The beginning of a semester always means more work for employees of the University Bookstore, and this spring semester is no exception. Extra help is on duty attempting to move the long lines a little faster. The bookstore reports a considerable increase in sales over last spring with plenty of used books to sell. Hours will be extended Wednesday and Thursday until 8 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Fry appears before Legislature

City opposes proposed local tax freeze

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council authorized City Manager Carroll Fry to represent the city in opposing a local government tax freeze at special hearings held Tuesday in the Illinois General Assembly.

Fry was to speak to Illinois legislators in an effort to persuade the General Assembly not to pass Gov. Thompson's proposed 9.3 percent ceiling on property increases.

"It is the responsibility of the local government, not the state government, to set the municipal standards," Fry said at the Monday night council meeting. "It is the right of the local community to levy upon themselves (in) the style they want."

Fry said the legislature's disregard of the steps already taken by local governments to reduce taxes, the "hastily contrived" nature of the legislation and the exemption of Chicago from the tax freeze plan were behind the city's opposition to the legislation.

Mayor Hans Fischer said that some of the members of the state government had assumed that local governments were not able to handle their own affairs.

He also said local governments had not been consulted when the legislation was drafted.

Fry said the legislation had "some obvious problems that had not yet been addressed." He said that public hearings are needed to determine what the public wants.

"Hastily contrived legislation," he said, "is nine times out of 10 bad legislation, at every level."

The council later approved an ordinance that would cut the total 1979 tax levy by $104,706, the amount the city will receive from the corporate personal property replacement tax. The action will decrease the estimated property tax rate from $1.03 per $100 to $.91 per $100.

In other action, the council approved a plan to study commercial blight in downtown Carbondale. In a related matter, the council approved appointments to the Citizens Downtown Redevelopment Committee.

Revised handicapped accessibility standards were also approved by the council. The new code will require any new or remodeled apartments or dormitory rooms to be made accessible for the handicapped.

Draft cards being printed candidate says

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Richard E. Carver, a candidate for the Republican U. S. Senate nomination, said Tuesday that an Illinois printing firm has recently printed "literally hundreds of thousands" of draft registration cards for possible use by the federal government.

Carver, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force Reserves and the mayor of Peoria, said "he cards were printed by the Watseka plant of UARCO, Inc., which has headquarters in Barrington.

Carver said "I have to assume" the cards were ordered by the federal government "in contemplation of a reinstatement of the draft."

Six more buildings without power while cable repair work continues

By Cindy Humphreys
Staff Writer

In addition to the five Small Group Housing buildings that have been without power since Sunday, six more in the group will be without power through most of Wednesday as repair work nears completion.

The cause of the power outage, which also affected the Health Service, was a faulty cable that blew a fuse in primary service, said Harrel Lerch, superintendent of building maintenance at the Physical Plant.

"We finished putting in the new cable Tuesday evening and if all goes well, electricity should be restored to all of Small Group Housing by about 6 p.m. Wednesday," Lerch said. The 230 residents of dormitories in Small Group Housing will take their meals Wednesday at Lentz Hall in Thompson Point.

The outage originally affected the Agriculture and Forestry Buildings, Thompson Point, Small Group Housing and the Health Service. By Monday morning, only five Small Group Housing buildings were still without power. These buildings have been using three backup generators since Monday.

The Health Service and the building housing the purchasing offices each have their own generator, while the chancellor's offices and two dormitories are sharing one.

Dr. Don Knapp, medical director of the Health Service, said Tuesday, "We're a little more adapted to it, but we're about as busy as we can handle. The infirmary is being kept open and the patients in it are doing okay."

Only about 20 percent of the chancellor's office was being used by employees Tuesday, said Tom Britton, executive assistant to the chancellor. "The professional staffers are spread out around campus or working at their homes."

Since the office switchboard is inoperative, even with the generator, all calls are coming in on an emergency phone at a makeshift desk.

Alpha Tau Omega, Alpha Gamma Rho and the chancellor's offices are sharing one generator, which can provide all three with minimal heat and emergency lights. The purchasing offices cannot share a generator, Lerch said, because they need power to run the payroll machines.

Carbondale wants Bert

Come Valentine's Day this year, some Southern Illinois communities will be commemorating not only sweethearts, but Bert Parks, the deposed emcee of the Miss America pageant, as well, if WCIL-FM radio station and the City Council have their way.

The radio station is urging all Southern Illinois mayors to proclaim the 14th as "We Want Bert Day," in protest of the dismissal of the pageant host, said Dennis Lyle, a morning disc jockey for the radio station.

Lyle presented the issue to the Carbondale City Council at its Monday night meeting. Mayor Hans Fischer read the proclamation aloud to council members, who voted to officially rename the day in honor of Parks.

The proclamation stated that the pageant officials' reasons for dismissing Parks due to his age were "unreasonable, invalid and discriminatory."

City Council lowers property tax rates

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

Although a resolution passed recently by the Carbondale City Council will decrease property tax rates in Carbondale, it's still too early to tell whether property taxes will increase or decrease this year, according to city and county officials.

Jackson County Clerk Robert Harrell said it's impossible to make predictions about property taxes because other elements used to determine property taxes are still unknown.

One element that may affect property taxes is certain—Gov. Thompson's tax ceiling, he said. The City Council voted Monday night to cut the 1979 property tax levies by approximately $104,706, the amount the city receives in the form of corporate personal property replacement tax revenues. The effect of the abatement will decrease the estimated property tax rate by approximately .124 percent per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

Jackson County Assessor

William Massey said that theoretically if the tax rate is lowered then taxes should decrease, but other factors concerning assessment are involved.

"Property value has gone up since last year, and everything still has to be reassessed," Massey said. "We expect the multiplier rate to increase over last year and that will have a definite effect on property taxes."

The multiplier rate is assigned by the state to all counties to equalize property values. This rate multiplied by the property tax rate equals the amount of tax a homeowner will pay. Massey said he expects the multiplier rate to increase from 1.2795 to 1.4201.

Thompson's plan calls for a tax increase limit of 9.3 percent.

The plan was criticized last week by state Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, who claims the ceiling would be used as a rate of increase by local taxing districts.

Carter group opens Marion headquarters

By Jeffrey Smyin
Staff Writer

Headquarters for the Jimmy Carter presidential campaign in the 24th Congressional District opened in Marion Monday. Though its location may cause problems for students wanting to become active with the group, Deputy District Coordinator Bill Tapella hopes to gain support and volunteers from SIU-C students.

"We chose this site because it's centrally located in the heart of active Democratic counties," Tapella said. "We want students to help us out. We will be handing out leaflets and brochures in the Political Science Department because we'll probably get most of our volunteers from there."

Tapella said once a core of supporters has been established at SIU-C the group plans on creating a shuttle service from the campus to the Marion office.

The Carter group filed a full slate of delegate hopefuls on January 9 they are: Ken Gray, former 24th Dist. U.S. Rep.; Marie Basler, Williamson County Clerk; Paul Myers, Chairman of Saline County Democrats; Bernice Coville, Chairman of Franklin County Democratic Women's Organization; John Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School at SIU-C; Barbara Leavitt Brown, Graduate Assistant in the Political Science Department at SIU-C; Jerry Sinclair, Salem banker.

The alternates are: Helen Ferguson, Representative for the Amax Coal Co.; Jim Wilson, Chairman Alexander County Democrats; Rubie Jackson, Metropolis; Phil Kociances, Herrin business agent.

Burglar flees after tenant screams but makes away with stereo, cash

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

A resident of Lewis Park Apartments surprised a burglar who was prowling in her room early Tuesday morning while she slept, Carbondale police reported.

The intruder fled after the woman woke up, and, realizing the man was not one of her roommates, began to scream.

About $1,225 in stereo equipment and cash was taken from the apartment, police said.

According to police reports, Diane E. Eschner, a senior in psychology, was awakened at about 5 a.m. Tuesday by noise coming from the direction of her second-story bedroom doorway.

Eschner, who apparently thought the person might have been one of her three roommates, called out, "Is that you Mary?" A voice, which sounded like a man who was trying to speak in a feminine tone, answered "yes."

Eschner said the man was wearing white gloves and carrying a flashlight.

"I was asleep facing the wall when I heard a noise. I just laid there for a while before calling out and after I heard that voice, I started screaming for help," Eschner said.

"I heard her scream at the top of her lungs," a neighbor said.

Mary Vanderlaan, a junior in recreation, Karen Jenson, a senior in business, and Laura Muller, a junior in recreation, were asleep in three other upstairs bedrooms. The women waited for about a half-hour before they called the police because they feared the man was still in the apartment, Vanderlaan said.

Before the man fled the apartment he grabbed an identification cardholder containing Eschner's fee statement, student I.D. and other forms of identification from a dresser located near the bedroom door. Eschner's housekeys and a small amount of cash were taken from a purse found in the upstairs hallway, according to Vanderlaan.

"This was probably the worst experience of my life," Vanderlaan said. "One of my roommates sensed that someone was around the house. She heard Diane calling me and then we all heard Diane screaming. We don't have a phone upstairs and we thought he was still in the house so we just sat upstairs waiting."

Lieutenant Terry Murphy, of the Carbondale Police, said there was no sign of forced entry into the apartment.

Telephoning wins it for Bush in Iowa

By Dave Goldberg
AP Newsfeatures Writer

While other candidates in the Iowa Republican caucuses spent last-minute money on television advertising, George Bush spent it on telephone bills. The result was an upset victory that thrust Bush into the forefront of Republican presidential contenders.

Bush's winning strategy was a throwback to the pre-television age. It depended on a chain reaction that began over a year ago when Bush started campaigning in Iowa. Gradually he built up a network of statewide opinion leaders that multiplied into a network of county leaders that culminated with organizations in all 99 counties.

Finally, in the last week, the word went out by phone. Bush's supporters knew where to go and when. While Howard Baker and John Connally were trying to catch up with television advertising, George Bush knew where his supporters were. And he got them out to vote.

With most of the precincts reporting Tuesday, Bush led the GOP's straw vote with 33 percent, followed by Ronald Reagan with 27 percent.

On Monday night, Bush told his supporters: "I've been savoring the commentaries tonight. They're all saying it was good organization. Well, what the hell is wrong with good organization."

Bush and his advisers had said for a year they wanted to follow the example set by Jimmy Carter to elevate them above the 2 percent or 3 percent they were getting in the polls. That meant spreading the word over Iowa's back fences, over the telephone, at coffee klats ches — and lining up people whose words would be listened to.

First, Bush set up a national organization headed by his longtime friend and tennis partner, James A. Baker III, who was also President Gerald Ford's 1976 campaign manager.

Then he snared an ecumenical lot. David Keene, a Reagan defector who once headed Young Americans for Freedom, became political director. His two chief press aides were the press secretaries of the Republican and Democratic national committees, Rich Bond, his Iowa coordinator, is a 29-year-old New Yorker of liberal bent who has worked for the GOP National Committee but speaks highly of Democrats like Vice President Walter Mondale.

Going to Iowa before anyone else helped him to snare key people here.

George Wittgraf and Ralph Brown, two young lawyers considered comers in the Iowa party signed on because Bush wooed them more assiduously than any other candidate.

Meanwhile, into the fold came the two national committee people, John MacDonald and Mary Louise Smith, both old friends from Bush's days as Republican national chairman.

From them, the word trickled down — to county leaders, to local leaders, to just plain folks who would tell their neighbors about Bush.

Bush also benefitted from the fact that he comes across well in small groups, not so well in large gatherings — and small groups are what Iowa is full of.

Bush to visit SIU campus

Republican presidential candidate George Bush will visit the SIU-C campus Wednesday Feb. 20.

Bush, who defeated front-runner Ronald Reagan in Iowa Caucus on Tuesday, is expected to be on campus from 11:30 a.m. until 2 p.m., Howard Olsen, professor in animal industries at SIU-C, said Tuesday.

Olsen, who is coordinating Bush's appearance, said no other details about the visit are available at this time but he expects Bush to make a speech in the Student Center Auditorium sometime during the day.

Registration cards for draft made

However, a spokesman for the U.S. Selective Service System in Washington said the printing was part of a routine stocking of needed supplies for storage areas.

The spokesman said the action was not related to any prospect of reconstituting registration or the draft. He said in the past year the system has been updating forms, including ordering an additional 500,000 forms in Spanish.

H. L. Koelling, ARCO vice president for production, said it was company policy not to comment on any orders from customers.

Pakistan seeks 'billions' in U.S. arms aid

By The Associated Press

Pakistan, unable to obtain from China the kind of massive assistance it wants, called Tuesday for "durable, credible" aid from the United States to build up its armed forces in the face of the new Soviet presence in neighboring Afghanistan.

Official sources in Islamabad, the Pakistani capital, said the government of President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq needs several billion dollars in aid to modernize its defenses. Gen. Zia last week dismissed as "peanuts" President Carter's offer of $200 million in military aid and $200 million in economic aid.

The Carter aid package was withdrawn from congressional consideration and U.S. and Pakistani officials continue negotiations.

There were no new reports on the war in Afghanistan, where fresh Soviet combat troops were reported being airlifted in to bolster the Soviet force, estimated at 80,000 men, that has been helping Afghan government troops put down a rebellion by anti-communist tribesmen.

In another development, a former commander of the presidential palace in Kabul, the Afghan capital, said in a Kabul Radio broadcast that Afghan revolutionary leader Nur Mohammed Taraki was strangled by three army men last Oct. 8 on the order of Hafizullah Amin and in his presence.

Amin had ousted Taraki from power just a few days earlier. It had been announced in October that Taraki died after a lengthy illness.

Amin himself was toppled in a Soviet-backed coup Dec. 27 and replaced by Tarbark Karmal, and it was announced Amin was executed. All three Afghan rulers since the April 1978 revolution have been members of the country's Marxist party.

Nuclear weapons connection clear

On Wednesday, Dec. 1, staff writer Karen Gullo's article on the speech made in favor of nuclear power appeared in the Daily Egyptian. The article does reflect the position taken by Mr. Clay Zerby, manager of the gaseous diffusion plant in Paducah, Ken. Unfortunately the article did not reflect the tone of the question and answer period in which Mr. Zerby often found himself in tough spots.

This plant is one of three in the country which enriches uranium—a process involved in the manufacture of nuclear weapons.

Now the statements:

Forty percent of the uranium is imported from Canada and abroad, while enrichment plants use 33 percent of TVA's electrical power, and 3 to 4 percent gross of all electrical energy produced in the U.S. Considering nuclear plants produce only 13 percent of the U.S. total, this 3 percent becomes quite significant.

There has been a 25 percent increase in the incidence of stillbirths in Harrisburg, Pa., since the Three Mile Island accident.

Plutonium 239 is among the most dangerous substances known to humans. A millionth of a gram (smaller than dust) is a contaminable portion capable of causing cancer in 10 years or after. It disintegrates very slowly—a half life of 24,000 years. Each 1,000 MW reactor produces 400-600 pounds of this substance per year as waste.

There have been large spills, accidents and volumes missing at Rocky Flats; in Colorado, Hanford, Wash.; and Kerr-McGee in Oklahoma to name but a few.

There is no consideration in the cost of fuel and power either for decommissioning, surveillance or the long term disposal of wastes. The costs are passed on to the consumer through utility rate structures (CWIP), phantom taxes, insurance coverage and ERDA budget expenditures.

The military and nuclear power cycle are very closely intertwined. Three gaseous diffusion plants enrich Uranium 235 for both purposes. The ERDA budget for energy development has $1 billion allocated annually for nuclear weapons research. A large percentage of the waste from nuclear plants is shipped to Barnwell, S.C.—and not only for storage. There, as has occurred in nearly every other country to which we have sold nuclear power reactors, the military operates a "reprocessing" plant which extracts the plutonium for nuclear weapons fabrication. The same companies are often associated with both purposes.

These are only a few points which were made by people present, but not fully answered by Mr. Zerby. There is so much going on, even here, that we never hear about. It is crucial, if the people of this country want to decide where we are going, that they seriously begin to look at not only the benefits, but the assumptions and the pitfalls associated with nuclear power. The connection with nuclear weapons is unquestionable.

How much longer will we be sheep herded by the shepherd with an atomic staff? — Tom Marcianowski, Graduate Student, Forestry Department

Olympians long on selfishness

Colman McCarthy

WASHINGTON—High on the list of athletes I've cheered for in the past few years, and held up to my children and a household of young friends as worthy of their cheers also, are Bill Rodgers, Francie Larriue and Mike Shine. They are world-class runners. Each competed in the 1976 Olympics. Each is in full sweat to make this year's team.

But my cheering has stopped. I've learned that Rodgers, Larriue and Shine, along with many other Olympic hopefuls, are great athletes but dismal citizens. Confronted with the possibility that the President may call for a boycott of the Moscow games each pouted and griped as if they were setting records in a new AAU competition: long-distance selfishness.

The sports section of the Washington Post reported their views. Saying she would be "let down" if the boycott came about, Larriue said, "At this point, I don't think about anything much but myself. I train so hard all day when I come home I put my feet up, and it's all I can do. Quite frankly I'm somewhat of a bum."

SHINE IS ANOTHER hardworker who thinks he and his legs come first. "Damn right, I'm selfish. It's just like anything else. The U.S. is made up of a lot of No. 1 that look out for No. 1 first."

Rodgers, who has shared jobbing tips with Jimmy Carter during dinner at the White House, sulks that he and the other 11 setoffs are "simply a tool, an implement. No one cares at all, until we can be used for their purposes. Then they can use it."

On the level of fun and games, I have sympathy for competitors who have their big day called off for reasons beyond their control. But even aside from the sensible arguments being made for boycotting Moscow—that we shouldn't ignore Russia's latest militarism or be a party to its effort in self-promotion—another form of self-promotion is also at work. For too many of our athletes, the quadrennial games have more to do with Big Bucks than Big Races.

WIN A GOLD MEDAL or two and you win golden rewards of contracts to hawk merchandise. Bruce Jenner sells cameras and breakfast cereal. Mark Spitz says milk is good for you. Frank Shorter promotes a hotel chain.

Why should anyone care if Bill Rodgers the businessman doesn't get to Moscow to cap more business deals should he win the marathon? He has deals enough already with Perrier, his own clothing line and his several stores. If Rodgers, who is in no danger of going on food stamps, feels victimized for being "a tool," perhaps it is because the Olympics are a tool for him—to jimmy the vault where the lucrative contracts await the signatures of gold medalists.

Ms Larriue, the self-confessed track bum, ably explains this philosophy of selfishness by doing well in Moscow: "I'm the one that is going to benefit, not the American people, by signing a fat contract and having my name well known. I'm the one with the medal around my neck."

The double-standard created by the capacious athletes is that it is wrong for the President to mix politics and sports, but it is fine for the athletes to mix sports and commerce. I doubt if the protests against the boycott would be so rasping if mere amateur glory were at stake.

BUT AMATEURISM HAS vanished. Except for the doddering quits players on the lawns of Newport and Palm Beach, I know of few champion athletes who compete without lawyers or accountants on the sidelines. Under-the-table payments are common in track and field, with competitors talking of it almost as much as their shinsplints or pulled hamstrings.

With so much at stake financially, the athletes have a hollow argument when they say, "We trained and sacrificed too hard for you to take the Olympics from us now." What have they sacrificed? They are healthy, young and find the time to go out everyday to run, leap and bound to their hearts' delight. If only all of us could "sacrifice" like that.

Not every athlete interviewed by the Post threw citizenship into the gutter. Some put the national interest before their own. Should the Olympics be delayed for a year and shifted to another site, this idea has been suggested—these athletes deserve automatic berths on the team. We should field a group of athletes with moral, as well as physical, excellence.

Gambling casino is the solution

The solution seems so simple: Let's have the University Foundation establish a gambling casino, profits to be used to finance professional athletic teams, the various student cultural events in the streets, foreign travel for administrators and examination week vacations for the faculty. Any surplus over $10 million should be earmarked to buy a book for Morris Library.

Abortion not form of contraception

As two Southern Illinoisans who are very much concerned about the value and protection of all human life, we would like to respond to Jan Susler of Southern Illinoisans for Abortion Rights.

Abortion and contraception are two entirely distinct matters despite the fact that pro-abortionists have redefined abortion as being a species of contraception. Contraception is the prevention of conception or fertilization. Abortion is the destruction of a human life that has already been conceived.

We agree that first trimester abortions are medically safer than childbirth—for the mother. But what was not pointed out is that abortion, under all circumstances, is considerably more risky for the baby. In fact, there is a 100 percent mortality rate for the baby, unless it happens to live through the operation by mistake.

We also agree that people have aborted and will continue to abort their children whether legally or illegally. Yes, people will continue to seek abortions; they will continue to wage war; they will continue to murder each other. But does this mean that we should not legislate against these atrocities? The facts are that since abortion has been legalized in America, Britain, Japan and the Scandinavian countries, the number of illegal abortions has not decreased, and in some cases the number of illegal abortions has actually increased.

It was pointed out that Southern Illinoisans for Abortion Rights is an affiliate of the National Abortion Rights Action League. We would like to suggest that people interested in these organizations read "The Aborting of America" by Dr. Bernard Nathanson. Dr. Nathanson was co-founder of NARAL and was director of the world's largest abortion clinic. Dr. Nathanson is no longer associated with NARAL and he no longer performs abortions. Why?

Here are his own words quoted from his book: "I am deeply troubled by my own increasing certainty that I had in fact presided over 60,000 deaths. There is no longer serious doubt in my mind that human life exists within the womb from the very onset of pregnancy." — Neil and Emilie Babcock, Carbonade

Modern dulcimer workshop radiates tradition, originality

By Susan Poag
Student Writer

Tradition still exists on Hickory Ridge in Pomona. Along with the aid of modern tools, Jeff Feltman, owner of the Hickory Ridge Dulcimer Works, continues to handcraft the only two true instruments that originated in the United States, the Appalachian dulcimer and banjo.

In addition to making dulcimers and banjos, Feltman, a 1973 SIU-C graduate in psychology, works as a part-time consultant for behaviorally disordered children with the Tri-County Special Education District.

Feltman is self-taught in the area of woodworking. The first dulcimer he made was in 1974 at the request of his wife, for her birthday.

"I didn't even know what a dulcimer was," Feltman said.

"I found a magazine article that showed basically how to make one and enrolled in a night class in woodworking at Murphysboro High School to gain access to tools. As I went along I changed what I didn't like or didn't know how to do."

"A year later I made another one and people began to ask about them," he continued. "In December of 1978 I started making dulcimers for profit. It was real slow in the beginning and at one point we went into hock, but since June of this year we've been doing all right."

The dulcimer is a direct descendent of two similar nonchromatic instruments, the Scandinavian langeleik and the German humle, which also has horizontally-played fretboards. These instruments were designed and constructed so that they would be able to survive long ocean voyages without warping.

In the late 1700s the Pennsylvania Dutch settled in the area of the Eastern United States known as Appalachia. The dulcimer is their imitation of the langeleik and humle.

The traditional Appalachian dulcimer is made from local woods such as walnut, poplar and cherry. The wood is selected for its grain pattern. When split and matched, opposite sides should form a book-match design.

The wood, after it is split, is cut to size and the surface defects are removed. Two pieces are then selected for having the highest matching pattern (most similar) and are used to make the back of the dulcimer. The pieces are approximately 32 inches long and three and a half inches wide.

'Jerk' fails in spite of Martin

By Craig DeVrieze
Staff Writer

Even the most ardent Steve Martin fanatic couldn't have expected his first feature length movie effort, "The Jerk," to be a comedy classic and it most definitely is not. However, while in its lowest moments the film is trash, the few brief flashes of genuinely funny material show that Martin has the potential to make good comedic cinema.

To Martin's credit, he did manage to select a subject with some social relevance, billed as "a rags to riches to rags" story, the film lampoons, sometimes successfully, the need to "become somebody." And though the story often wanders, scriptwriters Martin, Carl Gottlieb and Michael Elias generally carry that theme throughout.

The central character is typically Martin. The 34-year-old comedian is not an intellectual type who asks his audience to laugh with him. He is a clown who wants to be laughed at. Navin Johnson, Martin's character, is the nerd Martin has always been on the stage, with a little more heart.

The film's opening moments are fairly funny. Making light of racial attitudes, the approach is so basic that it can't be called satire. Navin is the adopted white son of a family of black sharecroppers, except he doesn't know he's adopted. The sheer outlandishness of those opening scenes make them effective, if not as sophisticated as satire.

Sophistication is one label that is rarely applied to Martin and "The Jerk" won't change things. Most of the film is bare slapstick and its treatment of race is insulting and not the least bit funny. Navin's encounters with a punk female motorcyclist are simply stupid toilet humor.

In fact, following the opening sequences, most of the film isn't funny. Honestly humorous sequences appear only sporadically and are interspersed with bits and pieces that are supposed to be hilarious but aren't and romantic scenes that are intended to be touching but aren't either.

His romance with Bernadette Peters is painful to watch. It is both schmaltzy and boring. If "The Jerk" proves anything, it shows that Peters cannot act.

Carl Reiner directed this film and his contribution is particularly disappointing. His previous involvement with the film "Oh God" and the original Dick Van Dyke television series, indicate that he should have been able to recognize the glaring deficiencies in "The Jerk."

The major problem with the movie is that it looks like it was simply thrown together.

Professor claims Nazi movement could not take over United States

By Craig DeVrieze
Staff Writer

Randy Bytwerk doesn't fear the American Nazi movement as a political entity. He says the possibility of that relatively small group taking over the country is non-existent. But he says the ideas that movement expounds—racism, hate and nationalism—are just as dangerous today as they were 50 years ago.

Bytwerk, an assistant professor in speech communications at SIU-C, will lecture on the Nazi movement in America at 7 p.m. Monday in Ballroom A of the Student Center. The presentation is sponsored by the Student Programming Lectures Committee and is the first in a series of SPC Free Lectures.

Having studied the Nazi movement for nine years, Bytwerk is confident that it has no real influence in the United States, but he fears that some of its ideology does. He points to the still volatile Iranian situation and the American reaction to it at home.

"If President Carter had said 'We want you to go out and beat-up as many Iranians as you can,' I think that that would have been a fairly popular idea," he explained. "The ideas in a different form are just as dangerous as they ever were."

Bytwerk has been researching the topic of German Nazi propaganda since 1971 when he chose it as the subject of his graduate work at Northwestern University. He selected this specific field because it fit well into rhetoric and persuasion, his area of educational interest. He expanded his interest to the American movement and has had several articles published on the subject.

"The Nazis are just a good case study of rhetoric and persuasion," he said. "There's a certain fascination in studying people who are very good at what they do in a technical sense and very nasty in a moral sense."

Bytwerk has developed two separate lectures out of his studies, one dealing with the German Nazi movement in the early half of the century and the other on the American movement. He is hoping to take both of them on the college lecture circuit.

Monday's lecture will feature a brief history of the movement in America prior to World War II and then discuss the movement since 1969. Bytwerk will show slides and play tapes of speeches by Nazi leaders George Lincoln Rockwell, Matt Koehl and Frank Collin. The lecture will be followed by a question and answer period.

Bytwerk feels the Nazi movement is a topical issue, particularly because of its relation to communication.

Student runs for self, others

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

"People are beginning to associate me only with running," says Craig Dittmar, with a bewildered smile.

But people have a good reason to correspond the graduate student's name with the word run. Dittmar heads the Runners' Support Group sponsored by the Student Wellness Resource Center and is also the president of the Southern Illinois Road Runners Club.

With about 45 members in its ranks, the Runners Support Group takes a positive, non-competitive approach to running, Dittmar said.

The group meets twice a week at the Lake on Campus from 4:15 to 5:30 p.m. Dittmar, a graduate assistant in the Recreation Department, said the group is divided into run-walkers, joggers and runners, (those people who have been running for a while).

"Since just last semester, I've found that the pulse and weight have gone down in most of the participants," Dittmar said.

"What's really neat is when a beginner makes it around the lake without stopping. They come in and they just beam because they feel so good," said Dittmar, who works with the group on a volunteer basis.

Dittmar said running has many benefits, including burning off excess body fat and raising a person's self esteem. But Dittmar cautions that the person must enjoy running to do it.

"If someone doesn't like running, I encourage swimming or some other sport. Don't run if you don't like it," he said.

Dittmar encourages runners to use the "conversation pace" and to run in a group.

"Running with someone else isn't so boring," he said.

Craig Dittmar, a graduate student who heads the Runner's Support Group of the Student Wellness Resource Center, runs on the track behind the Recreation Building.

The Student Wellness Resource Center is a program run by the Health Service and is a free service to students.

"The Wellness Center is divided into four different programs consisting of a patient activation program, alcohol education project, human sexuality service and lifestyle program," he explained.

Dittmar said he gives out information on injury prevention, shoe selection, nutrition, basic physiology and exercise to the group.

The group was started in the fall semester of 1978 and has had about 100 participants in the two semesters that it has met, said Dittmar.

Spackman to speak at running clinic

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

There are about 10 to 15 different types of injuries associated with the sport of running and many of them can be avoided by following a few simple suggestions, says Robert "Doc" Spackman, associate professor of physical education at SIU-C.

A running clinic conducted by Spackman, former SIU-C men's athletics trainer, and Ron Knowlton, an SIU-C professor of physical education, will be held at John A. Logan College Thursday from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

There is a $3 registration fee.

Knowlton, who teaches a course in distance running, will be speaking on the physiological aspects of the sport. Spackman's lecture will deal with running injuries and prevention and also cures.

"Since running has become such a big hobby, we decided to have the clinic to help those people who attempt to run, but hurt themselves," said Sue Teegarden, coordinator of workshops, conferences and seminars at the college.

Spackman, who was the men's athletics head trainer for 22 years, said that many people should not begin regular running until they are in the proper physical condition.

"Many people have bad knees or bad backs or are overweight," he said. "That person needs to get his knees stronger or lose some weight before running."

Teegarden said the clinic was designed to provide people with "sound advice from experts so they can enjoy running."

A portion of the clinic will be devoted to a discussion of the proper way to buy running shoes.

A question and answer session will follow Spackman's and Knowlton's presentations.

Dulcimer works blend tradition with the modern

The edges of the two boards are then glued together with the patterns matching. The two pieces are placed in a press and allowed to dry overnight. Wax paper is put on the wood to prevent the glue from sticking to the press itself.

While the back of the dulcimer is drying, the construction of the peghead begins. Three pieces of wood are laminated lengthwise (glued on top of each other) and clamped together to dry from four to eight hours.

After the wood is dry, the shape of the peghead is roughly band-sawed and then disc sanded down to its final shape. At this time, inlays may be set and tuning peg holes are drilled. The number of holes correspond with the number of strings on the dulcimer; either three, four or five strings can be used.

Inlays are commonly made from mother of pearl. The design for the inlay is initially drawn on a piece of mother of pearl and then held in a clamp and sawed out, by hand, to shape. A mask must be worn while sawing because inhalation of the dust can cause lung damage.

The inlay is then glued and placed within the outline. Further sanding is required. The peghead is then glued to the back and allowed to dry.

The dulcimer is painted with no less than 10 coats of linseed oil. Four coats are applied the first day and then one coat every day for a week. During the fifth coat the fret slots are cut on the fretboard and the frets, filed pieces of metal wire, are hammered into the slots.

"The placing of the frets is critical," Feltman said. "It's the only thing I do use a pattern for. It screws up the entire dulcimer if the placing is off—the notes won't be true."

When all coats of linseed oil have been applied, the dulcimer is rubbed with a mixture of oil and rottenstone, a fine abrasive, and then rewashed. It is allowed to dry for eight hours and then one coat of paste wax is applied.

Scott's ex-wife testifies at trial

By Charles Chamberlain
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The first wife of William J. Scott testified Tuesday in his tax fraud trial before a federal jury that she found nearly $49,000 in cash in two joint safe deposit boxes.

Scott, 53, Illinois attorney general since 1969 and now a candidate for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination, is accused of understating his income on federal tax returns from 1972 through 1975 as well as on an amended return for 1974.

The prosecution contends that $48,900 in safe deposit boxes, which Scott has described as political contributions, should have been reported on his returns.

Scott has contended that the money was used to reimburse himself for out-of-pocket political expenses.

The existence of the $48,900, first disclosed in newspaper reports in 1977, touched off an 18-month grand jury investigation that culminated in the indictment returned against Scott last April.

His former wife, who is now Mrs. Humphrey after remarrying in 1975, told the court how she went to a safe deposit box at the Harris Trust and Savings Bank in 1967 looking for some legal papers in contemplation of divorcing Scott. She and Scott were divorced in 1970 after several years of trying to stay together.

Mrs. Humphrey testified that when she opened the safe deposit box she did not find the document but saw some envelopes with cash amounts written on the face of them in her husband's handwriting.

"I had no knowledge of such envelopes until then," she told the court. She said she opened the envelopes later and counted $39,900.

She said that she went to a safe deposit box at the Evanston Bank to look for the document there and that she found envelopes containing about $9,000 in cash.

She was "stunned" by both discoveries, she testified.

Mrs. Humphrey said she had never gone to the Evanston Bank safe deposit box before. She testified that she took the envelopes out of that box and hid them in her refrigerator.

The witness testified that several days later she took the envelopes to the Northern Trust Co. and put them with those from the Harris bank in a box she took out in her name.

The money was held there until 1968 during a period of temporary reconciliation. In 1968 both agreed to move the money into a new box to which they had joint access.

The money stayed there until 1970 when, in accordance with the divorce decree, Scott got it.

Mrs. Humphrey said that at one time Scott told her that he had been to the Evanston Bank and asked her what she had done with the money.

When she told him that she had re-deposited it under her own name, "he was very upset. I was upset, they were very difficult moments," she testified.

She said she asked Scott "what the money represented."

"He told me it was campaign funds," she said.

Late in 1967, Mrs. Humphrey said she opened the envelopes and found the cash in denominations of $500, $100 and $20.

Scott insisted that the money was campaign funds and that he couldn't spend it.

Mrs. Humphrey said that she was told this by Scott after their divorce and that the money could not be for personal use and had nothing to do with the divorce settlement.

In a quiet voice, Mrs. Humphrey told of attempts of reconciliation between June 1968 and February 1970. During this time, Scott was in and out of the family home. In the fall of 1968, she said, she was with him in their car when he asked if he could take some money out of the safe deposit box for reimbursement for a dinner.

The witness said that it was campaign money and should not be used as reimbursement and that Scott "became very aggravated."

She said he was so enraged that "I jumped out of the car."

The prosecution presented a document described as a receipt signed by Scott in November 1970 when he and his wife went to the Northern Trust bank to get the money from the safe deposit box.

The receipt, the prosecution said, was for money taken out and turned over to Scott. A copy of the receipt shown to the jury has an in-ed-out part which Mrs. Humphrey said was a line for the amount of money to be entered.

This line is crossed off, but Scott signed the receipt and accepted the contents of the box, the prosecution says.

GSC prepares questionnaire on graduate assistant status

Mimi Jarzemsky
Staff Writer

A questionnaire has been compiled by a Graduate Student Council ad hoc committee to study the status and development of graduate assistants at S.U.C. Debbie Brown, one of the authors of the questionnaire said.

The questionnaire covers hiring practices, wages, working conditions, class loads and reactions of the graduate assistants to their work environment.

Brown said the committee also distributed an essay question to graduate studies secretaries and the department chairman asking them to describe the criteria used for distributing departmental assistantships and or other forms of financial aid, and to describe the criteria used for retention of graduate assistants.

The GSC felt the study should have been done a long time ago. Brown said, and passed a resolution for the formation of the committee last June.

Another reason for the study is curiosity, Brown said. "The graduate students would like to know if there are different wages in different departments and why and if a job description would help in some of the departments," Brown said.

Twenty-five hundred questionnaires were distributed and the committee would like to have them returned by Feb. 1. Brown said. The council does not know what response it will get and has not come up with a system of compiling the data yet, she said.

"We hope to come up with an effective system of compiling the data at our next meeting," Brown said.

Mark Mohlenbrock (left), sophomore in botany, and Larry Wojnicki, senior in plant and soil sciences, discuss plant renovation in the greenhouse near Morris Library. Plants grown here are on public display Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and are sold the last week of each month by the Botany Department.

FREE INFRARED SCAN OF YOUR HOME!

Make insulating an investment that pays

Find out where heat is escaping from your home and what you can do about it. Aerolite's infra-red insulation Inspector Mobile Unit will be in your area during the week of Jan. 27th 1980. It will be scanning homes at night from the street with infra-red photography. If you are interested in receiving a free infra-red photograph of your home, please call 529-3211.

The Insulation Inspector will provide you with a picture, so you can see exactly where your home is losing heat. The Insulation Inspector's Mobile Unit will be in your area for only one week. Call for complete details:

Democrats trail Republicans in campaign money

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

The Republicans are beating the Democrats—at least in raising campaign funds. Seven Republican presidential candidates have raised an estimated $26.2 million in private contributions compared to the estimated $10 million raised by the four Democratic candidates, the Washington Post reported.

Republican candidate John Connally is the leader in political fund raising with nearly $10 million in campaign contributions. President Carter leads the Democrats in fund raising with an estimated $5.8 million as of Dec. 31, it was reported.

Presidential primary matching funds are available to candidates who meet the "threshold level" of raising $5,000 in each of at least 20 states from individual contributors giving $250 or less.

All candidates except Connally are taking advantage of federal matching funds. The Carter campaign is expected to receive an additional $2.3 million after Jan. 31 when campaign fund reports are due to be filed with the Federal Election Commission.

According to the Washington Star, Connally, who is under attack by other candidates as the choice of big business has tried to portray his rejection of federal matching funds as a victory for the taxpayers.

Ronald Reagan is the second leading Republican fund-raiser with $6.1 million and additional matching funds of $3.5 million. Third is George Bush with nearly $4.5 million and an expected $2.4 million in matching funds. With $2.8 million in contributions and $1.1 million in matching funds, Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., is barely in front of Rep. Philip Crane, R-Mt. Prospect, who has $2.4 million in contributions and more than $740,000 in matching funds, it was reported.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has raised about $2.5 million and expects another $1.2 million in matching funds, but his campaign has also benefited from more than $20,000 raised and spent by unauthorized campaign committees that were formed before he officially announced his candidacy last Nov. 7. Funds spent by those committees are not counted against primary spending limits.

Democratic candidate Gov. Jerry Brown of California has raised $1.2 million and expects to get about $50,000 in matching funds. U.S. Labor Party candidate Lyndon LaRouche, running as a Democrat, has collected $500,000 in contributions and expects $325,000 in matching funds, the Washington Post reported.

Patti Elmore, associate professor in guidance and educational psychology, explains the usage of teacher evaluation forms in a lecture in Morris Library Auditorium.

Instructors learn weaknesses using faculty evaluation forms

By Susan Poag
Student Writer

During finals week, students are not the only ones who are graded at SIU-C. Many of the faculty also undergo voluntary final evaluations of their entire semester's work.

Student evaluation of faculty members and courses is not required by SIU-C as a form of performance evaluation. The Instructor and Course Evaluation forms are an option instructors and departments may use to improve the quality of their courses and instruction. The impact the ICE form results have on the quality of teaching is determined by the actions of the individual instructors themselves.

The Instructional Improvement Questionnaire, from which the evaluation form now in use was drawn, was first developed in 1969 after faculty members approached Institutional Research and requested a means of evaluation, said Patricia Elmore, associate professor of guidance and educational psychology.

Elmore, a statistical measurement expert, participated in the development of the questionnaire with another faculty member and two students.

"What the IQ development group tried to determine was what makes good teachers," Elmore said. "Seventy-five different forms in use at other universities were reviewed and 60 to 70 questions were developed by us. The English Department was the first to use the IQ forms and helped in rewording some of the questions," she said.

The IQ has undergone two major revisions on the basis of faculty input and is the ICE form used now, Elmore said.

Early in the semester request forms are mailed to all faculty and ICE forms are mailed to those who request them. Thomas Purcell, associate director of Institutional Research, said.

When the forms are completed, they are returned to the Research and Evaluation Center of Academic Computing in Woody Hall, and the information is coded on magnetic tape. A report from the information is made available only to the instructor, Purcell said.

Direct interpretation of the results involving the technical aspects of the form is used by the Research and Evaluation Center.

The Learning Resources Service provides individual consulting services to teachers and is staffed with four instructional designers who work directly with instructors on a one-to-one basis.

William Coscarelli, an instructional designer, said. "When a teacher first comes to the Learning Resources Service, the first step is to determine what problems an instructor really has. Often an instructor thinks that he has one problem, but in reality it is another problem," he said. "The symptoms of the problem are usually what the instructor focuses on, not the problem itself."

Wendy's Chili... more meat than mama's chili

It's full of beef. Not full of beans.

At Wendy's, we make our chili with lots and lots of 100% pure, fresh beef. In fact, every bowl of Wendy's Chili has about a quarter pound of beef in it. And just the right amount of beans to go with it.

It's made from scratch.

Some other restaurants might serve you canned chili. But not Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers. We make chili from scratch, the way you would. With only the freshest beef, beans and tomato sauce plus just the right spices. So you get homemade taste without all the trouble.

Some like it hot. Some do not.

We know some people like their chili hot, and some like it not so hot. That's why Wendy's Chili has a perfect blend of spices to please just about everybody. But if you like it even spicier, pick up a packet of Wendy's special Hot Chili Seasoning so you can make your chili just as hot (or not) as you like it.

Viet family finds Carbondale haven after brush with death

Editor's note: Thoi Ngu, a Vietnamese refugee who emigrated with his family to the United States last year, agreed to be interviewed for several hours by Student Writer Joseph Tong but declined a request for a photograph to be taken of his family.

By Joseph Tong
Student Writer

Life had never been as bad as it was when Thoi Ngu of Chinese descent left Vietnam in December 1978 in a small boat without a destination.

Like tens of thousands of other Vietnamese-Chinese refugees, Ngu and his family might have drowned or starved to death before they could find shelter. But after dwelling at the edge of death, the ordeal ended with a happy family reunion in the United States.

Ngu and his family, who now live in Carbondale, are one of the dozen Indo-China refugee families who settled in Southern Illinois this summer.

The Ngu family emigrated to Vietnam from China three generations ago. Like most of the Chinese in Vietnam, Ngu's grandfather ran his own business. After the Vietnam War, Ngu, a veteran Vietnamese soldier, helped his father run a soy sauce factory.

Ngu's elder brother, Xu, an assistant instructor of the Vietnamese Academy, left Vietnam in 1975 before the collapse of the South Vietnamese regime to study political strategy in Taiwan. Xu was automatically granted asylum in the U.S. after the takeover in South Vietnam. Xu came to St. Louis in 1975 to join his friends and to study French and philosophy at SIUC. At the same time, Xu applied to bring his whole family to the United States.

It was not until 1978, when Vietnam and China engaged in a border war and Vietnam persecuted the Vietnamese-Chinese, that Ngu had the chance to leave Vietnam. The government of Vietnam ordered confiscation of all Chinese property and deliberately forced them to pay a fine of "learn" gold (about $4,800) for each adult before they could sail out of Vietnam. The Ngu's, seven adults and four children, paid more than $30,000 in gold and were permitted to leave.

The Ngus were three days at sea in a small boat with 200 people when the engine of the boat broke down and the boat floated 18 hours before they reached West Malaysia, where they were put into a refugee camp.

The camp, Paulau Bibong, was a formerly deserted island crowded with 40,000 Vietnamese refugees. The government of Malaysia provided minimum living necessities for the refugees.

"Three months in the island seemed like three years," Ngu said when asked about the conditions in the camp. "But what could you expect? We were lucky enough to be alive and be accepted by the Malaysian government. Some refugee boats that reached Malaysia later were towed back to the sea."

Because of Ngu's military background and his brother Xu's effort, arrangements were made to bring his immediate family to the U.S., leaving his parents, two younger brothers and two sisters at the camp. All of them, however will be able to come to California before the end of the year, Ngu said.

Priority was given to those who have relatives overseas, then to those who had previous connection with the United States, such as military training or a job.

Ngu not only met the prerequisite of U.S. immigration policy but also found sponsorship through the International Church World Service which received word that the First Christian Church of Carbondale would arrange for the family here.

"The church members first started with mixed feelings," said the Rev. Charles Watkins of First Christian Church. "We positively supported the idea of sponsoring a refugee family, but we were worried about how well we could do it the first time."

After the family arrived and interacted with the church members, the members were satisfied and happy while the family was grateful for the sponsorship, Watkins said.

The church not only legally sponsors the family members but also financially supports them. The sponsorship fund comes from the members' donations, not from other sources, Watkins said.

"We are free and happy now," Ngu said. For the time being, they are supported by the church and the U.S. government. A house is being rented by the church for the family and furnishings for the house have been donated by church members.

Court order protects Gacy jurors

CHICAGO (AP) — After learning that reporters had obtained a list of potential jurors, the presiding judge in John W. Gacy's murder trial has banned anyone from contacting prospective jurors.

Judge Louis B. Garippo of Circuit Court said the order applies to prosecutors, defense attorneys, news reporters and anyone else involved in the case. He said he acted after finding out that reporters based in Rockford had obtained copies of the list of 50 potential jurors.

Jury selection for the trial of Gacy, charged on 33 murder counts, is to begin Jan. 28 in Rockford. The 12 jurors and four alternates will be transported to Chicago for the trial.

They will be sequestered.

Garippo said he found out reporters had obtained copies of the list after defense attorneys told him they had received a phone call Friday from a reporter who said he had a copy. The judge added that he had no evidence that any prospective jurors were contacted by reporters.

William Freeberg, professor of recreation, takes time out to counsel a student for class registration. Teachers who choose to be evaluated by their students are "graded" on their accessibility for counseling outside the classroom.

Evaluations give teachers feedback

Don Winsor, director of the service, said, "A rapport between the instructor and the instructional designer is established in which neither feels threatened and can be honest with each other. Hopefully, the two will blend together in a cooperative effort."

Instructional designers work directly with the faculty on how to measure what is wrong, what an instructor's goals are and how to achieve them. Winsor said.

Learning Resources offers three services. Winsor said, the staff of instructional designers, a collection of films and tapes, and access to materials from other campus support sections.

The ICE forms may be used as evidence within the promotion and tenure system. Instructors must submit acceptable evidence for review in the form of either peer review through published journal submissions, the number and frequency of grants received, critiques of written work by faculty at other universities and ICE forms at both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

Winsor said, "The ICE form is one common denominator for evaluation so it gets to be used frequently."

Elmore said, "The validity of the ICE forms as a source of evaluation has been fairly well established with professional journals and surveys of faculties show the form has been helpful."

"The ICE forms should be used to look at instruction over a period of time. They are a source of student feedback and are most helpful because they do monitor changes in teaching."

IGC grain shipments to increase

CHICAGO (AP) — Despite the U.S. grain embargo against the Soviet Union, the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad will ship more grain in 1980 than it did last year, says company official William B. Johnson.

Johnson, chairman and chief executive officer of the railroad's parent company, ICG Industries, also said Tuesday the proposed merger of the Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific Railroads does not bode ill for the ICG.

At a news conference, Johnson said the most the ICG could lose as a result of the embargo is 16,000 carloads. It had expected to ship 126,000 carloads this year, he said.

He added that grain once destined for the Soviet Union probably will be shipped elsewhere, such as Mexico, storage facilities or the Food for Peace Program.

"I said the proposed merger could be a 'very important development' in the long process of strengthening the nation's rail system.

If the railroads merge, others might follow as a defensive move, he said. Johnson added that developments might also add to a merger of the ICG with another railroad.

Meanwhile, ICG announced increases in its earnings and sales for 1979. A change last year in accounting methods will spread the costs of a track maintenance program over the useful life of the equipment and also add $67 million to preliminary 1979 earnings.

Those earnings will be about $174 million, or $9.50 a share, an increase from $97 million, or $5.23 a share, in 1978.

The company estimated 1979 sales at $3.7 billion, a 40 percent increase from 1978. It said it expects 1980 earnings to increase by at least the projected growth rate of 9 percent to 10 percent and sales to be "well above" $4 billion.

Auditions for WIDB radio news positions will be from 4 to 9 p.m. Thursday in the newsroom in Wright I.

The environmental workshops at Touch of Nature are offering practical experience working with a K-12 environmental education program this spring with credit available through various departments.

Women's Services is sponsoring an informal lunch meeting on a weekly basis for re-entry women from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Mondays in the Corinth Room and also on alternating Tuesdays in the Thebes Room.

The annual dinner meeting of the Southern Illinois Audubon Society will be at 6:30 p.m. Friday in Xavier Hall at Poplar and Walnut Streets. "Birds of the Southwest," a collection of photographs, will be presented after the dinner by Bowie Hannah.

'Mid-year' dollar requests 5 times more than fund

By Paula Donner Walter
Staff Writer

The requests range from $150 for 10 ashtrays to $200,000 for research facilities and come to a total of $2.5 million. But the President's Budget Advisory Committee, assigned the task of rebudgeting mid-year fallout monies, has "only" half a million to dole out.

The 16-member committee, composed of representatives from campus constituency groups, must rebudget $585,172, which was budgeted at the beginning of the fiscal year for staff positions that were never filled. The committee is expected to have its recommendations to Acting President

Hiram Lesar by Feb. 1. Mid-year monies available for this year originally totaled a little more than $1 million, but just $585,172 was left after several commitments made by Lesar for the anticipated monies were subtracted.

Those commitments included: $229,153 to compensate for a beginning budget deficit; $42,075 for a video camera in the Office of University Relations; $15,000 for the Women's Night Transit Program; $45,000 for the Presidential Search Committee, and $100,000 for Intercollegiate Athletics.

Departments which report directly to the president submit requests for the mid-year dollars and must specify exactly what the money is needed for, said Richard Millman, assistant to the president and chairman of the budget committee.

While Millman said he did not care for the word "prioritize," it's essentially what the committee must do with requests. "We're pairing things off, hopefully, to get the total amount of requests down to the amount of money available," he said.

The largest request—$950,900—comes from Campus Services. The money is being requested to cover utility costs not funded in its original budget, repairs to roofs, sidewalks and roads, and for equipment, and general campus projects.

The second largest request—$757,660—came from Academic Affairs to cover classroom improvements, the renovation of research facilities, equipment and library needs.

Student Affairs has requested $254,599 to cover microfiche readers and computer terminals, equipment, wages, remodeling and refurbishing, which includes $150 for 10 ashtrays.

Other requests include: —$341,829 from University Relations for a deficit in intercollegiate athletics, moving expenses for area, alumni and communication services; air travel for the vice president for University Relations;

—$137,205 from Computing Affairs for computer memory; a communication link between Faner and Wham; an Inquiry computer package; a replacement for a computer plotter, and a data dictionary directory;

—$85,679 from Financial Affairs for a Personnel Payroll information system, a billing receivables system and other equipment;

—$7,116 from the University Legal Counsel for a memory typewriter;

—$1,300 from the Internal Auditor.

Congressmen predict boycott of Olympics; aid to Pakistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will boost military spending, approve aid for Pakistan and join President Carter's call for a Moscow Olympics boycott, congressional leaders predicted Tuesday.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan has put Congress in a defense mood that has brought talk of renewing the draft.

"I have a feeling this will be a security-minded Congress," Byrd told reporters, as the 96th Congress convened its second session.

They also predicted Congress will approve resolutions backing Carter's vow to boycott the Moscow Olympic Summer Games if the Soviets do not withdraw troops from Afghanistan next month.

Byrd also said the Senate will act this year on ratifying the new U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. Carter had asked the Senate to delay action.

Windfall profits tax legislation stalled by energy plan debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House conferees put all but the finishing touches today on a $22.3 billion "windfall" tax on the oil industry and then began trying to decide what kind of national energy program the money should buy.

The Senate version of the tax bill would spend more than $25 billion in incentives for home and business conservation and use of non-oil fuels over the decade. The house bill contains no spending at all.

"This is a major achievement in moving toward a sound energy policy," Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House conferees, said of the compromise tax.

Senate conferees accepted the compromise unanimously. Only Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, dissented when the House delegates agreed. Archer said the tax would make it more difficult for the United States to increase oil production and thus reduce reliance on imported petroleum.

Carter's Iowa win surprises Simon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th, a leading supporter of Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, said Tuesday that President Carter would win the Illinois primary if it were held today.

Simon said in an interview he was surprised by the almost two-to-one margin of Carter's victory over Kennedy in precinct caucuses in Iowa on Monday night.

"Obviously, as long as the foreign situation continues to dominate the scene, Carter will retain the lead," Simon said. He said, though, that if Iran and Afghanistan fade as the main issues and the economy returns to the fore, Kennedy's fortunes are bound to rise.

"If the Illinois primary were held today, Carter would win," Simon said. The primary, in which Simon is backing Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination, is on March 18.

If Carter should upset Kennedy in primaries in New Hampshire and Massachusetts next month, Simon said, "then there obviously has to be a reassessment."

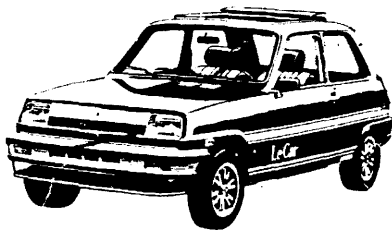

Asked if that meant Kennedy should consider withdrawing from the race if he loses in his native New England, Simon said, "That would be one of the questions."

But if Kennedy wins in New England and loses in Illinois, Simon said, the senator should remain in the race and keep fighting for the nomination.

"There is a very mercurial quality about this," Simon said. He said he thought all of Kennedy's problems—his loss in Iowa and slippage in the polls—are traceable to the seizure of hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and the Soviet role in Afghanistan.

Simon dismissed suggestions that part of Kennedy's problem is awkwardness on the stump, saying he had done well in public appearances, except for one CBS News interview with Roger Mudd in which he was asked about Chappaquiddick.

At a meeting of the Democratic Central Committee in the 24th congressional district, Simon failed first to persuade the committeemen to endorse Kennedy.

Traveler Rosario looks to Moscow

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

At age 22, Ral Rosario has done his share of spanning the globe, even though his wide world of sports is confined to swimming for SIU.

The Saluki senior came to Tacoma, Wash., from his native Philippines in the summer of 1972. Although he graduated from Lakes School in Tacoma, he competed for the Philippines in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal because of his citizenship status.

Rosario is anxious to pack his suitcase again for the 1980 Olympics, which he hopes will remain in Moscow. He qualified earlier this year for the Olympic trials in the 200-yard freestyle and 100 backstroke. He'll still be swimming for the Philippines and if he has it his way, the island nation won't boycott the games because of the Soviet Union's military aggression.

"In the first place," Rosario said, "I don't think they should mix politics and sports. It's not fair to the athletes."

"I'd like to see Moscow, also," he continued. "I've always wanted to go in there and see what it's like."

Naturally, when you're 20 years old and moving to a new country as Rosario did, you may not be so anxious to pull up stakes. But he recalled no culture shock or anything else that comes with immigration.

Ral Rosario

"One of the first subjects we were required to learn in school was English," Rosario recalled. "I still didn't speak it too fluently when we came over and I had a hard time understanding certain words because they were spoken so quickly."

But swimming came much easier to Rosario.

"I began competitive swimming when I was about nine, but I can remember diving into our pool in the back yard when I was really little," he said. "In the Philippines, swimming's not that competitive of a sport, it's more for recreation. But we'd always go swimming on the weekends."

After school in Tacoma, Rosario was recruited by Saluki Coach Bob Steele, and for the four years Rosario has competed for the Salukis, the team has maintained a winning tradition. Others who arrived at Carbondale as freshmen included freestyle sprinters Bob Samples and Marty Krug, backstroke Dean Ehrenheim and butterfly specialist Jorge Jaramillo.

They're all seniors now, and Rosario has benefited not only from the competition but also from the friendships he has made.

"Yeah, I remember a lot of things we've done together," he said with a smile. "We're pretty close now."

Even though the Salukis seldom are billed the underdogs going into a meet, Rosario remembers when being undersold prior to a meet provided greater satisfaction.

"When I was a sophomore, we were getting ready for the NIC (National Independent Conference) meet, and most of the schools were rated ahead of us," he said. "They said we were dead, but that's the year we won it."

But success breeds optimism, and Rosario is confident the Salukis can improve over their 16th-place finish in last year's NCAA meet.

"Naturally, everybody wants to qualify for the nationals," Rosario said.

Skilled lady gymnastics team ready for return to winning

The lady gymnasts were back in Carbondale from their vacations on Jan. 3. The following day, they began two weeks of practice, including 10 days of two practice sessions each day. Enough about dedication.

As for enthusiasm, Vogel has said he can't remember a more enthusiastic Saluki team. The same has been said by team captain and senior Hennesse.

So if, in the next few months you get tired of watching yet another Saluki team flounder, check to see if the lady gymnasts are in town and get in on this little secret firsthand.

Gymnasts lose; record falls to 2-2

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

The men's gymnastics team lost its second consecutive dual meet Monday night, falling victim to the University of New Mexico Lobos, 257.7-250.6, at Albuquerque. It was the Lobos' first dual meet of the season.

The Salukis' record fell to 2-2, but the gymnasts continued to compile high scores. SIU placed first in four events, and Brian Babcock won the all-around for the fourth straight meet with a 53.95.

Babcock came through with another outstanding effort, placing first in three events. He won the vault with a 9.5, the horizontal bars with a 9.25, and tied teammate Warren Brantley on the parallel bars with an 8.95.

Randy Betus scored his first victory of the season, placing first in the floor exercise with a 9.35. Bob Barut placed second in that event with a 9.25. Dave Schible finished second on the pommel horse, scoring a 9.1.

The Salukis will try to crack the .500 mark Saturday when they travel to Bloomington to face the Redbirds of Illinois State.

SIU will have its first home dual meet of the season Jan. 31, against Louisiana State University. The Salukis will face the Tigers in the Arena in a 9:30 p.m. contest.

Bradley takes over MVC lead

By The Associated Press

Freshman Antoine Carr scored 31 points and Cliff Livingston hit 23 points, four in the final 32 seconds of overtime, to lead Wichita State to an 81-77 Missouri Valley Conference basketball victory Monday night over Creighton, knocking the Bluejays out of first place.

In other Valley action Monday, Bradley grabbed the league lead with a 61-60 win over Indiana State and Tulsa defeated New Mexico State, 80-74.

Bradley now sits atop the Valley with a 5-1 league mark, followed by Creighton, 5-2, and West Texas State, 4-2, which was idle Monday night. Three teams — Indiana State, Wichita State and Tulsa — are tied at 3-3, followed by Drake, 2-3; New Mexico State, 2-4; and SIU, 0-6.

At Peoria, David Thirkill chalked up 20 points and added a key steal in the closing seconds to lead Bradley to its win over Indiana State.

In the Wichita game, Livingston sealed the thriller when he hit both ends of a one-and-one to give the Shockers a 79-77 lead with 32 seconds left. He added a jumper with one second left after a missed free throw by teammate Jay Jackson.

The Shockers tied the game, 74-74, on a 22-foot jump shot by Carr with 35 seconds left in regulation time.

Carr blocked a sure layup with three seconds left in regulation by Creighton's Kevin McKenna, also.

Gifted lady gymnasts ready to start winning

In an attempt to release you from the stranglehold of the dismal winter sports seasons Saluki teams currently are engaged in, I'm going to let you in on a little secret.

Directly in the center of the SIU campus, just north of Anthony Hall, is Davies Gymnasium—the home of the Women's Athletics Department. No, that's not the secret, although, no doubt, it comes as quite a surprise to many.

No, the secret is this: Inside Davies Gym, there's a small group of talented young women who comprise the women's gymnastics team, and, unlike the other Saluki teams currently entering combat, this group of athletes will win more times than they lose—a lot more.

Hardly the type of secret you'd want to tease your girlfriend or boyfriend with, you might say. If you're astute enough to know the young ladies' record thus far is an unimpressive 1-3, you may even be thinking this writer fell out of the shower onto his head.

But that's where I getcha. The key words are "thus far."

Until now, the 1979-80 Saluki squad was similar to any other in the recent past. A few excellent athletes and few good athletes, but in no way a team equal in caliber to the AIAW national championship teams of 1970, 1974 and 1975.

But that was before semester break. Since the Salukis' last competition, a 128.50-114.25 thrashing at Iowa State 10 days before Christmas, Coach Herb Vogel has gained the eligibility of Lori Erickson and Denise Didier.

Both are top notch, grade A athletes capable of turning a better-than-average team into an exceptional one.

Erickson is a two-time Illinois state high school champion. Didier is a two-time all-American and also the AIAW national uneven bars champion of 1975.

Coupled with the likes of all-rounders Val Painton, Pam Harrington and Maureen Hennessey, with Pam Conklin, Patty Tveit, Lisa Peden and Marti Traxler playing supporting roles in their respective specialties, Erickson and Didier could put SIU women's gymnastics back to where it was in the mid-70s—a national power to be reckoned with.

All of this may sound like idle speculation to many, and rightfully so without qualification. But I have reasons to believe in this little tale.

For one, Vogel has all but said his team is exceptional. What he has said is that "they have the potential to be very good." I don't know about you, but I'm inclined to believe a coach that has a 175-23 record spanning over 16 years at the college ranks.

In my opinion, if this year's team does reach its potential early in the second half of the season, there's no stopping them from claiming a few national honors.

Secondly, to have potential is one thing, but to have potential and waste is another. That's where dedication and enthusiasm enter and this team has those qualities, too.

Gottfried: "We can do it"

By Mark Pabich
Staff Writer

"There is only one of the three days worth worrying about—today. Forget about yesterday and the criticism, and don't worry about the next day, the sun will rise no matter what you do."

This saying circulates in the men's basketball office and Saluki Head Coach Joe Gottfried and his coaching staff plan on finishing the season that way, one game at a time.

"The games so far this season are behind us," Gottfried said. "We can learn from them, but we have to look forward to the remaining 10 Missouri Valley games, starting with Tulsa at home on Saturday."

"The race to play in the Valley tournament is still wide open," he said. "The team that is playing hot ball at tournament time usually ends up on top, and it's not always the team with the best record."

With 10 MVC games remaining, SIU has an excellent chance to finish well enough in the conference to participate in post-season Valley play. The Salukis, currently in last place in the MVC, must finish eighth to qualify for the league tournament, which determines the Valley's representative in the NCAA tournament.

Questions have arisen about the Salukis' poor performance this season, 4-12, 0-6 in the Valley. Talk of team dissension, spurred on by an incident concerning Charles Moore and Charles Nance not taking part in an in-game team huddle, has circulated.

However, Gottfried dismisses such discussion, especially ones concerning team unity and enthusiasm.

"The difficulties that have arisen recently have been overmagnified," Gottfried said. "The players have a great deal of enthusiasm and are looking forward to finishing the season on a strong note.

"There is a great deal of pressure on our young team, and the players are all handling it," he said. "The team's attitude is to win these final 10, one at a time and to play the best they can."

The Salukis will begin a four-game home stand, beginning Saturday at 7:35 p.m. against Tulsa, something that Gottfried said will help the team.

"We've only had five of our 16 games at home this season," the coach said, "and the home fans make a big difference."

"This past trip to New Mexico and Texas, even though we lost both games, was good for our squad," he said. "We ran into three cold spells, but we played with intensity and a lot of hustle. This team is hustling right now."

"The past is behind us," Gottfried said. "We can do it."

Athletes shouldn't be pawns of politics

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

Editor's note: This is an analysis of the arguments on the United States' proposed boycott of the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympic games.

President Carter made a suggestion Sunday. In a move to shape public opinion in the United States and to attempt to sway other countries to his point of view, Carter requested that the United States Olympic Committee find a new site for the Summer Games scheduled for Moscow, or boycott the Olympics entirely if the Soviet troops do not withdraw from Afghanistan within the next month.

Fortunately, it is only a suggestion. The president does not have the power to order an Olympic boycott. That authority rests solely with USOC, a private group. Robert J. Kane, president of USOC, has called a boycott "inappropriate," but committee leaders said they will poll prospective Olympians before making any decisions. The International Olympic Committee will discuss Carter's opposition at meetings Feb. 10 and 11.

Donald Miller, USOC executive director, said Carter's stand indicates that the president is looking for alternatives and that a boycott has not yet been finalized. Despite

"I think our best move is to go over there and beat the pants off the Russians"—Craig Virgin

Miller's interpretation, Carter's stand seems equivocal. Carter said he doesn't want to "inject politics into the Olympics," yet his hasty support of a possible boycott is doing just that.

Moving the Games to Montreal, Munich, Tokyo or Mexico City, where facilities remain from past Games, would be ideal, but Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, said moving the site of the Summer Games would be "both legally and technically impossible," and that the IOC isn't even considering a move. Tokyo and Montreal both say staging the Games in their countries at this late date is impossible, and Munich and Mexico City don't even want to touch this political hot potato.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Tuesday that her country would host some of the events, but not the entire Games. Scattering the Olympics around the world would be detrimental to what the Games stand for. The Olympics traditionally have been a time for countries to gather at a common site in an attempt to bring unity, sportmanship and good will to the world. A spread-out Olympics would resemble nothing more than 'World Championships,' already held in most sports.

Moving the site seems very improbable. Carter, in calling for a possible boycott within a month, has shown his cards too early. A boycott could be delayed and carried out as late as the eve of the Games, which begin July 19. The Soviet Union already has announced that it will participate in the Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y., no matter what the United States concerning the Summer Games.

Carter has received little support from other countries in organizing a boycott.

"The Games are for the competitors, not the politicians," said Claude Collard, president of the French National Olympic and Sports Committee.

Premier Constantine Caramanlis of Greece, who along with Carter has suggested a permanent home for the Games in Greece, said he opposes, "politization of the Olympic Games."

Shinichiro Okano, Olympic managing director of Japan, said, "Exchanges of athletes should remain untouched even if diplomatic relations are severed."

The Finland Olympic Committee said it opposes the boycott for political reasons and will continue to train for the Moscow Games.

The governments of some countries, such as West Germany, Canada, Israel and Norway, have expressed sympathy with Carter's reasoning, but have deferred any final decisions to their Olympic committees.

U.S. athletes have mixed reactions to the boycott. A United Press International poll said 49 percent of U.S. Olympic hopefuls back the president and support a boycott, while 41 percent want to compete at all costs. Opinions vary from a necessary sacrifice for the nation to strict resistance to a boycott.

Craig Virgin, former University of Illinois distance runner said, "I have looked at the alternatives—boycott, postponement, cancellation—and I think our best move is to go over there and beat the pants off the Russians."

World record-holding sprinter Harvey Glance said, "It would be heartbreaking for me and all the other athletes I know if we would not go. It would be the biggest disappointment of my life if the United States pulled out."

Other top U.S. athletes, including Dwight Stones, Houston McTeer and Greg Foster, have said they will support the President's position.

Julian Roosevelt, the American representative on the IOC, ripped the United States for trying to solve political problems through the Olympics.

"It disturbs me a great deal that politicians and our so-called leaders in Washington must so openly admit defeat in their own bailiwick—politically, diplomatically, economically and militarily... and call upon the Olympic movement, which has been a force for good in the world for over 80 years through two world wars, to pull their fat out of the fire."

Roosevelt added, "It not only disturbs me, it frightens me that they're so helpless in their own area that they must use their athletes as pawns in their faulting chess game."

Family search leads to a book

By Margaret O'Keefe
Student Writer

An SIUC associate history professor is finding that the interest in tracing family roots shows no signs of abating and that it's helping his academic career.

"The tracing of family descendants is a very personal kind of history," explained H. Arnold Barton, author of "The Search for Ancestors," published by the SIU Press last April.

Barton is one of this country's leading authorities on Swedish immigration.

Described as a Swedish and American family saga, Barton's book traces his family's immigration to the United States beginning with his earliest ancestor's arrival in 1845.

"Their lives were like the lives of so many other immigrants," Barton said explaining the wide appeal of his book.

"My interest in family research began when I was a child, with my father telling stories of how they came to America," Barton said, who emphasized oral information as an important source.

Using his family as an example, Barton wanted to investigate Swedish immigration as a whole. After graduating from high school, he spent three months in Sweden to learn the language. He was encouraged to study Scandinavian history and he gradually became involved in the history of immigration.

"In Sweden, they have remarkably complete vital statistics," Barton said. He cited property, census and church records as sources, as well as Swedish archives he used in his search.

"Church records were extremely helpful," Barton said. He said he found certificates of birth, baptism, marriage, and death, as well as records showing when families left the parish, indicating the time they might have emigrated.

A breakthrough in Barton's search occurred when a batch of family letters was found on a farm in Iowa. The letters had been in the family for over a century. Barton said the letters belonged to his grandfather and were sent to Barton from a cousin who Barton thinks found the letters in a barn on the property.

Barton said he received enormous help from an elderly relative he discovered in Sweden during one of his visits. "Whenever I needed information I couldn't get in the U.S., I would write to her and she would find it in the archives for me in Sweden," he said.

Barton is trying to bring out a Swedish edition of his book. An earlier book was translated into Swedish and issued last year. He said that when he started the project he was doing it "on the side."

"It wasn't my main research concern. When I felt ready, I just sat down and wrote it up."

H. Arnold Barton, an SIUC associate history professor, is one of the leading authorities in Swedish immigration research. His book "The Search for Ancestors," was published last April.

Support for defense spending highest in a decade

By Evans Witt
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Faced with American hostages in Iran and Soviet troops marching into Afghanistan, public support for spending more on U.S. defense and the military has jumped dramatically to the highest level in a decade, the Associated Press-NBC News Poll says.

The objective of more defense spending is to gain military superiority over the Soviet Union, the public says.

The flipside of the American opinion is fear, fear of war. Two out of every five Americans think a war involving the United States is very likely in the next three years — the highest level of fear found by the AP-NBC News polls in the past three years since the question was first asked.

The strong support for a bigger military budget is an historic change in American opinion. From the early 1970s and the Vietnam war until a month ago, there has been a consistent sentiment for cutting defense spending. That sentiment has now been decisively reversed.

Sixty-three percent of those questioned Thursday and Friday said they back increasing the U.S. defense budget. Twenty-one percent advocated keeping defense spending at its current level and only 8 percent called for a decrease. Another 8 percent of the 1,395 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

These findings show an acceleration of a trend that was first discovered a month ago.

In the AP-NBC News poll in mid-December — after the Iran crisis began but before the Russian intervention in Afghanistan — 51 percent backed higher defense spending; 31 percent called for no change; 9 percent supported a decrease and another 9 percent were not sure.

As recently as September 1979, sentiment was split between increasing the defense budget and keeping it at its current level. In that AP-NBC News poll, 38 percent favored an increase; 36 percent, no change; 16 percent, a decrease; and 10 percent were not sure.

Acting President Hiram H. Lesar and two visiting deans from Egypt have signed an agreement formally establishing an international exchange of professors, research and managerial development programs between the two countries.

SIU-C hosted a Middle Management Education

Program in 1979 for executives of various business firms and other types of organizations from Egypt.

The program focused on six weeks of management training on campus and six weeks of internships with various American corporations.

The program acquainted Egyptian middle managers with American management decision-making techniques and procedures. The program was granted about $1.2 million by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

"Those who have come here have benefitted from all the available facilities," said Ibrahim Hamimy, Faculty of Commerce dean at Ain Shams University in Cairo, Egypt. "In exchange those from here that go to Egypt can learn about our developing country."

Adult ed lists wine making to guitar

By University News Service

Subjects ranging from acupuncture to karate and wine making to welding are part of the spring schedule of adult evening classes offered by the Division of Continuing Education at SIU-C.

Most of the 56 non-credit classes begin the week of Feb. 4. A course in English for the foreign born began Jan. 21 and a class in driver education begins this Friday.

Fifteen classes start Monday, Feb. 4. They include welding, grape growing, guitar, shorthand, martial arts and rollerskating.

Another 31 courses get underway the following three nights. "How-to" scholars may choose from such offerings as fundamentals of acting, massage for relaxation, disco for exercise, real estate transactions, gems and gem material, Italian conversation, horseshoeing, photography, jewelry making, acupuncture and ballroom dance.

Courses in 10 special subject areas including baseball umpiring, basic electricity in the home and sign language begin at various times between February and April.

Most of the courses will meet once or twice a week for between five and 10 weeks. Senior citizens (age 60 or over) may register for classes at half the regular enrollment fee unless otherwise specified.

Registration can be completed at the Continuing Education Office, Washington Square C, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Anti-Monopoly 'passes Go'

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The man who invented Anti-Monopoly, the parlor parody legally and literally crushed two years ago by the makers of Monopoly, is the winner in the latest toss of the judicial dice.

And Ralph Anspach vows the game will be back in production soon.

"We'll be in New York with Anti-Monopoly in time for the Toy Fair in February," said the bearded, 53-year-old economics professor.

To make sure Parker Brothers, the makers of Monopoly, know he is back, Anspach said he will dig up 40,000 Anti-Monopoly games from a dump near Mankato, Minn., on Wednesday. General Mills, owner of Parker Brothers, buried them after a federal court here decided the game infringed on the Monopoly trademark.

The games — which Anspach was ordered to surrender after the ruling — have been moldering underground for some 2 1/2 years, so Anspach does not expect to salvage much. He said the dig was "symbolic," adding that Parker Brothers would be billed $75,000

Inquest set in shooting deaths of teenage brothers

CENTRALIA (AP) — An inquest into the shooting deaths of two Centralia brothers gunned down during an aborted armed robbery in December promises to pack City Hall in this Southern Illinois community.

Scott and Brian Pawlisa were shot and killed by police bullets as they left the rear of a Centralia seafood restaurant the night of Dec. 21. Police had been tipped that the robbery was to occur and uniformed officers in four unmarked cars staked out the scene near a shopping center parking lot that serves as a gathering place for area teenagers.

Marion County Coroner Dan Fischer has called the inquest at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at City Hall.

Centralia Police Chief Kermit Justice said the brothers had apparently bragged to friends that they were going to rob the place, and word filtered down through police informants. Justice said as many as eight carloads of youths watched "the shooting."

Scott, 18, allegedly carried a gun. His brother, 17, had a pair of wire cutters and some $800 in cash allegedly stolen from the restaurant. Justice said one police officer, as yet unidentified, opened fire when Scott "made a move" with the gun. Scott died about an hour later, and Brian died the next day.

Justice was critical of the young people who watched saying he hoped they saw what they wanted to see. Some townspeople have complained that the police let the Pawlisas carry out the robbery. Letters to the editor of the local paper poured in and telephone lines to a radio station talk show were crammed with complaints for several weeks.

Justice said the officer who allegedly shot the brothers had been taken off the case. He said he has prepared an internal investigation of the incident. The Illinois State Police Department of Criminal Investigation has also prepared a report.

Although the incident took place in Clinton County, the youths died at the hospital which is in the Marion County portion of the city.

Clinton County State's Attorney Pat Hitpas confirmed Monday that a 16-year-old juvenile boy has been found guilty of delinquency for his part in the robbery. Hitpas said the youth, an employee of the restaurant, allegedly left the front door unlocked after closing time to allow the brothers to enter. Other employees in the restaurant were bound during the robbery but there were no injuries.

Two others have been charged in Clinton County Court. Francis Carl Meredith, 17, of Centralia was charged with armed robbery and conspiracy for allegedly agreeing to drive the intended getaway car. Dale Thornton, also of Centralia, has been charged with conspiracy for allegedly loaning his car to the three for use in the robbery.

Police said Meredith was arrested as he attempted to leave the scene in another car. Thornton was arrested at a nearby pizza restaurant where he allegedly was watching the incident. A preliminary hearing for the two has been set for Jan. 28.

Probes of Quad Cities nuclear incident ended

CHICAGO (AP) — Two investigations into a possible incident of sabotage at the Quad Cities Nuclear Power station at Cordova have been closed with no definite conclusion.

Investigator James McCarten of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said his agency has concluded that a Dec. 4 incident in which inspectors found two waterline valves shut in the emergency cooling system could have resulted from operator error, maintenance error or sabotage.

McCarten said the Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted a separate inquiry into the valves being closed when they should have been open and also was unable to determine if sabotage or error was responsible.

McCarten said the position of the valves did not pose a danger, since in an emergency situation the plant's computer system would have opened them automatically.

The spokesman said the NRC determined that the valves could have been shut through a switch activated in the control room, that maintenance personnel mistakenly could have tripped into a switch controlling the valves, or that there could have been sabotage.

He said several employees were interviewed in both investigations but that nobody acknowledged having shut the valves.

McCarten said "an individual" was performing some minor maintenance work near the remote control units in the plant and could have accidentally pressed, leaned against or hit a switch activating the valves.

McCarten said there have been no subsequent reports of misalignments or damage to valves. He added that the FBI believes it is significant that there were no apparent indications of malicious intent.

The FBI investigation centered specifically on sabotage aspects of the case, while the NRC looked at the technical questions as well as sabotage, McCarten said.

The plant is a joint operation of Commonwealth Edison Co. and Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Co.

Group teaches conservation in Solar Workshop program

By Susan Poag
Student Writer

Being in school, receiving credit for work completed and not having to attend classes may sound like a student's dream come true. For the members of the Energy Resource Group, during the 1979-80 school year, it is a reality.

The Energy Resource Group is composed of nine SIU-C design majors who are participating in the Solar Workshops program under the supervision of Richard Archer, instructor of design, and Ray Lenzi, director of the VISTA affiliated University Year for Action program at SIU-C.

Within the Solar Workshops program, the members of the group each selected a topic to concentrate on from one of the following areas: solar energy and its applications, alternative fuels, weatherization, and insulation of houses, wood heating, and energy conserving household tips.

Richard Archer

"The program began on September 15. It took us about two months to become experts, that is to know more than 99 percent of the population does about the topics we had selected," Tom Pape, a member of the Energy Resource Group, said.

The Energy Resource Group educates the public through pamphlets it writes and publishes, and through public announcements and workshops.

Members of the Energy Resource Group are paid monthly and receive 30 hours of credit for their work. The program, which is in its first year, is being funded by grants from the Illinois Board of Higher Education, Illinois Natural Resources, and the UYA.

A major portion of the Energy Resource Group's time is spent sponsoring free energy workshops. The workshops are held at night and run in four separate sessions to cover all the material the Energy Resource Group has prepared.

"Now that cold weather is here people are starting to become concerned about ways to save money. They are calling up the office of the Energy Resource Group and asking questions," Dean Prissavas, a member of the Energy Resource Group, said.

Old law limits aliens' ownership of Illinois property to six years

By Gordon Billingsley
University News Service

Four proposals to restrict ownership of Illinois farmland by foreign citizens were introduced in the General Assembly in 1979. All of them failed and were probably unnecessary anyway.

A review of Illinois laws and the books shows that aliens' rights to real property—including farmland—are severely limited by an 1897 law that has been all but forgotten in the massive Illinois Revised Statutes and seldom enforced.

The law limits the ownership of all real estate by aliens to a six-year term. Beyond that, the alien owner can be compelled to sell the land.

The four recent proposals in the legislature would not have offered much more limitation on aliens' rights in land.

Two of the bills called for outright prohibition of farmland ownership by aliens, which roughly would have had the same effect as the current law. The two other bills called for some restrictions, but not a ban, of alien ownership of Illinois farmland.

There was a fifth bill, signed into law in August, that will require aliens to report agricultural holdings to the state. It will give the state a firm grip on the patterns of farm ownership in Illinois by aliens, but does nothing to limit or restrict such ownership.

Illinois' current 82-year-old law on alien ownership of real estate says foreign citizens may require or transmit ownership in real estate in any way that a U.S. citizen does, subject to the six-year provision. Land may be inherited, sold, bought, willed or given away.

The six-year countdown holds only for aliens who are 21 or older. The six-year period begins at 21 for minors.

If an alien does not sell his land within the prescribed time, the law gives the state's attorney in the county in which the land lies the power to force the sale of the land. The state's attorney has 30 days to act after he is notified that an alien has exceeded the six-year term.

The law also was written to allow private citizens to bring suit to compel the sale of such lands if the state's attorney does not act. However, this was held to be unconstitutional by the Illinois Supreme Court in 1945.

It is not clear from an examination of cases since 1897 how the courts would view the taking of land by aliens, in trust, which could be used to disguise alien ownership. There have been no tests of the law involving aliens that held land in such "blind" trusts.

If such a case were to arise, the courts would have to decide if ownership through such an arrangement could be construed as an attempt to defraud the state.

The rights of aliens in surrounding states, according to a 1979 survey by the Chicago Title Insurance Co., are similar to those afforded under Illinois law with some further restrictions and some more lenient policies.

In Indiana, all aliens have all rights to ownership except that they are limited to 320 acres; in Iowa, aliens cannot own more than 640 acres of rural land; in Kentucky, aliens have all rights to land if they become citizens within eight years of acquisition of realty; in Missouri, nonresident aliens may not hold agricultural land, which is defined as an parcel of more than five acres.

The federal government has never acted to restrict ownership of private lands by foreign citizens despite widespread interest over the past 100 years.

Historically, federal policy has been to leave land ownership under the jurisdiction of the states. The U.S. Supreme Court has held that states have the absolute right to limit alien ownership within their borders.

The only exception to this "absolute" right is a constitutional provision that makes all international treaties the law of the land for all states.

Agent orange effect still unanswered

By Mike Feinsilber

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of ex-GIs want the government to tell them whether they carry in their bodies one of the world's deadliest chemicals, a grim residue of America's Vietnam years.

The men fear their health will break down — or even that they may die — as a result of their exposure in Vietnam to the herbicide dubbed Agent Orange because it was packed in bright orange drums.

Some already tell of ringing in their ears, losing their toenails or their sex drive and a mystifying variety of other ailments. Government researchers are looking for answers but say it may take years to find them.

For nine years, Air Force planes sprayed more than 10 million gallons of Agent Orange over Vietnam, trying to kill off thick jungle growth that concealed Communist forces.

Thousands of American servicemen went into sprayed areas. Some were drenched in Agent Orange.

The spraying stopped in 1971, but not before Vietnamese women had begun reporting an increase in stillbirths.

No one knew then that a byproduct of Agent Orange is dioxin, a substance one researcher says is a million times more poisonous than PCBs, polychlorinated biphenyls, which the government has banned as carcinogens.

Agent Orange is a 50-50 mixture of two chemicals, 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. Dioxin is created in the manufacture of 2,4,5-T, use of which was banned last year by the Environmental Protection Agency after it was linked to miscarriages in Oregon.

The official position of the Veterans Administration is that "no conclusive evidence" links Agent Orange with any disease.

Still, when a serviceman is ill, he is eligible for treatment in VA hospitals. He need not show that his ailment is caused by Agent Orange.

If, however, a connection existed, the veteran would also be eligible for disability payments. The catch is that even if research establishes that men who were sprayed are in danger, no treatment exists to counter the effects of dioxin.

Dr. Paul A.L. Haber, the VA's assistant chief medical director, heads a 12-member Advisory Committee on Health Related Effects of Herbicides, overseeing a study to see if there is a common experience among the men coming in with the mystifying complaints.

In an interview, Haber made these points:

—More than 5,000 veterans have come into VA hospitals to ask about Agent Orange or to report ailments they attribute to exposure, and the number of complaints is increasing.

The complaints that seem to be most commonly experienced are numbness and tingling of the fingers, insomnia, headaches, change of personality, loss of libido, impotence, allegations of malformed children and skin rashes," Haber said.

Only one veteran has been awarded disability payments because of an illness linked to Agent Orange. The serviceman, receiving a 10 percent disability award of $48.40 a month, suffers from chloracne, a painful skin rash.

—"Chaotic" service records make it impossible to know how many of the 2.4 million men who served in Vietnam were exposed. In November, the General Accounting Office determined that 19,000 Marines were stationed near sprayed areas within four weeks of spraying.

Asked to speculate whether their exposure to Agent Orange threatens their health, Haber hedged.

"I can't really give you any hunch," he said. "I am, as most people with my perspective and training are, very concerned."

Haber notes a 1974 study by the National Academy of Sciences and a 1978 Air Force study found no links between Agent Orange exposure and subsequent illnesses.

The Ranch Hand Vietnam Association, whose members participated in the spraying operation — called "Operation Ranch Hand" — says none has problems linked to the defoliant.

The planned VA study was ordered by Congress and President Carter. It will compare the health of a large group of Vietnam veterans likely to have been exposed with men who did not serve. If the servicemen have a higher incidence of disease, that will be taken as evidence that Agent Orange harmed them.

But the study will not start before mid-June. "I would think we would have some pretty good answers by the end of a couple of years," said Haber.

Meantime, Vietnam veterans are using the courts to force the government to provide some quicker answers.

Agent Orange Victims International filed a suit on behalf of 3,000 veterans, asking that five chemical companies establish a $44 million fund to compensate alleged victims.

Tests not final

Agent Orange haunts veteran

STERLING, Ill. (AP) — Something has changed Bob Ryan and he wonders, almost constantly, if it was something in the jungle 10 years and 10,000 miles ago.

"I can't say that I'm going to die," Ryan said. "I can't say that I'm going to be dead in a year, two years, but I can't find out, either."

It was five years ago, long after he had returned from Viet Nam, that he began noticing changes. It was much later that he learned what may be causing his problems — a chemical called Agent Orange used widely as a defoliant.

"I felt like I was getting weaker. I was unable to do things that I should have been able to do. Working in construction, I was fairly active, certainly no less active than any other guy my age who was in great shape."

Time passed. He began to lose weight, then experienced extreme mental fatigue. Sometimes a lump would rise up on a part of his body, then disappear, and spots of acne would erupt on an arm or his back.

Sometimes, he'd just "go bananas."

"I'd just get crazy. I get unreasonable, start yelling at little things, things that shouldn't bother me. Then, all of a sudden I'll just calm down and be all right again," he said.

Ryan never connected his problems to his tour of duty in Viet Nam, not until he ran across a magazine article about Agent Orange.

"It was weird," he said. "I thought the article was about me."

Now Ryan is one of thousands of GIs from Viet Nam who want the government to tell them if their bodies contain the residue of one of the world's deadliest poisons.

Gilbert Bogen, president of Vet-line Hotline of Highland Park, has drawn up a list of symptoms gathered in a 10-month study of 78 Vietnam veterans.

Symptoms include those Ryan has experienced, plus cancer, insomnia, decreased sex drive, memory loss and birth defects.

Thus far, 10 of those 78 veterans in the study have developed cancer and three have died.

A Champaign-based group, CAVEAT, attempts to help veterans file claims and get testing through the Veterans Administration.

Ryan has been tested several times by the VA, but to no avail. Although a physician's report from the VA Hospital in Iowa City, Iowa, last year concluded that Ryan's claim may be valid, it was impossible to say for sure Agent Orange caused his problems.

Ryan said he felt that going to Viet Nam was something he was supposed to do. But now, he says, the government is not doing what it is supposed to do. "I need help," he said.

Severe frost could damage fruit crops

COBDEN (AP) — If the mild winter weather continues, life should be peachy for Southern Illinois fruit lovers, and growers.

According to Southern Illinois orchard owners, the mild winter has had no serious effects on the apple and peach crops.

However, they warn that a severe freeze in the coming weeks could damage crops.

The manager of the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange in Cobden, Jim West, said today the crops are looking good. "But we need more 15 to 20 degree weather. Anytime it gets down to 10 or 5 degrees we will have some damage."
