Red Cross finishing up job in Marion

By John C. Patterson
Special Assignment Writer

Almost one month after a high powered storm struck Marion, the American Red Cross is closing their Disaster Service Center as the town gets back on its feet.

Located in the Second Baptist Church, the center has assisted more than 123 families victimized by the Nov. 19 storm.

Red Cross Family Service Officer Jacqueline Gergen said the local Red Cross chapters will remain open, but the emergency phase of relief is over.

"We've done all we can do for them," Gergen said.

Operations will continue until noon today, but Gergen said they are basically finishing up details.

"It's just a smidgen here and a smidgen there," she said. "We never say we're going to rebuild someone's house. We get support

Inmates of the Dixon Springs "boot camp" program help Marion city workers clean up areas hit by a microburst last month. The Illinois Department of Corrections inmates were being supervised Monday by correctional officer Terry Huffman, right, who is a "drill instructor." The Dixon Springs Impact Incarceration Program allows first-time offenders from 18 to 29 years old to choose the 120-day military-style boot camp rather than serve a jail sentence. Two groups of five from the camp have been spending eight hours a day for the last week helping work crews clean up debris.

SIUC digs in pockets to find faculty raises

By Julie Autor
Administration Writer

Despite a possible rescission, University officials are struggling to find a way to raise money for SIUC faculty salary increases.

Alber Melone, chairman of the Faculty Senate budget committee, said although a specific plan has not yet been formed, certain ideas such as internal reallocation and tuition revenues are the most likely options.

One way tuition revenues could increase would be to take the cap off of the number of credit hours students have to pay. Students would then have to pay for every credit hour they take, which would raise anywhere from $5 million to $7 million, Melone said.

The University needs at least $10 million to cover expenses such as salary increases, Melone said.

"We actually need twice that amount," he said. "We cut that (figure) in half, and now we are trying to deal with the situation."

The University could also raise the cap to 15 credit hours, instead of 12, which would raise the University about $2.5 million, Melone said.

"We are trying to do it in a way that won't hurt the students too much," he said.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended in its preliminary reports a 4-percent tuition increase, and a 4.5-percent salary increase for faculty and staff.

If the faculty and staff receive a raise, it will be the first time in two years a salary increase has been granted.

Bill Capie, acting vice president for financial affairs, said the University is in a position now

Edgar pushed to pay state's medical debts

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Some downstate Democrats in the General Assembly stepped up pressure Monday on Gov. Jim Edgar to borrow more money, saying the chief executive cannot wait or more medical providers will shut their doors.

However, Edgar stood by his cautious approach and reiterated that borrowing $600 million to pay debts would only worsen the state's financial condition.

Edgar was in Salt Lake City for a National Governors Association meeting Monday and Democrats took the opportunity to sharply criticize him.

Eleven downstate lawmakers said the state must improve its system that results in medical providers who treat poor people waiting more than 100 days to be reimbursed.

Illinois has more than $1 billion in unpaid bills and took out a $185 million short-term loan in August.

At a State Capitol news conference, legislators Monday said their constituents are clamoring for more borrowing to pay the providers.

Gorbachev rejects new union of Slavic states

Student programs should continue—officials

By Doug Toole
Politics Writer

The final disintegration of the Soviet Union and the proposed creation of a new alliance of republics is leaving SIU programs and student exchanges with Russia questioning their continued existence.

The future of the student exchange program with the Vladimir Polytechnical Institute is uncertain with the unsettled nature of the area, said John Jackson.

The agreement creating a new union of Slavic states shook the world Sunday, leaving University officials wondering if the republics can pull it off and Soviet leaders praying they don't.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev attempted to preserve the Soviet Union by rejecting the commonwealth's agreement and asserting his role as president of the country Monday.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Gorbachev will probably use political and moral pressure to push the treaty on republics instead of military force.

"I don't think he controls enough force to make (military threats) an issue," he said.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin, Byelorussia's Stanislav Shushkevich, and Ukrainian President-elect Leonid Kravchuk announced they were leaving the USSR to form a free-market alliance.

The proposed Slavic Commonwealth of Independent States would be open to all former Soviet republics and would have a free-market economy, similar to the one used by the European Community. The commonwealth's headquarters would be in Minsk, the capital of Byelorussia, and republics would have joint administration over foreign relations and military policy.

Jackson said the three republics' loose confederation, no longer under Soviet law and government agencies, still has a lot of

Dawgs beat Jaguars 93-84

By Todd Eschman
Sports Writer

The basketball Salukis continued their domination of the Arena floor Monday night and sent the South Alabama Jaguars whistling back to Dixie.

The game changed leads four times before the Dawgs capped off a 93-84 victory and improved their 1991 record to 5-0.

Junior forward Ashraf Amaya led all scorers with 24 points. Freshman Marcus Timmons pitched in 15 points with 11 rebounds.

Marcelo da Silva had 14 points and 11 rebounds. The sophomore center was coming off of his best career performance in the Dawgs' win Saturday night over Austin Peay, where he tallied 16 points and snagged 16 off the boards.

South Alabama pulled to within one point of the lead with just two minutes left in the contest. But the Salukis hit on eight straight free throws to secure the win.

The Dawgs struggled throughout the game from the stripe hitting barely 64 percent. But, they were able to sink it when it counted.

"We made eight straight free throws to end the game," said Saluki head coach Rich Herrin. "That's how you win ball games. We beat a very good team."

South Alabama head coach Ronnie Arrow, whose team fell to 1-3, said he felt secure with the Jaguars' situation after the first half, but his team couldn't make the big play when it needed to.

"To win in a place like this against a team as talented as they are, you have to play to your fullest potential," Arrow said. "I think we did that for three-quarters of the game but we let it slip away. I don't know that we matched up with them physically."

SIUC took the early lead, scoring eight straight points. But South Alabama was able to make a run, and with 3:40 left in the half, the Dawgs found themselves down 35-34. SIUC recaptured the lead before the half 42-41.

The Jaguars jumped on the Salukis in the second half making a 17-6 run, but sophomore guard Chris Lowery said he knew the team would not panic.

"It was a game of streaks," he said. "I knew that we were not that far out of reach."

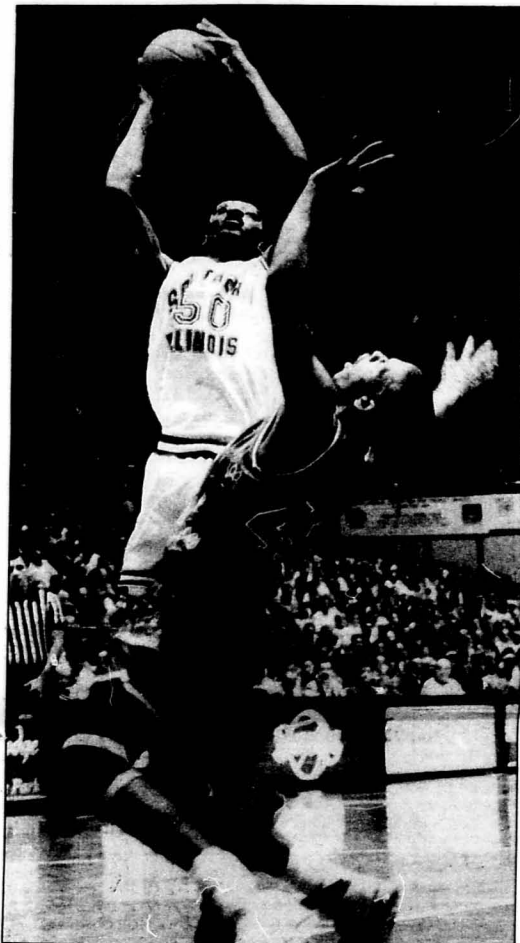

"They had a big streak to start the second half, but we knew we had another one left in us."

SIUC took the lead back with a layup by Timmons at the 9:54 mark making the score 65-63.

The Dawgs opened a 83-76 lead with 2:30 left. Amaya fouled out on a controversial call, and the SIUC bench drew a technical foul. USA's Samuel Hines and Marcus Cohen combined on four straight free throws. Then Cesar Portillo added two more to bring the Jaguars within one.

USA managed just two more points against the Dawgs' eight straight free throws, and the Salukis held—without the services of Amaya, Tyrone Bell and Mirko Pavlovic, who all fouled out.

"It was a team victory," Herrin said. "We lost Amaya, Bell and Pavlovic, and yet the guys were able to come off the bench and finish up for us."

Swim teams to take tests during break

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

The SIUC men's and women's swimming and diving teams finished their seasons on surprisingly high notes, said coach Doug Ingram.

For the first time in a long time the women's swim team finished with a winning 5-4 record at the end of the fall season. The men's team is made up of 75 percent freshmen and sophomores, and Ingram said he was shocked with its 7-2 record.

"The women's team plays a tough schedule every fall," Ingram said. "The losses were to quality schools, Arkansas, Kansas, Purdue and Kentucky. The men were inexperienced at the collegiate level, so it is a surprise that they did so well for themselves."

On Jan. 2, the swimmers will begin practice at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs. Ingram said the center will let coaches test swimmers, physiologically and nutritionally.

"The training center will give us a chance to build back our endurance base," Ingram said. "Our endurance gets eroded with the back-to-back dual meets and the stress of finals. The practice can be a real asset for the team. We have a lot of techniques to work on, and it takes several months."

Ingram said the spring also will challenge the Salukis. The Salukis will travel from the Olympic Training Center to Iowa State when they resume their season Jan. 18. The conference tournament and nationals are also in the spring.

The conference tournament is a depth oriented competition, and where SIUC places will depend on the entire lineup, Ingram said. Eighteen people compete, and the 18th person is just as important as the first person.

SIUC sophomore diver Rob Sircusano and freshman Travis Niemeier have qualified for zones at NCAA. Senior Julia Hosier made NCAA provisional times in the 100 butterfly.

Ingram said he expects several other individuals and relay teams to qualify.

Joyless Joyner to join K.C. for 1-year joyride

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Free agent Wally Joyner, miffed at the California Angels management, bypassed a long-term $16 million deal to sign a one-year, $4.2 million contract Monday with the Kansas City Royals.

Joyner, 29, rejected a four-year, $15.75 million offer from the Angels reportedly because of ill feelings with owner Gene Autry and his wife.

"There may be people who question our sanity for turning down $16 million," agent Barry Axelrod said. "It was a difficult decision but I'm absolutely convinced it was the right one." Joyner, who tearfully answered questions at the news conference, said he did not want to go into details over his dispute with the Angels.

"In my opinion, I didn't see a future with myself or the Angels," Joyner said, pausing often to regain his composure. "Obviously, by signing a one-year deal, it wasn't and never has been a money issue. I think I have a lot of integrity and I think that for me doing this, I'll get a new start, fresh start, an exciting start."

Axelrod said Joyner's contract gives the first baseman the choice to seek arbitration or become a free agent at the end of the 1992 season. Royals general manager Herk Robison confirmed the clause.

Joyner, a left-handed hitter who was the Angels' third-round draft pick in 1983, batted .301 with 21 homers and 96 RBI with the Angels. It was his best average, but in 1987, he showed more power, hitting 34 homers with 117 RBI.

"I'm absolutely thrilled to have an opportunity to play for the Kansas City Royals," Joyner said. "It was probably the toughest decision I've made. I've enjoyed my time with the California Angels. That's where 'Wally World' started."

Management must make moves at meeting—minus major money

Major League winter meetings are under way in Miami Beach, Fla., and many a pro ballplayer is shopping around for a megabuck deal for his Christmas stocking.

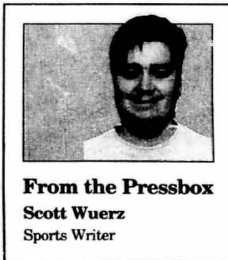

What general manager wouldn't salivate at the prospect of signing Danny Tartabull, Wally Joyner, or Frank Viola, or trading a first-rate utility man for Barry Bonds?

What Major League manager wouldn't beg to spend sleepless night after sleepless night pondering over the best potential batting order?

Before he knows it, the alarm is ringing and the poor soul is calling the GM to make sure Steve Trout won't settle for $9 million over three years.

Baseball fans need an insight to this reality.

Philadelphia catcher Darrea Daulton's lifetime .206 average certainly did not make him worth $2 million a year. Yet the Cubs set a benchmark for mediocrity when they signed Mike Morgan, a career 67-104 pitcher, for $12.5 million over four seasons.

From the Pressbox
Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

What would Stan Musial, Ernie Banks or Ted Williams be worth today? Granted, CBS caused more than a little joy in Mudville in 1989 when it penned a $1 billion contract for the privilege of supplying America with its pastime.

But now fans want to know why ownership hasn't passed on its bounty by strapping themselves to the gills with more than one overpriced Casey.

First and foremost, most baseball ownership is unwilling to commit to a five-year pact for a big-time free agent because their No. 1 source of income—the television package—runs out in 1994.

CBS public relations executive Robin Brendle said CBS Sports, which is in the third year of the four-year TV deal, isn't ready to make a comment on the possibility of renewing its contract—not to mention to talk price.

Without a long-term contract how can baseball owners be sure $5 million will be in the bank when Mr. Bonilla comes to pick up his check in 1995? Or 1996? Or 1997?

If CBS opts not to bid on baseball in 1994 will the other major networks feel the need to offer such big money?

Unfortunately it is too soon to tell, and that's not a good enough answer for the people who sign the paychecks.

Small-market cities such as Seattle, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Montreal already have felt the inflation pinch.

Stress scenario

Students deal with frenzy of finals week.

By Jeremy Finley
General Assignment Writer

Tom Anderson knows he will be drinking a lot of coffee this week.

The junior in electronic management from Quincy said drinking a lot of coffee helps him stay alert during finals week, though it only adds to the stress he feels already.

"I'm definitely feeling stress this week," Anderson said. "I have some really tough tests I'm dealing with."

"I do feel that if you worry about finals too much you won't do very well on the tests," he said. "I have been studying pretty intensely though."

Rob Sepich, coordinator for stress management for the Wellness Center, said counselors at the center have seen a lot of students in the last two or three weeks with stress related problems.

"We see students with stress all through the semester because of financial and emotional problems, but it seems we get more students with stress this time of year," Sepich said.

Stress can cause stomachaches that lead to ulcers, as well as heart disease, he said.

"Stress can be dangerous because students with stress are more prone to be in car accidents, because their minds are on other things and they forget to buckle their seat belts," Sepich said.

Because of stress, many students neglect their health by not eating right and not getting enough sleep, said Fran Holly, acting director of nursing for the Student Health Program.

Though stress can build up during finals week, there are ways to control it, Sepich said.

Handling stress means exercising regularly, having a good diet, having emotional support from friends, and thinking positively, he said.

Students selected to steer DE for spring semester

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Two SIUC seniors have been chosen to oversee the creation and production of the University's campus newspaper for the 1992 spring semester.

Jackie Spinner, a senior journalism student from Decatur, and Bob Barich, a senior in business economics from Milwaukee will take their positions at the Daily Egyptian in January.

Spinner, who has been employed at the Daily Egyptian since her freshman year, will retain her position as student editor-in-chief for a second semester. This is the first time since the 1940s that a person has been chosen to be student editor two times in a row.

Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism and head of the policy and review board that selected Spinner, said she is an outstanding example of a student editor.

"She is extremely hard-working and an excellent model for students in terms of her ability to balance her academic obligations with her journalism activities," he said.

Jaehnig said Spinner is a rare example because she started working with the DE at such a young age.

"It was a unique situation that Jackie came to the DE as a freshman and has been a major contributor ever since," he said.

Spinner said she would like to make the spring semester an extension of the improvements the staff has made this semester.

By the end of the spring semester Spinner hopes the staff will be covering all aspects of the community in a more in-depth and insightful manner.

"Our readers can expect in-depth, investigative coverage of the administration and other SIUC leaders and their role in our despicable financial situation," she said.

Barich, who has worked at the Daily Egyptian for three years, will be the student advertising manager for the spring semester.

Barich said the working atmosphere and co-workers are what he likes most about his job.

"They (the bosses) give us a lot of room to be our own boss," he said.

Barich was required to submit three letters of recommendation and sit through an interview session before being elected student ad manager.

Seeing how the DE advertising department has worked under three to four different ad managers has given him extra experience, Barich said.

"I think having management background will help me in my new position," he said. "I think I have a pretty good feel for how the advertising department works."

SIUC must consider fair share tuition hike

SIUC KEEPS HOPING TO FIND A POT of gold at the end of the rainbow, but in the meantime it is looking to students to solve its financial problems.

In the newly proposed 21st Century Plan, an innovative tuition increase is proposed to help raise additional income.

Part of the proposal suggests differential tuition by colleges, depending upon their instructional costs.

This would mean that a student wanting to obtain a degree in, say, engineering would have to pay more tuition than a student getting a degree in English.

The notion behind this is that students are now subsidizing other students' education.

It costs more for engineering faculty, materials and equipment than it does for English faculty, materials and equipment, therefore, administrators say students' tuition should reflect the costs of getting a degree.

WHY NOT JUST MAKE A STUDENT'S tuition reflect his earning potential? If that were the case, law students and medical students would be paying a lot more than they are now.

That of course would be ridiculous. The cost of an education should be uniform in an institution. If students want more expensive educations they can attend more expensive universities.

There are many dangers involved in differentiating tuition by colleges. Some colleges could be tempted to inflate costs, for this might indicate prestige.

Also, colleges might pay above market rates for faculty to get them to come to SIUC or possibly buy materials or equipment for departments that are not necessary.

Another problem that could arise would be even greater inequitable salary scales. If a department could afford to pay more to get faculty than another, the differences in salary for equal positions could be astronomical.

ALL THESE ADDITIONAL COSTS would be incurred by students. The University is looking in the wrong place. It should be looking to the State to continue to provide assistance. The state provides 74.2 percent of the Universities' revenue. Only 25.8 percent comes from tuition.

The University would have to raise students' tuition dramatically to get it to account for even 50 percent of the revenue.

Another suggestion made in the plan is to raise tuition for juniors and seniors because major courses are usually more expensive to offer than GE courses are.

This idea makes sense and probably is warranted, but it might be better to charge a fee per credit hour for those courses required for a major.

The fee could be assessed by the department and would reflect the more expensive courses while guaranteeing smaller and more individualized courses.

ANOTHER SUGGESTION IS TO charge for all credit hours taken. Currently, students are not charged for any credit hours over 12.

This is a fair and uniform way to gain revenue for the University. It does not discriminate and students are left with the choice of how many hours to take.

The need for more revenue is definitely a problem that the University needs to address.

But in doing so, it should keep in mind that the burden should not be placed solely upon the students and in cases where it is, the burden should be fair, uniform and equally distributed.

Letters to the Editor

Americans should remember POWs, continue efforts to bring them home

Recently the newspapers, television and radio have carried many reports about our servicemen, such as Navy Lt. Daniel V. Borah from Olney, left behind in Southeast Asia. They are our prisoners of war and missing in action.

Many families and loved ones are told when they ask about these men that they are presumed dead and that no effort is being spared to obtain an accounting. However when they ask to see their men's files, they often find that the files are classified. Even Congress has limited or no access.

But the horrible fact is that these files are routinely entrusted to the Vietnamese regime that continues to imprison our men.

How many men are we talking about? Recent and ongoing investigations reveal that:

■ After World War II, as many as 20,000 U.S. soldiers never came back from POW camps. The Red Army got them.

■ U.S. government documents state that after the Korean War, nearly 1,000 known captive U.S. POWs—and an undetermined number of some 8,000 MIAs—were not returned.

■ Only 591 U.S. POWs were released by the North Vietnamese during Operation HOME-COMING, which is only 12 percent of the 5,000 U.S. POWs held by the North Vietnamese as reported by the New York Times. There is some evidence that a number of these men were turned over to the Soviet Union.

■ Although the Pathet Lao publicly admitted to holding U.S. POWs in Laos, the U.S. government abandoned any attempt to bring them back home.

These are shocking facts. Your readers can get all the above mentioned official information and much more by writing the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in Washington, D.C.

I also urge each reader to get the petition entitled "BRING THEM HOME!—Don't Forget Our POW/MIAs."

I'll be glad to send a copy to anyone who sends a self-addressed stamped envelope to me at Route 1, Box 210, Kansas, Ill. 61933. It then can be photocopied.

Let's flood our politicians in Washington with these petitions and do our part to BRING THEM HOME!—Bruce Taber, Kansas, Ill.

Pearl teaches lesson of war

Over the past week, everyone has been reading, hearing and seeing the news about the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Everyone also has been hearing about the lesson to be learned from the bombing.

In the eye of the American public, this lesson seems to be: "Be aware! Do not be caught off guard!"

HEY! WAKE UP FOLKS! That's not the lesson to be learned. What should be learned from Pearl Harbor is that war is horrifying.

A Pearl Harbor veteran told about hearing people who were trapped below the waterline in the bombed-out hulk of the U.S.S. Arizona. Those young Americans were never rescued and died horribly after a month of being trapped. This is the kind of thing that happens in a war. Who knows how many others died just as or more horribly over the entire course of World War II.

The bombing of Pearl Harbor ultimately led to the only wartime use ever of atomic weapons. The casualties and destruction that was wrought upon Japan was beyond comprehension. It matters not that they were the enemy. They were people, as were the soldiers at Pearl.

Today, Japan has retaliated in a different manner. Many Americans complain about the Japanese taking over American business. Yeah, well, who created that economic and industrial juggernaut? Who destroyed them militarily, leaving only the option of economic power?

I am not trying to lessen the importance or terrible aspects of Pearl Harbor. I am simply trying to put it into perspective, something that today's world seems to lack.

Do not forget Pearl Harbor, do not forget the Nazi Death Camps, do not forget Hiroshima and Nagasaki, lest they happen again.—Joe Torrence, freshman in art.

Respect for others should disregard color differences

During my first visit to SIUC, I was amazed by not only its size but its beauty, as well. It was not until I got back to Eastern that I realized that not once had I seen colored people.

After asking a friend who goes to Southern, he told me that blacks and whites usually don't associate. Since the majority of my friends are black, this really surprised me. Not only have I seen incidents of segregation at Southern, but I've heard about them as well.

Being Hispanic, I know what it is like to be left out, or poked fun at. People should see others for who they are and not what they are. Whether a person is black, white, Hispanic or Chinese, he or she should be respected for their mind and not their color.

My question is not solely directed to Southern, but everywhere. Why is there segregation, and how can people feel the need to discriminate color creed? Knowing that no one person is better than another, there should be no reason for racism.—Thomas Garcia, freshman, Eastern Illinois University.

details which need to be ironed out. The borders between the commonwealth's republics may be tightly or loosely monitored, requiring either multiple passports for travel between republics or a single passport from the central government to visit anywhere, he said.

Members of the Soviet armed forces serving in the proposed Commonwealth of Independent States who are from other countries will have to decide what to do now that these republics have broken away from the USSR and are forming their own military. "Do they just pack up and go home?" Jackson asked, wondering if Soviet soldiers who remain and serve along with the military of the commonwealth will become commonwealth soldiers.

Linz Brown, associate director of International Programs and Services who visited Moscow in October 1989, said the key to the new union's survival is maintaining economic ties between republics, despite each republic's desire for independence and nationalistic pride.

In the past, republics have been extremely specialized in the production of consumer goods. This three-republic alliance shows that even Russia needs help to meet all its needs, Brown said.

Many Russians feel democracy is a problem, he said. They equate the new political freedom with the unstable economic system they are experiencing. Democracy is a change, and changes have only brought them more hardships, he said.

"It's hard to think about democracy when you're hungry," Brown said.

For all its problems, Soviets knew what to expect from communism—how long the lines would be at the stores and how secure their jobs were, he said.

Brown said he hopes the new leaders can make economic changes fast enough to keep the people happy. If not, the old leaders may be voted back into power.

"I'd hate to see them vote against democracy before they give it a chance to help them," he said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday the administration would work with whatever government emerges from the dissolution of the Soviet Union.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said it is not necessarily pushing to have all nuclear weapons transferred to the Russian Republic.

"We support a single, unified control over the nuclear weapons in the Soviet Union wherever they are," she said. "We do not want to see a proliferation of independent nuclear states."

The USSR was created on Dec. 30, 1922 when Russia, the Ukraine and Byelorussia signed a treaty forming a confederation with Azerbaijan, Armenia and Georgia. The confederation was based on the economic system of communism, where workers labor for the government and the government distributes goods to the people, and expanded into other Asian countries until the end of World War II.

where it has to look at each department.

"There is no money appropriated for salary increases, so it is a question of internally reallocating funds," he said. "There has to be some review of departmental priorities."

The University has deferred maintenance, cut equipment purchases and travel expenses, and now is leaving vacant positions unfilled.

"This is a painful process," Capie said.

In the event of a rescission, Capie said a salary increase would be difficult.

"I would be surprised if it was considered," he said. "It is self-defeating."

No funds for new programs and library materials also was recommended.

Melone said the budget committee has exempted the library from reallocating its budget because it has been hit hard in the past.

SIUC President John C. Guyon said no concrete decisions will be made soon.

"This is all purely speculative," he said. "We are not making any decisions until January."

Salary increases are not the only area the budget committee is trying to raise money for, Melone said.

The committee is looking for ways to raise money for possible emergency problems that develop throughout the year, such as laboratory problems and equipment failure.

in until the community can respond from their own resources."

Costs for direct relief to storm victims have risen to more than $94,210, all of which came from donations.

"Money is never a question," she said. "We do our job no matter how much money a community raises."

Contributions are still being accepted and should be earmarked "Disaster Relief Fund" and sent to the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 159, Marion, IL 62959.

Insurance claims are also nearly completed as local agents are working to help their clients.

State Farm Agent Bob Wargel said all claims have been inspected and 98 percent have been paid.

Dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The institute is located in Russia, which Jackson called "the most stable of the republics," and is about 110 miles from the airport in Moscow. Even with the political upheavals there, SIUC students who have finished their study in Russia probably will return home on schedule with a minimum of travel and customs problems, he said.

"It was an historic time to be over there," Jackson said. "They should have some stories to tell."

Six University students traveled to Vladimir for a semester of study Sept. 29.

Charles Klasek, executive assistant to the President for International and Economic Development, said he is not aware of any substantial changes in plans for an SIU business program in Moscow.

The program, in which SIUE professors would instruct mid-level

Wargel said the recovery process is coming along well with debris pretty much cleaned up and repairs in progress.

The area struck by the storm has been declared a federal disaster area, making more aid available.

The declaration makes physical and economical injury disaster loans available to homeowners and business operators. The loans are either 4 percent or 8 percent depending on whether other credit is available.

Although Marion is on the way to recovery, Gergen said the entire situation has been emotional.

"I don't care how often you do this. To come in and see what happens to people, your heart aches," she said.

Russian business leaders who run enterprises once controlled by the state are not used to competitive markets.

Russian management in free market strategies, has been negotiated with Russia, not the Soviet Union, he said.

The school is sending their proposal to the Russian group soon and expects a response by the end of the year, Klasek said. Russian business leaders who run enterprises once controlled by the state are not used to competitive markets.

"There are thousands and thousands of people who need this training," Klasek said.

New Trekkie film blasts off big at box office

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Paramount's "Star Trek VI: the Undiscovered Country" lifted off with a stellar gross of about $18 million to lead the box office handily during the weekend, according to early estimates.

The strong performance, fueled by solid reviews and legions of fans, was the best opening for a "Star Trek" movie, topping the previous $17.4 million debut of "Star Trek V," which opened with $17.4 million in the summer of 1989.

"Star Trek VI" will face tough competition this weekend from three big-budget openings: Tri-Star's Steven Spielberg extravaganza "Hook," which opens Wednesday; Warner Bros. Bruce Willis actioner

"The Last Boy Scout," opening Friday; and Tri-Star's gangster drama "Bugsy," which opens Friday.

"Hook," with a price tag of $80 million and the star power of Dustin Hoffman, Robin Williams and Julia Roberts, will probably be the biggest movie of the Christmas season. Analysts have estimated the film needs to gross $140 million domestically for the studio to break even.

Paramount's "The Addams Family," which spent the two previous weekends at No. 1, continued to scare up solid business in second place with an estimated $9 million during the weekend. That should bring its 17-day total to close to $70 million, giving it a good shot at topping $100 million.

Still, viewership for "The Addams Family" dropped off sharply from the previous weekend, when it became only the fifth movie to gross more than $20 million in its second weekend.

Columbia's Macaulay Culkin film "My Girl" dropped from second to third with a still-strong estimated $7 million in its second weekend, giving it a 12-day total of close to $30 million.

Disney also kept racking up impressive results with an estimated $6.5 million over the weekend for its animated "Beauty and the Beast," which finished in fourth. Its three-week gross is nearly $40 million and could eventually top the record for first-release gross for an animated film.

FCC rules crackdown on '900' number lines

MUNCIE, Ind. (UPI) — The "900" number pay-per-call industry may be on the ropes because of new regulations by the federal government, but it is far from dead, say representatives of the Consumer Education Council at Ball State University.

"Party" or "talk" lines featuring conversations with women and offers of "secured" credit cards will continue despite recent decisions by the Federal Communications Commission and telephone industry, said Catherine Howard, director of the Consumer Education Council.

"It won't put them out of business," Howard said. "There is a lot of money to be made in phone scams. These people will find new ways to prey on people."

"Anyone can be a victim of the 900 numbers," she said. "They offer lonely people a chance to talk to pretty girls or give people with bad credit the chance to get credit cards."

The pay-per-call industry began growing in the mid-1980s as companies offered various types of conversation lines. The charges are often expensive, ranging from less than a dollar to $40 per minute.

These firms advertised their services with commercials on late night television, when the rates are the cheapest, said Bill Bradford, CEC advertising review manager.

"From the consumers' standpoint, it is very attractive to talk to pretty girls over the phone that you might never meet in person," Bradford said. "For some people, the telephone is the only form of communication they have."

The downfall of the illicit pay-per-call industry began in the late 1980s when thousands of parents received large phone bills because of the time their children spent on the telephone, Bradford said.

"Parents began complaining to the phone companies because their kids were calling sex or game lines," he said. "The phone companies also were being hurt because many pay-per-call firms did not pay their bills."

Earlier this year, Telesphere and Sprint Telemedia, two large multi-state telephone carriers, dropped the 900 lines and stopped collections on most 900 services. The firms cited the problem of not getting paid.

"I think we'll see more regulations by the federal government to cut down on the scams," Howard said. "However, 900 lines are being used by legitimate firms, and they are the ones being hurt by this negative publicity."

First lady unveils holiday trappings for White House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — First lady Barbara Bush ran out of superlatives when she unveiled the Christmas decorations at the White House Monday, calling them "spectacular, beautiful and exciting."

Mrs. Bush, in keeping with the yuletide season, wore a red and white striped jacket, a red skirt and her trademark pearls, as she led members of the media on a tour of the White House decorations.

The show-stopper was the 18-foot tree in the Blue Room decorated with 1,370 needlepoint ornaments, including a portrayal of Mrs. Bush as an angel with pearls.

The needlepoint decorations were sewn over the last two years by Mrs. Bush, her staff, other employees, contributors from around the country and particularly the first lady's friends in Houston.

Sterling reputation important in woman's jewelry business

By Fatima Janvekar
General Assignment Writer

Shasi Gupta enjoys being called a businesswoman.

Her own home-based jewelry business took off last May and says she has not looked back since.

"I like wearing jewelry. Actually, it's not really fair to say that because most women like jewelry. But for me, it has been a fascination since childhood," Gupta said.

Coming from a business family in India, Gupta said she had background to help her with her business.

"I had been thinking of starting my own business for the past five years, and my family believed that to work for oneself was better than working for someone else. So when I finally decided to go for it, they were all backing me," she said.

"The jewelry I buy comes from outside wholesalers, and I sell it to local retailers in the Southern Illinois and the southeast Missouri area," Gupta said. She buys and sells precious stones ranging from rubies and emeralds to American diamonds.

"This sort of business is basically built on trust. The jewelers and retailers here have to have confidence in me—that I am trustworthy. I supply to stores within a 100 mile radius in Carbondale, Murphysboro and Marion," she said.

Besides precious gems, Gupta keeps Japanese freshwater, cultured pearls, which she buys through a direct source.

"I also have semi-precious and colored stones such as amethyst, jade and haematite," she said.

"I know that what I am buying is authentic because I am familiar with these stones because I undertook training in jewelry appraisal in Calcutta this summer," Gupta said.

Such training is not normally offered, but she has learned about the quality of such stones because of family contacts.

"This sort of business is basically built on trust. The jewelers and retailers here have to have confidence in me—that I am trustworthy."

—Shasi Gupta

"A person's contacts are invaluable in this and any other business," she said. "If a person is in a sort of confusion about the value of these stones, there are machines which can weigh them and determine their authenticity."

"Generally, their value is easily deductible, but I hope to buy one of these machines for my business later on," she said.

Gupta said she was content with the way her jewelry business was pushing forward.

"It's working toward my goal," she said, adding, "It is working the way I thought it should have. To build a business, you need at least two to three years, so I still have time."

"The jewelers, I feel have been happy with my work. In the future, I plan to have my own office which I can work out of and take orders there," she said.

Gupta considers a unique aspect of her work to be the fact that her contacts are surprised to find a woman being the middleman between jewelry wholesalers and retailers, but so far, she has been happy with the response.

"I want to give encouragement to other women, and that should give them a good opportunity too," she said.

The University's Art and Crafts center also is one of Gupta customers.

Her daughter and son are "all very excited" about their mother's work.

"My daughter sometimes helps me create ads for my jewelry," she said.

"I enjoy real jewelry, not imitation. Besides, I put very reasonable prices on my items, and people are often surprised to get the real thing at such a low price."

"There are enough imitation accessories available at Wal-mart and K mart, and I don't think I can compete with that. If I find there is demand in the future, I might expand into international jewelry, where I buy unique items not sold locally," she explained.

"Business development courses have also helped in my work," Gupta added. She took self employment training, leadership development and "nuts and bolts in business" courses offered by the Southern Illinois Small Business Incubator.

Gupta said she learned a lot while taking the courses about the sort of things you should be aware of, in order to prepare you to start your own enterprise.

The courses emphasized the setting up of a business plan.

"If you want to succeed, a business plan is important to help you realize the basics you want to start with. It also teaches you what is legal in a business, and what is illegal, so you won't get in trouble for something you didn't know about," Gupta said.

One of the problems she has faced in her work is the task of traveling from place to place to show jewelers her gems.

"I don't like to travel to make a sale, but I have to get used to it," she said. "Maybe, in a couple of years, when I develop more contacts, it will not be so difficult."

Gupta has been living in the United States for the last 17 years, and plans to run her business as long as she is able.

Political flight 11 years ago brought Hungarian music teacher to SIUC

By Maurice Reidelberger
Student Writer

In August 1980, two months after being married, Michael Barta and his wife packed their suitcases to leave Hungary for a three-day stay in Athens, Greece.

As his wife left the apartment, she remembered to turn out the lights and lock the door, and then the couple started a trip that would leave clothes, furniture and personal possessions behind forever.

Greece was only a cover for their destination. Barta, who is an associate professor of music at SIUC today, was actually seeking political asylum, a quest he and his wife would take from Hungary through Yugoslavia, Austria and Italy before reaching the United States.

The Communist Party of Hungary at the time was in the process of removing Barta from a teaching position and assigned him to the symphony in Budapest.

"My troubles with the government began about a year before we left," Barta said. "At about the same time that I realized we couldn't fight the government and win, my booking agency in Hungary scheduled a performance for me in Athens, Greece."

The engagement in Greece allowed the Barta a 30-day travel visa.

When the Barta left Hungary they crossed into Yugoslavia, they went to Austria instead of directly crossing the border between Hungary and Austria.

"The reason behind this," Barta said, "was that, if we tried to cross directly into Austria, the Hungarian border guards might question where we were going. Since Yugoslavia is on the way to Greece, there would be no problems for us crossing the border there. The Yugoslavian border guards between Austria and Yugoslavia would see that we were Hungarians with 30-day travel visas, and we could be as quick to check our destination because of our nationality."

Once in Austria, the Barta were free from Hungarian jurisdiction.

They went to the American embassy in Vienna and asked for political asylum.

"We stayed in Vienna two days," Barta said. "Then we were transferred by the American officials to the embassy in Rome."

In Rome, the Barta stayed for two months while the American government checked their motives for leaving Hungary.

"We enjoyed our stay in Rome," Barta said. "The American officials put us in an apartment and paid some of the expenses while we got to see the sights of Rome."

When it was established that the Barta were not spies or criminals, they were sent to New York City where friends from Philadelphia met them at the airport.

The Barta moved to Michigan where Michael taught music at a small Michigan university. The couple stayed there two years before Barta accepted a teaching position at SIUC.

He and his wife moved to Southern Illinois in 1984 and live in Murphysboro.

Roads in future will be garbage, says professor

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — In a few years, people may be driving their cars on roads made out of things they once threw away, according to a Purdue University professor.

C. William Lovell, professor of civil engineering, is studying how materials such as rubber tires, asphalt, coal-combustion ashes, foundry sands, battery casings and products from demolished buildings including concrete, brick, steel, glass and wood can build roads instead of fill up landfills.

"We use three criteria to test a potential substance for road construction," he said. "Is it effective, environmentally safe and economical?"

The study stems from legislation passed last spring by the Indiana General Assembly that requires the Indiana Department of Transportation to study certain waste materials as potential ingredients for road construction. The department and Purdue's School of Civil Engineering are collaborating on the project, for which Lovell is coordinator.

Some waste products such as coal ash, have been used before, while others such as rubber tires are a newer idea for road purposes, Lovell says.

The Rubber Manufacturers Association estimates that between 200 million to 250 million worn-out car tires are discarded each year. Lovell cites Indiana Department of Environmental Management statistics showing that more than 11.5 million tons of waste tires are stockpiled in Indiana.

Retired secondary education prof dies

Obituary

A long-time SIUC faculty member, who served for 20 years as the chairman of the Secondary Education Department and wrote two college textbooks, has died.

Clarence Samford, an SIUC Emeritus professor, died at Urbana Covenant Hospital on Oct. 20 of a massive heart attack. Samford, 86, retired from SIUC in 1970. "Clarence did a great deal of work to involve students," said Victor Randolph, who co-authored a college textbook on how to teach secondary social studies with Samford. "He was very dedicated. He would go beyond his duty to help students beyond classroom hours."

Samford earned degrees at SIUC, University of Michigan and New York University. Besides teaching at SIUC, he taught at the University of Wyoming and in Ohio.

The college textbooks "Social Studies in Secondary Education," written by Samford, and "Teaching Elementary Social Studies," by Randolph and Samford are included in Samford's work as well as numerous articles. Samford was an active member of Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi and the National Council for the Social Studies and other organizations. He also was a member of the Christian Church and the Masonic Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, Grace Prestin Samford and four sons: Lynn, Lester, Lloyd and John and many grandchildren, great-grandchildren and a brother, Arthur.

Samford was buried at the Maple Hill Cemetery in Fairfield.

Dallas' No. 2 daily dies after 112 years service

DALLAS (UPI) — The $55 million purchase of the Dallas Times Herald's assets leaves unanswered how much money creditors of the 112-year-old newspaper, which printed its last issue Monday, will receive.

"The important thing to understand is that (purchaser) A.H. Belo did not buy the Times Herald company," said David Johnson, analyst at Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in Dallas.

"The Times Herald ceased publication today (Monday)," Johnson said. "It approached more than 100 potential investors or buyers of the newspapers and the effort was unsuccessful and so they folded the tent. In a separate transaction, Belo went in there and made an offer: for what they wanted. Belo did not buy Herald's debt or any of their contracts such as with syndicates, columnists etc."

A spokesman for the Times Herald declined to discuss the details of the newspaper's debts or how much each of the major creditors is owed.

In announcing the sale, Times Herald publisher John Buzzeta said Sunday the $55 million paid by Belo—which owns the rival Dallas Morning News—should cover an agreement he has reached with creditors. In addition to the purchase price, Belo will also pay the Times Herald $1.5 million to settle a pending lawsuit.

The newspaper, in a statement, said it "does not anticipate a bankruptcy filing and that it expects to pay all its suppliers."

The assets included Time Herald's presses and miscellaneous equipment, land and building and the newspaper's subscription list. Belo has no immediate plans for the Times Herald building or its contents in downtown Dallas.

Of the assets, the subscription list is the most immediate gain for Belo, because of the boost it will give to the circulation of the Morning News, which now becomes the only major Dallas newspaper.

The Morning News will also see its advertising revenue go up significantly as a result of increased circulation, experts agreed Monday.

"This is a shot in the arm for the news," Johnson said.

But Richard Wells, chairman of the journalism department at the University of North Texas, said the Morning News is also taking on added responsibility as the only major newspaper in Dallas.

"It is frightening to think that we are now becoming a one-newspaper town," Wells said. "The Morning News has just gained a whole lot of advertisement and readers. But they also have gained a tremendous responsibility."

Last U.S. hostage planning to return to New York today

BONN, Germany (UPI) — Journalist Terry Anderson, who was the last U. S. hostage in Lebanon and the one held the longest, will head back to New York today after spending five days at the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, a spokesman said.

Anderson, 44, was scheduled to board a commercial flight from Frankfurt to New York, the spokesman for the hostage repatriation team said.

Anderson, of the Associated Press, said earlier he had difficulty getting used to life as a free man after spending almost seven years in captivity, often chained to the wall of a basement cell.

Like other U.S. hostages before him, Anderson underwent a series of medical tests and intelligence debriefings at the medical center, where he jogged in the mornings.

He was kidnapped in Beirut March 16, 1985, and released Wednesday night, the third American to be freed in as many days.

Meanwhile, a German government spokesman rejected reports that Bonn would swap two Shiite extremists jailed in Germany for two Germans believed held in Beirut—the last western hostages.

He declined to give any details of efforts to obtain the release of the hostages. Thomas Kempfner and Heinrich Struebig, who were captured in May 1989.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 29¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be mis-classified.

Women netters No. 8 in region

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's tennis team is one of two teams in the Ga.-way Conference named in the top 15 in the Midwest Region.

SIUC was ranked 14th and Drake University is eighth in a poll released Monday. Indiana University was No. 1. SIUC was consistently in the rankings for the past three years, but usually the team was no higher than 15th. Coach Judy Auld said the ranking speaks well for the program at SIUC.

"When you look at the other schools, they are larger and have more money in their programs," Auld said. "Seven of the eight Big 10 schools are in the rankings: Miami of Ohio (seventh) and Drake are private schools."

Auld said the spring polls may place SIUC higher.

"The rankings are based on the fall and considering we played the fall without (junior) Lori Gallagher," she said. "I think it speaks good for the team."

The Salukis compete against three ranked teams in the spring. They will play 15th ranked Marquette Feb. 29 and Drake March 1 in Marquette's invitational.

PRESSBOX, from Page 16

Pittsburgh stands to lose the heart of its National League East champions of 1990 and '91 in a budget-cutting fire sale in the wake of Bonilla's departure.

The Pirates were unable to match the Mets' long-term deal for Bonilla. Third sacker Steve Buechele is being wooed by the Yankees, and Bonds is on the trading block because the Bucs don't have the bucks to cover his 1992 salary.

Tartabull and Mark Langston were set to take the first redeye out of Seattle before they were traded away grudgingly by the Mariners.

Tartabull went to Kansas City for the forgettable Mike Kingery and Scott Bankhead. Langston was dealt to Montreal, where he barely had time to unpack before defecting to California for big money.

The upward spiral of inflation is causing a baseball version of natural selection: Only the strong—and the smart—will survive.

Fans need to remember the free agent market is only one of the talent-gathering tools at a general manager's disposal.

The Cardinals and Cubs have two of the most fruitful farm systems in the major leagues.

Mark Grace, Jerome Walton, Greg Maddux, and Rick Wilkins rode the Iowa express to Chicago. Todd Zeile, Ray Lankford, Tom Pagnozzi, Todd Worrell and Joe Magrane found the road to the majors went through Louisville.

The Cardinals found stars such as Jack Clark, Tony Pena and Felix Jose through trades, while the Cubs' 1984 NL East championship team received a heart transplant from Philadelphia.

True baseball fans know good things come to those who wait. That's why nearly three million people came through Busch Stadium's turnstiles in a last place 1990 season, and you're not a true Cub fan if you haven't felt the cold September wind at Wrigley Field while the Cubs, 23 games out of first, are losing 13-1 to Montreal.

Everyone wants to see a team of All-Stars take the home field every night, but there's only so much money. Baseball is a business.

The Tribune Corporation didn't buy the Cubs because Wrigley Field is a fine place to display its advertising. Anheuser-Busch doesn't plan to water down its profits by taking a bath in Cardinal red ink.

If baseball salaries aren't brought under control in the near future fans will be the ones who pay the price.

Ownership needs to follow the lead of the National Basketball Association and develop a salary cap system or clear August evenings at the ballpark will be a fond memory.

IF YOU COULD USE $18,000+ FOR COLLEGE TALK TO US FIRST.

The Army Reserve Alternate Training Program can help you earn a nice chunk of college money for a small amount of your time. Here's how it works.

You take Basic Training one summer. Then you complete skill training at an Army school during the next summer. You'll earn over $1,250 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll train with your Army Reserve unit near your college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. During a standard enlistment, you'll earn over $13,000.

Now add on $5,040 if you qualify for the Montgomery GI Bill. That adds up to more than $18,000. Plus you can even get money to repay college loans.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Revive with VIVARIN.
