Contract plan for faculty to help students

RESCHEDULING:

New idea should offer students more options in summer.

WILLIAM HATFIELD

Chancellor Don Beggs says that a plan to put faculty on an 11-month contract could improve the summer course schedule, but some faculty say they wonder if the plan would compromise research or cost too much.

Beggs said an 11-month contract would increase the number of undergraduate courses offered in the summer and such a plan would allow students who take courses in the summer to graduate in less than four years.

A student can complete his or her academic career in a more timely manner if they take some courses in the summer," Beggs said. "But if the courses aren't offered, then the student can't take them."

Beggs said he developed the plan when he found that the cost of tuition and board is a large amount of the cost of a college education. He said the plan also was developed to recruit faculty and compete with salaries at other institutions, because most institutions have a nine-month contract.

Under the current nine-month contract, Beggs said the faculty get paid for nine months of teaching. He said if they teach summer school, they get a month of salary per class.

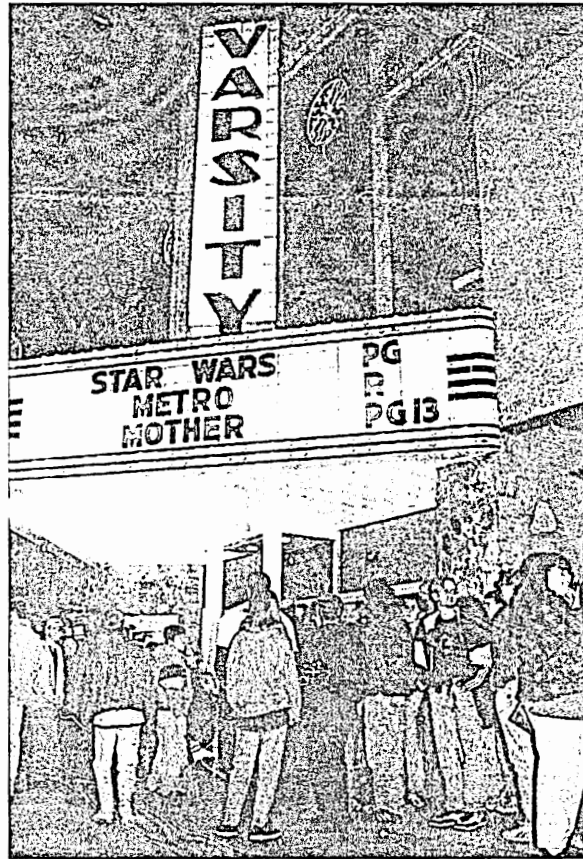

Beggs said not all faculty would have to be under an 11-month contract. He said some

Future dim for Nakajo campus

MAKING THE CUT:

SIUC tries to solve Japan campus' financial problems.

TRAVIS DE'NEAL

There will be cuts in undergraduate programs at SIUC's campus in Nakajo, Japan, and Japan's worsening financial condition could close that campus, SIUC President Ted Sanders says.

We're now in the middle of negotiating remedies to the problems that are faced by the Japanese, while at the same time trying to preserve the core of what has been a valuable and important program for both countries," Sanders said in a press conference at SIUC at Colyer Hall Friday.

Nakajo's English program, along with other core programs, will remain intact, he said, and a list of programs to be cut has

Funding for WSIU-TV and radio stations dwindles

REDUCTIONS: Federal resources restrict stations' air time, programming.

TAMEKA L. HICKS

DAILY EGYPTIAN, BIRDS EYE

WSIU television and radio stations have been forced to increase the annual number of televised fund-raisers, as well as restructure their programming and staff, because of reductions in federal funding, the station manager says.

The stations' federal funding has been reduced from $1,104,000 in 1996 to $807,383 in 1997, and the stations expect to receive no funding by the year 2002, Robert Gerig, WSIU station manager, said.

"This fiscal year, our stations are affected in a major way because of reduced federal funding," Gerig said.

Reduced funds have caused the stations to turn to other sources of funding this year to balance the operations budget. WSIU has asked members, viewers and community businesses to make donations to the radio and television stations, Richard Kuenneke, WSIU-TV producer, said.

Kuenneke said WSIU-TV channel 8 and WSIU-FM 92 in Carbondale as well as WVSI-TV channel 16 and WSIU-FM 90.7 in Olney serve about 36 counties.

"Both television and radio stations reach all the way from Effingham to Cairo," Kuenneke said.

Although the stations have been forced to schedule more fund-raisers, Kuenneke said the stations' programming was not affected as much as expected.

Kuenneke said broadcasting times only have been cut by about two hours. Previously, broadcasting began at 6 a.m. and ended at 2 a.m.

Antics raise school spirit

TRUE COLORS: Students show their pride through use of syrup, Saran Wrap.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REVIEWER

A student's unfavorable comment about an avant-garde performance inspired a man in a furry animal suit and another in a lavender satin nightgown to breakdance to '80s music on Wednesday to settle a challenge of school spirit.

The "Break-off" on Wednesday was the result of challenges issued about an incident involving a plaster sausage that occurred Jan. 23.

On Jan. 23, David Lohman, a junior in art from Elgin, cut a 12-foot-long plaster sausage in half to show the separation of the SIUC student body and to promote his "Spirit Week '97" installation at the Vergette Gallery in the Allyn Building.

Lohman, a performance artist, also asked Brian Buckman, a.k.a. "Trout Gordon the Spirit Boy," a senior in radio-television from Naperville, to dress up in a furry bear costume and pass out bowling cards to students while screaming at them to have school spirit.

Kay Miller, a freshman in computer science from Rockford, made a comment about Lohman's and Buckman's antics, saying she "came to college to get away from things like this."

Buckman issued a breakdancing challenge in a rebuttal against Miller's comments, published in the Daily Egyptian on Wednesday. He challenged Miller to meet at the gallery on Wednesday.

But Miller did not show up to meet the challenge. Instead, Jay Dandurand, a junior in sound engineering from Columbia College in Chicago, said he came to Carbondale to represent Miller.

"I donned a purple nightgown to come out and show Dave I had school spirit," he said.

Miller could not be reached as of press time Sunday.

Dandurand said he managed to travel almost 400 miles in the hours between the publication of the letter and the 4 p.m. competition to take Miller's place.

"I don't know her on a one-to-one personal basis," he said. "But I came out to represent her because I knew she wouldn't (show up)."

Lohman said Wednesday's "Break-Off" and other performances during the week made "Spirit Week" even better than he first imagined. Each day of the week had a school spirit theme and a performance by Lohman at the gallery.

"It came out a lot better than I'd planned," he said. "A lot of people came to the performances, which was really amazing."

For Tuesday's "Funny Hair Day" noon art performance, Lohman said he and his friends cut off all of their pubic hair and placed the hair in a pile on the Allyn Building floor. Another person covered his chest with maple syrup and did 10 push-ups into the pile of hair.

"I think that was a crowd favorite," Lohman said. "It was humorous and kind of an offbeat way to do 'Funny Hair' day."

For Thursday's "Jersey Day" performance, Lohman said he wrapped himself in Saran Wrap, covered himself with soap, baby

The committee is made up of nine representatives from the College of Education and one representative each from the Provost Office, Civil Service Council, Faculty Senate, Graduate Council, Graduate and Professional Student Council, Undergraduate Student Government, Deans' Council and Administrative/Professional Staff Council.

The College of Education dean position currently is occupied by Nancy Quisenberry, who replaced Donald Beggs after he took the chancellor position in July.

Leader seeks to defuse tensions with Turkey

The president of Cyprus has given the United States a commitment that no Greek warplanes will be deployed to an air base under construction on the island at least through the end of his term 13 months from now, according to U.S. officials.

President Glafcos Clerides made the promise to U.S. diplomat Carey Cavanaugh when Cavanaugh visited the island in mid-January on a mission to defuse the latest flare-up of tension between Greece and Turkey, U.S. officials said.

The promise not to receive Greek F-16s, coupled with Clerides's public pledge to wait 16 months before receiving any of the Russian surface-to-air missiles, was designed to give foreign diplomats time to seek a solution to the stale-mated division of Cyprus, sources said.

Candy brings back memories of lost Valentine's sweet gifts

I know women are traditionally the recipients of flowers rather than the senders, but I've decided to celebrate Valentine's Day this year by sending flowers to the man I love. We parted years ago, but I think of him every year around this time, and something buried deep under my cynical shell aches to see him again.

It was the candy this year that made it "all come back to me," as Celine Dion says.

Every year, the bravest, kindest man I've ever known would come over, sweep me into his strong arms, and give me a bristly, whisker-itchy kiss on the cheek.

Then he'd open the bag he'd brought and show me the treasures he had for me: foil-wrapped chocolates, raspberry-flavored gumdrops and — best of all — conversation sweets with words of love printed on them in pink food coloring.

I never gave a damn for romance after I learned there was nothing magic about February 14th (the only holiday you can abbreviate "V.D." — go figure). I grew up, figured out that federal regulations prohibit winged toddlers from bowhunting, and realized there was more to love than tearing Star Wars Valentines apart along the perforations.

But despite my cynicism, I still miss my noble knight in Big Smith overalls.

It all came back to me the other night at Wal-mart as I passed a display of conversation hearts.

Grandpa died when I was 13, but as I looked at those bags of candy, I suddenly saw him sitting in our dining room, my little brother on one knee and my little sister on the other, looking through his bifocals to tell them what the letters on their candy spelled.

I caught a bag and took them home, where I discovered a harsh reminder that things can never stay the same.

I opened the bag and looked at the words on a white heart, expecting to read "Be mine" or "I love you."

Time marches on, I suppose, but my fond memories of Grandpa and his Valentine deliveries crumbled as I read the words: "Fax me." I know it's the '90s, and Internet love is a wonderful thing, but something just doesn't ring true when a conversation sweet says "e-mail me."

Grandpa didn't send me faxes for Valentine's Day. He didn't leave me his beeper number or point-and-click to tell me he loved me. He was there for his kids and his grandkids. No virtual reality. No HTML address. He was there, with real candy and real hugs and real attention for us.

It's awfully hard for Bill Gates to compete with the smell of Grandpa's truck, the sweetness of the M&Ms he brought, or the sincerity of his smile as he used to wave each time he passed our house — just in case somebody happened to be looking out the window.

I won't be calling FTD to put those roses on my plastic this year. I'll be paying cash for them as I talk to a real florist in a real florist's shop before I go out to the cemetery in person to put the flowers on Grandpa's grave. I think I'll leave him one of my conversation hearts, too — the one that says, "Miss You."

I hope he can read it without his glasses from where he is.

Chamber of Commerce should seek input from SIUC students

ALARMED BY THE IMPACT OF DECLINING enrollment on local businesses' pocketbooks, the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce created a recruitment and retention committee to look into keeping SIUC students on campus and to help boost enrollment.

Although it comes a few years after we have seen a decline, it is nice to see that the business leaders have decided that students do help support the town and are concerned with the numbers. However, it loses all effectiveness when we discover that no students were added to the committee.

IT IS AS IF OUR LIVES ARE BEING discussed by our parents while they stand in the room, failing to see the need to ask our opinion on our situation. What a perfect way to tell students, "We miss your money and want you around, but we couldn't care less what you think."

We know the evils of declining enrollment, such as higher tuition for students, lost academic programs and possible layoffs for faculty or staff. And in the community, it becomes pure financial worth.

According to a Chamber of Commerce report, the average SIUC student spends $8,000 per year in Carbondale. The loss of 3,000 students — such as that between fall 1992 and fall 1996 — can be translated as a $24 million loss of funds in Carbondale.

The Chamber should look to others who have communicated with the students about their lives in Carbondale. One reason to speak to the students is to give them responsibility in their situation and another to let them know they are needed in this town.

THE SIUC ADMINISTRATION HAS FOUND the time to meet with students to ask them what can be done about retention. Chancellor Don Beggs has made it a point to meet directly with students, an openness from administration not seen in a long time. From those talks and other searches for answers to the enrollment question, the administration has applied some of the advice from students and hopes to see an increase in enrollment.

The city administration has 23 advisory boards and commissions, and the mayor invites the students to apply to sit on most of them. In this case, the city administration has recognized the students as citizens and is calling them to be responsible for their lives here in this town.

IF THE CHAMBER REALLY WANTS TO FIND out what is going on, it would be wise to seek the advice of those they are talking about.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

U.S. Army ads misleading

Dear Editor:

Have you seen those fabulous advertisements for enlistment into the U.S. Army? It is quite a deal: three or four years of your life for between $18,000 to $23,000 for college. This amount is payable during the four years you attend college, providing you ever do. What Uncle Sam neglects to inform young, prospective soldiers is that three to four years of "thoughtful" military brainwashing can and does intervene in a person's normal social development, often leaving them slovenly out of touch with mainstream society.

I personally am outraged by this modern line of military advertising/propaganda. If OUR country seeks devoted soldiers, let THEM actively seek devoted soldiers. The government should be banned from running recruitment advertisement commercials enticing high school students to enter. Like a cigarette company, the military targets America's youth, but the military approach is much more dangerous than Joe Camel.

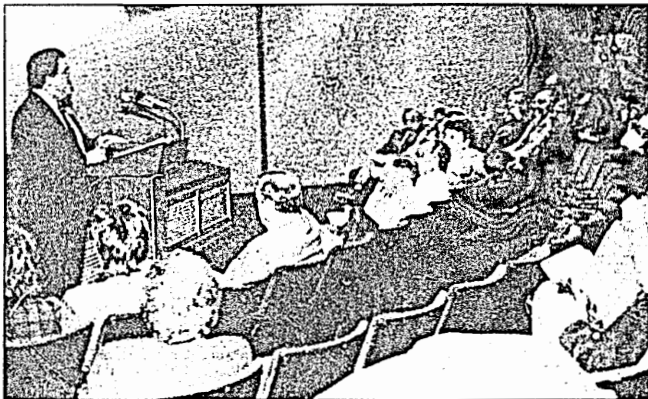

Beware children, many of you will choose to serve your country in return for some money. Also, beware, for many of you will re-enlist back into the ranks. Some of you will try to attend college but will find that it is somewhat awkward being a 22-year-old freshman.

So it seems that our friend, Uncle Sam, gets his cake and eats it, too. The government lures young people in on a false promise of a better life after service and either retains those individuals or eats up their creativity and drive, splitting them out four years later, beaten and mentally molested. In either case the Army gets you to serve and never pays a penny toward your college career. Watch out for deceptive advertising — when it comes to business, our government develops an indifferent attitude towards its citizens.

I have served with a number of men and women in the U.S. Army, and I have seen, many of these people enter for college benefits and never attend college. This method of recruitment is unacceptable to me and should be socially unacceptable. The benefits are not worth the change in character and temperament that the military brings out.

INTRODUCTIONS: Jim Clark, Illinois Education Association-National Education Association (IEA/NEA) UniServ director, explains his role in the SIUC faculty union during the general membership meeting Thursday in the Student Center.

Union seeks members

MAJORITY RULE: IEA/NEA needs to triple membership before contract negotiations start.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICS EDITOR

The 150 members of the SIUC faculty union need to recruit about 300 more members before contract negotiations with the administration begin in March, James Sullivan, union president, says.

"If we are going to have an association that endures, one that's effective, being realistic, we need to triple membership between now and when negotiations start," Sullivan said Thursday at the union's first general membership meeting at the Student Center.

About 150 faculty members attended the SIUC Illinois Education Association/National Education Association meeting.

More than 740 tenured and tenure-track instructors will be represented by the union in faculty contract negotiations, scheduled to begin next month.

"To sit on the sidelines and wait to see how things turn out is unconscionable," Sullivan said. "We absolutely must have a majority."

Kay Carr, chairwoman of the membership and education committee and associate professor of history, said membership is growing but needs to be higher.

"If all of us here went out and recruited two more people to join the union, we'd have a majority by the time we get to the bargaining table," she said. "That's what we need."

Sullivan said each of the 81 SIUC departments must elect a representative to the Bargaining Communications Council, which will advise the contract proposal committee, by Thursday.

The representatives will meet on Feb. 13, he said.

William Capie, associate vice chancellor of administration, said the names of members of the University's bargaining team will be announced this week.

He said the administration will consider the contract proposal made by the faculty union's members.

"They have to go out and recruit their own members,"

Capie said.

Jim Clark, IEA/NEA UniServ director, said that as the SIUC union's adviser and consultant, his main task is helping the union work out its first contract.

He said SIUC's faculty union seems to be ahead of schedule in recruiting members, a process that began on Nov. 21, when the faculty vote to unionize was certified by a state board.

"I've successfully bargained with all different types of membership levels," Clark said. "Obviously, your credibility with the other side is enhanced with greater participation."

Al Melone, Faculty Senate president and political science professor, said faculty members, whether or not they like the idea of having a union, should join it.

"Without full membership, our diversity, our views, our genius as faculty will be lost," Melone said. "The result will be rule by a few and not rule by the many."

"If our membership is small, we cannot expect the other side of the bargaining table to treat our representatives as a credible adversary."

Immigrant law causes concern

APPEAL: Governors call for the restoration of benefits for legal immigrants.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON—U.S. governors, meeting in Washington on Saturday, expressed bipartisan concern about cutbacks in benefits for legal immigrants under last year's welfare reform legislation, but Republicans immediately began backing away from efforts to push Congress hard to change the law.

GOP governors participating in a four-day meeting of the National Governors' Association passed a resolution Saturday opposing any major changes in the welfare reform law. But with some of their own members fearing the financial burden their states will face, the resolution by the Republican Governors' Association also calls on Congress to make "technical corrections" to ease the impact of the law on some categories of legal immigrants.

Democratic governors — and some Republican dissenters — want to do more. They are supporting a proposal before the governors' association calling on Congress to restore cash benefits and food stamps for certain elderly and disabled immigrants who entered the country legally before the welfare law was enacted in August 1996.

Some Republican governors from states with large immigrant populations have pressed to restore immigrant benefits. But their appeals have met with stiff opposition from Republican leaders in Congress who think that any effort to change the welfare law would risk unraveling last year's carefully crafted compromise on the controversial legislation.

Although GOP governors as a group voiced opposition to reopening the welfare law, they left open the possibility that they would support proposals from President Clinton to restore benefits for immigrants when he unveils his budget Thursday.

"We'll have to wait and see what is in his budget," said Michigan Gov. John Engler, a Republican.

The maneuvering among the governors has broad political significance. During the past two years, the GOP-dominated governors' association has been a pivotal ally of Republican leaders on Capitol Hill as Congress has tried to revamp federal welfare and other social programs to give more power and responsibility to the states.

African journalist enhances his skills

SHARING KNOWLEDGE: Expanding his education, Aaron Akwele Sande, an undergraduate student in journalism from Malawi, plans to take his learning experience from America and bring it back with him to teach other journalists at the first Malawi Institute of Journalism.

TEACHING A CRAFT: African native plans to train other journalists in Malawi.

TAMERA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

An African reporter said he will take the knowledge gained from his visit at SIUC to better his country when he returns to Africa at the end of this semester.

Aaron Akwele Sande, an undergraduate student from Malawi, said that by attending SIUC he will have a more rounded background in the field of journalism.

He currently is taking four journalism courses at SIUC.

"Being at this big university is a good experience for me," Sande said.

Sande arrived in America this semester from Malawi, which is a country about the size of Illinois neighboring Zambia.

Sande said when he returns to Malawi in May, he plans to teach and train other journalists at the first Malawi Institute of Journalism that was built in September.

Though Malawi had no journalism schools prior to September, Sande said he learned his craft through other humanitarian projects.

"There was a compelling need for change in democracy in Malawi, so I began my devotional writing for democratic change in my country," he said of his country, which gained independence in 1964.

Sande taught history and wrote English and history textbooks for primary schools for six years. He also has reported for a radio station and newspaper in Malawi.

Sande said he was chosen to attend SIUC by the Freedom Forum International Journalists-in-Residence Program.

The Freedom Forum International Journalists-in-Residence Program is a nonpartisan and international program that chooses international journalism professionals and educators to study news reporting techniques in the United States, said Kerstin Demko, administrative assistant of the Freedom Forum.

Demko said people interested from Africa, Asia, Central and Eastern Europe and Latin America are required to submit an application letter to the Freedom Forum. Twelve people are chosen from a field of about 300 to attend one of nine universities participating in the

Now the broadcast begins at 6:45 a.m. and ends at 12:30 a.m.

Full-time staffing at WSIU and WUSI in Olney has decreased, and the stations have been forced to make part-time positions. Staffing has decreased from 58 to 47.5 in the last year.

Gerig said positions eliminated at WUSI included management, production, sales and the director of technology.

WUSI-TV operations merged with WSIU operations in Carbondale to continue its regular programming, Gerig said.

Student workers at WSIU television and radio stations also have been affected by the reduced funding.

WSIU provides about 150 students with learning experience, Gerig said.

Rob Moates, a senior in radio and television from Buffalo Grove, said there has been significant change in scheduling since funding has been cut.

"It's good that I'm not doing this for the money, but for the learning experience," he said. "I'm working about six hours less a week now, and I still enjoy it."

WSIU-TV has eliminated special acquisition programs such as music specials and movies. Gerig said that with the cutbacks, the station has been able to maintain its PBS schedule, which includes programs such as the Lawrence Welk Show.

Programming for WSIU-radio has cut back on symphony and performance programs because of reduced funding.

Instead of live music announcers, the radio station has turned to using a recorded classical music service, Gerig said.

To compensate for the funding cuts the station will have an increased number of televised pledge drives.

In previous years the stations have had just one drive, but will now have to have four this year, Kuenneke said.

The stations have increased their funds by buying direct mail appeals, telemarketing, member renewals and payroll deduction.

"We have had to make this into a year-long effort," Gerig said.

During December's pledge drive, $20,000 was raised. After the February and March pledge drives are completed, an overall $550,000 is expected to be raised with $123,000 coming from local donations, Gerig said.

Sanders said SIU is negotiating with the Pacific School Entity, a group of Nakajo business people who financially back the Japanese campus, to determine what programs can be cut to keep the campus open.

The next round of negotiations has not been scheduled, he said, but the University will make its decisions by mid-May.

Falling real estate values in Japan have the yen in a downward spiral, Sanders said, and a decrease in the yen means an increase in costs across Japan.

If Japan's economy continues to slide for the next few years, SIU might be forced to close the campus, he said.

"I think that's a possibility, but we're not throwing in the towel now," Sanders said.

The Pacific School Entity will have difficulty meeting this year's expenses in Japan, Sanders said. Since his last visit to Japan in September, the yen has lost 10 percent of its value against the dollar, Sanders said.

The Pacific School Entity's costs will continue to rise as the yen falls, Sanders said, meaning it will be more expensive to fund the Nakajo campus' operations.

Sanders said SIU learned last week that banks in Japan will not lend money to the Pacific School Entity for short-term financing.

"As a consequence, we have been asked by our Japanese partners to consider substantial cutbacks in the program during the next year," Sanders said.

In addition, it is unlikely SIU's Board of Trustees would approve of pumping funds into the Nakajo program, he said.

"Our Board of Trustees has had a long-standing commitment that we would not spend straight dollars in the delivery of the program in Nakajo," he said.

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said the University is considering every option to keep the Nakajo campus open.

"We want to do everything we possibly can to both support our partners and to see what other alternatives we can provide," Beggs said.

Jack Dyer, University Relations executive director, said SIU's presence in Japan distinguishes the University.

"It's important to maintain international dimensions," he said. "It distinguishes us from other Illinois colleges."

Last fall, a decline in enrollment and an increase in maintenance costs at Nakajo resulted in a report that the campus was closing, but University officials said the report was unfounded at that time.

Last semester, enrollment at Nakajo dropped from 327 to 285.

The possibility of closing the Nakajo campus means SIU's efforts to establish a campus in Malaysia are more important, he said.

"This situation says pushing ahead with our discussions in Malaysia are even more important today than they were yesterday," he said.

In October, SIU announced it will try to open a campus in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to increase its presence in the Pacific. The University estimated a campus there would be more affordable to students than the Nakajo campus.

The program in Nakajo, located northwest of Tokyo, began in 1988, primarily as an English-as-a-second-language program.

In 1989, the undergraduate curriculum, taught mostly by American faculty, was expanded. An exchange program lets about 15 American students attend the Nakajo campus each semester.

could choose to remain on a nine-month contract. Also an 11-month contract would not necessarily mean faculty would have to teach during the summer.

He said if the student demand was there, faculty could teach more classes during the spring or fall semester and still be paid for 11 months of work. Beggs said there have been no decisions to implement the plan, and the faculty union will have to decide if it wishes to pursue an 11-month contract.

James Sullivan, SIUC faculty union president, said the discussion of the 11-month plan is too vague, and the details need to be clarified.

"We simply do not know enough about it at this point," Sullivan said.

Alan Karnes, director of the School of Accountancy and a Faculty Senate member, said the plan may negatively impact how the University operates.

"It would actually mean more money for faculty," Karnes said. "But I don't know if there is enough money in the budget to do it. The University would have to determine where the money would come from."

Beggs said the plan would work financially only if there was student demand for classes in the summer.

"My assumption was students are interested in completing in a more timely manner and taking more courses over the summer," Beggs said.

"If that's faulty, then we don't have the dollars to fund it."

Beggs said not enough courses are offered in the summer, and students do not have enough time to plan on taking them. He said, however, that only courses that could be effectively condensed to an eight-week format would be taught in the summer.

Beggs said the plan would allow summer courses to be planned two or three years in advance, so students could plan their futures better.

"For the faculty, I see the potential to earn more dollars in the calendar year and to schedule for that," Beggs said. "With most universities you don't know about your summer teaching opportunities until less than seven or eight months before you teach."

William Turley, a political science professor, said although the plan would provide faculty with more pay, it could compromise the research done by the faculty over the summer.

"Contrary to common opinion, the faculty doesn't spend those three months repairing their cars or repainting their house," Turley said. "We do research, and we provide work for the state, for which the state does not pay us."

Karnes said the plan is a good idea if the questions about researching and funding can be ironed out.

"I think if we are really serious about this, we need to deal with these questions on paper and come up with proposals that can be looked at by everyone," Karnes said.

Clinton's speech to address balanced budget, welfare

STATE OF THE UNION: Analysts say this will be first time to reset policy agenda.

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—This is the week when President Clinton gets to claim the prize he won in the November election. It is the chance, for the first time in two years, to again set Washington's policy agenda rather than merely respond to the Republicans.

With the State of the Union speech he will deliver on Tuesday night, and the annual budget he will release on Thursday, Clinton hopes to ensure that the season of bipartisan cooperation he promised in last month's Inaugural Address will be on his terms.

The reality of divided government means there will be plenty of arguments to come: How much should Medicare be cut? Do tax breaks for education make sense? Clinton's centrist repositioning in 1995 and 1996 means he already has accepted Republican assumptions about spending and taxes far different than those he came to Washington with four years ago.

For the State of the Union, the goal is to demonstrate that there is concrete policy substance behind the high-flown but vague rhetoric from the inauguration about education and embracing the future.

The speech will begin, aides said, with an appeal for Congress to work with him on "unfinished business": reaching a balanced budget deal, implementing last year's overhaul of welfare and enacting campaign finance reform legislation.

Then it will pivot into a long section on education, in which Clinton will call for "national standards" on education and argue, in more detail than he has in the past, how the federal government can work with states and localities to fashion more rigorous curriculums and testing.

White House aides say they hope the speech will demonstrate to skeptics that the long string of poll-tested proposals Clinton made during the election campaign, such as encouraging volunteer efforts, wiring schools for the Internet and tax credits for college tuition.

United States. This is the first year SIUC has participated.

Sande said SIUC is almost triple the size of the University of Malawi. The University of Malawi only enrolls about 8,000 students to SIUC's 22,000. The size of SIUC also makes more room for international students, Sande said.

"This campus is so big, there are students here who speak all types of languages," he said. "In Malawi, students may only speak Latin, French, and English."

Sande said there are more things to do in America than in his home country.

"There are more financial problems in Malawi, so we don't have as many activities," he said.

But Sande said he has not had the chance to explore all that the area has to offer.

"I'd been expecting good times here in Carbondale, but the cold weather is keeping me from seeing the city and the people," said Sande, who is used to tropical weather and cool winters in Malawi, which is south of the equator.

Sande said besides the climate change, there is a cultural difference. He said there are more women in high positions in Carbondale, and women are treated as equals as opposed to in Malawi, where men are considered dominant to women.

"It's great that women are in high places (in America)," he said.

Donald Jugenheimer, director of the School of Journalism, said the school is happy to have Sande this semester and hopes more international students will follow in future years.

It's great that women are in high places (in America).

AARON AKWETE SANDE
UNDERGRADUATE FROM MALAWI

Jugenheimer said that in the School of Journalism, 62 percent of international students are in the master's program, and 38 percent are in the doctorate program. International students in the undergraduate program make up only 2.2 percent.

"If Sande is influential upon his return to Malawi, hopefully more students will want to come here," Jugenheimer said.

Now that Malawi has been independent since 1964, Sande said other journalists have been able to study in other countries.

"My primary goal is to advance in education and academically," he said.

Baseball agent shows off latest Cuban talent

DRAFTED: Joe Cubas helps diamond prospects defect from Cuba for U.S. teams

THE WASHINGTON POST

Joe Cubas is at it again. The Miami-based agent has helped about a dozen baseball players to defect from Cuba in recent years — usually with methods worthy of a spy movie — and last week approximately 40 major league scouts attended three days of workouts in Homestead, Fla., showcasing Cubas's three latest clients.

Cubas told reporters that he has begun receiving offers from clubs for outfielder William Ortega, 21, second baseman Jesus "Chuly" Ametller, 22, and first baseman Roberto Colina, 26. The commissioner's office has declared the three free agents, and Cubas indicated that he would like to get them signed by spring training.

In January 1996, Cubas negotiated a four-year, $4.5 million contract — with another potential $1.5 million in incentives — with the Florida Marlins for pitcher Livan Hernandez. Cubas got a three-year, $3.2 million deal (which contains an option year and could be worth as much as $4.9 million over four seasons) with the San Francisco Giants for pitcher and Cuban defector Osvaldo Fernandez. The following month, two more defectors and Cubas clients — pitchers Vladimir Nunez and Larry Rodriguez — signed with the expansion Arizona Diamondbacks for $1.7 million and $1.3 million, respectively.

Some baseball executives say that Ortega, Ametller and Colina probably won't get deals nearly as lucrative. "These guys aren't as good," said a front-office executive from one major-league team who saw last week's workout and indicated that his club won't be pursuing Cubas's latest clients.

The Baltimore Orioles were in the bidding for Hernandez, Fernandez, Nunez and Rodriguez, but team officials said last week they don't plan to make a strong push to sign Ortega, Ametller or Colina.

Hernandez and Fernandez had disappointing 1996 seasons. Hernandez made only one major-league appearance and dropped from Class AAA Charlotte to Class AA Portland (Maine) during the season, and Fernandez had a 7-13 record and a 4.61 earned run average for the Giants.

Cubas uses secret meetings, notes passed through intermediaries and 3 a.m. hotel-room planning sessions to help players defect while they're traveling with the Cuban national team. He usually has established residency for his players in the Dominican Republic.

He made Ortega, Ametller and Colina residents of Costa Rica. Residents of the United States and its territories are subject to the amateur draft. Cubas's players have avoided the draft and have become free agents, and he's been able to increase their price tags by negotiating with all the clubs instead of having one of his player's rights held by a single team.

The big-money signings of Hernandez, Fernandez, Nunez and Rodriguez led some baseball-management officials to lobby for a worldwide draft. EA sources close to the situation say team owners never pushed very hard for that during their recently completed labor negotiations with the Players Association.

The union almost certainly never would agree to a worldwide draft, sources said — and even if it would, there would be a legal question as to whether it could make such an agreement involving players who technically are not part of its membership until they're on a 40-man major-league roster.

Hudson said he has tried to concentrate more on other areas of his game, especially rebounding, to help the team get back on the winning track.

Much like Monday's game against Creighton, the Salukis opened up quickly against the Bulldogs. SIUC jumped out to a 10-0 lead and matched a 27-17 lead that they had in the first half against Creighton.

But while the Salukis blew their 10-point lead against the Bluejays Monday, SIUC built its lead to 43-31 against the Bulldogs heading into the locker room at the end of the first half.

Something Jenkins said may have helped the Salukis get back on track was a players-only meeting that took place prior to practice Thursday afternoon to air out some differences and bring the team closer together.

Hudson said the Salukis addressed trying to prevent teams from making comebacks similar to Creighton's at Thursday's meeting.

"We talked at practice that if we get a team down, we want to continue to do the things that got us there," Hudson said. "Tonight, we were more focused when we got a lead, we took good shots and knocked them down."

Drake, whose tallest player was 6 foot 7 inches tall, stayed within 10 points for the start of the second half, but the Salukis' size wore down the Bulldogs, and SIUC pulled away for an 18-point victory.

The win also marked two milestones for the Salukis. Herrin earned his 100th career win in Missouri Valley Conference play. Hudson broke the conference's single-season record for three-point field goals of 94 by hitting six three-pointers against the Bulldogs. He currently has a total of 97 for the season.

SIUC now travels to Indiana State University tonight for a rematch with the Sycamores in Terre Haute, Ind., at 6:05 p.m. The Salukis hammered ISU 99-61 at SIUC Arena to open their three-game homestand Jan. 25.

Jenkins said the Sycamores will be looking for revenge at home tonight.

CAROLYN VITTORETTI/Daily Egyptian

LISTEN UP: The Salukis get advice from "basketball coach Rich Herring Saturday evening during the game against Drake University at the SIU Arena. The Salukis beat the Drake Bulldogs 80-62.

"We had their number here," Jenkins said. "But anytime you play on the road, you've got to play even better than you do at home. I know they're going to be ready to play us, but we've got to just go in and play our game."

Saturday's win also opened a crucial four-game stretch in the Salukis' season. After tonight's contest at Indiana State, the Salukis host sixth-place Wichita State University Wednesday and travel to Des Moines, Iowa, for a rematch with Drake Saturday.

Herrin said beating Indiana State by 38 points and having to play them again so soon could present the Salukis with some problems. But picking up three wins could put them right back in the conference race.

"Indiana State concerns me very much," Herrin said. "Indiana State played with a lot of confidence in their next two games. But if we can get the next three, we can be right back in the hunt."

Five-time winner at Pebble sets tournament record, nets $342,000

THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif.—In golf, you have something called local knowledge, and Mark O'Meara knows this place like the back of his hand.

O'Meara knows every grain of sand, every blade of grass, every tree, every sea lion and every pebble at Pebble Beach.

He just has to, because there is no other explanation for what O'Meara did Sunday on some of the most famous real estate in golf. He held off Tiger Woods and won the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am for the fifth time.

It's getting so that when you think of this tournament, Bing Crosby, Carmel Bay and Mark O'Meara will be mentioned in the same breath as rain falling sideways and wind bending flagsticks into pretzels.

"There must be someone floating high above the Monterey Peninsula who's a huge Mark O'Meara fan," O'Meara said.

The 40-year-old with the syrupy swing birdied two of the last three holes, closed with his fourth consecutive 67, set a tournament record with his score of 268 and won a personal-best $342,000.

And if that isn't enough, O'Meara proved to be tougher than the bark on that lone Cypress tree when he managed to avoid getting tackled by Woods in the stretch.

Woods, who had a 63 Saturday, finished with a 64 and missed a playoff by one shot. Woods and David Duval tied for second, four shots ahead of Jim Furyk.

In the end, the 51st edition of what began as Crosby's clambake and golf outing for his buddies turned into a contest between neighbors from the same resort community in Florida, who got fishing together and play a little friendly golf on the side.

"I love Mark to death," said Woods, 19 years younger than O'Meara. "We talked about it back home—'Wouldn't it be great to battle it out down the stretch?' Lo and behold, that's what happened."

Woods birdied the par-3 17th to get within one shot of O'Meara, but O'Meara answered with his own birdie on the 17th, rolling in a 10-footer.

That left only the 548-yard par-5 18th, and Woods knew he needed an eagle, so he went for it. With 260 yards to the pin, Woods smoked a 3-wood to the left front of the green.

He had about 35 feet to the hole to make eagle, but Woods sent the ball rolling about three feet past on the right. He made birdie, but O'Meara needed only to par the last to win, which he accomplished easily.

That was his final chance, and he had put himself in those straits when, on the 13th hole, he tried an aggressive flop shot after missing the green. But Woods failed to keep the ball below the hole and walked away with a bogey.

It has been an all right career for O'Meara, who has not won a major tournament, but in 17 years owns 13 victories. And now five are from Pebble Beach—1985, 1989, 1990, 1992 and 1997.

What's more, he didn't let Woods win, which seems to be news these days.

"He's the hottest thing in sports right now," O'Meara said. "To hold off a young, talented player, well, hey, OK, that's great for the 40-year-olds."

REDBIRDS

Jackson was the Salukis' main three-point threat prior to her injury, shooting 43 percent from behind the arc, which was third in the conference.

Senior guard and co-captain Kasia McClendon was held to 12 points and three steals, but her effort was good enough to make her the MVC steals leader with 319 and earned her 1,000 points for her career.

McClendon, who was awarded the game ball for her record-setting performance, said the accomplishment was overshadowed by the team's loss.

"It was a big accomplishment," she said. "But it was hard to feel lippy because we lost two games in a row."

Despite the two losses, the team captain said she thought the Salukis gave a good effort.

We didn't shoot well, but I think we are playing better. I am proud of the team because we played better than Indiana State...

KASIA MCCLENDON
SENIOR GUARD

"We didn't shoot well, but I think we are playing better," McClendon said.

"Bajwa is our best runner in that event (400 meters)," DeNoon said. "Sheila Hollins won the event, but if Bajwa would have ran, there was the possibility of more points."

"But Hollins was in a class by herself in the 400-meter dash." Hollins said her race was mentally tough for her, but she really wanted the victory.

"I didn't think that there was any more pressure than usual," she said. "I just wanted to do well."

DeNoon said he also was pleased with the performance of freshman Jenny Monaco, who finished second in the 5,000-meter run with a time 18:07.

Another standout from Saturday's invitational was senior Heather Greeling. Greeling, who was seeded eighth in the triple jump, won the event with a jump of 37-8 1/2, which DeNoon said was a pleasant surprise.

The SIUC men's track and field squad finished fifth at the invitational with 56.5 points, behind IU's 139 point first-place effort.

Coach Bill Cornell said his Salukis could have done much better.

"I'm happy. We had a few good performances this weekend," Cornell said. "But the team just didn't click as one."

Cornell said his immediate area of concern were his jumpers, whom he believes are having trouble faulting jumps.

Faulting a jump is when a triple or long jumper steps on the board at take-off.

One Saluki who hasn't had any trouble with faulting jumps has been freshman Jeraldo Henry, who won the triple jump with a leap of 47-7 1/4.

We had a few good performances this weekend. But the team just didn't click as one.

BILL CORNELL
MEN'S TRACK COACH

Cornell said he was very pleased with Henry's performance in the triple jump.

Indiana State University and Eastern Illinois University, who finished ahead of the men's track and field team at the meet, will pay a visit to Carbondale Saturday.

Cornell said the team needs to be focused on Indiana State and EIU before Saturday.

"We're having a team meeting Tuesday so that we can get together as a team for this weekend's meet," Cornell said.

Both the men's and women's track and field teams will compete Saturday in the McDonald's-Saluki Invitational at the Recreation Center. The meet begins at 10 a.m.

"I am proud of the team because we played better than Indiana State, and hopefully that will carry over Tuesday (when the team plays Vanderbilt University), and the rest of the conference season."

Scott said she and the team were disappointed with the loss, but the Salukis are not giving up yet.

"The kids were crying after the game in the locker room," she said. "And I have great appreciation for that because it tells me how much they care."

"We are staying together, and if I have to lose with any team, I would want to lose with this team."

The Salukis will next play 7th-ranked Vanderbilt University Tuesday in a non-conference contest. Tip-off is 7 p.m. in Nashville, Tenn.
