Officials considering bookstore alternatives

In my opinion, leasing the bookstore is not in the best interest of students or faculty.

JIM SKIERSCH
University Bookstore director

CHRIS KENNEDY
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Student Center officials have initiated plans to lease the University Center Bookstore to an independent contractor amid objections from the University Bookstore director.

The Student Center-run bookstore could be leased as early as January, although the switch probably will not take effect until summer, said Greg Tatham, director of the Student Center.

Although there a great deal of interest has been generated, the top three companies looking to lease the bookstore are Barnes and Noble, Follett's, and Wallace's, Tatham said.

"As a part of good management practices, we felt we needed to look at alternative sources which include leasing companies," Tatham said.

"If it puts us both in a more favorable financial position, while at the same time maintaining service and high qualities and standards to the campus community, then we would need to take a serious look at those types of opportunities."

But Jim Skiersch, University Bookstore director, said leasing the bookstore would adversely affect students and faculty because of the possibility of decreased services and higher prices.

"In my opinion, leasing the bookstore is not in the best interest of students or faculty," Skiersch said.

"If a lease operator comes in, they will run the store strictly for profit. They don't answer to students, they answer to the stockholders.

"We answer to the students and faculty of SIU."

Legislation may jeopardize SIU, research institutions

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A law recently signed by Gov. George Ryan to prohibit university contracts in exchange for financial gifts may have larger effects than originally intended according to SIU's legal counsel.

The law may have unintended effects that put state research universities at a distinct disadvantage according to Peter Ruger, SIU legal counsel.

Ruger said the law would not necessarily invalidate contracts such as the deals made between SIUC and Marion Pepsi, but it could affect research faculty.

The law states a contract with a university may not require "an individual or individuals employed by such a college, university, or institution to receive a consulting contract for professional services."

This part of the law could have a "deadly effect" on SIUC as a research university, Ruger said.

"It would force faculty with a lucrative invention to leave the University," Ruger said.

"It could prevent a lot of good inventions from getting into the public domain.

"It is detrimental to us as a research institution and to the general public."

SIU legislative liaison Garrett Deakin said the legislature may have been enacted in haste.

"The legislators have not thought out all of the ramifications that this law has," he said.

Ryan originally told reporters last month he did not plan to sign the bill because universities have governing boards to regulate contracts and the governor should not tell them how to run things.

Ryan's office had no comment as of press time.

The law was sponsored by Rep. Jeffrey Schoenberg, D-Evanston, and Sen. Steven Rauschenberger, R-Elgin.

Northwestern University, located in Schoenberg's district, will not be affected by this law because it is a private university.

The motivation behind the law was soft

Refillable plastic mugs to reduce cost and waste

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Filled with a desire to reduce waste from plastic and insulating foam cups, Student Center officials are selling reusable plastic mugs which may save students cash while aiding the environment.

The 22-ounce Student Center Refill Mugs, which were designed by the Student Center marketing department, are sold for $2.25. The price of the mug covers the cost of production.

Mug refills are 69 cents, as opposed to 99 cents, at all food locations in the Student Center, excluding McDonald's. Refills at McDonald's — which normally cost 59 cents, will cost 10 cents more to refill — as the additional dime goes to Southern Sustainability, an organization that also helped to develop the idea.

Southern Sustainability is a group composed of about 30 students, professors, staff and community members who donate their time and energy to University resource management. The group organizes recycling efforts and deals with campus environmental concerns.

Southern Sustainability receives 10 cents each time students refill the mugs at any Student Center restaurant. They receive 25 cents each time a mug is purchased. Student Center Dining Services and McDonald's report a total of 45 mugs have sold since they became available Tuesday.

The money generated will be placed in the Southern Sustainability fund, stored by the organization for future environmental projects.

Hugh Muldoon, co-founder of Southern Sustainability, said although he does not have any definite plans for the fund, it will be used for whatever needs to carry on the organization's mission.

"Whatever it takes to make SIUC a greener campus," Muldoon said.

Muldoon said both groups thirsted for an idea that would benefit the students and the environment.

"This idea came from a lot of people who were upset over the use of so much Styrofoam," Muldoon said.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson purchased a mug Wednesday to encourage others to follow his example.

"This is just one piece of the puzzle to cut down on waste," Jackson said. "If you go to a landfill, you'll see it's a pretty enormous amount of waste we generate."

Southern Sustainability, previously known as the Sustainability Task Force, is responsible for Spring semester's environmental assessment of University waste and water management. The results from that project are pending. Ken Jaros, associate director of the Student Center, said that while the mugs are limited — there are only 1,000 available — if only half of the mugs are sold, it would quench the program's goal.

"Building an environmentally sustainable community, one where economics and social progress can continue, is a great and satisfying challenge," Jaros said.

"Purchasing and using the mug allows an individual to participate in that challenge while realizing they are saving money."

THIS DAY IN 1967

• The sharpest rise in living costs in nine months was reported by the government. The rise meant Americans have to spend about a half cent more for every dollar spent. Despite record high average paychecks of $102.14 a week for 45.5 million workers, the rise in living costs kept purchases down 77 cent a week from a year ago.

• Surgeon General William H. Stewart said he favors the use of federal standards to govern maximum permissible levels of tar and nicotine in cigarette smoke. This along with the requirement that the contents be listed on cigarette packages was required by 71 percent of smokers contacted. Along with those recommendations the Surgeon General also urged the cigarette industry to withdraw from the market the new extra-long cigarette.

• The Wilson Manor on W. Freeman was offering girls private rooms for the school year at the cost of $300 with meals or $160 without meals.

Man to go to trial for murder of SIU student

Crutchfield defense may plead insanity for first-degree murder charges in October

BOB JACOBINI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Williamson County State's Attorney will seek the death penalty, and the defense may plead insanity in the trial of Steven Crutchfield, who is accused of killing SIUC student Michael Sasso.

After several delays this summer, the trial is now slated to begin Oct. 5 in Williamson County.

Crutchfield, 30, is charged with three counts of first-degree murder in connection with the stabbing death of Sasso, 20, who was a sophomore in administration of justice.

On April 3, Crutchfield allegedly broke into the home of his estranged wife, Tracie Crutchfield, where he confronted his wife and Sasso and repeatedly stabbed Sasso.

Crutchfield was under a court order at the time to stay away from his wife and daughter.

The trial was delayed during the summer when Charles Garnati, Williamson County State's Attorney, elected to seek the death penalty, and defense attorney Larry E. Broeking in turn asked for a second attorney.

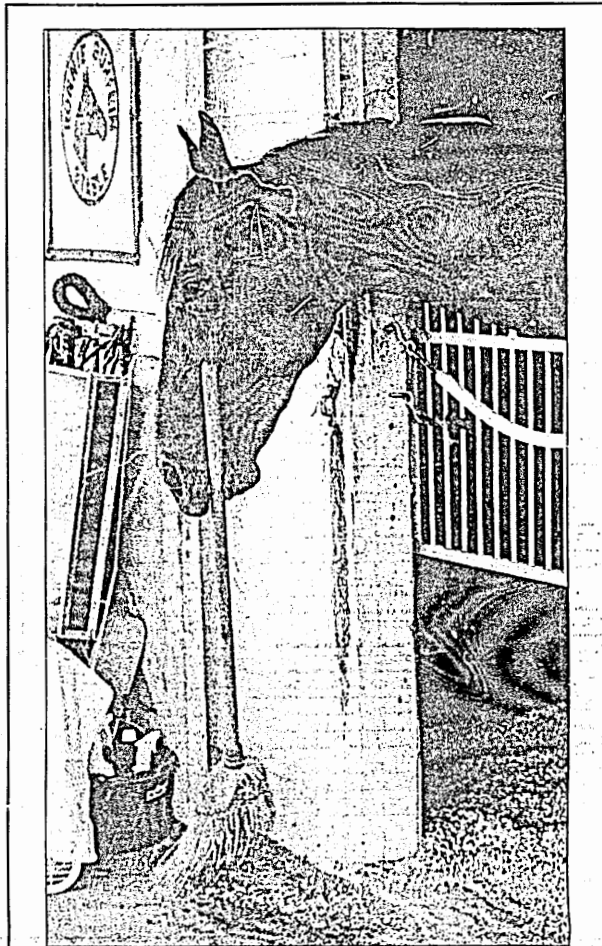

Broeking indicated July 14 he may rely on an insanity defense and the testimony of Dr. David Waushuer.

Waushuer was appointed to determine Crutchfield's mental competence to stand trial and whether he was sane at the time of the killing.

Because of the possible insanity defense, Garnati has requested Judge Ronald Eckles to appoint another clinical psychologist to examine Crutchfield. The psychologist had not been selected Wednesday, according to court records.

Garnati is out of town until Aug. 31 and was unavailable for comment. Broeking did not return telephone messages Wednesday afternoon.

The final pre-trial hearing is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Sept. 27.

Carbondale man robbed, police search for attacker

A Carbondale man reported he was attacked and robbed of $20 in front of his house on West Chautauqua Street early Wednesday morning.

Carbondale police said the victim was removing something from the trunk of his car, which was parked in front of his house at 12:45 a.m., when he was approached from behind.

The victim turned to face his attacker and was punched in the face and knocked unconscious.

The suspect is described as a black male, 6-foot 4-inches tall, 190 pounds with a thin build and close-cut hair.

The victim had a swollen right eye, but refused medical treatment.

NAACP demands apology from Utah senator

Sen. Robert F. Bennett, R-Utah, has apologized for his comment that the only things that could keep Texas Gov. George W. The Utah NAACP demanded an apology. On Monday, the organization got just that after meeting with the senator for an hour. Bennett apologized in the meeting and later repeated the apology before reporters.

"I had no intention of offending anyone," Bennett said.

NAACP leaders said they accepted his apology.

Construction on Grand Avenue to end in October

New road will be more pedestrian and bicyclist friendly, officials say

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Construction on Grand Avenue between Lewis Lane and Giant City Road will be completed by October, according to Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty.

The project, which started in April, includes adding designated turn lanes, bike lanes in both directions, a sidewalk, curbs and gutters to the two lane road.

"A two lane road with a shoulder and open drainage was not a good situation for pedestrians and bicyclists," Doherty said. "With growth in that area, changes to Grand Avenue will give better driving conditions for that area in whole."

The changes to the street and intersections of Grand Avenue with Lewis Lane and Giant City Road will help safety with turn lanes at the intersections.

Visibility has been increased on Grand Avenue just east of Lewis Lane with the reduction in the grade of the hill south of Lewis School.

OUR WORD

Students are suckers for crime

Imagine coming back to your unlocked dorm room to find your 20-page research paper is gone, along with your new IBM Thinkpad.

Or this: of the anger you'd feel upon coming home to find someone had stolen all your stereo components and drawn a mustache on your impossible-to-find Bruce Lee poster.

It doesn't take a long time to steal something. Law enforcement representatives from SIUC and Carbondale recently visited the DAILY EGYPTIAN and related numerous horror stories about entire homes being cleaned out and whole semesters worth of work vanishing with a stolen computer.

This year, college students will lose hundreds of dollars through ignorant trust. Would-be thieves celebrate every fall because students are back in town and ready to be ripped off.

Thefts are the most prevalent crime every year on the SIUC campus. Bookbags, calculators, compact discs and video game systems — the most popular items to steal — are taken every year because students aren't careful.

Carbondale is a community with a small-town atmosphere, but in crime terms, that just means the pool of victims is smaller.

Dorms campus-wide are pushing togetherness by holding countless floor meetings with cheesy ice-breakers. If you live in the dorms, you've probably had to find someone who can juggle, or that's had at least four speeding tickets. But it's important to realize that just because you've introduced yourself to someone doesn't mean they won't take your Sony Playstation if you leave your door wide open while you go to do laundry.

Students living off-campus are not immune from theft either. In fact, because students living off campus are not confined to the space limitations of a dorm room, they probably have a lot more stuff to steal.

The local police get plenty of calls from current renters of off-campus party houses complaining they awoke the morning after their party to find many items missing. Usually, these are items that will never be recovered because there were too many partying strangers who took the items at an indeterminate point of the party while the owner was intoxicated.

If you're going to have strangers in your house in a situation where you can't, or won't, be watching everything that's happening, don't leave your valuables out for the plundering.

Just because you're letting them party in your house doesn't mean they won't have a problem recovering the cost of their beer cup by taking half your CD collection.

Theft prevention is as easy as not being careless or overly trusting. Lock your doors when no one is home or in your room. Don't leave your stereo outside when the party is over. And don't leave your bookbag or CD player sitting in the open when you're not in close proximity.

Most of these crimes are accompanied by nobody seeing anything. You also have no clue who would do such a thing or when it happened for sure. And though the police likely be unable to console you, they almost always will be able to point out the window you left open while you went home for the weekend.

Don't make yourself another victim. Be mindful of your possessions. Lock your doors. Chain your bikes. And don't give everyone in the free world a key to your house.

Nobody ever thinks they'll be a victim until they become one. Make friends and have a good time while you're at SIUC, but if you want to keep your possessions, don't make them easy targets.

Look what those little monsters are doing

"All children are essentially criminal." — Denis Diderot

Maryland Boy Charged in Bra Snapping Salisbury, Md. (AP) — A 10-year-old boy has been charged with assault for allegedly snapping girls' bras. The Pittsview Elementary pupil, who was not identified, was accused of assaulting five girls, ages 8 to 11, earlier this month. He was suspended from school for three days and from a county-run, after-school program.

The boy was charged with four counts of assault for allegedly snapping girls' bras and one count of sex offense for allegedly touching a girl's buttocks.

Yes, it appears the higher-ups are finally getting serious about the sexual problems plaguing this wonderful nation. That little bastard will be lucky if they don't cut off his hands and give him the chair in front of a national audience, with the Pope in the special V.J.P. viewing section along with Pat Buchanan and Pat Robertson.

Clinton would probably be mysteriously absent from the proceedings.

It seems our leaders are clueless about what to do with the national epidemic of sex-crazed, bra-snapping monsters who roam the halls of our elementary schools.

I see only two options we have left: (a) we castrate all the newborn boys and make them join the choir or serve as eunuchs for judges, the president and congress, or (b) everyone stops having children. This damn world is overpopulated as it is. If we stop procreating we can coral crowding and make sure no more 10-year-olds are left to go around terrorizing their peers.

When I was in kindergarten an especially vicious tramp named Kathleen used to chase me around and terrorize me with her dastardly kissing potion. I was deathly afraid of her; she definitely made our place of study a hostile environment.

Kathleen was tall and skinny with a face full of freckles. She was rough; all the boys were afraid of her and loathed her very presence.

She would chase me around the room or playground, her long legs covering ground much faster than I could. Once she caught me, she would throw me to the ground, pinning my arms with her bony knees as she straddled me. As I screamed and tried to wiggle free she would pull out the kissing potion (she had two different kinds, one was lipstick she would smear all over herself and the other was perfume she would spray all over me).

Then she went to work, kissing me and trying to stick her tongue in my mouth. I can still vividly feel the honor she instilled in my 5-year-old heart.

What was even worse was no one would listen to my cries for deliverance. My teacher didn't believe me, my parents would laugh and my peers accused me of liking it.

I prayed for her death every night.

I transferred schools the next year and didn't see Kathleen again. I had forgotten about the whole incident until I ran into her at a local barbecue a few years back. Much to my horror, she was indescribably gorgeous. The freckles had disappeared and those long, bony legs had become shapely and gotten longer (I swear they went all the way up to her neck). Her blonde hair cascaded over her shoulders and encased an unblemished face. When we were introduced I could hardly muster a sound. I think I muttered, "Didn't we go to kindergarten together?" or something else completely asinine.

After she left, I turned to my friend and smugly said, "She used to kiss me back in the day."

"Well," he said, "she doesn't seem too interested in you now."

"I know," I said. "We were just childhood sweethearts."

DEAR EDITOR,

Since the Board of Trustees' fiasco this summer, what has happened to Delyte Morris' dream of a first-class university that would serve our young people and our communities?

Can we really run a university when our board and president show so little interest in quality education, ethics, standards or objectivity?

How far can our statewide reputation continue to fall and what will happen to the value of an SIU degree?

Will the best of our young people have to continue to go elsewhere for employment because Southern Illinois' main industries are a small amount of tourism and an occasional prison?

Where are the politicians like Mike Bost and Dave Leuchtefeld or bodies like the Chamber of Commerce and the Faculty Senate or Graduate Council who are supposed to prevent the removal of major resources and services from the University and region?

If you weren't here this summer, these questions have now been answered, but most will not like the answers. A popular and able chancellor was blindsided and fired illegally by a board that continues to destroy any chance that we will become a major university or that the fortunes of our citizens will be improved.

This surprising and unjustified sacking of our talented leader apparently was caused by the unpopular and ineffective president of the University and his ill-conceived scheme to deplete our campus of money and services.

The board has reminded us once again of its indifference and often open hostility to our students, faculty and region. It seems it is not important. Argersinger has the skills, vision and personality to continue the mission of Morris and to get our University and region to the next level, but rather than some misguided loyalty he failed corporate policies must be maintained.

If he wasn't responsible for such destruction, it would be hard not to feel sorry for President Ted Sanders, who is totally lost in a university setting. This is not surprising. While Argersinger had to undergo a thorough faculty review before being hired, Sanders was selected solely by the board, which apparently does not understand the importance of relevant experience and qualifications or the importance of a real search.

It is now evident the only real questions remaining center on Gov. George Ryan. How much political patronage money did it take to re-appoint trustee Van Meter? Because this act apparently led to the board riot this summer and its chaotic aftermath, is this what Ryan really intended?

Finally and most importantly, what is the price of the future of our students and region?

"[Saluki Bookstore] split the market into three pieces," Tatham said. "Since that time our revenue has dropped in the bookstore. We're still profitable, but the amount of revenue it is returning to fund other Student Center operations is not as much as it has been."

The revenue generated by the Student Center Bookstore helps maintain study lounges and other non-revenue oriented operations in the Student Center.

Skiersch said the reason revenues have dropped is because Saluki Bookstore had a policy of selling books at cost, which resulted in lower book prices at 710 Bookstore, 710 S. Illinois Ave., and at University Center Bookstore.

Saluki Bookstore changed ownership and prices have returned to normal. As a result, University Center Bookstore's sales have returned to normal, Skiersch said.

"Now that Saluki [Bookstore] has stopped selling books at cost, sales have gone back up," Skiersch said. "The administration is reacting to a problem that may no longer exist."

Because the University Center does not receive state funding and relies on student fees and revenue, management needs to look at the best way to increase revenue, Tatham said.

According to Tatham, the University Center Bookstore made 3.5 percent to 4 percent profit off their sales last year. A contractor would guarantee 8 percent to 12 percent of sales generated.

Tatham said bringing in a large contractor would increase services for students and faculty.

"They have the resources," Tatham said. "They have hundreds of campuses to pull experience from, to know what students want, when they want it and what timely products to be selling. All of them have major web-based commerce."

Tatham also said Illinois state purchasing laws put the Student Center-owned bookstore at a disadvantage because of rules state agencies have to follow when buying products that commercially run companies do not have to follow.

Tatham said some publishers do not want to abide by Illinois state purchasing laws so the University Center Bookstore cannot buy from. This forces students to shop at other area bookstores to get their books.

"As a University bookstore we should be able to have every single book, and we can't," Tatham said.

Skiersch said the same problem exists with independent contractors.

"Would a lease company be willing to order obscure titles?" Skiersch asked. "If they don't make money (on a book), are (the books) going to be there? You move from the realm of choice to the realm of mass merchandising."

Skiersch also said full-time employees of the bookstore could lose their jobs to the leasing corporation's employees. As a result, the full-time workers could replace student workers, costing 16 to 20 student jobs, Skiersch said.

"There is a significant feeling of uneasiness among the staff," Skiersch said.

Tatham said the Student Center management realizes leasing could present problems for bookstore employees and will ask companies interested to retain present employees.

"It all depends on how the contract negotiations work out," Tatham said. "A lot of times the company will retain the employees because they know the store best and know the college best."

"All these things need to be looked at and worked out, and we're sensitive to that. I personally feel for the most part that if we end up with a new company that leases the store that (the employees) will be offered positions and remain with the store."

Marsha Reppy, a student employee at the bookstore, said she doubts a leasing company will work with students.

"I don't think it's beneficial for them to hire us," said Reppy, a sophomore in management from Belarus. "They'll hire someone for $5.15 an hour. They won't want to work around (student worker's) schedules."

Skiersch said it is a simple matter of what is important to the University.

"The University as a whole needs to decide what it is they want from the bookstore," Skiersch said. "If the University wants to make money they can do that without even leasing. It's no big trick to raise prices."

"[Our] job is not to make a profit, it is to provide a service at reasonable prices and that would allow the bookstore to make a reasonable amount of profit."

"There always has to be a rivalry"

Players of the Chicago Bears and the St. Louis Rams bow their heads in prayer after the Bears defeated the Rams 38-24 at Soldier Field Saturday. The rivalry between fans of the two teams has yet to become evident on the playing field.

Bears' linebacker Chris Draft wraps up Rams' tight end Chad Lewis for the tackle in Saturday's game.

REGIONAL RIVALRY

With many students at SIUC from both the Chicago and St. Louis areas, there is bound to be tension between fans of the Bears and fans of the Rams

STORY BY DAVID FERRARA - PHOTOS BY JOSH SANSENI

No one really talks about the Chicago-St. Louis rivalry SIUC produces, melding Chicago sports fans in this same small town with rivaling St. Louis fans.

Sure, the average Chicago suburbanite may come to SIUC and chum up with a St. Louisan. But when it's game time, the gloves come off.

As five propeller planes from a Chicago air show circled over the Chicago Stadium Saturday, the bears kicked off against the Rams for the second to last game of pre-season.

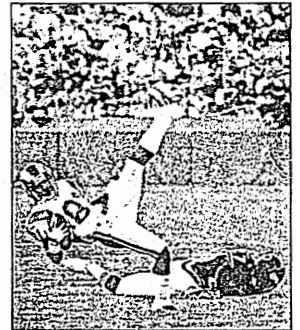

The Bears pounced on the Rams at Soldier Field Saturday in a 38-24 victory.

For Jason Highland, a senior in finance from Hegewisch, the Chicago-St. Louis rivalry couldn't be closer.

His roommate is a St. Louis-area native and decorates their apartment with St. Louis paraphernalia. "There always has to be a rivalry," he said.

Highland turned his nose at the thought that the Rams might actually be competitive with the Bears. "What kind of question is that? After that whipping last week?" he said.

"I think the Bears will do better (than the Rams) this year if McNown has a good year."

Rams' wide receiver Az-Zahir Hakim loses his footing after being hit by cornerback Walt Harris of the Bears.

Cade McNown, picked 12th in the 1999 NFL draft by Chicago, got his first professional start in Saturday's game. He threw two interceptions but scored one touchdown. Bears Coach Dick Jauron announced Shane Matthews will be starting in Saturday's final pre-season game versus the Cleveland Browns in place of McNown.

RIVALRY

Well, unless McNown gains some confidence in his performance, Highland may find a season of disappointment. "Starting out, I was horrible," McNown said Saturday at a post-game press conference. "I was disgusted with myself. I wasn't seeing things the way I was used to seeing them."

McNown ran for a touchdown and also passed for one Saturday, but he also tossed two interceptions.

On the other end of the spectrum there is Steve Winkler, an avid St. Louis fan, who doesn't appear to have the slightest bit of respect for Chicago teams or fans.

Donning a St. Louis Blues t-shirt, he openly boasted of St. Louis sports while fiercely cutting his rival's rival.

"All Chicago fans are idiots," he said with jocular disdain. "I don't know?" he questioned. "(All) Chicago (teams) missed the playoffs this year?"

"(The Rams) have done a lot better in the draft," Winkler said, predicting a foreseeable Rams dynasty in the near future. "In a couple years they'll be up there."

Curtis Enis, the Bears starting running back Saturday and 1998 first-round draft pick, played his first game since injuring his leg against the Rams last winter. Enis said he feels healthy and ready for the season to begin.

"I try to get in... that groove, it's like when you're dancing, you know," Enis said of working out the pre-season kinks.

When it comes to professional sports fans from Chicago or St. Louis at SIUC, they're worlds apart and the debates are heated, to say the least.

But to the average sports fan or sports critic elsewhere the rivalry may even seem microscopic.

"If there is (a rivalry), I don't sense it," said Melissa Isaacson, the Bears beat reporter for the Chicago Tribune. "Maybe more so among the fans."

As long as college students from Chicago and St. Louis keep attending SIUC, it doesn't appear this traditional rivalry will soon die in Carbondale.

Highland said he looks forward to the St. Louis-Chicago rivalries all year. The Rams and Bears meet again, during the regular season, Dec. 26.

"That'll be the only Bears game you have to get pumped about down here — Bears versus Rams," Highland said in eager anticipation of the rivalry.

Freshmen partake of positive peer pressure

Organizers hope this year's program continues success of the previous year

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Although last year's peer adviser program in the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts proved successful, officials believe there is still room for improvement this semester.

Because of the ample success in recruitment and retention gained from the ambassador program, the college designed the first peer adviser program last fall.

The program helps new students ease into the difficulties associated with university life by linking them with more experienced upperclassmen.

The program is essentially a two-step process. First, incoming freshmen are contacted by MCMA ambassadors, and then the peer advisers are assigned to the new students.

The advisers help students by getting them involved in extracurricular activities, as well as showing them around campus and introducing them to important faculty members at the University.

They will also welcome new students in the college at the new student orientation today.

Joe Foote, dean of MCMA, initiated the program after observing the success of Syracuse University's peer adviser program.

Soon thereafter, the project was being coordinated by SIUC.

Foote said the program should be greatly improved this year — the second year the program has existed.

"The peer advisers last year did an excellent job at meeting freshman students and getting them involved with extracurricular activities," he said.

"This year, we hope to expand the program and help the new students with pre-registration and academics."

Foote also said this expansion should be possible because this year's advisers are more experienced.

"We had a very successful orientation and I could tell we have a great group this year," Foote said. "It helps that we have peer advisers this year that were here last year, so they know what the experience is like."

Tracy Waldhoff, peer adviser coordinator, agreed the more experienced peer advisers this year should make for a better program.

"We have advisers this year who were peer advisers and who have had peer advisers," she said. "They have valuable experience that they can impart on this year's incoming freshman."

Another change in the program, said Clare Mitchell, chief academic adviser for MCMA, was an attempt to match up students who have the same academic interests.

"We changed the organization to match up students in the same academic emphasis area and also who live closer together in dorms," Mitchell said.

Mitchell also said the key to the program is how the students interact with each other.

"We organize the program, but the students make it successful," she said. "The advisers have to be helpful and the new students must be receptive to that help."

One student who is excited about the prospects of this year's program is Laura Leese, a sophomore in Radio and Television from Alton.

Leese is a peer adviser for this semester and she expects the experience will be rewarding.

"I'm looking forward to helping new students succeed at the University," Leese said. "I had a good experience last year with my peer adviser and I hope to be that helpful to freshmen I'm assigned to this year."

It is not known yet how much the program will improve, but Mitchell is optimistic.

"I'm sure it will be an even better program this year," she said. "We have more peer advisers and we had a longer training session, so I have no doubts the program will improve."

ORIENTATION

The new student orientation and picnic for students in the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts will take place today from 4 to 5 p.m. at McLeod Theater.

Audrey diving into new waters

ANDY EGNES
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Former Saluki diving coach Dave Audrey changed out of a swimsuit and into a business suit as he joined the SIU Alumni Association as the assistant director of alumni services and corporate relations in late July.

He comes to his new office with great intentions and plans for bringing some of his coaching skills to the Alumni Association after spending 12 years poolside.

Greg Scott, assistant director for alumni and public relations, said Audrey's skills and knowledge of the University are great assets that will help Audrey as he travels around the country coordinating alumni events and fund-raisers. These chapter events are set up in different geographic regions around the country to raise funds which will then go back into the system.

This allows the Alumni Association to become stronger and gives alumni a chance to keep ties with the University, Scott said.

"In a sense, he is selling the University, and has done a lot of those things throughout his coaching career," Scott said.

Audrey said he previously spent 12 to 14 hours a day working with the diving team with almost one-third of that time spent recruiting potential athletes.

"My wife said she has seen more of me in the last couple of weeks than in the last five years," he said. "It is nice to at least have a chance to have dinner."

Audrey planned on eventually leaving the sport of diving, but he did not anticipate it would happen this soon. He said he was happy the opportunity presented itself.

"You can't put things in a box and move away," Audrey said. "The University and the Alumni Association director (Ed Buerger) have allowed me to transition in a very professional way."

Buerger said he was more than happy to accommodate Audrey's needs.

"His professional experience and knowledge of SIU compliment his new responsibilities," Buerger said in a University press release. "He relates well to alumni and students and takes great pride with SIU."

Audrey has left his predecessor with big shoes to step into. Throughout Audrey's tenure at SIUC, he has coached 34 all-Missouri Valley Conference selections along with being the MVC Coach of the Year in 1995 and 1996.

"I was happy with how I left the program," Audrey said. "I wanted the program to be strong for the person who replaces me."

A new diving coach has yet to be named, but the deadline for applications ends Friday.

Audrey said he surprised many people when he decided to turn in his resignation.

"A diving coach from UCLA told me, 'I can't imagine the sport of diving without you in it,' and that really touched me," Audrey said.

"Leaving diving isn't like leaving another profession. You're leaving the athletes — it's like leaving a family."

Ruger compared the effects of this law to the recent military strikes in Kosovo.

"The collateral damage here is far worse than the damage to the actual target," he said. "This is a peculiar piece of legislation."

GRAND AVENUE

Doherty said the project has been planned since 1985, but funding to complete the project finally became available this year.

The $1.8 million project was paid for mostly by Illinois Motor Fuel tax money that the city has saved since 1985.

Not only will the additions add to the general safety of the area, but they will also help with the flow of traffic when the Superblock will be opened.

"Even though we have planned upgrading for a long time, it is just something that will complement the Superblock," Doherty said.

An entrance to the Superblock, an educational facility with sports and recreation for the community and schools to use, will be connected to Grand Avenue.

The Superblock will take up most of the undeveloped ground between Lewis Lane, Walnut Street, Grand Avenue and Giant City Road.

E.T. Simonds Construction has done all the work for Grand Avenue.

Doherty said that in the future, the stop sign on Grand Avenue and Giant City Road may be replaced with a traffic light.

According to Doherty, a city-conducted study concerning traffic signals revealed that the recent growth of Carbondale and the increase in traffic that growth has brought to city streets will justify the new signals within a couple of years.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their ads for errors on the first day they appear. Errors on the part of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted. All classified advertising must be processed before 2 p.m. to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 2 p.m. will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A service charge of $15.00 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellations of classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time. The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit any advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order forms must be submitted and approved prior to their use for publication.

No ad will be classified.

Place your ad by phone at 618-536-3311 Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. or visit our office in the Communications Building, room 1259.

Carbondale.
 Bardo said he would like to sign Weber to a package deal that would put him in the upper quartile of the Valley.
 If the contract was approved, Weber would be the first Saluki coach in school history to sign a multiple-year deal.
 "They have been exploring what has been done with other foundations at other universities and we have yet to get together and put all the package together and talk to coach Weber about it," Bardo said.

 "It is clear to say that we are not negotiating because we haven't talked with (Weber) yet."
 Weber said not having a multi-year deal can be frustrating and somewhat insecure at times.
 "I mean, sometimes you'll just be driving down the road and it pops up in your mind, but in the crazy business of college basketball right now you just have to stay positive," Weber said.
 Another aspect of coaching that Weber cited other than job security that a multi-year deal would help with is recruiting.
 "When you go into someone's home and they ask you how long your contract is, you'd like to say four years because that's what they want to hear and that's what a parent wants to hear as well," Weber said.

 The possibility of Weber receiving a multi-year deal looks intriguing. Bardo wants to continue to move SIU basketball into the elite of the Valley and believes Weber is the man that can take them there.
 "I think we're going to do everything we can to keep him here, everything within reason that is," Bardo said. "I think if we can get into the upper quartile in the Valley we'll be able to keep him and I think he'll want to stay."

SCHEDULE

and several key reserves, Weber will welcome a prized recruiting class that includes former Mount Vernon High School scoring machine Kent Williams and athletic forward Jermaine Dearman of Indianapolis.
 There was talk the Salukis would use their final remaining scholarship for the 1999-2000 season on a junior college transfer, but it looks like Weber will save the grant for a rainy day.
 "We didn't want to take somebody unless we thought they could help," Weber said. "It just didn't work out

"Now, we'll save that scholarship and either look for maybe a transfer at the semester (break), or possibly save it for the following year."
 SIU has already received a pair of oral commitments for the 2000-2001 season, including athletic guard Mo Niateke.
 Niateke, who came to the United States from France, starred as a junior at Springfield Sacred Heart-Griffin High School, but will have to enroll in a prep school for his senior season because of rules restricting foreign exchange students from playing in Illinois in consecutive seasons.
 Weber would like to fill a few more scholarships when the early signing period rolls around in November, but with the schedule now finalized, the coach will soon be putting preparations for the upcoming season on the front-burner.

 Weber will officially begin readying his troops for action Oct. 16, when practice for the season gets underway.
 He envisions his team being well prepared for the Valley wars after the competitive, if not overly sexy, non-conference schedule, and has a reminder for any Saluki backers who might be dissatisfied with SIU's opponents.
 "Scheduling is very, very difficult," he said. "Our fans want to see Illinois or Purdue or somebody in here, but it's just not that easy."

Worsley leaves baseball team in favor of modeling career

PAUL WLEKUNSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Senior right-fielder Marty Worsley notified SIU baseball coach Dan Callahan Tuesday that he will be leaving the team to pursue a career in modeling. At the same time, Callahan announced the addition of sophomore transfer Jason Westemeir from Cal State Fullerton.

Worsley, who garnered second team all-Missouri Valley Conference honors last season, would have been the Salukis' top returning offensive threat for the 2000 season. He ranked second on the squad in batting (.353), home runs (7) and runs batted in (44) in 54 games played.

"He got plenty of valuable modeling in Chicago, New York and Italy this summer," Callahan said. "He figured this is something he really wants to pursue and now is the time to chase that dream.

"This is one of the more unique ways to lose a player, normally they tell you they are hurt or they are leaving because of a lack of playing time.

"I was surprised when Marty walked in this morning and said he is leaving to pursue a modeling career."

Worsley is enrolled in classes this semester and will leave SIUC in January to work in both New York and Europe.

While the Salukis lose one of their top bats in Worsley, they hope to bolster their starting rotation with right-hander Jason Westemeir.

Westemeir joins the Salukis after going 1-1 with a 5.40 ERA as a red-shirt freshman last season at Cal State Fullerton.

"He has put up some impressive numbers over the last few years including this summer while playing in a competitive collegiate league in Wichita (Kan.)," Callahan said. "With the loss of our four top senior pitchers, we figure Jason will fit nicely into our rotation and be a guy that can eat up some innings."

Westemeir, a former 1997 draft pick by the Atlanta Braves, joins 15 newcomers to the 2000 baseball roster.

At Louisiana State, fans eat and drink football but chew on coach

DAVID WHITLEY
THE ORLANDO SENTINEL

LATON ROUGE, LA.— If Gerry DiNardo worked anywhere else, he might need a food-taster on his coaching staff.

But DiNardo makes a living at Louisiana State University. If there's one thing more revered than good football in this state, it's good food.

So how does a coach get people to overlook a sour season?

Try a really good red sauce. "Had the season been nearly as good as the restaurant, the Tigers would have been playing in a bowl game."

So wrote the food critic at the local paper. The review is hanging in the entrance to DiNardo's, the town's newest Italian restaurant. This is probably the only university where the coach could provide side orders as critics sharpen their knives to devour him.

Anyone for DiNardo etouffee? It's not featured in the LSU cookbook yet, though the locals may develop an appetite if he doesn't turn it around this season. Or worse yet, if DiNardo starts substituting Ragù for his mother's tomato sauce recipe.

Tigers football is an interesting concoction that uses many ingredients found only in the Bayou State. You take one part fanaticism, mix in some Mardi Gras mentality, add a pinch of Billy Cannon, a few thousand earplugs, throw it all over some hot coals behind a gold-and-purple RV and voilà!

It's a Saturday night soufflé at Death Valley, perhaps the tastiest treat in college football. You don't become the perennial favorite in the AP tailgating poll on just hot dogs and beer.

"We've got people doing jambalaya. We've got people doing jumbo. It's incredible. Do we do it right here?" said Warren Capone, a former All-American linebacker who now owns — surprise — a restaurant in Baton Rouge.

They do it almost right. The only missing ingredient lately has been wins. And don't think local taste buds aren't aware of it.

"Is he going to play Hawk?"

"No, he's going to play Eagle."

"Only Lawrence Taylor could play that."

"Shoot, Warren could still play drop linebacker."

So goes the nightly conversation at Capone's restaurant. That's not Cajun they're speaking. It's Tepper. As in Lou, the Tigers' defensive coordinator. He arrived last year, and LSU's defense led.

Fans have decided a big problem was the complex linebacking scheme. The Hawk must cover wideouts. Or is it the Eagle? Whatever the bird, Fried Tepper is now on the menu at most sports bars.

DiNardo looked as if he'd gotten LSU's program back to its old intimidating self. The Tigers had gone to three straight minor bowls and had plenty of talent.

That talent lost to Georgia by two, Kentucky by three, Ole Miss by six, Alabama by six and Notre Dame by three. Talk about indignation.

"I'm not sure we won the mind games last year," DiNardo said.

What's worse, they won only four football games. There was plenty of criticism, but DiNardo didn't get any bomb threats or have the board of health raid his kitchen looking for roaches. Louisianans tinge their fanaticism with a refreshing dose of laissez faire.

The big news last week was the state's election commissioner getting caught taking bribes. It was not exactly a shock, given how this is the state Huey Long built.

The former governor was a true LSU man. When a circus was hampering ticket sales to a home game, he dug up an obscure pet-dipping ordinance to prevent Barium and Bailey from opening. In Louisiana, business is just conducted differently.

Maybe it's the French heritage, or the bourbon, or the Saints, or the way the Mississippi meanders through the heart of the state. It's important to go home with a win. But it's almost as vital to go home with a happy stomach. And avoid police Breathalyzer checkpoints along the way.

"It's a party like no other," Lee Feinswog said. "A lot of people show up just to tailgate and never go to the game."

Feinswog does a four-hour LSU pregame show on WJBO, which means he spends a lot of time wandering around outside Tiger Stadium having drinks and crawfish thrust his way. Almost as many as Mike the Tiger.

Mike is LSU's real-live mascot. He rides through campus in a cage topped by cheerleaders, then they park him outside the visiting locker room. The Tigers are supposed to score a touchdown for every growl he makes. Lately, Mike's had a case of laryngitis.

Noise is a big point of pride at Tiger Stadium. Death Valley seats 80,000. Florida Field may be louder, Tennessee may have more seats and Tallahassee has more fake Native Americans on horseback. But no place puts swells into a tumbling wall of decibels and delirium like LSU.

"Baton Rouge happens to be the worst place in the world to be a visiting team," Bear Bryant once said. "It's like being inside a drum."

The difference between night and day is night and day. LSU has won 73.3 percent of its night games since 1960, but only 38.3 of its day games.

They still talk about the night the earth moved. It was Oct. 8, 1988, when Tommy Hodson hit Eddie Fuller to beat Auburn. It triggered a crowd explosion that registered as an earthquake or the seismograph at LSU's Geology Department.

Stick around, won't you?

Interim Athletics Director Harold Bardo would love to sign SIUC men's head basketball coach Bruce Weber to a multi-year contract, or offer increased incentives, to keep Weber from joining the likes of former MVC head coaches Kevin Stallings and Steve Alford who have left their respective schools for bigger pay checks.

SIUC is preparing to offer head basketball coach Bruce Weber a multi-year contract in hopes of keeping him in Carbondale for a while

COERY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Steve Alford did. Kevin Stallings did, too.

SIUC interim Athletics Director Harold Bardo does not want to add Saluki men's head basketball coach Bruce Weber to the list of former Missouri Valley Conference basketball coaches.

After only four seasons at Southwest Missouri State University and a trip to the NCAA's Sweet Sixteen last season, Alford left SMSU for the greener pastures of the University of Iowa in March.

Stallings exited Illinois State University after six seasons and three MVC Championships with the Redbirds for Vanderbilt University in April.

However, it was merely a matter of common sense for both Alford and Stallings to move on.

Prior to taking the Iowa job, Alford said he thought the financial package would be estimated around $200,000 per year, which would have nearly doubled his income at SMSU.

Alford's estimation was a bit short though, as he will earn a lofty $255,000 per year with the Hawkeys.

Stallings' future is also financially secure after signing a five-year deal with the Commodores somewhere in the ballpark of $400,000 to 500,000 per year, according to the Nashville Tennessean.

"You have to look at why some of these guys leave," Bardo said. "I think many of these guys feel they went to better basketball leagues and that's hard to refuse when you see that Alford went to the Big Ten from where he came, for more money and a more prestigious school."

Last season, Weber earned just less than $104,000, not table scraps, but he is still working on the University's continuum basis policy, where coaches are re-signed after every year.

Gus Bode

Gus says: Maybe the Athletics Department can use the Southern Belles to convince Weber to stay.

Rather than having Weber follow Alford and Stallings' lead, Bardo would like to see Weber signed to a multi-year deal.

After posting a 15-12 record in his inaugural season with the Salukis, Weber created a great deal of excitement for Saluki basketball. If he continues to improve the squad, as he did last year, his name could be the next one called upon for any coaching vacancies.

"Everybody's always looking for a good coach," Bardo said. "I don't know how sincere people are when they talk about coming after a first year coach.

"I'm not about to ascertain that. I just know that we want to keep him here and we're going to do everything we can to keep him here."

Bardo has talked with interim Chancellor John Jackson and people in the foundation about working on a deal to keep Weber in

Puerto Rico tournament in December highlights men's basketball schedule

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A rugged December tournament in Puerto Rico that features an opening round rumble with University of Massachusetts highlights the just-completed Saluki men's basketball schedule for the 1999-2000 campaign.

SIUC head coach Bruce Weber relishes his squad's opportunity to battle the impressive eight-team Puerto Rico Holiday Classic field, which also includes University of Tennessee, Boston College, University of Tulsa and the University of North Carolina-Charlotte.

After all, Weber knows there are precious few chances for so-called "mid-major" programs like SIUC to square off with high-profile opponents.

"We can go to all these schools and play, but they won't return games," Weber said. "Now, this is a chance to not only play them, but play them on a neutral site with neutral referees."

SIUC will prepare for the season with a pair of exhibition games at the SIUC Arena Nov. 6 and Nov. 13, and will gear up for real when Western Kentucky University comes calling Nov. 20.

Other non-conference games of interest include the beginning of a series with Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., Nov. 24, a road tilt against the Billikens of Saint Louis University Jan. 12, and a trip to the Windy City to take on the University of Illinois-Chicago, Dec. 11.

Murray State University caused a delay in the release of the schedule when it asked to back out of an arranged game with the Salukis so they could pursue a nationally televised game. Instead of Murray State, SIUC will host Santa Clara University Dec. 4.

Sweet revenge will be on SIUC's mind when Bradley University invades the Arena Jan. 22. The Braves swap the regular season series against SIUC last season, then proceeded to send the Salukis packing in a tightly contested quarterfinal meeting at the MVC Conference Tournament.

The always competitive Valley schedule will tip off for the Salukis with a home game against the University of Evansville Dec. 8, and SIUC will cap off the regular season at the Arena Feb. 28, against Southwest Missouri State University. Last season, the Bears danced all the way to the Sweet 16 in the NCAA Tournament.

The Salukis are coming off a 15-12 season, SIUC's first winning year since a three year skid that came on the heels of seven consecutive seasons with post-season berths.

Despite the loss of high-flying Monte Jenkins, who as a senior was the Salukis' top scoring threat and defensive stopper, there is reason to believe SIUC will improve on its middle-of-the-pack MVC finish a year ago.

Along with the return of four starters
