Former Senator Pe. J. Simon delights the crowd gathered for the Brown Bag Series at Carbondale's Town Square Pavilion Wednesday afternoon. Simon sang "Hello Dolly" with his daughter's band "Loose Gravel."

SIUC's Paul Simon gives up speeches for songs at Brown Bag Series concert

Paul Simon appeared off-off-off Broadway Wednesday, booming through a custom rendition of "Hello Dolly" with an orator's aplomb and a politician's charisma — after he found the right key.

"Once he got on the right key, he was fantastic," said Simon's daughter, Sheila Simon, staff attorney for SIUC's Domestic Violence Clinic. "He has a wonderful voice."

Paul is the director of SIUC's Public Policy Institute. He ran for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988 and served as a U.S. senator until 1997. He now teaches political science and journalism courses.

Sheila plays banjo for blues band Loose Gravel. She and fellow bandmates Maria Johnson, Cindy Clark, Lynda Killoran and Jayme McCarroll surrendered the microphone to Paul during a noon performance at Carbondale's Town Square Pavilion.

"The performance was part of the Brown Bag Series."

"My daughter twisted my arm," Simon said, explaining his musical motive.

Forgoing his trademark bow tie for a checked button-down and khakis, Paul sidled up to the mic and entertained the 300-plus crowd with excerpts from a letter he penned to Paul Simon, the singer. The two Pauls actually met during a Saturday Night Live episode in 1988.

When news of his musical exploits got out,

Paul wrote in the letter addressed to the singer, "your career will inevitably plummet."

Then Paul unfurled his "Hello Dolly" sheet music and warned the Carbondale crowd.

"Put your earplugs on, everyone," Paul said. "This is my first solo in 71 years."

An enthusiastic audience whooped and clapped after his cameo. He untangled himself from the microphone cord and blew a kiss to the band.

"Thank you, Dad," Sheila said. "I don't know how we can follow that, but we'll try."

Paul doesn't plan to leave his day job, however.

"I don't think I'll be offered any permanent jobs singing," he said.

Paul also does once-a-week voiceovers for National Public Radio.

"They've never asked me to sing, they will not ask me to sing," he said.

Hearing results released today

USG President Bill Archer appeared before the Student Judicial Board Wednesday

ALEXA AGUILAR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Undergraduate Student Government President Bill Archer appeared before the Student Judicial Board Wednesday in what he called an "unfair hearing."

No decision was made at the hearing. The board, made up of seven students, said they would discuss the matter further in private, and inform Archer of their decision today.

The hearing is a result of seven alleged violations of the student conduct code, including unauthorized possession and/or use of cannabis or controlled substances.

The violations are a result of an incident April 10, when two head residents, Keften Greenstreet and Todd Firth, went to 113 Felts Hall, Archer's room.

According to a Judicial Affairs Disciplinary Report, the residents suspected that Archer and six other men were smoking marijuana. They heard the room occupants using statements associated with marijuana such as "don't bogart it," and observed two open windows and two lit, scented candles.

They also said they smelled burning marijuana coming from Archer's room.

Greenstreet and Firth were not present at the hearing but submitted notarized statements.

Archer was also charged with violating quiet hours, excessive noise, guest's behavior, failure to comply with directions of the University or public officials acting in the performance of their duties, and furnishing false information with the intent to deceive.

City Council votes in favor of tax rebate

Mall owners granted potential tax rebates of $7.8 million

RYAN TROST
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Even though the vote had not yet been taken, Carbondale small business spokesman Richard Parrish clearly doubted that he would be able to make a difference.

By a 4-1 vote, the Carbondale City Council granted City Manager Jeff Doherty full authority to negotiate a deal that would grant potential tax rebates of $7.8 million to University Mall owners, B.A. Properties, during the next 15 years.

The rebate program has been introduced to entice a large high-end department store and smaller retail stores to University Mall, 1237 E. Main St. The Gap, Gap Kids and Old Navy are all being considered as possible tenants and have been in contact with University Mall management. The rebate will aid in the sale of the mall, which has been on the market for 18 months, and in the rejuvenation of the mall's sales and occupant base.

Parrish, who spoke on behalf of seven local businesses at the meeting, urged the council to extend the same incentives to local businesses. Parrish said he was confident the vote would not go his way, but thought it was still important for all views to be considered at the meeting.

"I really feel that they did not listen to the local business people," Parrish said. "We weren't there to filibuster. We were merely there to get a point across."

Doherty considered the vote a victory for Carbondale and its citizens.

"It's something that we wish we didn't have to do, but it's an investment that we have to make to save the mall," Doherty said. "[The] council has realized that and made the appropriate decision."

Councilman Larry Briggs was the sole dissenter as he gave a resounding no during the vote. He said local business were being sacrificed for big name stores with no loyalty to Carbondale.

"We're essentially just writing them a blank check. It's like, here's $7.75 million dollars just bring us something, we don't give a shit what it is," Briggs said. "I could have thrown my papers up in the air, pounded the desk and screamed no, but I think that would have been wasted effort. It would have felt good though."

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard lobbied in support of the ordinance and encouraged council members to pass the ordinance saying that the offering of the sales tax rebate to University

SIU student indicted on three counts of murder

Michael Swango's prison release date pushed back

KATE MCCANN
GOVERNMENT EDITOR

On a hot day in June of 1979, suspected serial killer Michael Swango was moving into a residence hall on the SIUC campus.

According to James Stewart's book "Blind Eye," credited with sparking national interest in the case, Swango has been linked to the mysterious deaths of 60 patients by the FBI since graduating from SIU in 1982.

Federal prosecutors filed an indictment Tuesday against Swango, charging him in three suspicious deaths at a Veterans Administration facility in Long Island, N.Y.

Swango, 45, was scheduled to be released from a Colorado prison Saturday, where he is being held for a fraud conviction.

The U.S. District Attorney's Office has placed a detainer on Swango to prevent his release. Swango will likely be placed in the custody of U.S. Marshalls who will transport him to another federal prison, according to Rod Chandler, executive assistant to the warden at the Federal Correctional Institution in Florence, Colo.

A warrant for Swango's arrest was issued in Zimbabwe May 18 in the connection of five murders and three assaults of patients in 1995, according to the USA Today.

If Swango was legally connected to all the suspicious deaths of patients under his care since he began his residency at Ohio State University in 1983, it would make him the most prolific serial killer in American history. But 20 years ago, Swango was only a student struggling through his first year at the SIU Medical School.

During his first year at medical school, Swango was nicknamed "Double-O Swango," by his Carbondale classmates, referencing James Bond's "license to kill."

The nickname was given to Swango because he was "different and strange" not because he was killing patients, according to former instructor and SIU Professor Dr. John Murphy.

"There are kids who go into medicine who are not quite normal," Murphy said. "The boy was a little bit of a loner, but he didn't have characteristics that would make him more noticed than the other weird people."

Murphy said Swango was an average but attentive student, who never gave Murphy any serious problems. When Swango was threatened with dismissal after being accused of not attending rounds, Murphy defended him.

"There was no indication he was going to be this kind of person," Murphy said in reference to Swango's connection to suspicious deaths. "I expect deep down that he probably is guilty."

Murphy vehemently denies past accusations that Swango began killing patients while completing his training at the SIU Medical School in Springfield.

Murphy has not heard from Swango since receiving a letter written by him while Swango served time in a Centralia prison. The letter requested Murphy's assistance in being cleared of charges. Murphy never responded.

After completing a one-year stint on the Carbondale campus, Swango relocated to the Springfield medical school to complete his training before receiving his diploma in 1982.

If Swango is found guilty, he could be classified as a classic serial killer, meaning he committed two or more killings during a time period ranging from hours to years.

According to Jason Themason, a former intern for the Child Abduction and Serial Killer unit for the FBI, the motive of a classic serial killer is often psychological with sadistic sexual overtones.

Swango also displays qualities associated with an "organizational murderer," Themason said. Above-average intelligence, sexual and social competence and a controlled mood during the crime are some major traits.

However Themason emphasized that most serial killers display only most of the qualities associated with their typecast. Ted Bundy, whom Swango was reportedly fascinated with, is a notorious example of a classic serial killer.

Swango was raised in Quincy. Following a brief time in the Marines and four years at SIU, Swango was admitted as a surgical intern at Ohio State University in 1983.

After suspicions arose concerning the deaths of some of his patients, Swango returned home to Quincy to work as a paramedic. In 1985, he was found guilty of non-fatal poisoning his co-workers.

After serving a two-year sentence in a Centralia correctional facility, Swango lived briefly in several other states before fleeing to Zimbabwe in 1995 after accusations arose of misconduct at hospitals in South Dakota and New York.

Swango was detained on charges of fraud at O'Hare airport in 1997 on a return trip from Zimbabwe.

It is unknown if prosecutors will seek the death penalty.

Pohlmann heads school of social work

John Pohlmann, eight-year chairman of the Department of Educational Psychology and Special Education, has been named acting director of SIUC's School of Social Work.

He took the position July 1, after Martin Tracy stepped down June 30 to concentrate on teaching full time. Because of his seniority and experience, Pohlmann was asked by the Dean of the College of Education Keith Hillkirk to temporarily handle the position.

While in office, Pohlmann plans to keep the school intact. Sustaining the credibility and recognition of the school are his top priorities.

"I want to maintain the high enrollment, excellent degree programs and keep a strong connection with the community," he said.

Because he holds this position temporarily, he must also perform both his chairman and director duties. However to make the job run more smoothly, Pohlmann said the dean is giving him any support he may need to make the job more comfortable.

ORLANDO, FLORIDA

Former Duke player received cash while in high school

Corey Maggette admitted that he received cash from a summer coach, an admission that in all likelihood will cost the Blue Devils their 1999 national runner-up finish as well as roughly $225,000 of NCAA tournament revenue.

"We have forwarded the information to the NCAA," Trask said in a release issued by the school. Maggette also sent the statement to the federal magistrate in Kansas City, where he was scheduled to testify on Wednesday under subpoena about his dealings with former summer coach Myron Piggie. Because of the sworn statements, Maggette no longer has to testify, Duke senior associate athletics director Chris Kennedy said Tuesday night.

Kennedy said he has spoken with the NCAA but doesn't know what price Duke will have to pay for the transgressions of Maggette and Piggie, which took place in the summer of 1997 - more than a year before Maggette enrolled at Duke for his one year at school.

"Those are options," Kennedy said of vacating the 1999 runner-up finish and having to return the $226,815 in revenue. "Those are things that could happen. But right now we don't know exactly what will happen. I expect we'll know soon enough."

If Duke has its spot in the 1999 NCAA tournament vacated, it also could have those games wiped from the record - putting its final 1999 mark not at 37-2, as it stands now, but 32-1.

Maggette, now with the Los Angeles Clippers, in April publicly denied accepting money from Piggie. However, Piggie pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges for paying five players $35,500 from 1996-98, including $2,000 to Maggette in several cash payments concealed in shoe boxes.

Duke believed Maggette, saying his word was more credible than that of Piggie, a convicted drug dealer.

Maggette later testified before a federal grand jury, but that testimony was sealed, even to the NCAA. When federal prosecutors subpoenaed Maggette last month, Duke officials began to concede Maggette may actually have taken the money.

"I'd be amazed if they didn't know what Corey was going to say," Kennedy said last month. "I'm not a lawyer, but I would think, having subpoenaed (Maggette), they expect his testimony will help them."

Prosecutors were hoping testimony from Maggette that he took money would allow them to pursue a stronger sentence against Piggie, who faces three to five years in jail.

NCAA spokeswoman Jane Jankovics said the NCAA did not request the Maggette subpoena, but conceded his testimony would help the organization determine what punishment, if any, to levy against Duke.

SIUC to charge undergraduate application fee

SIUC will enact first undergraduate application fee in University's history

JASON COHEN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A $30 application fee will be charged to future undergraduate students effective Oct. 1, according to Larry Dietz, vice chancellor for Student Affairs.

Dietz said he believes this fee will cut back on the amount of students who look at SIUC but have no real intention to enroll. Communication with that type of students is expensive and takes away valuable time from the administration, he said.

The amount of the fee is meant to be competitive with other universities, Dietz said. Illinois State University will be charging a $30 fee this fall. The University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and the U of I Chicago, each have a $40 application fee, and Eastern Illinois University charges $20. SIU-Edwardsville, U of

I Springfield, Northern Illinois University and Western Illinois University have no application fee.

He said the fee may increase enrollment because many people have a feeling that they get what they pay for. He said a fee will probably enhance the University's image among prospective students.

"The actual funds of the fee will go to expand the publication program, which will be designed to enhance recruitment efforts and the institution's image," Dietz said. "We're needing some expanded publications, and this will help that."

The money will go to pay for six publications that explain the benefits of an SIUC education. Topics for some publications include employability, the college experience, individual colleges at SIUC and the graduate schools. Also, the University's viewbook and the campus visit brochure will be revised. These publications have not been significantly revised for several years, Dietz said.

Walker Allen, director of New Student Admissions, said he has worked at five universities before SIUC, and this is the only one without an application fee. Many people call SIUC and ask what the fee is, therefore, he said a fee is unlikely to have a negative impact on prospective students.

"It will help us focus on students who have an interest in coming here," Allen said.

The SIU School of Medicine and the SIU School of Law both charge application fees. Also, SIUC's graduate programs can charge an applicant fees of as much as $20.

The fee must be approved by SIUC interim Chancellor John Jackson. Jackson said the fee will help the University by discouraging students from applying just to shop around, and it may cut back on the number of foreign students who apply who are not serious about enrolling at SIUC.

Likewise, Dietz said there was concern about overseas applicants. But he said SIUC may have to make special requirements about potential foreign students, especially those living in the People's Republic of China.

Because these students often have difficulty getting money out of their country until after they come to SIUC, Dietz said, there is a need for special requirements of some type, such as charging the application fee to their bursar bill.

Information committee will decide on unionization

GPSC will wait for graduate and professional students' petition before taking sides

ERICA HUBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Graduate and Professional Student Council continued discussion about unionization efforts of graduate and professional students at SIUC Tuesday evening.

Students heard more information about the progress of graduate employees' unionization efforts at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. GPSC is inquiring about the feasibility of this action for SIUC.

So far, the only efforts made toward unionization have been the council's decision last semester to authorize the formation of a temporary committee to gather information from graduate and professional students.

Amy Sileven, a teaching assistant for the English Department, believes unionization would benefit all graduate and professional students. Sileven's concern with unionization stems from issues such as graduate employees not having benefits that other employees within the state can receive.

At this point, the purpose to form this committee is to receive names of student who are interested in the unionizing efforts, Sileven said. "The committee will need to evaluate all information prior to any decision to form a union."

David Wagner, GPSC's vice president, said the council also decided not to be the force behind unionizing.

"People in charge of the unionization committee should not be from the GPSC," Wagner said. "The GPSC represents all graduate and professional students, and it would be unfair to stand behind just one particular group."

Former GPSC President Ed Ford remembers when the first discussion of unionization began at SIUC.

Ford, who is working toward a doctorate in educational psychology, said students became interested when UIUC graduate students wanted to unionize.

Four years ago, graduate students with assistantships from UIUC voted to form the Graduate Employees' Organization. The university, however, would not recognize the union as employees.

This led to a debate when the Tax rebates are an investment in Carbondale's future

When children finish their first day working at their first lemonade stand, they have a decision to make: Do we split up the $8 from today's earnings amongst ourselves, or do we use it to buy more cups, some paint and posterboard to make signs.

Whether it is a lemonade stand, an investment firm or a city council, the decision to reinvest in an enterprise can make or break a financial undertaking. Tuesday night, the Carbondale City Council grappled with their own lemonade stand-quandary. Should Carbondale grant tax rebates to University Mall to help draw more commerce to the city?

The debate has been a hot one, as owners of some Carbondale establishments said the incentives were being unfairly distributed away from local businesses. The council voted to enact the tax rebates as part of a deal that is designed to bring an anchor department store to the mall, along with Old Navy, Gap and Gap Kids.

If the department store doesn't move in within 18 months, the deal is off. If any of the three smaller additions to the mall fail to deliver gross sales within a year, the deal is off.

Four out of five council members made the right choice for Carbondale Tuesday, which will reap benefits for everyone — even the small business owners.

Southern Illinois is, to the average city-dweller, a shopping wasteland. Many Carbondale residents and people from throughout Southern Illinois will drive all the way to St. Louis to buy for special occasions.

They have the money to spend and would prefer to spend it within a reasonable distance from their homes. But instead, they get in their cars and take their money two hours away.

So, more stores in University Mall means the consumers save some time and gas, and they get to buy what they want.

The new stores brought into the mall will still be paying tax to the city, which means new revenue for Carbondale. Also, they will draw more shoppers in, which will mean more sales throughout the mall. As the mall makes more money, more big-name stores become more likely to move in.

None of the possible additions to the mall will be direct competitors to Carbondale businesses. If it were a hardware store or a bookstore being talked about, the small business faction would have more of a case.

The mall is simply the most lucrative location to offer the rebates, with the greatest chance for a fast, high return. As the mall becomes nicer and offers more stores, shoppers will drive to Carbondale to spend their money. And while they're here, they may stop for a drink, buy gas, or otherwise spend money in the city at large.

The tax rebate plan is a risk — just like it's a risk to assume you will sell as much lemonade tomorrow as you did today. But if Carbondale is to grow, this city is going to have to take the occasional chance. For this bet, the odds are for Carbondale.

What is wrong with you people?

And now comes the time in the program where I piss numerous people off for no good reason. Today's topic: Asinine Habits and Behaviors that Devalue My Education and Make my Ready to Punch.

AHB (Asinine Habit or Behavior) One: The Pajama People

A minority of students exist, especially during the summertime, that come to class wearing, apparently, the same items of clothing that they fell asleep in. I do not refer to the Bed-Head-Damn-I'm-Hungover-Throw-On-Whatever-Is-Clean-Look (A look I'm personally familiar with). I'm speaking about the people who walk into class who obviously haven't changed a bit of clothing since the night previous. You people that behave in this way need to understand that you kind of smell bad. You're not fooling anyone. Your shirt is wrinkled. Go back home and try to pick up the pieces. It's the 21st century. You're an American. Soap exists. If you aren't capable of proper grooming prior to your morning stroll into society, please stay at home.

AHB Two: Late Arrivals. Good morning! Glad you could make it. Class began 40 minutes ago.

Cancel My Subscription

JOSH ROBISON

Cancel My Subscription appears Thursdays. Josh is an undeclared graduate student. His opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

It's 60 percent over. Go ahead, take a seat. Make as much noise as possible. Nobody here is doing anything important, anyway.

Yes, I realize, we all run a bit late at times. Traffic is bad, parking problems, you were attacked and sidetracked by Sasha Squirrel and her rabid chipmunk thugs. Arriving five, 10 or even 15 minutes late, on rare occasions, is socially acceptable. Chronic tardiness, however, is an indicator that you suffer from major Lifestyle Scheduling Discrepancies. You need to alter something. Wake up earlier. Drive faster. Sprint. And for those that walk in after class is half over, what exactly the hell is wrong with you, anyway? Go home if you're that late! Skip the class. If you skip at least people will assume you're sick or had something more important to do.

AHB III: Student's Small Talk During Lectures

Why are you talking? Do you know that class is taking place? Are you even a real human being or simply a rude, talking machine from the Jack Ass McHenry Robotics Factory? No one gives a damn about you waking up on a stranger's couch next to a large dog with your shoes in its mouth. I know I certainly don't, yet I can hear you even though I'm sitting 10 seats away. Do you not want to be in class? Then don't go. Don't want to pay attention? Shut the hell up, and take a nap. Wait until after class is over to tell your stupid anecdotes or make plans for the evening. Being ignorant is no big deal, if you keep it to yourself.

And that should just about cover everyone who had the decency to read my dorky little column on this fine, hot Thursday. For those of you interested in beating me publicly, you should be forewarned that though I'm not much of a fighter, I have no measurable level of pride and I can run like the wind.

THEIR WORD

Al Gore's multi-billion handout

By Jerry Taylor for the Knight-Ridder Tribune on July 10, 2000.

Declaring that it is time to free America "forever from the dominance of Big Oil and foreign oil," Vice President Al Gore recently unveiled a 10-year, $75 billion plan that has virtually nothing to do with oil at all.

In fact, $68 billion of that will actually go toward the modernization of older coal-fired electricity plants and the promotion of natural gas.

Although the details are sketchy, what's clear is that the Gore energy plan is a Trojan horse loaded with corporate welfare, which is richly ironic given the vice president's scathing indictment of Texas Gov. George Bush as a tool of industry.

First of all, why in the world should the taxpayer foot the bill for the cleanup of aging power plants? Those facilities are owned by private firms that should pay for their own plant maintenance and upgrades.

Once upon a time, the environmental lobby adamantly opposed plans that would have the public pay companies not to pollute. Yet the Washington environmental leadership was positively ecstatic over Gore's plan. This suggests one of two possibilities: Either the environmental lobby has undergone a radical ideological transformation before our very eyes, or there's no principle they won't jettison to put Gore in the White House. After all, if Bush had proposed to have the taxpayer foot the bill for the regulatory compliance costs of "polluters," the Green lobby would be apologetic.

That would be particularly true if the hypothetical Bush plan were written by a close former aide now employed as a lobbyist for the "polluters." But that's apparently what happened with Gore. Kathleen McGinty, a past chair of the White House Council on Environmental Quality and adviser to Gore on environmental issues, has acknowledged a major role in crafting the proposal. McGinty is currently on the payroll of the lobbying firm Troutman Sanders, which has been retained by several of the nation's largest coal-fired electricity companies. Two of them — American Electric Power and Southern Co. — confirmed that McGinty is employed by them as an adviser and lobbyist.

Of course, "Big Coal" isn't the only recipient of Gore's proposed handouts. "Big Gas" also gets a chunk of tax money in the form of public support for distributed energy sources.

For the uninitiated, "distributed energy" is jargon for very small power sources such as microturbines that can be located near consumers with a minimum of transmission and distribution. Microturbines can be powered by a lot of fuels, but natural gas is easily the cheapest, most versatile and economically competitive alternative.

Now, there's nothing wrong with distributed energy, microturbine technology or natural gas. And there's good reason to believe that such technologies are perfectly competitive today and will perhaps even dominate the market tomorrow. But that's no reason to subsidize it. Companies such as Trigen (whose corporate headquarters served as the backdrop for Gore's speech on energy) aren't exactly on death's door. Nor are corporate natural gas giants such as Enron, which will perhaps benefit the most from a distributed energy revolution.

Despite his public pronouncements, Gore's plan will have no effect on OPEC's market power or on "Big Oil's" alleged stranglehold on the economy, for the simple reason that petroleum doesn't compete with coal or natural gas. But then, the plan wasn't meant to.

Instead, it was designed to accomplish every politician's chief objective: Expand the pool of special interests that stand to gain by your victory. The fact that the vice president has pulled this off while playing the populist card with such demagogic flair demonstrates that he shouldn't be counted out of the election yet.

Mall will encourage growth in Carbondale.

"I sincerely believe, and it is with the utmost belief, that we must have this ordinance passed," Dillard said.

After the vote, Dillard wanted to emphasize that the tax rebate was difficult to support but was in the best interest of Carbondale, its citizens and SIUC. Rejecting the rebate, Dillard said, would have been a step backward for Carbondale.

"I appreciate the support of the four members of the City Council who voted for it," Dillard said. "They realize it's a tough vote — everyone did — but I think they realize the significance and the importance of their vote."

University Mall Manager Debbie Tindall received congratulations from supporters outside the City Council meeting after the vote Tuesday night. "I feel elated," Tindall said. "Obviously, without question, this has been a win-win situation for the community of Carbondale as well as University Mall."

Tindall also said the passing of the ordinance would help secure a deal with potential businesses and make the negotiating process much easier.

ARCHER

At the beginning of the meeting, Archer said he was not in violation of the charges.

However, at the end of the meeting, he agreed he was in violation of the charge of interference with or attempt to interfere with the enforcement of the student conduct code.

Archer said when he returned to Feltz Hall April 10, he smelled marijuana in the hall. He was on duty as a resident assistant at the time, and his failure to investigate is in violation of University Housing regulations.

The board did not make clear whether the charge of failing to comply with University officials referred to a disparity in Archer's original statement or a false social security number submitted by one of his guests.

Archer said he is still unclear about some of the charges, and said that charges meant different things throughout the hearing.

"I think they did their job fairly well," Archer said. "But the fact that they were trying to figure out why I was charged with something is wrong. They should know, and I should know."

The board read the copy of the Disciplinary Report out loud, as well as the statements submitted by Greenstreet and Firth. They then asked Archer specific questions concerning the disciplinary report.

The six men who were in the room the night of April 10 were called as witnesses. Also called were Katie Semersheim, assistant director of Student Development, and Gary Dudzik, former president of Alpha Tau Omega.

None of the witnesses were present at the hearing except for Terry Huffman, coordinator for Student Development and Student Judicial Affairs.

Huffman submitted a letter written to him by Semersheim, stating that Gary Dudzik had told her that Archer admitted to smoking marijuana in his room that night.

Gary Dudzik told the DAILY EGYPTIAN in May he had no prior knowledge of Archer using marijuana.

Archer brought with him a drug test dated May 12 administered by the Carbondale Clinic but could not admit it as evidence because it had not been submitted to the Student Judicial Affairs office before the hearing.

The board members did not want to comment on the hearing, and wished to keep their names confidential.

Rangers

The latest — and so far the biggest — move in Glen Sather's rebuilding of the New York Rangers is the hiring of Ron Low as the new head coach. Also, Mark Messier, hero of the team's 1994 Stanley Cup championship, is expected to sign with the team.

Browns

An FBI report states that Cleveland Browns president Carmen Policy has been accused of paying $1,000 in 1995 to fix a criminal case for one of his clients. Michael Rich, a prosecutor convicted of racketeering, told two FBI agents and a federal prosecutor that Policy paid the money to help Tom O'Nesti, a close friend of the mobster Joseph Naples, according to court documents filed Tuesday in Youngstown. Policy, who was a defense attorney in Youngstown during the 1980's, called the accusation false.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Heather Wilce, a high school junior from West Frankfort, joins in a cheer at the Universal Cheerleaders Association Camp at the Recreation Center Tuesday. The four day camp is offered for junior high and high school cheerleaders and teaches them the basics of cheerleading while having fun.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Cheering for camp

UCA cheering camp at the Recreation Center teaches the fundamentals of spirit

RAMA CONNOLLY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Varetha Hurt, cheerleading coach at Paducah Middle School, has brought a squad to the Universal Cheerleaders Association camp for 14 years. Every year she plans to retire, but every year she comes back.

"The difference between the girls' cheering before and after the camp is altogether different," Hurt said. "After the camp, they look like cheerleaders."

UCA organizes cheerleading camps all across the world each summer. This week, cheerleaders are meeting in the Recreation Center.

UCA is the world's largest cheerleading camp and competition company with more than 200,000 participants and coaches in the United States alone. They administer the cheerleading championships nationally televised on ESPN and ESPN2.

The camp this year at SIUC has five cheerleading teams signed up. Two are varsity squads, and the others are junior high level.

"We teach proper techniques for all-around cheerleading, such as motions, stunts, dancing and team camaraderie," said Sarai Yates, head camp manager for UCA. "The No. 1 goal for this camp is to have fun. We like being more fun than the cut-throat camps."

The cheerleaders are from Hayti, Miss., Perryville, Miss., Paducah, Ky., West Frankfort and Carterville. The squads meet in the Recreation Center at 8 a.m. each day. The camp's schedule of activities for each day are cheer classes, pom pom classes, stunts sessions and dance and tumbling classes.

Cremin Mosley, head instructor for the UCA camp, was a member of a national cheerleading champion team. Also instructing at the camp is Beth Wells, a national cheerleading champion, and Tiffany Reinemann. They offer one-on-one interaction with the campers and spread the hype and energy they put into their own cheering.

According to Stacey Fitch, cheerleading coach at West Frankfort High School, the camp is designed to offer more one-on-one interaction and caters to the beginning cheerleader who is looking for guidance on the fundamentals and basic structures of the art.

"The camp teaches leadership and new techniques," Fitch said. "And the girls meet many new friends."

No dome a win for SIU

Alumni and Saluki sports fans should send interim Chancellor John Jackson a thank-you card for not pursuing the ludicrous idea of building a multi-purpose domed stadium on the outskirts of Carbondale.

The idea can now be considered dead since Jackson proposed the project seven months ago and recently concluded the idea was simply not feasible.

But now, the higher administration has one of the most important decisions facing them when it comes to restoring the fate of Saluki Athletics.

SIU's McAndrew Stadium is by far the biggest eyesore on campus, leaving new students, recruits and potential students to see its deteriorating facade.

Two options are left for McAndrew — either extensive renovation or build a more modest stadium closer to campus.

Jackson and the gang are on the right track to solving this long and overdue problem. SIU has hired Hellmuth, Obata & Kassabaum consulting firm to help with the planning of the new stadium. HOK is one of the most respected consulting firms in the nation when it comes to building state-of-the-art sporting facilities.

Some of their top work includes Pacific Bell Park, the new home of the San Francisco Giants, the Trans World Dome in St. Louis, Coors Field in Denver and the United Center in Chicago.

It's comforting to know the best people have been hired to get involved in this dragged-out project. It will be at least five years before we see visible signs of construction to the new stadium.

In the meantime, SIU football is left to scramble for ways to recruit players and get rid of the apathy for an already hobbling program.

If maintenance work is done to McAndrew, let's hope a couple of ribbon-cutting ceremonies does not fool the higher administration of what the main goal should be.

It's going to take a new stadium to recharge the student body, increase attendance, generate revenue and ultimately put SIU football back on the map.

If the University is really serious about enhancing the image of the Athletic Department, they will go ahead with the new stadium idea. It may be expensive to build, but there is little to no return on an investment to renovate McAndrew Stadium.

The football program can not generate enough money to offset their expenses as it is right now. With sports becoming more and more of a business, it is the University's responsibility to equip athletic teams with the tools it takes to compete.

This is the perfect opportunity for SIU to show it is dedicated to making Saluki Athletics one of the premiere programs within its peers.

Otherwise, we are only left to judge the department by the crippling state of its biggest liability.
