'Amnesty' aids prisoner's release

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

A Taiwanese man imprisoned since 1979 was released by the Taiwan government after receiving support from the Carbondale chapter of Amnesty International, an organization that works for the rights of political prisoners.

Chapter coordinator James Carl, a supervisor of registration data in admissions and records, said Hsu Chin-Kan had been sentenced to 12 years in prison on a charge of attempting to overthrow the Taiwan government.

The chapter had been seeking a public trial and had been investigating his political views and activities since 1985.

Carl said some AI findings show Hsu's involvement in a conspiracy as charged by the government to be doubtful. Hsu was one of 15 persons accused by the government of being members of a revolutionary organization and was said to be a combat commander.

Local AI members wrote letters to Taiwanese politicians, newspapers, and humanitarian organizations as part of their investigation to determine whether Hsu should be adopted by the group as a "prisoner of conscience." AI will decide whether to adopt Hsu as soon as he meets the criteria that he neither used nor advocated violence, Carl said.

A prisoner's adoption usually takes from about six months to a year, he said.

"Even if we don't adopt him, we still want political prisoners to have fair and

Reagan demands hostages' release, considers options

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An outraged President Reagan called Monday for the unconditional release of all hostages in Lebanon and warned "there is a limit" to what can be done for Americans who ignore warnings to leave Beirut.

As the abduction of two more foreigners brought to 28 the number presumed kidnapped in Lebanon, the White House said Reagan is considering a set of options — including military action — to deal with the crisis.

But the administration stopped short of outright threats against those behind a recent wave of kidnappings in Beirut believed related to the arrest of a suspected Lebanese terrorist in West Germany.

Instead, Reagan concentrated on the need to prevent further abductions and expressed outrage over the seizure Saturday of three more Americans and an Indian U.S. resident. The abductions, along with the seizure of two West Germans last week, are in apparent retaliation for the arrest of Mohammad Ali Hamadei, wanted in the United States for the June 1985 hijacking of TWA Flight 847.

In their public statements, U.S. officials indicated the new abductions would not slow efforts to get Hamadei extradited from West Germany to stand trial in the United States on a number of charges, including the murder of a Navy diver who was a passenger on the TWA flight.

"The terrorists appear to believe that by trafficking in human lives, they can force sovereign governments to give in to their demands," Reagan said. "But our government will not make concessions to terrorist groups despite their threats."

The administration appeared reluctant to exert public pressure on West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who was forced to deal with the matter in the midst of national elections that Sunday gave his center-right coalition a continued, though slimmer, majority.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "appropriate legal steps" had been taken to have Hamadei extradited and now "that legal process will have to take its proper course."

Speakes also said Reagan does not want to see Hamadei used in any way as a bargaining chip to free any of the hostages held in Lebanon.

Such concessions, Reagan said, "would only encourage more terrorism" and "endanger the lives of many others later."

But in a pointed message to Americans still in Lebanon, the president said the situation in that war-torn country has been dangerous for much of the last 12 years and suggested any foreigners taken captive at a time when West Beirut "has deteriorated into total chaos" may have only themselves to blame.

"Where U.S. citizens are unjustly deprived of their God-given rights, the U.S. government has an obligation to try to restore those rights," he said. "But there is a limit to what our government can do for Americans in a chaotic situation such as that in Lebanon today."

Eight Americans are now being held.

Community asked to join presidential search

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

As the search for a new SIUC president continues, the SIUC Presidential Search Advisory Committee has asked for input from the University community.

SIUC faculty and staff received a memorandum from the search committee Friday encouraging them to send nominations to the committee by March 15. Similar memos will be sent to the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said Lawrence Dennis, chairman of the committee. An advertisement for the student population's nominations will be placed in the Daily Egyptian, he added.

A brief description in the memo for candidate criteria says the president should be "a person of significant academic achievement with administrative and managerial experience and extensive leadership skills, including the ability to communicate and interact effectively with diverse constituency groups in and outside of the University."

The memo contained a brief job description that says the president is the chief operating

Air base takeover leaves 1 dead, 8 others injured

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Rebel soldiers tried to take over the Villamor air base, headquarters of the Philippine air force, Tuesday but surrendered after a firefight with soldiers that left one rebel dead and eight other people wounded, a military spokesman said. Col Honesto Isleta said the base was secure, although the attempted takeover by 52 rebel soldiers briefly disrupted domestic air service at nearby Manila airport. "The government is functioning. It is in control," Isleta said. He urged the nation to remain calm.

Shiites kidnap 2 more; envoy's safety feared

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen seized two more foreigners in Moslem west Beirut Monday, poking guns in their midsections and dragging them from a shop by their hair, bringing the number of foreign kidnap victims in Lebanon to 28. Meanwhile, fears grew about the safety of Church of England envoy Terry Waite with a report by the Kuwaiti News Agency that he had been placed under "house arrest" by Shiite Moslem kidnappers. Waite was last seen in public on Jan. 20.

Iran announces 'final assault' to end Gulf war.

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The commander of Iran's paramilitary revolutionary guards said Monday that Iranian troops have broken through a key Iraqi defensive position and are ready to mount a final assault aimed at ending the six-and-one-half-year-old Gulf war. The announcement came as the government vowed to send 100,000 "volunteers" to the war front early next month to spearhead a major push into southern Iraq.

'Leave Lebanon,' officials warn U.S. citizens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration, hoping to avert further kidnappings in Beirut, is considering more steps to force Americans out of Lebanon, State Department officials said Monday. The White House issued a stern warning to U.S. citizens to leave the war-torn country, the latest in a series of admonitions in the past decade.

Marcos not ordered to testify, court rules

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused Monday to overturn a court order requiring ousted Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to testify in a $10 million damage suit brought by families of two anti-Marcos activists murdered in Seattle. Two members of a Filipino gang eventually were convicted of murdering Silme Domingo and Gene Viernes, officers of a Seattle local of the International Association of Longshoremen, in 1981 and were sentenced to life in prison.

Argentine fugitive denied bail after arrest

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A former Argentine general accused in the torture and murder of thousands of leftists in the 1970s was denied bail by a U.S. magistrate Monday while his native country prepares an extradition case against him. Talks fail as educators ponder $40,000 question HOMER (UPI) — A marathon bargaining session failed to settle the longest teacher strike in Illinois history when negotiators for the school board and teachers could not agree on how to spend $40,000, participants said Monday. Classes for more than 300 students in kindergarten through high school continued to be taught by substitutes hired on a daily basis, school officials said.

Bill signed to expand DuPage County Airport

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A measure creating a new airport authority for the DuPage County Airport was signed into law Monday by Gov. James R. Thompson. The proposal (3473) expands the authority to include all of DuPage County and three townships in Kane County — the communities of St. Charles, Batavia and Geneva. Currently the authority covers only one DuPage County township along with the Kane County townships.

Message from Nicaragua: 'Please stop this war'

By William Brady
Staff Writer

Anne Woehrle, a Witness for Peace member who spent eight months in Nicaraguan war zones, will narrate a slide presentation about Nicaragua Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Interfaith Center.

Woehrle, 24, has been touring the United States since she returned from Nicaragua in November. She said her message is from the Nicaraguan people: "Please stop this war."

"It is hard to describe the barbarity of U.S. policy in Nicaragua, a country in which hard-won self-determination by the people is being undermined by U.S. policy," she said.

Woehrle quit her job as a reporter for the Hawk Eye, a Burlington, Iowa, newspaper, to work with Witness for Peace, an ecumenical organization that supports Anne Woehrle non-violent resistance to U.S. covert and overt intervention in the Central American country.

She said the Reagan administration's policy in Nicaragua is one of racism and economic self-interest. "For two centuries the United States has been trying to economically control Latin America, and the Reagan administration's way is militarily," Woehrle said. It is a "policy of robbing people of their natural resources," she said.

During her stay in Nicaragua, Woehrle said she worked with human rights investigators, spoke with international reporters and visited areas as well as interviewed witnesses where there had been Contra raids and killings.

"The answers are not simple, but one thing is clear," she said. "The Contras will never solve Nicaragua's problems. The Contras are, in fact, the biggest problem facing Nicaragua today, and the United States is, through the Contras, fighting a cruel and unjust war."

Snowstorm closes D.C. banks, offices

United Press International

A second major snowstorm blew through the Eastern Seaboard Monday, dumping up to 19 inches of snow that shut down schools and airports and forced government offices and banks in Washington to close early.

In Missouri, an unexpected ice storm led to dozens of accidents in the Bootheel, including a fatal accident in Cape Girardeau County.

At least 26 deaths have been blamed on the heavy snows and arctic cold that has gripped the East Coast since last Wednesday. The most recent deaths included two people in Rhode Island who succumbed to carbon monoxide trying to get more heat in their apartment and a city worker in New York City.

"We're not going to get away from this stuff until April," said Ron Scantlebury of the National Weather Service in Massachusetts.

Warnings for heavy snow reached from southern New England across Long Island, much of New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. Travelers advisories for snow and ice remained in effect for much of the Southeast.

Gale warnings were posted from the coasts of New England through South Carolina.

Accumulations included 18 inches at Vineland, N.J., 14 inches in Roanoke, Va., and Appomattox, Va., 10 inches in Washington and nine inches in New York City. Snowfall across New Jersey ranged up to 16 inches with 3- and 4-foot snowdrifts.

Saluki band leader to direct high school fest

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

Michael D. Hanes, the leader of SIU-C's Marching Salukis, has been chosen to direct the Illinois All-State High School Band Festival. Hanes will direct a band featuring the state's most talented high school musicians at Peoria's Civic Center Saturday.

"I'm pleased, honored and excited," said Hanes, who has led the Marching Salukis since 1965. "Those might sound like cliches, but that's how I feel."

Hanes was selected to direct the all-state musicians by the Illinois Music Education Association, a panel of the state's top high school band directors.

In addition to selecting the band's director, the organization selects students to perform in the festival, Hanes said. Students audition during district festivals held in November, and their scores are submitted to the IMEA for consideration. Based on the scores, 150 students are chosen to perform in one of the festival's four bands.

"They're the best kids in the state," Hanes said.

Hanes' presence at the festival marks the first time an SIU-C music faculty member has conducted the all-state group. Hanes played tympani in the All-State High School Band when he was a senior at Salem Community High School. "I have vivid memories of this," he said, "and to be on the podium, as opposed to the other side, adds to the excitement."

Hanes will meet his band Thursday, when he will conduct the first rehearsal for the performance on Saturday. Program selections include Leonard Bernstein's "Overture to Candide," John Barnes

Chance's "Incantation and Dance."

Hanes also is director of the School of Music's band program. He also conducts the University Wind Ensemble, the University Percussion Ensemble, the Opera Orchestra and summer playhouse pit bands. He has a bachelor's degree in music education from Millikin University in Decatur and a master's degree from SIU-C.

Solving a problem of representation

ON APRIL 7, voters in the city of Carbondale will be asked whether they want to change the way City Council members are elected. A referendum, put forward by mayoral candidate Norvell Haynes and council hopeful Dave Madelener, would, if passed, divide the city into seven wards. Voters in each ward would then elect an alderman to represent them on the City Council.

Haynes and Madelener represent two chronically underrepresented constituency groups in the city: blacks and students. Both groups comprise a large proportion of the city's population, yet their interests have been rarely reflected by City Councils elected under the current at-large voting system.

Since both blacks and students are concentrated mainly in two areas of the city—the northeast and south sides, respectively—the at-large system seriously dilutes their electoral strengths. Only under a ward-alderman system can both groups—one, blacks, a minority in the city; the other, students, a near-majority with traditionally low voter turnout—hope to be adequately represented by city government.

OPponents of the referendum contend a ward-alderman system would produce unneeded divisions within city government. The result of such an election system, they say, would be parochial representation, with council members representing only the people living in their wards. Such an argument overlooks the fact that under the at-large system, council members could just as easily be from different parts of the city and just as jealously defend initiatives that would benefit only their neighbors.

Even worse is the possibility that all of the council members elected in an at-large system could be from the same area of the city.

The opponents also contend that current and past City Councils have done a good job of representing all city residents. A quick check of the council record dispels that myth. In September, for example, City Manager Bill Dixon unfairly singled out one group of SIU-C students—rugby players—as being involved in can throwing at last year's Halloween street festival. Basing his conclusion on hearsay, Dixon recommended that the annual All Ghoulz Rugby Tournament be canceled, and a majority of the City Council seemed all-too willing to oblige. The council later tempered its stance, recommending that SIU-C officials lecture rugby players on the dangers of can throwing.

OVER THE SUMMER, the council showed its disdain for the opinions of residents of the city's northeast side when it voted to sell land in that area of the city for the construction of an independent living center for the disabled. Though not opposed to construction of the center on humanitarian grounds, several residents of the northeast side expressed concern that the center would drive down already depressed property values in the area. They asked that the council reconsider the issue and study the possibility of locating the center in another part of the city. Despite the opposition, the council voted unanimously to sell the land.

The council commonly postpones action on controversial issues when they are requested by residents of more affluent neighborhoods, and it often will direct city staff to conduct informal opinion polls in areas to be affected by council actions. Why then wasn't the same courtesy extended to residents of the northeast side? Could it be that the problems facing the city's black population are not fully comprehended by an all-white City Council?

HAYNES SAYS HIS ELECTION COMMITTEE is prepared to sue the city if the referendum is voted down. Judging by a recent federal court ruling in which the city of Springfield was found to be in violation of the Voting Rights Act because its at-large, commission form of government deprived blacks of adequate representation, chances are very slim that Carbondale could beat back a similar suit.

The voters of Carbondale should do the city a favor by voting for the referendum in April. Chances are they will save the city a lot of money and a lot of time in court by doing so.

'Womb rental' is dehumanizing

WASHINGTON — Legal reasoning has an admirable parsimony. It reduces controversies to manageable components. But it can sharpen society's mind by narrowing it, and may be doing so in the New Jersey contest for possession of Baby M.

A New Jersey couple wanted a child. For medical reasons, the wife deemed pregnancy too risky. So her husband's sperm was used to inseminate a woman who signed a contract to gestate the fetus in exchange for $10,000. But when the time came for the "surrogate mother" to surrender the infant, she exclaimed, "Oh God, what have I done." "What, indeed?"

But first, what is she? She is not a "surrogate" mother, she is the mother, the "natural mother." The court may treat this case as one concerning contracts or custody (the best interests of the child), but what is at issue is our understanding of the "natural," meaning the right conduct for creatures of our nature.

This argument about the mother's right to retain the child is logically severable from but is conditioned by the Supreme Court's 1973 decision that declared abortion to be a woman's "privacy right." The father's wishes are not legally germane and the fetus has no more legal status than a tumor in the woman.

The 1973 decision gave rise to the legal locution that a fetus is "potential life." The biological absurdity of that is today underscored by the development of fetal medicine. A fetus is a living creature on which medicine can work diagnostic and therapeutic marvels. The imperative of the medical ethic is to help where help is possible. Yet moral vertigo results from attempting to reconcile that rental, we establish a new entitlement, the right of couples to suffer no legal impediment to partial (one spouse's involvement) biological parenthood. And there will be no grounds for denying the entitlement to unmarried people of whatever character, or to poor women who may allow their bodies to be exploited to satisfy other people's desires.

The desire for children is strong and wholesome, but life offers no guarantees and good things can have prohibitive costs. To prevent such costs, in the New Jersey case, the contract should be treated as an unenforceable statement of mutual intentions that no longer obtain. The mother must not be deprived of her baby, to which she is now bonded in the natural way.

To try to make womb rental harmless merely by expanding the mother's options for consent — by allowing a grace period after birth during which she can decide to keep the child — makes matters worse. It further subordinates responsibility to willfulness, and further encourages thinking of children as material goods.

All such contracts should be forbidden as a formalization of commerce in babies, and even voluntary donation of wombs for gestation should be forbidden as dehumanizing.

The blind assertion of the untrammelled sovereignty of willfulness, served by science, over nature drains all substance from moral philosophy. Philosophy, including political philosophy, which concerns right conduct, must assert sovereignty over manipulative techniques before we learn, too late, this lesson: In some conquests of nature, the conqueror is the defeated.

imperative with the Court's decision that a fetus is akin to an appendix — a thing of no moral significance.

The idea of fetal rights in inherently problematic and, like the application of the medical ethic to fetuses, flatly incompatible with the 1973 ruling. That ruling teaches society to consider a fetus as a mere lump of matter that acquires moral significance only when removed from the womb. And if the womb is a rented fetal container the personhood of the woman renting it is of no significance.

So if suddenly the fetal container (a.k.a. mother) starts acting like a person — "Oh, God, what have I done" — she is acting incongruously.

Thus the natural bonding between mother and child is made to seem like the mother's caprice, and seems irresponsible in light of her contract. The very idea of what is "natural" comes to seem a gossamer superstition, a concept entailing no reasonable restraint on appetites.

The New Jersey couple wanted a child but not a "child of their own," as that phrase is used to mean a couple's child of their flesh made one. If we conclude that the mere desire for a child legitimizes such improvisations as womb

Sexism in SIU employment policies

By Tom Mangan
Staff Writer

It doesn't take a mathematician to find sexual discrimination on the SIU-C campus. The numbers speak for themselves.

According to University personnel records, men account for 76 percent of full-time faculty. Their wages outstrip those of their female peers in nearly every academic department on campus. In a University that boasts its commitment to affirmative action, 18 of 232 full professors are women. The male-female ratio is considerably better for lecturers — 38 men to 42 women. That figures since lecturers make the least money of all faculty members.

University officials might counter that women currently represent 24 percent of the faculty, compared to 22 percent in 1982. That, however, is a statistical accident. Overall faculty has declined from 1,036 in 1983 to 929 in 1986. The 1983 breakdown was 810 women to 226 men. By 1986, male representation declined to 707 while females accounted for 222.

What we have is far fewer men, marginally fewer women and no meaningful evidence of any effort to attract top-notch female faculty to the University. While we're playing the numbers game, consider the increase in the numbers of women lecturers. Women currently make up 53 percent of all lecturers, compared to 30 percent in 1983.

Clearly, the University is interested in hiring women who qualify for the lowest pay scales. In three years the numbers of female full professors declined from 21 to 18; associate professors from 37 to 30; and assistant professors from 124 to 115. Instructors, the last from the bottom of the pay ladder, show an increase of 30 women to 40 in three years.

The median income of female faculty is below that of men in all five academic pay classifications. Personnel records show, but at least the pay disparity isn't overly appalling. Female faculty pay equals a low of 90 percent to a high of 97 percent of male pay across all pay grades. Perhaps the University knows it can't afford to insult its women professors by paying them less than the men. Unfortunately, that's not the case among the 2,313 civil service and administrative-professional employees on campus, 1,312 of whom are women.

In skilled crafts, a civil service position, women's earnings average 71 percent of the men's, only slightly more than the 68 percent overall average for female civil service personnel.

The University can pat itself on the back for being 9 percent above the national average (59 percent), of women's earnings compared to men's — but that's a dubious honor. How does the administration justify approaching pay equity for a female professor while a carpenter or welder must settle for a 30 percent disparity?

Granted, the University has made an effort at pay equity, but it still has a long way to go. Whether a woman is a secretary, professor or janitor, she deserves the same pay as an equally qualified man.

This University, supposedly a center for enlightened thought and modern ideas, cannot allow itself to continue or maintain a reputation for sexist hiring, promotion and pay practices. Twenty-four percent representation of women in the faculty is abysmally low, even if it is a statistical improvement over past years.

It's almost incredible to imagine that current hiring policies allow positions for only those women who fit into the lowest pay categories, but the facts are there. In theory, the University could eventually fulfill its commitment to affirmative action by promoting all those lecturers and instructors to associate and full professor ranks. That will take years. This theory hinges on SIU-C's continued and expanded emphasis on hiring of women. So far, any gains have fallen dismally below even the most modest expectations.

The only way the University is going to recruit top-quality female personnel is to get out there in the marketplace and look for them, offer them an attractive salary and promise fair promotional practices. That equity must be maintained at home to keep those women on staff once they are hired.

Inching along at a snail's pace is not the answer to sex discrimination on campus. The University needs to replace its numbers with people, notably those who have been shut out, passed over or underpaid. Too many of those people have been women.

Shootings need not be a setback for Aquino

Christian Science Monitor

This week's tragic shooting and public disturbance in the Philippines must not be allowed to undercut President Corazon Aquino's bid for national reconciliation. Not surprisingly, some critics of the government are eager to exploit the incident for political gain.

Mrs. Aquino correctly expressed her deep regret for the disturbance and called for a full investigation. At least a dozen demonstrators demanding land reform were reported killed by government forces, and scores were injured, as protesters sought to break through security cordons near the presidential palace.

For Aquino, the shooting incident marks the first time that government forces have fired on protesters since her taking control of the government early last year. It comes at a particularly difficult moment. Government representatives have been meeting with officials of the communist insurgent movement in a cease-fire that is supposed to expire Feb. 6.

The cease-fire has been a continuing objective of Aquino, despite her coming under intense criticism from many military officers for going ahead with the peace talks. Moreover, a number of leftists have also sought to scuttle the talks—contending that the government must show positive movement on such issues as land reform, elimination of US military bases, and inclusion of dissidents in the Cabinet before actual talks are possible. As of this writing, the two sides have suspended talks indefinitely, following the shooting, although the rebels say they will continue to observe their cease fire.

Unfortunately as it may be, this week's disturbance need not be an insurmountable setback. Aquino has repeatedly shown her ability to turn a difficult situation into a plus.

Berkeley prof to lecture

Andrew Streitwieser, an award-winning professor of chemistry at the University of California at Berkeley, will present the annual Richard and Doris Arnold Lecture.

Streitwieser, who will lecture at 3 p.m. Jan. 30 in Neckers 240 on ion pair carbon acidity, was among the first to accurately determine the strength of the acids and characterize their reactivity.

The professor has researched isotope effects, acidity and basicity and rare earth organometallic chemistry.

Streitwieser is an elected member of the National Academy of Sciences and has received several awards, including the American Chemical Society Award in 1967, the Physical Organic Chemistry Award in 1982, and the Humboldt Foundation

Senior Scientist Award in 1976.

The Arnold Lecture, sponsored by the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry, is supported by a donation from Richard and Doris Arnold. He is a professor emeritus of SIU-C and a former chemistry faculty member and department chair.

The public is invited to attend the lecture.

Art show entries being accepted

The Southeast Missouri Council on the Arts is accepting entries for Art Experience '87, a juried fine art show to be held on May 2 and 3. The show will be held at the Arena Building in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Two- and three-dimensional art will be featured. All work must be original.

The competition is open to artists age 18 and over. Only 75 artists will be accepted.

Screening will be from four 35mm slides. One work per slide and one slide of overall display is requested. Artists also are required to supply their own display unit. Display areas will be 10 feet by 10 feet.

Deadline for entries is Feb. 15. M. Charles Rhinehart, an award-winning artist, will be judging.

Cash prizes totalling more than $800 will be awarded to those who display excellence and merit. Purchase awards and corporate purchases will also be announced at the show.

Artists may sell their works, with all proceeds going to the artist.

For more information and entry forms, send self-addressed, stamped business envelope to Art Experience '87, SEMO Council on the Arts, Inc., P.O. Box 901, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.

Award, scholarship applicants sought

Applications for the Service to Southern Award and the Leo Kaplan Scholarship are available in the Office of Student Development, Student Center third floor.

The Inter-Greek Council annually gives the service award to a graduating senior. The winner, who receives a $500 cash award, is chosen on the basis of service contributions to the University.

The Leo Kaplan Scholarship memorializes the late Leo Kaplan, a botanist at SIU-C and president of Sigma Xi fraternity at the time of his death in 1960.

The $400 cash award goes to a sophomore or junior majoring in biological sciences. Applicants must have at least a 3.0 grade point average and a record of service to SIU-C and the community.

The deadline for completed applications is Feb. 9. Both awards will be presented at the Theta Xi Variety show on March 7.

DE writer wins editorial award

David Keith Sheets, a senior in journalism and a staff member of the Daily Egyptian, placed 18th in the editorial writing competition of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

Sheets received the award in the 27th annual Journalism Awards Program for an editorial regarding Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and the prevention of its spread.

Museum featuring Anna artist's work

The paintings, quilts and crafts of Geneva Basler are being featured in an exhibit that opened Sunday at the University Museum.

A self-taught artist, Basler depicts scenes of Southern Illinois in much of her work, reflecting her life in rural Anna where she lives in the house in which she was born. Basler's quilts feature nursery rhymes and farm scenes and words and her oil paintings include landscapes, still lifes and family members as subjects.

Jewelry, tablecloths, scarves and clothes that Basler made more than 40 years ago, as well as her paintings and quilts, will be displayed in the exhibit as well as her paintings and quilts.

Drugs can hamper body's defenses

By Barb Fijolek
Wellness Center

When you turn on to drugs, including alcohol, did you know that you're also turning yourself off? Actually, you're turning your immune system off and increasing your chances of becoming ill.

The immune system is a complex, powerful and delicate system that fights disease and infection. But it can be weakened by poor eating habits, stress, lifestyle changes or even the pressure of final exams.

Recent studies have shown that the immune system also is affected by drug use, including smoking and drinking, which leaves the body open to colds, flu, herpes or even the AIDS virus. Obviously, this doesn't mean that smoking and drinking in themselves increase the risk of disease, but the use of drugs can increase the probability of being infected, if exposed to the organism that causes the disease.

The immune system contains certain cells — white blood cells, T-cells and B-cells — that destroy invading organisms such as bacteria, viruses or fungi. Drug use can depress the activity of these helpful cells.

Recent evidence suggests that:

1. Alcohol abuse decreases white blood cells count, causing the body to respond poorly to infection.

2. Alcohol abuse interferes with the body's use of vitamins and minerals necessary for maintaining a healthy immune system.

3. Frequent use of marijuana can result in a decrease of antibodies in the bloodstream and causes abnormalities in T-cell functions.

4. Cigarette smokers who quit will regain higher levels of immune system functioning.

Dr. Cesar A. Cacerro, a Washington, D.C., internist who treats AIDS patients, believes that recreational drug use as little as once a week can affect the immune system.

It is well known that drug use, including alcohol, can interfere with learning, affect personality and sexuality, and cause problems in relationships. Saying 'no' is a choice for anyone, at any time.

If you do choose to drink or use other drugs, you should know and use the lowest level at which you can feel effects. For alcohol, the drug of choice on this campus, it means keeping blood alcohol levels below .05. At this level — one or two drinks an hour, depending on body weight — the negative effects of alcohol use can be minimized.

Even if you don't think your level of use is harmful to your health, keep in mind that any amount can affect your judgment and may lead to behavior that you may regret later.

Whether or not you use drugs, keeping your immune system functioning well is an important way to maintain your health.

"To Your Health" is printed in conjunction with the Wellness Center.

PBS documentary gives hope for teens' problems

NEW YORK (UPI) — American teenagers, it seems, have more problems than ever.

If they're not smoking marijuana or snorting cocaine or smoking crack, then they're drinking themselves into a stupor and getting behind the wheel of a car. If they don't drink or do dope, then surely they're having sex and babies.

Any combination of these problems could cause them to slit their wrists.

THIS SOBERING parade of teen crises has been chronicled before. But there is a new twist of hope in PBS's "Generation at Risk," airing Wednesday night (9-10 p.m., check local listings). It is somewhat more than just another television program rattling off statistics that add up to an unsolvable crisis.

Indeed, the cold numbers are rattled off:

—10 million American teenagers have dropped out of high school since 1975.

—Drunken driving is the single biggest killer of teens in the U.S.

—Four out of 10 girls becomes pregnant before leaving the teenage years.

—A teenager commits suicide every 90 minutes.

WHAT COMES NEXT is where "Generation at Risk" rises above other well-meaning programs. The 60-minute show, paid for in part by a life insurance company, also provides a belly-full of answers for kids and adults to chew on.

Introducing and ending the program is first lady Nancy Reagan. Three years ago, she introduced a similar PBS show called "The Chemical People," deemed a success because it generated intense local interest. Task forces sprang up in 8,000 cities and towns to help teens kick dope and cope with real life.

"Generation at Risk" encompasses a larger world of troubles, and some innovative solutions. It looks at 10 communities that have been "working wonders" with troubled teens, communities that have helped turn a generation at risk "into a generation of hope," as Mrs. Reagan says.

THE SHOW'S moderator, actor Sam Waterston, says there is a root cause of all these problems: a feeling of helplessness and painfully low self-esteem. And one thing connects all these community programs: special people who give teens a sense of self-worth, self-respect, and self-love.

In Dalton, Ga., the dropout rate was the highest in the nation — an incredible 50 percent — until one woman decided to do enough was enough. She informed the community about the startling figures, then enlisted the aid of business leaders after convincing them that dropouts were costing them money.

Some of those who dropped out went back to their schools to tell their peers to stay put. The result: in two years, the dropout rate fell by 10 percent.

IN ATLANTA, a special school for dropouts — Exodus — provides intense attention from educators and counselors who teach about life as well as math.

prompt trials," Carl said.

Hsu was imprisoned April 16, 1979 on the charge of attempting to overthrow the government. His verdict was given at a closed hearing of the military court without any previous open hearing. AI tried to find evidence of a trial taking place and called for a fair and prompt public re-trial, Carl said.

Hsu was released along with 39 other political prisoners. Details of his release are vague, Carl said. His release may have come about from a combination of pressure from AI and "bad press," he said.

"They're trying to show that they're opening up their society some. At this particular time the opposition is pushing for democracy, so they had to give something up," Carl said.

700 mourn suicide of state official

MEADVILLE, Pa. (UPI) — About 700 mourners packed a church Monday for the funeral of State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer, who was eulogized as a "man of integrity" who staged a public suicide to proclaim his cry of innocence.

Dwyer, 47, shot himself in the head at a news conference in Harrisburg Thursday, after claiming he was wrongly convicted in a bribery scheme. He was to be sentenced one day later.

On a bitter cold but sunny morning, government leaders, friends and family members filled the First Baptist Church on the town square in the small northwest Pennsylvania community where Dwyer grew up and taught public school before turning to politics.

Calm and composed, Dwyer's widow Joanne told mourners her husband was wrongly convicted last month in the wide-ranging bribery scandal.

"Budd was not a failure. To us, he was a hero," said Mrs. Dwyer, dressed in a black suit with a red blouse. "God loves him. We know that. We will miss him."

The Rev. William Minser said the two-term state treasurer was "a righteous man, a man of integrity" and a "kind and sensitive person."

"Budd Dwyer was robbed of justice," Minser said. "Mr. Dwyer's suicide was a desperate act of one who loved the system so much that he would even take desperate action to promote its healing."

Former prof Howard Bosley dies

Howard E. Bosley, former associate professor of education, died Nov. 6 at his home in Summer Hill, Md., at the age of 83.

Mr. Bosley, a native of White County, taught education classes, was director of the Library and was the chairman of a committee that laid the groundwork for the present SIU-C College of Education.

Mr. Bosley taught and served as superintendent in Mount Vernon grade schools before coming to SIU-C.

He held a bachelor's degree from SIU-C and master's and doctoral degrees from Teacher's College, Columbia University in New York.

After leaving SIU-C, he held many positions in higher education including supervisor of state college finance, state college and university teacher education specialist, and regional executive director of a program designed to develop superior teachers. He retired in 1970.

He is survived by his wife, Lora; two sons, Dr. William R. Bosley and John H. Bosley; and two grandchildren.

Memorial contributions may be made to Chestnut Grove Day School, 3701 Sweet Air Road, Phoenix, Md, 21131.

Nurse denies tale of Hoffa abduction

DETROIT (UPI) — A newspaper reporter is sticking by his story that a nurse witnessed the abduction of former Teamsters President James R. Hoffa from a suburban restaurant parking lot nearly 12 years ago.

The woman, Marjorie Jane Bissailon of Detroit, denied Sunday's copyrighted story in the Lansing State Journal. But the writer, Michael Gallagher, said Bissailon may be trying to protect herself.

Hoffa vanished July 30, 1975, outside the Machus Red Fox restaurant in West Bloomfield Township. Though his fate remains a mystery, investigators say he likely was killed by mobsters trying to thwart his attempted comeback in the powerful Teamsters union. Hoffa served a federal prison term for jury-tampering.

Gallagher said Bissailon was identified as a witness to the abduction in an investigation report on the Hoffa case given him by a source in the FBI. The newspaper said the report indicates she gave the following account:

"She was buying baked goods at the restaurant when she saw three men inside a black Lincoln Continental. The car pulled around the corner of the restaurant and slowly drove toward Telegraph Road. She turned the corner to walk toward her car and spotted Hoffa, recognizing him from newspaper photographs.

The car pulled alongside Hoffa, who bent over to speak with the driver, then got into the back door of the car on the driver's side, she said. Bissailon told the FBI that after Hoffa entered the car, apparently of his own will, it pulled out of the driveway and headed south on Telegraph Road.

"Yes, I was there and saw him. I was told by the FBI never to talk with reporters or anyone about it. I haven't until now," Bissailon said.

U.S. offers China grain at subsidized price

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government has offered to sell one million metric tons of American wheat to China at subsidized prices in the first such offer made to the Chinese, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

The offer, which had been rumored for weeks, was proposed by Agriculture Department officials and approved Friday by the Reagan administration's Trade Policy Review Group, which is made up of representatives from several departments.

The actual value of the wheat will be negotiated between the Chinese and commercial grain traders. The U.S. government will give the traders enough government-owned commodities to pull down the price to market levels.

Chinese leaders had communicated to the U.S. government, via grain traders, that they wanted to buy U.S. wheat at a subsidy. They also expressed their interest to Tom Kay, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service, when he traveled to China Jan. 12-17.

Sea lions menace fish

SEATTLE (UPI) — A new steelhead trout-devouring sea lion raided the Ballard locks Monday and escaped, thwarting game officials, who said there was a growing threat of the voracious mammals wiping out the Puget Sound fish run.

A 400-pound sea lion gulped down a 25-pound thrashing steelhead before helpless state and federal marine crews, then jumped a net and swam to freedom.

Its escape marked the third time in a week that crews have been unable to capture a pack of sea lions feeding at the locks on steelhead migrating from saltwater Puget Sound to their freshwater spawning grounds above Lake Washington.

"This animal is new," state Game Department spokesman Bob Byrne said. "The problem is growing."

The sea lion was not among the six that have been feeding regularly at the locks and twice eluded capture last week, Byrne said.

Positive thinking, health linked

NEW YORK (UPI) — The power of positive thinking may not be a figment of the imagination, researchers reported Monday.

Recent studies have suggested positive thoughts trigger the brain into pumping chemicals that fight disease, helping patients with a good attitude get well quicker.

Researchers at the National Institutes of Health have discovered the actions of disease-fighting cells called macrophages are affected by chemicals produced in the brain called neuropeptides — called by one researcher the "biochemical units of emotion."

"The more I look, the more I'm convinced that emotions are running the show," said NIH neuroscientist Candace Pert in a report in Discover magazine.

the cut than Herrin, whose program is still rebuilding. "As a coach, I guess I'm not in favor of the rule," Scott said. "But I really don't have any great feelings on the matter."

Scott said the rule won't affect her recruiting budget that much, and she feels the cuts were fair because all schools have the same scholarship limit.

Scott also believes the rule will give an opportunity to play college basketball to students who previously had no chance.

"This rule opens up a spot for a walk-on that wasn't there before," Scott said.

Overall, neither coach has any major complaints about the rule, and both plan to go about the business of college basketball as usual.

"We'll live by it," Herrin said. "I'm not going to sit around and complain about it."

Mets plea bargain, lesser charge dropped

HOUSTON, (UPI) Two New York Mets charged with felonies for a brawl with off-duty police officers outside a bar last summer agreed to a plea-bargain arrangement Monday and misdemeanor charges against two teammates were dropped.

The plea-bargain agreement was announced after a three hour meeting between players and court officials. The meeting came as jury selection was to begin in the trial of Mets players Ron Darling and Tim Lincecum.

Joining the two players in the meeting were prosecutor Mike Anderson, defense attorney Dick DeGuerin and Mets pitchers Rick Aguilera and Bob Ojeda.

Darling and Teufel pleaded no contest to charges of misdemeanor resisting arrest. Both players were fined $200 and put on one year probation. The sentence was one of deferred adjudication, which means their records will be clean if they are not brought back to court for one year.

Misdemeanor charges against Aguilera, 25, and Ojeda, 29, were dismissed, Assistant District Attorney Barbara Burdo said. Earlier in the day they appeared briefly before County Court Judge Don Hendricks, but he carried over their cases pending resolution of the charges against Darling and Teufel.

Darling, a pitcher, and Teufel, a second baseman, both had been indicted on felony assault charges.

The incident began the night of July 18. The four players went to Cooters, a Houston nightclub, to celebrate the birth of Teufel's son Shawn, team officials said. They were arrested early July 19 for allegedly attacking two off-duty police officers working security at the club.

Kookaburra III for Aussies, 'Dolly' sails yanks

FREMANTLE, Australia (UPI) — The Australian defenders Monday chose Kookaburra III to race against Dennis Conner's Stars & Stripes in the America's Cup finals, saying the never yacht is faster with the wind than Kookaburra II.

After two days of speed trials against Kookaburra II, skipper Iain Murray stuck with the boat he piloted successfully throughout the defender elimination series, culminating in the defeat of Australia IV, the flagship of 1983 Cup victor Alan Bond.

"It's no surprise," said Malin Burnham, president of the San Diego Yacht Club's Stars & Stripes syndicate. "Iain bumped into Dennis the other day and said it would be Kookaburra II."

"We are ready for them," Burnham said of the best-of-seven series starting Saturday for the world's oldest sailing trophy.

While a new keel had increased Kookaburra II's speed, Murray said Kookaburra III "could be the fastest 12-Meter downwind."

Unrattled by Conner's speed against the wind, Murray said: "We'll have the advantage: lighter breezes and will be with him in 20 to 25 knots."

The rival Australian syndicates decided to stop last week's squabbling and back the defender.

The decision to race Kookaburra III followed two days of trials on the Indian Ocean course in 14 to 17 knot winds. "They were very close in speed," Murray said, but he proclaimed Kookaburra III the best all-round boat.

While Kookaburra officials had the option of racing either boat, Conner had no such choice. The rules governing the challenger elimination series prohibits boat substitution after the first round-robin.

With only five days left before the finals, Conner tested a new spinnaker nicknamed "Dolly" and a mainsail made of a new material. But the new sail named for buxom country singer Dolly Parton failed to impress Murray.

"I don't know if it's a feasible working sail," the Australian skipper said. "It may well be a psychological ploy."

The "Dolly" is made with three layers of pockets tiered in its top section. When inflated, the pockets protrude from the forward side of the sail.

"I don't know all the reasons why it works, but it tested faster than anything else we used," Stars & Stripes tactician Tom Whidden said.

Stars & Stripes also unveiled a mainsail made of a new low-stretch, lightweight fabric.

Can Jordan topple Wilt's record? Bulls' star remains unselfish

CHICAGO (UPI) — One of those sports records most people figure will never be broken is Wilt Chamberlain's 50-point per game average in 1961-62 with the Philadelphia Warriors.

The way the game has changed since then, with an increased emphasis on defense and team-style offense, Chamberlain's record seemed secure, a sort of Babe Ruth 60 home runs in a season.

But wait a minute. Is there a Roger Maris on the horizon ready to challenge the Babe Ruth of NBA scoring history? Maybe and maybe not.

Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls enters the halfway point of the 1986-87 season averaging 38 points per game. It is foolhardy to think Jordan could crank it up any higher and surpass Chamberlain's mark this year.

But the future?

"I don't think about how many points that I'm scoring in a game. There are games I know that I've scored alot, but it really doesn't catch up with me," Jordan says.

For Jordan to get closer to Chamberlain's record, he would have to shoot more than the 39 to 35 shots he is averaging now.

In Chamberlain's big year, he took 3,159 shots, or close to 40 shots per contest. He made 1,597, good for a .506 shooting percentage.

Jordan, through the first half of this year, is on a pace that would take him to around 2,500 shots. He is also hitting .475 percent from the floor, quite a bit less than Chamberlain.

Jordan did record nine straight 40-point games, the second most in NBA history behind Chamberlain's 14 in a row.

Considering the talent around him on the Bulls' team, he may wind up shooting more the rest of this season, into the playoffs and next year.

"Michael understands his role on this team and that is primarily to score points," says Bulls' first-year coach Doug Collins. "But, as we continue to improve and mature in the growth of this franchise, that could change."

In other words, obtaining better players might mean less need for Jordan to shoot as much.

"Heck, I don't think about those things. I want us to win more ballgames. If I can do that by scoring, then that's what I'm going to do. If I can do it by just passing, that's what I'm going to do," Jordan insists.

Sounds much like Chamberlain at a similar stage in his career.

Two big points that can sink your winning semester are...
STRESS & BURNOUT
One Can Lead To The Other

Stress may cause insomnia, head and stomach aches, anxiety, depression and test anxiety... when you're so uptight, you can't remember what you know.

Here are some simple suggestions to help you manage stress...

- Organize your time. Keep a schedule, make task lists, take a break every 2 hours from long stretches of studying. Reward yourself for a finished task.
- Include time for regular exercises (vigorous or relaxing) which you enjoy.
- Join a Stress Management, Yoga or Relax class at the Wellness Center.
- MOST IMPORTANTLY—Make time for Yourself each day... take a walk, do something fun, cook something healthy, talk to a friend or just do nothing.

Men tracksters hit bottom of field, coach upset

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

Very disappointed.

Men's track coach Bill Cornell is not at all happy with the way the Saluki tracksters have started the season.

"We have a long way to go," Cornell said. "We have to get down to business and shape up."

The Salukis finished last on Saturday in a quadrangular meet at Columbus, Ohio.

Indiana placed first with 70 points followed by Penn State, 41, Ohio State, 33.5 and SIU-C with 19.5 points.

Sophomore Demetrius

Theocharous was the only Saluki to win an event. Theocharous captured the high jump competition with a leap of 6-foot-8.

Brian Bradley was third in the long jump with a 23-1 $\frac{3}{4}$ effort.

Modiba Crawford ended up in fourth in the triple jump with a mark of 47-6 $\frac{1}{2}$.

James Duhart had a time of 1:04.15 to finish third in the 500-meters.

Ron Harrer finished third in the shot put with an effort of 53-3 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Gerald Horan's time of :51.15 in the 400-meters was good enough for a fourth place finish.

Mike Michels tied for fourth in the pole vault at 15-3.

Andy Pettigrew finished third in the 1,000 and 1,500-meters with times of 2:30.82 and 3:52.7, respectively.

The 1,600-meter relay team of Duhart, Bret Garrett, Billie King and Kevin Steele combined for a third place finish with a time of 3:19.27.

Middleton wins MVC player of the week

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Steve Middleton, SIU-C's best shake-and-bake offensive threat, landed the Missouri Valley Conference player of the week, becoming the first Saluki in over two years to receive the weekly honor.

With 36 points gained in play in SIU-C's 81-75 loss to Drake, and a 25-point, 11-rebound performance in the Saluki's recent victory over Creighton, Middleton took the award hands down.

Middleton said he was happy to set a career scoring mark and land the league award.

"Individually speaking, the career high was nice, but basketball isn't an individual game," Middleton said after the Creighton victory. "I'd much rather have the win."

Middleton ranks second in both the Valley's overall scoring average statistics (19.9) and conference scoring average (23.0 per game).

The 6-4, 195-pound junior also ranks second on the team with a 6.4 rebounding average, which trails center Tim Richardson.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said he felt Middleton deserved the award.

"Stevie played under control, had better shot selection and we won a game," Herrin said. "Winning against Creighton and playing Drake close helped out, too. It's hard to win the award if you don't have any wins."

"I think it would have been very unfair if Stevie wouldn't have won the award this week," Herrin added.

After limited action his freshman year, Middleton blossomed into SIU-C's leading point-getter and rebounder last season, finishing play as the Valley's fourth-leading scorer. Although he missed postseason all-conference awards, Middleton was a preseason all-conference choice.

Middleton and the rest of his Saluki teammates get a chance for Valley win No. 2 Thursday night at Indiana State. The trip to Terre Haute kicks off a two-game road stand, ending with Illinois State on Saturday afternoon. The next home game will be Feb. 4 when Salukis battle the Bradley Braves.

Wild Dogs lose rowdy match, 7-3

The Wild Dogs hockey club lost a 7-3 decision to the Evansville Horizons Jan. 22 in a game marred by brawls.

Team captain Steve Pelkowski received a one-game suspension after being ejected from the Thursday night contest for fighting.

Pelkowski said he would take on the role of behind-the-bench coach for the Wild Dogs' next contest.

Overall, the Dogs' captain said the team "played a pretty good first period, but the roof fell in after that."

The Dogs' took a 3-2 lead early into the second period, but failed to score for the rest of the game. The Horizons scored the game's final five goals.

Scoring goals for the 9-4-1 Wild Dogs were Dom Esposito, Scott Jeffreys and Tony Krause.

Steve Middleton rises above the pack to score two of his 25 points against Creighton Saturday. The junior Saluki leader won MVC player of the week.

Cage coaches discuss scholarship reductions

Rich Herrin

The most recent visible change in college basketball has been the three-point shot. But one change that could more profoundly affect the game is less visible to the fan.

At the January NCAA convention held in San Diego, athletics directors from around the country voted to restrict basketball scholarships at four-year schools to 13 per year, down from the previous 15.

SIU-C Athletics Director Jim Livengood, who attended the convention, recently said the cut was made to save colleges money, but some coaches differ with that point.

Saluki men's basketball coach Rich Herrin believes his team can't afford to lose those two scholarships.

"This cut puts a lot of extra pressure on the coach," Herrin said. "And it makes it tough for the players, too."

One effect the rule will have on coaching will be a team's bench strength, which will weaken without the two additional scholarships.

"You get a couple of players hurt, a couple sick, and there

"I guess I'm not in favor of the rule, but I really don't have any great feelings on the matter."

you go," Herrin said.

Injuries and illness have plagued the Salukis recently. Sophomore swingman Randy House missed a few games with pneumonia, while forwards Doug Novsek and Billy Ross have been hobbled with leg injuries.

This rash of injuries and illness left the Salukis with a thin bench under the old 15-scholarship limit, but this problem will be compounded even more under the new limit of 13, Herrin said.

"We'll probably have to take a couple of walk-ons" to fill out the roster, Herrin said. Normally, recruited scholarship athletes would fill those positions.

Another problem with the scholarship reduction "is that it takes away the privilege of redshirting a player," Herrin said. "With only 13 scholarships, you can't afford to hold someone out a year."

"And this is a shame, because some players need that extra year to improve," Herrin said. Currently, the Salukis have two redshirt freshmen on the roster — 6-10 center Dave Busch and 6-5 guard Eric Griffin.

But Herrin's arguments are just one side of the story, a side not shared by women's basketball coach Cindy Scott, whose team is also affected by the reductions.

Scott, speaking from the viewpoint of a coach whose program is currently very successful, can perhaps afford to be more ambivalent toward
