Illinois motorists need proof of insurance starting Jan. 1

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Illinois motorists caught without liability insurance for their automobiles beginning Jan. 1 could face criminal prosecution when a new state law goes into effect next year.

Surrounded by crashed cars, Secretary of State Jim Edgar warned Illinois motorists of the new law Thursday at the Marion Ford body shop.

"If someone is going to drive a car in our society, he should be responsible, and responsible motorists have insurance," Edgar said.

Under the new law, if a motorist vehicle is not insured for liability, the motorist will face the following penalties and fines:

- a minimum of $500 for driving uninsured;
- suspension of the vehicle registration (license plates) for at least two months;
- the vehicle may not be driven by anyone while its license plates are suspended. The minimum fine for driving a suspended vehicle is $1,000.

■ a $50 reinstatement fee and proof of insurance before the suspension is ended. The fee for repeat offenders is $100.

■ Motorists at fault in an accident are responsible for the victims' medical and property damage costs. Motorists who cannot pay for these costs probably will lose their licenses and license plate indefinitely.

Edgar said law enforcement officials will begin checking vehicles in January to see if motorists are carrying proof-of-insurance cards provided by their insurance com-

Faculty worried liberal arts left out in the cold

By Tim Crosby

Because Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit's future plans for SIU seem to emphasize the sciences and graduate programs, some faculty members in the College of Liberal Arts believe they are not being adequately represented by the Faculty Senate's 21st Century Committee.

Pettit, who outlined his plans for the University in November, has called for the transformation of SIU-C into a research-oriented campus emphasizing the sciences while, SIU-E concentrates on undergraduate studies.

Pettit further called for constructing a biological sciences building, enlarging the engineering building, expanding Morris Library and channeling more money into what he called, "premier programs."

At its Nov. 28 meeting, the Faculty Senate, unanimously approved the five nominees for the SIU in the 21st Century Task Force. The committee is charged with representing faculty interests and formulating ways to improve the University as it moves into the 21st century, Donald Garner, chairman of the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee, said.

However, some faculty members have said the 21st century members do not adequately represent liberal arts programs.

"This composition does not represent the University," Lionel Bender, a faculty member in the anthropology department, said. "It only represents the vocational and technical parts of the University."

The members of the committee are Patti Elmore, College of Education; George Gummerson, College of Liberal Arts; Patrick Kelly, School of Law; John McKillip, College of Liberal Arts; and Gola Waters, College of Business Administration.

Though the membership includes two faculty members from the College of Liberal Arts, their affil-

Office seeks recycling plan

Campus would get containers

A proposal to begin a campuswide recycling program in the spring semester has been made by Pollution Control to Clarence G. Dougherty, vice president for campus services.

John Meister, Pollution Control director, said although the proposal calls for the program to begin Jan. 15, he is "still at the stage of getting input from everyone."

The proposed plan would provide campus offices with three containers, one for newspaper, one for ledger paper and one for aluminum cans. Pollution Control staff and volunteers then would pick up the material and take it to the area recycling centers.

Recycling collection points also would be provided in the Student Center and in various parking lots, according to the proposal statement.

The proposal also calls for Pollution Control staff to operate a booth in the Student Center once a week. Recyclable materials would be collected at the booth, which also would serve as a clearinghouse for pamphlets and other literature about recycling.

Meister said the proposed plan would cost about $3,000 to $4,000 to implement. About 10 cents per dollar spent would be returned by recycling, he said.

Start-up costs for the program would be provided by Vending Service, which provides the aluminum soda cans in the campus vending machines, he said.

Gus says the University is thrilled about saving the environment any way it can.

However, Vending Service is a non-state funded enterprise, so according to state law, all money coming from that account must be returned, Meister said. Money coming from Vending Service would be only temporary, so other funding options would need to be explored in the future, he said.

"Interest (in recycling) is extremely high," Meister said, adding that about 70 percent of the work on the recycling program could come from volunteers. "But we don't want to create too high an expectation of how effective the program will be," he said.

The proposed program isn't the first time the University has tried recycling. In 1986, Re-Use News Inc. was terminated after an eight-year presence on campus. That program, which collected used newsprint from bins around campus, folded after the newsprint market went bust.

Health fee increase supported

By Jeanne Bickler

The Undergraduate Student Government Wednesday passed a resolution in support of a $14.50 increase in the student health fee.

The resolution, written by Tim Hildebrand, USG president, claims the increase is necessary to keep up with inflation and replace cash reserves that have been exhausted.

The last increase in the student health fee was three years ago.

USG East Side Senator Vicki Aponte said she is skeptical of the need for the increase.

"Part of our fees pay for the rent for the Health Service building," Aponte said. "Another part pays for malpractice insurance for our

Czechoslovakia's leader resigns

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ladislav Adamec resigned Thursday after failing to placate an increasingly bold democracy movement that drove Czechoslovakia's hard-line communist leadership out of office two weeks earlier.

Within hours of the announcement, the Communist Party expelled former hard-line leader Milo Jakes for "gross political mistakes," the official Czech news agency CTK said.

Adamec's resignation — the second by an East Bloc leader in as many days — came less than 24 hours after he publicly threatened to quit rather than be subjected to a barrage of "hasty deadlines, strikes and demonstrations" by opposition groups.

Czech President Gustav Husak accepted the resignation and named as Adamec's replacement Marian Calfa, a communist and the first deputy prime minister in the new government unveiled Sunday.

Czech radio said.

Calfa was asked to begin talks immediately on forming a new government, CTK said. Although believed to be an advocate of reform, he enjoys only lukewarm support among leading opposition groups.

Jakes, a doctrinaire communist and party leader since 1987, was expelled from the Communist Party along with Miroslav Stephan,

Communist Party voted out by Lithuanian parliament

MOSCOW (UPI) — Lithuania's parliament stripped away the Communist Party's exclusive right to rule Thursday and proclaimed a multi-party system, the first Soviet republic to do so, the Lithuanian information agency Sajudis said. Precisely at noon, the deputies began voting in the capital of Vilnius to remove the constitution's Article 6, which declares that "the guiding and avant garde role of society, state and public organizations belong to the Communist party." That article in effect has excluded any other party.

Leftist group sabotages power supply lines

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Fierce fighting between U.S.-backed Salvadoran troops and leftist rebels escalated Thursday, leaving at least 25 people dead and much of the violence-torn nation in darkness. A spokesman for the Hydroelectric Commission said eight primary electric supply lines were sabotaged by the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front causing extensive blackouts in most areas of the country and the capital. The latest offensive had cost the country between $55 million and $65 million in direct damage and economic loss, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Demonstrators battle police in E. Germany

EAST BERLIN (UPI) — Pro-reform demonstrators battled police for control of secret police and army buildings in four East Germany cities Thursday leading the country's State Security chief to warn further violence might force the government to abandon its pro-democracy path. An East German government spokesman said several demonstrators were injured in the clashes but he gave few other details. The report of the violent clashes came as the provisional leadership of the besieged Communist Party presented proposals for sweeping reform.

Nintendo accused of illegal market practice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressman accused Nintendo Thursday of using illegal marketing practices to win near total dominance of the lucrative computer game industry and asked the Justice Department's antitrust division to investigate. At a Capitol Hill news conference, Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, chairman of a House Small Business antitrust subcommittee, released a letter to the Justice Department seeking the inquiry into what Eckart called Nintendo's "significant intimidation in the retail market" to stifle competition.

Representative: Blacks 'genetically violent'

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — State Rep. David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader, described some ethnic groups as genetically prone to violence and said it may be a good idea to separate races in the United States, according to an interview released Thursday. Duke, who is running for the Republican nomination to challenge Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., for his seat, also said whites are superior to other races and blacks are genetically more prone to violent acts. Duke said he believed certain races inherit certain traits, such as "criminality."

Marion man re-appointed to funeral directors board

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A Marion man has been re-appointed to the Department of Professional Regulation's Funeral Directors and Embalmers Licensing and Disciplinary Board. Wednesday, the department re-appointed Larry Hughes to the seven-member board, and his new term will expire June 30, 1993. Hughes is currently operating the Mitchell-Hughes Funeral Home in Marion. Hughes is past president of the Illinois Funeral Directors Association.

Area's largest drug-bust operation ever nabs 51

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

The largest law enforcement narcotics sting operation to ever take place in Southern Illinois resulted in 51 arrests Thursday.

Law enforcement officers of the Southern Illinois Drug Task Force fanned out across at least eight counties in the early morning hours Thursday in drug busts involving more than 70 people wanted on warrants for cocaine and marijuana trafficking.

"This is by far the largest number of arrests ever to occur in Southern Illinois," Larry Cook, operations commander of the SIDTF, said. He said the arrests stem from many different separate investigations that have been in effect for six to 12 months.

Cook said about 160 officers participated in Thursday's arrests, which mainly were centered in the Edwards, Marion, Jefferson, Franklin, Clinton, Gallatin, Saline and Alexander county areas.

"The busts were mainly the result of undercover narcotics agents who infiltrated small and separate narcotics trafficking groups," he said.

Capt. William R. Barrett, head of the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation's Zone 13, said he hoped to make 60 arrests by the end of the day.

Barrett said 99 percent of the warrants involved cocaine and marijuana trafficking. He said some arrests were being made in the Cairo area for sales of crack.

Cook said the drug sweep did not clean up the entire Southern Illinois area, but made a significant dent.

"It is anticipated that these arrests will have a strong deterrent effect within the localities involved by reducing the availability of various drugs," Barrett said.

Both Cook and Barrett characterized those being arrested as "local operators" who did not have significant ties to larger drug rings.

"Some have legitimate jobs and supplement their income by selling dope," Cook said.

The sting operation centered around many geographically dif-

USG passes resolution asking city for industry

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government passed a resolution asking the city of Carbondale to work with other area cities to create a new regional industrial development corporation to attract industry to the area.

The resolution originally asked the city of Carbondale to drop its lawsuit against the city of Marion for using tax increment financing to build the Illinois Center Mall. This clause was dropped from the resolution before the vote.

Representatives from the cities of Carbondale and Marion were at the meeting to give their sides of the case.

The controversy developed over the use of tax increment financing in Marion to attract tenants to the mall. Carbondale Deputy City Manager Jeff Dougherty said the use of TIF to build the Illinois Center Mall is illegal.

"The TIF is only supposed to be used in blighted areas," Dougherty said. "Instead, the TIF is being used to lure businesses away from Carbondale by offering benefits we can't offer."

In areas using TIF, the amount of real estate is frozen. Tax increases created by improvement to the property are transferred into a special fund to pay back redevelopment-related expenses.

The TIF act exists to permit cities to redevelop blighted areas that are deteriorating and will not bounce back without special incentives.

Carbondale's legal counsel Don Prosser claims the area off Interstate 57, where the mall is to be built, is prime real estate.

John Musgrave, USG governmental relations commissioner, wrote the original resolution.

"This lawsuit is not Carbondale against Marion, it's Carbondale against Southern Illinois," Musgrave said. He said students and residents of Southern Illinois are being denied jobs by this lawsuit.

Robert Connell attended the meeting to represent Marion.

"We have no quarrels with anyone," Connell said. "We are taking advantage of TIF to bring jobs to Southern Illinois."

"Route 13 has been there for 25 years. There is still a lot of farmland there. We took the proper steps to develop this area using TIF," he said.

Mass transit study needs student help

MONEY FOR the study of mass transit on campus and in the City of Carbondale is in place. The Illinois Department of Transportation has promised $32,000 in grant money and has increased that amount to $40,000.

But, ironically, money does not seem to be the problem in getting mass transit rolling.

The University's Department of Community Development offered undergraduates the chance to earn up to three credits for helping with the mass transit study. Credits would be given after donating 48 to 80 hours of time over a three-week period.

RESPONSE TO the credit incentive has been small. Less than 10 students have committed to helping with on-the-spot and phone surveys.

Lisa Rivera, chairwoman of the city mass transit advisory committee, said that if students want mass transit in Carbondale they will have to help work on it. She had hoped the credit incentive idea would entice student support.

The Undergraduate Student Government mass transit committee conducted a survey during the spring of 1988 and found that 84 percent of those surveyed would support a $15 fee increase to have a mass transit system. Yet now when help is needed there is little interest.

WE SUPPORT the implementation of mass transit on this campus. Without it, more needless parking lots likely will be built. This would destroy the natural beauty of the campus.

We urge students to offer their available time to help with the study of mass transit.

This University is growing and the sooner mass transit is operating the better.

'Total war' on drugs not working

Scrrips Howard News Service

Colombia's President Virgilio Barco declared "total war" last August against his country's drug overlords. So far, he's losing.

Showing their contempt for the government's puny war, the drug traffickers set off a truck bomb the other day outside the Bogota offices of Colombia's secret police, blowing 52 innocent victims to smithereens and injuring another 1,000. It may take a while for federal intelligence agents to get back to work, since most of the outside walls of their high-rise building wound up on the street.

Just nine days earlier, a bomb blew up a Colombian airliner, killing 107 people, an act of terrorism also ascribed to the drug bosses.

All told, more than 200 bombs, killing nearly 200 people, have been set off by narcoterrorists since Barco declared his war.

After the deadly Bogota explosion, Barco issued a statement from Japan, where he was visiting, saying that he would not waver in his resolve. Even as he prepared his remarks, three more bombs exploded in the cocaine-trafficking center of Medellin, fortunately killing no one.

"They will not succeed in defeating us. We will not allow ourselves to fall to the bloody tyranny of the narcoterrorists," said Barco.

Oh no? Then what was his country's House of Representatives doing a few days ago when it voted 119 to 4 to hold a national referendum on whether to continue extraditing Colombian drug traffickers to the United States to face charges? It is widely believed that voters would say no to extradition because they think that would help mollify the drug cartel.

In other words, the people evidently don't have confidence that the government can win against the drug overlords. They may be right. The drug bosses seem to know every move planned by government forces. None of the 12 kingpins who are the major targets of Barco's war have been taken.

How hard can Barco be trying if, with all the firepower at his command, he can't kill or capture a dozen leaders and the few hundred scum who do their dirty work?

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a school of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Censorship of NEA-funded artwork infringes on everyone's freedoms

Critics of the National Endowment for the Arts claim tax money shouldn't be spent on "unpopular" art. If this argument sounds reasonable, it's because the question of who is the public hasn't been addressed.

Disagreement over what constitutes "public taste" arises because we are all members of a diverse public. In attempting to reduce the range of art the NEA funds, Congress is denying that diversity. In referring to the art community as if it were a decadent group set apart from the tax-paying public, they use this erroneous assumption as a form of social control — a means of excluding groups deemed "marginal" to American life: women, ethnic groups, the poor, the homeless and gays.

Control is the issue here. In limiting what we see, the government is trying to limit what we think and what we are. The tax money which supports the NEA, about 75 cents per American per year, is raised from all of us, and we're entitled to have our ideas represented. But there's a growing effort on the part of some people in America to control the thoughts and moral actions of others.

Most members of Congress feel ill-equipped to make professional and credible esthetic judgments, but are fully prepared to substitute moral indignation when it serves a political purpose. Indignation, especially moral indignation, is a sure crowd pleaser.

Conservatives have earned the reputation as ignorant book-burners because of their recent battles to control school books, libraries and curricula. These examples demonstrate the conservative will try to control the public by withholding monies from anyone who deviates from their self-prescribed norm.

The relying call might be an "un-Christian" passage from an evolution textbook, or explicit information from a high school education curriculum. Armed with the names an addresses of relevant elected officials, fundamentalist groups fire off letters, which politicians mistake for popular sentiment.

The protests of Andres Serrano "Piss Christ" were sparked by the efforts of the Rev. Donald Wildmon, who led last year's protest of "The Last Temptation of Christ." In turn, a U.S. senator submitted a letter of protest to the NEA signed by 22 other senators.

Hugh Davies, director of LaJolla Museum of Contemporary Art, says "It is the nature of great art to risk intellectual and emotional provocation in search of new ideas.

"Many American taxpayers find offensive — if not downright pornographic — the allocation of the majority of their hard-earned taxes on a superfluity of death-dealing weaponry. Nonetheless, the informed opinion of defense experts supersedes these taxpayers' wishes — for what is considered the greater good of the Republic."

A requirement that NEA-funded institutions and artists conform to "public taste" would have a profound impact. The fact that NEA and private funds are usually combined means "public taste" standards would be imposed on the private sector as well.

Diversity in images and expression in the public sector invariably is what maintains diversity in our private lives. Defending private rights is difficult without an informed public. For this reason, conservatives and fundamentalists want to eliminate symbols, images and ideas they don't like from public spaces.

It is everyone's freedom that is involved — not just a handful of radicals bent on destroying the moral fiber of our fair land. What's being overlooked is the public's right not to participate. If it offends you, stay home. Art that pleases everyone is really not art at all, but decoration of the most generic kind. — Michael Gruening, senior, art

Football players thank SIU-C fans, reiterate highlights of 1989 season

This letter is long overdue in response to Steve Taylor's letter and all those other letters appearing in the DE that have ridiculed the football team.

It is truly amazing to see how loyal the SIU fans are. Mr. Taylor, you note that you have played football in the past. It is for that reason that you of all people should know that winning traditions are not built overnight. Why don't you step back for a minute and analyze the situation?

This program, and all the people associated with it, have been through more turmoil in the past three years than any program in the country.

How do you expect a powerhouse to be built with three coaching staffs and three totally different philosophies in three years? This is not a plea for sympathy by any means. If you, Mr. Taylor, would ever go to any games, you would find some very exciting football.

Just for the record, in this season alone, five games were decided with 90 seconds left in the game. With the exception of one, we were never really out of any game. We set several records while playing four teams ranked in the top 25 along with a 9-2 Division I-A Northern Illinois team that only lost to Nebraska and LSU.

If you had been at that game, you would have seen that we moved the ball up and down the field at will, setting several new school records in the process.

We are all proud of our accomplishments and coming from the people who know, it was a heart-breaking season.

The last thing we need is to open the DE and see letters from people like yourself who glance at the headlines and think they know what they are talking about.

It was only three years ago that we were 7-4 and for God's sake, we won a national championship in 1983. Give us a break.

Not everyone can be a champion, Mr. Taylor, but things are happening on this football team that prove that winning is not far away.

At least there seems to be some stability in the program and now all it takes is some support.

Finally, for all those out there who are loyal fans, we are very grateful. Your support, whether you know it or not, plays a key role in getting this program to be what it is capable of. — G. Masta, T. Racki, S. Planz and D. Peters, members of the 1989 Salukis.

Conservation efforts boost hunting

Pheasants coming back to region

Trap and release program at local park brings in hunters

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

Pheasants and Southern Illinois are not two peas in a pod, but efforts at the Wayne Fitzgerald State Recreation Area near Rená Lake may change this fact in the future.

Each day, from Nov. 8 to Dec. 17, 180 hunters are allowed into the 25-site, 1500-acre area to hunt 360 pheasants. The pheasants, which are raised at the Mount

A boyhood dream of 'clouds of pheasants'

—Sports 21

Vernon Game Farm, are set loose on the sites the previous day.

HUNTING HOURS are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. A $10 daily usage stamp is charged, and hunters are allowed to shoot either sex of the bird.

Ralph Hamilton, site superintendent, said hunters usually bag their daily limit of two birds within their first half-hour at the sites.

Hunters apply for permits to hunt the area in late July. After these permits are taken, hunters may call in for a reserved day beginning August 9. If the quota of 180 hunters per day is not filled, then a first-come-first-served system is observed until the quota is met.

HAMILTON SAID that while many people are skeptical about the birds and how wild they act, careful steps are taken at the game farm to avoid "taming" the birds. When released, the birds act much as if they were wild, he said.

Larry Leitner, the complex manager, said the hunt has been going on for 12 or 13 years. When the hunt first started, only roosters (male pheasants) could be taken.

HOWEVER, AFTER overpopulation by hens (female roosters) took hold, both sexes were allowed to be taken. Under Illinois law, hens cannot be legally shot in normal hunting situations.

Right: Site worker Carlton Heffner checks out a hunter's bird Thursday. Each day, 180 hunters are allowed into the 25-site, 1,500-acre area from Nov. 8 to Dec. 17 with a limit of two birds per hunter.

Hunters have to check their birds in before leaving the site. The birds are tagged, signifying that they were killed at the site.

LEITNER SAID the yearly average harvest per hunter is 1.7 birds.

The site is closed every Monday and Tuesday, and on Sun. Nov. 12. Hunters on the site are required to wear a hat and upper, outer garment of blaze orange.

Leitner also said that only steel shot may be used by hunters.

Ginseng root threatened but harvested

Ginseng in Illinois may no longer be an endangered species, but the plant, renowned for its curative powers, is still sickly enough to be a threatened species.

Taken off the endangered species list last spring, the plant is still scarce enough for monitoring both by the state and the federal government. Illinois mandates that any person engaged in the harvest of the plant or growing of it, must have a license to do so.

License fees range from $7.50 for a person digging the root in the wild, to $25 for a grower in the state. In-state dealers are charged $50, with out-of-state dealers charged $100.

Peter Roberts, a botanist with the Illinois Department of Conservation, said the plant, or root, has been used in the Orient for 4,500 years. Roberts said the plant was placed on the threatened species list last March.

In order to be an endangered species, the plant must be on the verge of extinction. A threatened species is one in which small supplies exist, he said.

The harvest of wild ginseng in Illinois is from the last Saturday in August to Nov. 1. Proceeds from license sales, estimated at $20,000 per year by Roberts, go into IDOC's Fish and Wildlife fund.

Illinois, because of the substantial amount of ginseng harvested in the state, enacted the Illinois Ginseng Conservation Act of 1983. The act set forth the requirement that all harvesters, or growers be licensed.

The plant grows in hilly terrain, with large amounts of shade. Usually associated with hardwood forests, the plant must have well-drained soil. Its range, according to John Fay, a botanist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, is the eastern United States.

Furbearer stamp revenue provides funds for courses

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

All sportsmen who hunt, trap or sell the hides of furbearing mammals will have to have a furbearer stamp in their possession starting next season.

According to documents received from Sen. Ralph Dunn's office, R-Du Quoin, the stamp will expire on March 31 of the year it is valid for. All furbearer hunters and trappers are required by law to sell their hides 10 days after the season closes.

Both the furbearer hunting and trapping season extend in the southern zone from Nov. 25 to Jan. 23. The season is open, except for the six days of shotgun or muzzle-loader season in which the season is closed to raccoon hunters.

Sen. Robert Madigan, R-Lincoln, was the chief sponsor of the bill in the Senate. Madigan said the bill's intent was to provide funding for trapper education programs and the Illinois Trapper's Association had originated the idea for several years.

Madigan said the bill faced opposition in the past by lobbyist's representing coon-hunters in the state, but when the bill came up last spring, this opposition was non-existent.

Bill Murry, secretary of the Illinois State Coonhunters Association, said the organization had been trying to sponsor some sort of a furbearer's stamp for the past five years in

Pheasant stamp will help propagate species

In an effort to curtail disappearing habitat, a pheasant stamp will be required of all hunters pursuing the birds next season.

Effective Jan. 1, the stamp will be required of all hunters on public or private property. The stamp will cost $5, with a 50 cent vendor's fee attached.

THE IDEA, originated by Pheasants Forever, a not-for-profit organization, will be divided between the organization and the Illinois Department of Conservation for pheasant restoration.

Pheasants Forever is a national organization dedicated to the restoration of pheasant habitat.

ACCORDING TO a Sept. 18 article in Outdoor Highlights, an IDOC publication, 30 to 40 percent of all licensed hunters hunt pheasants in Illinois.

Robert Cottingham, a regional wildlife manager with the IDOC office in Champaign, said stamp proceeds will be used on the state's behalf to provide $300,000 to $400,000 is expected to be generated from the stamp sales every year. The funds will be used to restore habitat for pheasants.

funding for projects in the pheasant's range. Cottingham said, however, that no pen raised birds will not be transplanted.

COTTINGHAM SAID the funds may be used to augment acreage that has been taken out of production. The state also may use the funds to buy more land for habitat restoration, Cottingham added.

Rep. J. Philip Novak, D-Kankakee, said several states have stamps. He said that because of poor habitat, pheasant populations in the past few years have been declining in Illinois.

NOVAK SAID $300,000 to $400,000 is expected to be generated from the stamp sales every year. A committee, comprised of members of IDOC, the director of IDOC and a representative from the Pheasants Forever group, will oversee the expenditure of the funds. The funds will be used to restore habitat for pheasants, Novak said.

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Sesser, said the sale will help sustain the life of pheasants and that the stamp would be conducive to establishing a wild pheasant population in Southern Illinois.

"I SUPPORT ANYTHING that is good for the hunter and hunting in Southern Illinois," Woolard said.

Pheasants Forever was started in 1982 in Minnesota. Currently, there are 200 chapters nationally with a membership of 45,000. Illinois has 21 chapters to date.—Chris Walka said. "We tried to pick the best people who could to represent the entire faculty."

Peterson said, "Any committee as important as this should have representatives of the liberal arts and fine arts. I can't imagine it working without it."

Bender said liberal arts programs lie at the heart of any full university, but that they have to be subsidized by the state to an extent. In light of Pettit's plan to emphasize research, which will bring in more grant money, representation is crucial to liberal arts programs if they hope to survive, he said.

"If they start judging a department's worth on how much money it makes, we are in trouble," Bender said.

However, Marvin Kleinau, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said he was comfortable with the members selected for the committee.

the quantity of drugs the different networks handle, but said those arrested mainly were small time, "mid-level" drug dealers who have a good volume of clientele.

Cook said the dealers were getting their drugs from Chicago, St. Louis, places in Missouri and as far away as Texas, Florida and Kentucky. He added there is an ongoing operation with law enforcement agencies from those production and distribution centers.

There were reportedly no alterations that took place during the sweep.

The sting operation was not focused at the juvenile crowd and no juveniles were arrested, Cook said.

"Even though no juveniles were arrested, our investigation leads us to believe that the dealers arrested were most certainly selling to high school students in the Southern Illinois area," he said.

Cook said no SIU-C students were involved in Thursday's operations.

"It simply wasn't the college crowd" the narcotics enforcement efforts were aimed at, Cook said.

Those participating in the sting operation were member agencies from the SIDTF; MI, Vernon, Salem, West Frankfort, Centralia, Mt. Carmel, Cairo, and Harrisburg police departments; Jefferson, Wabash, Gallatin, Saline, and Pulaski County sheriff's offices;

Illinois State Police; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; and numerous county and local departments throughout the Southern Illinois area.

10 Reasons to Give FRED'S Bumper Stickers for Christmas:

1. They're a lasting gift. Unlike gifts of food, liquor, or money, Fred's bumper stickers stick around for a long, long time. (Unless you replace your bumper. The stickers usually outlast the chrome.
2. They hold deep and cherished memories. Anyone who's been to Fred's nostalgically remembers the poetic rhapsody of the hoedown, the simple beauty of the Cotton-Eyed Joe, the heart rendering weeping of Wayne Higdon's fiddle. (And sometimes Wayne Higdon.) It's one former Fred's patron, since moved away, remarked, "I miss it. I wish I had a sticker."
3. They're in Christmas Colors! Well, at least one Christmas Color: Red.
4. They fit in a stocking! So does your foot, but how many feet stick to a bumper?
5. The guys at Mr. Munchie all have one. And they have good taste, just ask them.
6. They're not as expensive as an engagement ring. And they last longer than most marriages.
7. They're unique. Anyone can give Fast Food gift certificates, only unique folks give Fred's Bumper Stickers.
8. You can't break them.
9. You can't return them.
10. You can only get them at Fred's!

panics. Although the state most likely will not check vehicles for proof-of insurance through safety checks or roadblocks, Edgar said motorists always should carry the cards with them.

Police officers may ask to see the insurance card when a motorist is stopped for a traffic violation or if a driver is involved in an accident, Edgar said.

The Secretary of State's office also will be conducting random computer checks beginning the first week of next year to verify that licensed drivers have insurance on their vehicles.

"No one knows for sure who's going to get checked," Edgar said. To comply with the law, motorists must have vehicle liability insurance that covers the damage or injuries that a motorist may cause others in an accident.

placed on insured drivers who are in an accident with an uninsured driver.

The new law should cut down on the two million Illinois motorists currently driving with no insurance, he added.

for used newsprint. Pollution Control officials say they do not wish to re-establish a newsprint recycling program, however, in the spirit of showing environmental awareness, the collection bins will be replaced on campus, Meister said.

Part of the problem with the Pe-Use News program was that the newsprint was being stored on campus. After the market went bust, the University was stuck with over 100 tons of newsprint.

The proposed plan immediately would take recyclable materials off campus to one of the area recycling centers, Meister said.

By operating the program through Pollution Control, the proposed plan will prevent the "numerous, fractured student-run" recycling programs, Meister said.

However, Pollution Control is staffed entirely by students, under the supervision of Meister. A student has been in charge of formulating the proposal for the plan.

Patrick C. Glisson, junior in geography and the recycling manager at Pollution Control, said a "lot of my energy has been focused" on making the proposal.

Glisson said he has been studying recycling programs in other cities and at other universities. "I've been trying to get ahold of somebody at the U of I. They just started a program," he said.

The recycling containers Glisson has proposed would be maroon and white plastic stackable bins.

a former politburo member and Prague party boss, CITK said in a one-sentence release.

The report cited "gross political mistakes" made by the pair in "backing social tension, especially the events of Nov. 17" when police attacked peaceful student demonstrators in Prague.

The burly, round-faced Adamec had presided over dramatic political reforms since Jakes stepped down Nov. 24, and his resignation could cast a pall over reform efforts. The main opposition group Civic Forum had said Adamec was the only credible leader in the current government with whom they were willing to work.

But Adamec appeared increasingly frustrated in recent days with opposition demands for faster and deeper reforms. In a televised speech Wednesday he threatened to resign, citing the high-pressure tactics used by democracy groups.

"I am for maximum flexibility but I cannot agree to negotiations under time pressure, under the permanent pressure of hasty deadlines, strikes and negotiations," he said.

"We'll start everybody off uniform then make concessions with each office as different needs arise," he said.

Glisson is in the process of sending a memo out to all of the academic units notifying them of the intended plan.

Group to gather for vigil

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

A group will gather at 8 p.m. tonight at the Unitarian Fellowship, 301 W. Elm, to commemorate the lives and deaths of the 14 women shot at the University of Montreal engineering school Wednesday.

Diane Speir, a member of the Women's Law Forum, said she is organizing the gathering.

"Feminism has been on the rise in Canada and there has been an anti-feminist backlash," Speir said.

The women were killed by a gunman, who after killing 14, turned his gun on himself and committed suicide. Twelve others were injured in the shooting.

The gunman reportedly stormed a classroom building yelling in French: "You're all a bunch of feminists!" before beginning his murderous rampage.

Witnesses to the killings said the man divided students in the classroom by sex and sent the men into the hallway before opening fire on the women. "I heard the gunman say: 'I want the women,'" another witness said.

The gunman entered the classroom and "told us to stop everything."

Gunman blamed feminists for bad life

MONTREAL (UPI) — The gunman who killed 14 women and wounded 13 in a rampage through a university building carried a three-page letter that listed 11 prominent women and blamed feminists for ruining his life, police said Thursday.

The Women's Defense Committee of Montreal planned a vigil Thursday night outside the building where the massacre occurred Wednesday, and other groups held similar vigils across the country earlier in the day.

The gunman, whose identity was learned by police Thursday but not immediately released, roamed the hallways of the engineering school at the University of Montreal Wednesday evening, shooting women with a semi-automatic hunting rifle. At one point he entered a classroom, forced the male students and teacher to leave, and gunned down six women.

Police spokesman Jacques Duchesneau said police learned the name of the gunman, who killed himself after his rampage, by tracing the 7.62-caliber semi-automatic Sturm, Ruger rifle that was used in the massacre.

Duchesneau said the gun was "the type you can buy for hunting reasons" and was easy to obtain. Police said the man had the proper permit under Canada's gun-control laws.

Among five points listed in a handwritten three-page letter found in the gunman's pocket was that he was killing the women for "feminist reasons," police said.

Duchesneau said the third page of the letter included a list of 11 "prominent women," whom police refused to identify.

Duchesneau said the women, whose names apparently were copied from a newspaper or magazine, were being contacted by police as a precaution but he played down speculation that the letter was a hit list.

The first paragraph of the letter, which was signed "Marc," said he would die Dec. 6. The next 2 1/2 pages explained why.

Montreal Constable Jacques Morrisseau said the letter was not addressed to anyone in particular. "It just told what he was going to do," he said.

Duchesneau said the gunman, who was described as 22 to 25 years old, explained that he was shooting women "because feminists have always spoiled his life and he hasn't been happy for seven years."

The letter said the man was refused entry in the army because he was anti-social. It also contained a reference to Canadian Forces Cpl. Denis Lortie, who burst into the Quebec legislature with a submachine gun and killed three people in May 1984.

Charlene Nero, 27, a spokeswoman for the Women's Defense Committee, said she had received telephoned death threats from a man about six weeks ago after she distributed feminist pamphlets outside a restaurant, but there was no indication whether the threats were connected.

"The message was if I didn't smarten up, I would find myself dead or sorry," said Nero, a student at Concordia University in Montreal, 15 blocks from the massacre. She said other defense committee members also have received similar threats recently.

Crab Orchard Lake at low water point, needs precipitation

MARION (UPI) — Crab Orchard Lake, probably at its lowest level in history, should be back to its normal level by spring if Southern Illinois gets some precipitation and work around the lake's dam stays on schedule, officials said Thursday.

Norrel Wallace, project manager for Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, said although the lake had been "drawn down" in the past, he said it may now be at its lowest level. "The lake is 4-feet below its normal level, Wallace said. He said the draw down began in September in order to make $5.5 million worth of improvements to the dam and surrounding area.

Wallace said the project is 85 percent complete. He said work on relocating a county road and the finishing touches on a new auxiliary spillway still need to be completed.

Wallace said the earthen dam's floodgate, opened in September, were closed Dec. 1. He said the lake level has remained 4-feet below normal because of the lack of rain.

"With the draw down fishermen have had a chance to see what the bottom contours of the lake look like and what they think will be good bass haunts when the lake is refilled," Wallace said.

Crab Orchard is well-known as one of the Midwest's best large-mouth bass lakes, Wallace said.

Wallace said the low lake level will also give the soil a chance to rejuvenate itself. "The lake bottom is going to have a chance to breathe," Wallace added.

The 7,000-acre lake is down to about 4,900 acres, Wallace said. He said there had been no reports of boat groundings or complaints from lake users in what is a shallow lake even at normal levels. Wallace said the average depth of the lake at normal level is about nine feet.

Wallace said the primary work on the dam area includes:

- Construction of a new 930-

- foot auxiliary spillway.
- New riprap added to the dam, which was built in the 1930s.
- A 5-foot increase in the height of the dam.
- A reduction of the slope on the rear of the dam.

Wallace said work on the Crab Orchard dam is part of a project nationwide by the federal government to improve dam safety. He said work will begin in the summer of 1990 on the dam at nearby Little Grass Lake. Dam repairs were made a few years ago to one of the area's other man-made lakes, Devils Kitchen, Wallace said.

Elderly woman trapped by husband's body

WAYNESBORO, Tenn. (UPI) — A 76-year-old woman was trapped for two days beneath her dead husband in their bedroom until a neighbor rescued her, police said Thursday.

Tom Frank Hassell had a stroke and fell on his wife, Mamie, wedging her between their bed and the wall, police said. She was in critical condition Thursday at Saint Thomas Hospital in nearby

Nashville. "She somehow got trapped between the bed and the wall," Waynesboro Police Chief Bill Brewer said. "He was trying to assist her when he became ill. He fell on top of her and died of natural causes."

The accident happened Saturday and she was not found until Monday morning, Brewer said. "A neighbor who lives across the street saw their Sunday paper laying in the yard," he said. "He knocked on the door and couldn't get any response. He called and couldn't get an answer. He went inside and found them."

Brewer, a lifelong friend of the couple, said Mamie Hassell was conscious when he arrived at the home.

He said her heart stopped on the way to the hospital.

Suggestions on coping with holidays offered

Scripps Howard News Service

It may be, as some say, the tonight that counts.

But Christmas is getting seriously close now and few have finished their shopping. Or wrapping. Or even mailing their holiday cards.

Fear not. There are ways to cut corners.

Here are a few suggestions designed to help you keep smiling:

■ Arrange a baby-sitting exchange with a friend so you both can sleep without your children. The exchange keeps Christmas presents a surprise.

■ If you take your children shopping, make sure you and your kids are well rested. Take breaks and bring non-messy snacks such as raisins.

■ Bring lists of names and tentative gift ideas. You'll be less likely to forget someone.

■ Let someone else do it. There are shopping services, some of which also will wrap gifts, in larger cities. And some of the major department stores offer free independent personal shoppers when you buy at their stores.

■ Instead of making big meals, keep food such as cheese, tomatoes, apples, bananas, bread, lettuce and cold cuts on hand for quick, easy meals and cleanups.

■ Use paper plates and cups the week before Christmas to cut cleanup time.

■ Abandon your formal Christmas Day dinner for a picnic of food gifts you received. You'll use up all those cheese trays, bread and sausage logs, and have extra time to play games, socialize or just relax.

■ Arrange a wrapping exchange. Cut a deal with someone who loves wrapping gifts but hates taking tree ornaments down. You provide paper, tape and scissors and he or she wraps your gifts one evening. In exchange, you'll take down and put away that person's tree ornaments.

■ Some malls have charity gift-wrap booths.

■ Bag the wrapping (literally). Many stores sell pretty, colorful paper bags to "wrap" gifts in.

■ There are services that will not only mail your Christmas gifts, but wrap them. Check your newspaper's classified sections.

■ You can avoid mailing packages by shopping via catalog and televised shopping merchandisers. They'll send your gifts directly to the recipient.

■ Accept all offers of help, no matter how small. Or insincere.

Fay said that in 1973, the Convention on International Trade and Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna (CITES), met to regulate trade on endangered and threatened species. Three appendices were established, of which ginseng is a member of the second.

Appendix 2 mandates that countries involved may monitor and regulate trade in threatened species. Appendix 1 prohibits trade, except for scientific research, in endangered or threatened species, while the third allows a country to regulate trade in species indigenous to that area.

Kevin Winship, a graduate student in the department of botany, said the plant is fairly present in the Southern Illinois region, though it is more present in some areas than others.

Winship said the plant's original habitat, mainly shady, hardwood forests, have disappeared due to agricultural development. The plant, which according to Winship, grows at the bottom of ravines, requires moist soil.

order to gain a better count of coonhunters in the state.

Murry estimated that there are about 15,000 to 16,000 coonhunters in the state.

The organization did not pose any opposition to the bill, Murry said.

Many hunters train their hounds in the off-season, but they would only have to have the stamp while selling their furs, Kevin Martin, legislative liaison for IDOC, said.

Martin said 50 percent of the funds will be spent on habitat restoration, while 35 percent of the other half will be spent on funding for research by not-for-profit groups. The remaining 15 percent will go towards administrative costs.

Axing Santa Claus a tough situation for parents today

University News Service

When Cable News Network asked viewers whether parents should promote Santa Claus, 18 percent of those who called in voted to ax him. But killing Kris Kringle is easier said than done, said SIU-C psychologists.

"Kids are going to want to know who he is, particularly because it looks like good thing — this guy hands stuff out," said Alan C. Vaux, associate professor of psychology.

Santa pops up everywhere. He stops off at the mall, stares up out of newspapers, stars in his own specials. Parents could refuse to mall hop, rip out ad circulars, wrest control of the TV's remote. But unless they're willing to quarantine their children, their efforts to stifle Santa will probably meet defeat at the tiny hands of their children's friends.

"It's like the Tooth Fairy," said developmental psychologist Victoria J. Molfese. "I don't think people deliberately teach their kids about the Tooth Fairy, but everyone knows about her."

Santa has come down to us through the centuries. Myths which persist that long usually have a purpose.

"I think it serves a need for both parents and children," said clinical psychologist Gordon F. Pitz.

For children, Santa's significance is pretty straightforward — he's got the goods.

But Santa has layers of meaning for grown-ups — much of it having to do with the past.

Parents who came of age in less affluent times, for example, may associate Santa with enchantment long vanished in America's age of excess.

"The idea of Santa works best when it's a respite from denial," Vaux said. "For many people, Christmas was a magical time when things they barely dreamed about might happen."

And in today's mobile society, re-enacting family traditions about Santa can help bring absent loved ones close again, if only in memory.

"By having their children share the same things they once enjoyed, parents can recapture (their own childhoods)," Molfese said.

So in many families, it may be parents who cling to Santa.

As near as he can remember, Pitz, a self-proclaimed skeptic, has never told his 22-year-old son the truth about Santa Claus.

"I think he figured it out for himself, though he didn't tell us," Pitz said. "He kept up the fabrication because it kept us happy — he didn't want to spoil it for us."

"But who's to say what's the truth? I could probably tell you almost anything and in some sense there would be a kernel of truth to it. If by 'Santa Claus' you mean the spirit of good will and generosity that seems to characterize some people at Christmas, sure there's a Santa Claus."

Parents who mix Saint Nick often insist it's nothing personal — they just don't like the company he keeps. Santa now hustles everything from hardware to handbags in commercials that seem to begin earlier each year.

But if parents can't successfully stop Santa, they may at least rein him in.

"I think the only choice they have is the myth they construct around this odd, red, fat person

Parents can answer kids' tough questions

University News Service

Parents can deal with kid's queries about both sex and Santa in much the same way.

"Make sure you know what the child is really asking," says Victoria J. Molfese, a developmental psychologist at SIU-C. "It's like the old joke about the kid asking 'Where did I come from?' and the parent responding with a detailed explanation of the birds and the bees when all the child wanted to know was where his hometown was."

Young children seldom question any part of the Santa story Molfese and psychology department colleagues Jean A. Cunningham, Gordon F. Pitz and Alan C. Vaux agree that preschoolers usually cannot tell the difference between fact and fancy. So if dad says Christmas goodies come from the North Pole, these kids will not stop to ask why mom and Santa use the same wrapping paper.

"They can dismiss what to others might seem blatant evidence," Vaux says. "People could even say outright that Santa's myth, and kids won't understand—though in some ways that's not so different from adults. Many of us have a great capacity to hang onto beliefs where the facts contradict them."

Sooner or later, however, doubt creeps in—and Molfese thinks the age of disbelief starts earlier than it once did.

"Children hear (the Santa rumors) from their little friends, and TV makes it obvious that there isn't just one Santa," she says.

Vaux, born and raised in Dublin, Ireland, thinks American affluence might also help turn youngsters into Doubting Tommies.

"Santa once allowed children to hope for things they couldn't hope for at other times of the year," he says. "It doesn't make as much sense when the kids are used to getting lots of things."

Doubt isn't necessarily a bad thing, according to Pitz.

"Looking for evidence is basically the tenet of the scientific method, and I think it should also be how people make sense of the world around them," he said. "I think the earlier you can encourage that in children, the better."

Faced with a child who says, "All the kids say there is no Santa—it's just your mom and dad," each psychologist would offer the classic psychology comeback: "Well, what do YOU think?" That response is not just a trade gimmick, they say.

"Frequently by asking a question in return you can get them to tell you what they're thinking," Molfese said. Knowing what the child thinks tells the parent what to say next.

What can parents tell children who still want to cling to the jolly old elf?

"I don't think you should ever lie because children then begin to wonder if you're telling them the truth about other things," Molfese said. "But I think there is a way to respond to what the child is asking and still tell the truth. You might say, 'It's fun to believe in Santa—it's a nice belief.'"

Cunningham suggests saying, "People have the right to believe what they want to. Just because someone else's belief is different doesn't make yours wrong."

For children who may be ready to give up the myth, Vaux suggests what he calls "stages of explanations."

"You can shift away from 'There is a Santa Claus, and this is him.' To 'Well, you're right; these are representations of Santa Claus, though they're not the real Santa Claus,'" he said.

To parents of Santa skeptics, Pitz says, "The approach I'd take is not to say, 'You're right—there is no Santa,' or 'Forget it—there is one,' but to encourage the child to think it through. Then you can sit back and enjoy the child's process of discovery."

The death of Santa offers families a chance to rework his myth.

"That's the time that children need to understand that the fun of Christmas is the giving," Molfese says.

Cunningham suggests parents can enrich the lives of children in the know by enlisting them to become Santas themselves.

"Include them in planning for the younger ones so they get a feeling for why adults enjoy playing Santa and how it's a special way of showing love for someone else," she said.

with the beard," Vaux said. Tamper with the toy man? Why not? Vaux asked.

It's certainly the case that we have already altered this myth. The current image of Santa isn't the one we started out with."

Perhaps Santa would prefer letters recounting good deeds done since his last visit to lists of gift demands, maybe the elves would appreciate having kids hang up full stockings the week before Christmas for Santa to take to needy children.

Molfese's family takes part each year in a program which turns them all into secret Santas for youngsters in foster homes. Her two sons play a major role in imagining the heart's desire of children who get very little during the rest of the year.

"It gives them a sense of accomplishment," she said.

Choosing and repeating Santa rituals can enrich a family's life.

"It becomes a play that's worth keeping, just like people play with each other in all sorts of other ways when they're close — like the strange languages that develop in families or the standard family joke," Vaux said.

An in recreating Santa, parents have the opportunity to go back to the future.

"You get to not only revisit your childhood but fix it a little bit — make it better," Molfese said.

Pearl Harbor remembered with ceremonies and tears

Chicago Mayor Daley, Navy officers lay wreath at memorial

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (UPI) — A moment of silence, the roar of jets, the playing of "Taps" and the tears of survivors marked Thursday's 48th anniversary of the surprise Japanese attack that hurled the United States into World War II.

Several hundred military leaders, veterans and dignitaries attended a ceremony aboard the USS Arizona Memorial, a gleaming white monument that spans the sunken hull of the battleship in Pearl Harbor.

Another 3,000 people attended a ceremony held on shore nearby to mark the anniversary of the attack, which killed 2,409 people and left 18 ships of the U.S. Pacific fleet sunk or heavily damaged.

"It is something that will live with you till your dying day," Edward Gehring, a member of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, said of the attack. "It was a pitiful thing."

"Even pictures don't depict the fire around the battleships here, the black smoke pouring out, the

"Even pictures don't depict the fire around the battleships here, ...the flames, and then men trying to get out..."

—Edward Gehring

flames, and then men trying to get out, coming up, parting the fire on the water to get out — and death. Pitiful."

President Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed a joint session of Congress the day after the raid, saying Dec. 7, 1941, would "live in infamy" and asking for a declaration of war.

The anniversary was also marked Thursday in the mainland United States. Chicago Mayor Richard Daley joined Navy officers in laying a wreath at the city's veterans' memorial.

In Hawaii, the destroyer USS Leftwich glided through the placid waters of Pearl Harbor past the Arizona memorial as the sun rose above the hills overlooking Honolulu. The ship's crew lined the decks in dress whites, standing at attention and saluting.

The ship blew one long blast of its whistle at 7:55 a.m. to mark the exact moment the attack began 48 years earlier. All over the harbor, work ceased for a full minute in honor of those lost in the attack.

Four Hawaii Air National Guard jets then roared over the open-air memorial, one of them veering off in the "missing man" formation.

A 45-minute service concluded with the playing of echo "Taps," one bugler playing in the enclosed shrine of the memorial, his notes echoed by a second bugler on the dock behind the memorial.

Bill Speer, a Honolulu resident, recalled that he had just taken a shower when bombs started falling.

Japanese investments protested

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — About 25 World War II veterans held a demonstration Thursday inside the State Capitol decrying Japanese investment in the United States on the 48th anniversary of Japan's bombing of Pearl Harbor.

The veterans, some of them carrying anti-Japanese signs and slogans, said Japan should officially apologize and pay restitution for bombing Hawaii and getting the United States involved in the war.

"If they are our friends, why haven't they apologized," said C.F. Marley, a Nokomis resident who fought in the Solomon Islands during World War II.

Marley read a resolution at the protest urging Japan to give its national profits to help pay for injuries and inconveniences caused by the war. He also said lawmakers should not give financial incentives to help Japanese business wanting to expand in the United States, especially in the areas of automobile manufacturing and entertainment.

"They haven't done anything to deserve it," Marley said. "We are worse off today than we were after Pearl Harbor because these people are in our midst right now."

Lower costs needed for B-2 bombers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air Force Secretary Donald Rice said Thursday he is considering stretching production of the $70 billion B-2 stealth bomber program to lower annual costs rather than reducing the proposed 132-plane fleet.

Rice said he is "absolutely" committed to the Air Force's plan to build all of the radar-evading bombers, which cost $530 million each. But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said recently that building the entire fleet is still open to question.

The Air Force secretary said there are no immediate plans to reduce the program, but left open the possibility a decision on that issue could be made in the "fairly distant" future.

"I think 132 is a good number and, if it were to be questioned, it is something that does not need to be decided for quite a few years to come," Rice told reporters.

"Any question having to do with the ultimate 'buy quantity' is in fact one for some distant future," Rice said.

"We are looking at the option of procuring it over a longer period of time," Rice said.

Lengthening production of the B-2 could raise the overall cost of the program, but lower the annual expense by stretching spending over a longer period of time.

Members of Congress howled when the Air Force this year released year-by-year projected costs showing it would need as much as $8.4 billion in fiscal 1993 for the stealth program.

Eight B-2s were built in fiscal 1989 and three more are due to be built this year.

Northeastern Illinois wants Division I athletic program

CHICAGO (UPI) — More than 300 sign-carrying students and faculty members at Northeastern Illinois University packed a meeting Thursday of the Board of Governors and State Universities to protest the policies of school president Gordon Lamb.

Lamb, president since 1986, has come under heavy criticism from faculty members and students over a recent report by the university's Committee to Review Undergraduate Education and a decision to move the school's athletic program into Division I.

In a speech to the board, Ronald Glick, chairman of the Faculty Senate, accused Lamb of ignoring his group in favor of a 10-member planning council appointed by Lamb.

"We, the faculty are very troubled by the process," Glick said.

"We seek a partnership with our administration."

Students and faculty members were "deeply troubled" over a recent report by the university's Committee to Review Undergraduate Education, Glick said.

The report labeled minority students as "non-persistent, unprepared, and failures," Glick said.

Another faculty member, Max Torres, called for Lamb's ouster.

"We want to get rid of Lamb," Torres said. "We want to demonstrate to the Board of Governors that his administration is one of incompetence and one of refusing to listen to students and faculty."

The students and faculty members crammed the meeting — at the university's Alumni Hall — carrying signs that read, "Lamb must go," "Stop administrative racism" and "Faculty governance not Lamb's rule."

During a break in the meeting, Lamb said he wanted to work with the faculty and students to address their differences.

"I am confident we can work together to resolve these issues," Lamb said, adding he has tried not to exclude the faculty in decisions affecting the university.

On the question of moving the athletic program into Division I, Lamb said he was faced with the decision when he became president because of a new "$11 million or $12 million" sports facility.

"I was faced with the question: Will our program match our facilities?" Lamb said.

In response to the charges of racism, Lamb said the school was involved in a variety of minority access and retention programs.

Illinois AFL-CIO president retires after more than a decade on job

CHICAGO (UPI) — Illinois AFL-CIO President Robert Gibson, who guided one of the state's most powerful labor groups through a decade of economic and political change, retired Thursday.

"There comes a time in every guy's life, and I guess I've arrived at that time," Gibson told a meeting of the organization's executive board. "I've just decided to submit my resignation."

Executive board members chose secretary-treasurer Richard Walsh, 46, Springfield, an attorney and educator, to replace Gibson. Walsh, who has been active in the Illinois Federation of Teachers, had Gibson's support.

"It's a humbling experience to be elected to head a million-member union organization," said Walsh, who told of growing up in a steelworker family on Chicago's South Side.

Named to replace Walsh as secretary-treasurer is Quincy native Donald Johnson, a former state labor director and leader of a building trades council. Johnson now lives in Springfield.

Gibson, 62, a native of Flat

River, Mo., rose through union ranks as a steel worker in Granite City to head the AFL-CIO's influential Illinois Council. He had served in the top post since May 1979.

Under Gibson's leadership, the Illinois AFL-CIO broke from its political tradition of exclusively backing Democrats for major public offices by supporting Gov. James R. Thompson in 1986. It marked the first endorsement of a Republican gubernatorial candidate in the 30-year history of the state organization.

Miami officer convicted in two killings

MIAMI (UPI) — A Hispanic police officer was convicted Thursday of manslaughter in the deaths of two black men killed by a gunshot that set off three days of race riots in January.

Police remained on alert throughout the city to quell any violence resulting from the verdict in the racially sensitive trial of William Lozano, who claimed he fired the shot in self-defense for fear the motorcycle the black men was riding was going to run him over.

The six-member jury of two white females and a male, a black male and female, and a Hispanic female deliberated for eight hours and 13 minutes over two days before convicting Lozano of one count of manslaughter with a weapon and one count of manslaughter without a weapon.

The first count carries a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison, the second 15 years. Lozano was charged only with manslaughter — not with murder — and the jury did not have the option of convicting him on a lesser charge.

Circuit Judge Joseph P. Farina set sentencing for Jan. 24 and allowed Lozano to remain free on $10,000 bond.

Lozano cried as he left the courtroom through a side door, surrounded by marshals and relatives.

At the office of his defense lawyer, Roy Black, Lozano said: "I just want to say thanks to my lawyers. I wasn't given a fair trial. From the beginning a lot of the evidence was denied ... but I am going to keep fighting for my job and my justice."

Phillipine troops on parade in Makati

Loyalist government troops receive cheers

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Hundreds of loyalist government troops, some riding tanks and armored vehicles, paraded through the Makati financial district Thursday to the cheers of jubilant civilians just hours after a six-day siege by mutinous soldiers ended. "Long live democracy" and "Thank you for saving democracy," shouted thousands of cheering residents as the troops passed the Inter-Continental Hotel, which the renegades had seized since Saturday.

A drum and bugle corps played Christmas carols as the marchers passed by. Many of the civilians carried President Corazon Aquino's trademark yellow banners and ribbons.

Mayor Jejomar Binay described the parade as a "thanksgiving march" for the surrender of mutinous soldiers who occupied the district's highrises, posh condominiums and hotels in the sixth and bloodiest coup attempt against Aquino.

The residents, from high-heeled socialites to sandal-wearing slum dwellers, waved to the troops, shook their hands and gave them high fives.

The loyalist soldiers, apparently overwhelmed at the civilian show of support, threw live bullets to the crowd as souvenirs. "Bullets, give us more bullets," the crowd yelled.

"The rebels had no choice," said Brig. Gen. Alexander Aguirre, commander of the loyalist troops, as he watched the parade. "They had to go back to the barracks."

Binay said the march showed the rebels had no popular support. "The people will never allow the grabbing of power through violent means," Binay said.

As the renegades left, government soldiers moved in to secure bullet-riddled buildings. Explosives experts assisted by bomb-sniffing dogs searched buildings "floor by floor, room by room," an officer said.

Residents returning to their posh condominium units were told not to enter until their rooms had been inspected.

Gen Rainer, a German engineer working in the Philippines, tried to enter his room at the Gilarmi Apartments, but was told to come back Friday.

"I am not scared at all," he said. "We have work to do in the Philippines and we have to do it. I will always come back."

At the swank Ritz Towers, soldiers found four M-16 Armatite rifles, an M-60 machine gun, cans of sardines, combat boots, a broken video tape, medical equipment and uniforms left behind by the rebels at the basement.

Rusty bullets stored in boxes showed the rebels had planned for the coup for a long time, an officer said.

Peter Heilveil, 34, a U.S. employee of a rubber company, said he had lost almost $300,000 because of a terminated contract, but said he was not discouraged. He said businessmen who had been in the Philippines are not scared and will continue to invest.

"It's the tourists and other personal oriented businesses who are affected," said Heilveil, a Honolulu native who has been in the Philippines for five years.

At the plush Cafe Rizal, near a building that was occupied by rebel soldiers, a colored television was turned on and workers began cleaning the debris of broken glass.

"We've lost about 200,000 to 300,000 pesos ($10,000 to $15,000) for the whole week that we didn't operate," said manager Susan Benitez.

Owner Louie Benitez said Makati officials assured him the commercial center will be fully operational by Saturday.

"Give me one week and I will make Makati a tinseltown again," Binay promised.

Bomb blast in Cartagena near site of Bush summit

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — A bomb blast in Cartagena — tentative site of the drug summit that President Bush plans to attend — killed two police officials Thursday as the death toll in Wednesday's dynamite blast in Bogota rose to 42.

Cartagena, a historic Caribbean port city about 400 miles north of Bogota, had been relatively free of the drug cartels' wave of terror before Thursday's bombing. Police said terrorists hiding in bushes alongside the road hurled a bomb at the police car as the officers were on routine patrol in a police car in La Popa tourist section of Cartagena.

Sgt. Samuel Arias and policeman Hernan Gonzalo Castro were killed and a private security guard was injured, police said.

Cartagena was tentatively chosen as the site for a meeting between Bush and Latin American presidents to discuss the growing problem of drug trafficking in the hemisphere. The meeting is tentatively set for Feb. 15.

Police in Medellin reported that leftist terrorists bombed three religious centers and a rightest community center Wednesday night.

Members of "popular militias" claimed responsibility for the Medellin attacks, which caused considerable material damage but no injuries.

Three Seventh Day Adventist

churches and the offices of the rightist organization Tradition, Family and Property were blasted at about 6 p.m. Wednesday, a police source said.

In Bogota, hospital sources said two of 42 bodies remained unidentified from the powerful explosion Wednesday morning that sheared off the facade of the 11-story secret police headquarters and leveled a 40-block area. Some 500 people had been treated so far for wounds received in the attack.

Workers Thursday searched for more bodies under the rubble left by the explosion of an estimated half-ton of dynamite.

A presidential palace communique released Wednesday night after an emergency Cabinet meeting said the government would continue with its "undeniable will to liberate Colombia from the greatest threat any democracy has ever confronted."

"The Colombian government without wavering and with greater determination than ever will continue taking all the necessary actions to make Colombia a free and proud nation," the communique read.

Wednesday's devastating attack and last month's bombing of an Avianca airliner that left 111 people dead are believed to have been masterminded by reputed drug kingpin Pablo Escobar, the elusive head of the Medellin cartel.

Red Sox make deals; more moves possible

Providence Journal

Last week ago, the Boston Red Sox signed free-agent Tony Pena, a veteran catcher, hard worker, good guy to have around.

This week, they signed Jeff Reardon, free-agent relief pitcher, another hard worker, one who has always wanted to play in Boston.

If nothing else, the Boston locker room promises to have more smiling faces next season, even if the price of solid citizens is a little steep these days. Pena cost $6.4 million over three years. Reardon cost $6.8 million for three.

Wade Boggs, Ellis Burks and Mike Greenwell are potential trade bait for Bosox.

"We've helped ourselves, no question," said Lou Gorman, Sox general manager. "We're getting players who want to play here."

But as the baseball meetings reached the 11th hour, Gorman was still searching, still talking, still trying to make a deal. He still needs a lot of help. He needs a first baseman and a front-line pitcher. Another outfielder wouldn't hurt.

As trade bait, he is dangling superstars — Wade Boggs, Mike Greenwell or Ellis Burks. All of which makes this a dangerous time. The temptation to make a move is great, and Gorman is being bombarded with offers.

The rumor mill is working overtime: The Angels' Devon White and Kirk McCaskill for Burks? The Expos' Tim Lincecum and Zane Smith for Greenwell? The Expos' Tim Wallach and Smith for Boggs? The Royals' Kevin Seitzer and a pitcher for Boggs? And on and on.

For the moment, Gorman has Pena, 32, and Reardon, 34.

"The fans will like Pena, he's a heckuva competitor," said Mike Roarke, who worked closely with Pena last season with the St. Louis Cardinals. "The only reason we could afford to lose him is this young guy (Todd Ziegle) we've got coming up."

"And he knows how to handle pitchers; he learns about a staff very quickly," said Roarke, Cardinals' pitching coach the last five seasons. "He's a pro and he was fun to work with. We liked him."

If Pena still has his fastball, the bearded Reardon seemingly has lost a little of his. His strike-outs-to-innings ratio is poor, which isn't too good if you're a relief pitcher. In fact, the numbers are startling: 43 strikeouts in 73 innings.

Gorman says the acquisitions of Reardon and Pena give him flexibility to make other moves, such as trading Rich Gedman, veteran catcher, and the moody Smith. Which is what led to the rumor of the blockbuster deal with the Yankees, of all people. In that one, the Sox were going to send Gedman, Smith, minor-league third baseman Scott Cooper and outfielder Kevin Romine to New York for pitchers Chuck Cary and Greg Cadaret and outfielder Jesse Barfield. If that had a chance, Gorman should still be talking. It's a heist for the Red Sox.

Hernandez signs with Tribe

Changes aplenty in store for Cleveland

CLEVELAND (UPI) — If the Indians fail to improve next season, it won't be for lack of trying.

Already in this off-season, the Indians have hired a new manager, traded Joe Carter, lost Pete O'Brien to free agency, and signed free agents Candy Maldonado and Cecilio Guante. Thursday, the latest free agent to sign with the Tribe was first baseman Keith Hernandez, 36, who spent the first 15 years of his career in the National League with the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets.

The deal is worth a reported $4 million, and because Hernandez is a Type C free agent, the Indians will not lose a draft choice by signing him.

In the last two seasons, the 11-time Gold Glove winner has been hampered by injuries. He was bothered by a hamstring injury in 1988 and played in just 95 games, and a broken kneecap last year sidelined him for all but 75 games.

In 1989, Hernandez batted .233 with 4 homers and 19 runs batted in.

Hernandez was the co-winner of the 1979 National League MVP Award with Willie Stargell, and has been in five All Star games.

"Why did I choose the Indians? Because I looked over their roster and I liked their pitching staff," Hernandez said Thursday. "I've played for most of my career with good pitching staffs, and if I had my choice, I'd pick a team with good pitching over a team with solid hitting."

Hernandez did just that in choosing to sign with Cleveland over a more lucrative offer from a Japanese team. Cleveland hit just .245 last year, their lowest average since 1972, with a total of 127 homers, and their 604 runs scored was an American League low.

The Indians finished 73-89 last year, 16 games back of Toronto in sixth place. They have finished higher than sixth just once in the last 11 seasons (a fifth place finish in 1986), and have not been in the playoffs since 1954.

Still, Hernandez believes the Indians, mainly because of their pitching staff, have a chance to contend in 1990.

"It basically came down to the fact that I don't want to play for a fifth-place team or an also-ran," he said. "I like their pitching. If I thought I would play here for what is going to remain a fifth-place team, I wouldn't come here."

Actually, a fifth-place finish would be a step up for the Indians.

By signing Hernandez, the Indians get a solid fielder who, if he's healthy, should be able to contribute at the plate. For years, Hernandez, who has a lifetime .298 average, was regarded as one of the best clutch hitters in the National League.

"He provides us with the quality leadership and a winning background that this ballclub can definitely use," Indians Manager John McNamara said. "Especially with the younger players we traded for Wednesday."

Pheasant stamp could help restore population, harvests

My father once told me the ring-necked pheasant was a bird to be respected, not for the hunting sport it afforded, but because of its beauty, hardiness and intelligence.

The tales of "clouds of pheasants" encountered during his hunting days captivated me from the start. Sadly, the clouds of old have diminished to mere wisps in the present, because of man's encroachment on the bird's habitat.

Introduced to the North American continent from its native Asia, the pheasant found the habitat and grain crops early 20th century farming provided to its liking.

However, the Illinois farmer changed, taking lands left idle and turning them into rows upon rows of corn and soybeans. In the process, the same hedgerows, fence-rows and waterways that once provided cover to the pheasant went under the chisel plow in order to get another row of corn. So when the cover disappeared, the pheasant disappeared.

Such has been the plight of the pheasant for the past two decades, but hope looms in the form of a pheasant stamp.

The new stamp, which goes into effect Jan. 1, will affect hunters next season and may be the tool-hold the pheasant needs to make a comeback in Illinois.

Proceeds from the stamp will be divided between the Illinois

From the Press Box
Chris Walka

Department of Conservation and Pheasants Forever, a not-for-profit organization started, ironically, by hunters. Both of these bodies will work to establish — or re-establish — habitat the pheasant has lost.

While some may be breathing a bit easier, one question pops into the minds of many — at least this hunter, anyway: "Why this long to recognize the problem on the behalf of the state?" Officials only had to look at the yearly harvest numbers and the seemingly endless miles of black, Illinois soil to get a picture of the correlation between disappearing habitat and low pheasant populations.

"We're not dealing with optimal pheasant habitat here," Terry Musser, program manager for IDOC controlled hunting areas, said.

No kidding. It seems like the overgrown hedgerow is and will remain a thing of the past, with the unmowed roadside ditch a fragment of hunter imaginations. Hedgerows and unmowed roadside ditches are cover that the pheasant uses to nest in and to rear its young.

If this writer is not to be believed, one only has to traverse Interstate 74, between Champaign and Peoria, to get a real feel for the problem. Sure, every now and then a patch of cover will be present, but for the most part, it's non-existent.

Naturally, the remaining areas of cover attract pheasants, but they also attract predators, both human and non-human. Because the cover is concentrated, the birds are too. So, when the birds are closely gathered, the hunting of them is much easier, contributing to more being killed, reducing the populations even further. If more cover was available, the birds would be able to disperse more.

Musser said in the late 1950s and early 1960s, the yearly estimated pheasant harvest was one million birds. Musser estimated the kill now at 400,000 to 450,000 birds per year.

Regardless of the reasons for lack of action, the stamp may provide the cover for the bird to come back. I hope it does and the pheasant is not allowed to become a thing of the past in Illinois, but a force equitable with the burgeoning numbers of geese and deer in the state. I would like to be able to tell my son of "clouds of pheasants."

Yale researchers announce steroids may be addictive

BOSTON (UPI) — Anabolic steroids used by athletes, body builders and teenagers to pump their muscles and improve their performance may be highly addictive, researchers warned Thursday.

Two Yale University researchers reviewed the scientific literature on anabolic steroids and concluded the users could be as seriously hooked as addicts using cocaine.

"We conclude that a proportion of anabolic steroid abusers may develop a previously unrecognized sex steroid hormone-dependence disorder," the researchers said in an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Ominously, there are now reports of anabolic steroid hormone use over longer periods of time than was desired, with attempts to stop use that have failed," wrote Drs. Kenneth Kashkin and Herbert Kleber.

As many as 1 million Americans — including perhaps 250,000 high school students — spend as much as $100 million a year to illegally purchase anabolic steroids, which mimic the male hormone testosterone.

Steroids had been used most commonly in the 1950s and 1960s by athletes to enhance performance and were thought to produce few side effects.

But the substances are now believed to be used also for cosmetic purposes and because they can produce a sense of euphoria, the researchers said.

'Bounty Bowl' appealing to fans

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Americans often find the tackiest sporting events most entertaining.

Beanball wars. Full contact karate. Hot cream wrestling. "Chippy" hockey games. The American Gladiators. Women's bodybuilding. Any basketball game involving Rick Mahorn.

This T-factor explains why the escalating feud between Philadelphia Eagles coach Buddy Ryan and Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson is so gratifying.

This explains why Sunday's "Bounty Bowl" between the two teams is so interesting. Though the game is nearly meaningless, CBS-TV will make it the featured early game of its doubleheader.

In Dallas, bug-eyed owner Jerry Jones and his acolyte, the way-too-cocky Johnson, had great expectations for their first NFL season. But their pitiful Cowboys (1-12) have afforded them few laughs.

In Philadelphia, Ryan has been a cartoon character. His players call him Barney Rubble, but he carries on like Mr. Slate. He regularly makes ridiculous statements to motivate his players and rattle opponents.

Johnson's self-righteous whining is a bit ironic, since his "Miami Vice" squads were considered the outlaws of college football. The Hurricanes bullied opponents, barked on-field insults and ran up scores.

Jimmy Johnson made a lot of charges. Ryan said in a telephone call with Dallas writers this week. "I expect they'll make him apologize to me and the Philadelphia Eagles. Those are terrible things he said ... and I think he owes us an apology."

But Ryan isn't holding his breath.

For his part, Johnson characterized Ryan as an overweight coward for hustling off the Texas Stadium field on Thanksgiving. Johnson wanted to confront him, but he said Ryan "hustled his big fat rear end to the dressing room."

In that dressing room, Ryan said the Cowboys were "probably the worst prepared team that I've seen in the NFL since I've been in it."

Ryan related a conversation he had with Eagles scout King Hill. "He said, 'I'm ashamed of you; I didn't know Dallas had anybody good enough to put a bounty on,'" Ryan said. "That's King Hill. I guarantee you, I'll get credit for it tomorrow."

He did. That remark went up on the "Buddy Board" posted in the Cowboys locker room. Dallas is mad. Philadelphia is psyched. CBS is geared up to chronicle all the cheap shots expected Sunday.

Nationally televised game will help Saluki basketball

The start of SIU-C's televised basketball season gives Saluki fans a chance to show what "Saluki spirit" is all about to basketball fans outside the Southern Illinois area.

In case you didn't know, ESPN, a national cable-televized sports channel, is coming to the Arena Dec. 15 to air the matchup between the Salukis and the St. Louis Billikens.

This marks the first time a nationally televised sporting event has originated from the Arena.

Do the Billikens ring a bell? Yes, the same team that put a whippin' to the Salukis, 87-54, in the first round of the National Invitational Tournament last year. The loss ended the Salukis season at 20-14. The Billikens eventually advanced to the championship game before bowing to St. John's University.

The Salukis want to avenge that loss and couldn't ask for a better chance than at home on national television.

The Salukis' combination of a potent offense and a new dedication to aggressive defense could drastically turn the tables against the Billikens this time around. The Salukis will travel to St. Louis Jan. 29 to complete the season series.

The positive attributes of national exposure are limitless. A solid performance by SIU-C could potentially turn the Salukis into a household word. ESPN is available to 53 million cable subscribers across the country.

Although the timing of the game could be better for the students — it falls the Friday of finals week when many students are looking to go home after another long semester — the University is still content that ESPN is coming to town.

From the Press Box
Kevin Simpson

The Salukis will make a minimum of five television appearances this season. SportsChannel America, a regionally televised network reaching approximately 12 million homes, will televise Evansville at SIU-C Dec. 12, SIU-C at Drake Jan. 13 and Creighton at SIU-C Feb. 10.

When SIU-C travels to Western Kentucky on Jan. 8, Prime Network, a national cable system based in Houston, will air the game as part of a package of MVC basketball and baseball games. The package will be offered to as many as 10 million households across the country.

The Salukis will have a shot at making it onto ESPN again if they can make it into the MVC tournament championship game March 6 in Normal.

Televized games are a good recruiting tool for head coach Rich Herrin. Out-of-state high school and junior college players can get a good look at the Saluki basketball program without leaving their home. If the Saluki program is on television several times during the season, it's more of an incentive for a recruit to choose SIU-C.

This could potentially have a snowball effect for the basketball program. The more TV time, the more talented recruits the University could attract and in turn, the program becomes stronger, which would draw more interest in television appearances. Although calling for a sellout would be a little far-fetched, the Arena has not had a sellout crowd since Feb. 15, 1979, when the Larry Bird-led Indiana State Sycamores played at the Arena on its way to a 33-1 season. The importance of a good crowd on hand is of great significance for the Salukis.

Unofficial estimates say the crowd on hand Dec. 15 could be 7,000 to 8,000.

The Saluki basketball team will not be the only ones receiving air time, when there is a time-out or a break in play, the camera crew usually turns to the crowd for entertaining shots. Whether displaying painted faces or outrageous signs, the fans are an integral part of the show.

Besides the usual entertainment of watching the cheerleaders and the Saluki shakers, Arena fans will be treated to the Bud Light Daredevils, who will perform at halftime. The daredevils use trampolines and acrobatics to perform a variety of high-flying slam-dunks.

The effects of ESPN televising MVC games is not just beneficial to Saluki basketball, but the well-being of the conference. ESPN has an agreement to cover eight MVC games through the course of the season.

National coverage and contracts have done wonders for other conferences — the Big East for example — in providing the schools with money and exposure from television contracts.

If fans make it a point to attend the St. Louis game and other televised games in general, it could encourage other ESPN and other networks to return to the Arena for future matchups.

Physical Murray State next for men hoopsters

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's basketball team will try to keep their winning streak alive as they travel to Racer Arena to battle Murray State Saturday night. Undeclared SIU-C, 4-0, beat Eastern Illinois Thursday by a score of 74-58. The Salukis seek their fifth consecutive victory and will take on a physical Murray State team with a record of 1-2.

Racer head coach Steve Newton and his team have suffered hard times while opening their first three games of the 1989-90 season on the road. The Racers fell lost to St. Louis University 78-68 and Eastern Illinois University 55-50 while defeating Western Kentucky University, 66-64.

"Murray State is a very good basketball team," Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said. "They are very physical underneath the basket. They have some strong veterans and mix in some good young talent as well."

The Racers will look to sophomore center Popeye Jones, averaging 17 points and 12.3 rebounds per game, and senior forward Chris Ogden, averaging 11 points and 9 rebounds per game, to take charge on the offensive end of the court.

The Salukis will be led by senior guard Freddie McSwain, who scored 21 points to lead SIU-C to a 79-71 victory last year over Murray State in SIU Arena. Also back from last year's victorious squad are senior forward Jerry Jones, who contributed 15 points.

"Jerry has simply taken over the boards," Herrin said. "He's one reason why we feel so confident about having a good season and one reason why we feel we're going to improve as the season progresses."

Even though the Salukis have been in control in each of their first four victories, Herrin has expressed concern in regard to their upcoming games against Murray State, Evansville, and St. Louis.

always been very tough on us in the last three years I've played them. I'm very happy to leave here with a victory."

On the downside for the Salukis, junior forward Eric Griffin left the game midway through the second half when he suffered a possible concussion while attempting to defense a strong drive by the Panthers.

"We thought it was wise not to let him (Griffin) play in that second half," said Herrin.

Herrin will now begin to focus on Murray State who they will face Saturday night in Racer Arena.

"We're just going to try to play and be as good as we can each and every game," Herrin said. "We're a good basketball team, but we can get beat on any night."

Rec Center swim meet scheduled

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

SIU-C men's and women's swimming and diving teams will make a splash at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Rec Center to compete against the Auburn Tigers. This will be the final meet for the two teams before the Christmas break.

The men's team, ranked 17th in the nation, will be facing an Auburn men's team that is yet to win. Auburn, a member of the Southeastern Conference, has fallen to fifth-ranked Tennessee, unranked Kentucky and unranked Louisiana State.

"Their record doesn't properly evaluate their talent. They have faced some great competition in the Southeastern Conference," swimming and diving coach Doug Ingram said. "Auburn has to believe that we will be flat coming off a disappointing loss to Alabama last weekend, but if we get off to a fast start we could catch them by surprise."

After defeating Florida, Florida State, and Maryland in the National Invitational Tournament, the Salukis fell to eighth-ranked Alabama by a score of 71-41.

The Saluki women swimmers, winless coming into the meet, will compete against an Auburn team with a record of 1-3. The women Tigers, also competing in the SEC, have beaten Louisiana State while losing to Kentucky, Tennessee and Vanderbilt. The Saluki women are coming off a rough road trip to Alabama for the NIT where they were dealt three losses from Florida, Maryland, and Alabama.

"Our women's team is a lot better than the record shows. I strongly believe that our meet against Maryland is going to prove to be the turning point for the women. They had some great individual performances in that meet, but now we need to put it all together," Ingram said. "We will most likely be considered underdogs coming into the meet, but I feel that with us being at home in our own pool we have a good chance to pull off an upset."

The men's team competes Saturday, against MVC foes Indiana State and host team Illinois State Redbirds. This meet will open the Salukis' track season.

Men's track coach Bill Cornell said it is a great opportunity to see how the other schools in the conference are starting out this season.

"The Illinois State Redbirds, Indiana State Hoosiers and SIU-C are considered the top three teams in the conference," Cornell said. "It will give us a good look at one another in the preseason."

Senior Erick Pegues, who will be running the 400-meter dash, holds Southern's best indoor (.48.35) and outdoor (.47.16) times for the event.

Cornell said Pegues has been one of the Salukis top scores in the 400m.

Cornell said sophomore Mark Stuart was the No. 1 man on the cross country team this fall. He placed 18th at the 1988 Missouri Valley Conference Championships in track and field competition. Last season Stuart's personal best time in the 3,000 meter run was 8:48.84.

"It looks like (Stuart) is going to have an outstanding track season," Cornell said. Cornell said senior Leonard Vance also looks like he is in for a promising year.

Last season Vance was awarded the MVC outdoor triple jump title for his jump of 50-8 3/4.

Cornell listed Vance as "a possible NCAA qualifier."

Cornell said he is seeing some of the freshman recruits starting to produce and develop into more seasoned runners.

The Salukis added a long list of recruits to their roster this season including hurdler Yonel Jourdain from Evanston, middle distance runner Bernard Henry from St. Lucia, West Indies, pole vaulter Ross McKnight from Hazel Crest, distance runner Gerald Owen from Aberystwyth, Wales, weights Deren Wilder from Remington, Ind. and long jumper Wes Wilt from Sesser. Transfers include middle distance runner Nick Schwartz from Centralia and long jumper Tim Wells from LaPuente, Calif.

"Freshmen — like Bernard Harry — have a lot of talent," Cornell said. "Jourdain was state champion in the high hurdles in high school. Owen is one of the best distance runners in the conference — They all have a lot of potential."

"Schwartz, was state champion in the 1600-meters in Illinois in 1986," Cornell said.

Cornell said, because of the upcoming finals, some runners won't be competing this weekend.

"Mike Kershaw has three finals on Monday so we are leaving him at home this weekend," said Cornell.

Cornell said this will be a good test for his squad and there should be some heavy competition.

"We are going to be facing the best competition in the league," Cornell said. "The whole purpose of the meet is to see how we will fair against (the MVC) at this point in time."

Last year, the Saluki track team won the outdoor Conference Championship.

"We are a stronger team than we were last year," Cornell said. "I think we have potential team to win both the indoor and outdoor this year."

because she is bigger and stronger than our three players."

Western's other returning starter, 6-2 senior center Michelle Clark, averages 8.3 points and 7.2 rebounds per game. Sophomore Kim Pehlke (8.3, 1.3) and 5-9 junior Kelly Smith (7.2, 2.8) are expected starters in the backcourt for Western and 6-1 junior Mary Taylor (9.7, 5.5) will join Green and Clark in the frontcourt.

Western coach Paul Sanderford, who has a career record of 177-58 in his eighth year, said he is looking for the right combination on his team.

The series record between Western and SIU-C is even at 5-5. Sanderford is expecting a tough game.

Salukis whip on ELU; improve to 4-0

McSwain pours in 20

By Kevin Bugger and Eric Simpson

Staff Writers

Defense was once again the big story in the Saluki 74-58 victory last night at Eastern Illinois.

SIU-C took a 15-0 lead in the first five minutes and never looked back as a strong man-to-man defense proved to be too much for the Panthers to handle. The victory extended the Salukis' winning streak to four, giving them a 4-0 record in the early season.

SIU-C surprised Eastern on its home court with its dominating full-court press. With numerous turnovers by Eastern early in the game, the Salukis were able to take control of the game and set the tempo throughout.

It took the Panther offense more than five minutes to score its first field goal and from there their only offensive threat came from the hands of sophomore Barry

Johnson, the only Panther in double figures, who compiled a game-high 30 points.

The Salukis took a halftime lead of 38-20 into the locker room with them, but could have easily extended that lead if it weren't for committing 14 fouls and 10 turnovers. Eastern, who shot only 23.8 percent in the half (5 of 21) from the field, scored nine of their 20 first-half points from the free throw line.

Senior guard Freddie McSwain led the Salukis with 20 points, 10 of 14 from the field, and was able to immediately shut down any type of scoring run. Eastern attempted in both halves.

"I was a little more relaxed tonight," McSwain said. "Everybody shot pretty well tonight."

Murray State next foe

—Page 22

McSwain was given plenty of support with senior forward Jerry Jones contributing 16 points, 10 rebounds and two blocked shots. Junior guard Sterling Mahan and junior forward Rick Shipley each poured in 15 points.

The Salukis shot a blistering 63.6 percent from the field and dominated the boards 38-27.

Much of the same was in store for the Salukis in the second half as tough defense controlled the game. With 12:17 remaining in the game SIU-C commanded a 24 point lead and never looked back.

"It was a nice victory for us," Saluki head coach Rich Herrin said. "I couldn't ask for a better defensive game. Eastern has

Men and women harriers open indoor season

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Both the men's and women's track teams travel to Normal this weekend for one purpose — to "feel out" Gateway and Missouri Valley Conference rivals at the non-scored Illinois State indoor track meet.

The women's team will face a diverse field of competition today from such Gateway Conference schools as Illinois State, Bradley University, Indiana State, Northeast Missouri State, Western Illinois, Northern Iowa and non-conference Marquette University and Eastern Illinois.

Women's track coach Don DeNoon said this is the first meet of the year for the Salukis and the team is looking forward to some heavy competition.

"We had a very good meet (at Illinois State) last year," DeNoon said. "And I would expect to fair well this year."

Last year the Salukis dominated the 4 X 200 meter relay with a time of 1:42.29, the 1000 meter run (3:03.12), long jump (19.5 feet), triple jump (39.5 feet) and the 800 meter dash with junior Michelle Sciano placing first (2:19.84).

Although the meet was unofficially scored, the Salukis placed first with 164, the Redbirds placed second with 130 and the Western Illinois Westwinds finished third with 78.

DeNoon said the team lost a lot of seniors to graduation but with 19 freshman recruits, the newcomers' talent has made up for the difference.

DeNoon said the meet is a very good opportunity for the runners to learn where they stand and what areas still need improvement.

"Because this isn't scored, it takes some pressure off of the runners to score high (as a team)," DeNoon said. "When you are competing on a team level, you have to make up for the events where you don't have real strong runners."

DeNoon said in this situation, individuals have the chance to see how they rank compared to different schools early in the season.

"This meet has very little to do towards the Conference finals and Nationals at the end of the season," DeNoon said. "This is more of a confidence-builder."

Hilltoppers next for Scott's team

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Saluki women's basketball coach Cindy Scott knows her team has a tough task ahead Saturday when they host the Western Kentucky Hilltoppers at 7:35 p.m.

The Lady Hilltoppers finished 22-9 last season, won the Sun Belt Conference Tournament and qualified for the NCAA tournament. But the Hilltoppers, ranked 23rd in the AP preseason top 25 poll, are slumping right now.

Western opened the season with victories over St. John's and Illinois, but since have lost to Illinois State (99-83), Oregon (90-65), Texas Tech (72-61) and 13th-ranked UNLV (64-58). Despite Western's recent skid, Scott is not taking them lightly.

"They have one of the premier programs in the country," Scott said. "They have lost to some nationally ranked teams and are young in the backcourt like us. I have respect for their program and it is going to be a difficult matchup for us. They are big inside."

The Lady Hilltoppers return two starters from last year's team. Tandra Green, a 6 foot senior forward, averages 18.2 points and 6.5 rebounds per game. An all-around performer, Green leads Western with 16 blocks and 13 steals.

A 1989 Kodak District All-American, Green had 12 points, 10 rebounds, two blocks and two steals in Western's 80-59 victory over the Salukis in Bowling Green last December.

"Green is their best player and she plays the No. 3 position," Scott said. "That will be tough for us

Leonard defeats Duran by unanimous decision

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Sugar Ray Leonard repeated his victory in the famed "No Mas" fight of nine years ago Thursday night, dancing and jabbing his way to a dull unanimous 12-round decision over Roberto Duran.

Leonard retained his World Boxing Council super middleweight title and denied Duran, the WBC middleweight champion, a chance to join him as a champion in five weight classes. Leonard outpunched Duran 227-84 and won by wide margins on all three judges' cards before a disappointed crowd of 16,305 at the new Mirage Hotel and Casino.

Judge Bob Logist of Belgium scored it 120-110, Jerry Roth of Nevada scored it 119-109 and Joe Cortez of New Jersey had it 116-111.

Leonard, 33, won the rubber match in his bitter decade-long rivalry with the 38-year-old Panamanian. The two split 1980 fight — Duran won a decision June 20, 1980 and then stunned the boxing world by uttering "no mas" and quitting in the eighth round of their Nov. 25, 1980 rematch. He waited more than nine years for a chance to erase the blot of his legendary career but fought without fire or passion Thursday night.

Leonard improved to 36-1-1 while Duran fell to 85-8. Leonard, who fancies himself a crowd-pleaser, was content to keep his distance from Duran despite repeated boos and jeers from discontented fans who paid from between $100-800 for tickets. He tried some of the taunting tactics that worked in New Orleans, sickening out his chin, windmilling his right hand while jabbing with his left and shuffling his feet. Duran did not quit this time.

Leonard was at his best the few times he stepped inside to exchange punches.
