Peace Committee Denied Center Pending Study

Bill Moffett, 23, a spokesman for the Southern Illinois Peace Committee, said he was told Monday that pending further investigation, the group will no longer be allowed to use University facilities.

Moffett said the decision by the University was made known to him Monday when he asked the Activities Programming Board to use Browne Auditorium to show a pacifist film and to present a public speech next month.

Moffett said he was told later by Wilbur Moulton, dean of students, that the group is being denied the use of University facilities for three reasons: (1) the University has no record of a faculty adviser for the group; (2) the group has not listed any officers, and (3) the University wants a clarification of issues raised in a story in the June 27 issue of the Egyptian about the Peace Committee.

Moulton said the Peace Committee is "not being denied University facilities." He said that "any student organization must meet certain minimal requirements. As of yet, they (the Southern Illinois Peace Committee) have not met those requirements. When they do meet the requirements, they will be eligible for all services available through the Student Activities Center under my office."

Moffett explained that he has been told by the Student Activities Office that student organizations do not necessarily need a faculty adviser during the summer quarter. Moffett noted that the Peace Committee has several officers at present and that an election is planned to elect new ones.

Jon Carlson, an assistant in the Student Activities Center, said that at present he knows of no denial of facilities to the Peace Committee.

"I do have some facilities for the Peace Committee tentatively scheduled pending notification by Dean Moulton," he said. Carlson noted that his office does not have the names of any officers of the Peace Committee on file. He said "they may have officers, but I don't know of them."

Moffett added that the Peace Committee is currently publishing a two-page paper explaining its organization, methods, and goals to the student body. Moffett said copies of the paper would be made available to students at various locations, including the University Center.

Council Accepts Report on Walkout, Letter From HUD

By Don Mueller

City Councilmen last night accepted both the presentation of findings by the Citizen's Board of Inquiry and a letter from the Department of Housing and Urban Development advising the city of its recertification for the planned community improvement program for 1968-69 fiscal year.

The Council extended its appreciation to the inquiry board which investigated the mass walkout by city employees in March but moved to discuss the report at next Tuesday's informal meeting.

In discussing the letter from HUD, Councilman Randall Nelson questioned the "lack of coordination" between the Community Conservation Board, headed by William J. Burns, and various city administrative departments.

Nelson alluded to Ordinance 1454, proposed by the CCB and amending the city's housing code, and said that in the future it should be made "crystal clear" to the Council those code changes "recommended" by the CCB and those "required" by HUD.

He also suggested that the CCB make available to the City Attorney all requirements set forth by HUD.

Later the Council passed Ord. 1454 amending the housing code after calling upon George L. Everingham, head of the Code Enforcement Department, to hear his views.

Everingham said his department and the CCB were "not in complete agreement" on the changes but agreed to let the Council decide the fate of the ordinance.

City Strike Blamed on Changeover

By Mary Lou Manning

The major underlying cause of the Carbondale city employees' walkout of March, 1968 was the failure of both city officials and city employees to adapt quickly to a new form of personnel relations, according to a report of the Citizens' Board of Inquiry presented at the City Council meeting Tuesday night.

The Board was established by the City Council to investigate the events and to discover and publicly announce the underlying causes of the walkout of the Carbondale city employees following the March 7 ousting of Chief of Police Jack Hazel, who was later reinstated.

The report also presented a chronology of events of March 6, when Hazel presented a nine-page letter to Richard Wilhelmy, director of public safety, to March 11 when Wilhelmy offered his resignation.

Another underlying cause of the difficulties was the adoption of the city manager form of government, according to the report. On May 24, 1966 the city voted to adopt this form of government and on Sept. 1, 1966 C. William Norman assumed the position of city manager. The report pointed out that the adoption of the new form of government and the appointment of Norman took place before the city elections in April, 1967 which changed the city administration.

Under the old commissioner form of government, the mayor and each commissioner acted as a department head; however, under the city manager new departments were established. The employees felt that their direct access to the City Council no longer existed under the new system, the report stated.

The Draft and SIU

Draftees Need Transportation

By Brian Treusch
(First of a Series)

Getting up at 3 a.m. is pretty difficult, but finding a friend who has a car and is also willing to drive you to Murphysboro at that hour is sometimes impossible.

About 66 SIU students have had to find such friends this month alone, according to Barbara Givens, executive secretary for the Murphysboro Draft Board. All the students were ordered to be at the Murphysboro board office by 3:45 a.m., Monday, so that they could be bused to St. Louis to take physical and mental tests starting there at 7 a.m. Miss Givens said that each month a few students discover that their friend has overslept and they can't make it on time. In such cases, she said, the registrant is asked to write a letter to the board explaining why he did not appear, and that in most cases, the board grants another date for the next month.

Local Board Assists

Draft Registration Poses Problems

"It's a shame the University can't provide a bus to bring those boys over here," she said.

Miss Givens said that students wishing to transfer their physicals from their home town board to Murphysboro must do so in person. She noted that the University should provide bus service to her office at least once a month to allow students to take care of such business and to have their questions answered.

Round trip cab fare from Carbondale to the Selective Service Board office in Murphysboro is $8. She said Herbert Wohlwend, assistant registrar, had offered to pay the cab fare for the students out of his own pocket until he was told how many students made the trip.

She said that as many as 200 SIU students may come to the office this month alone. "I really sympathize with those guys," she said.

She noted that the number of SIU students transferring their physicals through the Murphysboro office was becoming so large that registrants are now being sent to St. Louis twice a month. Miss Givens said that one student who just started attending SIU not only couldn't find a ride to Murphysboro, but "he didn't even know where the town was." She said he still hasn't been able to get over here.

She noted State Selective System Rules do not provide for transportation to and from the local Board office. "I think the University should then make it their business," she said.

In addition to transfers, Miss Givens said that many SIU students come to the office with many other problems and questions about the draft.

Miss Givens feels her biggest problem is that nobody fully understands the draft laws. In addition, she said, "I'm not a member of the board and I'm not allowed to predict what classification someone may be granted by the board."

She said a lot of students who are registered with some other board come to her with questions she cannot possibly answer. "Only the local board can decide what classification will be granted and then they can even change their minds later," she said.

She advised students to become very familiar with the draft laws and to contact their own local board for accurate information.

In Illinois, for example, the State Selective Service System has asked local boards to defer teachers teaching in the state because there is a teacher shortage, she said. But students coming from another state may not be granted a deferment for teaching, she cautioned.

Miss Givens said the Murphysboro board has retained the services of three lawyers and one doctor to provide information and assistance for registrants. If the student is from Illinois and not from this local board, he is often advised to contact his local board for legal assistance because his counsel will be able to personally examine his file at the local board office, she added.

Students from out of state are frequently put in touch with the Murphysboro board's appeal agent because it is often difficult for them to contact their local boards back home, she said.

Each local board is autonomous, she said, and any advice given here to someone registered somewhere else is in no way binding on their own draft boards.

Mays Voted All-Star Game MVP

HOUSTON (AP)— The flying legs of San Francisco's Willie Mays built the only run of the game and some sensational National League pitching made it stand up for a 1-0 victory over the Americans in the 39th All Star Game Tuesday night.

It was the sixth straight victory for the Nationals, who now lead the series 21-17 and it may well have been the most frustrating loss for the Americans.

After California's Jim Freese led off the first inning with a double, 20 straight American League hitters went down in order against Don Drysdale of Los Angeles, San Francisco's Juan Marichal, St. Louis' Steve Carlton and Tom Seaver of the New York Mets.

The Americans managed only two more hits—both of them two out doubles against Seaver. And both times the rallies ended on strikeouts. Atlanta's Ron Reed and Jerry Koosman of New York completed the three-hitter, splitting the ninth inning between them.

The six National League

hurlers struck out 11 batters—five of them by Seaver in the two innings he worked.

All the time the AL trailed by that single run scored by Mays in the first inning. And Willie, named the games Most Valuable Player, wasn't even supposed to be in the starting lineup.

Willie got to start when Cincinnati's Pete Rose suffered a broken thumb.

Playing in his 19th mid-summer classic, Mays opened with a single against Cleveland's Luis Tiant, the AL starter. Before Tiant ever made a pitch to Curt Flood, he tossed over to first baseman Harmon Killebrew. Mays stepped back easily.

Again Tiant watched him lead away and again the Indians' right-hander flipped to Killebrew. This time, though the ball got away from the Minnesota first baseman and Mays took off for second.

Tiant worked Flood, St. Louis' fleet center fielder, who was moved in the batting order when Mays was added to the NL lineup.

The Cleveland pitcher fell behind and finally walked Flood with the fourth ball flying over Detroit catcher Bill Freehan's head. Mays streaked for third.

Now with runners at first and third and none out, the AL played its infield back for San Francisco slugger Willie McCovey.

Public Wins With CATV

The Supreme Court's 5-1 decision permitting community antenna television systems to transmit distant programs without paying copyright fees to owners pleased some persons and worried others.

The CATV industry must not have expected victory. A national news magazine reports that a representative committee was in the process of negotiating a payment formula with TV and film companies as the high court made its ruling.

The court's decision does not, however, rule out the possibility of Congress legislating a copyright fee to protect broadcasters and producing firms. And, as one New York-Los Angeles CATV franchise official said, "We're not looking to be freeloaders." However, the court's decision did indeed strengthen CATV's bargaining position for the time being.

CATV franchise holders were not the only winners. The television-consuming public may be the biggest winner of all. Its winnings, however, will be in the form of better programming and service rather than in cash. The public is almost assured better programming and service from local stations if these stations hope to compete with CATV, which guarantees its subscribers extra channels and interference-free viewing.

The broadcasters and producing firms are the losers for the moment. But even this may change if Congress passes copyright legislation, as it will probably be pressed to do.

Immigration Irritates Irish

The new immigration law which has just come into effect was intended to get rid of ethnic discriminations, but it has already produced some ethnic skirmishes.

It is particularly upsetting to professional Irish-Americans. Under the previous law, Ireland along with the rest of Northern Europe enjoyed vast advantages over the rest of the world. But the new law abolishes the national origins quota system and substitutes, on a first-come, first-served basis, admission of relatives of those already here, and of persons with needed skills.

Under this measure, Italy, Greece and Portugal have a lot of catching up to do; some other nations never got started. They will supply the bulk of immigrants for the next few years; meanwhile, Ireland's total will drop from 5,500 in 1965 to about 1,000 this year. Hence Representative William Pitts Ryan of New York, backed by the Irish-American Immigration Committee, proposes that no nation be dropped more than 25 per cent below its previous immigration average.

With both time and Senate sentiment against it, the Ryan proposal probably will go nowhere. In the next five or ten years, the haven-not-immigrant countries will have met their migration requirements, and then Ireland and everybody else will start on an equal basis. In view of the long record of discrimination, that is only fair. Certainly the new act deserves a chance to work without respect to the kind of favoritism it was meant to correct.

Our Man Hoppe

Merriwanna Changes Course of History

By Arthur Hoppe

Many attempts have been made to rewrite history. The best, undoubtedly, is that well-known work, "A Better History of the World." An excerpt follows.

It was in 1585 while on an expedition to Virginia that Sir Walter Raleigh got drunk, took a wrong turn and missed an appointment with the Tabac Indian chiefs. Instead, he found himself in the happy village of the Merriwanna Tribe.

Not knowing one Indian from another, Sir Walter innocently accepted a peace pipe, politely took half a dozen deep drags and pronounced those historic words:

"Man, this is the real stuff!"

The introduction of merriwanna, as it became known, into the civilized world changed the entire course of history. In fact, nothing of historical interest happened for the next 300 years.

An illustration of this dearth was the Thirty Seconds War. The conflict lasted as long as it took for the two armies to line up and view each other's glittering array of finely boned halberds and swords. At that moment, a private in the rear ranks cried, "Hey, you cats, let's cool it." And everybody went home.

For the trouble with merriwanna was that instead of instilling courage, like alcohol, it instilled euphoria. Nor did it produce fits of depression or morning-after retribution.

Thus it quickly replaced alcohol as a means of escape. And while some abused it, as they had alcohol, most were content to go about their daily lives and relax with a couple of pipeful in the evening.

The cumulative effect was to soothe the frayed nerves of society. And it was most difficult to drum up much enthusiasm for marching off to kill somebody.

So nothing much happened historically until 1912 when an enterprising agricultural scientist, Dr. L. C. Outerbridge, rediscovered the tabac weed.

He found that "tabacco," as he named it, produced a much bigger, broader leaf than merriwanna and could thus be dried, shredded and rolled into cigarettes far more economically. "I'll make a million," he said, rubbing his hands.

Unfortunately, he was quickly hauled up before the Pure Food &

'Truth in Government'

Having wrestled mightily, and to great fanfare, with the problems of "Truth in Packaging," and "Truth in Lending," it would be a great service if the Congress would take half-an-hour to inform the public on "Truth in Government Aid."

Perhaps it could authorize a memorandum to be enclosed with all Federal Government benefit checks, income tax forms, census reports and all other mailings to taxpayers, which would read something like this:

"It is essential that all taxpayers understand the aid programs which the Federal Government has undertaken. So that there may be no misconceptions, we are here outlining the basic programs and their meanings:

"Federal Aid: This term is perhaps the most misunderstood of all Federal programs. Federal Aid does not cost your government anything. The only cost is to you. Federal Aid means that the Congress has authorized the Executive Branch to take money from you, and give it, free, to someone else.

"Social Security: Under this program, the Congress authorizes the Executive Branch to compel those of who are employed to pay benefits to those now receiving them. The program presumes that future Congresses will eventually compel persons who work to pay you benefits.

"Guaranteed Annual Income: Under this proposed program, the Congress will be asked to authorize the Executive Branch to take income earned by those who work, and give it to persons who do not work. The program will be sufficiently broad to provide benefits for those who cannot work, as well as those who prefer not to work.

"Under these programs it is possible for our citizenry to enjoy the rewards of planning that would have seemed impossible a generation ago. This planning has made old-fashioned concepts of hard work and thrift outmoded. It costs the cooperative citizen nothing to participate in these programs, since the Federal Government takes money only from those uncooperative citizens who persist in working and saving, and gives it to those who are willing to refrain from these practices.

Citizens Do the Job

Community Action Matter of 'Pride' In City of Alton

By Gary Blackburn

ALTON— This city has a community action group. But it doesn't conduct protest marches. And it doesn't lead demonstrations.

Instead, the city is attacking the problem of regional decline in an old-fashioned, do-it-yourself way. Through an organization called Pride, Inc., Alton is working to spur area beautification by encouraging private initiative and civic "pride."

Formed in 1965 by Dr. Gordon Moore, an Alton surgeon, the organization has been active only two years. Dr. Moore, a long-time member of the Alton Park Board, was concerned about the general decline of the area. A lover of trees and parks, he and a group of interested friends thought they should do something to change the situation.

Thus, Pride was born. Its objective: Stimulate beautification. Already its work has expanded to encompass a 16-community area.

The non-profit organization limits itself to the almost continuous urban area on the Illinois side of Alton Lake, a 26-mile-long body of water formed by a lock and dam on the Mississippi River.

What does Pride actually do?

Jack Barban, an SIU graduate and Pride's executive director, says emphatically, "Pride does nothing!"

But Pride may be the "biggest little nothing" in the Alton area's life. While not actually doing the work itself, Pride proposes programs and gets people to do the work.

Nearly $95,000 has been pledged in an area campaign to finance three years of operation. Money from business, industry and private citizens finances only administrative costs.

None of the $95,000 is being used to buy a single tree, pick up one piece of litter or build one fountain. It simply goes toward the salaries of the executive director and secretaries and operating costs.

Pride has 45 directors and nearly 2,000 members. However "everyone concerned with beautifying his property" is an unofficial member, says Barban.

Several committees have been formed to work in specific areas. One committee, for example, is trying to restore the Elijah P. Lovejoy monument and gravesite in Alton City Cemetery. Lovejoy, an abolitionist editor in pro-slavery territory, was shot to death in Alton while defending his printing press in 1837. Establishment of a Lovejoy Hall of Fame is being considered to recognize other journalists who have made sacrifices for their profession.

School children have been given trees to plant and have signed Pride Pledges promising to keep their yards neat and clean. Student councils have undertaken beautification projects.

The Wood River Refinery of American

'Pride' to Honor Famed Editor

ALTON-- One of the projects of Pride, Inc., is to revive the memory of Elijah P. Lovejoy, a martyr for press freedom and a symbol of man's freedom from slavery.

Pride, an organization dedicated to the beautification of the Alton area, has begun work to restore the Lovejoy Monument and gravesite. In addition, support is being sought for a Lovejoy Hall of Fame to honor other journalists who have sacrificed for their profession.

Lovejoy was shot to death on Nov. 7, 1837, when a mob stormed a building containing his printing press. His strong abolitionist stand in his newspaper, the Alton Observer, is cited as the primary cause of his suffering the wrath of the then pro-slavery community.

The impressive 90-foot Lovejoy memorial looks down Alton's Monument Street toward the Mississippi River. The gravesite is Oil Co. completed a large clean-up program. Now every large industry has asked Pride what it can do.

A Home Beautification Award is presented to homeowners and renters who work to improve and maintain their residences.

A project study committee determines what future projects should be developed and how each goal should be reached. Pride itself will not develop any project.

Is anything wrong with Pride?

"Nothing," says Jack Barban. "It's one of those things like apple pie and motherhood. You just can't be against it."

One woman expressed concern over a possible bird problem when the trees planted through Pride have reached bird-perching height.

Dr. Irvin Blumfield, a charter Pride director, said the one thing wrong with Pride is that it had to be.

"It is wrong that the area needs such an organization in the first place," he said. But, according to Dr. Blumfield, the community was going downhill and had to be turned the other way.

In May, 1967, Pride, Inc., was presented the Holiday Magazine Award for a Beautiful America. Since then many communities have inquired about Pride. But Pride is still a local organization. Barban said there was plenty to do at home before Pride could expand.

Pride apparently has moved the area people to action, and a visit to the town shows it. Ornamental fountains dot the triangle intersections of the hilly city. A man digs dandelions. A woman removes trash from a gutter. Young sapling trees appear on the boulevards.

Pride is rolling in Alton—pushing the people to help themselves. But Pride certainly has no monopoly on private initiative or civic "pride."

Residents of any area, it seems, could help themselves in a similar way.

in another portion of the Alton City Cemetery.

Through the years the state-owned monument has deteriorated, and the gravesite needs to be more properly marked. Pride is now marking the grave with a stone and wrought iron fence. Plans for beautifying the monument include night lighting and clean-up and tree planting in the general area.

The purpose of the Lovejoy Hall of Fame, still in its early planning stages, is to recognize "the sacrifices, merits and hardships of today's newsmen in the cause of freedom of the press," said Steve Cousley, chairman of the Pride Hall of Fame Committee.

The committee, which includes Howard R. Long and Charles Clayton of the SIU Department of Journalism, hopes to enlist support from Alton citizens, the journalism profession and the whole country.

Sickness, Death Traced to Tainted Water

By Pete Brown

How to start this story? A big-city tabloid newspaper might say:

"If you've got to go near the water, don't drink it. It might kill you!"

Or a more conservative approach, from the science pages:

"Evidence is mounting that our atmosphere's most plentiful element, nitrogen, can be dangerous and even fatal in its compound forms."

Most farmers would recognize either lead as a reference to the hazard of excessive nitrate in water supplies and stock feed. The problem has been recognized for a hundred years or more but lately it seems to be getting worse. No one will say that the increased use of nitrogen fertilizers is the reason; that has not been proved.

But an SIU chemist, Albert Casky, suspects the link is more than coincidental. Whatever the cause, he has been working for the past two years on a quick test for nitrate concentrations in water. He has devised a method that would permit speedy field readings that might prevent some tragedies.

For example: Casky claims that some unexplained infant deaths in the Missouri

Ozarks, perhaps as many as eight a year, might be due to nitrate poisoning.

What happens is that nitrate from fertilizers or from water washed through farm barnyards, feedlots, manure piles or silo "juice" drainage gets into ground water channels and then into wells.

For newborn babies, a dose of nitrate as low as 10 parts per million in water can be fatal, Casky says. Although an adult's susceptibility ranges widely, most agencies and the U.S. Public Health Service agree that levels in the 40-45 parts-per-million range can be deadly.

Accute poisoning in infants and frequently cattle has been known for years. Cattle are poisoned many times because of high nitrogen build-up in such forage plants as oats, sorghum and corn during bad growing conditions.

Nitrate itself isn't too toxic. But when consumed—through well water or whatever—microorganisms in the digestive tract change it to nitrite, which is about 10 times as toxic as nitrate. Then it combines with hemoglobin, which carries oxygen in the blood, to form something called methemoglobin. This can't carry oxygen, so when enough hemoglobin has been converted, the body defenses are overwhelmed. The animal, or baby, dies from asphyxiation.

"Blue baby" deaths resulting from nitrate-poisoning interference were noted in Kansas, Iowa and Missouri 20 years ago. The cases were traced to well water used in making formula.

A 1966 survey by the Illinois State Water Survey showed some very high nitrate concentrations in southern Illinois wells: 45 parts per million and over in wells up to 200 feet deep in the Mt. Vernon hill country and readings that high in deeper wells in the Shawnee Hills section.

Low concentrations can cause loss of weight, lower milk production and decreased fertility in livestock.

Casky was awarded $9,000 spent quite wisely. His system involves adding a color-forming reagent to a suspect water sample, adding acid and heating for 15 minutes. The amount of color formed is an index to nitrate concentration and that can be measured by a spectrophotometer. The whole operation can be pulled off in the field and takes about 15 minutes, compared to two-hour laboratory analysis now common, Casky says.

Most city water treatment plants test for nitrate but the big problem has been down on the farm. Casky's quick test could be a literal lifesaver.

Summer Program Offers Variety

A busload of 150 children and parents will leave the Lincoln Recreational Park at 9 a.m. today, bound for the St. Louis Zoo, according to William Ridinger, chairman of the Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education.

The event is one of many scheduled for the Lincoln Recreation Park Program, a summer playground facility. Sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education, the Carbondale Park District and the Carbondale city government, the program is one of the largest projects in the country in which a school enters the local community to assist in community development.

The children's theater program will present the play "Through the Looking Glass" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Show Wagon at the park's Drama and Music Center. The free performance is directed by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Day, graduate students in the Department of Recreation and Outdoor Education, in conjunction with the Department of Theatre.

On July 19 a Western Day, open to the public, will be held at the park. Square dancers from McLeansboro and a cook-out will highlight the event.

Carbondale's first Horse Show will be presented at 1 p.m. July 21 at Attucks Park. A trophy will be awarded to the outstanding rider in the show. Anyone interested in entering any event should contact Rex K. Hitchcock, 549-1882.

All Dogs Must Be Leashed If New Ordinance Passes

If Rover is planning a tour of campus, he had better check a map first, or face a $5 fine if Ordinance 1457 is passed by the Carbondale City Council.

A provision of Ordinance 1457 will require that all dogs be leashed, outside of home, while within the Carbondale city limits.

According to City Manager C. William Norman, the Communications, Technology, Home Economics and Old Main buildings as well as Woody

Hall, Thompson Point and Small Group Housing are the only major SIU buildings within the city limits. These are the only areas affected by the ordinance.

Other provisions of the ordinance include mandatory registration, licensing and rabies vaccination for Carbondale dogs.

The Dog Control Committee will hold a public hearing in a few weeks to discuss the ordinance, according to Norman.

Board Offers Trip to Opera

A trip to the St. Louis Municipal Opera for the showing of "Brigadoon" will be sponsored Sunday by the Activities Programming Board.

Buses will leave the University Center at 4:30 p.m. The cost of the trip is $3.50 per person.

Any person interested in knowing more about the Activities Programming Board is invited to a regular meeting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday in Room C of the University Center.

The main had been buried under the east-west sidewalk south of the Home Economics Building.

City Police Accused

Blacks Charge Ill-Treatment

By Inez Rencher

A group of concerned black adults has decided to work through the Carbondale chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to bring to public attention alleged ill-treatment of blacks by the city policemen.

An informal meeting Monday night in the basement of the Rockhill Baptist Church was called to ascertain facts in recent incidents of what the group said they felt was unjust and unqualified treatment of blacks by policemen.

They planned to "search for a solution and try to avert any further incidents without racial violence."

Elbert Simon, director of the Carbondale Employment and Resource Center, reported two incidents in the past four weeks which he said showed on the part of policemen "no respect whatever as far as black people are concerned."

He said each time such acts are brought to the attention of an officer in charge at the police department or at city hall, apologies are offered.

"The time is out for apologies," Simon told the group. "I fear that pretty soon with these untrained, racist policemen running around, somebody's going to get hurt—even killed."

A second meeting is planned for next week with officials of the NAACP. The Rev. Lenus Turley, pastor of the Rockhill Baptist Church, who moderated the meeting, will announce later in the week the time and date of the next meeting.

Rev. Turley tentatively urged written allegations of blacks who say they have been intimidated by police to be presented to the Merit Board and/or to the City Council. Formal plans of action will be discussed at the next meeting.

Police Chief Jack Hazel, who is not in Carbondale this week, said recently that the relationship of the police department with the black section of town is "not as good as it is in the other sections of town."

Hazel said the police force lacks communication with a "certain" group of young blacks.

The subject of police relations with the blacks in Carbondale was brought up by Simon at a recent committee meeting of the state Human Relations Commission. An investigation was promised at that time, but no report of any such investigation has been made yet.

"Our department is always willing to cooperate with any effort," Hazel said about the possibility of investigation or meeting with residents.

He added, however, "Our department enforces the law and we're not going to relax on the law to get along with any group."

Mr. High Pockets

Christian Moe, director, seated, checks the script of "Mr. High Pockets," with three of his leading characters. The title role in the prize-winning play will be enacted by David Selby, New York actor, center. Richard Bergman of Carbondale, left, plays "Dr. Stygian Sticks," while Marilyn Hengst of West Frankfort has the role of "Ann Rutledge." The play opens tonight in the Southern Playhouse of the Communications Building.

'Mr. High Pockets' Premieres Tonight

By Dean Rebuffoni

A big change is in store for the Southern Playhouse stage, one requiring a move from the streets of cosmopolitan New York City to the pathways of bucolic New Salem.

Yes, a change—for here comes the world premiere of "Mr. High Pockets," the third production of the Southern Players' 1968 Summer Playbill. The play opens tonight at 8 p.m., and will run through Friday.

"Mr. High Pockets" is a very special play. It was selected by a panel of judges over 132 entries from eight countries for the $4500 first prize in a competition sponsored by the SIU Department of Theater, the Abraham Lincoln Association and the Illinois Arts Council as a special event in the Illinois Sesquicentennial Association.

The play, written by George Herman of Hawaii, is being directed by Christian Moe, associate professor of theater.

"Mr. High Pockets" is, of course, about Abraham Lincoln. As such, according to Moe, it is "a very difficult play—and the role of Lincoln is a particularly demanding one. This is not a 'short' play, and the actor depicting Lincoln is never off the stage throughout the entire production." That actor is David Selby.

Selby, 27, a professional actor and a former member of the SIU summer stock company, is no stranger to the role of Abraham Lincoln, having portrayed Lincoln in two other stage productions.

A native of West Virginia, Selby attained his B.S. (in marketing, before, as he says, "I discovered my desire to act") and M.A. in theater at the University of West Virginia.

He came to SIU in the fall of 1964, and did his first role as Lincoln in E.P. Konkle's "Prologue to Glory," a production directed by Christian Moe. He also did the role of "Honest Abe" in "The Last Days of Lincoln" for the National Historical Convention in Springfield in 1965.

Selby left SIU in 1966, and has since performed in a variety of professional acting positions, including work at the Cleveland Playhouse, the Barter Theater in Virginia, and in several off-Broadway productions in New York City. Meanwhile, he had kept in touch with SIU and readily accepted an offer of the Lincoln role.

"I had really enjoyed my past theater work with Christian Moe," Selby said, "and the chance to take part in a new, different Lincoln play was an exciting challenge."

Selby's role in "Mr. High Pockets" is one in which Abraham Lincoln is portrayed as a man given to melancholia, a man destined for greatness but ever close to death. As Christian Moe says, "The play is one in which time and place flow together rapidly, and we see Lincoln's life move swiftly from New Salem to Springfield to Washington."

The play, in three acts, is somewhat Faustian: Lincoln struggles throughout the drama with his antagonist, "Dr. Stygian Sticks," a role performed by Richard Bergman of Wright Junior College.

As a special note to the production, playwright George Herman has been invited to tonight's production.

And so, "Mr. High Pockets"

Clergy-Layman Group Hears Pacifist Leader

The Carbondale Chapter of Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam heard several suggestions Monday night about future activities.

A special summer representative for the American Friends Service Committee, Marcia Hall, 22, from San Francisco, was introduced to the group. She said that she will be working in Carbondale as a full-time pacifist representative at the Unitarian Fellowship at the corner of Elm and University.

In an appeal for public support to show opposition to the Vietnamese war, she asked the group to support a silent vigil once a week in some public area, such as a park, and recommended that a clergy workshop be created to discuss whether and how social and political issues could be voiced from the pulpit.

Miss Hall also said an attempt should be made to bring a knowledgeable person from Vietnam to speak in Carbondale about the war. She said she is contacting several churches to support the speech.

Individual members of the Clergy and Laymen Concerned group said they would support further activities of the Southern Illinois Peace Committee, especially today's vigil outside the University Center and the Hiroshima Day march on August 3.

Members of the group rejected a proposal by Wilbur Moulton, dean of students, that joint sponsorship of activities with the Southern Illinois Peace Committee "would not be appropriate."

A special report by Steve Mirowski on the activities of the SIU Free School was presented.

Southern Illinois Peace Committee Plans Two Public Demonstrations

The Southern Illinois Peace Committee has decided to conduct two public demonstrations and to support the activities of other anti-war groups.

The first demonstration will be a "sympathetic vigil" for Dr. Benjamin Spock and three other men convicted of conspiracy in counseling men to avoid military conscription.

The vigil is planned for noon outside the University Center. All four men will be sentenced in Boston Federal Court at the time of the vigil.

The second demonstration will be a march through Carbondale on Saturday, August 3, in remembrance of the anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima. The march is scheduled at noon and is expected to go north on Illinois Avenue from the campus, to Main Street, then south on University Avenue. A request to use the streets has been filed with the Carbondale City Council, which was expected to grant permission for the march at its meeting Tuesday night.

Bill Moffett, spokesman for the Peace Committee, said that special requests will be made to faculty members "to end their public silence and apathy by marching on August 3."

A decision was made by members of the Peace Committee to support the anti-war educational programs of the SIU Free School, the Carbondale Chapter of Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam, and the American Friends Service Committee.

Spokesmen for the other groups said they expected favorable reactions from their own organizations on the proposal.

The American Friends

Service Committee, most often referred to as the Quakers, has established a special summer office in Carbondale to help acquaint the community with its programs and ideals. The office is located at the corner of Elm and University and is staffed by Marcia Hall, 22, from San Francisco. Miss Hall said anyone interested in peace and non-violence may contact her at her office.

The SIU Free School is a University-approved organization which seeks "to bring greater relevance to academic study through unimpeded discussion and participation." A special course in non-violence is planned by the Free School.

The Carbondale Chapter of Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam is composed of about 40 local residents, mostly faculty members and seven local ministers. The organization is directly involved with the war in Vietnam, and also offers draft counseling and information to young men in the area at the Student Christian Foundation.

2-Week Music Camp Offers Varied Program to Students

SIU is the site for a two-week music camp which began Sunday. One hundred seventy-one high school students from seven states have registered.

The theme of the camp is "Music and Youth at Southern." The camp will feature study for each student in his special instrument. Each student may participate in the larger organization (band, chorus and orchestra) led by guest directors.

Academic study is offered in music appreciation, theory, conducting, science of music, small ensemble and stage band.

Piano students will give a recital at 3:30 p.m. July 20, in the University Ballroom in the University Center. A final concert by band, chorus and orchestra will be given in the Ballroom at 7:30 p.m., July 20.

The public is invited to both free concerts.

Scholarship Awarded

Prospective Teachers Relate Experiences in New Situations

Each year, SIU students seeking an education degree must serve in the classrooms of various elementary, junior high and high schools as student teachers.

There they encounter many new situations and problems.

One such student, Mrs. Patricia Wheeler, a senior majoring in elementary education, who has had experience with first graders, must now adjust to her class of kindergarten pupils. Because of their short attention span, and the hot summer weather, Mrs. Wheeler must prepare many activities each day.

Another student teacher, Mrs. Mary O'Shea, a senior majoring in art, said her first problem was getting down to the level of the fourth, fifth, and sixth graders.

Her main problem was that the Educable Mentally Handicapped students (EMH) were placed in regular classes with her normal students. EMH students require constant motivation.

Mrs. O'Shea, who received her training in secondary education, was surprised by the eagerness of the elementary school pupils to learn. She does, however, have difficulty presenting certain art concepts to the students because they have no background in art.

Mrs. Patricia Braxton, a senior from Carbondale, had only one apprehension her first day in the classroom. How would she, as a Negro, be received by her predominantly white class? (There was only one Negro student.) So far, she has encountered no racial problems.

Perhaps the greatest problem encountered by the student teacher is not knowing what to expect from the children. Such was the opinion expressed by Mrs. Kathryn Akin, a senior majoring in elementary education.

The student teacher, said Mrs. Akin, gets a good deal of satisfaction from knowing that her students understand the material being presented to them. "It makes you feel good to know that they're following you. They're very quiet and then there's a show of hands."

Mrs. Akin's most memorable experience? Two girls in her class returned from a science field trip and presented her with a bouquet of "pepper plants and clover."

Students Booked On Liquor Charge

Police arrested two SIU students, Stephen P. Hansen, 18, and Charles L. Dixon, 19, for allegedly drinking alcoholic beverages on the corner of University and College streets Sunday morning.

Hansen, who fled from the patrolmen, was charged with illegal transportation of liquor, underage acceptance of liquor, resisting arrest and with being drunk and disorderly.

Dixon was charged with illegal transportation and underage acceptance.

The students live in Schneider Tower.

Chinese Student Wins $200, Stamberg Memorial Award

A student from Hong Kong has been granted the annual Frank F. Stamberg Memorial Award.

Joseph K. Wai, senior in accounting, is the recipient of the $200 scholarship. It was presented at a meeting in the University's School of Business by Frank C. Adams, director of the Student Work and Financial Assistance Program. Also attending the meeting were Dean Robert S. Hancock of the School of Business, Henry Rehn, professor of management, and a close friend of the Stamberg family, and Mrs. Frank Stamberg, widow of the former faculty member of SIU's department of business who had a strong feeling for international students.

The award is given annually to an international student at SIU who will return to his native country as a potential leader. Selection also is based on academic standing and character.

Wai, president of the Chinese Student Club, is a 1963 graduate of Wah Yan College in Hong Kong. He came to SIU in 1965 and will complete requirements for a bachelor's degree in business in the fall quarter. Being interested in business management and banking, he plans to help his father, Mr. King C. Wai, operate their family business, a nautical supplies firm, or work with a bank in Hong Kong.

The Chinese student is the third recipient of the award.

City Changeover Blamed for March Walkout

Noting that under a change in the form of government, new communication lines and methods of operation must be developed, the report stated, "The employees did not allow enough time for this to happen. They acted too quickly in leaving their jobs."

After investigation of the police department, where the trouble started, the report cited deficiencies of the department and the manner in which Wilhelmy, who was in charge of both the police and fire departments, attempted to solve them as the cause of conflict.

"When Mr. Wilhelmy was hired, rumors were already circulating that one of his functions was to revamp the Police Department, including the discharge of Chief Hazel."

This rumor coupled with the "brusk approach" Wilhelmy used in his tactics prevented him from obtaining the department's loyalty.

Former SIU Letterman Killed After First Week in Vietnam

David Cronin, who played varsity football at SIU for three years before he was graduated in 1967, was buried near his home in Oak Park last week. He was killed in action while serving in Vietnam.

Cronin was a three-time letter winner for Southern during the 1964, 1965 and 1966 seasons. He was a starting defensive guard in his sophomore and junior years before switching to the right line-backer position his senior year.

"He thrived on SIU football," said his mother, Mrs. John Cronin. "He favored the entire coaching staff, but he especially had high regard for Coach (Pat) Naughton." Naughton, who was the defensive line coach for Southern, resigned earlier in the year to take a similar post at Northwestern.

"He wanted to travel around the country after he graduated," explained Mrs. Cronin, "but he felt that he had to get his service out of the way first. He didn't want it hanging over his head."

Cronin, who was drafted just 10 days after he received his degree in business, served with the first infantry in Vietnam where he was killed after one week, and fighting on the front line one day.

"He loved playing football," said Mrs. Cronin. "He was always nervous before the game but settled down and gave it all he could."

"In fact, he approached the service much like he did a football game. He was highly nervous to begin with but he felt he had to give what he could."

Outside support from persons not connected with the city government and the employee classification plan were cited as other sources of discontent.

The support of outsiders, some of whom were prominent citizens, was not in the direction of seeking a solution to the city employees' grievances but in trying to change the city's personnel.

A plan to institute an employee classification plan, which required each employee to describe in writing the duties he performed, caused much suspicion among the employees, the report stated. Many felt that this plan was an attempt to obtain information which could be used to fire them. Much of this misunderstanding fell on the department heads who took little time to explain the purpose of the plan, partly because they did not understand the plan themselves.

After discussing the causes of the employee walkout, the board offered the following recommendations:

- Personnel matters should have high priority.

- Department heads should engage in a personnel training program.

- New practices and policies should be explained thoroughly.

- After a practice is adopted, all supervisors and employees are expected to live up to any changes in the policy of written directives.

-- All responsible citizens of Carbondale should encourage the city government in this endeavor.

- City government deficiencies should be clearly pointed out to the employees and discussed with their representatives.

- Policy changes that are agreed upon should be put in writing.

- Police department recommendations: upgrading of salaries, instituting a development training program, budget expansion, evaluation of members and the hiring of consultants.

- Creation of a grievance board.

- Inform the public of changes in policies and programs undertaken by the city government.

Skydiving Club Offers Fun and Excitement

By Barb Leebens

The pure joy of a free fall, the feeling of the clean, high altitude air whipping past your ears and the roar of the engine as the plane climbs higher, all blend to make skydiving one of the more popular new sports for SIU students.

Fred Weinert, president of the SIU Parachute Club, is one of the most enthusiastic and calls it "the fastest growing and most exciting sport today."

The club has won a number of team honors beginning in 1964 when it won the Collegiate Parachute Championship. Rated number one in the nation the following year, the club finished second in the finals. SIU won the National Collegiate Novice title this year and was also awarded the first Sportsmanship Trophy ever presented.

Weinert, also an avid snow skier, took to the sky when the hills became overcrowded. "I wanted to find out what everyone was talking about, so in 1963 I made my first jump," he said. "The beauty and the quietness of the sky was something I had never experienced before -- it's indescribable."

Weinert stressed that top physical conditioning is a must for skydiving. To join the SIU club, an individual must undergo 30 hours of ground training, pass an extensive physical examination, and if under 21 must have parental consent.

Most equipment needed by the beginner is furnished by the club. A $10 club due is paid each quarter; $25 is the cost of the first jump, $10 for the second and $2 for each jump thereafter. The beginner has 10 jumps in which his chute is opened automatically before he is allowed to try a free fall.

"SIU has one of the best safety records in the country," Weinert said. "Since the conception of the club in 1963, our members have suffered only one broken ankle and one broken leg. Unfortunately, I was one of the victims."

Weinert received a compound fracture of the left leg in March while trying to avoid landing on top of a barbed wire fence.

Competition is an important phase of skydiving. The object is to land as close as possible to a target called the "dead center."

"To obtain a dead center, it takes a lot of agility, endurance and many, many hours of training and practice," Weinert said. "Out of the 25 advanced jumpers in the club, I'd say that only 5 or 6 have secured this goal."

A "dead center" is about four inches in diameter or about the width of your hand. Scoring a dead center can be compared to a hole in one in golf, a 300-game in bowling, or a perfect game in baseball.

"There are a lot of factors that affect every jump," Weinert added. "So that every jump that you make is different. A person must consider the altitude from which he jumps, the speed of the airplane, the wind velocity, how heavy he is, and the angle at which he descends."

The SIU club makes most of its jumps in the Sparta area during the summer. Just as other clubs have social functions, the SIU parachute club also has its share of parties.
