IBHE slates $1.8 billion for 1995 budget

By Katie Morrison

Administration Reporter

The Illinois Board of Higher Education offered a large piece of the budget pie to make college affordable for the 1995 fiscal year by increasing funds 15 percent from last year—a bigger increase on the budget, a board official says.

Of the $1.8 billion plus appropriated for higher education, $2.514 million will go to student financial aid and grants programs. Board Deputy Director Ross Hodel said the bulk of the $278 million—$241 million goes to the Illinois Student Assistance Commission and Monetary Award Program, Hodel said.

"ISAC is our main grant program. Because all Illinois college students are eligible," Hodel said.

Financial need determines whether students are eligible for ISAC funds, Hodel said.

But Britton, director of financial aid, said in 1993 there was an increase in ISIC student's need for financial aid.

"The reason for that unusual increase were the new formulas determining those need," he said.

There was a five percent decrease in MAP awards across the board. More students were receiving aid, but individually were receiving less money.

In fiscal year 1992, about $5,500 to 6,000 ISUC students received MAP awards, Britton said.

Because so many students apply for and receive ISAC funds, less money is set aside for other grants, Hodel said.

The $35 million remaining after ISAC gets its share goes to more federal and state grants, such as the McNiel Scholar Award, he said.

The board also recommended that universities and colleges keep tuition increases to a maximum of 5 percent, Hodel said.

"We placed a strong emphasis on student financial aid—it was a top priority to make going to college affordable," Hodel said.

SILC will receive about $1.8 million—$660,000 increase from last year.

Hodel said the money is broken down into large categories, including statewide initiatives such as the Priorities, Quality and Productivity program and institutional support and adjustments such as salary increases and building maintenance.

The POP initiative, started by the board in October 1991, is a program aimed at cutting unnecessary spending at 12 state universities. It recommends that universities cut out enrollment programs and reallocate funds to more popular ones.

Sheehan wary of 'LaRouchies'

By Don Page

Plebiscite Reporter

Southern Illinois voters should beware 21 members of the LaRouche cult running in the primaries as Democrats, State Treasurer Gary Vander Veer said.

Sheehan is running for the state treasurer as a strong anti-LaRouche candidate. The Chicago cult, group has been identified by some candidates as supporting racism, anti-Semitism, hatred, paranoid and fascism.

The LaRouche candidates, he could not be reached comment.

The LaRouche presence is especially relevant the work as cut sake leader John LaRouche and followers released from prison after years of credit card fraud.

A Chicago 7th-cone last week shows Sheehan leading LaRouche candidate Thomas Buculette three to one. However, Sheehan says the cult's presence on the ballot may threaten the potential of Democratic candidates the LaRouchies are running.

Clinton pledges 'economic renewal'

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—President Clinton, pledging an economic and moral renewal of the nation, appealed in his State of the Union address Tuesday for cooperation and public support for his aggressive but still unfinished domestic agenda.

Clinton declared that the nation is basically sound and one is headed in the right direction once again but nonetheless needs fundamental reform of its health care and welfare systems. On health care, the centerpiece of his domestic agenda, Clinton sought to strike the sense of urgency that his strategists believe must be maintained if his plan for a comprehensive overhaul is to win approval.

Clinton again offered to cooperate with Republicans in drafting a health care bill. But...

1. a moment of Amana, he bluntly threatened to veto any health reform bill that does not meet his fundamental requirement.

If you send me legislation that does not guarantee every American private health insurance that can never be taken away, you will force me to take this pen: veto that legislation and we'll come right back here.

Habit forming: tobacco hooks college athletes

By Karyn Viverito

Special Assignment Reporter

A recent clinical study of college baseball players reports more than 30 percent of 195 players surveyed are habitual smokeless tobacco users, most of whom picked up the habit ages.

The study, funded by the NCA, found more than half of the participating players have used smokeless tobacco between two and five years and nearly 25 percent have used it for six to 10 years.

Nearly 200 players representing nine institutions—five from the Southeastern Conference and four from the Sun Belt Conference — participated in the study led by Dr. John F. Winiewski of the University of Alabama at Birmingham School of Dentistry. Winiewski said use of tobacco both on and off the field for long periods of time points to the extremely addictive nature of nicotine.

Open-guilt plea entered by Davis

By Dean Weaver
City Reporter

A local bar owner pleaded guilty to six counts of city ordinance violations Tuesday.

The violations included three counts of having persons under 21 drink in the presence of and three counts of serving alcohol to persons under 21.

Roland Davis, owner of Beach Bums, 615 S. Illinois Ave., said he entered an open guilty plea because he wants the case to be over.

"I just want to get it over with, I don't want it to drag on any further." -Roland Davis

The court-appointed approval of his attorney for the Liquor Control Commission, said.

The commission now must decide what Davis's penalty will be.

The date of the meeting has not been set.

Smith said the maximum penalty Davis can be given is $2,500 fine and suspension of his A-3 liquor license.

The A-3 license did not allow people under 21 to enter the establishment, but the city council voted Jan. 18 to lower the age to 18 at Davis's request to make it the entry age of the B-licensed bars.

Davis was not the only bar owner to have a hearing on city violations.

Gatsby's, 815 S. Illinois Ave., American Club, 1815 S. Illinois Ave. and Pinnch Penny Lounges, 700 E. Grand Ave., had cases scheduled before the commission last month.

Legalization of marijuana discussed

By Aleksandra Macey
Health Reporter

The Clinton administration this month is expected to report its findings on the legalization of marijuana as medication and says limited legalization could come soon, chagrining the University policy SIUC President John C. Gayman has a history of using his own state on illegitimate drug use.

Clinton officials say, however, the review does not signal a reversal.

The review process was slowed by controversy surrounding Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders" opinion that drug legalization, done alone, would not change the social aspects of the use of marijuana, particularly in the use of marijuana among the young.

"Marijuana usage is not decriminalized, because there are indications of its medical use," Pettis said.

Pettis also said marijuana should be used like alcohol and tobacco to pay for the national health-care plan.

He also allayed the skepticism of some in the medical world.

In 1992, the Food and Drug Administration allowed people with certain diseases to apply for permission from the Food and Drug Administration to use the illegal drug.

The FDA approved marijuana on an individual basis to patients.

Cancer and AIDS patients who suffer nausea and loss of appetite are eligible in some cases.

The FDA also approved the drug for people with spinal cord injuries, multiple sclerosis and glaucoma.

John House, president of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, said marijuana's medical use is appropriate and should be studied.

"I think marijuana should be legalized completely, but legally. One for medical use is a great idea," House said.

"In the future, although some people argue marijuana smoking is linked to lung irritation, medical benefits to patients who need it outweigh side effects.

Roger Pfister, an employee of Weilfield pharmaceuticals in the University Mall, said if marijuana is legalized for medical use it should be available in different forms.

He said he also different forms would result in less waste in case of smoking marijuana, in which smoke is not fully inhaled because some escape.

A better form of distribution would be a pill. Because some people inhale at different rates, puffage would be easier to control with pills, he said.

Drew Hendricks, an officer with NORMI, said marijuana was used as anti-nausea medication, it would be difficult to swallow.

"What is most important now is that people who see the medicine that helps them," Hendricks said.

Like Pettis, Hendricks said marijuana has its uses in medicine and should be researched.

But unless the Clinton administration reverses the ban on medical marijuana, NORMI's program will continue to include those who use marijuana for medical purposes.

Professor honored by nomination

By Marc Chase
Law School Reporter

SIUC law professor Wenna Wiifield could make history as the first African American female district court judge of the Southern Illinois district pending approval from Washington.

Wiifield was nominated by Illinois Senator Paul Simon and Carol Mosley-Braun for the justice position.

Wiifield said she is honored just to be considered.

"To be nominated by the Illinois senators is quite an honor," said Wiifield.

"I'm very delighted that my name was put forward for such a position."

The other candidate's legal background includes graduating from the second law school class at SIUC in 1977, teaching law at the University of Missouri at Columbia and the University of Ghana.

She worked as a litigation attorney for the Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities, practiced in a private law firm, and a professor of law at SIUC since 1981.

Wiifield has the rank of justice position. She is a member of the Student Bar Association.

"Her knowledge of law, especially the property area, is really well known," said Carey.

"Professor Wiifield's nomination is bitter sweet; it's sad to see her go, but it's always good to see your professor move to a position of higher prestige."

Intimidated initially by Wiifield at his first year law school orientation, Carey said his opinion has changed to one of deep gratitude.

"I recollect the first time I saw professor Wiifield (at orientation)," said Carey.

"All first year law students were crammed in this room, and she (Wiifield) had glasses on the end of her nose and glared at us... Now I know her for a person who really takes pride in seeing students advance and team.

Wiifield predicts the change from professor to justice will not be difficult.

She said she hopes to bring her love and knowledge of the legal system when she gets to the bench.

"This is a unique opportunity since there are few African American women judges," said Wiifield.

"I just hope to bring my legal knowledge of the law to bear."

After a review by the Justice Department in Washington, the Nominating Commission will recommend her to the Senate.

Then hearings by the judiciary committee and Senate will commence before Wiifield is confirmed or her nomination is rejected in a Senate vote.

Outstanding for these hearings have not yet been set.
Physics department fails in bid for Ph.D

SIUC'S LACK OF SUPPORT FOR THE PHYSICS Department has ended speculation that the department's hobbled status would come to an end with a doctoral program in physics. Illinois Board of Higher Education rebuffs the University's proposed Ph.D. degree indicate the board's reluctance to start a new program that will not be effectively supported by its parent institution. The IBHE responded to the proposal by requesting that SIU come up with $300,000 to $500,000 to help support such a program.

After much positioning and haggling, the University recently withdrew the proposal. As a result, the department's fight for a Ph.D. program has effectively ended, leaving physics as the campus' lone physical science discipline lacking a Ph.D. program.

The losers of this continuing battle are not only physics doctoral students, but science majors in general.

SIUC'S RESEARCH REPUTATION WILL SUFFER from the loss because physics forms the foundation or core of most other science disciplines. All other applied sciences save for mathematics, depend on physics.

 Previously, physics graduates could enter the molecular science program and attain a Ph.D. related to their field of interest. The recent elimination of this program has left those 30 or so students looking for alternatives. Those students continuing at SIU while the program pumps out its last few degrees will not be replaced and research projects, which depend on their skill, will become increasingly difficult to obtain.

The Molecular Science program was created during the late 1970's as an alternative to building a Ph.D. program in the hard sciences. Since that period, all major departments, save physics, have left the "umbrella" and established doctoral programs. This has precipitated the program's demise, which in turn has left the Physics Department alone in the rain.

Faculty and students within the Physics Department had expected, during these trying budgetary times, to replace the molecular science Ph.D with one in physics in the proposal to IBHE.

Those hopes were dashed when the university withdrew the proposal, ending any hopes of establishing a Ph.D program in physics within the next three years.

By themselves, it may be too late. In the meantime, the lack of a Ph.D. program will surely lower both the quantity and quality of science instructors at the University. SIUC will suffer in its competition with other Ph.D-granting universities for external government research money.

The number of graduate assistants competent to work on such projects will decrease.

As teaching positions become available, research-oriented professors will be more apt to build research-oriented facilities.

Moreover, money recently infused into the department to strengthen faculty in preparation for the program now appears to have been spent for nothing.

Students and faculty have cause to question the administration's priorities if the University's role as a research institution is to be taken seriously. Without a physics Ph.D. program, SIUC stands out as an anomaly among the research institutes.

The administration's lack of support for the proposal places SIUC's reputation as a research institute in a precarious position.

Boycott book buybacks

I am a SIUC student concerned about how students are being treated. Buying books is nothing new for SIUC students. We all have to do it. The price of books is very expensive.

The University should not try to get more money out of college students than is necessary. If books are in good condition at the end of the semester, then we should receive at least half the value for the books. The way things are conducted now is not right.

Many students overlook this issue because they feel that there is nothing that they can do about it. We have never contacted the University, not to be ripped off. I understand the University has to make some money, but why must the students be ripped off in the process?

Will this system ever change? This issue must be confronted. I want to know what is going on. I would like some answers as to why we, the students, are being used. Buying books is like getting robbed without a gun. This issue not only affects me, but everyone who buys books and feels they are not getting a good deal. It's time to speak up and get what we deserve.

Students, I have a solution to this problem. We do not have to put up with this, it's time that we take action. Instead of selling our books back to the bookstore, keep them till next year. Try to sell the books to incoming students or whoever needs them. This process will enable us to at least receive half of our money back. If we all do this then maybe we can see some changes. It is up to us, the students, to make the difference.

Support small student groups

Today the Undergraduate Student Government will consider a resolution to create additional funding for most registered student organizations (RSOs). Each year, USG allocates approximately $340,000 to SIUC's 465 student organizations. Of this $340,000, 69 percent ($235,000) goes to five RSOs. These five RSOs include the Student-Manager Programming Council, The Black Affairs Council, The Inter-Greek Council, The International Student Council and Undergraduate Student Government. As fine as these organizations are, other groups provide unique opportunities to SIUC students as well. These organizations consist of a majority of students, but receive a minority of funding.

No one likes to cut funding, but in the name of fairness it seems both logical and necessary. USG strives to provide the finest in education and opportunity. To continue in this tradition, this resolution must pass. This resolution guarantees fairness to all students, not just an elite minority. This senate bill will provide small RSOs an equal footing in receiving University funding.

Unfortunately, cuts must be made somewhere. SIUC's top five fund recipients need to share the wealth and help their fellow organizations. USG will meet 7 p.m. today in the Galleria B on the Student Center. Many are against this proposal and would like to see it fail. If you support this proposal, show your support by attending the meeting.

— John Shull, USG Senator, junior, political science

Parking stickers confuse students, encourage tickets

When I first acquired my parking sticker at SIUC, I did not realize that it did not mean anything as far as getting a good space to park. Close to the building where my classes were, I thought that a red sticker meant that I would have a spot anywhere I wanted to park. Boy, did I get a shock!

Signs tell us not to park in the visitor spaces or the blue spaces. Well, when I want to go to the Student Center, the pay parking is either full or the signs tell me not to park there for some lame reason or another. "STUDENT CEN­ TER," doesn't this suggest the building is for students to use? Blue stickers and visitors get more parking spaces than the people who pay tuition and keep the college open. Some students pay over 40 hours that red stickers may not park, and these times are during school hours.

I think visitors should not have priority parking over students. It is really sad that students must park in a shopping center lot to pay bills or to see where their accounts. We, as students, should be shown one over the meter parking at all times, and blue stickers should have to park in the same areas that red stickers do. It should be the same for visitors.

Students pay the money for tuition into the system and they should get something out of their parking stickers other than a citation because there is not enough parking.

How to submit a letter to the editor:
Stop prejudice, racism, bias

I am an American American who is very light-skinned. When I was growing up in a black neighborhood, I was often the only black kid in my class. I have had to deal with people looking at me twice to try and depict the exact origin of my race. My friends and I were often questioned by my nationality. When I was younger I did not really pay much attention to it, but as time went on I found it to be racial, or prejudice. Then it began to bother me more.

Racism is really a big issue today. The word racism is a very hard word to say, but it is an important issue. People need to understand that racism is not just about color, but about the way we treat each other. We need to work towards a society where everyone is treated equally and with respect.

Stop prejudice, racism, bias is a call to action for all individuals to recognize and combat the harmful effects of prejudice and racism in our society. It is time for us to come together and work towards a more just and equitable world for all.

Faith in Christ

I am writing in response to a letter written by Mr. Brown, which accused every Christian church of using mind control techniques and being cult-like in nature. I am unsure about what churches Mr. Perkins has attempted to attaque, and they are certainly not any that I have ever encountered in the realm of mainstream Christianity.

As the pastor of two United Methodist churches, I can attest to the fact that I and my colleagues in ministry deplore the abusive devices of cults such as the Chicago Church of Christ and work to make sure our church agents of liberation, not manipulation.

Mr. Perkins' argument that the church's education of children is comparable to the mind control methods of cults reveals his ignorance of what really goes on in a Christian church. Churches which serve as pastor, I host a Friday evening program for older. Maybe she also of these parents attend church, their only motivation for coming is because they want to interact with the children and help them work through issues in their own lives and share how a faith in Christ can help them make positive decisions in a negative world.

Through this program, I realize I am helping them build a foundation which will support moral decision making and help the hardest of youth to move on with their lives. Statistics confirm that youth who attend church have much lower suicide rates and drug-short rates than those who do not.

Along with providing a moral role model, our programs in churches foster acceptance of the teachings of Christ which bring down to an equal acceptance of all.

These same ideas of love and acceptance were idealized in a class taught by Prof. Michelle Perkins which I attended during my semester at SIUC. Prof. Perkins happens to be Rollin Perkins' sister. Maybe she also of these parents take them to church more often.

College of Agriculture to sponsor sixth annual career fair Thursday

By Stephensie Molett

Enrollment Reporter

Recruiters from major U.S. agriculture companies will be on Campus Thursday participating in the sixth annual College of Agriculture Career Fair.

Denah Miller, University Career Services counselor, said between 25 and 30 agriculture-related companies will have representatives at the fair.

Recruiters from financial institutions, agricultural chemical and seed companies and hotel hospitality industries will be at the fair.

Well known U.S. corporations such as Continental Grain and DePont also will have representatives present, Miller said.

"The fair is not strictly for agriculture majors," Miller said. "A lot of these companies look at science and business majors also.

He said the fair usually attracts about 225 to 250 students.

Miller suggests students come to the fair professionally dressed with a professional resume.

"Students should come seeking information on internships and career possibilities and be looking for job opportunities," Miller said.

Miller said the fair is not limited to seniors graduating this spring.

"Freshmen and sophomores need to look at what is out there and what companies exist," she said.

"Sophomores and juniors should be looking for possible internships. These companies also look at alumni and graduate students," Miller said.

Miller encourages students to be themselves and enjoy the day. This is a great opportunity for students to see what exists in the world of business," Miller said.

A list of companies present at the fair is posted in the Agriculture Building for interested students.

The fair is from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in Seminar Room 209 in the Agriculture Building.

One student's desire to educate others about the Underground Railroad led him to write a play, and now others have the opportunity to take part in the production.

Jeremy Gordon, a junior in Theater from Evanston, said the African American Players Workshop will have auditions for "On My Way to Freedom" from 3 to 7 p.m. today and Thursday in the Lab Theater in the Communications Building.

The play will focus on the Underground Railroad in Illinois, he said.

"We were somewhat concerned whether we could pull it off," he said. "We came up with some really good people. I think the campus will be pleasantly surprised.

In addition to comedians, the series offers a contest for the best joke of the night, and a competition that allows students to do their hand at comedy. The comedy competition is more formal," Gordon said. "Students have five-minute routines. Each night we'll pick a winner.

The five winners will then compete March 4, a final night of the series, he said.

Lips said the contest should draw students.

"Everyone thinks they're funny," she said. "We're asking them to prove it."

Greg Walden, a sophomore from Koko, Ind., and catcher for the John A. Logan Baseball team, has chewed tobacco for seven years. "I have been chewin' for so long because I have become addicted to it," Walden said. "I started even before I played baseball and it's something that I thought was cool at the time.

The study found 51.8 percent of the players said they used chewing or dipping tobacco and another 46.9 percent of the players reported previous usage.

Since becoming SIUC head baseball coach four years ago, Sam Riggleman has prohibited the use of tobacco products by student-athletes, coaches and game officials during practice and competition in clubhouses, traveling on the road and in motel rooms.

The ban by Riggleman came four years premature to the current NCAA ruling. At the NCAA convention in San Antonio, Texas, proposal 14-1A was passed, which prohibits the use of tobacco products by student-athletes, coaches and game officials during practice and competition in clubhouses, traveling on the road and in motel rooms.

"I have seen this habit at the worst with people spitting in the dugout, on the floors, and cups of spit being knocked over — it's a gross mess," he said.

Riggleman said chewing tobacco is a dirty habit.

Winter depression treatable

By Christina Thaxton
Student Health Programs

As cold winds blow outside, melancholia hangs heavily inside.

Diets are soon forgotten as uncontrollable urges take over. Irritation and anxiety fill the day; restlessness fills the night. It is impossible to get enough sleep. Work suffers. Spirits become lower and lower until happiness becomes like a forgotten dream.

If this sounds all too familiar, do not lose hope. Instead, get help. These are some of the symptoms that characterize a disease known as Seasonal Affective Disorder or SAD.

SAD is primarily characterized by recurrent depressions which begin about mid-November and remain until spring.

Other symptoms include lack of energy, difficulty concentrating, and increased sex-drive. This disease is extremely difficult to diagnose because of its year-long cycle.

Yet, because of studies conducted by Dr. Rosenthal in 1989 and many others before and after this, SAD has been given credence as a real psychological disorder.

Dr. Peter S. Mueller, in the early 1980’s, was perhaps one of the first to seriously study this disease. In the course of treating a woman for winter depression, he was able to remain in contact with her as she moved to a number of different cities.

He observed that the further north she lived, the earlier her depression began in the fall and the longer it remained into spring.

An interesting thing occurred when she went to Jamaica for vacation, though.

Her depression vanished within a few days of arrival, but, when she went back home, her depression reoccurred, again, within a few days.

Dr. Mueller began to speculate that sunlight (or the lack of it) contributed to her depression. This led to several studies on the use of a technique called phototherapy or bright-light therapy to alleviate depression.

Phototherapy uses about 10,000 lux of light. The patient sits under the light for a certain length of time reading or watching TV or whatever and glances up at the light now and then.

The light is special in that it acts like the sun, yet without any of the harmful rays which damage the skin and eyes.

Phototherapy fools the body into thinking it is being exposed to the sun.

Psychologists such as Dr. Rosenthal believe that people have set rhythms much like the hibernating animals do. Those who are affected by SAD have rhythms which are a bit off.

Serotonin in the brain causes the body to secrete too much serotonin (which regulates appetite) and too little melatonin (which affects energy levels).

The sun offsets this in the spring and summer, but in the fall and winter, its absence is keenly felt. Phototherapy tries to counteract this condition.

Prolonged depression is something to be taken seriously. No one need suffer when such simple help is available.

Here at SIU-C, phototherapy can be hard for students who live in the residence halls. For counseling contact the Counseling Center in Woody Hall at 453-3771 or the Clinical Center in the Worn building at 453-2561.

Cancer brings decisions

The Washington Post

When a woman is diagnosed with breast cancer, not only must she make very difficult decisions about her treatment but she must also confront her fear, anger and other feelings.

A breast-cancer diagnosis has a tremendous emotional effect on the patient’s husband or partner. The Y-ME National Organization for Breast Cancer Information and Support offers a new booklet that addresses the emotional issues men may face.

Based on interviews with men whose partners have breast cancer, the booklet focuses on feelings, although the medical aspects have been reviewed by psychologists and physicians for accuracy.

Variation of 40-hour week causes problems for U.S.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Whenever the government varies its normal 40-hour work week, whatever the cause, it's a federal case.

Giving people time off isn't just a matter of sending them home.

Using an incorrect word (like "him") would be much less likely to inquire percent said they "usually" or "always" cam any by and Prevention and the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality

this point with the present condition of the workforce industry and everything else," said Smithsonian Secretary Robert McC. Adams.

The House approved the extension last August and planning has been funded by a $3.5 million interest-free loan from Virginia.

Villain boss of "Philadelphia" film preparing to run for U.S. Senate

The Washington Post

By the time of the trial, his edges were no sharp he had to sit on a pillow. He was 6 feet 4, 100 pounds, already one arm taped on, his neck floating in a white collar. He was using the law firm that had gun him when his supervisor learned he had AIDS.

"I actually begged him," the disciplinary attorney told the judge. But his supervisor "got up, said he was sorry and left."

In a movie sequel, his eyes rested on his mother. It was hard for her to look back, and when her son's lips began to shake, she had to leave the room.

If the movie "Philadelphia" had been filmed in 1990 in a real courtroom, not a movie set, it was one of the lawsuits that have been shaped by the "Philadelphia" movie, which opened this month. Like the film's Tom Hanks character, Clarence Cain, 37, was a funny, bright, successful salesman in the TV soap opera case against his employer's before he lost to the disease.

But the Cain plot has an extra twist. Cain had worked in Philadelphia, for one of the multiple-state chain of Hyatt Legal Services offices.

The head of that chain, Joel Hyatt, is now running for the Senate. He is the Democratic favorite for the Ohio seat being vacated by his father-in-law, Howard Metzenbaum.

The release of "Philadelphia" just as the Ohio primary races are building momentum has dropped sand into the Hyatt campaign canopy.

Political rivals have been highlighting the parallels between the stories. One Ohio ppc said that Hyatt's role in the AIDS law battle, played by Jason Robards, is anti-homosexual and imperils his chances of winning the state.

The real-life Philadelphia story is more nuanced and ultimately more tugs, says.Yes,Hyatt approved of the movie. "And I don't think he underestimates, or says he has grown from the experience."

AIDS, perhaps more than any other human affliction, has changed the law office and the AIDS patient. Clarence Cain lost his ability to defend himself—defend his health, his job, his company, his pride. Cain came from poverty, back home in Newport News, Va., with his mother, a retired nurse.

Doctors who always ask a new patient about smoking habits are more likely to inquire about sexual history and orientation, says a survey of primary-care physicians shows.

Nearly all the doctors—94 percent—asked their patients "always" about sexually transmitted diseases, 31 percent about sexual orientation and 22 percent about smoking habits. One-fourth of the doctors and two-thirds of their patients would be comfortable discussing sexual behavior.

The new findings are from a national survey commissioned in 1992 by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the federal Health Resources and Services Administration. They were published this month in the Genital and Mouth Weekly Report.

The results underscore the substantial number of physicians who are missing opportunities to counsel during encounters with patients, the report concludes.

"Doctors must become more knowledgeable about infection, HIV (the virus that causes AIDS) and its transmission, and they must make an effort to assess their patients' risk of AIDS, the report added.

Questionnaires were sent to 4,011 primary-care doctors, selected randomly from an American Medical Association list of all physicians in the nation.

Doctors were asked about their knowledge and understanding of HIV and people infected with HIV their counseling, testing and treatment of patients infected with HIV. One quarter of the respondents reported they assessed the health risk of new patients.

Responses came from 2,545 doctors, including 802 general or family practitioners, 850 internists, 683 obstetrician-gynecologists and 700 internists. About 75 percent of respondents said they were aware of the AIDS risk category, the survey found.

Some 95 percent of physicians said they would be likely or "very likely" to encourage such testing for a homosexual man with multiple sex partners or a user of injectable drugs, compared with only 40 percent for a sexually active adolescent.

Disney, Smithsonian to battle for tourist dollars in Civil War region

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The feds who run the South could soon have new mouse steps.

In their first meeting since the Walt Disney Co. announced plans for an American history theme park dedicated to the Confederates, the executive of the Smithsonian indicated they week that they are wary of the potential corpsportation.

They disagreed to auly the impact of the Disney venture as part of the planning process for a new Air and Space Museum annex near Dulles Airport. Disney has proposed to build its park southwest of Dulles.

"We have to assess the climate for going ahead at this point, with the present condition of the workforce industry and everything else," said Smithsonian Secretary Robert McC. Adams.

The House approved the extension last August and planning has been funded by a $3.5 million interest-free loan from Virginia.

United Airline strike

The Washington Post

Harold Curtright has been through this before. "It says it is a strike; airline comes to unions for wage concessions, strike occurs, exchange concessions for stock in airline as symbol of hope for future."

Curtright has a pile of worthless Eastern Air Lines Inc. stock certificates, a dash of red-faced hopes and a bitter strike and bankruptcy that led to the airline's demise in January 1991.

Now, the veteran mechanic will not be going to the White House on Wednesday whether to travel down the road of employee ownership at Linen Airlines Inc. There is one key difference. Eastern was in trouble when it turned to its employees; United is a relatively healthy company trying to stay that way.

When United's management threatened to lay off employees and only was able to get out of everything from "food services to short flights, unions decided to act. We offered to buy a majority interest in the airline for $5.5 billion in wages and benefit cuts and work-rule changes.

The company believes lower wages and improved productivity through larger work days and other measures will make it more competitive with low-cost airlines, such as Southwest Airlines Co. In return, union members get job guarantees and stock, which is worth at least $40,000 as of March 15 and as much as $50,000 a year per member, depending on how the stock market v.a.s. United shares over the next year.

As Clinton prepares address, saga of speechwriting twists

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — As the saying goes, there are two things you should never try to mix: a sausage and a law. Here's one more: Boeing and politics. "It's a very chaotic process," said one involved observer.

Picture this: Morning and afternoon Tuesday, hour after hour, the president stood at a rostrum in the White House family theater, rehearsing — and revising — his State of the Union address, which had already gone through 10 drafts.

A team of White House speechwriters was on hand to take down the latest version, while top aides such as David E. Dreyer, health care specialist Bob Kimm and foreign policy aide Jeremy Rosner, were assigned to collect ideas and come up with initial drafts. Congressional leaders, including Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., were consulted, as were speechwriting veterans, such as longtime Kennedy wordsmith Robert Shrum.

A first draft, along with a notebook full of idea memos, followed Clinton to South Carolina before New Year's Day. Later, as he toured Europe, the president consulted by phone several times with the speech team back at the White House.

Last week, the speech was recast again after a meeting with Dreyer and Boontin aboard Air Force One. Clinton returned to Washington from viewing earthquake damage in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Over the weekend, the president took a draft to town. David and then summoned Gore and others to his White House office to discuss a three-hour session that ran well past 11 o'clock. Toward the end of the process, aides said, Clinton was determined to craft an answer to Republican criticism and some Democrats who argue that he and Mrs. Clinton have exaggerated the progress of the nation's health care problem.

American Football Con-fereence championship-game victory over the Kansas City Chiefs: "We're back. Deal with it America." It's hardly this is not the game America or the NFC television network had to hope. Joe Theismann against Sammy Lee and the San Francisco 49ers would have been too good to be true.

Most against the Dallas Cowboys would have been nice. But the Buffalo Bills against the Cowboys, a rematch of last year's 52-17 blowout? No thanks.

"The Bills have a cognizant of, including the early betting, in Las Vegas that favors the boys by 10 points. It's been their theme all season: No one respects us but us, so let's get back to the Kansas City Chiefs."

"That's the toughest-mined team in the league. Don't count the game, in my opinion," said their coach, Marv Levy, who told his team after winning against Montana and beating the Chiefs how proud he was of his overall season.

"I say," said, "you practice like a champion, you play like a champion, and that includes congratulating the other coaches because they're a great team."

"It's all been just to prove Levy's postgame remarks. "Basically, he was saying: 'Be humble.'"

"We could have folded up and died and said, 'We've gone to three Super Bowls, no one wants us to come back. let's put our tails between our legs and just quit.' This team never did that. Our goal is to win a Super Bowl championship. We haven't achieved that yet."

This win is a tribute to what this team is all about. Everybody said they didn't want us in, but I think it's a better story to see us go back and try to win this one."

"It's a story that began four days after Super Bowl XXVII with the firing of longtime general manager Bill Polian, the man responsible for putting the core of this team together. The Bills lost six players to free agency, including all-pro guard Will Wolford and two talented linebackers, Shane Conlan and Carlton Bailey."

"During the course of the '93 season, the Bills were inconsistent on offense, often had difficulty scoring and gave up gobs of yardage on defense, ranking 27th out of 31 teams in the league."

"They even had a streak of three losses in four games before finishing the regular season with four consecutive victories, then won in the playoffs."

"Ley said he believes they are better at least more mature in their approach. And the players say they've bonded tighter than any other year, if only because of their collective bitter mentality."

Game may present viewers with historical win for Dallas

"We'll be there. We're ready. We plan on going there," said their coach, Dan Reeves,Receiver Coach of the Miami Dolphins, who had a terrible year. And George Seifert has made it to NFC Championship Game or beyond in four of his five seasons.

But give Marv Levy credit, too. The Bills' coach has done a marvelous job keeping his boys from getting what any other self-respecting bunch of guys would do after three straight Super Bowl losses — namely, go in the tank.

"I read about all these coaches," Bills Owner Ralph Wilson said. I'm not knocking them, but I never read Marv Levy's name. We have great talent, but the head coach and his staff have to be doing something right.

They are. Unfortunately, they seem to have forgotten how to do anything right after 6:15 p.m. the past three Super Bowl Playdays.

"This time, desperate measures are called for. Marv, it's time you pulled a Jimmy Johnson and guarantee a victory. Go ahead and try it. Why would anyone's worst that can happen, you lose in a blowout?"

"Quickie quiz: Do you name the only AFC team to beat all its NFC opponents during the regular season?" Try the Bills! Buffalo beat the Giants (17-14), Redskins (24-10), Eagles (10-7) and e ... a the Cowboys (15-10).

And remember, the Bills beat Dallas in the second week of the regular season.

68 lead with two minutes left to play.

Indiana State failed to expand its lead on the next possession, and then fouled Lusk on the other end. Lusk hit the free throw for the tie, and gave the Dawgs a 79-69 lead with 50 seconds to play.

The Symeces again blew a chance to take the lead, as they missed the ball over and over and were forced to foul Lusk, who hit both ends of a one-and-one to stretch the SLU lead to 69-67 with 17 seconds to play.

Two desperation three-pointers by Indiana State were off the mark and the Salukis escaped with the 69-67 win.

The win keeps the Salukis (12-3, 6-1) in a first-place tie with Bradley, and sets up a big showdown with the Braves in Pontiac Saturday night.
Bills vs. Cowboys right match for Bowl

The Washington Post

ATLANTA — Enough with this wishing already. Super Bowl Work has just begun and all we hear is complaining, moaning, grumbling. "Weeoe don't wanna see More Super Bowl X, bowels"

This is the real Super Bowl when every touchdown brings five extra minutes on his radio or TV and we have to give our chapter and verse on who's winning the NFL. As it turns out, we are absolutely nothing.

Dallas vs. Buffalo. The Rematch Nobody Wanted was the best Super Bowl we could have gotten. For once, the sequel will be better than the original. It has to be.

You don't really think the Bills can do worse than 12-7, do you? (Don't answer that.) I'll make you this bet right now: The Buffalo Bills, those poor, sorry, no-nonsense-in-the-Super-Bowl-Bills, a team only a team Loscould care, are going to play the games of their lives. They'll lose, of course, but this will be a classic.

Look, I wanted to see Joe Montana vs. 46 and 47. But the entire decade of everything else is outside of western New York and Dallas. But the Bills are just tracing the lines now; they're not really the 49ers. They can't play three straight weeks anymore and they need to get two or three drivers out that before Steve Young and Jerry Rice and John Taylor start to play.

The Chiefs were hot in Super Bowl X. A great story because of Montana and Marcus Allen, but it's a flawed team, starting with their coach. Marty "I'd rather throw it at Kansas Actors than Marcus Allen on the most important play of the game" Schottenheimer.

You think the Bills in the past nine Super Bowls have been mainstays? The Cowboys would have beaten the 1972 1-13-6. Jimmy would have been guaranteed a backup quarterback if the Cowboys were by fewer than 50. It's easy to say the Oilers would have been a more formidable opponent, but didn't the Oilers lose at home? No, this is the Super Bowl. In fact, there's only been one Super Bowl the previous 10 years that shouldn't have been Bills vs. Dolphins.

The Past was excruciating wild-card backed who were standing in for Miami in Super Bowl XX. Dan, there was everybody else outside of western New York and Dallas. But the Bills are just tracing the lines now; they're not really the 49ers. They can't play three straight weeks anymore and they need to get two or three drivers out that before Steve Young and Jerry Rice and John Taylor start to play.

Dawgs claim road win in 72-69 thriller

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

The Salukis turned around from a hot-shooting performance against Wichita State to go ice-cold in the first half of Monday night’s clash with Indiana State. The result was the Dawgs responding by scoring just 10 of 30 first-half points, mostly behind Paul Lusk’s 25-point effort, to gain a hard-fought 72-69 victory.

SIUC head coach Rich Herrn said his team deserves a lot of credit for the comeback.

“It was a great effort,” he said. “I thought you’ve got to give our players some credit. The secret to our basketball team is we know how to win and that’s very important.”

The Salukis outscored the turtles by 14-7 in the second half to put a nail in the coffin.

The Salukis tried to stay in the game with a 72-53 halftime lead, but Indiana State outscored the Dawgs 35-25 in the second half to turn the game around.

 комфорт

It’s very difficult to compare the two because there isn’t as much of physical play in women’s games as there is in men’s. The chanting, the screaming and the fist-pumped type game,” he said.

Although the two styles are different to a certain extent, some of the men that compete can shoot, pass and defend just as well as some of the men.

The skill factor of the women’s game has made companies such as ESPN extend their coverage. ESPN has scheduled a total of 21 women’s games this season compared to last season total of 16. That is an increase of five games in a matter of eight years. The men have a total of 20 televised games.

Pires said they had not much response from viewers either way on whether there should be more or less coverage, which is the main reason why ESPN is content to broadcast 21 games they are broadcasting.

“It is a project for ESPN. It is projecting the games to the newspapers really don’t cover the sport as much as they should,” he said.

A number of women’s games are televised on ESPN and other networks is the lack of advertising and the networks’ ratings for women’s games, it is hard to sell advertisement time to them.

“It’s very difficult to put shows on the air without the advertisers sponsoring the game,” Pires said. “State Farm Insurance is probably the biggest company that advertises women’s games.”

KBSI programming director Mark Culpepper agrees that it is hard to find advertising for women’s basketball games. “Bringing advertising isn’t there, the game isn’t there,” he said.

James Anderson, a sophomore in kinesiology, said he knew SIU’s women’s basketball game was just as exciting as the men’s.

“There is no fan support, not as many highlights, and they use a lot of smaller basketball games. It’s like watching a six-foot and a one-half basketball game. There are only a couple of them.”

Anderson said the highlight of the women’s game is the National Collegiate Athletic Association’s Championship Game because of the national TV coverage and the good fan support.

SIUC women’s sports information director Mitch Parkinson said fans don’t have a real appreciation for women’s basketball, because they don’t take the time to watch.

“At a school with 25,000 students there aren’t very many games that are the biggest disappointment for us,” Parkinson said. “The men’s basketball games are watched by all the men’s, for one thing we will want to come back. They just have fewer fans.”

Not many do take the time to watch women’s games, though. As the SIUC women’s games have attendance over the course of a season of about 600-800 people a game.

For watchers the (10-4, 4-1) when they take on No. 12 Vanderbilt on Feb. 2. The game gets underway at 7:00 pm.

Player becomes leader, finds success at SIUC

By Dan Leahy

Cindy Scott has recruited many players over her 16 years coaching at SIUC, but there were few on her teams that drew her attention as early as ninth grade the way Saluki junior Raquel Rockey “Rockey” Ramson did.

“We know about Rockey when she was a sophomore at St. Joseph High School, she was a great basketball player,” Scott said. “I recruited her as hard as anybody. I’ve just recruited. We really wanted her.”

Coming out of the basketball hot bed of East St. Louis, Ramson guided her high school team to a 25-2 record in her senior season and a second-place finish at the Class AA State tournament.

Her 19 points, 10 rebounds average helped her achieve honorable mention on the USA Today’s All-American team, along with Ali State, All-Metro and Class AA Player of the Year honors.

Senior and junior for Lasalle High School, Scully is the only woman to play in the Lasalle-Bailey Cup.

Scully is the only woman to play in the Lasalle-Bailey Cup.

“Her achievements are bound to get a player noticed. Ramson showed offers from Illinois, Iowa State and South Alabama to wear the Salukis’ macaroni and white,” Scott said.

Several factors entered into Scott’s decision to recruit Ramson to SIUC, but the acceptance by the other players on the team was key.

“I get along with the players more here than at other schools,” Scott said. “I just feel at home here.”

Ramson improved her average points to 18 this season, and she has made some dramatic increases in her totals this season.

After averaging 6.7 points as a freshman and 7.6 as a sophomore, Ramson has lit up the 1993-94 competition for nearly 18 points per game. Tack on that to her typical seven rebounds and 72 percent floor shooting from the free throw line. Scott is easy to realize why Ramson is bringing the heads of coaches and fans everywhere.

“Rockey will be successful at whatever she does, because she’s a very strong, independent, young lady. She’s confident, classy, and she’s going to make it,” Scott said.

Ramsey has seen nothing but winning in her career, and she has been coaching for 16 years, but it has not been easy for her. She has had to work hard to be a leader.

“We have to have a team that can compete and have a chance to win a game,” Scott said. “It is a great opportunity for her to do this year in the absence of ex-Saluki star Anita Scott.”

“Rockey controls what goes on with our team and we probably depend on her too much.”

Ramsey said her relationship with Scott is a strong one, but it isn’t one that is better than the bond that the coach shares with all of her players.

“Our relationship goes beyond the basketball court, but has a personal relationship with each of her players,” Ramsey said. “We just have a certain respect for each other.”

No particular athlete has influenced Rockey and her athletic success, despite coming from a community that has charted out professional athletics for many years.

Names like Kellen Window and Bryan Cox from the NFL and Laphonso Ellis of the NBA’s Denver Nuggets are just a few or a list of them.

“I don’t even really have a favorite NBA player,” Ramsey said. “I don’t care since I’m not a basketball fan. But I’m just not interested in that attitude display.”

Rockey is the reason why Scott knows her star forward’s name will continue. Scott said her days of playing basketball for the Salukis are over.

“Rockey is the only woman to play in the Lasalle-Bailey Cup.”

Women’s basketball finds way onto television

Advertisers keep sports coverage off program

By James J. Fares
Sports Reporter

Do you believe the fact that more women’s basketball programs lack a large following of fans, national broadcasters have started to increase their coverage of the sport.

The sports programming giant ESPN has been a large factor in helping women’s basketball programs get off the ground.

ESPN spokesperson Curt Pires said you can’t really compare the women’s games to the men’s games, because there are a lot of differences in the style of play.
