SIUC leaders concerned about resignation

By Signe K. Skinion
DE Government/Politics Editor

Some deans and constituence leaders are concerned about SIUC efforts to increase enrollment and relations between college deans and top administrators following the announcement of SIUC Provost Benjamin Shepherd's resignation

Roland Keim, admissions and records director, said be has worked with Shepherd, who is also academic affairs vice chancellor, for the past 17 years. He said he is coned about student recruitment and retention now that Shepherd is stepping down to teach.

"Ben has been spearheading our enrollment management program and I am concerned about the effect his resignation will have on those plans," he said.

"He has been the engine of that vehicle and when a new leader comes in, it will be difficult for them to pick up where Ben left off." Keim said he was surprised by Beggs starts acting COE dean selection process

An acting College of Education dean will be found by Aug.' 5 to replace current Dean Donald Beggs when he takes the SIUC chancellor position, University officials say Beggs said he and SIUC Provost Benjamin Shepherd have begun an internal search for an acting dean.

Shepherd, who is also aca demic affairs vice chancellor, said the search will be internal. We are looking for a full-time, tenured faculty member presently in the College of Education," he said. "There are several colleagues inside the college that meet the requirements and are highly respected by their peers."

Shepherd said the search will be conducted by a committee composed of department chairs and associate professors.

Shepherd said the search will be rapid and a new acting dean will be named by Aug. 5.

He said the search will consist of the committee talling with of the committee talking with College of Education faculty members to gain ideas of what is needed in the acting dean and getting names of possible candidates, Shepherd said the nominees will go through an interviewing process and then approval by the college and the chancellor's office.

Beggs said the acting dean will serve for two years while

"It came so quickly, quite frankly I hoped we could have seen Ben stay on for another year or two," he said. "I would have preferred it that way."

Donald Beggs, SIUC chancellorelect and College of Education dean, said a search to replace Shepherd will begin this fall, and a replacement will be named soon after. He said even after Shepherd steps down from his office, he will continue to work on his projects.

"He has expressed that he is committed to the issues he has been working on, and I do not want to lose his experience in any way," Beggs said. "He has offered to provide feedback and advice when I nced it even after he steps down, and he knows I'll take him up on that offer.'

Deggs said Shepherd's last day will be Jan. 1, and until then be will continue in his current position and help with Beggs own transition as SIUC chancellor.

He said he does not know if the search for Shepherd's replacement will be internal or nationwide because he is waiting for all the fac-ulty members to return to get a full analysis of what the University needs

Joe Foote, College of Mass Communication and Media Arts dean, said he believes the administration is losing a great deal of infor-mation when Shepherd steps down. "He knows the University better than anyone, so he would be a great help when a new leader and assistants come in to office," be said.

Morris Library's journal budget cut-

By Jennifer Camden Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students and faculty need to check Morris Library's web site to see which journals in their departments could be cut this fall because of decreases in library funding, library officials

Carolyn Snyder, library's affairs dean, said the library's new materials fund of about $4 million has been reduced by about $400,000 for the 1996-97 school year. She said about 10 percent of the library's journal subscriptions will be cancelled.

Jim Fox, reference services and collection management director, said because they are research-driven, sciences use more journals than other departments so they will lose

"I'll be scared to death if this ever happens again," he said. "Having a cut doesn't mean it's going to be the last cut. It's been pretty devastating to some YELTSIN NAMES RODIONOV DEFENSE MINISTER MOSCOW — In a balancing of the power scales between his security and economic gurus, Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin named a nationalist with a bloody track record as his new defense minister Wednesday and with a bloody track record as his new defense minister Wednesday and deployed him on the daunting task of army reform. RESTRICTIONS APPROVED ON USE OF CHEMICALS WASHINGTON — The House Commerce Committee Wednesday approved a proposal to impose tough new restrictions on the use of chemapproved a projects to impose tough new restrictions on the use of cienticals by farmers and food processors, a plan that environmentalists and grocers said will improve the safety of fruits, vegetables and other foods in supermarkets around the country. Crafted by committee chairman Thomas J. Billey Jr., R-Va., Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and an unusual coalition of Republican and Democratic lawnakers, the bill is a sweeping rewrite of a more conservative draft version floated by GOP lawmakers as recently as three weeks ago. During two committee meetings Wednesday, members of both parties praised the new bill as a boon to American consumers and an example of what the spirit of bipartisan compromise on environmental issues can produce. The centerpiece of the statute is a pro-posal to establish a uniform health-based standard for chemicals that can be used to regulate agricultural products or processed food. Defined as "a reasonable certainty of no harm," the new standard is designed to protect consumers against the carcinogenic effects produced by some pesticides and food additives in laboratory studies.

The Alright Blues Band to break up

By Chad Anderson DE Entertainment Editor

Two guitars sit in the home of The Alright Blues Band beneath two strands of empty cigarette packs, hung like Christmas pop-corn, stretched from wall to wall. One guitar displays a sticker on the fret-board stating "All about the blues". The other displays a sticker on the body saying, "This machine kills fascists."

True to the band's roots and the messages on the guitars, the group believes the blues is truly about the music, and not about the fame.

Humble, and almost timid to answer ques-tions, the band relaxed in its living room and announced the end of its time together. As the announcement was made, a look of sadness filled trumpet player Chad Menier's face, and the sense of lost camaraderie filled the room. The last year-and-a-half of playing together had suddenly, and officially, come to an end.

"It's really about the music," bassist Brian Void said. "The blues is really an intimate kind of music that should be played on the front porch, and not in bars filled with people." The empty cigarette packs are almost symbolic of the group's ending. They were compiled by a friend who smoked the entire two strands, consisting of about 40 packs, in a week before quitting cold-turkey.

As the band announced its

In the shadow of last year's chaotic overflow of people during the reggae Sunset Concert, The International Reggae Ali-Stars hope to generate some of the same energy with its festive music.

The best way to describe the group is to compare it to a compi-lation CD. About three years ago, a few of the band members got together to put on a Bob Marley tribute concert, and that went well, so the potpourri of musicians from Minnesota and around the world started playing together occassion-

Capital improvements desperately needed; SIUC's future bright

THE SIU BOARD OF TRUSTEES APPROVED a $70 million bond sale for capital improvements for much of the Carbondale campus. The changes are needed. The improvements will bring about the forward motion that SIUC needs to reverse declining enrollment and take the University into the next century. The bond sale awaits final approval from the Illinois Board of Higher Education. We think the IBHE should approve the sale.

With new technology, programs and capital improvements SIUC is climbing the hill to become a leading institution. It accomplishes this with degrees that are pertinent, technology that serves students' needs and the willingness to change in order to address the six-year-old problem of declining enroll-

THE CAPITAL IMPROVEMENTS WORK ON ALL levels. The track at McAndrew Stadium is in poor condition and could become dangerous for the athletes. SIUC has not been able to host the Missouri Valley Conference Championship track meets because of the condition of the track. Instead SIUC spends money to send the team to other schools when they could meet at home.

Another improvement is installing new lights over the stadium. The last night football game played at McAndrew was in 1973. Members of the community have expressed an interest in night games. Many residents work on Saturdays and cannot attend a day game, but could attend a night game. Football Coach Shawn Watson said the lights would not only attract those in the community who are sometimes unable to attend, but would attract alumni to the games. If the University supports it, alumni may also support improvement of stadium's the playing surfaces. The turf at the stadium, also scheduled for a change, is worn and has a sand-like texture. How can the University recruit players to improve teams when the school has playing fields that are inferior to competing teams?

THE PLANNED CHANGES IN TECHNOLOGY will bring SIUC up-to-date by providing more computers for students and faculty. The Pulliam Gymnasium is to be remodeled into a computer lab with eight classrooms full of computers, half Macintosh machines and half Intel machines. There will be more than 300 computers available for classes. When they are not used by a class they will be available for general students' use. More and more demand is placed on students to use computers. Professors require projects to be worked on computers and increasingly professors are requesting computer lab time to complement their courses. As it is now, SIUC cannot meet these demands. Computer classes are cancelled and professors cannot have a lab because there are not enough computers. The University also has $11 million earmarked to upgrade computers and to complete networks allowing campus-wide communication. The network will allow a student to access

Morris Library from most computers, as the library offers more a recent series of improvements that could attract students and combat the six-year enrollment decrease. SIUC will be able to enter the next century with programs, technology and facilities that put the University in the lead as a education institution. There are other areas that need improvement, such as the library, but you have to start somewhere. At least with the bond sale, SIUC is finally addressing some of the problems that should have been addressed before, and it is about time.

Where have all the partiots gone?

I'm writing in regards to the lack of patriotism that I have seen. The United States has more than 25,000 soldiers in Bosnia, serving in oper-ation "Task Force Eagle" (the U.S. portion of the peace implemen-tation). Yet the average American has no idea why our troops are there or what it is that they're actually doing. It seems as if very few people in this area are even aware of the deployment of our soldiers.

There was once a time when people were taught to be patriotic. At the begin-ning of each day, school aged children said the pledge of allegiance, they were reminded every morning to support and be proud of their country. Unfortunately, today that is not the case. It's not only the children I believe the biggest majority of adults have forgotten what patriotism is all about Patriotism is loving, supporting and defending your country. Patriotism is not about whether or not you personally agree with the mission of the soldiers, it's about supporting the soldier in his or her job and as an individual. It's about standing up and saying, "Hey, we're proud of you for doing your job the best way you know how! We're behind you all the way!" Patriotism is putting up yellow ribbons in your community (a yellow ribbon represents your wishes for the soldiers' safe return home). Patriotism is many things. These are just a few examples.

My concern is that I have seen almost no patriotism or support of by a $150,000 cut in its University-allocated base budget for new materials. She said SIUC's decreased budget is linked to the University's drop in enrollment.

She said the other part of the drop was caused by the Illinois General Assembly, which did not increase the new materials budget at any state university this year.

Snyder said the state would have had to allocate an extra $250,000 for Morris Library to keep up with new materials 12 percent rate of inflation.

John Koropchak, SIUC chemistry and biochemistry chair, said the department formed a committee in the spring to cut $63,000 in chemistry journal subscriptions from the $273,300 the library spends on them, leaving the library with $210,300 in chemistry journal subscriptions.

Koropchak said the department's student and faculty researchers need to be up-to-date on their fields to be competitive for grades and grants.

"To write research proposals to get grants from funding agencies, you have to know what everyone in the field is doing," he said.

That could be the difference between getting the grant and being rejected." Snyder said the library will help patrons with the cuts even after they have been made.

"If something we cancel is absolutely essential to someone, we will work with the department to see what we can do to reinstate it and cut something else," Snyder

Snyder said most of the journals to be cut are not on-line, so patrons will have to get an interlibrary loan for material from them. She said the process takes about one to seven days.

Fox said the new materials fund ays for both journals and books. He said journal subscriptions had to be cut now, but the library will spread out its cut in new books as they are published next year.

lay couples struggle against discrimination

Daily Egyptian Reporter

In many ways, Desiree Mills appears to be part of a typical marriage. She shares a checking account, a mortgage and a 2-year-old son with her partner. Even though Mills, a student health coordinator, and her part-ner, a University employee, have been together for two years, they cannot be legally married because they are lesbians.

In a spring ceremony, Erika Kohoutek, a junior in English from Chicago, and Kris Bein, a sophomore in social work from Chicago, exchanged vows in a same-sex wedding on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

However, their marriage is also unrecognized on federal and state

On July 12, the House of Representatives passed a bill to ban federal recognition of same sex marriages and allow each state to ignore marriage performed in any other state.

Because a marriage would not offer any legal rights, Mills and her partner signed the University domestic partner agreement.

Domestic partnership is defined by the 1993 University agreement as co-habitants who have a stable, intimate relationship and are financially interdependent.

"It's important to have partner benefits," Mills said. "Otherwise, gay and lesbian couples will con-tinue to have no legal support like married couples. SIUC's plan remains one of the few state-funded universities to offer a domestic partnership agreement.

Seymour Bryson, executive assistant to the chancellor and director of affirmative action, served on the developing committee. He said the plan was written in the interest of gay and lesbian couples who cannot othcrwise obtain any University bencfits by other legal means.

"The state does not recognize omosexual marriages," he said. "We are not moving ahead of the state in this area. We agreed to be concerned with benefits the University solely can control.

According to the SIUC domestic partnership agreement, the University controlled benefits offered include Morris Library cards and Recreation Center pass-

Other benefits, such as health insurance and pension funds, are controlled by the state.

But, gay and lesbian faculty, staff and students say the University needs to widen their benefits.

Mills said the agreement does not address the Family Leave pol-The policy enables University employees to take leave from work and maintain job security when a family member Mills said the Family Leave policy directly affects her because of her partner's son Zachary.

"Permission for leave is granted through the discretion of each department and unit," she said.

Most of the gay and lesbian community say they understand the University's tie to state-controlled benefits, but think the University can include University Housing.

Area teachers get recharged at SIUC science workshop

By Tim Carroll Daily Egyptian Reporter

Southern Illinois high school teachers continued their education last week during a week-long chem-istry program at SIUC, giving teachers the opportunity to work with the latest classroom technology.

David Koster, an SIUC chemistry professor, conducted the program in two separate one-week sessions that ran July 1-5 and 8-12.

Koster said the classes are designed to introduce teachers to modern laboratory techniques.

One experiment the class conducted was testing compounds for their pH level, Koster said.
"The lab computers allow us to hook up peripheral testing devices so the teachers can see their work in a graphed form."

Most of the teachers who partici-pate are not chemistry majors. because small schools can not afford to pay someone who only teaches try, Koster said.

"Many of them have their degrees in things like biology, physics and ecology," Koster said.
Cindy Young, a teacher from Carbondale Community High School, was a first-time program

She said it was a valuable oppor-tunity to network with her peers.

"Each teacher is required to do a demonstration at the end of the week," Young said. "This provides us teachers with demonstration ideas that we may not have seen."

Also attending was three-year vet-eran Karen Conner, from Sigland Royalton High School in Franklin

This program makes learning much easier than if I were to attempt to teach myself through a book. "

Karen Conner, from Sigland Royalton High School

"I like coming back because I learn not only in the lab but also through talking with other teachers over lunch," Conner said, "It helps us find support with our common problems with teaching."

Working and talking with her peers is good because it gives her confidence that she is doing the right things, Conner said.

Another teacher, Cheryl Rulis, from Carterville High School, is in her third year in the program. Rulis brings her students back to Carbondale twice a year.

"Since we are only 15 minutes away it would be foolish for me not to bring my students back to visit," Rulis said. "We have spent some real nice times down here," Rulis said.

In addition to the lab, Koster organizes an activities for the students when they come to visit dur-ing the school year, Rulis said.
"One time he even took our students to see the water treatment plant," Rulis said.

Koster said that the program, started at Western Illinois University, has spread to a variety of campuses in Illinois.

There are only two such programs in Southern Illinois, Koster said. There is another at SIUE, which also receives a grant.

The project is federally funded through Title II Eisenhower money from the government, which goes to the Illnois Board of Higher Education

Koster said he petitions the IBHE each year to receive the funds to run the program.

Teachers received a $250 stipend and an opportunity to get course credit for attending the five-day class that ran from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.," Koster

An additional benefit to the program is providing an opportunity for teachers to bring their students back during the school year, he said.

Many of the area students come and visit throughout the year. Koster said.

The Physical Plant will begin applying herbicide in Thompson Woods on Tuesday, July 23, 1996. Herbicide will be applied for the control of Japanese Honeysuckle and other exotics infesting the woods to begin the restoration process as recommended by the Thompson Woods Management Committee. The first series of applications will take from two to three days, and will require the closing of certain pathways within the woods.

Pathways adjacent to the application areas will be barricaded, and signs will be posted at the perimeters. Pedestrians are advised to plan alternate routes to offices and classrooms to avoid the application areas.

Any questions regarding the application should be directed to the Physical Plant Ground: Offices at 453 - 8187.

The song trademarks Dr. Dre's mellow style and original beats that complements Nas's steady-flowing style.

"Black Girl Lost" tells the story of a young black girl who tries to do right and make it in the world but strays from her path. The song employs Jo Jo Hailey, of Jodeci, to sing in the background as Nas-delivers the lyrics. It contains sam-ples of "Starlight," performed by Stephanic Mills.

This 14-track CD, released July 2, is a must-have for any collection. Each song has the smooth rhythmic flavor that Nas represents. In every song there is something to think about as you bob your head to the mellow beat. A (Christi C. Farber)

TAFKAP releases new C

The Washington Post

Is anybody waiting for the new album by The Artist Formerly Known as Prince (TAFKAP)? Probably not, though "Chaos and Disorder" (Warner Bros.) is the kind of guitar-driven work that many fans have been clamoring for. But this appropriately titled album carries too much contractual baggage and feels like what it is: a 20th and final album that closes out the artist's 18-year relationship with Warner Bros.

In recent years, that relationship became particularly fractious as Prince changed his name to an unpronounceable symbol (and was thereafter referred to either as Prince or TAFKAP) and stopped perform-ing Prince-era material in concert. Itas a two-way disassociation. Was a two-way disasses.

Was a two-way disasses. hitless. Last year's "Gold Experience" album hasn't itself experienced gold (sales of 500,000 copies), and the soundtrack for copies), and une soundurack for Spike Lee's "Girl 6," a mix of mosi-ly old recordings, has yet to break the 100,000 plateau. In the CD booklet for "Chaos and-Disorder," TAFKAP writes: "origi-nally intended 4 private use only, this compilation respects the left. this compilation serves as the last original material recorded by (TAFKAP) 4 warner brothers records—may u live 2 see the dawn." What's apparent is that some of the tracks here barely lived 2 see the day, while others have been ca nibalized from assorted TAFKAP side projects. "Zannalee," for instance, is a fairly straightforward blues recorded in 1993 for the "Glam Slam Ulysses" musical and, like "The Same December," a rowdy anthem to brotherhood, previously existed only as a video shown before TAFKAP's 1995 con-

"The Same December" is one of the more interesting tracks, blessed with a monster book and a catchy chorus, as well as TAFKAP's familiar Utopian take on race relations ("We all came from the same ("We all came from the same December' and in the end that's where we'll got so let's go"). But after kicking off with full-throutle, big-band rock energy, the song shifts into a bluesy grind, its ambitions betrayed by a lack of focus. That's a problem that undermines other tracks, as well.

The title track features a rawvoiced TAFKAP riding an appro-priately roiling arrangement that seems equal parts Booker T. & the MG's and Lenny Kravitz (the Kravitz association also applies to the brisk but predictable "I Like It

The soft-spun ballads "Into the Light" and "I Will" are both slight, lacking the emotional commitment of the anist's best work. On "Right the Wrong," TAFKAP surfaces with an odd Midwestern accent to address injustices on reservations and elsewhere, but the track mean ders all over the place and, with its brass-fueled insistence, sounds like an off-kilter Up With People num-

For most of the album, TAFKAP's guitar is at the forefront, reminding us of how good he can be. It is absent on one of two Minneapolis funk outings, "Dig U Better Dead," where terse rhythms and a groove with dissonant edges combine in the kind of stiff martial funk that seemed dated in the mid-'80s. That problem also under-mines TAFKAP's credo number, "I Rock, Therefore I Am" (more AC/DC than Descartes, unfortunately). Resistant to corporate con-trol and creative interference ("I don't need you to tell me ... "), the singer pouts that "whether I am-right or wrong/I sing the song/ the best I can." The point is lost as the song wanders all over the map and goes on for far too long.
"Chaos and Disorder" ends with a pithy 90-second kiss-off to Warner Bros. "Had U" clearly aims at providing an emotional bookend to Prince's 1978 debut, "For You," and while it catalogues hopes and disappointments in sen-sual-sexual terms, it's quite clear that creative freedom is what the writer has on his mind.

"Maybe we'll change into a funk band or something," he said jokingly. "I wouldn't mind getting some of these guys back together and playing, but right now we're not really sure where we're going or what we're going to do."

It may seem that the groups rea-son for breaking up makes no sense but neither do very many things about the band, from the sidewalk of assorted beer-bottle caps to the name of their home, the Appledome.
So just what is the Appledome?

to a replacement coach yet. There are some people that we have in mind but right now we are waiting for the paperwork from the affirma-tive action committee."

Athletics had received approval to begin a local-area search for a new coach and Hart is hopeful that his office will be able to place and in the paper by the end of the week. "I hope that we can expedite the search process because we have recruits who are calling every day along with their moms and dads saying, 'Who are you going to hire,'" Hart said. Hart said there is a loophole in the student-athlete's national let-ter of intent allowing students to change their mind for contingencies such as a coaching change

Shaneyfelt said when the University hires another coach, he would be happy to help them get established, and explain the arrangements to be made.
"When I came to SIU the previous coach had retired and left to spend time fishing," Shaneyfelt said: Everything was pretty much shoved in a paper bag and it took a while to straighten it all out.

"There are a lot of arrange-ments that have to be made concerning tournament schedules, travel plans, and room reserva-tions. It requires a lot of plan-

Shancyfelt, a native of Manila, Okla., led the men's golf team to a sixth-place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference the last two years. The team finished third in the MVC in 1994, the best men's finish in SIUC history...

Older olympians lead

The Washington Post

- U.S. Olympic ATLANTA cyclist Steve Hegg hears the ques-tion all the time: "Aren't you too old for this?"

Every morning, Hegg wakes up coal work day in Dana Point, Calif., that is very different from those of most 32 year olds. "I get up at 8 a.m.," he said. "I put on a pot of coffee. I look out my window for a while. At 10, 1 go into my garage, pump up my tires, get on my bike and go down to the end of the street.

Then, I have to make my biggest decision. I have to decide ich way to turn, left or right."

Hegg, who is America's only Olympic cycling gold medalist still competing, says that every time he considers leaving his sport and moving into the world," someone like his father asks, "Do you really think you can make as much money and have as much fun in the outside world?

Hegg's reply is simple: "No."
So the man who won a gold medal at the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles is trying to win another at the 1996 Atlanta

Games, becoming a part of an ever-growing number of U.S. Olympians who refuse to retire. Some have stayed because they have met with disappointment in the past and they want another chance to fulfill their goals. Others stick around for the money - from four-figure United Stat Olympic Committee stipends to six-figure endorsement deals and for health benefits provided by the USOC. At the Games, the USOC will award $15,000 for each gold medal, $12,500 for each silver and $10,000 for each bronze. Some individual sports also give medal money.

All of these earnings flow as never before within the U.S. Olympic world, extending careers and allowing more athletes to consider their sport a full-time job. Still others have remained because the Olympics have come back to the United States for the first time in a dozen years, and they didn't want to miss the chance to compele in front of a flag-waving, frenzied home crowd before retiring.

Whatever the reason, American Olympians are getting dramati-cally older. The average age of the 1996 U.S. Olympic team is 26.88, an increase of almost five years from the 1984 team in Los

Even U.S. women gymnasts are "aging," from an average of 16 in 1992 to more than 17 in 1996. Five of the seven women on the U.S. team are 18 or older; three competed in 1992 and decided to come back again, benefiting from the sport's change in philosophy that tiny pixies no longer rule the beam and the bars.

On the U.S. track and field team, more than one-third of the competitors—46 out of 126 will be at least 30 by the end of the year.

"It's for recruiting, the fans and ESPN, which we don't get here very often," he said. "But if you get a player on ESPN, it's much easier to recruit other players who have seen them and a nice arena to play ir."

Watson said improvements, such as having lights in McAndrew Stadium for the first time since 1973, are a good way to recruit alumni as

"I think that's a critical marketing strategy for the University in attracting back the alumni," ne said, "Lights would enhance Southern Illinois University. It would give us an opportunity to get our alumni

We've got more alumni out there than you can shake a stick at. We've got about 160,000 alumni across the country and we're in the top 30 in the nation in alumni in the workplace.

Watson also said local hotels and businesses would prosper from increased alumni support, and that support is good for everyone involved.

"It could really be a win-win-win situation on the business front as well as on a personal front, and I don't know how you can go wrong with that.

Shaneyfelt to miss University, coaching

By Bruce S. Lorenzana Daily Egyptian Reporter

With no discernible trace of anger in his voice, Gene Shaneyfelt, who resigned Tuesday as SIUC Men's Golf Coach, spoke of his sudden dismissal by Jim Hart, Athletic Director at SIUC.

"I enjoyed coaching," Shaneyfelt said, "I wish I didn't have to resign, but I do. I'm not happy with what's going on, but I'm going to bow out, From what I have heard about the appeal process, no matter what the board's decision is, Hart makes the final

"I'm not bitter about their decision. I would have preferred to continue coaching at that level, because I enjoy working with the students on their game. I always hope that some of them will continue and play on the PGA tour.

Hart announced in a press release Tuesday afternoon that the University athletic depart ment had decided to make the change, and expected to do so in the very near future.

The new men's golf coach's position will change from part-time to full-time, Hart said. He said the coach will have some additional responsibilities, a corresponding increase ary, and a 12-month contract.

"Basically, because of the time commitment, we were afraid that Gene's directorship position at the new Marion golf club would limit his time at SIU," Hart said.

Shaneyfelt, a member of the PGA, was recently hired as Director of Golf at the under-construction Kokopelli Golf Club. He said he was told the University had concerns about his responsibilities with his new posi-

What bothers me the most is that the Saluki Fun Day is being cancelled this year," Shaneyfelt said. "The golfers that played cach year of my tournament were to receive their jackets next month."

Saluki Fun Day was started by Shaneyfelt four years ago as a fund miser to help support the men's golf team. Participants who agreed to play each of the first four years and contribute $100 per year were eligible to receive a maroon sports jacket at this year's tournament.

There were to be 50 jackets given away

"I really feel bad for those sportsors. I plan on writing each of them to let them know that the Fun Day is cancelled this year," Shancyfelt said.

Hart said the sponsors will be affected by the decision. "They're going to be upset," he said. "They are the hard-core of his group of followers. I'm going to say that we're going to bonor that commitment next year. We're thankful they supported us.

Herrin, Watson applaud bond sale for funding

Athletic facilities are an important part of how a university is perceived by those outside it, and SIUC is looking to improve its sports reputation a bit.

Saluki football crach Shawn Watson said an athletic department's sports facilities can sometimes make or break its image.

"Facilities are the measuring stick between universities," he said. "The people quality is what we sell and we work hard on the people

tues become the edge.

A $2.8 million dollar facilities upgrade plan was approved by the SIU Board of Trustees Thursday, which will allow improvements to McAn*rew Stadium, SIU Arena, the IAW Fields and Abe Martin Field. The plan must still be approved by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, however, before the work can actually begin.

Part of the McAndrew Stadium plan calls for the installation of new turf on the football field, something Watson said needs to be done

"I think somewhere in the very near future, our turf will have to be replaced, simply because it is starting to become worn," he said. Probably more than anything else is that the product just didn't turn out the way the maker really hoped that it would,
"Everyone that has Omni-Turf has either got plans in the near future to replace or have already replaced it."

Another Sal

ich whose team is receiving a new surface to play on is SIUC baskethall coach Rich Herrin. The Arena will receive a new $600,000 permanent floor that will be installed just in time for the 1997-98 season.

Herrin agreed with Watson, and said the removal of the 32-year-old floor is a necessity just to keep up with universities in the area.

Lakers juggle players, salaries to attract Shaq

INGLEWOOD, Calif. - The bill for the Los Angeles Lakers planned free-agent shopping spree now includes valuable trade-ins.

Looking to build up the war chest to sway Shaquille O'Neal from across the country or lure Brian Williams from across the city, they pretty much dumped Anthony Peeler and George Lynch for nothing Tuesday, sending them to the Vancouver Grizzlies for the right to flip-flop second-round picks in 1998

More importantly for the Lakers, they got another $3.63 million in spending power, the $2.09 million due Lynch this season and the $1.54 million for Peeler. Part of that immediately went to signing one big man-Sean Rooks, fermerly of the Atlanta Hawks, to what Rooks says is a seven-year package — but a large chunk remains from the $12.16 million they had before that deal, not the maximum available but an amount that would allow them to estain negotiating rights with Elden Campbell.

Large enough to mount another

The Lakers still figure it's pretty much a done deal he'll stay in Orlando. But this at least makes things interesting: If, for the sake of argument, they have $10 million to dangle for 1996-97, that translates into a seven-year offer worth $112 million, an increase from the $95.5 million deal extended late last week and enough to at least put O'Neal in the same financial standing as Alonzo Mourning.

Armato are aware of the new possibilities. The Magic too.

"In any negotiation, you've got to be aware of the competition," said John Gabriel, Orlando's vice president of basketball operations. "It also puts us in a position to maybe establish new parameters. We're quite aware of it."

Maybe even guite concerned by it. Sources said later Tuesday that Magic officials may increase an offer already believed to be in the $115 million range, hoping to counter the Laker move and make sure O'Neal never gets all that tempted by the aggressive moves in Los Angeles.

There are no indications that an O'Neal signing is imminent, only that Orlando is close to an agree ment with its starting power for-ward, Horace Grant, and that the Lakers will continue to pursue other options. More and more, that means Williams, the Los Angeles Clippers' starting center last season.

He has emerged as the top target from Column B, and the Lakers have talked dollars and sense with agent, Fred Slaughte

Slaughter said Williams has received offers from seven teams and hopes to sign b; the end of the

"Based on what I'm watching happen with other people similarly situated, the threshold is $7-7.5 million to start out with the first year and the offers can increase by up to as much as 20 percent per year," Slaughter said. "It's a very healthy market and there are lots of teams interested in Brian. We hope to get something done by the end of the week, I'm counting on it."

With the Lakers' new money, they could now sign a second big relatively minor deal for another position (Tracy Murray was a possibility before he went with the Washington Bullets), and then take care of Campbell, who apparently is willing to be patient because he wants to stay with the Lakers. Williams might be No. 1, but he's not the only one.

Various sources say Ervin
Johnson, late of the Seattle SuperSonics, is now in the mix, along with Oliver Miller, the Very Big O. There's also Jim McIlvaine. And then there's Dennis Rodman, Jerry West's dinner guest from Monday, still a possibility in the Lakers' minds but, according to Rodman's agent, wanting to resign with the Bulls and willing to do a 5-year contract if that's what it takes.

Peeler leaves after four seasons with the Lakers, long enough to become a Jerry West favorite and establish himself as an integral part
