Students before status, speaker says

By Tom Mangan

Colleges and universities need to develop their students' talents and abilities while building reputations and expanding research facilities, a prominent higher education researcher says.

Alexander W. Astin, director of the Higher Education Research Institute, University of California-Los Angeles, raised a few eyebrows Thursday when he told a faculty-dominated audience at the Student Center that lofty reputations and expanding research facilities are not necessarily effective indicators of a college's ability to encourage students' development.

Astin said an alternative to the typical reputation-resource appraisal of quality is to measure how much improvement a student shows while at a college. He said student involvement, high expectations and access to social networks will lead to better development of students' skills. Reputations and research resources do not address the issue.

Astin said educators need to realize that students' time is finite and that they need to be encouraged to devote more time and energy to studies. If instructors are accessible to students and show an interest in the students' academic advancement, he said, the students will feel more actively involved in their own education.

Students often complain to their instructors about being worked too hard. Astin said, but this should not deter instructors from holding high standards for students.

Balliers decry U.S. policies

By Tom Atkins

The Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing bill is one good reason among many for Congress not to provide aid for the contras in Nicaragua, said Bill Garner, professor of political science, during a demonstration Friday.

Garner, one of five who spoke to about 60 demonstrators in the Woody Hall courtyard, said a "moral bankruptcy," was corroded U.S. definitions of national interest.

"We never is perceived to be our national interest is perceived to be moral," he said.

The demonstration was sponsored by the Southern Illinois Latin American Solidarity Committee.

Garner said U.S. policy is forcing Nicaragua "into the arms of the Soviets." National solidarity under the Sandinistas does not pose a threat to U.S. security, he said, and shouldn't be interfered with.

Garner also said the Soviets will be able to establish military bases in Nicaragua because of peace in that country.

The United States also pursues policies of injustice in Haiti, Costa Rica, Argentina, and El Salvador, Garner said.

The Reagan Administration fails to see how funding the contras, the also Southern, rebels in Nicaragua, parallels terrorist actions, Garner said. When the United States defends its policy of using force to prevent terrorism worldwide, he said, it condones the Sandinistas for defending Nicaragua from the terrorism of the contras.

Other speakers at the demonstration came out strongly against apartheid in South Africa. "No matter how you look at it, it be your blind," Garner said of apartheid." It be clear — vile, vicious, repugnant, disgusting, dirty, filthy, nasty and a sin in the eyes of God," said Kevin Valentine, member of People Living the Dream, a local anti-apartheid group.

President Reagan should "stop living in a bubble" and realize that his policy of "constructive engagement," has not helped the plight of oppressed blacks in South Africa's minority-rulled white government, Valentine said.

After the group marched to the Air Force ROTC building on campus, political science professor Keith Snavely criticized U.S. political policies in Latin America. "It is a policy based on justice or greed, it is not one of selflessness," he said.

The Reagan Administration perceives self-interest for the United States as being interested in Latin America, Snavely said, and has neglected to stand for democracy, he said.

President Reagan should hold dear "Reagan is not at all concerned for democracy in Nicaragua," he said.

As the rally prepared to break up, Georgeann Hartzog, member of SLASC, asked the group to stay and thinking about "what you're prepared to do" if Congress approves continued aid to the contras. Hartzog said about 300 people locally — 5,000 operators in San Francisco — had signed a "Pledge of Resistance" promising to engage in a purely professional protest and civil disobedience of U.S. support for the contras.

A national international of Action observers said its investigation showed the presidential race was ripe with fraud and cheating.

We are scared and we don't know what to do next," one of the 29 computer operators after walking out of the government Commission on Elections, known as Comelec, with less than 30 percent of the estimated 22 million votes tabulated.

"We just felt we had to do something," the operator said as several of them wept after taking refuge in a nearby church.

The Comelec tally was halted shortly after the walkout. Comelec said about 29.5 percent of the precincts gave Marcos 3,056,236 votes, or 53.7 percent, against 4,806,166 votes, or 46.3 percent, for Marcos.

We have walked out for purely professional reasons," a spokesperson for the computer operators said.

"At the beginning of the job we were made to believe that this was going to be a professional job," she said. "Now we feel that we have been used."

The operators said they realized late Saturday that some of the figures they were punching into their consoles were not being posted on the tally board.

Philippine election results manipulated, counters say

MANILA. Philippines (UPI) - Government computer operators took long results in the chaotic Philippine presidential election charged Sunday that vote totals were being manipulated and walked off the job, calling the vote count.

A member of a U.S. team of observers appointed by President Reagan called the operators' charges "shaming" and said he did not see how a winner could be declared under the circumstances.

More than two days after the polls closed, President Ferdinand Marcos and challenger Benigno Aquino substantially locked in a neck-and-neck battle, each ahead in one key region and both far behind in others.

An international group of Action observers said its investigation showed the Movement for Free Elections, called Namfrel, an independent citizens group conducting its own tabulation, reported that Aquino was ahead with 3,376,319 votes, or 53.7 percent, against 4,006,166 votes, or 46.3 percent, for Marcos.

"We have walked out for purely professional reasons," a spokesperson for the computer operator said.

"At the beginning of the job we were made to believe that this was going to be a professional job," she said. "Now we feel that we have been used."

The operators said they realized late Saturday that some of the figures they were punching into their consoles were not being posted on the tally board.

"Color Purple" called myth debunker

By Sandra Todd

Alice Walker's novel "The Color Purple" dispels myths and stereotypes that have historically been attached to black women, according to a recent conference. Maria Mootry, assistant professor in social work, said during a discussion Friday.

Many facets and stereotypes of the Pulitzer prize winning book and its film adaptation were analyzed at the informal discussion which was moderated by Shirlene Holmes, performer and SIUC speech communications instructor, and held at the Eunice Hayes Center.

"We didn't come here for answers tonight," Holmes told the nearly 30 people who gathered at the center. "We came to think, talk and share what happened to us, as we experienced the story."

"The Color Purple" is about the sexual, physical and psychological abuse through the love and support of the women in her life. After Holmes' introductory comments, Mootry discussed the stereotypes she said black women have had to deal with in the past 20 years. "Black women have long been subjected to stereotypes," Mootry said. "Black women are wrongly described with these myths."

Among the stereotypes black women have been saddled with, she said, are the SHE MYTH, Page 5

Secret police rounded up; government asks for peace

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — The army began rounding up members of former President Jean-Claude Duvalier’s secret police Sunday, and government and religious leaders appealed for an end to the violence that has wracked the country since Duvalier fled last week. In an attempt to quell the unrest, the government imposed a 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. curfew for a third day in Port-Au-Prince, the capital, and canceled a planned Mardi Gras celebrations that were scheduled to begin Sunday.

Town’s residents call for Duvalier’s eviction

TALLOIRES, France (UPI) — Residents of Talloires circulated petitions Sunday calling for the eviction of former Haitian President Jean-Claude Duvalier from the Swiss alpine town. The 34-year-old Haitian ruler, his wife, Michelle, and 22 family members and friends have been lodged at the Hotel d’Abbaye, a restored 16th-century monastery on picturesque Annecy Lake. The French government said it allowed Duvalier to enter France Friday for temporary exile to prevent a “bloodbath” in Haiti, but officials emphasized he will have to leave after eight days.

Bodies pulled from wreckage of train crash

BERLIN (UPI) — Work crews Sunday pulled the first bodies from the twisted wreckage of two trains that collided head-on after a freight failed to allow a passenger train to pass. At least 29 people were killed. The death toll remained uncertain because authorities could not determine how many passengers were aboard the Via Rail passenger train that hit a 114-car freight Saturday near Hinton, 170 miles west of Edmonton, in one of the worst rail disasters in Canadian history.

Soviet dissident to be moved for spy swap

BERLIN (UPI) — Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky, the best-known figure in a major East-West prisoner swap expected this week, will be moved to East Berlin Monday in preparation for the exchange. The New York daily newspaper said sources in the Soviet embassy as saying Shcharansky’s mother, Ida Milgrom, has blamed “Israeli agents” for her son’s imprisonment and vowed revenge. Elsewhere, Christian and Moslem snipers traded fire across the Green Line separating Moslem west Beirut from the Christian eastern sector. Fighting also continued around President Amin Gemayel’s mountain stronghold of Bkakaya. No casualties were reported in any of the clashes.

Workforce workers to protest section reopening

AUSTIN, Minn. (UPI) — Striking meatpackers called a strategy meeting Sunday to plan protests when Hormel & Co. opens its hog-slaughtering section Monday for the first time since its bitter walkout began nearly six months ago. Charles Nyberg, Hormel vice president, said about 500 former union members have crossed the picket line and the company has the 1,025 people needed to resume hog slaughter.

Moslem leader assassinated, Israelis blamed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen assassinated a Sunni Moslem militia leader in the northern port city of Tripoli Sunday, then escaped as Syrian troops sealed off the area. The victim’s aides blamed “Israeli agents” and vowed revenge. Elsewhere, Christian and Moslem snipers traded fire across the Green Line separating Moslem west Beirut from the Christian eastern sector. Fighting also continued around President Amin Gemayel’s mountain stronghold of Bkakaya. No casualties were reported in any of the clashes.

Wife of slain tourist Klinghoffer dies of cancer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Marilyn Klinghoffer, widow of the American tourist slain and thrown overboard by terrorists aboard an Italian cruise liner last fall, died Sunday. A spokesman at Lenox Hill Hospital said Klinghoffer, 58, died “early this morning.” The hospital declined to elaborate but sources said Klinghoffer was suffering from cancer and had been a patient in the Manhattan hospital for two weeks. Klinghoffer’s husband, Leon, 69, was shot and killed by Palestinian hijackers of the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro Oct. 7, and thrown into the Mediterranean along with his wheelchair.

Quinn criticizes Illinois banks, urges reforms

By David Sheets

To put a shine on a tarnished state banking system, "sunlight is the best disinfectant." This is the political gospel of "attacker" Quinn, Democratic candidate for state treasurer, who made a campaign swing through Carbondale on Saturday.

Quinn, in a press conference at the Holiday Inn, outlined his plan for financial reform among the state's banking and money-lending institutions, using a "comprehensive consumer guide to Southern Illinois financial institutions" as the crux of his proposal.

"This particular kind of survey should be done every year by the state treasurer," Quinn said.

The guide includes the results of a 1986 survey of 23 Southern Illinois-based banks, savings and loans, and credit unions on such banking policies as check holding, interest rates on credit cards and bank service charge policies.

"This kind of information can help people live from paycheck to paycheck," Quinn explained. "Just in this area of the state, people can save $10 to $150 in lower fees on financial services."

According to Quinn's guide, the average Southern Illinois bank's checking account requires $191 to open and has a $3.33 service charge amount when the customer's bank balance falls below a $40 minimum or maintenance.

Also, the guide notes a minimum two-week holding period among Southern Illinois financial institutions for personal and payroll checks.

Quinn, commissioner of the Cook County Board of Tax Appeals and founder of the Coalition for Political Honesty, said that it is wrong for the state treasurer to support financial institutions that have such "anti-consumer policies."

"We are rapidly approaching an era of customer-pressure on the banks to improve the services they provide for the public," Quinn said.

"The opportunity to write down and cash checks is a fundamental right of Illinois citizens," Quinn exclaimed. "If we want the economy to grow in every part of the state, we need to get people to invest in the state."

"More and more people in Illinois are resorting to saving their cash instead of using checking services," he said.

The 23 banks surveyed in the guide "represent at least one bank in each county in Southern Illinois," Quinn said. He also wants to utilize state money "to encourage the growth of community credit unions" and a way to turn customer-investments back into the state.

"By definition, a credit union is a not-for-profit institution consisting of average customers all working together," he said. "I would encourage the deposit of state money in credit unions where appropriate."

In addition to an annual publication of the comprehensive consumers guide, Quinn wants a Consumer Banking Law for Illinois that would create lifetime checking, legitimate regulations against extended check holding and, in all banks, to cash government benefit checks without a fee.

"If we can get people to be a little more assertive," Quinn said, "they bank a little anti-consumer policy: we realize they have some angry customers on their hands."

90s activist to speak Tuesday

Kwame Ture, formerly Stokely Carmichael, black revolutionary leader and activist of the 60s, will be the keynote speaker for Black History Month. Ture will deliver his speech, "The Time is Now," at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ballroom B.

Ture originated the term "Black Power" during the mid-1960s as he became a central figure in the civil rights and anti-Vietnam War protest movements. He supported the upsurge of revolutionary activity for both causes, later advocating political goals of Pan-Africanism as a means of achieving black rights.

A philosophy major at Howard University, Ture was arrested and frequently beaten for his outspoken position on black issues and for his verbal attacks against white society.

Ture became chairman of the controversial Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee in 1966 and received national attention with his organized sit-ins and demonstrations to desegregate public facilities in Washington, D.C.

He traveled in Europe, North Vietnam and Cuba to spread Pan-Africanism and pride in black history. The 44-year-old Ture now lives as a self-described ex-patriate in Guinea. He visited the United States and Africa every six months to lecture at universities and colleges.

Under his original name of Carmichael, Ture is the author of "Stokely Speaks," "The Politics of Liberation in America" and "Black Power: Back to Pan-Africanism."

Born in Trinidad, Ture moved with his family to New York City's Harlem district when he was 11. He attended the Bronx High School of Science and New York University before moving to Africa to study at the University of Ghana where he attended for three years.

Ture returned to the U.S. after his trip to Africa and attended Howard University, where he received his degree in 1968. He then continued his political work in Africa, where he has been active in the Pan-African movement.

The drive was sponsored by the Annunziate Association.

Vivian Ugent, coordinator of the drive, said the blood will help make it possible for scheduled liver transplants to take place. She said 100 pints of blood must be set aside for each transplant operation.

She said the blood drive attracted a large number of blood bank staff and a few from the Carbondale community who were not affiliated with the University.

Ugent also said that student participation was "phenomenal."

Laundry libations: will proposal wash?

AS ANY STUDENT KNOWS, one of the most forgettable experiences in college life is the interminable time spent doing laundry. Doing laundry is a drag.

But what can be done to make this a rewarding part of your college experience? Well, you could take a book to read while you wait for your clothes to dry, or you could try to solve that final engineering problem. But these are not realistic laundry activities, as most people find out. Laundromats are just too noisy and hectic to do homework in.

So most people just sit and wait for the spin cycle to end, and then watch their clothes rotate in the dryer. Some fun. But there is hope on the horizon, because it is possible to have fun in the laundromat.

MANY STUDENTS IN CARBONDALE have been observing drinking bars or two while doing their laundry. This seems a logical way to make the laundry chore bearable, allowing a person to party and get the laundry done, although the legality of the practice is questionable in Carbondale.

Enter Clothes Pin Laundry owner William Mau. He proposes adding a bar to his facility on South Illinois Avenue, and has applied to the city for a liquor license. Mau wants to sell beer and wine to patrons while they do their laundry, believing the idea will attract more business by his way of providing an escape from the tedium of laundry duty.

Mau could face some problems. First of all, he will have to keep more than one employee in the store. Not only will he need at least one bartender, but he will need bouncers and people to check IDs. Heaven forbid that anyone under 21 should be caught drinking a beer while washing their underwear.

MAU MUST ALSO CONVINCE the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board that his idea is sound from the city's point of view. Faced with the problem of underage drinking in the city, the board has adopted a rather puritanical stance, declaring SIU student IDs invalid as a means of identification, while haggling with local bar owners over the height of walls around beer gardens.

The board seems to think that the laundry would become a den of underage drinking, the perfect watering hole for 16- and 17-year-olds from the dorms. Mau would allow 18-year-olds to enter the laundromat, but not minors. Other area bars such as Gatsby's and the American Tap allow minors to enter the bar, but they identify these people in order to cut down on underage drinking.

ALL IN ALL, it looks like the liquor board is opposed to Mau's idea, unless he can get his will and agree to completely separate the bar from the laundry, which might defeat the whole purpose of his idea.

This is a work in progress, the City Council, which may consider the idea of any laundry-bar too progressive for Carbondale. Then again, they may not think it a bad idea to knock off a few beers while doing laundry. But they identify these people in order to cut down on underage drinking.

As a concerned American citizen, I have to respond to Mr. Smith's letter (Jan. 30).

First off, I don't see why Mr. Smith gets his jellies by calling America "one of the most troubled countries on earth today." Does he forget how politically unstable his beloved Jewish people are? Just look at how much terrorism goes on in the Middle East and northern Africa. It also should be pointed out that many black Muslim leaders like Malcolm X were murdered by other black Muslims. It is interesting to find out that the civil rights leaders that accomplished the most used non-violent means. I also take exception to Mr. Smith's view of Israel and Jewish people. I have a question for Mr. Smith: if the state of Israel is so evil and the Muslims are Allah's chosen, why does Israel always win the wars it has with its Muslim neighbors? It is interesting to find out that the United States government has not been decreasing since 1979. Unfortunately, the prices of the necessities of life have increased every year since 1979.

Food stamps insufficient aid?

This letter is in response to the article "Food Stamp Fraud" (DE, Feb. 5). While I do not condone fraud, the article failed to explain the reasons for part of the food stamping.

First, the investigator from the Illinois Department of Public Aid is himself breaking the law by offering food stamp recipients money in exchange for their stamps. Second, it should be no wonder to anyone when we consider that the level of support for welfare families in Illinois is set at less than 70 percent of the poverty line — in other words, not enough to supply the basic necessities of life. What parent would not go with less food to supply their child with winter coats or boots and other so-called luxuries which can only be purchased with cash.

Despite the inferences made about the serious life on welfare, most families who find themselves caught in the web of public aid receive only enough money to pay for subsistence housing and utilities. No allowances are made in the total welfare budget for clothing, laundry, personal grooming needs, transportation and any medications not deemed capable of curing the patient in 30 days or less. It should be noted that cash welfare benefits have not been ad justed for inflation since 1979 and that food stamp allotments have been decreased since 1979. Unfortunately, the prices of the necessities of life have increased every year since 1979.

If the State of Illinois would like to see a reduction in welfare fraud may I suggest that they take the next $100,000 for the illegal purchases of food stamps and employ ten public aid families. The $10,000 they will receive will be far more than they are receiving now, give them a sense of pride in themselves, and Mr. Boston can go back to catching "real" criminals. — Donna DeFosse, sophomore, Education.

Learn from tragedy

"Obviously a major malfunction." These words of a few days ago were the words that would bring the world, for a brief moment, into the startling reality that man is not immortal, nor perfect. For the past week we have listened to religious and political leaders as they have tried to make sense of what happened.

"To quote a member of the House of Representatives. "Perhaps we have not heard how mortal we really are." It is not easy to believe that man, with all of his achievements, and technical advancements made over the last century, can be a victim of his own imperfections. What are the implications of becoming aware of our mortality? What are the lessons that we can learn from the seven, whose lives were so abruptly before our eyes? When the technological advancements cannot maintain our safety, where do we look? Can we find a security that will free us all to live our lives to the fullest even when we face circumstances that don't make sense?"

As a campus minister I represent a large group of students and faculty who believe that the answers to these questions are discovered through a personal relationship with God. Let me encourage you as students to allow those of us in the campus ministers to help you as you struggle with these questions. Perhaps together we can find a new strength to face even more difficult challenges in the future. — Philip W. Nelson, director, Baptist Student Union.
Man:ery: a sexless, nurturing, matriarchal and supportive sort of woman whose purpose often grew to care for others; the sapphire: a frustrated, thrill and emasculated character who was evil and hard to get along with; the tragic sapphire: a character best represented by Eliza from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who is "torn inwardly because although she looks white, she will also be tainted with that one drop of black blood;" and the blues woman: a woman who is openly erotic and lusty.

Moody said that Walker's book has to be seen in the context of this long line of stereotypes, as the myths and, in the end, rounding out the image of black women.

"It talks about the vulnerability of black women," Moody said. "It shows spirituality as a part of self-affirmation."

A young woman in the audience said the film gave her "a sense of history and a sense of pride."

"I appreciated the reality and I appreciated the triumphs -- that's what I got out of the movie," she said.

Anna Jackson, English instructor at Carbondale High School-East, referred to Celie's growth as developing a "roundness" in the young women in the time span of the film and book.

"I'm a hard nut to crack," Jackson said. "There were no tears after the first time I saw the movie. I laughed uncontrollably because I thought, even with all the beautiful and fantastic things they did with the movie, they couldn't compare to what happened in my own mind when I read the printed word."

Abdul Haq, director of marketing services at the Eunora Hayes Center, had a different perspective of the story.

"As a black male I couldn't identify with it," he said. "There was no character for me to put my arm around and walk through the movie with."

However, Haq said that the film could be used as a tool to be studied and applied to the lives of all blacks.

"It is talking about a people who have been destroyed by slavery," he said. "We are still fighting against that today."

Haq said that perhaps the media could best be used to solve some of these problems and added that there are worse stories than the one in "The Color Purple.""
Mellencamp provides thrill through small-town style

By Wm. Bryan DeVasher
Entertainment Editor

He once wrote a song that contained the line “Life goes on, long after the thrill of living is gone.” How true. Mellencamp proved during his concert Friday at the Arena that life still provides a thrill to the boy from Indiana.

Mellencamp and his band, formerly known as The Zone when Mellencamp was still known as John Cougar, provided the capacity crowd with all their hits as well as a generous sampling of songs from Mellencamp's latest LP, "Scarecrow.

"Several years ago, "Mellencamp closed the show by performing a number of 1960s rock classics, among them "Turn On Your Love Light," "Mony Mony" and "Nobody But Me." His show was a perfect way to start a new semester of concerts. All upcoming concerts are of the same caliber, then Arena Promotions will be one of the most favored agencies on campus."

"Somehow we have forgotten that these people are public servants," Mellencamp said regarding the senators, and added: "They work for you.

"I Need A Lover," a Mellencamp tune that became a hit for Pat Benatar, lost its high-projection gloss in concert and became a flat-out, full-speed-ahead rocker that allowed the band to shine as they lurched into the song, which followed the iterative "Hand to Hold Oath." Drummer Aronoff and bassist Toby Myers provided a solid foundation for the rest of the band to build on. If Mellencamp had released the song this way originally, he may have become recognized earlier than he was."

The band had the crowd on its feet and singing during the last Mellencamp-penned tune performed, the cautionary "Pink Houses," a song that glorifies the virtues of American life but warns against the excesses that too much wealth can bring.

Although Mellencamp botched the second verse of the song and had to begin anew, the audience ignored the blunder and sang along with him, allowing their American pride in swell as the final chorus was repeated again and again.

Dance company gives refined, upbeat show

By Maureen Cavanagh
Staff Writer

The Joseph Holmes Dance Theatre is an entertaining and high-spirited dance company dedicated to reflecting the American urban experience.

The Chicago-based company, brought to SIUC in part by the Black Affairs Council, performed in Shryock Auditorium Thursday. The troupe presented its own brand of modern jazz and ballet without sacrificing the refinement of art.

The company's elastic movements complimented the music with polished subtlety. Dancers adapted naturally to a melting pot of musical verses with seemingly effortless transitions. The scores ranged from avant-garde, gospel and soul to classical.

The multi-ethnic troupe opened with "Five Studies," the first selection was an upbeat, primitive-like dance which introduced the 14 versatile members. Then, the bongo drums faded out and a jazz piece played. "He and She" by Robert Pugh and Leslie Woods was perhaps the most moving of the five studies, which were often erotic.

"Oh Mary Don't You Weep" was received with popularity and of the performances. The Spirit of Mary, Mary, Martha and Lazarus danced on stage to gospel and soul to classical. White flowing dresses, kerchiefs and a stained glass window background helped to depict Lazarus' resurrection.

"Tradewind" with Kim Gladwin, Anne Jones and Robert Pugh was set to classical music. The dancers were silhouetted as they expressed the story of ill-fated lovers. The two men dueted over the girl, but at the end, the girl was spurned by both.

"Anything That Comes Out of My Mouth" looked more like a video by the B-52's. The futuristic tone of the piece was enhanced by space-like costumes and exact, simultaneous movements.

The last performance, titled "Aretha," was a popular medley of Aretha Franklin hits. Dramatized amidst a set of tenant buildings, streetlights were such notables as "Trouble In Mind," "Dr. Feelgood," "You Send Me," "Evil Gal Blues" and "Since You've Gone."

All the dances were choreographed by Joseph Holmes, founder and artistic director of the company. Harriet Ross, graduate of New York's School of Performing Arts and the Juilliard School, is company instructor and rehearsal director. Jon Simmons, graduate of Columbia College, Chicago, is executive director.

Beginning on Chicago's South Side, the company with the aid of a CBE grant, initiated the Chance to Dance Program designed as outreach to inner-city youths. More than one-third of the dancers are from the Chance to Dance program. Others come to the dance theatre through gymnastics, university training and nationwide dance organizations.

The Joseph Holmes Dance Theatre touches on themes that everyone recognizes. It has put together a duly acclaimed repertoire.

Building upon the opportunity, the Joseph Holmes Dance Theatre continues to reflect the American urban experience.

Arena target of ZZ Top tour

By Wm. Bryen DeVacher
Entertainment Editor

ZZ Top, whose "Afterburner" LP is climbing to the upper reaches of the record charts, will perform at the Arena March 2.

Tickets for the concert will go on sale at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Arena south lobby ticket box office. Line reservation cards will be distributed at 8 a.m. Tickets cannot be purchased Tuesday without a reservation card. Ticket prices have not been announced.

ZZ Top has been recording since 1970. The group has had several videos, including "Tube Snake Boogie" and "Tush." The band did not gain national attention until 1983, when their album "Eliminator" yielded three hit singles and four videos. The videos for "Gimme All Your Lovin'" "Sharp Dressed Man," "TV Dinners" and "Legs" all became MTV favorites, and the band's following expanded from a small cult of Texas rockies to a large mainstream audience.

The band's "Afterburner" album has further solidified their following, and once again their videos are receiving heavy MTV airplay. "Sleeping Bag," the first single and the band's first foray into techno-pop complete with synthesized drums and other technical wizardry, became a hit for the band, and is being followed by the band's latest single, "Stagings."

The band, composed of guitarist Billy Gibbons, bassist Dusty Hill and drummer Frank Beard, recently sold out a St. Louis concert so quickly that another concert has to be added to placate avid fans. Their concerts have been major attractions, and in 1975 the band shattered attendance records and claims to be the "world's most-seen band" because they toured about 300 days a year. The "Afterburner" tour is their most popular to date, and seats are bound to go fast when the tour touches down for an evening in Carbondale.

Smith qualifies for NCAA’s; rest of team unsuccessful

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Saluki men’s track athlete Tom Smith saved his best for last on Saturday in the 11th annual Domino’s Pizza Illini Classic.

Smith, a senior from Lake Station, Ind., became the first Saluki to qualify for an NCAA Indoor Championship with a 63-4.25 effort in the 35-pound weight throw. He achieved the NCAA qualifying standard of 62-6.5 on his sixth and final attempt.

“I wasn’t surprised at the time with the throw because all of my previous throws were close to the standard,” Smith said. “There was a chalkline at 65 feet and when it landed close to that, I had a good idea it was over the standard.”

Smith finished second in the invitational division behind Jud Logan of the New York Athletic Club, who won the event with a 77-3.25 effort. Smith added a fifth-place finish in the shot put with a personal best of 58-11.25.

Saluki men’s track coach Bill Cornell said Smith’s performance was the highlight of the meet.

“Smith is getting better and stronger in the 35-pound weight throw even though he doesn’t get the opportunity to throw it too often,” Cornell said.

Elliott, the anchor runner, had the best split time among the four runners with a 1:35.5. Cornell said Pettigrew (1:52.1), Kelly (1:53.8), and Garrett (1:54.9) were each capable of running a 1:52 split.

“Elliott is the only one who did his job,” Cornell said. “I’m disappointed in our performance because I think we have a relay team that can put it all together and qualify for the nationals.”

Cornell was also looking for Pettigrew, Elliott, and Garrett to qualify for the nationals in the 1000 meters but the trio fell short of the qualifying standard of 2:28.06. Pettigrew had a time of 2:25.46, Elliott had a 2:28.07, and Garrett had a 2:28.66.

Cornell said his three runners were flat and only had an hour-and-a-half break after competing in the two-mile relay.

“If they were fresh they could have done better,” Cornell said.

In the mile relay, Garrett bounced back by posting the best split time (48.3) to lead the Salukis to a second-place finish in the open division with a 3:18.74.

“I thought Garrett was tired after competing in the other two events but he really ran hard in the mile relay,” Cornell said.

Mason finished in third place in the 400-yard dash with a 49.47 and Gill added a fourth-place finish in the 3000-meter run with a 8:35.0.

Cornell said Billy Darling and Darren Christ each appeared to set personal bests in the 3000 but their times weren’t available because the officials mistakenly instructed them to run an extra lap.

Also in the developmental division, Derrick Strickland finished third in the 500-meter run with a 1:05.66; Gerard Horan finished third in the 800-yard run with a 1:57.69 and David Beauchem finished fourth in the mile run with a 4:21.90.

The Salukis will return to action this weekend at Eastern Illinois University. The five-team field includes Bradley, Illinois State, Western Illinois, SIU-C and host Eastern Illinois.

Salukis stomp out Buffaloes, 71-59

By Ron Warnick Staff Writer

SIU-C’s littler players played like big inside men Saturday night.
Six-foot-two guard Steve Middleton grabbed eight rebounds, blocked two shots and scored a career-high 29 points, while 6-4 forward Eilly Ross scored a personal-best 12 points.

The Salukis shot 58 percent from the field, stopping a two-game losing streak in which the Dogs shot a dismal 33 percent.

SIU-C’s record improved to 7-5 overall, and their third win in 10 Valley contests kept them out of the conference basement for at least a while longer.

“We have to win at least two more to stay out of the cellar,” Saluki coach Rich Herrin said. “I don’t know where those two are going to come from, but we’re going to get them somewhere.”

Building forward Orlando Graham scored 17 and grabbed eight rebounds, and center Fred Johnson and chipped in with 12 points.

Middleton found a hot hand in the first half. He had 20 points at the break, and pumped in two and a half minutes, stopping a slump for at least a while.

The Salukis then hit a cold spell, going 6-for-21 from the field, stopping a dismal 33 percent.

Those who hit weren’t hitting many. The Salukis shot 58 percent through a stretch in the game.

“Those who hit weren’t hitting many. The Salukis shot 58 percent through a stretch in the game,” Herrin said.

“The guards were able to put it inside to me so I could get the shot.”

“Earlier this season, I was just turning around and shooting, and it failed. So I thought I would turn and dribble to one side to get a good, open shot. But I thought we’d be able to work against this team,” he said.

“We did come to play,” Herrin said of Ross. “One of the reasons was he was matched against people more his size. Even though they had 6-4 Orlando Graham, he was in foul trouble and had to lay back a little.”

Ross, getting a pass from Middleton, arched a shot high over Graham’s head to put the Salukis up 12 with 12:03 left in the first half.

The Salukis also scored over 60 percent of their points in the second period, repeatedly scored over the 6-9 Graham, with some nice moves.

Their defense played behind me, and usually defenses play to the side and front of an inside man,” Ross explained. “The guards were able to put it inside to me so I could get the shot.”

Middleton, who had 15 points in the second period, repeatedly scored over the 6-9 Graham, with some nice moves.

The Salukis shot a smoking 64 percent in the second period, but the game was a hard-fought battle for the first “even minutes,” Ross, who had 15 points in the second period, repeatedly scored over the 6-9 Graham, with some nice moves.

The Salukis had a hot hand in the first half. He had 20 points at the break, and pumped in two and a half minutes, stopping a slump for at least a while.

Women gymnasts take slide in meet and on road

By M.J. Starshak Staff Writer

The women’s gymnastics team hit a bit of a speedbump Saturday, losing more ways than one—suffering a 171.89-171.60 loss to the Cyclone eleven at Iowa State University Thursday in Ames, Iowa. The weather was cold; liberal snow flying, skidding down a ravine and into a tree with the SIU van as a result of poor weather conditions.

Nobody was hurt in the accident, but the team had to stay in Iowa until Saturday to wait for an SIU bus to pick them up. The coach assumed the Salukis to miss the tri-meet against University of Illinois-Chicago and Eastern Michigan University.

“Victory would be up 11 points and win a meet,” said Coach Herb Vogel. Of those 11 points, junior Jennfer Moore and senior Lori Steele gave up over eight and a half, Vogel said.

“There were far too many avoidable errors,” he said. “The team could have ‘easily scored over 180’ if not for the errors.”

Junior all-arounder Michelle Spillman took first place in all-round with a score of 35.85, three-tenths below her top score of 36.15 which she earned in SIU’s victory over Jacksonville State University.

Moore and Steele are not “green, inexperienced gymnasts,” said Vogel, but they made errors that a freshman would make. The mistakes are due to a lack of hard training,” he said adding that the gymnasts had not done enough work on their routines.

The Salukis were 6-4 overall, the late going. But Scott was also a disappointed coach because her squad neither administered a knockout punch nor put on a good show for the fans.

“The kids were flat defensively—any time you let someone dribble through five players, you’re flat,” Scott said after the game and told Hille, “you should’ve given the ball to Mel and let her drive it down the floor every time.”

Scott said one factor that made the opposition on the lackluster performance was an easy week of practice.

“We were lucky to win, but a win’s a win,” Scott said.

SLU next cager foe for women

By Anita J. Stoner Staff Writer

Had the women’s basketball Salukis scheduled the Dial Classic at Arizona State, they would not be traveling to St. Louis University Monday night to take on the Lady Billikens.

sandwiched in the middle of Gateway Conference action, the meetings against non-conference opponents. Louis on Monday and Evanville on Wednesday seemed like a nuisance. But the Dials won their final two games last fall, forcing them to cancel and fill in the schedule with these teams in the midst of the Gateway season.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said, “We’re not always perfect but we’ve got to make the best of it.”

Although the dates of these games could be better, Scott said there were several advantages.

“These games, we give our younger kids a chance to play and get some confidence, so maybe they can help us down the stretch in our conference race,” Scott said.

“We’re glad we’re playing St. Louis there because we have so many strong junior varsity players. This will give them a chance to play in front of their hometown fans.”

The Billikens return all five starters from last year’s 16-9 squad. However, those five fell to the Salukis 66-61 on February 15th. Scott said the Billikens have a lot of size, with Julie Hacker, who the Saluki staff recruited at one point. In addition to Hacker, the Billikens are led by 6-4 senior center Amanda Harris.

“This is a big game for them because we’re a big name school,” Scott said, implying that the Saluki have little to gain with a win while the Billikens have everything to gain with an upset victory.

Salukis grateful that Panthers reject charity

By Anita J. Stoner Staff Writer

Freethrows seemed to be the toughest shot taken in the women’s basketball Salukis’ 62-60 defeat of Eastern Illinois Friday night at Davies Gymnasium.

The loss dropped EIU to 13-7, 5-4 in the Valley, while the Salukis held their undefeated Gateway record to 10-0 and extended their winning streak to 13 for 15-3 overall.

“Except for a slow start, the Salukis led throughout and fought down EIU challenges with only three or seven margin beyond 14 points. But if the Panthers had converted on a few one-and-one situations, the outcome could have been different.”

The two for 11 showing from the charity stripe had Panther coach Barars Hille shaking her head after the game.

“There’s no question — we would’ve won the game if we had put our free throws in. We’re terribly disappointed when we come close and mess it up ourselves,” Hille said.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott said the Salukis were concerned but never panicked when the Panthers narrowed the lead under double digits in the late going. But Scott was also a disappointed coach because her squad neither administered a knockout punch nor put on a good show for the fans.

“The kids were flat defensively—any time you let someone dribble through five players, you’re flat,” Scott said after the game and told Hille, “you should’ve given the ball to Mel and let her drive it down the floor every time.”

Scott said one factor that made the opposition on the lackluster performance was an easy week of practice.

“We were lucky to win, but a win’s a win,” Scott said.
