USG leaders veto voter awareness bill

By Signe K. Skinion Daily Egyptian Reporter

An Undergraduate Student Government bill calling for more student involvement in the democratic process was vetoed by the executive board because of questions about the feasibility of the legislation's provisions, senate members say.

The bill calling for a grass-roots organized weekend (GROW), a weekend designed to get voting issues out to the students, went through the USG senate Wednesday. The bill was vetoed by the USG Executive Board on Friday because of problems executives said they fear with being able to implement the bill.

USG President Kim Clements said the bill is important but it is more important to know all the impacts of the bill before USG commits to it.

"The bill states that USG will have to implement it into policy," Clements said. "That doesn't leave any room to investigate. So, if I were to pass it, we are obligated to do it from the get-go."

The bill would have attempted to increase student voting across campus in both city and student government elections.

Police: Credit-card fraud common

By Kendra Helmer Daily Egyptian Reporter

Credit card owners beware: SIUC and Carbondale police departments have reported several cases of credit card fraud in the past year. Many of these cases could have been prevented by card owners taking simple precautions.

There were 22 reported cases of credit card fraud on campus in 1995. Theresa Mills, SIUC Police office supervisor, said.

SIUC Police Sgt. Larry Eastin said the number could be higher because credit card fraud cases can be filed under categories such as theft, fraud and forgery. The large number of cases is keeping police officers busy, officers said.

Unfortunately, the credit card thief is not always the victim, SIUC Police Det. Greg Sanders said.

Dan Wright, a senior in construction management from Chicago Heights, said he learned firsthand about credit card fraud two years ago.

"Someone I knew stole my calling card out of my wallet and made phone calls that cost $350," Wright said.

Because he had not reported the calling card number memorized, Wright said he did not notice the card was missing.

Sanders said sometimes students receive bills for credit cards they had applied for but never received in the mail.

Derek Starkey, a former SIUC student from St. Anne, said he received phone calls from credit card companies inquiring about his account when he was a student here last semester.

"I didn't even have a credit card," Starkey said.

Starkey said he discovered that someone had obtained his social security number and student identification card and was able to get several credit cards, a cellular phone and a bank account under his name.

Starkey said he is a responsible person and he thought he took necessary precautions to prevent such an occurrence.

Wright and Starkey said they did not have to pay for the bills. Credit card companies usually absorb the costs of fraudulent charges, Wright said.

Law School dean appointed

By Lisa M. Pangburn Daily Egyptian Reporter

After a six-month nationwide search, the SIU School of Law has named Thomas P. Guernsey as its new dean.

"You have a real gem — an institution that is perfectly positioned for the way legal education will evolve over the next decade. The school is one of the best kept secrets in America, and that is something we have to change," he said.

Guernsey said he feels he can make a change in the publicity of the Law School, according to a University News Service press release.

"You have a real gem — an institution that is perfectly positioned for the way legal education will evolve over the next decade. The school is one of the best kept secrets in America, and that is something we have to change," he said.

Patrick Kelley, an SIU law professor, helped the search committee for the new dean and he said he is satisfied with the results.

"Professor Guernsey is an outstanding law professor and legal administrator, and I believe he will help us move forward as a law school," Kelley said.

WASHINGTON FEELS THE WRATH OF POTOMAC
WASHINGTON—The Potomac River surged over its banks in the Washington area and reached its highest flood levels in a quarter-century Sunday, closing roadways and bridges, swamping houses and other buildings, and wiping out stretches of C&O Canal Historic National Park. The river crested at almost seven feet above normal flood stage, near the level it reached during Hurricane Agnes in 1972. It was more than enough to shut down some waterfront buildings and force anxious officials to close Chain Bridge, which links Arlington, Va., to Washington, and large portions of the George Washington Memorial and Clara Barton Parkways. Although the heaviest flows were expected to spill into the Chesapeake Bay about midnight, the flooding will extend into Monday morning.

POSTAL SERVICE TO MAKE 2-DAY MAIL PRIORITY
WASHINGTON—At 83 a parcel, the price has been right for the U.S. Postal Service's two-day Priority Mail service. But the promise of two-day service hasn't been met. In an effort to bolster sales of what has been one of its most popular products, the agency announced last week that it will begin handling Priority Mail parcels through a separate, dedicated network of mail facilities in the northeastern corridor and Florida. Postal officials said their aim in this 18-month test is to deliver 98 percent of the parcels within two days. Officials acknowledged that is an ambitious goal for a product facing fierce competition from Federal Express Corp., United Parcel Service and other overnight commercial delivery firms.

Max Hall’s sister consoles him with Christopher Reeve, the man who played Superman in the movies and was paralyzed by a horseback riding accident; the only difference is Hall can breath on his own without the assistance of a ventilator she says.

"Following a shooting on Aug. 8, 1995 before he was supposed to come back to SIUC for the fall semester, Hall was left in a full quadruple state. He has no use of his arms and legs, is completely disabled and is confined to a wheelchair, however his family is celebrating the accomplishment of Hall being taken off of ventilator at SIUC Hall II, was a junior at the gun ranging program at SIUC when the shooting took place. His sister, Hall said.” His future plans are uncertain, but he plans to continue his education, she said.

"He plans to take correspondence courses as soon as his health is stable," he said. "It depends on if his chances are viable. His main is to be independent." Those feelings were also shared by his friends who were in car in Hall’s hospital room of Reproductive Health. According to his sister, she expects them to drive her there, When Hall and his friends refused to give up on the scene. Hall was shot in the chest. Hall was not able to speak due to damage to his vocal cords. He has not regained the ability to speak, he said.

Co-ed support group for gays, lesbians, bisexuals organized by graduate student

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

Tammy Brigaze says she had to deal with confusion, anger and other emotions while trying to accept her homosexual preference, which was 29 years old.

She said she attended a support group at SIUC and several students in helping her understand the effects of coming out on herself and her family, and she said she now wants to help others deal with the same issues and provide a safe atmosphere.

Brigaze, a graduate student is educational psychology and special education, said she is currently organizing the only co-ed coming-out support group in the SIUC Clinical Center. The group offers support and educational materials on the recognition of one’s sexual orientation and integrating this into one’s everyday life. She said the process of coming out can take years and involves various stages that include feelings of confusion, anger and denial of one’s sexual orientation.

Domestic violence victims have new service directory

By Donna Polly

 Victims of domestic violence and sexual assault can now receive more help from the people they can turn to with a new comprehensive statewide services directory for victims, state and University officials say.

Lori Corral, spokesperson for Attorney General Jim Ryan, and the new “Illinois Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Services Directory” has 110 listings of programs available to domestic violence and sexual assault victims. She said the directory includes numbers and information for counseling, shelters, legal advocacy and other services.

Also within the directory, there is a public awareness effort that has a statewide toll-free number for victims and a list of friends of victims who can help victims in their times of need.

Frozen locks, broken doors...
Carbondale shirt police ensure their beat stays covered

EVERY SO OFTEN WHEN A TOURING BAND is playing at Hangar 9, a performer may poke fun at Carbondale, saying, "I'd take my shirt off, but I'm not sure if I can," implying that the city is a Puritan's haven. Those who do perform are obviously aware of a part of the city's liquor code which "specifically prohibits any person, male or female, in the establishment to be topless or bottomless."

Although it is good that the city is attempting to make the ordinance equal on the basis of gender, the DailyEgyptian believes male performers should be able to take off their shirts if they so desire.

City officials say the intent of the ordinance is to keep sleazy entertainment out of Carbondale's bars. The DE feels this is a commendable goal and that the Strip is better off without topless dancing clubs.

The ordinance as it stands, however, is too extreme when it results in police officers entering bars and telling guitar players to put their shirts on.

This situation is one which the liquor code specifically prohibits, as well as an ordinance to allow male performers to take their shirts off. Admittedly, this is not a matter of extreme importance provided the bikinis cover the buttocks to comply with the society perceives a difference between the visibility of the male and female chest Carbondale's liquor code, however, provides evidence of this distinction.

Of course, this issue raises the broad question of why our society perceives a difference between the visibility of the male and female chest.

Carbondale, Illinois, a college town, is "backwards." A trip to the local swimming pool or beach is not an adequate forum for addressing this question. Nor it results in police officers entering bars and telling guitar players to put their shirts on.

Rewriting the ordinance so the topless provision only applies to females would not be sexist. Today's social mores distinguish the appropriateness of upper nudity between males and females. A trip to the local swimming pool or beach provides evidence of this distinction.

Of course, this issue raises the broad question of why our society perceives a difference between the visibility of the male and female chest.

Carbondale's liquor code, however, is not an adequate forum for addressing this question. Nor is it easy to argue that the city is a Puritan's haven.

A call for DE readers' Perspectives

IT IS IRONIC THAT AS A RESULT OF THE CODE, a bar can legally hold a female bikini oil wrestling event (provided the bikinis cover the buttocks to comply with the code) while male swimsuit oil wrestling would be illegal. Unless, of course, the participants were swimsuits typical of the 1950s that covered the male torso.

The DE is calling on the City Council to consider changing the ordinance to allow male performers to take their shirts off. Admittedly, this is not a matter of extreme importance that needs to be addressed immediately.

The shirt requirement can be embarrassing, however. When a friend from Chicago visits town and goes to see a rock and roll concert, he says, "This is a relic from the Cold War. I apologize that we inform you of this at late a date."

Rude fans do players a disservice

I was disturbed to hear of the actions of some so-called fans at the January 6 game versus Illinois State. A couple of SIU fans shouted obscenities at Saluki guard Scott Schnepf, who was just off the court.

These comments were not ones of praise, thanking Scott for his intense 17 points, 10 rebounds, and three steals in the victory against the Bobcats. Instead, these ungrateful fans were putting down Scott, to his face.

In response, Scott showed back at theLensmen.

I have known Scott since grade school. He is too the type of person to lose his temper. Whatever these fans had said obviously wasn't something a true fan would say.

Doing every home game this season, I have sat in these stands. Throughout every game, I have heard these derogatory comments about Scott. This makes it difficult for me to enjoy the game.

It is a pleasure to see Scott for a very good reason, he is a good player. In my opinion, Scott is a leader of the team.

While these fans are entitled to their opinion of Scott or any other player. However, shouting at a player and putting him down are not the actions of a true fan, regardless of a player's performance.

In no way does this help the team, not to mention it is very rude. In fact, it probably has a negative impact on a player's performance.

If these fans cannot keep their comments to themselves, I believe they should sit in the overflow section, because they obviously are not there to help the Salukis.

Rock makes old sound new

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

From the movie satire of "Black" to the smoky stage of Hangar 9, the Drovers, a Chicago-based band, play music that separates nothing but the best.

Saturday night's show was a promotion for the band's latest CD, "Little High Sky Slow." Most of the music in the band's two sets Wednesday night was new.

The band plays with a level of intensity that surpasses earlier recorded material. While some bands seem to play at an audience, the Drovers' music, a perfect stage for the audience, is played through the audience. It is as if the music is the only reality.

The band's music is a toss-up while playing. The live show draws fans to the front. Some close their eyes and block out everything but the music and their bodies moved in time with the sounds our embers found equally as well.

The appeal of the band is in the Celtic rhythms that breathe life into the music. Celtic music is an ancient form of music with an almost tribal habit to it.

Sean Clelland, the fiddle player, and guitarist Mike Kirkpatrick work well together in creating a sound that is rooted in traditional Irish music. Images of pots full of Guinness and couples dancing the jig come to mind when they play.

While the music has a traditional quality to it, it is still very modern. It is not an updated version of something old but a creation of something new. The music of the Drovers is unique because it is not traditional Irish music or is it modern rock with a fabricated Seattle sound.

The band has successfully blended the ancient Celtic uiles with a form of pop music that leaves crowds wanting more.

The two-hour show was done before most realized it. The band was able to make its music the focus of the attention.

It became the medium for the music to flow. The smoke-filled stage created an illusion of an ethereal plane as its music touched the soul.

In its new release is perhaps the first from the Drovers that captures something so a wide variety of fans.

In their new release, "Kill Mice Eternity," the band makes it clear that there is no escape for them.

The band plays with emotion as it puts on an unforgettable performance.

The Drovers proved it is a band with the ability to pull an audience into a show and hold them captive.

The new CD is full of that same world through the eyes of a child and looking at people with the same innocence and acceptance of children.

She has a five- octave range that demystifies her work. Her music has a distinct jazz appeal. Songs like "Try Love" and her version of Stevie Wonder's "Circle of Light" from "The Lion King" soundtrack both had elements of jazz.

Part of this was the renovation of Bob Dill, a one-man orchestra who accompanied Rock Friday night. His trumpet, keyboard, flute and guitar brought some of the jazz feel to her music.

The three appearences of Johnny Rock at Cousin Andy's was a sort of family gathering. The singer said she loves the simple, warm atmosphere the place offers.

The crowd went from being enveloped in a cool made the backdrop for the stage. The cross hanging in the center of the stage added a religious feel to the show. The candles burning and the smell of coffee brewing gave the place a sense that it was a haven from the more hectic world.

She said she felt at home because of the people. And the crowd shared that feeling because of the music she played Friday night.

Rock, a St. Louis artist, described her music as "suitable." She said this means her music is "faith appropriate." She has a five-octave range that demystifies her work. Her music is about purity of hopelessness and despair, she said. Rock's music is about purity and clarity. It is about seeing the world through the eyes of a child and looking at people with the same innocence and acceptance of children.

Priddy said it is important to

There are many steps people should take to prevent credit card

In addition to protecting the ac-

Detective Jim Temple.

"Keep your PIN number separate

Credit card fraud cases have involved in physical therapy, but further recovery is unknown, Sue Dahl said.

"There’s no way to know if he’ll recover," she said. "It’s really too early to tell. He’s strong and has an inner strength that is unbelievable. I’ve learned a lot from him.

When Hall was unable to return to the school, his sister said he was not only left behind friends, but also his love for the school. "I wish, she said, "I wish he had known Hall about three years, he visited with Hall over holidays and called him a couple of days ago. Dahl said Hall appears to be doing better.

"Emotionally, every time I see him he seems to be in good spirit," Dahl said. "He’s coping as well as he can. You can’t keep Max down. He tries as hard as he can to keep going." To help in curtailting some of the expenses Hall’s injuries have accumulated, including widening doors and building ramps to make Hall’s home wheelchair accessible, Friends For Max fund has been established at Aetna Bank of Chicago, Sue Hall said.

The fund was set up by Chris Depaepe to assist Hall’s family costs associated with his injuries. Depaepe said the fund has received a lot of donations, but many of the donations are small because they are being made by people in his age group and college students.

The expenses, Depaepe said, could amount to over $100,000 this year.

Department of Public Health, universities, community organizations and victim services programs.

Beth Firestein, SIUC Women’s Services coordinator, said the directory could be a very useful tool because when women report a sexual assault or domestic violence to the police or to first responders, the police may not be prepared to provide the counseling the victim may need.

"Victims of any kind of violence need access to that information readily and in a convenient and centralized place," she said.

Firestein said Women’s Services has its own sexual assault brochure, but the directory definitely will be useful on campus even though it is started to let campus students have access to local services.

Corral said the idea of a directory for victims of domestic violence and sexual assault originated with The Chicago Metropolitan Battered Women’s Network.

She said the network had planned on doing a directory for the Chicago-area but realized that The Metropolitan Battered Women’s Network was slated to be done statewide but realized that the information she had for the rest of the state. The network decided to work with the universities and community organizations to provide information.

Corral said.

"The first batch of directories was slated to be about 2,500, but we had a great number of calls," she said.

"Now we don’t know what the distribution will be.

to leave them stranded in the cold.

Crismon said Glen’s Towing towed at least 40 vehicles last week due to the freezing weather.

Dave Alexander, owner of Dave’s Auto Repair and Sales, 300 N. Blaine Ave., said a de-icer should be used when the locks freeze. He said to stick the nozzle, which is attached to the spray can, into the lock and spray, and it should thaw the mechanism.

Everette Freeman, owner of Southern Illinois Lock & Key, Wildwood Trailer Court, said that an alternative to using a de-icer is to heat the key with a cigarette lighter or a match.

Freeman said people should know how to unlock a frozen door because it might save them money.

"We do the same procedure as anyone else, but we charge $30 for a normal service call," Freeman said. "If it’s late at night, it costs more.

biseuxals still exists, there are many reasons for individuals to be scared of coming out. She said people can lose their housing, jobs, families and self-esteem.

"Coming out is a healthy thing to do," she said. "First and foremost, you feel better about your own self. Keeping this kind of secret promotes a negative self-image. Thinking that people would not like you if you knew the truth ruins your chance to have any authentic relationships.

Brigazza said she wanted to start the group for two different reasons. She said she felt there was only a limited number of resources available for women and men to discuss coming-out issues and also was concerned about the stigmatization facing the gay, lesbian and bisexual community.

"One-third of teen suicides are committed by youths who are questioning their sexuality," she said. "That’s not to say they are gay or lesbian, but they are dealing with confusing feelings and it’s important to reach out to these people.

Brigazza said the most important ways for people to deal with coming-out issues is to become educated and seek support.

"The power of the group is an amazing thing," she said. "When you are able to hear someone say, ‘I was scared of that too, you really you’re not alone.’

Leslie Stango, facilitator of Women’s Loving Women’s Women’s Services support group on campus, said the emergence of a new coming-out support group is a positive step on campus.

"Women Loving Women’s is almost full," she said. "We refer people to her group because we are limited in the number of people we can take.

Stango said the support group offers a different view on coming-out because it is co-ed.

"To get the men and women discussing issues together instead of just a women’s take on the whole thing," she said.

Brigazza said individuals who are coming out need to realize their friends and families need time to deal with this issue.

"If a daughter comes out to her mother, she needs to understand that her mom has to go through a coming-out process also," she said. "She has to learn to deal with questions like, ‘Why isn’t your daughter growing up?’"

Brigazza, who plans on continuing gay, lesbian and bisexual education, said the group offers a learning experience for her.

Watson still positive despite loss of QBs

By Jared Geldofl
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Three quarterbacks from the 1995 Saluki football squad are no longer attending classes at SJUC due to academic and personal reasons. Benchwarmers Reggie Kennedy, Rob Schroeder, and 95s starting sophomore quarterback Damon Smith have all said goodbye to SJUC, but not all for the same reasons.

Both Smith and Schroeder were dismissed from the team by Coach Kelly for violations of the academic policy. Watson still positive despite the victory. Even in the Valley; he said. "We've won a lot of games," Kennedy said. "I think he knows he can be involved in a team that is going to win a lot." Coach Kelly said Kennedy appears to be happy in his new home. "In all appearances he seems to be happy," Kelly said. "He's in our conditioning and weight training program and he's excited about the chance, and we're excited about having him to compete for a starting position." Assistant coach Shawn Watson does not notice the absence of the three quarterbacks will have a negative effect on the team, however. "We will run, retool, and just keep going," Watson said.

An example of the Salukis' rebonding is the signing of Marcus Capone. Capone, a transfer from Nassau Community College in Garden City, NY, has three years of eligibility left and will vie for the quarterback position next season. "I think Marcus is a talented young man. He's athletic, he's got a very good arm, and I think his best football is definitely ahead of him," Watson said. "He's a solid person and I like all of the things I know about him and his character." Coach Kelly said Kennedy wanted a chance to be a part of a winning team. SIUC’s dominance of Bradley ends

Braves end 14-year winless streak at hands of Salukis, win 66-58

By Melanie Gray
DE Assistant Sports Editor

All good things must come to an end.

The Salukis’ 27-game winning streak over Bradley University came to an end Monday night, as the Salukis scored a 66-58 victory over the Braves at Robertson Field House. The streak began in January 1989 and ended in January 1993.

This would be the last time SIUC owned the lead.

Bradley quickly regained the lead, chasing seven points in the first seven minutes of the contest. SIUC could not convert, and Bradley pulled ahead, 10-8, with just over 13 minutes left in the half.

Things began to turn around when guard Kasia McClendon nailed two three pointers, cutting the deficit to 17-11.

Senior forwards LaQuanda Chovanec and Heather Starch, momentum alive with key buckets, and a McClendon steal clinched the Braves and put the Salukis up 23-21.

Brady, took advantage of SIUC’s offensive drought, building a 13-point lead, 49-36.

With 2:11 left in the regulation, McClendon started an SIUC comeback, sinking a three-pointer, cutting the deficit to four points, including the lone Saluki free throw of the evening, to bring the game within five for the first time since the buzzer by McClendon, Bradley took a 33-30 lead into the locker room.

SIUC only scored six points in the first nine minutes of the second stanza.

Bradley’s top scorer for the night was junior forward/center Damon Jones.

Jones is a force to be reckoned with. On the court he is aggressive, patient and versatile. SIUC annihilation of the Salukis (9-6 overall, 2-2 in the MVC) was in large part due to Jones’ performance.

Jones possesses the skills needed to be a quality basketball player. He is a big, strong, intelligent and quick big man. He can shoot the fade-away jumper, set up in the post, rebound and run the floor in transition.

From the Pressbox

To say the least, Jones is everything the Salukis are lacking: He’s the big man inside, a defensive threat and a weapon for setting screens and picks.

He has proven he can score with his 14-point performance against Nebraska-Kearney Dec. 30, and rebound with his eight boards Dec. 29 against Hawaii-Hilo.

The question still remains — is Damon Jones the answer the Salukis have been looking for this season? Jones is the key to the Salukis’ success or failure.

Jones must put greater effort into hoops to meet potential

Dawgs head to Panthers’ den, look for consistency

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

Thursday’s weather and air plane mechanical problems have been a blessing in disguise for the men’s basketball team.

“After the team’s efforts reach Des Moines, Iowa, failed, Saluki coach Herrin considered the safety of his team over the importance of a game. He decided that SIUC would do whatever it took to cancel the game — and it was needed.”

 Luckily for the Dawgs, Drake and SIUC officials agreed on rescheduling the contest for tonight.

The team will leave Carbondale Tuesday morning for Des Moines, play the Bulldogs at 7:05 p.m., and then travel to Cedar Falls, Iowa to battle the University of Northern Iowa Wednesday.

The blessing may be that SIUC was able to rebound from its devastating loss to Bradley-Jan. 15 with a confidence building victory at home against Wichita State Saturday.

Herrin said the team is going to have a tough week.

The Pittsburgh Steelers arrived in Arizona last night as the countdown continues toward Super Bowl XXX at Sun Devil Stadium Sunday in Tempe.

The Pittsburgh Steelers arrived Sunday and will train at the Arizona Cardinals’ facility in Tempe. The Steelers will prepare for the game at Scottsdale Community College. The team had a practice Friday at the Arizona Cardinals practice facility in Tempe. The Penguins are scheduled to play the Chicago Wolves on Friday night.

The Wolves are coming off a game against the Chicago Wolves on Saturday night. The game was played in front of a sellout crowd of 7,000 fans. The Wolves are looking to build on their success in the Western Conference.

The Chicago White Sox acquired outfielder drafted from the Blue Jays for left-handed pitcher Andrew Lordeaux and minor-league outfielder Jose Guzman. The deal includes an agreement that the Blue Jays will receive $1.5 million as part of the compensation.

The trade comes just days after the White Sox signed free agent outfielder Tony Phillips to a one-year, $1.75 million deal.

The 35-year-old split an injury-filled 1995 season with the New York Yankees and Oakland Athletics. The move for Tabbart was made as insurance, according to, behind the White Sox lineup.
