play from transfers

By Rich Heaton
Staff Writer

Even with the loss of top returning scorer Kathy Crowley to knee surgery, field hockey coach Julie Illner is optimistic about the upcoming season.

Illner says the starting team will be experienced, but not experienced at playing together. Four of the eleven starters will be junior college transfers.

"I've seen a lot of improvement from the first week," said Illner. Illner says she pleased with the team, but they still have a long way to go.

"This team has the ability to score," said Illner, "but a new scoring leader will have to emerge." Illner is looking for Dana Riedel, a senior link from Plymouth, Mass., to be producing more scores this year while concentrating more on offense.

Crowley's knee surgery will leave the front line with only returning starter, Nadine Simpson, a junior forward from Philadelphia Pa. The scoring slack will have to be taken up by Laurie Kingman, a junior college All America last year with Champlain College in Burlington, Vt., and Naomi Tavares, a junior college transfer from Mitchell College in New London, Conn.

The midfield players will hold the key to the success of the team this year, says Illner. With four out of five returning starters in the midfield, this should be the strongest unit on the team.

The experience of Riedel, Mindy Thorne, a junior halfback from Cheshire, Co., Patty Lauer, a senior link from Belford, N.J., and Mary Beth Meehan, senior back from Massapequa, N.Y., will give SIU-C a team as strong in the middle as anyone they will face this year, Illner says.

Nadine Simpson, forward on the field hockey team, wears a mask to protect her nose, which she broke last year.

The deep defense will be made up of two players who are basically untried at the Division I level of competition. Melinda Foe, a junior sweeper from Edwardsville, will start at sweeper. Foe saw limited action last season. Starting at goalie will be Mary Mazz, a junior transfer student, from Edgewood, Md.

Illner says that this year's team has the capability to repeat the success of its 1983 season, when it had a record of 12 wins, seven losses, and three ties. The team will also be defending its Midwest Independents Championship title this year at Wham field.

The team will hold an intrasquad scrimmage Saturday, Aug. 31, at Wham field. The first official game will be against University of the South, Sept. 8, at Wham field.

OPEN: McEnroe wins by narrow margin

In the tie-break, McEnroe led 3-1 and had triple break point at 6-3, only to lose all three points. Again at match point at 7-6, McEnroe sent a backhand wide. Finally, a service winner gave McEnroe his fifth break point and this time he took advantage.

Becker was successful on only half of his first serves but still produced 11 aces for four to Doohan.

"It was my first time on Center Court and I never played on such a big court," the 17-year-old West German said. "I was looking up high where the spectators were sitting and it was strange in the beginning.

"It was a nice feeling when I warmed up and the umpire said 'Wimbledon champion '85' and the spectators were clapping and screaming. It was a nice feeling and the crowd was good during the match."

Joining Becker in the second round among the men were No. 3 seed Mats Wilander, No. 12 Johan Kriek and No. 13 Tim Mayotte.

Wilander defeated Vijay Amritraj 6-2, 6-4, 6-4 and Kriek and Mayotte both won by identical scores of 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 with Kriek defeating Paul McNamee and Mayotte disposing of Terry Moor.

Miller gives added 'kick' to Saluki grid team

By Ron Warnick
Staff Writer

When junior place-kicker Ron Miller boots his first extra point through the uprights this season, his extra point streak will begin again at one.

It's a big change for Miller, who booted an NCAA-record 80 straight extra points throughout two seasons until he missed the his last attempt on the last game of the season against Southwest Missouri State in 1984.

"I don't really know what happened. I looked up after I kicked it and thought, 'Wow, it's not going through.' It really felt unusual because I'm used to it going through all of the time. But I took it pretty well because I knew it could have ended any time. I'm happy it went as long as it did," he said.

Miller thought the weather changes before the game may have been a reason for missing the kick.

"The weather was great one day before the game, then everything changed on us — the field got wet, muddy and cold. Sometimes that gets to your mind. You have enough to think about as a kicker anyway, but when you have to worry about wind, rain and snow, those get to your mind. You lose some of your concentration," Miller said.

In addition to being 80 for 81 in extra points for two years, he has kicked 28 field goals out of 37 attempts and set a Saluki football single-season scoring record with 110 points in 1983.

With 164 points in his college career, he has a chance late this season to break the Saluki career scoring record of 209, held by Carver Shannon, who played from 1955 to 1958.

"It would be exciting to break the record. As a place-kicker, you don't think you would get the opportunity to be a recognized person like a running back," Miller said.

Miller described kicking as 90 percent mental and 10 percent physical.

"Any time I go out there, I

Place kicker Ron Miller boots the ball in the general direction of the uprights as holder Kevin Brown looks on.

always put all of my concentration toward that kick and block everything out. If you're a good kicker you have to do that," he said.

Miller, a Belleville native, learned to kick in Little League football by watching an older friend, Terry Dobbs. Dobbs was a soccer-style kicker and Miller was a straight-ahead kicker until he tried an experiment.

"In the last game of Little League, I wanted to try kicking soccer-style to see if I could get more power on the ball. I tried it on the kickoff and it went a little bit further. I've been soccer-style ever since," he said.

Miller played defensive end and place-kicker in high school and earned All-Conference and All-Area honorable mention honors as a kicker.

As a freshman at SIU-C in 1983, he went right to work on his record-scoring season and had one of his greatest moments against outstanding place-kicker Tony Zendejas in the national championship playoff game against Nevada-Reno. Miller responded to the "kicking showdown" media hype by kicking three field goals in the first half while Zendejas missed a crucial one in an eventual Saluki victory.

"I think had everything to gain and nothing to lose, and he had everything to lose in that game. I think he was just trying to compete against me rather than play for the team. I think that's why he missed his field goal and I got three," Miller said.

Miller said he, "like everybody else," would like to play professional football.

"But I have to get stronger on kickoffs and discipline myself a little more," he said.

Return to national tourney is goal of women ruggers

By Sandra Todd
Staff Writer

Making and meeting goals is what the SIU-C Women's Rugby Club is all about.

Becky Robinson, club president said, "you have to first visualize what you want, and then believe you're really going to get it."

In the case of the Women's Rugby Club, the "it" this year is going to nationals.

"It's the highest level. It's like the Superbowl," said coach Barb Cavoto.

Last spring, the club captured fourth place in the Midwest Nationals qualifying tournament.

"This year we have alot of experience, and I think we can do even better," said Cavoto.

The club's dedication led to an impressive 11-4 1984-1985 season.

They won the Collegiate Tournament and the St. Louis Tournament last year by holding their opponents scoreless in all matches.

The club's most recent honor, however, is having been invited to the first "Women of Excellence Celebration" to be held in Amhurst, Mass., Sept. 21-23.

Robinson said that the SIU-C Women's Rugby Club was one of 16 teams chosen from across the United States and Canada to participate in this celebration of elite women athletes.

Debra Richardson, coordinator of the event said, "It's really the first all-women's olympics."

She said that the best women athletes from around the United States and Canada will be there representing their sports.

Another honor for the club is having two of their "select-side" players, Barb Cavoto and Anita Coleman, chosen to represent America on a rugby team that is to tour Europe and play various matches from

Nov. 15 to Dec. 1.

Cavoto explained that to be chosen for select-side, a player can put her name on a list at the Midwest Union Tournament as a request to be considered for the honor.

The coaches and referees choose approximately 30 tournament players to try out for the group. Ultimately, about 25 people are selected and about 15 make the traveling team.

Coleman has been a Midwest select-side member for two years and Cavoto has been one for three years.

"We're a good team; we've come so far," said Cavoto.

"I wish more people would come out to our games," she said. "Not only do we need the support at our matches, but also at our fundraisers."

The home schedule for the fall season starts Sept. 14, but the opponent is unknown as of yet. On October 26, they face Mizzou.

McEnroe gains win in 1st round of Open

NEW YORK (UPI) — Defending champion John McEnroe narrowly averted what would have been the tennis upset of the year Tuesday by winning a fifth-set tie-breaker from Shlomo Glickstein in the first round of the U.S. Open.

McEnroe, in quest of a fifth Open crown, twice was up a break in the decisive set, gave both away, then wasted four match points before escaping by scores of 6-1, 6-7 (3-7), 2-6, 6-3, 7-6 (9-7).

Following his winning backhand crosscourt that Glickstein netted on the fifth match point, ending the 3 hour and 51 minute marathon, McEnroe held up his weary left arm in mock approval of his victory.

"It surprised me how flat I was today," McEnroe said. "I lost my concentration quickly. He jerked me around and had me on the defensive. I've never been so happy to win a first-round match."

Although he served 15 aces, McEnroe was inconsistent with his service. He committed 59 unforced errors to only 23 for Glickstein, and he lacked his usual touch around the net.

Glickstein, a 27-year-old Israeli, never has been ranked higher than 33rd in the world and now stands at No. 175. In three previous matches against McEnroe, he managed to win only two sets.

In most untypical fashion, McEnroe continually allowed Glickstein off the floor in the final set. The 27-year-old New Yorker broke for leads of 2-1 and 4-3 and gave them back in th sixth and eighth games. On the second occasion, McEnroe was broken at love when he served his 10th double-fault.
