SIU Trustees ax programs

By Tracy Moss
Special Assignment Writer

The SIU Board of Trustees eliminated 12 SIUC academic programs Thursday, as part of a year long effort to make the University more efficient and save an estimated $2 million.

The University began cutting resources, including the 12 academic eliminations, last summer when the Illinois Board of Higher Education released the Priorities: Quality and Productivity report that required all state universities to initiate cutbacks.

SIUC President, John C. Guyon, said the past year was a big one in reference to the university community's reaction to the IBHE proposed cutbacks.

"I sincerely hope that we do not have to do it again next year or the year after," Guyon said. "It has been tough and it's been a process that was seemingly necessary and handled well by the institution, faculty and staff in a collegial way."

Although the academic program eliminations have been finalized, the financial cutbacks as a result of the PQP process will continue into the next two years.

Guyon said the University will deal with internal reallocation of resources through the next few years.

"There is an internal reallocation from the vice president of administration area of about 10% over the next two years and in the student affairs area a similar amount over the same timeline," he said. "That will result in a reduction of services in the administration and student affairs areas."

John Haller, vice chancellor of SIUC, said the board will present its POP report to the IBHE in October and in November the IBHE board will respond to the PQP reports of all 12 state universities.

'Great flood' takes its toll on riverside

Los Angeles Times

DAVENPORT, Iowa—The story of how the great flood of 1993 has taken its toll on the Mississippi river towns of Davenport, Iowa, and Hannibal, Mo., is the old fable of the grasshopper and the ant — one unprepared for catastrophe, the other well-protected.

But the end of the story has yet to unfold, and that is what worries people in Hannibal and scores of other riverfront towns, praying their flood walls and levees are strong enough to ward off the Mississippi's surging waters.

In Davenport, the damage already has been done — more than $100 million worth — and all that the city's flood-weary merchants and residents can do is ride out the massive tide and mull over whether to build a levee for the torrent next time.

The Mississippi and its many tributaries have been swollen by torrential rains, which continue throughout the region.

The Mississippi has spilled over two miles beyond its natural level — up to seven miles north of St. Louis freezing all barge shipments between St. Paul and St. Louis and flooding tens of thousands of acres of Midwestern farmland. At least 12 people have drowned after underestimating the river's flood-bolstered currents. And farmers unable to plant soy, corn and other crops already have lost more than $1 billion, Bruce Weber, acting administrator for the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Wednesday.

Campus project to provide offices for merged plant

By Jonathan Senft
General Assignment Writer

A $150,000 construction project has begun on campus that will allow office space for the merger of the SIUC Service Enterprises and the Physical Plant.

The Physical Plant will undergo the addition of 13 private offices, a conference room and a general office that has space for ten workers. Construction at the plant began July 30 and is expected to be finished in October.

Alan Haake, SIUC University Architect, said the addition primarily will use the labor of physical plant employees, however some outside contracting must be done for concrete work.

"The Physical Plant employees that are working on the project are usually working on maintenance during the school year," he said. "Normally, SIUC has to hire outside for these projects."

Haake added that the architecture

Freeze proposal causes hot debate

By Candace Samolinski
Administration Writer

A heated debate over a bill to freeze funding for registered student organizations dominated the SIUC Undergraduate Student Government meeting Wednesday.

The bill would freeze all fee allocations for fiscal year 1994 for 60 days, but would not interfere with summer programming and would allow funds for daily operations.

Mike Spiwak, president of USG, said a bill created in 1991 allows priority-one registered student organizations to receive a set percentage of annual funding.

"The bill was designed to allow for off-the-top funding for the five priority-one organizations," Spiwak said. "A certain percentage is given to each of them."

"This percentage is subject to review every two years and will come up in the fall," he said. "We are taking this action to get the ball rolling."

The five priority-one organizations targeted by the bill include: black affairs council, undergraduate student government, inter-greek council, international student council and student programming council.

USG seems concerned with eliminating excess spending in the areas where most funds are allocated.

Lorenzo Henderson, vice president of USG, said the bill was an example of what the students can expect from the new administration

Legislators continue to negotiate state budget

By Bill Kugelberg
Politics Writer

As the state budget negotiations wear on, two Southern Illinois lawmakers are at odds over what is causing the gridlock.

Illinois legislators have failed to pass a state budget since negotiations started June 21. Late last week, Senate President James "Pate" Philip, R-Wood Dale, told budget negotiators to take the .25 percent income tax surcharge out of the budget. Philip then reversed his stance this week following a disagreement on the topic with Gov. Jim Edgar.

Since the budget was not passed by June 30, it now requires a three-fifths vote instead of a simple majority of half plus one.

Sen. Ra'ah Dunn, R-Du Quoin, blames the Senate Democrats for the delay in passing a state budget.

"We are not getting anywhere," he said. "The Republicans are trying to get this budget done and get out of here. But everytime we reach an agreement, the Senate Democrats find something else to disagree on."

But Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said the budget roadblock is being caused by many things, including the state's $6.30-a-day tax on nursing home residents, also known as the Granny Tax.

"We are trying to find somewhere to cut $150 million," Rea said. "We have some agreement along the lines of $75-$80 million, but those negotiations are on-going."

Legislative leaders are trying to shift $150 million from Gov. Jim Edgar's original budget plan.

Dunn said the two sides are disagreeing on where to shift the money from.

"The Democrats want to put more money in the budget for welfare, but we want to put that money into education," Dunn said.

Edgar said earlier in the negotiations that state workers will not get paid and programs that rely

Cavaliers invite Amaya to camp

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

Picture this sequence: Mark Price fakes the three and passes to Ashraf Amaya for the two-handed slam.

That might be stretching things, but Amaya will get a shot with the Cleveland Cavaliers next week when he attends their week-long rookie camp.

Amaya

The Cavs had been rumored as one of the teams interested in drafting the ex-Saluki, but highly-touted Chris Mills of Arizona still was available when the Cavs picked at No. 22 in the draft.

Despite his invitation to the camp, Amaya's future recently was questioned when he did not make an NBA draft bid last week.

Amaya's representative, Bill Neff, said he thought the Cavs were considering drafting Amaya before they invited him to the camp.

"I would say they gave it some thought, but since they did not have a second-round pick, they were surprised Mills still was available, so they took him," Neff said.

Amaya will be competing with 17 other free agents and rookie when the camp opens on Sunday.

The squad will be trimmed to 10 or 12 players after three days and then sent to play against free agent/rookie teams from the Minnesota Timberwolves, Detroit Pistons and Indiana Pacers.

The Cavs have a couple of roster spots to fill and are looking for help at the forward position.

"They have said they want some young legs at the forward slots," Neff said.

"Nance is 34, Sanders and Ehlo are gone, and they are trying to trade Williams or Ferry," Neff said.

"But you have to figure Mills will be signed and fill one of those spots."

Neff said he has a busy summer planned for Amaya.

"We've already committed to the Lakers, and I want him to play in the Utah Summer League," Neff said. "Plus I'd like to get him to one more teams tryouts."

Neff said the Utah League is for players to get exposure to European scouts, while Denver, Houston, Portland and Dallas might be the third NBA camp.

Neff said it is unusual for a player to attend three camps, but it will give Amaya the most exposure.

"It's a meat-market, but my top priority is to get Amaya into the League," Neff said.

"Amaya said he can handle the hectic schedule and I think it will benefit him."

Neff said Amaya has been playing out in Sacramento the past week against other NBA hopefuls.

Amaya made his presence felt, scoring 21 points for the Sacramento Kings in one of the contests.

Neff said he feels confident about Amaya's chances of being signed to a team, whether it's in the NBA or in Europe.

"Everybody wants Amaya, so he will be signed," Neff said.

Gary Fitzimmons, director of player personnel for the Cavs, has ties to SIUC.

Fitzimmons played basketball for SIUC coach Paul Lambert during the 1976 and 1977 seasons.

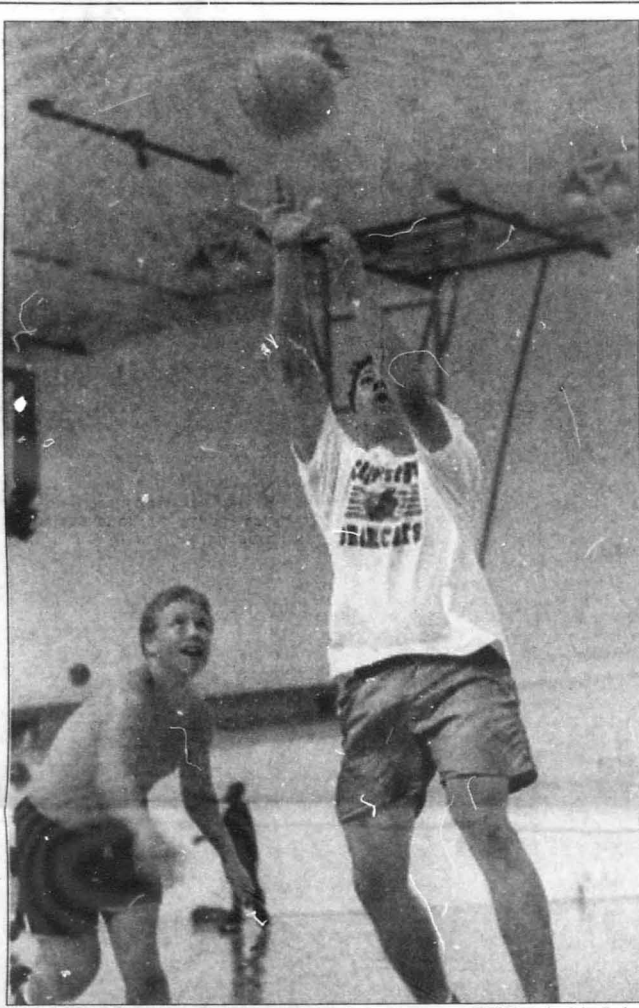

Fitzimmons confirmed the Cavs have roster slots open, and said they are looking for youth.

"Our age is in the front-court, with Nance, Daugherty and Williams," Fitzimmons said.

"We are not necessarily looking for replacements, but we are looking for young legs."

Fitzimmons said Amaya has the opportunity to make their team.

"I always tell young men it's nice to be drafted, but the important thing is to get an opportunity," Fitzimmons said. "Amaya has the opportunity, now he has to show us he belongs."

Firing becomes everyday part of baseball, managers must deal with sudden changes

The Sporting News

Firing a subordinate is one of those grim chores that may come up at any time in the business world. Although it can never be a thing to be proud of, a termination can be a considerate an humane parting of the ways, done with style and grace, with firmness and

Let the games begin: Three SIUC players travel this weekend to join some of Illinois' amateur athletes in the annual Prairie State Games

By Tre Roberts
Sports Writer

Over 11,000 amateur athletes from all parts of Illinois are expected to compete in an Olympic-style competition this weekend at the University of Illinois campus in Champaign-Urbana.

The Prairie State Games are open to anyone from Illinois and include a wide variety of events, from basketball to bicycle motocross racing, said Shawn Curtis, director of special events for the games and former SIUC graduate.

"The games are an amateur sports festival that anybody is welcome to compete in," Curtis said. "The state is divided up into eight different regions, and the athletes from each region, in each event, compete against each other. Each event is organized separately under a different coach." "All ages can compete," he said. "Mostly, the athletes are high

Some athletes representing SIUC will be participating in the games, said Bob McDonald, director of media relations.

"Tyron Bell, Marcus Timmons, and Chris Carr, from SIU's basketball team will be competing in three-on-three basketball this weekend," McDonald said. "We expect that there will be other

NIGERIA JOINS LIST OF AFRICAN DICTATORSHIPS — A few months ago, Nigeria appeared ready to join sub-Saharan Africa's democratic revolution. But by voiding results of elections for a civilian president and cracking down on protesters against the move, the continent's most populous nation now stands as the latest tragic example of an African military dictatorship clinging to power amid popular discontent.

RELIEF WORKERS PONDER LEAVING KURDS — The 100 or so foreign relief workers remaining in the autonomous Kurdish area of northern Iraq now travel only with a backup car crammed with armed guards and never venture out after dark. Since January, two Western aid workers and two Kurdish staffers have been killed, precipitating the departure of some relief agency employees. Those remaining are debating whether they should continue their work so far from assured protection.

FACTIONS THREATEN CAMBODIAN REGIME — Now that a transitional government is in place in Cambodia after U.N.-supervised elections in May, attention has turned to the question of what to do with the thousands of soldiers who fought during more than a decade of civil war. Like the proverbial loose cannon on a lurching ship, the armies of the country's four major factions remain a threat to the stability of the fledgling regime.

SOUTH AFRICAN TRIBES ERUPT INTO VIOLENCE — The closer you get to the violence rocking the townships on the southeast edge of this city, the more elusive the cause seems. From far away, the picture is much clearer. Tribes from Kathehong and neighboring Tokoza erupted in brutal fighting late last week that has left close to 100 dead. The round of violence started just after April 27, 1994, was set as the date for South Africa's first non-racial elections.

CASE COULD LOWER PRICE OF AIDS DRUG — The outcome of a lawsuit now unfolding in a North Carolina courtroom could determine whether AZT—the most widely prescribed anti-AIDS drug—can be marketed soon in a much cheaper generic version. Two drug companies are engaged in a battle with North Carolina-based Burroughs Wellcome Co., the drug's manufacturer, for the right to make and sell the drug at a lower price now—instead of waiting for the company's patent to expire in 2005.

AIRLINE COMMISSION WEIGHS DEREGULATION — Midway through its two-month odyssey, the commission probing the health of the nation's airlines found itself staring at a regulatory hand grenade. The issue: Is deregulation of airlines contributing to the industry's problems? If so, should anything be done about it? The man who rolled the grenade across the stage of the Commerce Department Auditorium last week was Felix Rohatyn—prominent investment banker, architect of New York City's budget rescue mission and head of the Commission to Ensure a Strong Competitive Airline Industry's working group probing the woeful financial status of the airline industry.

CONFUSION ABOUNDS IN MARKET COMMITTEE — At October's meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee, Federal Reserve Board member Lawrence Lindsey was one of only two of the 12 top Fed policy makers to push for an immediate cut in short-term interest rates. Just five months later, he was again in a minority of two—this time calling for a prompt increase in rates. Lindsey's "brup" shift from one side of the monetary policy debate to the other reflects the extraordinary uncertainty among the central bank's top policy-making panel.

Where children's safety is concerned, Anderson says, there's no room for subtlety.

Police in Herrin charge suspect in murder search

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
Police Writer

A Herrin man has been arrested in connection with the murder of an elderly Herrin woman with the motive of robbery.

Larry Jackson, 18, was arrested after confidential sources revealed a series of leads to the Herrin Police Department.

Jackson lives only four blocks from the home of the victim.

When Velma Carter, 86, of Herrin, did not respond to calls from a neighbor on July 1, the police was notified.

Officers of the Herrin Police Department discovered Carter's body in her home at 11:10 a.m.

Police said the cause of death was determined to be asphyxiation.

Jimmy Dean, of The Williamson County State's Attorney office, said the state is charging Jackson with four counts of murder.

Detective Mark Brown, of the Herrin Police Department, said that upon further interviews with associates of Jackson's, they considered they had gathered enough evidence to make an arrest and charge him with the murder.

Brown said Jackson did not know the woman and he is not suspected in any other crimes in the area.

Herrin Police determined that Jackson gained access to Carter's home by forced entry.

"We are 100 percent confident that we have the right person," Brown said. "There is no doubt in my mind."

Brown said this case is only the second homicide in Herrin within the last two years.

"It's not a major problem in Herrin," Brown said. "We have the usual burglaries and thefts, but as far as homicide goes it is no major problem."

Jackson is being held in the Williamson County jail for a $500,000 bond.

Park district seeks computer funds

By Shawna Donovan
City Writer

The Carbondale Park District is setting a new trend by computerizing operations.

The Administration and Finance Committee voted Tuesday night to summarize software information before presenting the fund request to the full park board and commissioners on July 29.

George Whitehead, Carbondale Park District director, said the committee will be requesting the allocation of $20,000 in the budget to cover expenses.

"We are going with the figure of $20,000 to be safe," Whitehead said. "It will benefit us greatly if we can implement an organized system. I have been known to leave a paper trail."

The software vendors have been narrowed down to two companies that the committee is planning to examine more closely before requesting the finances. Computer hardware will be purchased by money included in the proposed $20,000.

Whitehead said the extra money will put a strain on the overall budget.

"It is going to be a tough year because we have extra expenses with the golf course development and construction," Whitehead said. "It will not be that big of a deal because we will have the revenue the golf course has generated to put into the funds."

Woody Thorne, committee chairman, said computers will efficiently run the district.

"You can get programs to run your whole house," Thorne said. "I think we need it and it will benefit us by providing organization."

The computerization would interconnect three park offices in Carbondale by a network. The administrative office of the Park District would be computerized first with other offices to follow.

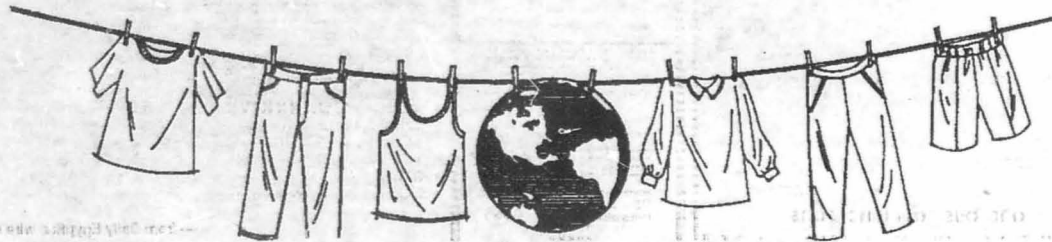

A study was conducted by Steve Sims and graduate students of the SIUC Recreation Department on the necessity of computerization.

Steve Sims, assistant recreation professor, said the computerization assessment showed the system would be cost effective.

"The district is supplied by taxes and everyone is complaining about how the

Timber plan helps our troubled forests

PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON'S timber-management plan to break the deadlock on timber cutting in the Pacific Northwest has received a mixed greeting.

As Clinton's plan does its utmost to strike a balancing act between environmentalists and loggers, both sides lament dissatisfaction.

By reducing two-thirds the amount of timber usually cut in Northwestern forests, fear grips the heart of the logging industry. On the other side, environmentalists speak of loopholes and wish for fewer risks and stronger guarantees.

But Clinton anticipated the mixed bag of emotions, as he should have and provided a plan to accommodate both sides while preserving the interests of the ecosystems.

Although Clinton's timber compromise will not drastically change timber policies, it does provide a blueprint that cultivates awareness, allows for some cutting and seeks to protect the northern spotted owl.

SUCH A BLUEPRINT IS ESPECIALLY welcome considering it stands out in contrast to efforts practiced by the Bush and Reagan administrations.

Timber sales reached 5 billion board feet a year during the Reagan and Bush administrations whereas Clinton's plan would reduce that to 1.2 billion a year.

Clinton's plan not only attempts to protect the exploited ecosystem but also to soften the effects to the industry. To this end, Clinton is offering $1.2 billion in economic aid and cutting incentives to ship mill jobs overseas.

BECAUSE OF THE EXCESSIVE LOGGING of the past, however, the changes made in the compromise are necessary if the government is to avoid future endangered listings of other Northwest species.

The plan, which still has to be submitted to a federal judge, provides a good indication that Clinton will put his pro-environmental interests over business interests as he maintains an optimal balance.

The compromise does not regulate timber policies in the Shawnee National Forest, but the symbolic effect must be recognized.

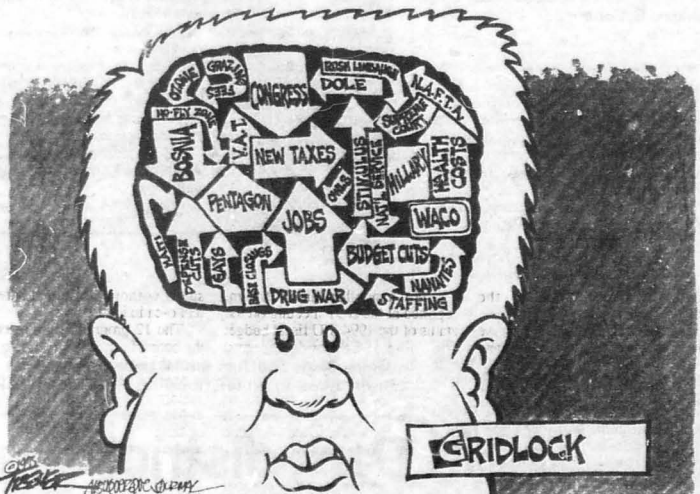

Such a plan demonstrates awareness and concern for the environment and provides a step in the right direction.

The Clinton administration has demonstrated this concern in an earlier plan that would affect the Shawnee National Forest. The proposal would save $274 million from 1994 to 1997 by phasing out below-cost timber sales.

THE TIMBER COMPROMISE WAS NOT meant to satisfy everyone, but it does take a stab at protecting the ecosystems in the Pacific Northwest.

By reducing the amount of timber cut, the Clinton administration is delineating a separate path from the failed policies of the past that have pushed the spotted owl to extinction.

The plan also sends a message to the rest of the world that we have a president who will take action to protect the environment while retaining the interests of the timber industry.

Japan winning economic war because of Vietnam embargo

The Washington Post

As of spring, Taiwan, Hong Kong, France, Australia and Britain had signed deals worth $4.6 billion. Japan is just getting started.

Its companies have signed somewhere in the neighborhood of half a billion dollars worth of deals as of year-end 1992. Moreover, all of Japan's Big Nine trading companies are combing Vietnam in search of business opportunities.

The U.S. is again losing a major battle in Vietnam — a battle for economic position.

The U.S. decision not to oppose multilateral loans to Hanoi will make even more credit available to the government, although thanks to the embargo, U.S. firms will not get any of the resulting business.

Mitsubishi has done nothing less than provide Hanoi with a blueprint for building a national automobile industry from the ground up.

"The Master Plan" starts with projections for how Vietnam's industrial structure will evolve. It envisions the Vietnam economy moving away from its current reliance on the extraction of raw materials by developing significant machinery, electronics, petrochemical and processed-agricultural-products industries.

It discusses why the Vietnamese need to use ground transportation systems more and waterways less. It offers predictions about the specific shares of the country's cargo that will be carried by roads, railroads, inland waterways and ocean-going vessels measured in terms of passengers and tonnage. Mitsubishi has also estimated the growth of Vietnamese motor vehicle demand through 2005.

Most important, Mitsubishi has provided the Vietnamese with detailed production schedules for both vehicles and parts. The "Master Plan" explains how the production of different types of vehicles and components promotes economic development goals not only by filling transportation needs, but by expanding a country's manufacturing and technology base.

Vietnam has not yet approved the plan. In fact, Hanoi understands the hazards of dealing exclusively with the Japanese and would like nothing better than a big American and European corporate presence as a counter-weight. But Vietnam remains a desperately poor country and cannot afford to keep the Japanese on hold forever.

The POW-MIA issue cannot be dismissed lightly, but U.S. policymakers must look forward as well as backward. All wars have produced large numbers of MIA cases that have never been resolved—more than 7,500 from the Korean War, more than 75,000 from World War II.

The larger irony is that America fought so long in Vietnam at such frightful cost largely to keep Vietnam within the free world's economic orbit—and therefore accessible to American businesses and workers.

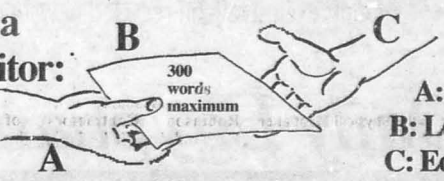

Now that the Vietnamese communists are frank about their eagerness for American goods and capital, we still have our backs turned. Talk about a sacrifice in vain.

on state money will not be able to function if a budget is not approved by Tuesday.

But Rea said he wants to prevent that from happening.

"If a budget is not passed by Tuesday," he said, "the solution would be to pass a temporary state budget in order to meet the state's payroll."

"I hope it does not come to that because that would probably prolong the negotiations."

Both senators said they are hoping for an end to the budget stalemate, but are not sure when it will happen.

"I am hoping one of two things happen," Rea said. "One, we will stay and get this worked out by the end of the week or we will go home this weekend and vote on the budget on Tuesday."

Dunn said he cannot see an end to the crisis.

"Right now, it is just a matter of will and see," Dunn said. "It is not easy to come to a compromise when you have four different sets of people trying to come to an agreement."

Today marks the ninth day Illinois has gone without a state budget.

"We expect to receive areas of comment from IBHE on the report," Haller said.

The board also voted to eliminate the College of Communication and Fine Arts, but approved the creation of a College of Mass Communication and Media Arts to replace the abolished CCA and approved the creation of a new Medical School department, the department of neurology.

William Elliott, chairman of the Phoenix Committee which drafted the proposal for the communication college, said the committee will meet today with Benjamin Shepherd, Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost, to plan an internal search for a dean of the new college.

"We are delighted and very excited that the college was approved," he said. "Potentially we were more concerned at prior board meetings that the college would not be approved, but we were confident it would pass today."

The Phoenix committee began forming a proposal for a new college last fall when the university's long range planning committee proposed the elimination of CCA. The planning committee was proposing cuts in reaction to the IBHE's PQP initiative.

SIU Chancellor James Brown, reported at the BOT meeting on the status of the 1994 SIU fiscal budget for the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses.

Brown said in light of the General Assembly's failure to approve a budget, SIU may not receive appropriated funds in time to pay university employees on July 16.

"This happened two years ago when the legislature stayed in session until July 19 and we worked out an arrangement with local banking institutions to lend the payroll money to individuals who were due pay," Brown said. "It worked very well and if we are faced with this situation again, I anticipate we will have a similar, smooth resolution of the problem."

Brown said the board is currently negotiating with lending institutions in case the state does not appropriate funds.

SIU will ask the state for $252.6 million to operate the University during the 1994 fiscal year. This figure is $9.6 million more than Gov. Jim Edgar proposed in his budget.

These figures will produce a maintenance budget, Brown said.

"This will keep our libraries from losing further ground and will let us pay utility bills and open new space without additional internal reallocations," he said.

The 12 programs eliminated by the board Thursday are as follows:

- In the College of Science
  - Master of Arts degree in plant biology
  - Master of Science degree in statistics
  - Master of Arts degree in zoology
- In the College of Technical Careers
  - Associate degree in avionics technology
  - Associate degree in computer information processing
  - Associate degree in law enforcement
- In the Graduate School
  - Doctoral degree in molecular science
  - In the College of Education
    - Doctoral degree in higher education
  - In the College of Liberal Arts

in the future.

"I commend the senators for the message we are trying to send," Henderson said. "We have a goal to eliminate waste in the expenditures of these organizations and we have to start somewhere to reach it."

Melanie Skeens, chairperson of the finance committee, said one of the priorities of the finance committee is to restructure the way the money is distributed.

"The committee is working on a proposition to be presented in the fall," Skeens said. "When the new senators come back we want to have something concrete for them so they can see this can be done."

Willie Chatman, senator for the SIUC College of Agriculture, said the bill's construction was discussed with USG members before the meeting and they seemed to be in agreement.

"Before going into the meeting I thought I had a preliminary consensus," Chatman said. "There was a lot of misunderstanding about what we were trying to do and it got out of hand."

"We currently have $19,000 to work with and $5,000 of it was supposed to be spent this summer," he said. "We had to do something or we would run out of funding."

Chatman said the priority-one organizations receive 69.1 percent of the funding from the student activity fee in FY 94. The remaining priority-two organizations receive 30.9 percent of the funding. Of $344,277 distributed by USG priority one RSOs receive the following:

- Black Affairs Council $29,610
- Inter-Greek Council $18,935
- International Student Council $27,540
- Student Programming Council $113,610
- Undergraduate Student Government $43,200

Several RSOs were surprised by the discussion of the bill and the way it was announced.

Tara Hielema, SPC committee chairperson for expressive arts, said the organization learned the bill would be discussed through an ad in the paper.

"The way in which this bill was proposed was ineffective, we didn't have time to prepare a proper defense for our organization," she said. "If we hadn't seen the ad in the paper we probably would not have even gone to the meeting."

Spiwak said SPC's scheduling of programs for the fall is considered part of daily operations and will not be affected.

Gerald Carter, a member of the veterans club, said he supports the bill and hopes it will give priority-two organizations more money.

"The veterans club is one of the smaller clubs on campus," he said. "Veterans make up about 22 percent of the student body at SIUC, but we couldn't even get enough money to have a parade on Memorial Day."

Barton Taylor, a member of BAC, said he would be in favor of itemizing expenditures before money is given out.

"It depends on how much will be cut, but we already itemize everything we spend," he said. "I think some organizations receive too much funding and the other student organizations don't receive enough."

"We often have clubs come to us and we co-sponsor them so they can do activities they otherwise could not afford to do," he said.

The USG finance committee met Thursday evening to draft a memo explaining the situation to all registered student organizations.

Skeens said by clarifying what USG is trying to accomplish more people will be satisfied with the changes.

"We hope everyone will get a better understanding of what we are trying to do," Skeens said.

engineering and plumbing was done by SIUC workers.

The purpose of the addition is to make room for the SIUC Service Enterprises workers that will be working in the Physical Plant after the two merge.

SIUC Plant and Services Operation is the new title of the combination of offices, he said.

Aside from the work of the SIUC tradesmen, J and L Robinson Contractors of Carbondale will be laying the concrete for the steps and wheelchair ramp.

Cliff Banks, carpenter for J and L Robinson, said the concrete work will take about one week. They started work on the project three days ago.

Commander hopes to increase enrollment

By Sean L. N. Hao
General Assignment Writer

Force, resulted in enrollment numbers that are half what once

SIUC's new Air Force ROTC commander Lt. Col. Gale R. Bucholtz, hopes to end the continual drop in cadet enrollment.

Bucholtz was assigned to the three year post on July 1, filling the position vacated by retired Lt. Col. Danny R. Fowler.

Bucholtz, who also served in Korea and at the Colorado Space Command on electronic security systems, said the Air Force ROTC program is nothing new to him.

"I was an assistant professor in the program at the University of Maryland, so I have four years of experience in recruiting, selecting and training," he said. "I also went through this program as a cadet at the University of Wisconsin."

Bucholtz said the Air Force ROTC program has changed since the years he spent as a cadet.

"The academic program is the same, but our physical requirements have improved significantly," he said. "The old physical requirements were just to run 1.5 miles in a basic time."

"Now the new test includes five events... sit-ups, pull-ups, push-ups, standing broad jump, and a 600 yard run," Bucholtz said.

Bucholtz said the down-sizing of the military lowered the chances of cadets getting preferred assignments.

"When I went through the program there was a fairly good opportunity to become a pilot in the Air Force, but now it's very difficult to get a pilots slot," he said.

Bucholtz said shrinking the Air

were, because it cut down the number of available pilot positions.

"That has hurt the overall size of our program nationwide, because cadets don't have the opportunities to become pilots," he said.

Bucholtz said the Air Force has more to offer than pilot seats.

"The Air Force has a number of technical areas, computer science, math, physics, and people in these backgrounds have a lot of success," he said.

Once student, graduate they enter as active Air Force officers for a four year term.

Bucholtz said officers completing their four-year contract have a wider range of opportunities.

"There are a number of companies looking for Air Force officers, because they need mid-level managers that have experience," he said. "And as an officer you get a whole lot more experience than many companies can offer you in two years."

Bucholtz said he does not expect enrollment to continue to drop.

"I would be surprised if it went any lower because we offer a lot to the college graduate in terms of experience and pay," he said.

"The Air Force has added a new Junior and Senior incentive scholarship program which gives every contracted cadet $1000 a semester plus $100 dollars a month," Bucholtz said.

Thief runs away with motor, leaves victim feeling bitter

Everett Page of Carbondale was outraged Tuesday morning when he discovered that the outboard motor of his son's boat was stolen.

A 9.9 horsepower outboard motor was taken from Page's boat sometime between 1 p.m. July 5 and 11 a.m. July 7.

Page, 56, of 1931 S. Illinois Avenue, said he was with his son working on his boat when his son pointed out that the motor of his boat was missing.

Page said his son put the boat in the yard to sell because he needed money to pay for medical expenses.

"When you work as many hours as he does to get money to pay doctor bills and someone steals your boat, it can make a man bitter," Page said.

The Carbondale Police Department said no arrests have been made and there are no suspects.

Police estimate the loss at $725. Anyone with information is asked to contact the Carbondale Police Department non-emergency line at 457-3200.

Hurricane claims 37 lives

Los Angeles Times

ACAPULCO, Mexico—Dave and Lori Dyer were changing planes in the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport when they learned that they were headed for the same place that Hurricane Calvin was leaving: Acapulco.

"We just laughed," Dyer said Thursday, as he watched workers clear the seaweed, branches and rubbish from the beach outside their hotel here. "We went to St. Croix right after Hugo hit. That's what we do for vacation. We follow hurricanes around."

Calvin was downgraded to a tropical storm early Thursday, before it swept across the southern Baja California peninsula and out to sea. But along the way, since Monday, it had reached wind speeds of up to 110 mph, claimed at least 37 lives according to the Defense Department.

A state of emergency has been declared in areas covering about one-third of the country, as roads have been flooded, communications cut off and ports closed. Entire villages in the poor southern state of Oaxaca have been swept away by rains that accompanied the hurricane.

Musical romance at McLeod

'The Fantasticks' inaugurates series of summer plays

By Karen Ham
Entertainment Writer

The musical 'The Fantasticks' opens tonight as part of the McLeod Theater Summer Playhouse.

The fathers' reverse psychology, working on the assumption that kids will do everything you tell them not to, pull Luisa and Matt together, and apart, and together again.

The story, narrated by El Gallo, a suave and flamboyant gypsy played by John McGhee, is told through powerful and memorable songs.

"Try to Remember," the play's romantic melody, is sung by McGhee in his unforgettably moving tone.

Comic relief is provided by Henry, played by Jason Jones and Mortimer, played by Christian Lisak.

Henry and Mortimer are second-rate bandits hired by El Gallo. The two bumble and fall all over the stage and literally steal the show with their obvious humor.

The music, provided by a four-piece orchestra, adjusts to the mood swings of the show. From Luisa's soft, romantic pieces to the fathers' loud, booming acts, the orchestra added a solid ground for the voices to work with.

"The music is good, with long lasting numbers that people remember," Moe said. "With most musicals you're lucky if you can remember one song."

Moe said the actors, some new to McLeod's stage, have impressed him with their effort.

"The cast has been hard working and I'm impressed with their perfection of the material and the direction," Moe said. "There were new faces coming in and everything worked well."

"The Fantasticks" opens tonight and plays July 10-11 and July 15-18. The play begins at 2 p.m. on Sundays and 8 p.m. on all other days. The July 11 matinee will be signed for the hearing impaired.

Tickets can be purchased at the McLeod Theater box office 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday. For more information, call 453-3001.

The longest running romance musical takes center stage tonight as "The Fantasticks" starts McLeod Theater's Summer Playhouse.

"The Fantasticks," has been playing theaters nation-wide for nearly 40 years and tells a modern "Romeo and Juliet" tale through two young lovers, Luisa and Matt, played by Jillian Gent and Darren G. Zipperer.

Director Christian Moe said Summer Playhouse's version of the musical varies little from the original.

"The original was written and produced for a smaller theater," Moe said. "Our production covers more of the stage. The actors give the effect of performing a play within a play, a stage within a stage. It's a very theatrical, very illusionary."

The stage, simple, yet functional, leaves the actors ample room to stir the audiences' imagination.

A multi-purpose mute, played by Anita L. Rich, provides most of the setting by miming objects, like the wall separating the two feuding neighbors' yards in which most of the play is centered.

The neighbors, fathers of Luisa and Matt, played by the Eric Ewan and William Kirksey, pretend to feud to keep their children together.

Picketing stopped at restaurant despite use of out-of-state labor

Jeff McIntire
Business Writer

The picket lines at the Fazoli's Italian Restaurant construction site on East Main Street have withdrawn despite their failure to come to terms with the construction company.

The local painting and allied trades union and the local carpenters' union staged pickets two weeks ago to protest the failure of the contracting company to employ local workers. Negotiations between the unions and the contracting company have been unsuccessful.

The picketing, however, has stopped, despite the fact that union leaders anticipate no concessions by the contractor.

David Perko, spokesman for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local Union no. 638 said he does not think an agreement will be reached but he pulled his picket lines because the carpentry work at the site is finished.

"We're still trying to work an agreement out, but I don't think it's going to work out," he said. "I feel that the construction company has stated their opinion and I don't think they'll hire any local people."

Ronald L. Osborne of the International Brotherhood of Painters and Allied Trades Local Union no. 32 said the restaurant company can influence the decision to hire local subcontractors.

The Wal-Mart contractors had originally hired about one third of their work force from out-of-state, but after some picketing by Osborne's union, Wal-Mart was able to pressure the contractors into hiring more local help, Osborne said.

"Wal-Mart seemed concerned about the local welfare, but the restaurant owners seem to think that people will eat at the restaurant whether or not they hire local workers," he said. "The company does have a lot of impact in decisions like this."

Osborne said that he pulled his picket lines as an act of good faith in anticipation that the contractors would make an accommodation.

"Besides the union standpoint, we were hoping they'd hire some local help."

Morgan Allen spokesman for Fazoli's said the construction of the restaurant was to be finished July 14.

Allen said his restaurant company decides which contractor to hire, but doesn't decide which subcontractors are hired to work at the site.

Bottom contracting in Lexington, Ky. was hired by the restaurant owners, but no representative was available for comment.

Allen said he doesn't know why local subcontractors were not hired, but he is not trying to hurt the local economy.

"We're not sure why local subcontractors weren't hired," he said. "We're not trying to come into the community and do any ill will."

Osborne said when the store opens his union will be handing out hand bills to patrons in hopes they can be convinced not to do business with the restaurant.

Disabled SIUE student files suit against housing

By Patti Dulik
General Assignment Writer

An SIUE student filed suit against the university claiming the school overcharged him for handicapped-accessible housing last year and missed tuition funds.

Jim Schottel said he signed a housing contract for $230 a month but was charged $268 instead. When he had to break his contract and move to a larger apartment which would allow a full-time care attendant, Schottel said the university took the housing payments from a tuition fund.

Schottel, a quadriplegic, moved into a university-owned, private handicapped-accessible apartment in late September of last year.

He said he could not live in the semi-private handicapped-accessible rooms offered because of his condition. Because Schottel's physical condition began to decline, he had to break his housing contract in January.

"Previously, I had an attendant come once during the day and then once at night to turn me," he said. "I started getting sores on my hips because I was laying in the same position for too long." "I wasn't going to ask an attendant to come back to my place several times a night," he said. "It would be inconvenient and tiring for the attendant and just plain ridiculous."

Schottel said because the university housing was not big enough for a full-time care attendant, he needed to move.

Jim Anderson, associate director of SIUE's University Housing, said students with an approved housing cancellation for last year's winter quarter were required to submit it to housing between Dec. 16 and Feb. 15.

Anderson said according to the University Housing contract, after cancellation, students must pay through February.

Schottel said he attained a letter from his doctor, dated Dec. 14, stating his reasons for moving from the apartment.

Schottel said he could not find anyone from the housing contract office to give the letter to because of the upcoming winter break. Instead, the housing office received the letter Jan. 3.

Schottel said he moved Jan. 9 and was charged for the month of February. He said he does not think he should have to pay for February if he was not living there at the time.

Schottel also said that no one told him he would be paying the price of a private room. He said considerations should be made by housing because his medical condition warranted a private room.

"SIUE doesn't try to suit the needs of the disabled," he said. "I'm being charged extra because I needed different arrangements to fit my condition."

Mike Schultz, director of SIUE's university housing, said there has not been a big need for handicapped-accessible apartments at SIUE.

Since he arrive at SIUE four years ago, he said Schottel was the fourth disabled student to live at the Tower Lake apartment complex.

Schultz said eight apartments have been converted into handicapped-accessible and are rented to students.

He thinks Schottel did not understand the terms of his housing contract.

He said Schottel was told about the extra $38, the added cost every student pays for a private room, and should have to deal with the standard penalties for breaking a housing contract.

money is spent," Sims said. "The system would save money in the long run but they would have to put out some capital investment in the beginning."

The computerization is not perceived as a threat but rather an enhancement of the staff's ability to be more effective and productive.

The system will offer payroll, general ledger, accounting, forecasting and tracking, brochure publication, applications, managing programs and efficiency reports services. Special services include sports and employee scheduling, pool monitoring, vegetation control and tracking and vehicle tracking.

The committee will recommend the implementation of the computer system during the first six months of fiscal year 1994.

Thorne said if they are going to implement the system, they should do it on a timely basis.

"If we are going to get it done we should do it as soon as possible," Thorne said. "We are going to wait to see an on-sight demonstration by some of the customers that already have the systems. We need to look first before we put in a monetary commitment."

Park districts ranging from north to central Illinois have a computerized system. Committee members are going to be traveling to some park districts there to view these systems.

Larry Juhlman, a committee member, said the system is a good idea but the report needs to be summarized.

FIRING, from page 12

Martin. "How the hell can they fire the best manager in baseball?" Short asked Herzog.

Within a week, Herzog was looking for a job. Short said he would fire his grandmother to hire Martin, and the change was made with all the planning of a hiccup. To make matters worse, Short said hiring Herzog had been a "mistake."

"The first time at Texas, that was a tough one," says Herzog, who went on to manage in six postseasons before moving into the California Angels' front office. "But Casey (Stengel) told me a long time ago, 'Unless you own the club or die on the job, you're going to get fired, so don't worry about it.' You really can't worry about getting fired. You've got to do it your way. If it doesn't work out, that's their business."

Tony Perez did things his way as Cincinnati's new manager for the Reds' first 44 games this season, but it didn't work out. Jim Bowden, a 32-year-old rookie general manager, fired him with a wakeup call. The move was universally panned and violated Rule No. 15 in Paula Michal-Johnson's book, "Saying Good-bye: A Manager's Guide to Employee Dismissal." That rule is: "Never terminate anyone on the phone."

"That was a bad mark on young Jim Bowden, and I think he realizes it," Herzog says. "He should have waited, got Tony over for breakfast or something. If Davey (Johnson) is going to be the manager, then who's the big hurry?"

In the business world, it's supposed to happen like this: The employer sits down face-to-face with the employee, speaks in a direct yet compassionate manner, and tells the person that he or she is fired. The "exit interview" should take no more than 15 minutes, and the former employee should have no reason to firebomb your factory.

In the world of pro sports, employers rarely reach for the firing textbooks. Sports is the one American industry in which poor production is the most common reason for dismissal. For the average major league manager or NFL, NBA or NHL coach, failure to meet those productivity requirements often leads to less than stylish partings of the ways.

"When that time comes (to fire), then do it with class," Richard Deems writes in "How to Fire Your Friends." "You choose your words carefully. You find the face-to-face setting in which each will be the most comfortable."

In February 1989, Tom Landry was putting on a practice green at the Hidden Hills golf course in Austin, Texas. An Arkansas oilman named Jerry Jones had just flown in on his private jet and caught up with him there. They moved to the living room of an adjacent sales office, where the only coach the Dallas Cowboys ever had was fired.

General Manager Tex Schramm had come with Jones, but the new owner said he wanted to do it face-to-face. Jones confirmed the rumor that he was buying the team and bringing old friend Jimmy Johnson from the University of Miami to replace the man worshipped by millions.

"You didn't need to come here and do this," Landry told Jones. "This is just a publicity stunt." It wasn't the classiest termination, but it worked. Four years later, the Cowboys won the Super Bowl.

INNING, from page 12

Incredibly, Los Angeles had taken a 6-5 lead in the top of the 20th on singles by Jose Ofterman and Cory Snyder and a throwing error by Kim Batiste off Mike Williams (1-0).

The desperate Phillies really had been dragging coming into their last at bat.

The only National League team that hasn't been shut out this season was blanked for 13 innings.

They were no-hit for seven innings and had only a Mickey Morandini single to show for a 12-inning stretch when the exhausted NL.

East leaders went 1-for-37 against Rick Tricek, Roger McDowell, Pedro Martinez, Jim Gott and Omar Daal.

Rod Nichols, the scheduled starter in one of Thursday night's two games at New York, relieved.

Rookie shortstop Kevin Stocker bunted and Nichols' bid to nail Eisenreich at third was late. How fitting.

Lenny Dykstra then bombed a ground-rule double over the left-field fence for the win.

The 6 hour, 10 minute marathon equaled the Vet record for longest extra-inning game, a 5-4 win over Atlanta on May 4, 1973.

athletes from SIUC, but we don't have a list of them currently."

This years games mark a special milestone in more ways than one, said Curtis.

"We are very proud because this year is our tenth anniversary," he said.

"Also, last year we became non-profit because we lost our state funding due to budgeting cutbacks, so we were forced to go out and get our own funding," Curtis said.

"We are very grateful to the many corporate sponsors who stuck with us after we lost our funding and made this years event possible."

Unfortunately, even with the current corporate sponsorships, the future of the event is not certain, said McDonald.

"We hope that this will continue to be an annual event," McDonald said. "But we don't know what the future holds for the games right now."

"We are getting great coverage from the media all over the state,"

he said. "I think that will help considerably. Because of the coverage, the corporations realize that this is a great thing to be involved with because it encourages people from around the state to participate in athletics and it is great visibility for them."

The opening ceremonies will be Friday evening and will include a performance by the Slick Boys, a group of three Chicago police officers who rap, McDonald said.

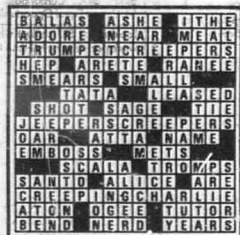

"The Slick Boys are three cops who patrol some of Chicago's toughest areas and perform for the kids," McDonald said.

"Rap music is the medium that they have found helps them to communicate to the youths who are growing up in those areas," McDonald said.

"Some other events taking place during the weekend are a drawing for a brand new Saturn Coup and airline ticket giveaways," he said.

"And there are no fees for anyone wishing to come watch the events."
