Man arrested in death of SIU instructor

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A Carbondale man was charged with the murder of SIUC assistant professor Loyd V. Yates Saturday at a city mobile home park.

Yates, a 52-year-old assistant professor in the College of Applied Sciences and Arts, reportedly was slain in apartment 25 of the Roxanne Mobile Home Park, 2301 S. Illinois Ave., by a Carbondale man who is in custody.

Francis Ambrose Lynch, 47, who resides at apartment 25, is being held in the Jackson County Jail on $100,000 bond on a charge of first-degree murder.

Carbondale Police evacuated residents from the area after being informed around 4 p.m. that Lynch may have been armed with a high-powered rifle inside the apartment.

Yates already was dead inside, but police said Lynch could have been a threat to the park because he possessed a high-powered rifle.

Acting Police Chief John Sysma would not release the official cause of death but said a rifle was not used in the homicide.

Police staked out the trailer for nearly six hours, and two warrants were served around 10:30 p.m., when police discovered Yates' body, made contact with Lynch and said he surrendered without further complications.

A rifle was not found inside the trailer or the suspect's vehicle, police said.

Sysma said Lynch currently is the only suspect in the murder. "We are not actively seeking any other suspects," he said.

Confession prompts death-row release

Anthony Porter is now free on his own recognizance after being on death row for nearly 17 years.

Porter, 43, was scheduled to be the first man executed at Tamm Correctional Center after being convicted in the 1982 murder of an 18-year-old man and 19-year-old woman. The Chicago couple was shot to death.

In September, Porter was two days away from being executed for the crime when questions of his mental stability forced authorities to stay his execution.

It was slated for Sept. 23, 1998. Porter has an I.Q. of 51 and was found not mentally fit to be executed, according to his attorney.

Porter was released after officials reviewed a confession by another man who confessed to the murder. Alstory Simon, of Milwaukee, gave a videotaped interview to a private investigator confessing to the double murder.

Journalism students at Northwestern University aided in Porter's release. The students recovered the videotaped confession, and a Northwestern University professor worked with a Chicago private investigator.

Daniel Sanders, Porter's attorney, filed a motion for a fitness hearing in September and supplemented his motion, in which state's attorneys agreed to let the information be reviewed.

A judge will hear new evidence in the 1982 murder Tuesday, and the state's attorney's office is reviewing the

Spring Thing unaffected by SPC move

Spring Thing, the annual event sponsored by the Student Programming Council, will not be adversely affected by SPC's continuing administrative move from Student Development to the Student Center, according to SPC Executive Director Andrew Daly.

Daly said the event, which is funded by SPC, does not require any money from the state funding allocated to SPC. One of the issues that has delayed SPC's move concerns state funding — specifically how much will transfer with SPC and how much will remain with Student Development.

Spring Thing will be supported by a combination of other SPC funds and outside sponsorship, Daly said. He still is seeking sponsors for the event. An act has yet to be announced, but a large concert similar to last year's Ziggy Marley show is expected.

Daly said that while SPC is working to coordinate their activities with both the Student Center and Student Development, the timeline for their transfer has not changed. He said the two units, with the assistance of Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch, have been discussing how to best resolve

- In Seattle, a 14-year old student walked into a junior high school classroom in rural Washington and opened fire with a high-powered rifle, killing a teacher and two students and injuring another student. The young gunman "was just a kid who said he was angry," said a youth director at a church near the school in Moses Lake, Wash.
- Three works of art said to be worth up to $15 million—including two by Pablo Picasso—were stolen in what law enforcement sources described as one of the largest art thefts at John F. Kennedy Airport.
- Tom Egner, WDBX-FM director and 1971 SIUC alumnus, said what began as a dream four years ago was nearing fulfillment as WDBX 91.1 began broadcasting this week. WDBX-FM, a not-for-profit station, would play a diverse mix of music ranging from alternative to new age and from rap to old time country, as well as news, art and community announcements, Egner said.
- Movies playing were "12 Monkeys," "McHolland's Opus," "Black Sheep" and "From Dusk Till Dawn."

Muskees shocked by new fishing technique

FRANK KLIMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A day in the life of two fisheries division workers can be stunning when they search for muskees at Kinkaid Lake's spillway in Murphysboro.

Their small aluminum boat slowly motors around the pool below the spillway. Long steel electrode cables draped in the water in front of the boat make the water-craft look like a giant whiskered catfish.

They corner one of the large fish with the boat's electrified tentacles, and it passively floats to the surface. They are using an electric current, which is supplied by an on-board generator, to stun the fish. One of the men scoops the fish with a large net and places it in a tank aboard the boat.

Chris Bickers, district fisheries manager for the Illinois Department of Natural Resources, continues to search for more muskees. This fish was the 195th stunned and caught since this operation began in June 1996. Stunning does not hurt the muskie because it has a primitive nervous system. The electric current momentarily causes an imbalance in the ballast system, which causes them to float to the surface.

The stunned muskees are weighed, measured and tagged, and they then will be returned to Lake Kinkaid.

This fish is 36 inches long and already has a tag. This one, tag number 448, is a repeat offender. It was first caught in June 1996, which is when the fish stunning operation began, and it has grown three inches since then. Number 448 has become conscious and is swimming strongly in its tank.

The muskees are being caught so they can be released later into Kinkaid Lake. Stunning is a feasible method for transplanting fish and can be just as challenging as using a rod and reel.

"This is the most humane option we have," Bickers said. "It's a lot like fishing."

The muskie is a large fish that can grow to more than 48 inches in length. The fisheries division of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources began stocking Kinkaid Lake in the mid-1980s so people could catch them. The muskees are only eight to 10 inches long when they are put into the lake, and it takes about 10 years for the them to grow to full adult size.

The first muskees stocked in the lake only have recently matured to full size. The minimum size limit to catch muskees is 48 inches long. It is hard for state game wardens to regulate the minimum size law when the muskie population is spread out, so it is important to catch the muskees and return them to where they can be monitored until they mature.

"Last time we did this we caught 18 muskees," said Chris Mohrman, conservation police officer for the Illinois Department of Natural Resources. "That's good news — now we know the fence is working."

Mohrman is referring to the new spillway barrier designed to keep the large muskie from washing down the spillway out of Kinkaid Lake. If the fish wash out of the lake, they can wind up in the Big Muddy River and eventually into the Mississippi River. Now that the barrier is up, they hope to drastically reduce the number of muskees lost down the spillway.

"The odds of them getting out of the lake are pretty slim," said Shawn Hirst, district fisheries manager for the Illinois Department of Natural Resources. "If I were a betting man, I'd bet against it."

Completed in October, this will be the first spring for the spillway barrier. The lake level normally rises in the spring because of frequent rain and melting snow. In the past, muskees were washed over the spillway and out of the lake when the water level rose.

According to Hirst, the job he and Bickers are doing to control the muskie population will ultimately benefit both the fish and the fishermen.

To the multitudes who enjoy visiting the spillway during the warmer months, the three-foot barrier may look like a fence designed to keep people out too. Hirst does not want to send the wrong message.

"The barrier is not going to keep anyone from laying out," Hirst said. "It won't affect people from hanging out here."

Hirst explained that people who want to climb on the spillway still can and should not be intimidated or upset by the steel fence-like barrier.

"You can just walk right up to it and climb over," Hirst said.

JASON KATZNER/DAILY EGYPTIAN

In an attempt to catch muskees that escaped over the new fish barrier at Lake Kinkaid's spillway, Shawn Hirst, district fisheries manager for the Illinois Department of Natural Resources, nets a muskie at the bottom of the falls.

College students overcome fear of donating blood

"I hate this part," Sarah Sharon cries out, referring to the needle phlebotomist Pamela Taylor inserts into her vein at a blood drive at the Recreation Center Friday.

A few seconds later, Sharon is sitting up and smiling, contentedly squeezing a plastic tube to encourage blood flow and waiting for her blood donation to end.

Sharon, a freshman in exercise science from Bushnell, said although she has donated before, she still feels uncomfortable around needles.

"I do not like to watch," Sharon said. "Usually my boyfriend has to come in to hold my hand."

Taylor, who has worked with the American Red Cross for two years, said for the most part, college students donate blood easily despite rampant horror stories.

"In high school people see extreme reactions, and that tends to cause negative feelings toward donating in the future," Taylor said.

Red Cross blood supply on the rebound

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Blood supply levels at the St. Louis-area American Red Cross are slowly recovering after dropping Jan. 15 to one-half of the needed amount, according to Vivian Ugent, Southern Illinois coordinator of the American Red Cross.

"Every January we use a lot of blood, and this January was no exception," she said. "Large amounts of blood were used, but little blood was coming in."

"It is taking us a long time to catch up," Ugent said low blood supplies are a result of the snow and ice that affected the Southern Illinois area earlier this year.

"It is partly due to the inclement weather in the first part of January," Ugent said. "It is obvious that accidents increase when roads are icy."

Ugent said the weather has caused a greater need for blood, while at the same time causing drives to be canceled.

"Many blood drives are held at local schools," Ugent said. "When schools close due to weather, it prevents people from donating."

SIUC graduate directs Illinois Department of Revenue

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

His resume brimming with accomplishments, SIUC graduate Glenn Bower is now set to tackle yet another challenge — directing the Illinois Department of Revenue.

The Department of Revenue administers 72 tax laws, collects $2.1 billion annually and has 2,450 employees.

Bower, who received his bachelor's degree in government in 1971, was appointed to his latest position by Gov. George Ryan Jan. 19.

Previously Bower had served as an assistant to Ryan when the Republican governor was secretary of state.

In fact, Ryan is the man who encouraged Bower to campaign for a spot in the General Assembly in 1979. He did and represented the 54th District in the Illinois House of Representatives until 1983.

The lifelong resident of Effingham County said knowing Ryan during the years has been beneficial in making acquaintances throughout the state.

"George Ryan has a very significant network of people who have met him at various points during his career," Bower said.

But by no means was his connection with the governor the catalyst for Bower's professional success.

Along with his stint in the General Assembly and becoming an assistant to Ryan, Bower racked up plaudits in several other capacities, including chairman of the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board. Bower was appointed to this position by President George Bush in 1990.

Making it a year-round program

MCMA's Hollywood Studies presents better opportunity for students

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The College of Mass Communications and Media Arts will be changing the Hollywood Studies Program to a year-long program by the summer of 2000.

The Hollywood Studies Program has become a year-long program from a summer program. It is designed for MCMA students to work at internships in Los Angeles.

Students would be working alongside those who are producing daytime television shows, the Discovery Channel and the Learning Channel.

Doug Smart, Hollywood Studies internship coordinator, said making the program year-long will enhance the experience the student would receive.

"They would get to work on the production of 'ER' or 'NYPD Blue' because they would get to be there in the fall during the production," he said.

Smart said the program cannot send students to Los Angeles without academics for an entire year. He said the students will be taught by an adjunct faculty in their field during the evenings after work.

Smart said Hollywood Studies is not just a program for cinema and television students. Anybody in MCMA can take advantage of the Hollywood Studies Program.

Smart said journalism students can gain experiences in news production such as interning at the L.A. Times. Classes in the evenings would be given by an adjunct faculty who works at the L.A. Times.

Smart said Joe Foote, Mike Starr and some of the Hollywood alumni created the idea of turning the Hollywood Studies Program into a year-long program.

Foote, dean of MCMA, said the idea was more of a consensus and seemed like a natural thing to do.

Foote spoke highly of the Hollywood Studies program becoming a year-long program.

"The film industry is on hiatus during the summer," Foote said. "By the time film production begins, our students have to leave."

Sarah Sterling, senior in cinema from East Moline, said the lengthening of the program is a good idea.

"The working environment creates a hands-on experience, which will be more of a crucial benefit to future job experience, which the University setting doesn't give," Sterling said.

Mike Moreland, a senior in cinema from Farmington, Mich., agrees with Sterling.

"It's very good," Moreland said. "Especially if you are there during production time. You'll learn so much more during a year than the way it stands now during the summer — it's too short."

Interacting with MCMA's new master piece

Combination of music and technology brings different experience to multimedia students.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Peter Riley and Maurice Methot have combined their experiences of technology and music in providing a basis for a new master's program in the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts.

Riley, acting director of the New Media Center in MCMA, works side-by-side with Maurice Methot. They have been named the "odd couple" because of their diverse backgrounds.

"We are such extremes," Riley said, "but we really provide experience, methodology and perspective to students which can overwhelm them at times — but it also gives them the benefit of getting the broadest perspective in the field."

Riley said the Interactive Multimedia Program began Fall 1997 with a group of 14 students. The program is designed for two years but can be completed in a year and a half.

A student must complete 39 hours to receive a master's in Mass Communications and Media Arts with an emphasis in interactive multimedia.

The three elements — students focus on for their master's are research, theory and production.

Twenty-one credit hours are focused in production, and students learn software packages, portfolio quality production and design a website to display some of their classwork.

The Interactive Multimedia Program consists of nine hours of theory and three hours of research.

Riley comes to the program with 10 years of Air Force service and has worked in an industry of digital video, production and management.

Riley is doing consulting work for the Pentagon in the Air Force. These matters consist of uses in technology in multimedia and instructional environment.

Methot graduated from Brown University with a master's in music composition and has performed all over the world. Methot has knowledge with analog video editing, audio and video production and visual and sound design. He has worked for MTV.

Riley said once a student has completed the Interactive Multimedia Program, the potential for employment is great.

Jobs such as interactive courseware developer, multimedia production manager, website developer, 3-D modular and/or animator and interactive marketing/advertising developer become available to the graduates.

Riley said the requirements for the master's program are a 3.0 GPA in the last 60 hours of the student's undergraduate career along with three letters of recommendation.

The application also requires the prospective student to answer four essay questions and turn in a portfolio depending on the student's major.

The program only can enroll 15 students per year because of staff limitations, facility limitations and space limitations.

Riley said classes for the program are taught during the day. However, night classes would accommodate professionals who work during the day.

Tonia Berry, a graduate student from Bluffs, has been in the program since it started.

Berry said most classes in the new master's program are related to the multimedia.

"I find the program exciting and recommend it to people," Berry said. "It's exciting in finding different aspects to multimedia. It's a wonderful opportunity to expand existing skills that I have and increase job opportunities for me."

financial and personnel issues. He said state funding is the main reason the move may not be complete until this summer. The funds may not be available for transfer until the new fiscal year, which begins July 1.

Daly originally had hoped to complete the move between last semester and this semester and had received support from Undergraduate Student Government, who approved of from his hometown of Herrin.

"He maintained friendships with people he had known since childhood," said John Magney, an assistant professor in the College of Applied Sciences and Arts.

"He was a gentle man," Magney said. "He was a very talented teacher."

Christian Hale, a neighbor and an SIUC senior originally from Murphysboro, remembered the police investigation began in the early afternoon.

"All day long there were police units down at the entrance way," Hale said. "Little did I know, it was happening two doors down, so like all day long, I was driving into the middle of a hostage situation."

A neighbor of Lynch, who requested anonymity, said the situation was a shock and described the suspect as a reserved man.

"You'll probably find from most of the people out here that they did think he was strange, weird," she said. "But that's just because he's real quiet. He's a nice guy."

Ruth Harmon, assistant director at the Good Samaritan House where Lynch worked, said he never had mentioned Yates.

She agreed Lynch was quiet and said he was an efficient worker, but news of Lynch's arrest came as a shock to her.

"Frank was a good worker," Harmon said.

"We would have no intention that anything of this nature was going to happen. He was a quiet person. We never experienced any emotional outbursts or anything like that."

Although police said Lynch was in possession of a high-powered rifle, another neighbor, who also requested anonymity, said she did not hear gunshots.

Brett Hoffman, an SIUC senior from Springfield, said he felt the area was safe.

"I've never had personally any trouble at all," Hoffman said.

Ever seen a 275-pound worm? He is well-known by many in this town. Folks have seen him lumbering along quietly across campus. A giant "worm" traveling unstopably through the world. Some greet him, some whisper among themselves, "Hey, isn't that Worm?"

He is as much a part of the Carbondale subculture as the Strip or Winston the Wandering Bagel Man.

Meet Worm — the man, the hero, the legend. In a small dark corner of Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., Tim "the Worm" Lubbs describes himself as easy to get along with, despite his imposing size.

And as a bouncer at Hangar 9, Worm says he's only rough when he has to be.

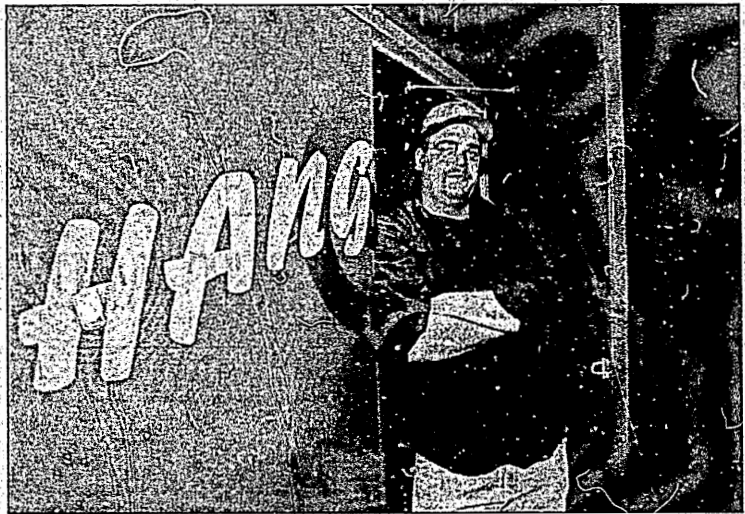

"So a girl hits this guy in the face with a bottle," Worm says with an amused grin. "I walk over to toss her out of the bar, and this guy she's with spits on me."

While telling this story, Worm shifts his 6-foot-3-inch, 275-pound frame back and gestures incredulously with his huge hands.

"I've got the girl under my arm, I reach back and grab the guy by the head," Worm says. "Out they went."

Worm has touched the lives, and heads, of many people in Carbondale. Making friends almost every night, students know him for his open personality and his incredible strength.

"Worm's the kind of guy that when you get to know him, he's a great guy to know," said Sarah Senesac, a senior in university studies from Carbondale. "I once saw Worm pick a guy up by his feet, scratch his back with the kid and then set him back down," said Mike Lamphere, a junior in education from Carbondale.

A student himself, Worm studies social studies and education at John A. Logan College in Carterville. He said he likes the Carbondale area because of the availability of outdoor activities.

"I like to go hiking and fishing," Worm said. "It's a small town with a lot of big-town qualities."

Despite his shocking tales of violence and palming people's heads, Worm said he feels there is little violence in the bars.

"I think there are fewer instances at the Hangar 9 than other places I've been," Worm said.

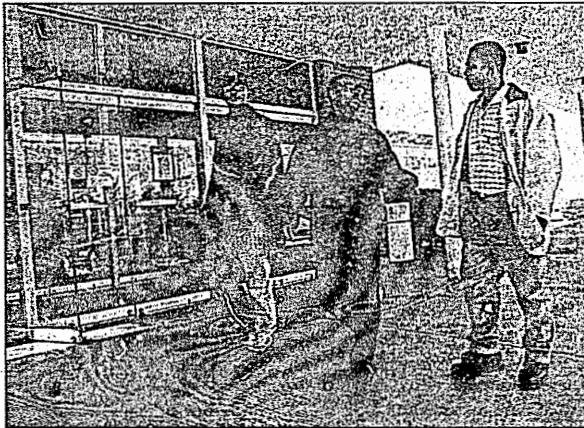

Raised in the small town of Mendota, Worm worked on his father's farm. In his youth, he played football and wrestled in high school. But contrary to his fabled strength, Worm claims he doesn't work out much anymore.

Worm resides on College Street in Carbondale, where he lives with three girls from the SIUC women's rugby team.

BAC to unveil new freshman, transfer mentoring program

JESSICA ZAMORA/Daily Egyptian

Joe Ryuen (left), a transfer student in political science from Chicago, takes advantage of a new mentoring program offered by the Black Affairs Council. DelMarcus Collins (center), a senior in history from Chicago and Marshon Johnson, a junior in political science from Chicago, offer their guidance to new and transfer students.

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For Marshon Johnson, mentoring students, not only rewards them but himself as well.

"I feel great because I am helping other people help students — students that may not have anyone else to help them," said Johnson, a junior in political science from Chicago.

The Black Affairs Council is introducing a mentoring program for freshmen and transfer students, assisting them with anything from advising classes to where to get a haircut.

Sean Henry, chairman of campus community affairs for BAC, is the organizer for the program. He said the mentoring concept was introduced to him by BAC Coordinator Sean Smith.

"Sean Smith brought up the idea in a meeting — he is the brain behind the individual plan," Henry said.

The mentors, ranging from sophomores to seniors, are assigned to students by majors. They help them with financial aid concerns, adjusting to the University and informing them about courses for their majors.

Smith, a junior in administrative justice from Abilene, Texas, said the main goal of the program is to unify African-American students in their first year of college.

"Through this program, we are trying to increase retention among African-American students," Smith said.

In October 1998, Henry attained a contact list of African-American students from the office of Admissions and Records in Woody Hall, from which he mailed letters to students interested in joining the program.

During the fall semester break, the assigned guides contacted their students and obtained information about their housing situations and arrival to campus to schedule mentor meetings.

BAC has 45 students enrolled in the program and are hoping to increase participation in the upcoming semesters.

"I really didn't know what to expect," Henry said. "I was hoping for 100 to 200 students, but I thought 45 was enough to work with."

Henry said the program will keep the new students informed of campus activities and guide them into a productive first semester.

New image of Lewinsky emerges from testimony

KNIGHT-RIDDER NY SPAPERS

WASHINGTON — Not long into the Senate's G-rated Saturday matinee, it became apparent how very much its star had changed during the carnal saga.

Monica Lewinsky, Valley Girl, was gone. In her place was Lawyere J Lady, albeit with a helmet-head bouffant hairdo.

When America first met her and heard her voice, in the audio tapes of her former friend Linda Tripp, there she was, a personification of vacuous chit-chat, inclined toward slang, gossip and even condescension when speaking of the soap opera's protagonist, "the Big Creep," as she and Tripp termed President Clinton.

It was far more evident than in reading the transcript the day before that the animated, giggling, sighing girl of 18 months ago had vanished.

She was replaced by a Stepford Witness, a seemingly well-poised, well-spoken woman, no longer given to long pauses ("uhmmmm") or the maddeningly frequent use of the word "like."

Remember the Lewinsky who told Tripp, "I freak out when I think about not talking to him"? Or the one who declared, "He's so full of (expletive)"?

The naivete on display throughout those tapes was gone, with nothing even light years close to the phone call declarations such as, "My mom doesn't hardly even believe it! I'm so, I am so, like, pulled!" The mania, even mild-hysteria, of some of those conversations was also nowhere in sight or sound.

Having gone through the Washington gauntlet of defense lawyers and aggressive media, both directly and indirectly, Lewinsky had been forced into a routine contrary to her nature but most suitable for the purpose at hand — avoiding legal trouble for herself and impeachment for the man she may still be smitten with and cowed by.

Her answers were short and to the point, so much so that her first-ever videotaped appearance verged on uneventful.

She proved decidedly ordinary, almost like the armies of expert witnesses who fill courtrooms daily.

And, when it was over, there were reviews by the nearly 100 critics who had watched parts of the matinee in their dual roles as impeachment jurors and judges.

But that was, in no small measure, a seeming waste of energy.

confession tape for authenticity.

Although two men have been scheduled to die at Tamms, the center, which opened in March 1997, has yet to use the state's newest death chamber.

Willie Enoch, 44, also was scheduled to die at Tamms in November; and his execution was stayed. Enoch was convicted and sentenced to death in the murder of a 24-year-old Peoria woman nearly 15 years ago.

On Friday, Porter became the 11th man in Illinois to be exonerated from the death penalty since capital punishment was reinstated in 1977.

How did Bower, 50, parlay his SIUC undergraduate and Illinois Institute of Technology/Chicago-Kent College of Law degrees into such an extraordinarily successful professional career?

"I'm a goal-oriented person," Bower said. "I was never lost on what I was going to do — that's not to say I've always done what I expected to, but it's worked out well."

Bower, who received the Distinguished Alumni Award from the College of Liberal Arts in 1994, recalled why he came to SIUC.

"My older brother went to SIU, and SIU was developing quite a reputation under the leadership of (legendary SIU President) Delyte Morris," Bower said. "I've certainly never regretted that decision."

Bower has remained active with SIUC. He serves on the Audit and Bylaw Committees of the SIU Foundation and also assists the Foundation with long-range planning.

Some of his fond memories from his years in Carbondale include living at Thompson Point, making many friends and becoming active with the College Republicans.

As for his new duties with the Ryan administration, Bower said he is anxious to work with the governor to help ensure tax laws are administered efficiently.

He will work out of both Springfield and Chicago but said the majority of his time will probably be spent in the capital.

"It will be challenging, but I think I'm up to the task," Bower said.

He mentioned working with Ryan as what he anticipates to be an enjoyable aspect of his job.

"[Ryan] is one of the nicest men you will ever know," Bower said.

Bower acknowledged the governor is sometimes perceived as gruff by the media but said that reputation belies the true Ryan.

"Some politicians have a very friendly public image, but may not be very friendly personally," Bower said.

"But with George, the more you know him the more genuine and nice of a man you see he really is."

Bower identified Ryan's friendship with SIU President Ted Sanders as an example that SIUC and Southern Illinois have nothing to fear with Ryan in the governor's mansion.

"I think [Ryan] will be extremely attentive to Southern Illinois," Bower said. "I can't think of anyone who I'd rather have as governor than George."

are first-time female donors who barely meet the weight requirements to give blood.

"College students usually donate without problems," Taylor said. "They usually weigh a little more and are more conscious about what they eat."

Nancy McGill, a licensed practical nurse for the Red Cross, said problems with donating blood are mostly psychological.

"If a first-time donor donates with a relaxed attitude, the donation goes smoothly," McGill said. "Once donors have a good experience they come back."

Despite initial fears, Sharon does not hesitate to donate when she has the chance.

"I donate because if I was in the position to need blood, I hope I would receive it," Sharon said.

Jack Kremer, an undecided junior from St. Louis, donates whenever he can for a variety of reasons.

"I like the free t-shirts, and donating blood fits in with my rugby team's motto — give blood, play rugby," Kremer said.

"Otherwise, I will give blood whenever they need it," Kremer joked that the process of donating blood is harmless, except for one part.

"The most painful part is when they rip the tape off of your arm when they are done," Kremer said.

— PAMELA TAYLOR
PHLEBOTOMIST

College students usually donate without problems.

Vivian Ugent, Southern Illinois coordinator for the American Red Cross, said she would like to think people give blood to save lives, but she said reasons why people donate do not matter.

"The most important thing is that the blood is there," Ugent said. "A premature baby who needs blood will not care why someone gave."

of Carbondale, blood supply levels were low at the beginning of the month.

"There were acute problems before," Maroney said. "Now there is a semi-adequate need for blood." Maroney said they use large amounts of blood daily for surgery and cancer patients.

"People should always donate blood," Maroney said, "because it is when they do not donate that a problem develops."

Ugent said the American Red Cross needs 1,000 pints of blood a day to satisfy the needs of area hospitals.

Nancy McGill, a licensed practical nurse for the Red Cross, said responses at blood drives conducted last week at various locations on campus were mixed.

"There has been an equal amount of response from SIUC students and area residents,"

McGill said.

"The drives held at the Student Center see a lower participation than drives at the Recreation Center."

Additional Blood Drives this week include a drive from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at Lindegen Hall and another from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday at Kesnar Hall.

The last winter drive at SIUC will take place from 12:30 to 6:30 p.m. Feb. 15 at Lentz Hall in Thompson Point.

"We try to schedule drives to accommodate everyone's needs," McGill said.

"Seeing the need for blood, I cannot see why people would ignore a good opportunity like this to give to others."

Worm says he's pretty happy. "It only gets bad during the girls' season, then it gets pretty crazy," Worm said. "Otherwise, it works out great."

With his level-headed personality and his half-man, half-tank physique, bouncing seems to be the perfect job for Worm.

"I saw the ad one day," Worm said. "I needed a job, so I applied."

Worm said his experiences at the Hangar 9 have been very positive.

"I don't even think of it as a job," Worm said. "The people I work for and with are good people."

During his days at the Hangar 9, Worm said he has met a great number of people. And people all over Carbondale know and love the Worm.

"I see people eve, day who see me and say, 'Hey, Worm.' I just wave and say hi," Worm said.

Despite the popularity of his nickname, Worm does not know where it came from. "I really don't know where it started," Worm said. "I came back to work at the Hangar 9 one semester, and people were calling me Worm."

The name stuck and is on the lips of nearly all the passers-by who enter the Hangar 9.

Having lived in Carbondale for six semesters, Worm plans to move to Colorado and seek his fortune after graduating.

"Right now, I just want to graduate and get out of here," Worm said.

The epitome of the gentle-giant, unless you get rowdy on his shift, Worm is a quiet man in the body of a polar bear and another living example of why you should never judge a book by its cover.

'She's All That' ain't all that

TIM SANGER
DAILY EGYPTIAN MOVIE REVIEWER

"She's All That" is a soundtrack in search of a movie and not a very good one at that. The film is riding on the current resurgence of the teen film, repeating the cycle that manifested itself in the '80s — slasher films, sex comedies and coming-of-age.

The basic story has the high school president and shoe-in for prom-king (Freddie Prinze Jr.) getting dumped by his trophy girlfriend (Jodi Lyn O'Keefe) six weeks before the destined prom. In retaliation, he strikes a bet with one of his cronies that he can turn the artistic school misfit (Rachel Leigh Cook) into the prom queen, slowly starting to find himself falling for her.

If this premise doesn't exactly grab you by the ankles and drag you around, it's because it's nothing you haven't seen before. This idea is fodder for the USA network midday movie, the only wonder being why it took so long to surface again by going back and tapping that "Can't Buy Me Love" vein.

Not to say that it can't be done effectively, just not by "She's All That." The film might be a little more refined, a little more interesting than those past films, but hold the same vapid center night. Guys with good hair, girls with three names — this is the neo-brat of the '90s (one of whom makes a surprise cameo) some talented, others not. Prinze does about as good as he can, and Cook, whom I've never seen before, manages to hold her own. But in the end, for every moment of wit "She's All That" achieves, there are five cringe moments. You know them — moments so embarrassing and bad that you can do nothing but cringe and sink into your seat.

The problem with recent teen films in general is that they present a movie high school. My high school never looked like that, the girls didn't dress like that (trust me, I would've noticed), and it sure didn't seem like the fun-filled carnival these movies present it to be. I'm a sucker for high school movies, romantic ones at that, but "She's All That" just doesn't have the daring, or possibly restraint, to present anything new.

In the end, "She's All That" just ain't.

"She's All That"

"The main purpose of the program is for students to have a contact person for problems that may arise," Henry said.

Henry said he hopes mentoring students will allow them to have a positive learning experience.

"I hope they will come out better students," Henry said. "I want them to feel welcome."

Henry also aspires for the guides and students to keep in touch throughout the school year.

"Students can meet with guides and set up meetings all semester," he said. "I hope students and guides become friends."

He said the program has been a success thus far and believes it has a bright future.

"I am very proud of the program," Henry said. "We are helping students to have a more positive college experience. We want to improve though — we will get some feedback and make the changes necessary."

DelMarcus Collins, a senior in history from Chicago who mentors new and transfer students, meets with his mentee every weekend. He said the two have developed a friendship because of the mentoring experience.

"We are joined at the hips," Collins said. "If we are not talking about school, then we are talking about what we are doing on the weekend."

Henry said he wants students to get a feeling of importance from the program and provide assistance with it in the future.

"Hopefully in a couple of years students will want to give back to the program," Henry said. "This program is real southern hospitality — it motivates students to get involved."

Taking Indiana by storm

HOOSIER WINNER:

Track and field teams placed fourth and sixth respectively.

ROB ALUN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC track and field teams were no match for Indiana University Saturday. A few individuals, however, were able to top some high-class competition.

The men's team finished fourth in the Mid America Invitational in Bloomington, Ind., this weekend. With the Hoosiers easily winning their meet by 77 points, the Salukis made a valiant run at second place, finishing just seven points behind second-place Eastern Illinois University.

SIUC might have finished second had they gotten their usual five to 10 points from the high jump.

To coach Bill Cornell's dismay, the athletes in those events were shut out of any scoring.

"We got no points from the high jumpers. That really hurt us," Cornell said. "It was probably due to the hard conditioning a week ago. We didn't ease up enough on them — they didn't have enough spring in their legs."

While the leapers struggled, the distance runners excelled. Jeremy and Joseph Parks both moved into SIUC's all-time top 10 with personal bests. Jeremy won the 5,000-meter run with a time of 14 minutes, 37.38 seconds.

He also finished fourth in the 3,000-meter. Joseph set his mark in the 3,000-meter (8:18.07), which earned him a second-place finish.

The Salukis also had a trio of second-place finishers. Junior Matt McClelland was runner-up in the mile, while junior Brad Championship qualifier, junior Felicia Hill.

Hill finished second in the high jump and third in the triple jump. Freshman teammate Hilla Medalia beat Hill out for second in the triple jump.

Sophomore Joy Cutrano led a strong effort from SIUC's distance running corps, adding another runner-up finish in the 3,000-meter event.

"We had some pretty decent performances," DeNoon said, "but we also had some kids who didn't show up very well."

Among those who did show up were distance runners sophomore Becky Cox and junior Leah Nolden, both of whom set lifetime-bests among the distance group.

Coach Don DeNoon said the Salukis would have made more of a push for second if not for a key injury.

"[Freshman] Tanya Dolgovska went down (hamstring), and losing one of our top legs really hurt us in the 4-by-400 relay," DeNoon said.

DeNoon was pleased with the progress in the distance area and continued success in the field events. Now, he needs the sprinters to complete the picture.

"We just need our sprinters to step up," he said. "We're not getting any support from our 60 through 200 runners. Not scoring in the 60, 200 and 400 definitely hurt us this weekend."

"We had some super performances and some very poor performances."

— BILL CORNELL
TRACK AND FIELD COACH

Bowers took second in the long jump. Sophomore Dan Stone pole-vaulted 15-9 to take second in the event.

"We had some super performances and some very poor performances," Cornell said. "We just need to make sure the jumpers can get back on track and redeem themselves next weekend (at home in Saturday's USA Track and Field Open)"

The women's team was slightly less successful but no further behind dominant Indiana. The Salukis finished sixth thanks to the usual heroics of their NCAA

ONE STEP CLOSER:

Women's basketball team earns victory on road against Bradley.

MIKE BJORKLUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Predicting how well the Saluki women are going to perform is like shaking a Magic 8 Ball — you can never know what to expect.

In this anything but predictable season, SIUC shot a scorching 50 percent (31-62) from the floor in a 64-60 win against Bradley University Saturday night in Peoria.

Salukis 64
Bradley 60

SIUC (6-14, 5-7) placed five players in double-digits in scoring, led by sophomore Terica Hathaway's 18 points on 7-for-18 shooting.

"Even though we didn't put together 40 solid minutes in Northern Iowa (Thursday)," Beck said, "I think that is a credit to our ballclub. After the loss we had a great practice, and I think that the win was very big for us."

Other members of the double-digit club were junior Melaneece Bardley (12) and sophomores Kristine Abramowski (12), Courtney Smith (10) and Maria Niebrugge (12).

And now after a disappointing 1-6 mark in non-conference games, the Salukis suddenly have found themselves only one game behind Creighton University for the seventh spot in the Missouri Valley Conference standings.

The Salukis have a four-game lead over Illinois State University, who fell to Drake University 67-59

"It was just a matter of working harder and getting the shots to fall."

Saturday night.

"It was a big win for us," Abramowski said. "It keeps our eighth spot in the MVC, and it is important for us because we understand that our next four games are at home and against the upper-conference teams."

Thanks to Bradley guard Heather Best, who led all scorers with 24 points, BU led 37-34 at halftime in front of a sparse crowd of 351.

"I'm glad she didn't have 30 points," Beck said. "We did a good job on containing her."

But thankfully for the Salukis, the rest of the Braves (6-14, 0-12) did not put on their best performances, shooting only 41 percent from the floor.

SIUC took advantage by outscoring Bradley 40-33 in the second half. The hot field-goal shooting by the Salukis helped erase the memory of the 36 percent they shot in the loss to Northern Iowa.

"We were more focused and more determined to earn that post-season spot," Hathaway said. "It was just a matter of working harder and getting the shots to fall."

The win could not have come at any better time. With four of their next six games at the comforts of the SIU Arena, the Salukis have a chance to pull out their pencils and erase the first half of the season.

With each game the Salukis have the opportunity to reach as high as fourth place in the conference. "We're hoping to get all of the upcoming home games," Niebrugge said. "It should be a good test for the ballclub."

Said Beck: "It will be a good test for us. With playing Southwest (Missouri State University) twice as well as Drake and Evansville, it will give us a good indicator on how capable we are of winning."

Redbirds who? Dawgs ground birds

Men defeat Illinois St. for second time this season

COREY CUSICK
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's basketball team had every reason to fold against Missouri Valley Conference-foe Illinois State University Sunday afternoon in Normal.

But their poise came up big once again, as they hung on for a 69-63 defeat of the Redbirds in Normal.

Salukis	69
Illinois State	63

The victory moved the Salukis (13-8, 8-5) into a tie for third place in the MVC with Southwest Missouri State University (16-7, 8-5). The Salukis will meet head-to-head with SMSU Wednesday in Springfield, Mo., with the chance to earn sole possession of third place.

After jumping out to a 39-25 halftime lead on the shoulders of junior Ricky Collum's three-point shooting and a solid defensive effort led by senior Monte Jenkins, the Salukis looked to be in control.

However, the Redbirds scored the first eight points of the second half to cut the lead to six, 39-33.

A three-pointer by Collum, his fifth of the game, broke the Salukis' scoring drought five minutes into the half but was one of only five field goals (5-19) the Salukis could muster in the second half.

To add to the Salukis shooting woes in the second half, Collum was forced to leave the game after suffering a knee to the eye while scrambling for a loose ball with six minutes left in a five-point game, 55-50, forcing freshman Brandon Mells to run the show the remainder of the game.

"It swelled up — he just couldn't see," said Saluki head coach Bruce Weber in his postgame radio show. "There was no way he could play. You know how tough he is — if he could play he would definitely be out there."

The Redbirds gained momentum after Collum's injury and cut the lead down to 59-57, after a Kenneth Pearson slam within only three minutes remaining.

While all the momentum had switched into ISU's hands toward the final minutes of the game, the Salukis seemed as if they would crumble in front of nearly 8,000 in attendance at Redbird Arena.

Junior forward Chris Thunell, however, hit a clutch three-pointer to give the Salukis a five-point lead and a 7-of-8 free throw shooting exhibition (23-of-27 for the game). The last minute and 10 seconds was too much for ISU (13-11, 5-8) to recover from.

Despite going down with the injury, Collum led the Salukis with 17 points. Jenkins and sophomore Abel Schrader chipped in 11 and 10 points, respectively.

It was not necessarily Jenkins' offensive output that highlighted his day, but the clamp he had on ISU's leading scorer, Tarise Bryson. Bryson, who averages more than 17 points per game, was held to nine points on only one field goal.

"He (Jenkins) can go the whole game," Weber said. "He's done a great job this year. He has the athletic ability, jumping ability and he's got the endurance, so it's tough for somebody to get around him."

Weber also was pleased with Mells' play down the stretch after Collum's injury.

"Brandon did some nice things down the stretch," Weber said. "He took care of the ball and got it to them when he needed to, and then he played good defense."
