awmakers hail Clinton's 'discipli

By Dan Page

As President Clinton presented his $1.5-trillion federal budget for fiscal year 1995 to Congress Monday, Illinois congressional legislators praised its discipline, but cautioned against program cuts.

Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Chicago, said this budget is the first evidence of the kind of severe budgetary restraint Clinton and Congress agreed to last year, but supported it with some reservation

"While I am committed to a smaller federal budget, I intend to look closely at each of these proposals to make sure the federal government does not abandon programs and services to the people who need them the most,"

Congressman Jerry Costello, D-

State group hopes to end violent streak

By Dan Page Politics Reporter

Targeting violence in Southern Illinois Schools must be an aim of the newly formed House of Representatives Task Force on School Violence, State Represen-tative Gerald Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, said Friday.

Hawkins was named to serve on the panel Friday, but said it is a problem he has been vatching closely in recent years.

"What has happened in major cities and metropolitan areas is now in rural ones as well and we would like to route that off before it grows any worse," Hawkins said.

There are not any easy answers to this problem, but we do need answers and we need to address this problem immed-iately. The forma-tion of this task force is the first step."

Hawkins said he was startled by the statistics found in a 1993 report.

SIUC students offer assistance to quake victims

By Sanjay Seth Special Assignment Reporter

SIUC freshman Ellen Utsinger was watching CNN's coverage of the plight of the victims of the Los Angeles earthquake with a friend when they made a decision.

The duo decided to form "Picking up the Pieces," a volunteer organization to help Los Angeles quake victims by collect-ing rations from SIUC students and the community.

Utsinger, a psychology major, said the organization is collecting non-perishable food items ' om individuals, area businesses and the community in general.

'We're also attempting to get RSOs (Registered Student Organizations) involved in the collec-tion," Utsinger said. "Some religious organizations we approached have also been helpful."
Kathie Lorentz, SIUC coord-

KAZAKHSTAN WANTS GLOBAL ATTENTION

The leader of the vast Central Asian nation of Kazakhstan said Monday that the United States and the West risk encouraging Russian bullying by providing aid to Moscow while neglecting the other former Soviet republics. Kazakhstan, the second-largest Soviet republic in area after Russia and the world's ninth-largest c., witry, is strategically situated amid Russia, China, Iran and the smaller nations of Central Asia.

FOUR ISRAELI SOLDIERS KILLED IN AMBUSH . FOUR ISPACE! SOLDE'RS KILLED IN AMEUSE — Islamic guerillas in southern Lebanon killed four Israeli soldiers and wounded five Monday in a daylight ambush against an armored petrol that brought Israeli retaliation with artillery and rockets. The Iranian-backed Hezbollah fundamentalist organization said it carried out the ambush to mark the second anniversary of the assassination of its leader, Sheik Abbas Musawi, who was killed by an Israeli helicopter raid.

JAPANESE LEADERS WRESTLE BUDGET.

The problems afflicting Prime Minister Morihino Hosokawa went from acutely embarrassing to downright mortifying Monday, as his divided governing coalision missed a pressing dearline for completing a plan to rejuvenate Japan's slumping economy. Leaders of the seven parties in the coalition, who have been wrangling for five days over tax issues, said Monday evening they had again failed to reach agreement, despite warnings from top officials that further delay would endanger the timely completion of the national budget for the 1994 fiscal year.

Just when it looked as though fido had gained a place in the sun in Beijing as man's best friend—and as a status symbol of the newly rich—the authorities in the Chinese capital have again declared dogs a health menace and unleashed dog-elimination squads. The official People's Daily last month cailed for an end to the new craze of keeping dogs as pets, describing it as "uncivilized and unbealthy."

EMBRYO RESEARCH ETHICS UNDER REVIEW

Is it ethical for scientists to create human embryos in the laboratory solely to experiment on them? Are some experiments good and others bad? to experiment on them? Are some experiments good and others bad? Until now such questions were decided individually by scientizts working in privately funded clinics doing in vitro fertilizations, or IVF. But before the National Institutes of Health starts handing out grants, it is trying to determine what kind of experiments are ethically acceptable. The newly created NIH Human Embryo Research Panel assembled in Bethesda, Md., last week to begin reviewing the status of privately funded research in the field and to ponder the thomy ethical and moral issues.

Vietnam trade deal promotes dialogue

A DECISION TO LIFT THE 19-YEAR-OLD TRADE embargo on Vietnam has generated mixed reactions throughout the United States ranging from elation at the prospects of a new marketplace to indignation at a government that has sold out to big business.

Many business executives and congressional leaders, some Vietnam veterans, say the move was a constructive step toward establishing a working relationship with the Vietnamese. These people argue that cooperation and dialogue are the best ways to improve U.S.- Vietnam relations, promote economic reforms and ensure a resolution of the POW/MIA issue.

But, many Vietnam veterans view the move as an act of betrayal - one more example of politicians unwilling to provide the support needed to win a war. For these veterans, the trade embargo was seen as a way to force the Communist Vietnamese to provide information about missing military personnel. To them, lifting the embargo is just one of a series of trades for the remains of missing U.S.

THE ANGER AND FRUSTRATION OF VETERANS who recognize Vietnam's past use of the POW/MIA issue as a form of emotional blackman is justified, but negotiation appears to be the only chance of getting any answers. A trading partner is much more likely to honor the requests of another government than those of an officially sanctioned enemy. The confrontational position taken by many veterans ignores the reality that Communists control Vietnam and negotiating with the Vietnamese government is the only reasonable way to guarantee future progress on the POW/MIA issue.

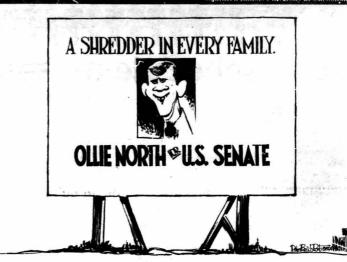

Although lifting the trade embargo may seem like a defeat, encouraging a more capitalistic marketplace in Vietnam may result in a victory years of bloodshed failed to accomplish. As products from the United States enter the Vietnamese marketplace, so will American ideas. Free-trade, if it results in economic prosperity, may do more to liberate the Vietnamese people and threaten Vietnam's Communist leadership than the war.

VIETNAM PROBABLY WILL CONTINUE TO USE the POW/MIA issue as a bargaining chip. Vietnamese leaders see the most-favored-nation trading status, which would eliminate high tariffs on Vietnamese exports, and full diplomatic relations, which would open the doors of Vietnam to U.S. investment, as enticing goals. The United States can use this desire for more open economic relations to help get answers for the family and friends of missing Vietnam veterans. While the trade of economic privileges for missing U.S. soldiers is morally repugnant, it also seems to work.

By lifting the trade embargo and entering the Vietnamese marketplace, the United States has took an important step from an unproductive confrontational policy of indignation and resentment to a potentially productive policy of ecoperation and negotiation.

Some animal labs abuse rights

I am writing in response to the women who condemned Andrea Bauch for blatant emotionalism concerning animal research. First of all, you are correct. Vivariums are not by definition "holding cells (used) to torture and humiliate animals." They are used for keeping or raising animals for servation or research.

observation or research.

However, the fact is that at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, dogs and rabbits were infested with scabies until they had scabs and bleeding wounds from the intense itching. One dog that was crying, had a loss of appetite, loss of balance and exhibited circling behavior was diagnosed as having a "pulled toe" then a "dislocated hip". The animal was suspended in a sling and found dead the next morning. Fortunately, WSU was charged with 18 violations of the Animal Welfare Act. The person who enforced the Animal Welfare act by exposing the gross a government official. I'm not sure I have as much faith as you in the diligance of the government in looking out for the welfare of research animals.

In other experiments, cats, dogs, monkeys, etc. have been subjected to being blinded, poisoned, shocked, addicted to drugs and alcohol and much more. If these kinds of experiments don't constitute torture and humiliation, I would like to know what does.

Most people in professions associated with undue cruelty to animals seem to try to justify such practices and discourage critical discourse by labeling animal rights advocates as sentimentalists or emotionalists. The point I believe Andres was trying to make is the animals are treated by the point to elever anims was trying to make a tale animals are treated to yield scientific community as disposable products to be discarded after being used in research that often produces trivial or repetitive results. Someone needs to take a stand against injustice.

Spiwak fails to hold down fees

After reading the articles in the Daily Egyptian over the last two weeks, I have become more and more disgusted with the performance of Mike Spiwak, USG President. Never mind the fact that he campaigned on the platform of "never raising students fees unless the students support them", or "fighting to keep the bar entry age at 18", or "pressuring the administration to allow beer sales at sports events", or "making it a priority to represent all students". Instead, what we students now have is a turn-coat want-to-be politician who raised our activity fee by 25%, asked the city council to raise the bar entry age to 21, supports doubling the athletic fee without ever a mention of alternate funding sources, and hasn't even begun to fill student appointments to many important campus committees.

I guess we shouldn't blame him, though. He had no idea of the complexity of the job he had before him when he campaigned; that was obvious by all of the promises he threw across campus. It's the student body's fault for buying into his line of BS and electing him to begin with. Unfortunately we are learning the lesson the hard way, all while Iron Mike the Crusader Against All Evil is getting his laughs at the expense of the student body.

I don't know when the next USG elections are, but here is the campaign slogan somebody should use: I won't be like Mike!

"Crime and Violence in Illinois Schools," which was submitted recently to the General Assembly by the Illinois Association of Regional Superintendents of

The statewide survey found sharp increases in the number of violencerelated incidents and suspensions in Illinois schools.

Most notably, there has been 442-percent increase in police calls involving weapons in schools; a 283-percent increase in weapons related suspensions; and an 86 percent increase in assault and battery-related suspensions.

"The most shocking aspect of those figures is that they don't include schools in Chicago or Cook County," Hawkins said.

"Those increases highlight the alarming rate violence is increase-ing in downstate Illinois schools." Hawkins noted many local incidents, such as a student shooting at Murphysboro Jr. High School last year, signal a growing problem.

"There have been several incidents in Southern Illinois specifically, including one last spring where one student was shot by another student, but it remains a major problem throughout the

Hawkins commended local school officials and citizens who have put forth efforts to combat school violence.

"Citizens in local communities have formed alliances to work on the problem and they have been very productive," he said.

They have been working on the problem for some time and we need to work together with them to solve the problem. Already, I have asked them to testify at the hearings we will hold in Southern Illinois in the next few weeks."

Following a series of statewide earings, the task force will deliver its recommendations for action to the General Assembly.

The exact deadlines for the process have not yet been determined.

Hawkins noted that other educational problems in state schools cannot be solved unless violence is eliminated from the school grounds.

"Children don't receive the full opportunity to learn what they deserve in an an environment that's filled with fear," he said.

"We have to stop the everyday violence that occurs in our school

Hawkins notes that speed is essential in dealing with the escalating problem of school

"When I was young, school children may have had to look out for the playground bully, but now kids are carrying guns into the classroom." he said.

"We need to restore the safety of children and teachers in our schools. This problem will not go away unless action is taken.'

SIUC students will pay $2 for a transcript request from Woody Hall after July 1 to pay for rising printing and mailing costs.

'Schindler's List' overwhelming

By Melissa Edwards Entertainment Reporter

It is overwhelming - three hours feels like three seconds and three centuries at the same time.

While credits roli, the audience files out silently, respectfully, as if they just had attended a funeral. A few sit motionless until the lights come on, unable to believe what they have witnessed on the screen.

It is a story of slaughter, a story of hope — it is "Schindler's List," Steven ielberg's tale of the 1940s Holocaust in Poland.

Although he is know budget blockbusters like "Jurassic Park," "Schir and List," unfortunately, is no fa. Neeson, star of Woo Liam "Husbands and Wives" and "Shining Through" portrays Oskar
Schindler, a German businessman who saved more than 800 Jews from destruction by employing them in his munitions factory

To understand the enormity of what Schindler did, it is importa understand who he was. He did not begin his enterprise because of highnded principles, but rather because of the opportunity to make money.

He was married - barely. had numerous affairs which he did not bother to conceal from his wife. He was equally comfortable bribing SS officers as he was comforting Jewish prisoners. In short, he was a charmer.

In an amazing performance as Amon Goeth, the commander of the Plaszow forced labor camp, newcomer Ralph Fiennes portrays the horrifying SS officer with chilling presence rarely rivaled. He makes Hannibal Lechter look like Ghandi. Perched on his balcony high above the camp, he shoots prisoners for entertainment. One moment he admonishes his soldiers for kicking a prisoner, the next he kills a boy who is unable to get Goeth's bathtub clean.

He is the insanity of the Holocaust personified. Shot almost entirely in black and white, the film is stark in its richness. Spielberg spent painstaking years creating the details of the war — the Jewish Ghetto, the insanity of the soldiers, the taunting voice of a young German girl deliriously happy to see the economic rape of the Jews.

But Schindler himself remains a mystery The film shows his metamorphosis into a hero, but it is never apparent why he crosses the line from war profiteer to war hero.

The film raises the age-old question of just what atrocities humans are capable of and gives no simple answers, only suggestions. One man can make a difference — there are 6,000 direct descendants of the Schindler Jews. Although the film has been in theaters since December, it just opened in Carbondale's AMC theat last weekend. It is worth the wait

SIUC professor Daughton wins Wallace Award

By Doug Durso General Assista neral Assignment Reporter

SIUC professor Suzanne Daughton used her interest in public address and Franklin Delano Roosevelt to win a national a ard...

Daughton, assistant professor of speech communication, won the Karl R. Wallace Memorial Award and $1,200 for her study on Roosevelt's first inaugural address, published in November.

This honor, which recognizes scholars who promote an understanding of public speaking, was given to Daughton at the 1993 Speech Communication Asso-ciation's National Convention in Miarai Beach, Fla.

The award, named after a person very influential in the field of rhetoric, first was given in 1976 and is awarded to scholars who completed the doctoral program no more than five years from the time the award is given.

The study on Roosevelt show how he used metaphors in his first speech as president, Daughton said.

"What I saw happening was a pattern in which he cast himself in the role of the priest of the country and commander-in-chief, the way we usually think of the president," Daughton said. "In effect he was declaring a holy war or crusade against the economic depression the country was facing."

Daughton said she used the award money to analyze speech patterns of Roosevelt's fireside chats and letters of public reaction he received. Her interest in Roosevelt came from a class in U.S. public address six years ago, she said.

Daughton 2/so has written about how U.S. presidential condidates talked about gender-related issues at the national political conventions during the last twenty years.

The study showed after the 1970s candidates stayed away from any talk about gender-related issues after people felt threatened by these issues, Daughton said. People talked about men's and wome. 's roles instead of issues, she said. les instead of issues, she said.

"Prevident Clinton is carefully acknowledging the importance of some of these issues, but has to be cautious politically," she said. Daughton joined the SIUC taculty in 1990. She teaches classes in rhetorical criticism, advanced public speaking, persua graduate course in rhetorical theory.

student-orientated and she works around class schedules rather well.

Management targets student workers because of their schedules, Barber said.

"It's a relatively nonstressful job so it's perfect for a lot of students," she said.

Although Rath has a busy life, lighthearted moments occasionally occur and break the tension

"One time some guy walked in and asked for an adult film with farm animals starring in it - we don't carry those types of movies, laughed.

As for a serious relationship, Rath seems to be too to settle down.

"I intend to stay single for awhile," Rath said smiling.

Rashid said he believes the information to be presented by Browder something all students should learn.
"Africans and African Americans should not just wait to start studying history in February," he said. "It should be going on 364 and one-fourth days a year."

Students who cannot afford to go on the tour can learn much from the presentation, Rashid said.

"Students will be able to understand and leak into information
"Students will be able to understand and leak into information presented and find out all the falsehoods they have been conditioned believe in from their textbooks," he said. Browder will speak at 7 tonight in the Student Center Auditorium about the often unrecognized contributions of Africans.

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale,

SIUC takes 82-77 victory from Birds

By Grant Deady Sports Reporter

After suffering three straight defeats, there was no way the SIUC women's baskethall team was going to fall again.

The Saluki women out .hot, outhustled and eventually out-scored a feisty Illinois State ball club, 82-77 Monday night at the Arena.
"We've been working really hard in practice, and we decided that we just had to step up tonight," Saluki forward Angenette Sumrall said. SIUC led 44-37 at the intermission behind a balanced first-half attack that was anchored by Karen Powell's 11 points. Center Kelly Geistler and Sumrall both chipped in seven to help the Salukis chalk up an 18 for 35 shooting expedition from the field going into the locker

The second half was more of the same, as the determined Redbirds pecked away at the Saluki lead. Illinois State's hard work finally paid off with just over a minute to play, as the Lady Redbirds took the lead 77-76, on a driveway move by guard Amanda Glazebrook.

SIUC hung tough, though, capitalizing on two Redbird turnovers in the games final 50 seconds.

inbounds pass that resulted in Sumrall hitting two free throws at the :44 second mark to give SIUC the lead, 80-77.

On the very next Redbird osession, Glazebrook traveled and returned the ball back to the Salukis with:36 seconds left in regulation.

SIUC point guard Nikki Gilmore then capped off a sensational night by nailing a 10-foot jumper to seal the Saluki victory with ten seconds left in the game

The way SIUC battled back from three consecutive losses coming into the match-up, earned the Saluki women some high praise from Redbird coach Jill Hutchison.

"I think Southern did a great job, rebounding from three losses," Hutchison said.

When it got down to the crunch time, they made the plays. The credit goes to Southern, they bounced back very nicely.

Gaining momentum

Kim Martin, coach of the SIUC Wheelchair Basketball Team, lifts weights in the Recreation Center Monday afternoon as part of her training program to keep in shape. Martin, from Florence, Ky., is a 25-year-old first year graduate student in recreation therapy. Her workout partner is Jason Higgins, a 23-year-old exercise science major from Peoria. They were working on a shoulder extension, arm curl program.

Dawgs tune up skills in classic

By James J. Fares Sports Reporter

After a tough loss against Big Ten powerhouse Illinois and a strong performance in the Wildcat Classic, the SIUC men's track and field team has begun to prepare for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships.

Last weekend the Dawgs tuned up in Bloomington, Indiana for a two day meet. Over twenty teams competed. The Salukis took on same of the top teams in the country in a meet where no team scores kept but plenty of Saluki highlights.

Senior Brian Miller had a big weekend with a toss of 56-91/2 in the shot put to help his individual performance, gain recognition throughout the country as well as preparing for nationals.

The strongest part of the Saluki attack came through once again, as the distance medley relay team came in first-place with an outstanding time of 10:06.32.

Leading the way for the Salukis were distance runners Neil Emberton (third-place in the mile, 4:10.44), Garth Akal (fifth-place in the 3000 meter, 8:32.32) and the 4 x relay team finished in fifth-r-tace (8:04.26).

Mike Claycomb had a personal best of 16-3/4 in the pole vault, which was good enough to give him seventh-place in the n.eet and was the eighth-best on the SIUC All-Time Indoor Leader Board

The Dawgs will be running wild once again this weekend in the Student Recreation Center as they host the Saluki Invitational, just another way to prepare for the conference championships on February

l'eam concentrates on conference

By Chris Walker Sports Reporter

All season long, SIUC head swimming coach Rick Walker has said that a good swimming and diving team is not mea in wins and losses

The SIUC Salukis are hoping to prove that philosophy true after being beaten by Iowa 73-40 and Penn State 68-45 on Friday night in Iowa City, Iowa.

The Salukis only came away with two first place finishes, but had some of their better times while swimming unshaved.

Shaved is a swimming technique in which Sharven is a swimming techniques in amount of rest. The entire visible body a certain amount of rest. Friday's winners were Tyler Cadham in the 230 breaststroke and the 800 free relay of Mark Franks, Doug Fulling, Kevin Rosepapa and Greg Bever which finished at 6:52.81.

Although Walker did not directly point out any of the even s, he did compliment the special effort of diver Duke Hawthorne

Hawthorne was the only diving representative of SIUC who competed in

"Duk: Hawthorne did a tremendous job competing by himself in the diving events," Walker said. "It was a seal character builder for him. He represented us well and he didn't let anything intimidate him. The Sankis do not resume competition until early March when they meet their destiny in the Eastern Independent Championship.

Walker said a resting phase has row begun. He said the team's undivided attention will be on the conference.

"Wr.'ll still follow the same schedule," Walker said. "But we will focus on speed, starts, turns and finer technique things."

The Salukis have a few weeks to prepare for the conference championship which is scheduled for March 3-5.
